After this, great diſturbance began to riſe betwene the king and the Lords: who hauing their power lying about Dunſtable, ſent ſtout meſſenge vnto the king at London, to haue their former actes confirmed. Gilbert Earle of Glouceſter the kinges nephew (who neyther did holde agaynſt the king nor yet agaynſt the Nobles) with the Byſhops and Prelates of the Realme: went betweene both parties with great dilligēce, to make vnitie. At which time alſo came 2. Cardinals from Rome, with letters ſent vnto them from the Pope. The Nobles aunſwered to the meſſage of the Cardinals, lying then at Saint Albans: that as touching themſelues they ſhoulde be at all times welcome to them: But as touching their letters (foraſmuche as they were men vnlettered, and onely brought vp in warre and feates of armes) therefore they cared not for ſeing the ſame. Then meſſage was ſent againe, that they would graunt at leaſt but to ſpeake with the popes legates, which purpoſely came for the intent to ſet quyet and vnitie in the Realme. They aunſwered agayne, that they had biſhops both godly and learned, by whoſe counſayle they would be led only and not by any ſtraungers, who knewe not the true cauſe of ther commotion. And therefore they ſayd preciſely, that they would no foreiners or alians to be doers in theyr buſines, and affayres pertaining the realme. Yet notwithſtāding, through the mediation of the Archbiſhop, and of the Erle of Glouceſter: the matter at length was ſo takē vp, yͭ the Barons ſhould reſtore to the king, or his attourny of S. Albans, all the treaſure, horſes, and iewels of the foreſayd Gaueſton taken at Newcaſtle, and ſo there requeſtes ſhould be graunted. And ſo was the matter at time compoſed.

The Nobles of England cared not for the popes letters.

The Popes Legates not admitted of the Nobles of England.

Shortly vpon the ſame, Iſabell the Queene was deliuered of a fayre child at Windſore, whō Lewes the French kings ſonne (the Queenes brother, with other Frenchmē there preſent) would to be called by the name of the French king: but the Engliſh Lordes were contrary, willing him to be called by the name of Edward hys father. At the birth of whiche Edward, great reioyſing was through all the land, and eſpecially the king his father ſo much ioyed thereat: that he begon dayly more and more to forget the ſorowe and remembraunce of Gaueſtons death, and was after that more agreable to the will of his Nobles.

Anno. 1312.

The kyng ruled by foreine counſayle.

Thus peace and concord betwene them began to be in a good towardnes: which more and more might haue ben confirmed in wearing out of time, had not Sathan the author and ſower of diſcord, ſtyrred vp hys inſtruments (certain Frenchmen, Titiuyllars, and makebates about the kyng) which ceaſed not in carping and deprauing the Nobles, to inflame the kinges hatred & grudge agaynſt them. By the exciting of whom, the old quarrels being renued a freſh, the king in his Parliament called vpon the ſame: began to charge the foreſayd Barons and Nobles with ſedion and rebellion, & for ſlaying Peter Gaueſton. Neither were the nobles leſſe ſtout agayne in defending theyr cauſe declaring that they in ſo doing had deſerued rather thanke and fauour with the king then any diſpleaſure, in vanquiſhing ſuch a publique enemy of the Realme, who not onely had ſpoyled and waſted the kinges ſubſtaunce, but alſo rayſed much diſturbance in the realme. And for aſmuch as they had begon with the matter to theyr ſo great labours & expenſes: they wold proceed further, they ſayd, not ceaſing til they ſaw an end therof. To be ſhort, great threates there were on both parts, and a fowle matter like to haue followed. But agayne through the dilligent mediation of the Queene, the Prelates, and the foreſayd Earle of Glouceſter: the matter was taken vp and brought to reconcilemēt vpon theſe conditions, that the Lords and Barons openly in Weſtminſter hall ſhold humble themſelues before the king, and aſke pardon there of their doinges, and euerye man there to receaue a letter of the kings pardon, for their indemnitie, and aſſuraunce. And ſo paſſed ouer that yeare, within the whiche yeare died Robert Winchelſey Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In whoſe roome, Thomas Cobham was elected by the king and church of Canterbury to ſucceede: but the Pope, caſſating that election, placed Walter Reynald Biſhop of Worceter.

What diſcord doth in a common weale.

The Scottes rebel againſt the realme of England.

In the meane tyme, the Scots hearing this ciuill diſcord in the Realme, began to be buſie, and to rebell of new through the meanes of Robert Bruis: who beyng chaſed out of Scotlād, by king Edward the firſt, as is aboue premiſed, into Norway, was now returned again into Scotlād: where he demeaned him in ſuch ſort to yͤ Lords there: that in ſhort proceſſe he was agayne made kyng of the Realme: And warred ſo ſtrongly vppon them that tooke the kinges part: that he wanne from them many Caſtels and ſtrong holds, and inuaded the borders of Englād. The K. hearing this, aſſembleth a great power, and by water entreth the Realm of Scotland. Agaynſt whō he encountred Robert de Bruys with hys Scots at Eſtriuallin, where was fought a ſtrong battayle: in the end wherof, the Engliſhmē were diſcomfited, & ſo egerly purſued by the Scots, that many of the Noble men were ſlayne, as the Earle of Glouceſter, Syr Robert Clifford, Syr Edmund Maule with other Lords to the number of 42. & knights and Barons 227. beſides men of name, which were taken priſoners: of common ſouldiours 10. thouſād, or after the Scotiſh ſtory 50. thouſand ſlayne, After which time, ſir Robert Bruis reigned as king of Scotland.

Ann. 1314.

The Scots after this exalted with pride and fierceneſ inuaded the realme of Englād ſo ſore killing & deſtroying man, and woman, and child: that they came wyning & waſting the Northpartes as farre as to Yorke. Beſides thys, ſuch dearth of victuals, and penury of all things ſo oppreſſed the whole land, ſuche morayne of ſheepe and Oxen: as men were fayne to eat horſefleſh, dogges, cattes, myſe, and what els they coulde get. Moreouer, ſuche a price of corne followed withall, yͭ the king hardly had bread, for yͤ ſuſtentation of his own houſhold. Moreouer ſome there were yͭ ſtall children and did eate them, and many for lacke of victuall dyed. And yet all this amended not the king of hys euill liuing.

Miſerable death and famine in England.

A deſcription of an horrible famine in the realm of England.

The cauſe and origene of this great dearth was, partly the warres and diſſention betwene them and the Scottes: wherby a great part of yͤ land was waſted. But the chiefeſt cauſe was, the vntemperate ſeaſon of the yeare, which contrary to the common courſe, was ſo moyſt wͭ aboundaunce of rayne: that the graine layd in the earth could haue no ripyng by heate of the ſunne, nor grow to any nouriſhment. Wherby, they that had to eat, could not be ſatiſfied with ſaturitie, but eftſoones were as hungry agayne. They that had nothing, were driuen to ſteale and rob: the riche were conſtrayned to auoyde and diminiſh theyr houſholdes: the poore for famine died. And not ſo much the want of vitayle which could not be gotten, as yͤ vnwholeſomnes of yͤ ſame when it was taken, ſo conſumed the people: that the quicke were not ſufficient to bury the dead. For the corruption of the meates, by reaſō of vnſeaſonablenes of the groūd, was ſo infectious: that many dyed of the fixe, many of hote feuers, diuers of the peſtilence. And not onely the bodyes of men thereby were infected, but alſo the beaſtes by the putrifaction of the hearbs and graſſe fel in as great a morain: ſo farforth, as the eating of fleſh was ſuſpect & thought cōtagious. A quarter of corne and ſalt, from the moneth of Iune to September grew from 30. s. vnto 40. s. The fleſh of horſes was then precious [illegible] the poore. Many were driuen to ſteale fat dogges and to eate them: ſome were ſayde in ſecret corners to eate their owne children. Some would ſteale other mens children to kill them and eate them priuily. The priſoners and theeues that were in bandes, ſuch as newly were brought in vnto them, for hunger fell vpon them, and tearing them in peeces did eate them halfe aliue. Briefly, this extreeme penury had extincted and conſumed (as it was thought) the greateſt part of the people of the land: had not the king by the ſtatute of the Londiners geuē forth commaundement through all his land, that no corne ſhoulde at that tyme be turned to the making of drinke. Such a Lord is God, thus able to do where he is diſpoſed to ſtrike. And yet we miſerable creatures, in our wealth and aboundaunce will not ſurceaſe dayly to prouoke hys terrible maieſty.

The Scottes driuen out of Ireland.

But let vs returne to the order agayne of our ſtory. After the Scottes had thus plagued miſerably (as ye haue heard) the Realme of England: they inuaded alſo Ireland where they kept and cōtinued warre the ſpace of 4. yeares. But in fine, the Iriſhmen (by ayd ſent to them from England) quitte themſelues ſo well: that they vanquiſhed the Scottes, and ſlew Edward Bruys, and many of the Nobles of Scotland with many other, and droue the reſidue out of the country.

Anno. 1317.

The king about the 12. yeare of his raigne, aſſembled a new hoſt and went into Scotland, where he layd ſiege to Barwike. But in the meane time, the Scottes by an other way, inuaded the marches of Yorkeſhyre, robbing and harieng the countrey, that they ſlew much people. wherfore, the Archbiſhop of of Yorke, and other Abbottes, Priors, Clerkes, with huſbandmen: aſſembled a great company, and gaue them battell at a place called Mytton, where the Engliſhmen were diſcomfited and many of them ſlayne: but the Archbiſhop, and the Abbot of Selby, and diuers other there eſcaped. But becauſe there were ſo many ſpirituall men there ſlayne, it was called therefore the whyte battayle. By reaſon whereof, the king hearing of this, and partly becauſe wynter did approche, was conſtrayned to breake vp his ſiege, and ſo returned not without great daunger.

The white battaile of the ſpiritual men in York ſhire,

The two Spenſers,

At this tyme the two Spenſers (Syr Hugh Spenſer the father, and Hugh Spenſer the ſonne) were of great power in England, and by the fauour of the King practiſed ſuch cruelty, and bare themſelues ſo haughtely and proud: that no Lord of this land might gainſay them in any thing that they thought good, wherby they were in great hatred and indignation both with the nobles, and the commons, no leſſe then Peter Gaueſton was before.

Two legates ſent from Rome. The Popes pillage. The Popes legates ſpoiled of all their yl gotten treaſure. The Popes curſe cōtemned of the Scottes. The Clergie of Englande denyeth to contribute to the popes legates.

Soone vppon this, came two Legates from Rome, ſent by pope Iohn the 22. vnder the pretence to ſet agreement betwene England and Scotlād: who for theyr charges and expences, required of euery ſpiritual perſon iiij. d. in euery marke. But all theyr labour nothing auailed: For the Legates as they were in the North parts (about Derlinghton) with theyr whole family and trayne: were robbed and diſpoyled of theyr horſes, treaſure apparell, and what elles they had, and with an euill fauoured handling, retired backe agayne to Dureſme, where they ſtaid a while wayting for an anſwere from the Scots. But when neyther the popes Legacy nor his curſe would take any place with the Scottes: they returned agayn to London, where they firſt excommunicated and curſed as blacke as ſoote, al thoſe arrogant and preſumptuous robbars of Northumberland. Secondly, for ſupplying of the loſſes receaued, they exacted of the Clergy to be geuen and paid vnto them viij. d. in euery marke. But the Clergye thereunto woulde not agree, ſeeing it was theyr owne couetouſnes (as they ſay) that made them venture farther then they needed. Only they were contēted to relieue them after iiij. d. in a mark as they promiſed before, further they woulde not graunt. whereof the king being aduertized, and taking part wyth his clergy, directeth his letters to the ſaid Legates in form as followeth Rex Magiſtro Rigando. &c.

To the ſame effect letters were directed to the Archbiſhops, Deanes, Archdeacons and the reſt of the clergy. Touching the firſt originall of which Peter pence though mention be made before in the life of king Offa and others: yet to make a briefe recapitulation of the ſame according to the Rolles as they come, to our handes thus it followeth. De Denarijs beati petri ſic ſcriptum. &c. That is to ſay: It is thus found recorded in auncient Chronicles touching the Peter pence of S. Peter, an. 187. Offa king of Mercia trauelled vp to Rome in the time of the Pope Adrian the firſt to obtaine the Canonizing of S. Albone. And hauing performed his vow, viſiting the Colledge of Engliſh Studentes which then floriſhed in Rome, did geue to the maintenance of the ſcholers of England Studentes in Rome, one peny out of euery Tenemēt within this Realme that had land belonging to the ſame, amounting to the yearely value of 30 pence. And for this his munificence he obteined of Pope Adrian that no perſon within his dominiōs publicke repenting him for not performing enioyned penance ſhould therefore be baniſhed.

Concerning which Peter Pence it is touched in yͤ lawes of King Edward the Sainct chap. 10. when where of whō vnder what payne this Peter Pence muſt be gathered being but the kinges meere almes as is aforeſayd. And thus much touching Peter Pēce. Now for other letters writtē by the K. to yͤ Pope, the ſame yeare for other matters as crauing the popes helpe in compounding the variaunce betwixt the 2. Archbiſhops of Cant. and York for bearing the croſſe from the one prouince to the other, thus it followeth that the king greeuouſly complayneth quod tantæ diſſentiones. i. that ſuche hurly burly and vproare aroſe thereof that they coulde not meete together in one place through the great multitude of armed men aſſiſtants on both partes in the very bearing of the croſſe to the great diſturbance of the people.

Now after this longe digreſſion to tourne to our Engliſh matters agayne mention was made before of the variaunce betweene the king and the Earle of Lancaſter and of a peace concluded betwene them. But this peace did not long endure: which the king by his owne default did break ſending to the Scots a priuy meſſenger) which was taken in the way) to haue the foreſaid Earle of Lancaſter by their meanes, made away. &c.

The pryde of the Spenſers.

In the mean time, the Lords and nobles of England deteſting the outragious pride of yͤ Spēſers, wherby they wrought dayly both great diſhonor to the king and hindraūce to the cōmon weale: in ſuch wiſe conſpired againſt them, that gathering their power together, they made a requeſt to the king, that he ſhould remoue the Spenſers frō his perſon. For the which, there was a Parliament called at London, & the Barons came together with a great cōpany. At which Parliament both the Spenſers were baniſhed the land for terme of their liues: and they took ſhipping at Douer and ſo voided the land. But it was not lōg after, but the king (contrary to that ordinance made in the Parliament) ſent for the Spenſers agayne, and ſet them in high authority, & ruled all thinges after their ſenſuall appetites, nothing regarding iuſtice nor the cōmmō wealth. wherfore, yͤ Barons entēding agayn to reforme this miſchief, aſſembled their powers: but the king (making ſo haſty ſpeed, and gathering his people ſo ſoone) was ſtronger then they, & purſued thē ſo in diuers places: that the Barons not fully ioined together (ſome flying, & ſome departing to the king, ſome ſlayne by the way) in the end were chaſed ſo egerly: that in ſhort ſpace, the foreſayd Thomas Earle of Lancaſter was taken & put to death wͭ the reſt of the nobility, to the number of 22. of the greateſt men, and chiefeſt Captaines of this realme. Of whom onely, Thomas Earle of Lancaſter for the nobility of his bloud, was beheaded: All the other Lords and Barons, were hanged drawn & quartered. &c. which bloudy vnmercifulnes of yͤ king toward his naturall ſubiects, not only to him procured great diſhonor within the realme, but alſo turned afterward to his much more greater harm & hinderance, in his forreine warres agaynſt the Scots: And finally wrought his vtter confuſion and ouerthrow of his ſeat royall, as in the ſequell of his end appeared, and worthely.

The cruell reioyſing of the kyng.

After the ruine of theſe noble perſonages: the king as though he had gottē a great cōqueſt (who then in deed began firſt to be ouercomen and conquere himſelf, when he ſo oppreſſed and cut of the ſtrength and ſinews of his chiualrye) began to triumph not a litle with his Spenſers: And to coūt himſelfe ſure as though he were in heauen, to exerciſe more ſharpe ſeuerity vpon his ſubiectes, truſting and committing all to the counſell onely of the foreſayd Spenſers: in ſo much, that both the Queene and the reſidue of yͤ other nobles could litle be regarded. who as they grew euer in more contempt with the king: ſo they encreaſed in more hatred agaynſt the Spenſers: but ſtrength & hability lacked, to worke ther will.

Anno. 1323.

The next yeare, the king being at York, after he had made Sir Hugh Spenſer Erle, and Syr Iohn Baldocke a man of euill fame to be Chauncellour of England: he thē arrared a mighty hoſt agaynſt the Scottes. But for lack of ſkilfull guiding, expert Captaynes, and for want ſpecially of due prouiſion of vitayles neceſſary for ſuch an army: the great multitude, to the number reckoned of an hundreth thouſand (wandring through Scotland, from whence the Scots, had conuayed all theyr goods and cattell into mountaynes, and marſhes) were ſo pynched and ſterued with famyne, that a great part of the army, there preſently periſhed: and they that returned home, as ſoone as they taſted of meates, eſcaped not. The king neither hauing reſiſtance of his enemies, and ſeing ſuch a deſtruction of his ſubiects: was forced without anye acte done to retyre. But in his retiring, Sir Iames Duglas and the Scottes hauing knowledge therof, purſued him in ſuch wiſe: that they ſlue many Engliſhe men, and had well neare taken the Kyng himſelfe. After whiche diſtreſſe, the king thus beaten and wearyed with the Scottes, woulde fayne haue ioyned in truce with the Scottes: but becauſe they ſtoode excommunicate by the pope he ſtanding in feare therof deſireth licēce to entreate with them of peace, the ſayd excommunication notwithſtanding whiche licence beyng obtayned, a treaty was appoynted by commiſſioners on both parts at Newcaſtle at the feaſt of Sainct Nicholas next enſuing and ſo truce was taken for 12. yeares whereupon this is to be noted by the way (gentle reader) not vnworthy of obſernation that wheras in former tymes and eſpecially of the late king Edward the firſt, ſo long as the Scottes were vnder the popes bleſſing, and we in diſpleaſure with his holines for dealing with them, ſo long we preuayled mightely agaynſt them, euen to yͤ vtter ſubuerſion in manour of their whole eſtate. But nowe ſo ſoone as the Pope tooke our part, & the Scots were vnder his curſe and excommunication. Then gat they greater victories againſt vs then any time either before or ſithence, in ſomuch as being before not able to defend them ſelues agaynſt vs, they nowe purſued vs into the bowels of our owne country.

The king diſtreſſed again in Scotland.

The king purpoſing to erect a houſe of Fryers Auguſtines within the towne of Boſton in Lincolneſhyre firſt prayed the popes licence in that behalfe.

Polydorus Virgilius, an Italian wryter of our Engliſh ſtories.

Polidorius Virgilius among other hiſtories of our Engliſh nation which he intermedleth withall, proſecuting alſo the actes and life of this preſent King, and comming to write of the Queenes goyng ouer into Fraunce: inferreth much varietie and diuerſitie of autours and ſtory writers, concerning the cauſe thereof. Otherwiſe, he geueth hymſelf no true certainty of that matter, neyther yet toucheth he yͭ which was the cauſe in deede. By reaſon partly, that he being an Italian and a foreiner, coulde not vnderſtand our Engliſh toung. And partly agayne being but one mā neyther coulde he alone come to the ſight of all our Latine autours. One I am ſure came not to his peruſing, an old ancient Latine hiſtory fayre written in parchment (but without name) belonging to the library of William Cary Citizen of London. In which ſtory, the truth of this matter wͭout all ambiguitie is there fully and with all circumſtaunces expreſſed, as here briefly is excerpted.

Anno. 1324.

The king of England had bene diuers & ſundry tymes cited vpp to the Courte of Fraunce, to doe homage to the French king, for the Dukedome of Aquitane & other lands which the king then helde of Fraunce. whiche homage becauſe the king of England refuſed to tender: the French K. began to enter al ſuch poſſeſſions as the king then did hold in Fraunce, whereupon, great contention and conflictes there were on both ſides. At length in this yeare now preſent, a Parliament was called at London. where (after much altercation) at laſt it was determined: that certayne ſhould be ſent ouer, to witte the Biſhops of wincheſter, and Norwich, and the Earle of Richmond, to make agreement betwixt the two kinges. For the better help and fortification of which agreement, it was thought good afterward: that Queene Iſabell, ſiſter to Charles then yͤ Frēch king ſhold be ſent ouer. where is to be noted firſt that the Queenes landes, poſſeſſions and caſtles a little before vpon the breach betweene the Frenche king and the Kyng of Englande, were ſeiſed into the kinges handes, and the Queene put to her penſion. &c. Thus the Queene beyng ſent ouer with a few, to attend vpon her, onely Syr Iohn Cromwell Baron, and 4. knightes, tooke theyr paſſage into Fraunce: by whoſe mediation, it was there concluded that the king of England (if he would not himſelfe come to do his homage) he ſhould geue to his ſonne Edward, the Dukedome of Aquitanie, and the Earledome of Pontine and ſo he to come to make his homage to the king, and to poſſeſſe the ſame. This being in Fraunce concluded, was ſent ouer by meſſage to the king of England, with yͤ kings letters patentes adioyned for the ſafe conduct of him or of his ſonne. Upon this, deliberation was taken in the counſaile of England. But the two Spenſers fearing to take the Seas eyther with the king, or els without the king to remayne behinde for feare of the nobles: ſo appoynted, that Prince Edward the kings ſonne was ſent, whiche happened after to theyr vtter deſolation, as it followed. For all thinges being quieted & ordered according to yͤ agreement in Fraunce, K. Edward of England ſoone after Michaelmas, ſendeth for his wife and his ſonne agayne out of Fraunce. But ſhe ſending home moſt part of her family, refuſeth her ſelfe to returne. For what cauſe it is not fully certayne, whether for indignation that her poſſeſſions and landes were ſeiſed to the King, as is afore premiſed: or whether for feare and hatred of the Spenſers, as is likely: or els for loue and familiaritie of Syr Roger Mortimer. For here is to be noted, that the ſayd Syr Roger Mortimer, with diuers other of the Barõs part, which had broken priſon in England, were fled before into Fraunce, and now reſorted vnto the Queene. The king ſeeing this, geueth forth in proclamation, and limitteth a certayne day to yͤ Queene and his ſonne to returne: or els to be proclaymed traytours to the King and to the Realme. Notwithſtanding, the Queene perſiſting in her purpoſe, denyeth to returne, vnleſſe the other Nobles which were fled, might be permitted ſafely alſo to returne with her. Whereupon, the king immediately cauſed them both to be proclaimed traytours, and all them that tooke their partes.

The k. deſtitute of help and ſoldiors.

Here then began great hatred betwene king & king, betweene the king & the Queene, much preparation of warre great ſpoyling on the ſea, much ſending betweene the pope & thẽ, but that would not ſerue. Then the K. (by the counſayle of the Spenſers) ſendeth priuily to procure the death of the Queene and of his ſonne: which ſhould be wrought by the execution of the Earle of Richmond, yͤ Queenes familiar. But as the Lord would, that imaginatiõ was preuented and vtterly fruſtrate. Albeit, the Queene yet notwithſtãding, whether miſdoubting and fearing what corruptiõ of mony might do in the court of Fraunce: or whether the French king being threatned by the king of England, and by the Pope, durſt not deteine her: ſhe remoued from thence, & was receaued with Edward her ſonne ioyouſly and honourably, in the Court or country of the Erle of Henawde. Where by meanes of ſuch as were about her a mariage was concluded betweene the ſayd Edward her ſonne being of the age of 14. yeare, and Phillip the foreſayd Earles daughter. When this was noyſed in Eng. diuers men of honor & name came ouer to the Queene. And ſoone after the Erle of Haynawde prepared a crew of 5. hundred men of armes to ſet ouer the young Prince wͭ his mother into England. Of this, the fame ſprang ſhortly through the realm. Wherfore, the K. in all defenſable wayes made promiſiõ to haue the hauens and portes of his land ſurely kept, for to reſiſte the landing of his enemies. On the contrary ſide, the Queene with no leſſe preparation prouideth all things to her expedition neceſſary. Who when ſhe ſaw her tyme, ſpeeding her ſelfe to the Sea coaſt with Prince Edward her ſonne, Lord Edmund Earle of Kent the Kings brother, Syr Roger Mortimer, the Lord Wygmore and other exiles of Englãd, accompanied alſo with the foreſaid Hainawders, of whõ Syr Iohn Henawd the Earles brother was Captayne of Engliſhmen & ſtraungers hauing with her, the nũber of 2757. ſouldiours ſhe tooke ſhipping in thoſe partes, & had the winde ſo fauorable, that they landed in England at a porte called Orwel beſide Harwich in Suffolke, in the Dominion of the Earle Marſhal the moneth of September. To whom after her landing reſorted Earle Marſhall, the Earle of Leiceſter, with other Barõs Knightes, and Byſhops alſo: namely of Lincolne, Hereforde, Dureſme, and Ely: The Archbiſhop of Caunterbury though he came not himſelfe, yet ſent his ayde and money. Thus the Queene well furniſhed with plenty both of men and vitaile, ſetteth forward towarde London: ſo that the further ſhe came the more her number dayly encreaſed, and the kinges power contrary, decreaſed, inſomuch that as mine author affirmeth, not one almoſt in all the Realme could be hyred with any wages to fight on the Kinges behalfe agaynſt the Queene. Neither did the Queenes army hurt any man or childe, eyther in goodes or any other thing, by the way.

The anſwer of the Londiners to the kyng.

At the arriuing of the Queene, the King was then in London, whiche firſt would not beleue it to be true. Afterward (ſeeing and perceauing how it was) he aſketh helpe of the Londiners. Who after mature aduiſement, rendred this aunſwere to the king agayne: that as touching the King, the Queene, and their ſonne (the lawfull heyre of the kingdome) they were ready withall duety and ſeruice to honour and obey. As for ſtraungers and traitors to the realm, they would receaue none ſuch within theyr Citie gates. Furthermore to goe out of the City to fight, that they ſayd they would not, vnles it were ſo, that according to yͤ liberties of their city, they might returne home againe before ſonne ſet. The king hearing this aunſwere (whiche liked him not well) fortifieth the Tower of London wyth men & vitaile: committing the cuſtody thereof to Iohn Eltham his yonger ſonne, and to the wife of Hugh Spenſer his niece. And leauing Walter Stapleton Byſh. of Exeter behinde him to haue the rule of the city of London: he himſelfe hearing dayly the great recourſe of the people that drew to yͤ Queene: For more ſafegard to himſelfe, fled wͭ a ſmall cõpany weſtward toward Wales. But before his departing frõ London, he cauſed a proclamation to be made: wherin, all & ſinguler perſons were charged vpon forfeite of life & goods: euery man wͭ all his power to riſe & inuade the rebelles & deſtroy them all, onely the life of the Queene his ſonne, and his brother reſerued. Alſo that no man, vpõ payne pretarate, ſhould helpe, reſcue, or relieue the ſayd rebels, with goodes, vitailes, or any otherwiſe. Item, it was alſo proclaymed, that whoſoeuer would bring to the King the head and body either dead or aliue of Sir Roger Mortimer: ſhould haue out of the kinges cofers, M. pounds.

In contrariwiſe, the Queene ſetteth forth an other proclamation, wherein it was forbidden, to take ſpoyle violently the value of any mans goodes agaynſt the will of the owner, vnder payne of looſing his finger, if it were 3. d. Moreouer who ſoeuer would bring to the Queene the head of Hugh Spenſer the yonger chopt off from his body: ſhould receaue for ſo doing of the Queene 2. thouſand poundes. This done, the Queene ſendeth her letters to the City of London for ayde and ſuccour to ſubdue the oppreſſor of the Realme, to the which letters firſt no anſwere was made. Agayn, ſhe wrote the ſecond letter, which was then tacked vpon the croſſe in Cheape, which was then called the new croſſe. The copy and tenour of which letter was this.

ISabell by the grace of God, Queene of England, Lady of Ireland, and Counteſſe of Pountif. And we Edward the firſt ſonne of the King of England, Duke of Guyan, Earle of Cheſter, of Pontif, and of Mounſtrell, to the Mayor and all the comminaltie of London ſendeth greeting. Foraſmuch as we haue before this time ſent to you by our letters, and howe we come into this lande in good aray and good maner, for the profite of holy Church and of our right deare Lord and king, and all the Realme with all our might and ſtrength, to keepe and mayntayne the Realme as all good people ought for to do. Vpon that we pray you and deſire you that ye woulde be helping to vs for the health and profite of the Realme, and we haue had none aunſwere of you, nor knowe not your will in that parte. Wherefore we ſend to you agayne and pray you, & charge you, that ye bear you ſo againſt vs, that ye haue nor make no cauſe vs to greue, but that ye be to vs helping in all the wayes that you may. And wete ye well in certaine that we and alſo thoſe that commeth with vs into this realme, nothing for to done, but that ſhall be pleaſing to God, and common profite to al the Realme. Not els, but for to deſtroy the Spenſers, enemyes to the Realme as ye well know. Wherefore we pray and charge you, in the fayth that ye owe to our Lord the king to the Crowne and to vs, and vpon all that ye may forfeite, that if Hugh Spenſer both the father and the ſonne our enemies come within your power, that ye do thẽ haſtely to be take, & ſafly kept, til we haue ordeined for them our will. And alſo we ſhall doe you profite and worſhip if that ye ſend vs haſtely worde agayne of our will. Geuen at Baldocke the ſixt day of October.

Then the king went to Briſtow, and ordayned ſir Hugh Spẽſer the father there to keep the

And the Queene ſo purſued them, that firſt they tooke the towne yelded vp to her: Then they tooke ſyr Hugh Spenſer the father, whom being drawn, and torne, they at laſt hanged vp at Briſtow in chaynes of yron. As the king was thus flying, yͤ queene cauſed to be proclaymed through her army, that the Kyng ſhould come and appeare, and ſo to receaue his kingdome agayne if he woulde be conformable to his liege ſubiectes. Who when he did not appeare, Prince Edward his ſonne was proclaymed high keeper of the Realme.

In the meane tyme Henry Earle of Lancaſter, & brother to the good Earle Thomas which before was beheaded, alſo Lord william Souch, and M. Vpphowell were ſent by the Queene into wales to purſue the king: & there tooke him, and ſent him to the Caſtell of Kenelworth: And tooke Hugh Spenſer the ſonne, and Sir Robert Baldock Chauncellour, and ſir Iohn Earle of Arundell, & brought them all to the towne of Hereford, And anone after, Hugh Spenſer the ſonne was drawn and hanged on a gallowes fiftye foote highe, and after beheaded, and quartered, whoſe quarters were ſent into 4. quarters of the Realme. Syr Iohn of Arundel was beheaded, ſir Robert Baldock was put in Newgate at London, where ſhortly after he pyned away and dyed among the theeues. This done, a Parliament was aſſembled at London, from whence meſſage was ſent to the Kyng, that if he would reſigne vp his Crowne, hys ſonne ſhoulde haue it after him: If not, an other ſhold take it to whom the lot would geue it. Whereupon, the king being conſtrayned to yelde vp his Crowne to hys ſonne was kept in priſon and after had to Barkley: where he is ſayd to take great repentance. After this meſſage beyng ſent, and the king halfe condeſcending thereunto (the Parliament notwithſtanding proſecuting and goyng forward) there was a bill exhibited and put vp contayning certayne articles agaynſt the ſayd Kyng, then in priſon in the Caſtle of Barkley, touching his miſbehauiour and imprudent gouerning of the realme: whiche bill, openly before all the Lordes and commons by the ſpeaker of the Parliament houſe was read. After long conſultation thereof amongeſt themſelues touching thoſe articles, and alſo for the better and more circumſpect gouernment of the Realme from that tyme forth: it was conſulted and agreed vppon by the Lordes ſpirituall and temporall, and commons there aſſembled: that they ſayd Edward was a man not meete to be their Kyng, nor from that tyme forth anye more to beare the Crowne royall or title of a Kyng. But that Edward hys eldeſt ſonne, who there in the ſame court of high Parliament was preſent, as he was rightfull heyre and inheritor therunto: ſo ſhould he be crowned king therof in hys fathers ſteade, with theſe conditions thereunto annexed: That he ſhould take wiſe, ſage, and true Counſellers vnto him. That the Realme might be better and more circumſpectly gouerned: then before in the tyme of Edward his father it was: That the old King his Father ſhould be honourably prouided for and kept, ſo long as he liued, according as vnto his eſtate it appertayned. &c. Theſe and other things thus finiſhed and ended, the Parliament breaketh vp, and all thinges neceſſary to the coronation of a Prince appertayning were in ſpeedy wiſe prepared, whereof more hereafter (Chriſt willing) ſhalbe ſpecified.

Tyranny odious to the people.

In the tractation of this kings hiſtory, before was declared what grudge did kindle in the harts of the Barons agaynſt the king, for reuoking ſuch actes and cuſtomes, as had bene before in the Parliament eſtabliſhed, both for Peter Gaueſtō, & for yͤ two Spenſers. Alſo what ſeuere puniſhment the king did execute vppon them for the ſame, in ſuche cruell and rigorous ſorte, that as he ſpared none of them, whom he could there finde: ſo he neuer ceaſed all hys life after to enquire out and to be reuenged of all ſuche, as had bene in any part or conſenting to that matter. For the which his extreme and implacable tyranny, he was in ſuch hatred of all the people: that as he ſayd, he coulde not fynde one of all the commons to take his part, when need required. Among all other which were for that matter troubled was one Adam Byſhop of Hereford: who being impeached of treaſon with other moe, was at length areſted in the Parliament, to appeare and anſwere to that ſhould be to him obiected. Many thinges there were layde agaynſt him, for taking part with them that roſe agaynſt the Kyng with matters moe and haynous rebukes &c. Whereunto, the Byſhop a great while aunſwered nothing.

After which wordes by him pronounced, the Archbiſhop and other Byſhops with him were ready to make humble interceſſion for hym to the king, and did. But when the king would not be wonne nor turned with any ſupplication: the ſayd Byſhops together with the Archbiſhop and the Clergy, comming with their croſſes: tooke him away, challenging him for the Churche, without any more anſwere making: charging moreouer, vnder the cenſures of the Churche and excommunication, none to preſume to lay any further handes vpon him. The king moued with thys boldnes and ſtoutnes of the clergy: cōmandeth notwithſtanding to proceede in iudgement, and the iury of 12. men to go vppon the enquiry of his cauſe: who finding and pronouncing the Biſhop to be gilty, the kyng cauſed immediately al his goods & poſſeſſiōs to be cōfiſcate vnto himſelfe: moreouer, made hys plate and all his houſholde prouiſion to be throwne out of his houſe into the ſtreete, but yet he remained ſo ſtil vnder the protection and defence of the Archbiſhop. &c.

Pope Iohn 22. a Monke Ciſtercian. A new ſolid hereſie. Hereſy with the Pope to ſay that Chriſt & the Apoſtles had no proper poſſeſſions here.

After pope Clement the 5. by whoſe deceaſe the Romiſh ſee ſtood vacant (as ye heard) two yeares and 3. moneths next was elected Pope Iohn 22. a Ciſtercian monke, who ſate in that papacy 18. yeares. He was ſtout and inflexible, geuen ſo much to the heaping of riches: that he proclaymed them heretickes, whiche taught that Chriſt and hys Apoſtles had no poſſeſſions of theyr owne in thys world.

Strife betweene the pope & the Emperour.

At this time was Emperour Ludouicus Bauarus, a worthy man: who with this Pope and other that folowed hym, had no leſſe contention, then had Fredericus before mentioned in the time of king Henry the thyrd. Inſomuch that this contention and variaunce continued the ſpace of 24. yeares. The cauſe and firſt origene of this tragical conflicte, roſe vpon the conſtitution of Clemēt the 5. predeceſſor to this pope, by whom it was ordayned as is afore mētioned, that Emperours by the Germayne Princes elected, might be called kinges of the Romaynes, but might not inioy the title or right of the Empyre to bee nominated Emperour, without theyr confirmation geuen by the Pope. Wherefore, this foreſayd Emperour becauſe he vſed the emperiall dignitie in Italy, before he was authoriſed by the pope: the ſayd Pope therefore excommunicated the Emperour. And notwithſtanding, the Emperoure oftentimes did profer himſelf to make intreaty of peace and cōcorde, yet the Pope inflexible woulde not bend. The writinges of both partes yet be extant, wherein the ſayd Byſhop doth make his auaunt: that he had full power to creat and depoſe kinges and Emperours at his pleaſure. In the ſame time were diuers learned men, which ſeing the matter: did greatly diſalow the Biſhop of Romes doynges, among whome was Guilerne Ocham, whoſe tractations were afterward condemned by the Pope, for writing agaynſt the temporall iuriſdiction of theyr ſee. And an other named Marſelius Patauius, which wrote the booke intituled Defenſor pacis, geuen vp to the handes of the ſayd Emperour, wherein the controuerſie of the Popes vnlawful iuriſdiction iuriſdiction in things temporall is largely diſputed & the vſurped authoritie of that ſee ſet forth to the vttermoſt. It is found in ſome wryters, that a great cauſe of this variaunce firſt began, for that one of the Emperours ſecretaries, vnknowing to the Emperour: in certayne of hys letters, had likened the Papal ſee to the beaſt riſing out of the ſea in the Apocalips. At length, when the Emperour after much ſute made to the pope at Auinion, could not obtayne his coronation: comming to Rome, was there receaued wͭ great honour, where he with his wife were both crowned by the full conſent of all the Lordes and Cardinals there, and moreouer, an other pope there ſet vp, called Nicholas the fift. After which thinges done, the Pope not long after departed at Auinion in France, after whom ſucceeded then Benedictus 12. a monke of Benedicts order, and rayned 7. yeares. who by the counſayle of Phillip the French kyng confirmed and proſecuted the cenſures and curſinges that Iohn his predeceſſour had publiſhed agaynſt Lewes the Emperour: Moreouer depriued him of his Emperiall Crowne, and alſo of hys Dukedome of Bauaria. The Emperour vpon this commeth to Germany, and aſſembling the Princes electors, Dukes, Biſhops, Nobles, and the learned in a councel at Francford: there declared before them out of the auncient lawes and cuſtomes of the Empire, how it ſtandeth onely in the Princes Electours, and in none other to elect the K. or the Emperors of the Romaines (for in both theſe names was no difference) ſo that the ſame Electors in chuſing the king of the Romaynes, did alſo elect and chuſe the Emperour. Whiche Emperour ſo by them conſtitute had lawfull right, without any information of the Apoſtolicall ſee, to exerciſe the adminiſtration of the Empyre. And if he were lawfully elect, ought to be annoynted of the Romayne Byſhop: which if hee doe refuſe, then might hee be annoynted and declared Emperour and Auguſtus by any other Catholicke Biſhoppe thereunto appoynted (as by the olde maner and cuſtome hath bene) eſpecially ſeeing theſe iniunctions, are but certaine ſolēnities added and inuented by the biſhops, onely for a token of vnitie betweene the church & Empire, to gouerne and defend the fayth together. Wherefore in that the Emperour ſweareth to the biſh. of Rome: in that is to be vnderſtand no homage or fealtie made to the Biſhop, but onely is a Sacrament & a promiſe geuē to defend the faith. The which oth or ſacrament ſo geuen, giueth no maioritie to the Pope in any temporal rule, but only byndeth yͤ Emperour to be prieſt and ready to defend the fayth & churche of Chriſt, when need ſhall require obedience. Wherefore, where as the Pope leaneth onely to the electors authoritie to make the K. of Romaynes, and taketh vpon himſelfe alone to make the Emperor that as it is newly brought in & deuiſed a late by pope Clemēt the 5. ſo is it contrary both to all auncient order, and alſo derogatorie to the libertie & maieſty of the ſacrate Empire. Agayne, neither is that alſo leſſe abſurd and contrary to all right and reaſon: yͭ the pope in time of the imperiall ſeat being vacant, taketh vpon him to haue the whole & full doinges of the Empyre, as lawful Emperour for the time. Which prerogatiue and function, by auncient orders of our forelders, ſhuld properly & onely appertayne to the Palatine of Rhene, the Conſtitution Clementine of the foreſayd Pope Clement to the contrary notwithſtanding. Then in the end for his own excuſe, he in the preſence of them al reciteth the publike confeſſion of his fayth, to anſwere & purge himſelf of thoſe obiections layde to him by the pope. This did the meeke Emperour Ludouicke in that Councell: yet all this not withſtanding, the ſayd Emperour remayned ſtill excommunicate, till tyme variaunce fel betweene this pope Benedict and Philip the French king. Wherfore to make his party good, at leaſt to haue ſome friendes to flee to: he began to pretend fauour & abſolution, rather for neceſſitie, then for anye good will to the Emperour. But not long after, this Pope died: of whō this Epitaph was made.

Pope Clement. 6.

The trouble of Ludouick the Emp.

After whome followed Pope Clement the ſixt, a man moſt furious and cruell. Who renuing agayne the former excommunications of hys former predeceſſors, cauſed hys letters to be ſet vp on Church dores, wherein he threatned & denounced moſt terrible thunderboltes agaynſt the ſayd Lewes the Emperour, vnleſſe within three dayes he ſhold ſatiſfie to God and the Church, and renounce the Imperiall poſſeſſion of the crown. The Emperour vpon this, cōmeth to Francford, and there ready to ſtand in al things to the ordinaunce of the pope: ſendeth his Oratours to the court of Rome, to entreat the pope of his fauour and good will towardes him. To the whiche meſſengers the Pope anſwered againe, that he would neuer pardon the Emperor, before he gaue ouer and confeſſed his errors & hereſies and reſigning vp his Empire to his handes, would ſubmit himſelfe, his children, and all his goods to the will and pleaſure of the biſhop, promiſing that he ſhuld not receiue agayn any part of the ſame, but vppon his good grace, as his will ſhould be to reſtore them.

Hereſie of the Popes making obiected againſt the Emperour.

The hereſie here mentioned, which was to this Emperour obiected by the pope was this: becauſe (as is aboue touched) he vſed and executed the Imperiall dignitie after his election, before he was of the pope confirmed. Ouer & beſides the Pope ſendeth to the Emperour by the ſayd Oratours, a certayne forme of a bill contayned in writing wͭ certaine conditions, which he commaunded to be geuen to the handes of the Emperor. Here if the Emperour Lewis had had as much minde to ſet vpon the Pope with dint of ſword, as he lacked neyther occaſion nor power ſo to doe: what bloud might here haue bene ſpilled? But the good Emperour ſparing the effuſion of bloud, receiueth gently the bill: and not onely with his ſeale doth confirme it, but alſo ſweareth to obſerue all yͤ conditions therof. Which the pope hearing of, doth greatly maruel. But yet al this wold nothing help to mollifie the modeſt heart of this Pharao.

The proude heart of the Pope.

The Princes and electors ſeeing the bill of the articles and conditions, whereof ſome ſounded to malicious defacing and deſtructiō of the Empire, abhorring the wickednes therof: deſired the Emperour to ſtande to the defence of the Imperial Dominion, as he had begon: promiſing that their aſſiſtance & ayde, to the vttermoſt thereunto ſhould not lack. Upon that other Orators were ſent to P. Clement from the Princes, deſiring hym to abſtaine from ſuch maner of articles conceaued agaynſt the ſtate and maieſty of the Empyre. The pope ſurmiſing all this to ſpring from Lewes the Emperour, to the vtter ſubuerſion of him and all his poſteritie: on Maundy thurſday bluſtereth out moſt black curſes agaynſt hym, alſo renueth al the former proceſſes of his predeceſſor agaynſt hym, as agaynſt both an hereticke & a ſchiſmaticke, commaunding moreouer the Princes electors to procede in chuſing a new Emperour. The Archbiſhop of Mentz ſeeing the innocency of the emperour, would not conſent to the violating of his maieſty, wherefore was depriued by the Pope of all his dignities. The other biſhops electors, as the Archb. of Cholē, which tooke 8. thouſande markes, with the Duke of Saxonye whiche tooke 2. thouſand markes, beyng corrupted with mony by Iohn king of Boheme: elected Charles the ſonn of the ſayd Iohn, whome Pope Clement eftſoones in hys conſiſtory did approue. Who ſeeth not here what matter was miniſtred by the P. of warre and bloudſhed betwene theſe 2. Emperours, if the patience of Ludouicke had not bene more prudent to quench the fire, then the pope was to kindle it? Charles then the new Emperour elect, ſped hym to Aquiſgraue, according to the cuſtome, there to be crowned. But by the Citizens there, and the Empreſſe (Ludouicus wyfe keeping there about) was repelled. All this happened in the time and raigne of Edward the 3. King of England, with whō the ſayd Charles, with the French k. and king of Boheme, ſet on by the P. encountred in warre where the king of England, had agaynſt them a noble victory, and ſlue a great number of the Frenchmen and Almaynes, and put Charles the new Emperor to flight. In the meane tyme, among the Princes and Citties of Germany what ſorrow and what complayntes were agaynſt pope Clement and thoſe electors, it cānot be expreſſed. For as they were altogether at Spires congregated in a generall aſſembly, ſo there was none among them al: yͭ allowed the election of Charles, or that cared for the popes proceſſe, promiſing all to adhere & continue faithful ſubiects to Ludouicke their lawful Emperour. But Ludouicke remembring his oth made before to the popes bill, voluntary and willingly gaue ouer his Emperiall dignitie, and went to Burgrauia, where ſhortly after, through the procured practiſe of pope Clement (as Hieronimus Marius doth write) poyſon was geuen him to drinke. After the whiche beyng dronke, when he would haue vomitted out, and could not: took hys horſe & went to hunt the beare, whereby through the chafing & heat of his body to expell yͤ venim. And there the good & gentle Emperour wickedly perſecuted & murdered of the P. fel downe dead, whom I may wel recount among the innocent and bleſſed martyrs of Chriſt. For if yͤ cauſe being righteous doth make a Martyr, what Papiſt can iuſtly diſproue hys cauſe or fayth? if perſecution ioyned thereunto cauſeth martyrdome, what martyre could be more perſecuted thē he? who hauing 3. popes, like 3. bandogs vpō him, at length was deuoured by the ſame. The princes then hearing of his death, aſſembled themſelues to a new election: who refuſing Charles aforeſayd, elected an other for Emperor, named Gunterus de Monte Nigro. Who ſhortly after falling ſicke at Franckford through his phiſitions ſeruaunt was likewiſe poyſoned, whome the foreſayd Charles had hyred with money to worke that feate. Gunterus taſting of the poyſõ, although he did partly caſt it vp agayn, yet ſo much remained within him, as made him vnable afterward to ſerue that place. Wherfore for cõcordes ſake being counſailed thereto by the Germaynes, gaue ouer his Empire to Charles. For els, great bloudſhed was like to enſue. This Charles thus ambiciouſly aſpiring to the Emperiall ſeat contrary to the mindes of the ſtates, and pieres of the Empire, as he did wickedly & vnlawfully come by it: ſo was he by hys ambitious guiding, the firſt and principall meane of the vtter ruine of that monarchie. For that he to haue his ſonne ſet vp Emperour after him, couenanted and graunted to the Princes electours of Germany, all the publicke taxes & tributes of the Empire. Which couenaunt being once made betwene the Emperour & them, they afterward held ſo faſt, that they cauſed the Emperour to ſweare neuer to reuoke or cal back again the ſame. By reaſon whereof, the tribute of the countryes of Germany, which then belonged onely to the Emperor, for the ſuſtentation of hys warres: euer ſince to this day is diſperſed diuerſly into the handes of the Princes, and free citties within the ſayd monarchie. So that both the Empyre beyng diſforniſhed and left deſolate, & the Emperors weakened therby: hauing neyther bene able ſufficiẽtly ſince to defend themſelues, nor yet to reſiſt the Turke, or other forren enemies. Whereof a great part, as ye haue heard, may be imputed vnto the popes. &c. Hieronimus Marius.

This Clement (as mine author affirmeth) toke vpon him ſo prodigally in his Popedome, that hee gaue to hys Cardinals of Rome, Byſhoprickes and benefices, whych then were vacant in England: and begã to geue them new titles for the ſame liuinges hee gaue them in Englande. Wherewith the king (as good cauſe he had) was offended, and vndid all the prouiſions of ẏ pope within his realme: Commanding vnder pain of priſonment and life, no man to be ſo hardy, as to induce & bring in any ſuch prouiſions of the pope, any more within his lãd. And vnder the ſame puniſhment charged the two Cardinals to void ẏ realme. An. 1343. In the ſame yeare all the tenthes as well of the templaries as of other ſpirituall men, were geuen & paide to the king through the whole realme. An. 1343. This foreſayd king Edward the ſecond, in his time builded 2. houſes in Oxford for good letters: to wit, Oriall colledge and S. Mary Halle.

Oriall colledge and S. Mary hal in Oxford builded by K. Ed 2.

A ſtory of the commotion betweene the towne and Abbey of Bury.

Here I omit alſo by the way the furious outrage and conflict which happened in the time of this king, a litle before his death, an. 1326. betweene the towneſmen and the Abbey of Bury, wherein the towneſmen gathering themſelues together in a great multitude (for what cauſe or old grudge betweene them, the Regiſter doth not declare) inuaded and ſackt the monaſtery. And after they had impriſoned ẏ monkes, they rifled the goodes and treaſure of the whole houſe, ſpoyling and carying away theyr plate, mony, copes, veſtimentes, ſenſers, croſſes, chaliſes, baſens, iewels, cups, maſers, bookes, wͭ other ornaments and implementes of the houſe, to the value vneſtimable. In the which conflict certayn alſo on both ſides were ſlayn. Such was the madnes then of that people, that when they had gathered vnto them a great concourſe of ſeruaunts & light perſons of that country to the number of 20. thouſand, to whom they promiſed liberty & freedome: by vertue of ſuch writs whiche they had out of that houſe, firſt they got into their hands all theyr euidences, copies & inſtruments, that they could finde: then they tooke of the lead, that done, ſetting fire to the Abbey gates they brent vp neare the whole houſe. After that they proceeded further to the farmes and granges belonging to the ſayd Abbey, wherof they waſted ſpoiled and brent to the nũber of 22. manour places in one weeke: tranſporting away the corne, horſes, cattell, and other moueables belonging to the ſame, the price wherof is regiſtred to come to 922. li. 5, s. 11. d. beſides the valuation of other riches and treaſure within the Abbey, which cannot be eſteemed.

Ex latino quodam Regiſtro.

The Abbot all this ſpace was at London in the parliament, by whoſe procurement at length ſuch reſcue was ſent down, that 24. of the chiefe of the towne (ſubmitting thẽſelues) were committed to warde: 30. cartes full of the towneſmẽ were caryed to Norwiche, of whome 19. were there hanged, diuers were put to conuict priſon. The whole townſhip was condemned in ſeuen ſcore thouſand pound, to be payd for damages of the houſe. Iohn Berton Aldermẽ, W. Hering wͭ 32. prieſts, 13. women & 138. other of ẏ ſayd town were outlawd. Of whõ diuers, after grudging at ẏ Abbot for breaking promiſe with thẽ at London, did confederate themſelues together, & priuily in the night cõming to the mannour of Cheninton, where ẏ Abbot did lye: braſt open the gates, who then entring in, firſt bounde all his familie: & after they had robbed al his plate, iewels and mony, they tooke the Abbot and ſhaued him, & ſecretly wͭ them conueyed him away to London: where they remouing him from ſtreet to ſtreete vnknowne, from thence had him ouer Thames into Kent, at length ouer ẏ ſea they ferried ouer to Diſt in Brabante: where they a ſufficient tyme kept him in much penury, miſery and thraldome, till at length the matter being ſearched, they were all excommunicate, firſt by the archb. of Cant. then by the pope. And at laſt being knowen where he was by his friends, was deliuered and reſcued out of the theeues handes, and finally brought home with proceſſion, and reſtored to his houſe agayn. And thus was that abbey with the Abbot of ẏ ſame (for what demerites I know not) thus vexed and afflicted about this tyme, as more largely I haue ſeene in theyr latine regiſter. But thus much briefly, touching the reſt I omit here, about the latter end of this Edward the 2. ceaſeth the hiſtory of Nic. Triuet, and of Flor. Hiſt paſſing ouer to the raigne of the next king.

King Edward the 3.

Concerning the acts & ſtory of K. Edward the 2. his depoſing, & cruell death, wrought by the falſe and counterfet letter of ſir Roger Mortimer, ſent in the kings name to ẏ keepers (for ẏ which he was after charged, drawne, & quartered.) I haue written ſufficiently before, and more peraduenture thẽ the profeſſion of this Eccleſiaſticall hiſtory will well admit. Notwithſtanding for certayne reſpects & cauſes, I thought ſomewhat to extend my limittes herein the more, wherby both kings & ſuch as clime to be about them may take the better example by the ſame, the one to haue ẏ loue of hys ſubiects, the other to learne to flee ambition, & not to beare themſelues to brag of theyr fortune and ſtate, how hye ſo euer it be. Conſidering with thẽſelues nothing to be in this worlde ſo firme and ſure, that may promiſe it ſelfe any certayne continuance, & is not in perpetuall danger of mutatiõ vnles it be faſtened by God his protection.

After the ſuppreſſion of this king, as is aboue expreſſed Edward his ſonne was crowned king of England, beyng about the yeare of 15. & raygned the ſpace of 50. yeares, who was a prince of much and great temperance. In feates of armes very expert, and no leſſe fortunate and lucky in all hys warres, as hys father was infortunate before him. In liberallitie alſo and clemẽcy worthely cõmended, briefly in all princely vertues, famous and excellẽt. Concerning the memorable acts of which prince, done both in warres and peace, as how he ſubdued ẏ Scots, had great victoryes by the ſea, how he conquered Fraunce. an.1332. wan Calice, an.1348. and traſlated the ſtaple thither, tooke the French king priſoner, & how the French armes firſt by him was brought in, & conioyned with the Engliſh armes, alſo how the order of the Garter firſt by the ſayd K. was inuented and ordayned, an.1356. alſo an.1357. How the king in hys parliament at Notingham, decreed, that al ſuch in Flaunders or other where, that had ſkill in making cloth, ſhould peaceably inhabite the land and be welcome. For 3. yeares before ẏ, it was enacted, that no wool ſhold be tranſported ouer the ſea. which was to bridle the pride of ẏ Fleminges who then loued better the ſackes of wooll, then the nation of Engliſhmẽ. All theſe with other noble acts of this worthy Prince, although in other chronicles be fully intreated of: yet according to that order I haue begun (ſaying ſomewhat of ech kinges raigne, although not pertinent to our eccleſiaſtical hiſtory) I haue here inſerted the ſame, making haſt to other matters, ſhortly & compendiouſly abridging them out of diuers & ſundry authors together compacted, mentioned in this wiſe.

The defiance of the kyng of Scots.

The coronation and ſolemnity of K. Edward the third and all ẏ pompe therof was no ſooner ended: but Robert of Bruſe K. of Scotland, vnderſtanding the ſtate and gouernment of ẏ realme to be (as it was in deed) in ẏ queene, the yong king, the Erle of Kent, and ſir Roger Mortimer And that the Lords and Barons, as he was enformed, did ſcarſely wel agree amongſt themſelues (although he grew now in age, and was troubled with the falling diſeaſe) yet thought he this a meet tyme for hys purpoſe, to make inuaſion. Hooping for as good ſucceſſe & like victory now, as but lately before he had at ẏ caſtle of Euſtriuelin. whervpõ about the feaſt of Eaſter, he ſent his Embaſſadours wyth Heralds and letters of defiance to the yong king Edward the 3. the Queene, & counſaile: declaring that his purpoſe was wᵗ fire and ſword to enter and inuade the Realme of England. &c. The K. Queene, and counſaile hearing this bold defiance, commaunded in all ſpeedy preparation muſters to be made throughout all the realme: appoynting to euery band captaines conuenient, & at the city of York by a day aſſigned them, commaunding euery man to be with all their neceſſary furniture ready and throughly prouided They directed their letters alſo with all ſpeede to ſir Iohn of Heynault, requiring him with ſuche ſouldiors and men at armes as he might conueniently prouide in Flaunders, Heynalt, and Brabant, to meete the king and Queene vpon the Aſcention day next enſuing at their City of Yorke.

The K. and Queene at Yorke, with an army of 6000. men, readie to meete the K. of Scottes entring the realme.

The king & Queene made ſpeedy preparation for thys expeditiõ: The noble men prouided thẽſelues of all things neceſſary therunto: the Engliſh captaynes and ſouldiors (theyr bands throughly furniſhed) were redy at theyr appoynted time and place: Sir Iohn of Heynalt, Lord Bedmount muſtring his men as faſt, was ready to take ſhipping: where at wyſant (in Engliſh Bothoms there lying for him redy) he wẽt aboard, and wᵗ a mery winde landed at Douer, trauailing frõ thence by ſmall iournies dayly, tyll he came wᵗin 3. dayes after the feaſt of Pentecoſt to the City of Yorke: where the king and Queene wᵗ a great power of 6000. men (within and about the City of Yorke) expected his comming: Before whome, in curteous wiſe he preſented himſelfe, and muſtred his troupe, wherein he had to the number of 500. good men at armes wel appointed & moũted. His comming and furniture was well liked both of ẏ king & Queene, & was by the Harbinger, appointed to be lodged with his houſholde retinue in the Abbey of whyte mõkes. To be briefe, ſuch grudge and variance fel betwene ſome of the kings ſouldiors and his, within the ſuburbs of the towne being together lodged: That from the little to ẏ more, whiles the king & Queene with diuers other of the nobles, (ſtraungers & others) were at dinner: the ſaid fray ſo greatly increaſed, that the whole army as many as wer in the town then lodged, ſtood to their defence: ſo that there was ſlain of the engliſh archers in ſhort ſpace by the ſtrangers to the nũber of 300. men. wherupõ grew (after ẏ fray was wᵗ much difficultie both of the king & Queene ended) ſuch hartburning betwene the parties: as that the number of 6000. conſpired together agaynſt thẽ: thinking to haue burnt them in theyr lodginges, had they not bene by the great grace of God & diſcrete hãdling, otherwiſe preuented & let. wherupõ the Heynolders were fayne to take & keep the field, vſing as diligẽt watch and ward, as though they had bene among theyr hoſtile enemies. After this, the king ſet forward his army toward Durham, & encamped hymſelfe neare about the ſame: who alſo ſent the Lord Vfford & the Lorde Mowbry to Carlell with a ſufficient company to keepe that entrance: and alſo the Lord marſhal of England to keepe the towne of Newcaſtle with a ſufficient cõpany to defend the ſame, and the country adioyning. For well knew the king, that by one of theſe two entries, the Scottes muſt paſſe into England, ſtanding both of them vpon the riuer of Tyne, 24. miles diſtant.

The great fraye in Yorke.

Carlile and new Caſtle then the keyes of England. Northward kept with Gariſons.

The Scots priuely paſſe ouer the riuer of Tine, burning and ſpoyling the countrey all about.

But the Scots priuily with their army paſſed the riuer betwixt the two townes into Englãd, few vnderſtanding thereof, till that the great fyers which the Scots had kindled and made in England bewrayed them: who came burning and deſtroing the country al about as far as Stãnop park. This thing being declared to the king, he commaundeth hys hoſt with all ſpeede to march towards thẽ, which ſo long trauailed ẏ they came in ſight ech of other. The K. alſo commaunded the paſſages of ẏ riuer to be ſo ſtraitly & narrowly garded, that by no meanes ẏ Scots could retire and haue eſcaped back againe into Scotland, without battaile geuen them of the K. But the Scots vnderſtanding the great power of the king was of, kept alwayes the aduantage of the hils retiring in the nightes frõ one to an other: that wᵗout great oddes & aduauntage in the one ſide & hazard to the other, the king could not ſet vpon them.

The kings armie and the Scottes are ſo neare that eche ſeeth other.

Thus in the day tune the Scots keeping the aduauntage of the hilles, and in the night times retiring to the aduauntage of ſuch other like came neare agaynſt that riuer where they firſt paſſed ouer, where they made a ſhew to offer battaile to the K. vpon the morow. wherupon the king being buſied in putting his mẽ and battailes in a readines to fight the next morning, being almoſt forweried in purſuing the Scots frõ place to place: the Scots in the meane ſeaſon gat ouer the riuer and eſcaped the daunger of the K. which thing as it could not be done: without great treaſõ of ſome neare about the king: ſo ſir Roger Mortimer was grieuouſly ſuſpected thereof, and after was layd vnto hys charge. But to be ſhort, by this meanes the Scots eſcaped the riuer, after whome it ſhould haue preuayled the King very little to haue made purſute as the wily Scots knew full well. For the ioy wherof, ẏ L. william Douglas one of the Scots Generals, wᵗ 200. horſes gaue a larum in the kings camp: & came ſo neare, ẏ he cut certayne of the lynes of the kings tent in ſunder wᵗ his ſword, and retired to hys company without great loſſe of any of his mẽ. Then on the morow the king perceauing the Scots to be gone, came to the place where ouer night they lodged, where was found 500. great Oxen and Kyne ready killed: fiue hundred Caudrens made of beaſtes ſkinnes ful of fleſh, ouer the fire ſeething: a thouſands ſpeetes full of fleſhe ready to be roſted, and more then 10000. ſhoes of raw leather (the heare ſtill vpon the ſame) whiche the Scottes had left behinde them: and fiue poore Engliſh priſoners tyed to trees & theyr legs broken. All which ſeeing the king, returned wᵗ hys armye (and left anye further purſuing the Scottes) to Durham: where he diſmiſſed his army, and came agayne to London ſending with Syr Iohn of Heynalt two hundred men at armes for theyr better ſafegard againſt the engliſh archers (with whom at Yorke as you heard they frayed) till they had taken ſhipping, and ſo returned home.

The Scots thorough treaſon eſcape out of Englande vnfought withall.

The prouiſion left in the Scots campe.

The king returneth to London.

The king then being at London, confirmed the liberties of the Citizens, and ordayned that the Maior ſhoulde ſit in all places as chiefe Iuſtice within the liberties of the ſame. And that what Alderman ſoeuer had beene Mayor before, ſhould be a Iuſtice of peace within his own ward.

Then the king, the Queene, and the counſell ſent ouer to the Erle of Heynault certayn Embaſſadours, touching the ſolemniſation of the mariage betwene the king and the Lady Philip his daughter: who in ſuch ſort ſped their meſſage, ẏ ſhe was ſoone after conueied ouer to England very honourably, and at Douer arriued. And from thence came to London (ſome Chronicles affirme to Yorke) where vpon the day of the conuerſion of S. Paule, the yeare aboue ſpecified, the mariage and coronation of the Queene was wᵗ much triumph during the ſpace of 3. weekes ſolemniſed.

After which coronation and mariage, the king let ſommon his Parliament to be kept at Northampton: wherat by the meanes of ſir Roger Mortimer and the old queene, a peace was purchaſed for the Scottes (who had for that purpoſe ſent theyr Embaſſadours) for foure yeares to endure. Alſo the king (then beyng within age) granted to releaſe the Scottes of al theyr homage and fealty which vnto the realme of England by theyr charter enſealed they were bound: as alſo theyr indenture which was called the Ragman Role, wherin was ſpecified the forelayd homage and fealtie to the king and crown of England, by the ſayd king of Scots, nobles and prelates to be made: hauing all their ſeales annexed to the ſame. Alſo there was then deliuered vnto them, the black croſſe of Scotland, whiche king Edward before for a rich Iewell and relique had conquered & brought from Scone Abbey: with all ſuche rites and titles as anye the Barons els, had enioyed in the ſaid Realme of

And further, for that the king was as well vnder the gouernment of the Erle of Kent his vncle, as the Queene hys mother, and the Earle of March: & for that, they could not doe in all thinges as they liſted for the ſayd Earle the kinges vncle, who loued the king and the Realme: Enuie began to riſe betweene the Earle Mortimer and him, and by Iſabell the Queenes practiſe, he founde the meanes to perſwade the king: that the Earle of Kent (to enioy the Crowne as next heyre vnto the king) went about to poyſon him. wherupon the king geuing light credite, cauſed his ſaid vncle to be apprehended: & wͭout anſwere making to his accuſation & accuſers, to be beheaded at Wincheſter, the third of October and 3. yeare of hys raigne. But ỹ iuſt iudgement of God not permitting ſuche odious crimes in him to be vnpuniſhed nor vndetected, ſo in fine fell forthe: that Iſabell the old Queene the kings mother, was found and vnderſtood to be with childe by the ſayd Mortimer. Complaynt hereof was made to the K. as alſo the killing of king Edward hys father, and of the conſpiracy of hym againſt the Earle of Kent the kinges vncle before put to death: whereupon diuers other articles layd agaynſt hym and manifeſtly read in the court, he was araigned and indighted, and by verdit found gilty: hauing his iudgement as in caſes of high treaſon, and ſuffered death accordingly at London, where vpon London bridge next vnto Spenſers, his head obtayned a place. But firſt he ſūmoned king Dauid of Scotland, who had (in the laſt truce 4. yeares to cõtinue as you heard, his father then liuing) maryed the Lady Iane, ſiſter to the king: termed Iane make peace, to doe his homage to the king but that he refuſed. wherupon, not forgetting there withall the ſcoffing rymes, whiche dayly from that tyme of truce the Scots had in theyr mouthes: he did ſomuch that with an army well furniſhed, he entred Scotland by the riuer of Twede, for the Scottes had then the poſſeſſion of ỹ town of Barwick: the Scottiſh Gigges & rimes were theſe. Long beards hartles, Paynted hoodes witles, Gay coates graceles, Makes England thriftles. To be ſhort, the king waſted the land, burnt, deſtroyed, & took townes and caſtels with ſmall reſiſtance or none: and the ſpace of 6. monthes together did in that land what hym liſted without any battaile offered to him. For the Kyng of Scots was but a child & not aboue they age of 15. yeares and wanted good captaines that ſhould haue defended the realme: in ſo muche ỹ they were all fayne ſauing thoſe that kept in holdes for theyr defence to take the forreſt of Godworth, & there kept to themſelues ſo long as the king remained in Scotland: who at length when he had ſufficiẽtly waſted, and ſpoyled, & brent the ſame, returned toward Barwicke, about the which he bent his ſiege, vowing not to remoue the ſame, till he had gotten the towne.

The K. entreth the towne of Barwicke & appointeth the captaine therof.

The Scots that kept the ſame, after a certayn tyme and many aſſaultes made, were contented vpon certayne conditions to haue deliuered vp the towne: But that the King refuſed, vnles that all conditions ſet apart, they woulde wͭ bag and bagage depart. wherevpon they condeſcended to the king, that if by a certayne tyme they were not by the king of Scottes reſcued, they would render vp the towne and with bag and bagage depart: & and ſo the time expired fruſtrate of all hope & reſcue, at the day appointed they did. The king then entred the towne and taried there the ſpace of 12. dayes: who after he had appointed ſir Edward Bailiew Captayn ouer the towne and leauing alſo behind him other Knightes, Squires, and Souldiors as well to keep the ſame as other holdes the king had conquered in Scotland and fronters therof: He returned with his people towardes London, permitting euery man to depart and go what way them liked.

Sir Rob. de Artois a noble man of Fraunce inciteth the K. to proſecute his title in Fraunce.

The king deliberateth with his councell cõcerning the title of Fraunce.

Then ſir Robert de Artoys, a Noble man of Fraunce, and which deſcended of the bloud royall, being in Englãd with the king: ceaſed not oftentimes to aduertiſe the kyng and put him in memory of his good & right title to the inheritaunce of the crowne of Fraunce. This ſir Robert, for a certayne diſpleaſure that Phillip the French king tooke agaynſt hym for a certayn plea which by hym was moued before the king: was fayne for the ſafegard of hys life to flee the Realme of Fraunce, and ſo came to the kinges Court. King Edward was not vnwilling at all to heare thereof, but took delight oftentimes to reaſon and debate that matter with him concerning his right, title, and inheritance to the crowne of France. But yet notwͭſtanding, he thought it not good to make any attempt therunto without aduiſed and circũſpect counſaile, for that it contayned matter of no ſmall, but moſt difficult importaunce: neyther yet he tooke it to deſerue the fame eyther of wiſedome or prowes to let ſo good a title dye, or ſo fit oportunitie to paſſe. wherefore he calling together certayne of his counſayle, vſed their deliberate aduiſes touching the ſeriouſnes of this matter. In fine, it was by them thought good, ỹ the king ſhould ſend certayne Embaſſadours ouer to the Earle of Heynault, whoſe daughter he had maryed, as wel to heare hys aduiſe and counſell herein: as alſo of what friendes and ayde, by him & his meanes in this ſo great an expeditiõ to be begon in the Empire, to him might be procured. The king hereunto cõdeſcendeth, & appointeth for this Embaſſage ỹ byſhop of Lincolne with 2. other Barenets, and 2. Doctors: who in ſuch ſpeedy wiſe made theyr voyage, that in ſhorte ſpace they returned agayne to the king with this anſwere That not onely the Earle hys counſaile & aduiſe, ſhould be herein preſt to the king of England theyr maiſter, but alſo the whole cõtry of Heynault. And further for that to ſuch an expedition as appertained he ſayd, the prouince of Heynault was but a ſmall matter to make accõpt of: he woulde procure for the king greater ayde & friendſhip in the Empire, as the Duke of Brabant his couſin Germaine, and a puiſſant Prince, the Duke of Guerles, the Archbiſhop of Colayne, the Marques of Iuliers. &c. which are all good men of warre, and able to make 10. thouſand fighting men ſayth he. which aunſwere well liked the king, and made him ioyous therof. But this counſaile of the king as ſecret as it was, came to Phillip the French kinges eares: wherupon, he ſtayd the voiage of the Croſie whiche then he had in hand, ſending forth countermaundes to ſtay the ſame, til he knew farther the purpoſe of the king of England.

Embaſſadors are ſent to the Earle of Heynalt concerning the title.

The Embaſſadours returne with anſwere frõ the Erle that pleaſeth the kyng.

K. Philip of France heareth of the kings purpoſe, and ſtayeth his viage of the Croiſie.

The king hereupon himſelfe taketh ſhipping accompanyed as to a king appertained, and when he had conſulted with all the foreſayd Lords of the Empire in this matter and vnderſtood theyr fidelitie: he made hys repayre to the Emperour at whoſe handes he was well intertayned & honorable receaued, whõ the Emp. appointed to be his Lieftenant generall, hauing thereby more authoritie both to will & commaund ſuch as for this his expedition he truſted vnto, and had made conuention with. This hearing Phillip, prepared his army and rigged hys nauy, that ſo ſoone as the K ſhould enter into the dominiõ of Fraunce, they alſo might enter into Englãd, requiting like for like.

K. Edward aſſigned lieftenant Generall of the Empyre.

The firſt viage of kyng Edward into Fraunce.

Southampton burnt of the French men.

The king of England, after the feaſt of S. Iohn Baptiſt, according to his purpoſe, prepared all thinges ready to ſuch an expeditiõ, cõducting his army & gathering a greater ſtrength in the Empire, as before to him was promiſed vſing the Emperours authoritie therein, as his lieftenant general, howbeit at the charge altogether of the K. of England. The French king as ſoone as king Edward, had landed his army at Mackline in Flaunders, and hearing of the defiance, which the king and other Noble men of the Empire had ſent vnto him: Sent certaine ſhips lying ready therunto, and wayting for ſuch oportunitie vppon the coſt of England, did ſo much that vpon a Sonday, whileſt the townes men were at the Church little looking for any ſuch matter, entred the hauen of Southampton, tooke the towne and ſpoyled the ſame, defloured maydens, enforced wiues, brent, kild, tooke captiues, and caryed away riche ſpoyles and great booties to theyr ſhips, and ſo agayn departed into Fraunce. Further, as the king of Englãd had allied himſelfe with the noble men of the Empire, and had the friendly fauour of the Emperour alſo therunto: ſo the French king made the like league and aliance with Dauid the king of Scots, whom the king had ſo hardly delt with all in Scotland (as partly before you had) and kept the moſt part of Scotland vnder hys ſubiection: Binding the ſayd Dauid is well by writing, as oth & pledge, that without his conſent he ſhould make no peace nor conclude any truce with the king of England. who agayne aſſured hym of ayd, and reſcue, and helpe, and to recouer his kingdome & dominiõ to his vſe: and forthwith ſent certain gariſons & bands into Scotland to keepe play with the Engliſhmen and there to fortifie diuers places till further oportunitie ſerued. Hee alſo fortified with men, money, vitayle, and munitiõ, the town of Cambrey: which he ſuſpected would be beſieged, lying ſo neare vpõ yͤ Empire as in deed it came to paſſe. For, King Edward departing from Macheline, ſet forward his hoſt towardes Heynault, and by the way aſſẽbled ſuch power, as in the Empirie he looked for, marching forward ſtill till that they came to Cambrey & it beſieged with 40000. men: while that with an other company, the Fleminges, Brabanters, and Holenders, went to S. Quentin. But in effect, neyther there, nor at Cambrey nor els where: any thing notorious was achieued, but the ſummer being well ſpent and little preuailing in the ſiege of Cambrey, being of ſituation ſtrong & wel defenced therwall wͭ men & munition: brake vp the ſiege, & marched further into the hart of Fraunce towardes Mutterell. which thing the French king hauing vnderſtanding of, prepared himſelfe to geue battaile to the king of England, who with an other great army came to Virõfoſſe, where daies were appoynted to meet in battaile: but in the end, nothing was done nor attempted betweene the princes. And the king of Englãd (without any battaile either geuing or taking) returned with his army from thence to Gaunt. Concerning the cauſe of the ſodaine remouing of the K. out of Fraunce, ſeemeth moſt ſpecially to riſe of the pope: which at the ſame time ſent downe his Legates, for the order of a peace to be taken betweene the kings. At Gaunt was gathered by the kings appointment all the nobles as well of England, as of the Empire in counſaile together what was beſt to be done. where playn anſwere was made to the king of England, that vnleſſe he would take vpon him the claime and title of Fraunce, as his lawfull inheritaunce and as King thereof proſecute his warres: It might not be lawfull for them any further, to ayde the king of England, or to fight with him agaynſt the French King: for that the Pope had bound them in two millions of Florences of gold, and vnder payne of excommunication, yͭ they ſhould not fight againſt the lawfull king of Fraunce. whereupon, the King thought good therfore preſently to make open challenge to the Realme and Crowne of Fraunce: and further, to quarter & intermingle the armes of Fraunce, with the armes of England in one Scootchen. wherupon eſtſoones K. Edward made anſwere vnto the Pope agayne, directing vnto him his letters wherein he declareth at large his right & title vnto the Crowne of Fraunce, purging thereby hymſelfe and hys cauſe vnto the Byſhop. The copy and tenour of which letter, because it is to long to expreſſe, it is to be found in the ſtory of Thom. Walſingham remaining in the LibrarY of I. Stephenſon Citizen of Londõ, who ſo hath liſt or leiſure to peruſe the ſame. Beſides this letter to the pope he directed an other to the Pieres and Prelates of France, (he remaynING yet at Gaunt) in tenure as followeth.

Anno. 1340.

The king of England taketh the title of Fraunce.

✻ The letter of king Edward to the Nobles and commons of Fraunce.

EDward by the grace of God king of Fraunce and of England, Lord of Ireland. Vnto all Prelates and the Eccleſiaſticall perſons, to the Pieres, Dukes, Earles, Barons, and to the commons of Fraunce, greeting: The high Lord and king aboue, to whome although his will be in his owne power, yet woulde that power ſhould be ſubiect vnto law: commaunding euery thing to be geuẽ vnto him which is his, declaring thereby that iuſtice and iudgement ought to be the preparation of the kinges ſeate. Wherefore ſeing the kingdome of Fraunce through the prouidence of God by the death of Charles laſt king of Fraunce of famous memory, brother Germaine to our Lady mother, is fallen vnto vs by playn and manifeſt law: And for ſomuch that Lord Phillip de Valoys, being the ſonne of the Vncle of the foreſayd king, and ſo being farre from the crowne by a farther degree of conſanguinitie: through force and vſurpation hath intruded himſelfe in the foreſayd kingdome (whileſt we were yet in our Minoritie) & ſo contrary both to God and to iuſtice doth detayne and occupye the ſame: And leaſt we ſhoulde ſeeme to neglect our owne right and the gifte geuen vs of God, or not to ſubmit our will to Gods diuine ordinance: We haue thought good to acknowledge the title of France, and by ſupportation of the almighty king haue taken vppon vs the defence and regiment of the ſayd kingdome: Firmely purpoſing with our ſelues (as euery good man ought to doe) graciouſly to miniſter iuſtice to euery one, according to the rites and laudable cuſtome of the foreſayd kingdome. Alſo to renue the good lawes and cuſtomes whiche haue bene in the time of Ludouicke our progenitour, adding to moreouer, that which ſhall ſeeme expedient according to the condition and qualiitie of the time. As by any chaunge of coyne or any other inordinate exactions, we intend not to ſeeke our profites by your detrimentes: when as (the almighty bee praiſed therefore) we abounde and haue inough. And as concerning the affayres of the Realme, our purpoſe is not to proceede raſhely or by our owne will, but by the diſcreete aduiſe and Counſell of the Pieres, Prelates, Nobles, and other our faythfull ſubiects of the kingdome ſo farre forth as ſhall make for the honour of God, the defence and aduauncement of the Church (which in all fulnes of deuotion we doe reuerence) and to the profite both publicke and priuate of all the ſubiectes thereof, with full execution of iuſtice by the grace of God to be executed vpon al and ſingular perſons, being earneſtly careful for the honour, profite, and tranquillitie of you all. For as the Lorde knoweth, nothing ſhall be more gratefull to vs, then that by our carefull ſolicitude peace may be engendered, ſpecially betwixt vs and vniuerſally among all Chriſten men: ſo that by our concorde the force and ſtrength of all Chriſten Princes may be ioyned together for the recouery of the holy land: whiche our Sauiour and redemer hath dedicated with hys owne proper bloud, whereunto we wil indeuour our ſelues through the grace of the holy ghoſt. And for aſmuch as we haue offered to the foreſayd Lorde Phillip diuers friendly and reaſonable conditions of peace, whereunto he would neyther condeſcend, neyther agree to any conformation: yea rather moueth againſt vs vniuſt warre, to the vtter ſubuerſion of our ſtate: we are enforced of neceſsitie to the vttermoſt of our power (for the defence both of vs, and recouery of our right) to defend our ſelues by force of battaile: not ſeeking any ſlaughter of good and humble ſubiectes, but deſiring theyr ſafegarde and profite. For the whiche cauſe, all and ſingular ſuch ſubiectes of the kingdome of Fraunce, which ſhall ſubmit themſelues to vs as the true king of Fraunce, within the feaſt of Eaſter next enſuing: profeſsing vnto vs theyr fealtie, and doing to vs as to the Kyng of Fraunce, by duety appertayneth, ſo as our beloued ſubiectes of Flaunders haue done alredy, or be ready to offer themſelues ſo to do: all ſuch we willingly admit and receaue to our peace & grace vnder our protection to be defended, them to mayntayne as is conuenient, from all moleſtation and diſquietnes whatſoeuer, in perſon or goodes hereafter to be inforced eyther by vs or by our officers, vpon what ſoeuer occaſion of rebellion afore paſſed. And for as much as the premiſſes, cannot eaſely be intimated to all and ſingular perſons: we haue prouided the ſame to be fixed vpon Church doores and other publicke places, whereby the maniſeſt notice thereof may come to all men, to the comfort of you that be to vs deuout, and to the true information of them, whiche through ſiniſter ſurmiſes of our enemies otherwiſe informed of vs. Dated at Gaunt the 8. day of February the yeare of our kingdome of Fraunce the firſt, of England the 14.

K.Edward to the nobles and cõmons of Fraunce.

The title of France how it came to K.Edward.

Note the groſenes of this tyme when the bloud of Chriſt was thought but only dedicated to the holy land.

This done, for that the winter then drew on, neyther was there any hope as the time ſerued, of farther doyng good: the Kyng thought beſt for a ſeaſon to returne againe to Englande with his company, geuing ouer the warres vntill the next ſpring and ſo did, taking ſhipping and ſo arriued at Douer. when he came to London, it was declared vnto him, of the great ſpoyle the Frenchmen had made at Southampton: who anſwered agayne that within one yeare, he doubted not the ſame to be well payd for & recompenced. And according to the ſame purpoſe of hys, he lingered no time but calling a Parliament at weſtminſter: with much grudge & euill will of his ſubiects, was for the mayntenance of hys warres graunted to him a great ſubſidie, which was the 5. of euery mans goodes, and alſo the cuſtomes of his woolles 2. yeares before hand, and the 9. ſheſe of euery mans corne. At the ſpring the K. agayn prepared his army, & rigged hys nauy purpoſing to land in Flaũders. But the Archb. of Canterb. then Lord Chauncellour hauing vnderſtanding of the Frenche power vpon yͤ Sea lying for the k. gaue him aduertiſement thereof willing him more ſtronglier to go or els not to venture. But the king not crediting the Archbiſh. and being angry with him therefore, ſayd that he would go forward: whereupon the biſhop reſigned the Chauncellorſhip, & remoued himſelfe from his Counſayle: then the K. conſulting hereupon farther with the Lord Morley, his Admirall, and others (hearing alſo the ſame of them) furniſhed himſelfe with ſtronger power, and committed him to his ſhip: and did ſo much, that a few dayes before midſommer, he was vpõ the Sea with a great fleete. Before the town of Sluſe, yͤ french king to ſtop hys paſſage, had layd ready a great nauy well neare to yͤ number of 20. ſcore ſayle: and had made the Chriſtopher of England (which before the French men took at Southamptõ) theyr Admirall: betwixt which two nauies was a lõg and terrible fight. But in the end, the victory by Gods grace fell to the king of England, in which fight he himſelfe was perſonally. So that of the number of thirtye thouſand Frenchmē, few or none were left & eſcaped aliue, and two hundreth ſayle of ſhippes taken: in one of the which, were found 400. dead bodyes.

The wordes of the foole to the French kyng.

After this great ſlaughter of the Frenchmen (of whom many for feare of the ſword lept into the ſea) when no man durſt bring tidinges thereof to the Frenche king: They which were next about the king, did ſubborne his foole, to inſinuate the vnderſtanding thereof by ſubtiltie of couert words, which was thus. As the foreſayd foole being in the kinges preſence, and was talking of many things: among other talke, he ſodenly braſt out (being prompt by others) into a vehement rayling of the Engliſhmen, calling them cowards & daſtards, with many ſuch approbrious words: tending to that effect. The king not knowing whereunto the words of the foole did appertayne: aſked the foole, why he called the Engliſhmen ſuch weakelings and cowards. &c. Why, ſayth the foole? Becauſe the fearefull and cowardly Engliſhmen had not the hartes to leape into the ſea ſo luſtely, as our Normands, & Gentlemen of Fraunce had. Whereby the French kyng began to vnderſtand the victory of his part to be loſt, and the Engliſhmē to be victorers.

This victory atchieued, ẏ fame thereof ſpreading abroad in England, firſt was not beleued till letters thereof came from the king to Prince Edward his ſonne, being then at Waltham, directed to the biſhops & prelates of the realme, the effect of which letters here followeth vnder written.

The letters of K.Edward to the Byſhops of England.

THe bountifull benignitie of Gods great clemency powred vpon vs of late, for your true certification, and reioycing, we thought good to intimate vnto you. It is not vnknowne (we ſuppoſe) to you, and to other our faythfull ſubiectes, which alſo haue bene partakers with vs of the ſame, with what ſtormes of boyſterous warres of late we haue bene toſſed and ſhaken, as in the great Ocean. But although the riſing ſurgies of the ſea be merueilous, yet more merueilous is the Lord aboue: who turning the tempeſt into calme, in ſo great daungers, ſo mercifully hath reſpected vs. For where as we of late did ordaine our paſſage vpon vrgent cauſes, into Flaunders the Lord Phillip de Valoys our bitter enemye vnderſtanding thereof, layd agaynſt vs a mighty nauy of ſhips, entending thereby eyther to take vs, or at leaſt to ſtop our voyage. Which voyage if it had bene ſtayd, it had bene the cutting of, of all the great enterpriſes by vs intended and taken in hande, & moreouer we our ſelues brought to a great confuſion. But the God of mercies ſeing vs ſo diſtreſſed in ſuch perils and dangers hath gratiouſly aud beyond mans expectation ſent to vs great ſuccour & ſtrength of fighting ſouldiours, and a proſperous wynde after our owne deſires. By the meanes and helpe whereof, we ſet out of the hauen into the ſeas, where we eftſoones perceaued our enemies well appointed and prepared with a mayne multitude to ſet vpon vs, vpon midſommer day laſt paſt. Agaynſt whome notwithſtanſting, Chriſt our Lord and Sauiour hath rendered to vs the victory, through a ſtrong and vehement conflict. In the which conflict, a mighty number of our enemies were deſtroyed, and well neare all theyr whole Nauy was taken: with ſome loſſe alſo of our part, but nothing like in compariſon to theirs. By reaſon whereof, we doubt not but our paſſage by the ſeas hereafter ſhalbe more quiet and ſafe for our ſubiectes, and alſo many other commodities ſhall enſue therof, as we haue good cauſe to hope well of the ſame. For which cauſe we deuoutly conſidering the heauenly grace ſo mercifully wrought vpon vs, do render moſt humble thankes & praiſe to Chriſt our Lord and ſauior. Beſeeching him, thar as he hath ben and alwayes is ready to preuent our neceſsities in time of oportunitie, ſo he will continue hys helping hand euer towardes vs, & ſo to direct vs here temporally, that we may raigne and ioy with him in heauen eternally And in like ſort we require your charitie that you alſo with vs riſing vp to the prayſe of God alone, who hath begon ſo fauourably to worke with vs to our goodneſſe, in your prayers and deuine ſeruice do inſtantly recommend vs vnto the Lord, traueiling here in theſe foreigne countries and ſtudying to recouer not onely our right here in Fraunce: but alſo to aduaunce the whole Catholicke Churche of Chriſt and to rule our people in iuſtice. And that alſo ye call vpon the Clergy and people, euery one through his dioceſſe to do the ſame, inuocating the name of our Sauiour, that of hys mercy he will geue to vs his hūble ſeruaunt a docible hart, ſo to iudge and rule hereupon rightly doing that which he hath commaunded: that at length we may attaine to that which he hath promiſed. &c. Which letter was written to the Byſhops and prelates. an. 1340.

After this foreſayd victory vpon the ſea, & newes thereof with due thanks to our Sauiour ſent into England: the Kyng ſtriking into Flaunders, came to Gaunt in Brabante where hee had left the Queene, who ioyfully receaued him, being a little before purified or churched as we terme it of her fourth ſonne, whoſe name was Iohn and commonly called Iohn of Gaunt, and was Erle of Richmonde, and Duke of Lancaſter. At Villenorth the king aſſembled his councell, whereat the noble men of Fraunce Brabant and Hennalt conioyning together in moſt firme league the one to helpe and defend the other, with the king of England, agaynſt the French king, purpoſing and determinig from thence to march toward Turney & it to beſiege. But the French king vnderſtanding theyr counſell, fortified and victualed the ſame before theyr comming thither. Furthermore the ſayd Frenche king the ſame tyme to ſtop the ſige of king Edward, ſent to king Dauid of Scotland a great power, to that intent to make inuaſiō in England, thereby the ſooner to cauſe the king to remoue hys ſiege. In the meane time while king Edwarde wrote his letters to Philip de Valous, making vnto him certain requeſtes, as in the ſame his letters here folowing is to be ſeen: who for ẏ he wrote not vnto him as K. of France but by ẏ name of Philip de Valous, refuſed to anſwer him touching the ſame as by their letters here placed may be ſeene.

✤ The letter of the king of England, to Phillip de Valous the French king, goyng to the ſiege of Turney.

The letter of king Edward to the Frēch kyng.

PHillip de Valous, of long time we haue gently requeſted you by our Embaſſadours (by all the reaſonable meanes we might) to that intent you ſhould haue rendered vnto vs our lawful right and inheritaunce to the crowne of Fraunce which from vs a long time you haue by great wrong and force deteined And for that we well perceaue you meane to perſeuere in the ſame your purpoſe and iniurous detinue, without making any reaſonable aunſwere to our demaund. We let you vnderſtand, that we are entred into the country of Flaunders, as the ſoueraigne Lord of the ſame and ſo paſſe through the country: and further ſignifie vnto you, how that by the helpe of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt and our righteous cauſe therein, and with the power of the ſayd country, our people, and allyes: we purpoſe to recouer the right which we haue to that inheritaunce you deteine from vs by your iniurious force and therefore approche we towardes you to make a ſhorte end of this our rightfull challenge if you alſo will doe the like. And for that ſo great an hoſt aſſēbled which we bring with vs on our part (ſuppoſing you alſo on the other part to doe the like) cannot lōg remayne together without great deſtruction both to our people and country, which thing euery good Chriſtian ought to eſchue: eſpecially Princes and others which haue the gouernment of the ſame, auoyding by as ſhort an end as may be, the mortality of chriſten men, according as the quarrell is apparaunt betweene you and me. For the which cauſes here touched, let the challenge (if you thinke meete) betweene our own perſons and bodyes diſcuſſed, that the great Nobillitie and prowesſe of each other, may of euery one be ſeene. And if you refuſe this way, then let there (to finiſh this challenge) be an hundreth of the beſt ſouldiours you can chuſe out of your part, matched with ſo many of our liege ſubiects to try the ſame. And if of theſe two wayes you refuſe both the one & the other, then that you wil aſsigne vnto vs a certain day before the town of Turnay, to fight with vs power agaynſt power, which may be within ten dayes next inſuing after the date of theſe our letters, offering the ſayd conditions vnto you aboue ſpecified (as we would all the world to know and vnderſtand) not vppon anye orgoile, preſumption or pride we take therein, but for the cauſes before alledged, and to the end that (the will of our ſauiour Ieſus Chriſt betwixt vs two herein declared and ſhewed) reſt and peace might grow amongſt Chriſten men. The power and force of gods enemies abated: and in fine, the limites of Chriſtianitie enlarged and enfranchiſed. And therefore hereupon conſider with your ſelfe what way you will take concerning our foreſayd offers, and by the bearers of theſe our letters ſend vnto vs herein quicke and ſpeedy aunſwere. Geuen vnder our great ſeale at Chyn in the playne of Lecce the xxvii. day of this preſent month of Iuly.

The anſwere of the Frēch K to K.Edward.

PHillip by the grace of God king of Fraunce, to Edward king of England. We haue ſeene the letters whiche you haue ſent vnto our Court to Phillip de Valois, wherein are contayned certayne requeſtes which you make to the ſayd Phillip de Valois. But for that the ſayd letters come not as directed vnto vs, neyther yet the ſayd requeſtes ſeeme to be made vnto vs (which thing clearely by the tenour of the ſayd letters appeareth) we therefore write vnto you no aunſwere touching the ſame. Notwithſtanding, this ſuffiſeth that we vnderſtand by the ſaid letters of yours, as alſo otherwaies, that you are entred into our Realm of Fraunce, to the great damage both vnto vs, our realme and people (more proceeding of wil, then reaſon) & not regarding that which a liege man ought to do vnto his Lord. For you are entred into our homage by you lieged vnto vs, acknowleging your ſelf as reaſō is a liege mā vnto the king of France:and haue promiſed vnto vs ſuch obeiſance as men are wont to do vnto their liege Lordes (as more plainly by your letters patēts appeareth,enſealed with your great ſeale,the which we haue with vs)for the which thing we will you to vnderſtande: that our purpoſe is(when it ſhal ſeme good vnto vs)to driue you out of our realme,to the honor both of vs and our kingdome,and to the profite and commodity of our people. And this thing to do we haue firme and aſſured hope in Ieſus Chriſt, from whome we haue all our power and ſtrength. For, by your vnreaſonable demaund more wilful then reaſonable,hath bene hindred and ſtaide the holy voyage to thoſe partes of beyonde the ſeas,where a great number of Chriſten men haue bene ſlaine: the deuine ſeruice diminiſhed,and the ſeruice of the churche leſſe reuerenced. And as touching that where you ſay,ye intende to haue the obeyſance of the Flemmings, we thinke and beleeue that the good people and commons of that country will behaue themſelues in ſuch ſort toward our Coſin the Countes of Flaunders their Ladie, as it be not their reproche,and to vs their ſoueraigne Lorde, they will reſpect their honour and loialty. And that thing wherein they haue done otherwiſe then well hitherto,hath beene by the euill counſaile of ſuch people,as neither regarde the weale publike, nor honour of their countrey,but their owne onely gaine and commoditie. Geuen in the fielde neere adioyning to the Priorie of S.Andrew vnder our priuie Seale, in abſence of our great Seale, the 30.day of Iuly.An.1340.

The Scottes inuade Englande.

Mention was made a little before of Dauid King of Scots whome the French king had ſupported and ſtirred vp againſt the king and realme of England:which Dauid (with the aide of the Scots and Frenchmen) did ſo muche preuaile,yͤ they recouered almoſt againe al Scotlād which before he had loſt,and was cōſtrained to liue in the forreſt of Gedworth many yeres before. Then inuaded they England, & came with their armie, waſting and burning the countrey before them, till they came as farre as Durham. & then returned againe into Scotland, where they recouered all their holdes againe,ſauing the towne of Barwike. Edenborough they tooke by a ſtratageme or ſubtile deuiſe practiſed by Douglas & certaine other: who apparailing themſelues in poore mens habites,as vitailers with corne and prouender & other things, demanded the porter early in the morning what neede they had thereof. who nothing miſtruſting opened the outward gate, where they ſhoulde tary til yͤ Captaine roſe:and perceiuing the Porter to haue the kaies of the inward gate, threw downe their ſackes in the outward gate, that it might not be ſhut againe, & ſlewe the Porter, taking from him the kaies of the towne. Then they blew their horne as a warning to the bandes, which priuily they had laid not farre off: who in haſtie wiſe comming, & finding the gates ready opened entred vpon the ſodaine and killed as many as them reſiſted,and ſo obtained againe the citie of Edenborough.

Edenborough recouered from the Engliſhmen by the Scottes.

The Scots thus being buſie in England, the Frenche king in the meane ſeaſon gathered together a puiſſaunt power purpoſing to remoue the ſiege frō Turnay: and among other, ſent for the king of Scots, who came to hym wͭ great force,beſides diuers other noble men of France:in ſo much that the French king had a great army, & thought himſelfe able inough to raiſe the ſiege,and thither bent his hoſt. But the French K. for al this his foreſaid huge power & force,durſt not yet ſo neare approch the king, as either to geue him battaile,or els remoue his ſiege: but kept him ſelf wͭ his army aloofe, in a ſure place for his better defence. And notwithſtanding the king of England waſted,burnt ſpoiled, and deſtroyed the coūtry 20. miles in maner compaſſe about Turnay, and tooke diuers and ſundry ſtronge townes and holds at Ortois,Urles,Greney,Archis,Odint,S.Amand,and the towne of Liſle, where he ſlewe aboue 300.men of armes,and about S.Omers, he ſlue and kild of noble men,the Lorde of Duſkune, of Mauriſelou, of Rely, of Chaſtillion,of Melly, of Fenis,of Hamelar,of Mounfaucon,and other Barons to the number of 14.and alſo ſlue and killed aboue 130.Knightes, being all men of great poſſeſſions and prowеſſe,and tooke other ſmall cities and townes to the number of 300.Yet for all thys,Phillip de Ualois the french king durſt neither reſcue his towns, nor relieue his owne men : but of hys great armie hee loſt (which is to be marueiled at,being in the midſt of his own countrey) by famine & other inconueniences,& for want of water more then 20000.men without any battaile by hym geuen. wherupon at the treatie of the ſayde Phillip by hys embaſſadours to the king ſent,and by the mediation of the Lady Iane,ſiſter to the ſayd Philip,& mother to the Earle of Henault, whoſe daughter king Edwarde as you heard had married: A truce containing the number of 15.articles for one yeare was concluded, the king of Englande being very vnwilling and loth therunto. Yet notwythſtanding, partly by the inſtance of the foreſayd Lady, but ſpecially for yͤ the king was greatly diſappoynted, through the negligence of his officers in England, which ſent hym not ouer ſuch mony as he neded,for the continuance of hys warres and paiment of his ſoldiors wages(yͤ articles being ſomewhat reaſonable)he agreeth to the truce therof, the cōditions of which truce there concluded, heere followe vnder wrytten.

Tourney beſieged.

Articles of truce.

1. Firſt, that during the ſayde truce, no tales or miſtruſt of either part ſhall be a detriment or cauſe of breache of the ſame.

2. Item, that during the ſayd reſpite or truce, eyther of the Princes,their helpers,coadiutors,and allies whatſoeuer: ſhall remaine and be in the quiete poſſeſſion of all ſuch poſſeſſions, holdes, territories and landes, as at thys preſent day,they kepe and enioy within the realme and dominion of Fraunce, in what maner ſo euer they haue atchieued the ſame,during the ſayd truce.

3. 8. Item, that ſuche as are theeues and fugitiues out of the Countrey of Flaunders,ſhall not returne during the truce: and if they do,that then ſuch as apprehēd them, ſhal ſee iuſtice done vpon them, and forfaite all the goodes they haue in Flaunders.

9. Item, it is accorded, that the debtes due to Arras, Treſponois,or other titles of Fraunce, ſhal neither be demaunded,nor executed during the ſayd truce.

10. Item, that all ſuche pryſoners as haue bene taken during theſe warres,ſhalbe releaſed out of priſon & ſent home vpon theyr faith and othe to returne, if they be not raunſomed during the ſayd truce. And if any ſhal refuſe ſo to doe, that then the Lord vnder whom he is,ſhall conſtraine him to returne againe to priſon.

11. Item, that all the bandes whatſoeuer they be, whyche be made before thys ſayde truce in the time of warre(whether they be of goods ſpirituall or temporall) be releaſed wͭout reſtitucion,during the ſayd truce.

12. Alſo, that theſe conditions of truce immediatly may take effect betwene the Engliſhmen & Scots,their Lords, aiders and allies : and the ſame to endure vntill the Natiuitie of S.Iohn Baptiſt. And that certain perſons be apointed by a certaine day to be at the marches of England and Scotland to confirme the ſame truce,vnder ſuch cōditions as haue bene accuſtomed in thoſe partes. And if the ſaid Scottes refuſe ſo to doe, that then they to haue no aide out of Fraunce,during the ſayd truce.

13. Item, that this ſayd truce be proclaimed in England, and in Scotlād, wythin the 26.dayes after the date therof.

14. Item, it is accorded that within this truce be contayned Eſpamels, Chatellon, Geneuos,the Byſhop and the towne of Cambrey,and caſtels of the ſame,&c.

In witnes wherof,we Iohn by the grace of God king of Bohemia,and Earle of Luxemburgh,Adulphe Byſhop of Liege,Raoule Duke of Loreine, Aymes Earle of Sauoy,& Iohn Earle of Darnmacke on the one party: And B.Duke of Brabante, C.Duke of Gelre, D.Marques of Iuliers,ſir Iohn of Henault, and ſir Beawmount on the other party, betwixt the high & puiſſant princes of France and England: Haue ſealed thys inſtrument of truce and peace, and deliuered the ſame accordingly in the church of Eſpletcline, on monday the 25. day of September, the yere of grace. 1340.

K.Edward returneth from Tourney.

The kyng deceiued by his officers.

No biſhop muſt be impriſoned by the Popes lawe.

This truce thus finiſhed, king Edwarde brake vp hys campe, remouing his ſiege from Tourney, & came againe to Gaunt. Frō whence (very early in the morning) he wt a ſmall company tooke ſhipping, and by long ſeas came to the tower of Lōdon, very few or none hauing vnderſtanding thereof. And being greatly diſpleaſed with diuers of his counſel and high officers (for that through their default he was conſtrained againſt his will, not hauing money to maintaine hys warres, to condeſcende vnto the foreſayde truce) he commanded to be apprehended and brought vnto him to the tower, the Lorde John Stonhore chiefe iuſtice of England, and ſyr John Poulteney with diuers others. And the next morning, he ſent for the Lorde R. Byſhop of Chicheſter and the Lord wake, the Lorde Treaſurer & diuers other ſuch that were in authority and office, and commanded them al to be kept as priſoners in the ſaid tower, onely the ſayd byſhop excepted: whom for feare of the conſtitution of Pope Clement, whych commaunded that no Byſhop ſhould be by the king impriſoned, he ſet at libertie & ſuffered him to goe his way, & in his place ſubſtituted ſir Roger Bourcher knight, Lord Chauncelour of England.

Couetous officers.

Iohn Stratford Archb. of Cant.

The hiſtorie intreating of this matter, reporteth thus that the king had this time vnder him euil ſubſtitutes, and couetous officers: who attēding more to their owne gain, then to the publike honour and commoditie of the realme, left the king deſtitute and naked of money. wyth whyche crime, alſo John Stratford Archbiſhop then of Caunterbury, was vehemētly noted and ſuſpected, whether of hys true deſerning, or by the ſetting on of other hereafter ſhall more appeare. In ſo much that the king ardently incenſed againſt him, charged him with great falſhode vſed againſt his perſon, as by theſe his letters wrytten and directed to the Deane and Chapter of Paules againſt the ſayd Archbiſhop manifeſtly appeareth, the tenor of which letter here followeth vnder written.

Edward by the grace of God king of England and Fraunce, and Lord of Ireland. To his welbeloued in Chriſt the Deane and Chapter of the Church of S. Paul in London, greeting in the Lord.

The kyngs letter to the Dean and chapter of Paules.

IT is manifeſt by ancient hyſtories, but more plainely appeareth by thoſe which daily are practiſed amongeſt vs: that many men abuſing (through pride) the fauour of Princes, and honour beſtowed vpon them, haue maliciouſly gone about to depraue the laudable endeuour of kings. And nowe that the woordes which we ſpeake may be more manifeſt vnto our ſubiects: we ſuppoſe that neither you nor they haue forgotten, that we being eſtabliſhed in our kingly throne in yonger yeres, and coueting euen then to guide this our regal charge taken vpon vs with wholeſome coūſailes, haue called vnto vs Iohn the Biſhop of Wincheſter, nowe Archb. of Cant. whom we ſuppoſed for his fidelity and diſcretion to excede others: whoſe counſaile in matters appertaining vnto the health of our ſoule, as in matters alſo reſpecting the augmenting and conſeruation of our kingdome both ſpiritually & temporally, we vſed: he was receiued of vs into all familiaritie. Wee found in him alſo ſuch humanity, that he was ſaluted by the name of father, and of all next vnto the king had in honour. Now afterwards, when by right of ſucceſsion the kingdome of France ſhuld haue deſcended vnto vs, and was by violent iniurie by the Lorde Philip of Valois holden from vs: the ſaid Archb. by his importune inſtancie, perſwaded vs to enter league of amity with the princes of Almanie, againſt the ſayde Phillip, and to commit our ſelfe and ours vnto the hazard of warres, promiſing and affirming that he woulde bring to paſſe, that the reuenues of our landes and other helpes by him deuiſed, ſhoulde ſuffice aboundantly for the maintenance of our ſaid warres. Adding moreouer, that our only care ſhould be for the furniture of ſtrong and able ſouldiours, ſuch as were fit for the purpoſe, and expert in warfare: for the reſt, he him ſelfe would effectually procure, for money conuenient to ſuffice our neceſſitie, and the charges thereof. Whereuppon (entending great exployts) we conueyed our army beyond the ſeas, and with marueilous great charges (as behoued) we ſet forwarde: we became alſo bound in great ſummes of mony, making ſure accompt of the aide aforeſaid promiſed vnto vs. But alaſſe, vnhappy is that man that repoſeth confidence in mans deceitfull ſtaffe of brittle reede: wherunto (as ſayth the Prophet) if a man leane, it breaketh and pearceth the hand. Thus being defrauded of our long looked for ſubſidie, for very neceſsities ſake, we were conſtrained to take vpon vs importable charges of debts by grieuous vſurie. And ſo, our expedition being ſtaied, we were compelled to retyre into England, deſiſting from our enterpriſes ſo valiantly begun. Now, when we were returned into England, we laide before our Archbiſhop our manifold calamities and misfortunes before reherſed, and thereuppon called a Parliament: wherein the Prelates, noblemen and other the faithfull ſubiectes of our dominions, graunted vnto vs a new ſubſidie of corne, lambe, wool. &c. beſides the tenth graunted by the Cleargie: which ſubſidie (if it had bene faithfully collected and obtained in due time) had greatly auailed for the expedition of our ſayd warres, the paiment of our debts, and confuſion of our enemies. Our ſaide Archbiſhop promiſed diligently to do his endeuour, as well in collecting the ſame, as alſo in procuring other neceſſaries to ſerue to our purpoſe. Wherupon, truſting vnto theſe faire promiſes, hauing all thinges in a readyneſſe both men and furniſhed ſhips, we made ſaile towards Flaunders, and by the way vpon the dangerous ſeas buckeled with our enemies (ſworne to the deſtruction of our Engliſh nation) of whome we triumphed and were victors, not by our merites (their multitude farre exceeding ours) but by the mercifull clemencie of him that ruleth both winde and ſea. Which being done, we paſſed frō thence with a mighty power for the recouery of our right, & pitched our tentes neare vnto the puiſſant citie of Tornaye: where being deteined for a time in the ſiege therof, wearied with continuall toyle, our charges ſtill encreaſing, awaiting with ſilence our promyſed ayde: day by day, wee hooped from oure Archbyſhoppe to receiue ſuccoure in theſe our ſo great neceſsities. At length being fruſtrate of all conceyued hope, wee ſignified vnto our ſayde Archbyſhop, and other his adherents, by diuers meſſengers and ſundry letters, our great neceſsitie and perils which we were in for lacke of the ſayd ſubſidie, graunted vnto vs. We added alſo the vtilitie and honour, which we ſawe might be atchieued if we had receiued money in time. All this notwithſtanding, we receiued from them no ſuccour at all, for that, preferring their priuate buſineſſe and proper commodities, they cloked their ſlouth, or rather (as I may call it) their fraude and malice with vaine excuſes: and painted gloſing wordes, like vnto the deceitful, which (as ſaith Eſay) vſe to deride with theſe words: Manda remāda. &c.

By meanes whereof (alaſſe for ſorrowe) it came to paſſe, that whiles good hope of ſubduing our ennemies gratiouſly ſmiled vppon vs, we were conſtrained (penurie preuailing againſt vs) to take truce to our ſhame, the hinderance of our expedition, and no ſmal reioyſing of our euil willers: and ſo we returned into Flaunders all voide of mony, oppreſſed with infinite debts, neither had we in our treaſuries wherewith to diſcharge our neceſsities, nor yet to pay our ſoldiours wages: in ſo much, that we were compelled to enter into the deuouring gulfe of vſurie, and to ſuſtaine on our ſhoulders great burdens of debts, heape vppon heape. This being done, our faithfull frends, companions in warres, and partakers of our tribulations came vnto vs, with whome we conſulted diligently by what meanes wee might beſt deliuer our ſelues from this dangerous ſtorme of euill fortune. They all agreed, affirming certainely, that the protracting of our warres, and cauſe of our manifolde neceſsity happened vnto vs through the fault and negligence (or rather the malice) of the ſayd Archb. (vpon whoſe diſcretion the diſpoſition of the whole kingdome ſeemed to depend) and other officers whom we had adioyned in counſail with him touching the affaires of our kingdome: vehemently ſwearing and murmuring amongſt themſelues (for that we had left ſo long vncorrected the inſolencie of the byſhops and other officers) that if remedy in theſe caſes were not had with ſpede: they wold withdrawe themſelues from our allegeance, and the couenaunt which they had ſworne vnto: to the vtter ſubuerſion of our kingdome, our perpetuall ignominie, and the euerlaſting ſhame of our Engliſh nation (which God our moſt mercifull father forbid, ſhoulde come to paſſe in our daies, in whom is fixed immoueably the anchor of our hope.) Whereuppon entending the due correction of our officers, we remoued from offices (as ſemed good to our wiſdome) diuers perſons, whom we ſuſpected in cauſes euidēt of euil adminiſtration of iuſtice, of ſubuerſion, and oppreſsiō of our ſubiects, of corruption, of bribes, and other hainous offences. Others alſo of inferiour degree offending in the premiſſes, we cauſed to be deteined in ſafe cuſtody, leaſt by their liberty, iuſtice might be troden vnder foote, and the inquiſition of the trueth concerning the premiſſes not to come to light. Foraſmuche therefore as the knowledge of the trueth in theſe caſes might of none more certainly be knowen, then from the ſecrete breſt of our ſayd Archbiſhop, for that nothing pertaining to our information ought to lie hid from him, vnto whome of ſo long a time had bene committed the adminiſtration of our whole common weale, and ſumme of our buſineſſe: Wee ſent vnto him our faithfull ſubiect Nicholas de Cantilupe with ſpecial commandement from vs (all delayes ſet a part) that he ſhould forthwith make his perſonall appearance before vs at our City of London. But he (as one alwaies timerous as wel in proſperity as in aduerſity, and fearing where no feare was) vntruely alleageth that ſome of our aſsiſtents had threatned hym, and laid wait for his life, if at any time he departed frō the Church of Cant. which (God wee take to witneſſe and a pure conſcience) wee neuer meant nor any of our aſsiſtents.

Archbiſh. of Cant falſe to the king.

Euil officers diſplaced by the kyng.

Wee ſuppoſe he touched thereby our Couſin, although to all other atwell of the cleargy as comminalty through his malicious miſdemeanors he was become odious.

Archbiſh. of Cant. odious to all the clergie.

Wherefore,

Wherfore, intending the ſafegarde of our ſubiectſ by letters or otherwiſe called before vs, we appoynted our truſtie and welbeloued Raffe Stafforde our Harbynger, to offer vnto hym ſafeconducte: and moreouer to preſent vnto him our letters patentes vnder our ſeale, willing and commanding him therby againe perſonally to come before vs, that we might be enformed what of ſo long a time hee had done touching the affaires of the kyngdome. Wherunto, contemning our commanndement & gentle requeſt, he anſwereth, that neither he wold in perſon appeare, neither yet in any matter conferre wyth vs, except it were in a full Parliament which for diuers reaſonable cauſes, coulde not then be called. Thus may you ſee this archb. (whom our royal benignity had amplified wyth large honours, admitted into all familiarity, receiued into the bonde of vnanimitie and frendſhip, vpon whome as on a father our whole hope did conſiſt: who, ſo long as wee accompliſhed his will in all things, pretended towardes vs a face of counterfet loue cloaked wyth diſſembling beneuolence, euen as though he had bene a louing father) howe cruelly againſt reaſon he hath now forſaken vs, requiting benefits with ingratitude, oppreſsing his benefactour wyth the arrogancie of feare: and finally (according to the vulgare prouerbe) rewarded vs as a horſe in a ſatchell, a Snake in a mannes boſome, and fire cheriſhed next the ſkinne, rewardeth their receiuers. When we were firſt exalted vnto the throne of our kingdome, deſcended vnto vs by right of inheritaunce (Gods diuine prouidence ſo working) we thought and alwayes thinke it a deteſtable thyng to abuſe ſo high authoritie, but rather deſire to gouerne wyth clemencie, lenitie, and moderation of iuſtice, that peace of all men deſired might firmely take place.

The Archb. of Cant. denyeth to come to the kyng.

The Archb. charged with diſſembling & ingratitude.

Neuertheleſſe, our ſayde Archbyſhop hath gone about to defame our innocencie, and the fidelitie and diligence our faithfull counſailers proſecutours of true iuſtice: openly declaring in hys letters patent, and publiſhing abroade in diuers places, that hee was oppreſſed by the kings power contrary to iuſtice, the Clergy and comminaltie confounded, and the church ouercharged wyth diuers grieuous taxes & exactions. He ſubtilly vſurped the name of a good paſtour, when in deede he was nothing leſſe, but rather (as it ſhould ſeeme by his owne cōfeſsion, and the common opinion had of him) a very hireling. He cloked his craftie ſubtilneſſe with the zeale of defending the Churche, although he hymſelfe in very deede was the onely cauſe, by his euill counſaile and craftie deuiſes, of the tribulations of the ſame. Hee alſo fained that not long agoe, certaine wrytings were brought vnto him to be ſealed, containing in effect the defence and excuſation of all ſuch in generall that were violaters of the liberties of the Churche: hoping thereby to defame the opinion had of vs and our faythfull counſailours, to ſtirre vp ſedition amongſt the people, and finally to withdrawe from vs the hearts of our nobilitie. Hee gaue commaundement by hys letters, that theſe things ſhoulde be proclaimed in all places of great reſorte by diuers ſpeciall articles contrary to his former order in his prouinciall Councel. Wherefore, reſpecting the integritie of our fame, entending to preuent the malice of the ſayde Archbiſhoppe, and alſo to decline from vs the ſnares prepared for vs and ours: wee haue thought good at thys preſent (ouer & beſides thoſe which before are reherſed) amongſt ſo many which wee omitte, to declare vnto you ſome of hys peruerſe and wicked actes. When in our minoritie wee were conſtituted ouer our dominions, hee cauſed vs through hys vnaduiſed counſaile and raſh perſwaſion (therby to winne exceſsiue fauour) to geue away ſo many waſtfull giftes, and ſo many vnlawfull alienations that nowe by meanes thereof our treaſury is cleane conſumed, the reuenewes of our Exchequer without all order diminiſhed, and he corrupted with bribes innumerable. Oftentimes alſo without cauſe why, when neither neceſsitie nor vtilitie ſo required, onely through his perſwaſion wee forgaue diuers men great ſummes of money due vnto vs, yea and the rents and reuenewes which ought to haue bene conſerued for our neceſsitie and profite we applied to the vſe of his frendes largely beſtowing vppon ſuch as euill deſerued it. Moreouer (accepting aſwell perſones as money) contrary to our minde, and hys othe of fidelitie made vnto vs: he admitted vnto publique offices throughout our dominions, perſones vnworthy, neglecting thoſe that had well deſerued. Many other things he raſhly tooke in hand, to the detrimēt of our ſtate, the hurt of our dignitie royall, and no ſmal dammage of our ſubiectes, by abuſing his authoritie & office committed vnto him. But if he perſiſt in his proude obſtinacie and ſtout rebellion, wee ſhall heereafter in conuenieht time and place, cauſe it to be more openly knowen: willing and commaunding you to publiſh and cauſe to be publiſhed, all and ſingular the premiſſes openly and diſtinctly in places where you ſhall thinke it expedient, and to ſet foorth (as ſhal ſeeme beſt to your godly wiſedomes) our good entent for the ſuppreſsing of incommodities, and furthering of the commodities of our ſubiectes, that we may worthely commende your circumſpect care herein.

The Archb. defamer of the kyng.

The Archb. abuſeth his office.

Teſte meipſo apud Weſtm. 10. die Februa. Anno regni noſtri Angliæ. 15. Regni verò Franciæ ſecundo.

By theſe foreſayde obiections & accuſations of the king premiſed, and layd againſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: what is to be thought of the doinges of the ſayd Archbiſhop, I leaue it to thy iudgement gentle reader (as I ſayd before) to be coniected: For ſo much as our hiſtories ſomewhat bearing with the ſayd Archbiſhop, ſeeme either to be vncertayne of the truth of the matter, or els couertly to diſſemble ſome part of that they knew. And eſpecially of Polidor Virgil. I meruaile, who hauing ſo good occaſion to touch the matter, doth ſo ſleightly paſſe it ouer without any word of mention. In whiche matter if probable coniecture (beſide hiſtory) might here be heard, it is not vnlike but that ſome olde practiſe of prelates hath herein bene put in vre, through ſome crafty conſpiracy betweene the Pope and the Archbiſhop. And the rather to be gathered, for that as the pope was enemy vnto the king in this his chalenge to the crowne of Fraunce: So the Archbiſhop againſt his Prince (as for the moſt part alwayes they haue bene) was a frend, as no man neede to doubt therof, vnto the Pope: which thing alſo more probable may be ſuppoſed, becauſe of the comming downe of the ij. Cardinals the ſame time, from the pope to the king of England, about the matter of farther truce: wherof (Chriſt willing) more hereafter ſhall follow. Albeit, the Archbiſhop (this yet notwithſtanding) ſubtely and featly excuſeth himſelfe to the king of the foreſayd obiections, and cunningly handleth the matter in wordes by his letter directed to the king, as followeth.

The letter of the Archbiſhop to the kyng.

REdoubted Syr, may it pleaſe your maieſtie to vnderſtand: that the moſt chiefeſt and ſpeciall thing that keepeth kings and Princes in the fauoure of God, and beſt preſerueth them in theyr eſtate, is ſage, wiſe, and deliberate counſaile. And therefore ſayeth the wiſe man, concerning counſell in this wiſe: Good men haue thereby their ſafetie. And it is wrytten in the booke of kinges, howe Salomon which was the wiſeſt Prince that euer was, tooke vnto him the moſt auncient and ſage men of his Realme to be his counſailours: By whoſe aduiſement and diſcretion, hee alwayes kept the lande of Iſraell in quiet and in peace, and beſides that had all other kinges and princes that bordered vppon him at his will and commaundement. After whoſe death raigned Roboham hys ſonne, who neglecting the good cōuſel of his father, and good aduiſe of his ſage & diſcrete counſailours: harkened to ſuch counſel as lighter and younger men perſwaded him vnto, that ſought rather howe to pleaſe and flatter him, then the quiet ſtate of hys Realme: whereby he loſt all the whole lande of Iſrael, the xx. part only excepted. In like maner haue many kings of Iſrael and other kingdomes beſide, by raſh and euill counſell come to great ruine and miſchiefe. And Sir (sauing your princely patience) you may call to remembraunce your owne time: for by the wicked and ſiniſter counſell to our late ſoueraigne Lorde your father geuen (whome God forgeue) which he tooke and folowed: both againſt the lawe of his lande, and graund Charter of the peeres and other his people of the lande: ſome he put to ſhamefull death, from other ſome he tooke their goods, and ſuch as fled, he put vnto their raunſome, and what ennemies he purchaſed thereby, your grace well vnderſtandeth. And after this Sir, you knowe (euen in your owne time) howe by following and beleuing ouer light counſel: you your ſelfe loſt the hartes of many of your ſubiectes, from the which God deliuer you, if it be his will. And after that time againe vntill nowe, by the good aduiſement of your Prelates, Peeres, and ſage counſailours of your land, your graces buſineſſe and affaires haue bene ſo demained and ordered: that you haue had the hearts againe of all your ſubiectes, as well ſpirituall as temporall, as muche or rather more, then any of your graces predeceſſours, kings of England haue had. So that, by meanes of the ſayde good counſell, the good will and aide of your people, and ſpecial grace of God; you haue had the victorie of all your ennemies, as well in Scotlande as in Fraunce, and all other places beſides: That vnto this day (Gods name bee bleſſed therefore) your grace hath bene eſtemed as one of the moſt nobleſt Princes in all Chriſtendome. And nowe your grace (by the euill and peruerſe counſaile of ſome ſuche wythin the Realme, whiche are not ſo wiſe as they might be, and ſuch alſo as conſider and reſpect rather their owne priuate commoditie, then your graces honour and ſafetie of your Realme) beginneth to apprehende diuers Clerkes, Pieres, and other people of the land, and to directe proceſſe againſt them, not beſeeming: but contrary to the Lawe of the land, which to keepe and maintaine you are bounde by the othe you tooke at your coronation: and contrary to the graunde charter, whereof all the realme are witneſſes, & all the prelates of the ſame: and cōtrary to the ſentence confirmed by the Bul of our holy father the pope, which we haue to ſhew. All which things, as they are to the great pearill and daunger of your ſoule: ſo are they alſo to the vtter debaſing of your regall ſtate and honour. And Sir, although ſuch as be your graces gouernours and counſailers (beyng a ſallynge aboue their agree) doe geue your grace to vnderſtande that their enterpriſes and yours doe pleaſe and content your ſubiectes and commons: yet your grace ſhall knowe for certaine, and prooue it your owne ſelfe to be farre otherwiſe, then that they beare you in hand. And that vnleſſe God do remedy the ſame if you proſecute your purpoſe begon in this order: you will leeſe the hearts of all your ſubiects, as alſo your good and rightfull enterpriſe, and ſhal ſee ſuch diſcord about the ſame: that you ſhall not be able to performe that you haue begon, but rather enforce your ennemies to ſeeke your deſtruction, to looſe your noble and renowmed fame, and in the ende your kingdom it ſelfe, which God forbid. Wherefore soueraigne Lorde and King, I beſeeche you: that for the ſafegard of your honour and Realme, and enterpriſe begon, that you will take vnto you the moſt diſcrete and wiſeſt men, wythin your Realme, and woorke by their aduiſe and counſell, as before thys time you haue bene accuſtomed: without the aide and counſell of whome you can neither maintaine your enterpriſe, nor gouerne your realme. And for that, ſome ſuch as are about your grace falſly deuiſe againſt vs, treaſon and ſuch like troubles (and therefore are of vs excommunicate, and as perſons excommunicate doe ſo eſteme of them) as your ſpirituall paſtour, we alſo deſire you ſo to eſteeme and thinke of them, which alſo, make like report of other that haue bene with your grace beyonde the ſeas, that they haue naughtely & falſely ſerued you, wherby you haue loſt the towne of Tourney, & much honor els, which you might haue wonne & gotten there. May it pleaſe your grace to call before you, the Prelates and Pieres of your Realme in ſome conuenient place, where wee and other moe, may ſafely come and reſorte, and there alſo to make ſearch and enquirie, in whoſe hands after the beginning of your warres, the money and what thing els ſo euer, which was graunted vnto you in aide of the ſame your warres, vntill thys preſent day, doeth remaine and is not laide out againe, as alſo by whoſe default you were ſo enforced to leaue the ſayde ſiege of Tourney: and thoſe which ſhalbe founde in any poynt faultie and guiltie therin againſt you as a good Iuſticer, your grace wil cauſe to be puniſhed according to the lawe: and in ſo much as appertaineth vnto vs therein, we aske iudgement of our Peeres (the ſtate alwayes of holy Church, of vs, & of our order reſerued inuiolate) according as we haue wrytten vnto you heerein. And for Gods ſake Syr, beleeue not either of vs or any other your true ſubiectes els, more then that you ſhall vnderſtand the veritie of: for if men ſhould be puniſhed without making anſwere to that, which is obiected againſt them, there ſhould be then no difference in iudgement betwixt the good doer and the bad.

Excommunication in his owne priuate cauſe abuſed.

And Syr, may it pleaſe you well to conſider, of the great enterpriſe you haue in hande, the great good will which you haue neede of for this cauſe, and of your great ennemies the Scots, and the great ieoperdie of your realme beſides. For, if your Prelates, your nobles, & al the wiſemen of your realme, were of one minde and will (without any diſcorde or diuiſion amongſt them) to diſpoſe and ſet in order thoſe things, which are needeful in ſo great affaires and buſineſſe: they ſhoulde haue all inough to beate their heads about, for the maintenance of your great enterpriſe begon, the honour of you, and ſauegarde of your Realme. And Syr, may it pleaſe your grace, not to be diſpleaſed that ſo rudely and groſely we declare vnto you the veritie: for why, the great loue & affection which we beare vnto you, & alwayes haue done the ſame: the preſeruation of your honour and ſauegard of your realme, as alſo for that we are (although vnworthy) the primat of the whole realme of England: which thing appertaining vnto vs by our office, & being your ſpirituall father, doth incite vs the rather both to ſay and cōmaund that, which may turne to the benefite of your ſoule, and profite of your realme and kingly eſtate. Thus the holy ſpirite ſaue you both body and ſoule, and giue your grace both to heare and beleeue good counſaile, and further giue you victorie ouer all your enemies. Written at Cant. the 1. day of Ianuary. By your graces chaplen the Archbiſhop of the ſame.

And thus ſtode the caſe betweene the king & the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, who comming thus (as is ſaid) in ſecret wiſe into Englande, from the ſiege of Tourney, hys army in the meane while, by ſhips was conueyed to little Britaine. Of whome a great number, through vnſeaſonable and inconuenient meats and drinks, was there conſumed. To whom alſo no leſſe danger happened by the ſeas comming out of Britain into England, by tempeſt, thunder and lightening ſtirred vp, as is thought by the Necromancers of the French king.

The returne of the kings army from Tourney

Anno. 1341.

Truce taken for three yeares betweene K. Edward and the French king.

About whych ſeaſon, approchyng to the yeare of oure Lorde 1341. were ſent from the Pope two other Cardinals to entreat wyth Kyng Edwarde for thre yeres truce to be concluded more wyth the Frenche Kyng, beſide the former truce taken before for one yere, and all by the popes meanes. For heere is to be vnderſtanded, that as it was not for the Popes purpoſe to haue the Kyng of England to raigne ouer ſo many cōtreis, ſo his priuy ſupportation lacked not by all meanes poſſible, both by Archbyſhops & Cardinals, and alſo by the Emperor to maintain the ſtate of the French king, and to ſtabliſh him in his poſſeſſion. Ex Tho. Walſing. ex chron. Albanenſ.

In the ſaid hiſtories where theſe things be mentioned it is alſo noted, that the ſame yeare ſuch plentye there was here in the realme of victuals, that a quarter of wheat was ſolde for ij.s. a fat oxe for a noble, and as ſome ſay a ſheepe for iiij.d. And thus farre endureth the hyſtorie of Ranulphus Ceſtrenſis called Polychronicon.

Anno. 1342.

The next yere following, which was 1342. Ludouicus Bauarus the Emperor, who before had ſhewed great curteſie to king Edward as in his firſt viage ouer, in ſo much that he made him his Vicar or Vicegerent general, and offered hym alſo aide againſt the French king: Now (eyther turned by inconſtancie, or ſeduced by the pope) wryteth to him contrary letters, wherein hee reuoketh agayne the Vicegerentſhip graunted to hym, and ſeeketh all meanes in the fauour of the French king, againſt king Edwarde: as by his letters heere vnder written may better appeare.

The letter of the Emperour vnto the King of England.

LVdouicus by the grace of God Emperor of the Romaines alwaies Auguſtus, &c. To Edward king of England his beloued brother, greeting and vnfained loue. Although great and vrgent buſines of our owne do oppreſſe vs, & about the ſame our waighty affaires are daily incombred, yet with the diſcord & variaunce betwene your kingly dignity and the renowmed Phillip the king of Fraunce our coſine, for your ſake wee are not a little troubled. And the rather the great charges which may heereafter growe both to you and to your kingdome, thereby conſidered bothe of men and money vnleſſe the ſame be taken vp: doth more earneſtly prouoke vs to geue our ſelfe to the carefull ſtudie of your affaires. Wherefore wee geue you to vnderſtande that the foreſayde Philip (at our requeſt) hath geuen vnto vs by his letters, authoritie and power to intreat and conclude a peace betwene you, touching the variance begon: which peace (al the ſtate diligently cōſidered both of your ſelfe, your kingdome and ſubiects) wee take and beleeue to be right expedient for you: moouing therewithall your charity, and earneſtly deſiring you that to this alſo you will geue your conſent: wherby we may bring you both to concord and vnitie, and eſtabliſh betweene you a firme peace to endure, whereunto with willing minde we would apply our ſelfe and beſtow our painfull labour in proſecuting of the ſame. And heerein if you will condeſcend and agree vnto our counſaile, as we truſt you wil. It may pleaſe you by your letters to geue vnto vs the like autoritie as is aboue ſayd, to entreat peace or ordering of a truce for one yeare or two at leaſt to continue. Neither let it moue you that betwene vs and the ſayde Phillip of Fraunce a truce is taken. For ſeeing that you without our conſent tooke truce with hym: wee by the aduice of our Princes which know the bonds, dedes, and couenants betwixt vs, who alſo thought no leſſe but that ſauing your honour we might do the ſame, haue alſo made a league with the ſaid Phillip king of Fraunce, and for certaine cauſes doe reuoke and call backe the Liefetenantſhip which we aſsigned vnto you by our letters: Neuertheleſſe geuing you for a certaine to vnderſtande, that in our ſaide treaties and peace concluded, wee haue ſo brotherly conſidered you, that if you wil agree & condeſcend vnto our counſel: your cauſe (by our meane and help) ſhalbe brought to good paſſe and effect. About which things farther to conferre with your brotherhode herein, we haue ſent a deuout & religious man Eliarhardus, reader and brother of the Heremites of S. Auguſtine, and Chaplaine of our Courte: whome about the premiſſes we deſire with ſpeedy expedition to be ſent to vs again. Dated at Franckforde the 14 day of Iune in the 24. yeare of oure raigne, and 14. of our Empire.

The anſwere of the King of England, to the Emperour.

TO the high and mighty Prince Lorde Ludouicke, by the grace of God Emperor of the Romanes, alwaies Auguſtus, Edward by the ſame grace king of Fraunce, and England, and Lord of Ireland: ſalutation and proſperous ſucceſſe.

We haue reuerently receiued your highnes letters, amongſt other thinges containing, that the noble Phillip de Valois (to the intent a peace and concorde betweene vs and him might be concluded) hath geuen vnto you by his letters ful power and authoritie thereunto at your highneſſe requeſt: And that if the ſame might content vs to doe in like ſort, your highneſſe woulde trauaile to bring the concorde to paſſe: And that it would not moue vs any whit at all, that your highneſſe and the ſayde Phillip are in league together: For in ſo much as wee without your aſſent and conſent (you ſay) tooke truce with the ſayd Phillip, you haue alſo done the like with him (which thing you might well do ſauing your honoure, by the counſaile of all your Nobles and Princes) and for certaine cauſes reuoke againe the Lieftenauntſhip which you committed vnto vs. Doubtleſſe, the zeale and good will you haue to make this concorde and agreement, we much commend: letting you to vnderſtand, that we alwayes haue bene deſirous & ſtill are, to haue a reaſonable peace with the ſayde Phillip: which peace, as much as to vs (our honour ſaued) appertained, we haue in iuſtice and by law proſecuted: and in very deede, it ſhould be to vs acceptable, and as wee woulde wiſh, if by ſuch a Mediatour as your Celſitude is, it might be brought to paſſe. But foraſmuch as we: vnderſtande the ſame our right and title to the kingdome of France, to be manifeſt and cleare inough: we purpoſe not to commit the ſame by any of our letters to doutfull arbitrement. But while wee well conſider and reuolue with our ſelues, howe your highneſſe vpon circumſpect conſideration (manifeſtly beholding our iuſt and rightful doing, and the ſtraight dealing and obſtinate purpoſe and iniurie of the ſayd Philip) with vs and in our behalfe againſt the ſaid Philip, your graces highnes made a ſpecial league: adopting vs of your great and bountifull loue towardes our perſon, to be one of your ſonnes: Wherefore thus againe to alter and breake the ſame, wee cannot ſufficiently maruell. Seeing your inuincible highnes being inſtituted of God to the laude and commendation of good men, and reuenge of euill and wicked doers, hath made a league againſt vs with the ſaide Philip de Valoys our notorious and iniurious enemy. And as touching that which you ſay, without your aſsignement and conſent wee tooke a truce or dayes of reſpite with the ſaid Phillip which we ought not to haue done: If your grace well conſider the circumſtance of the matter, we haue done but as we might therein. For when we laide oure ſiege to Tourney, it was requiſite we followed their aduiſe whoſe aide and ſocietie therein we had. Beſides, the ſoden and imminent neceſsity which we there ſtood in, & the diſtance of the place betwixt your highneſſe and vs furthermore was ſuche, as by that no meanes wee might attaine the ſame, nor vſe your aſſent therein. Yea & further, if your grace wel remember your ſelf, your graunt vnto vs was ſuch: that whenſoeuer oportunitie thereunto ſhould ſerue, we might entreate of any peace, and graunt what time wee thought mete thereunto, without your conſent therin: So that to conclude any finall peace with the ſaide Philip de Valois, without either your conſent or otherwiſe making your highneſſe priuie thereunto, it might not be lawfull for vs: Which thing wythout your ſaid counſaile, conſent and aduiſe, we neuer minded or purpoſed to do. But haue in all our doings done that which vs beſeemed, ſo farre as by any meanes our power would ſtretch: hoping likewiſe, that your brotherly beneuolence for a time would haue more louingly ſupported vs. It is thought alſo by ſome, that the reuoking backe againe, or reſtraint of your foreſayd Lieſetenantſhip, was prematurate or done all out of time: when as according to your promiſe made to vs herein by your letters imperiall, you ought not ſo to haue done before the Realme and kingdome of Fraunce (or at the leaſt the greateſt part thereof) were of vs obtained and quietly in peaceable wiſe enioyed. Theſe premiſed therefore we deſire you, according to our nobilitie duely to conſider, and heereafter to doe that which ſhall be thought both meete and conuenient: becauſe that (God willing) we meane to recõpence and gratifie both you & yours, according to the meaſure of your beneuolence beſtowed vpon vs. The almighty graunt vnto your Celſitude ſo much felicitie as your hart deſireth. Dated at London the 18. day of Iuly in the 2. yeare of the raign of our kingdom of Fraunce, and of England. 15.

Pope Clement. 6.

In this meane time died Pope Benedict the 12. mentioned a little before: after whome ſucceeded in that roume Pope Clement the 6. Of whome it is reported in ſtoryes, that he was very liberall and bountiful to hys Cardinals of Rome, in riching and heaping them with goods & poſſeſſions, not of his owne, but with the Eccleſiaſticall dignities and preferments of the Churches of England. For ſo recordeth the author, that he beſtowed vpon his Cardinals the liuyngs and promotions, ſuche as were or ſhould be vacant in churches of England, and were about to ſet vp new titles for his Cardinals, here within this realm. But the kyng beyng offẽded therwith made voyd and fruſtrate all thoſe foreſayd prouiſions of the pope, chargyng moreouer and commaundyng no perſon whatſoeuer, to buſy him ſelf with any ſuch prouiſions, vnder paine of priſonment & loſyng his lyfe. Which law was made the next yere followyng which was an. 1344.

Ex Chron. Albanenſ.

The kyng diſanulleth the Popes prouiſion.

It followed then, that the ſaid Pope Clement, agayne began to make new prouiſiõs for two of his Cardinals of benefices and Churches that ſhould be next vacant, beſide Biſhopricks and Abbotſhyps, to the extent of two thouſand Markes. Whereupon, the procurators of the ſayd Cardinals were ſent down for the ſame. But the kyng and nobility of the realme not ſuffering that, vnder paine of impriſonment cauſed the ſayd procurators forthwith to depart the realm: whereupon, the nobles and commons ſhortly after, writeth a fruitfull Epiſtle to the Pope, for the liberties and the maintenance of ẏ Engliſh church: whereunto, as ſaith the author, the pope and the Cardinals were not able to anſwer. The argument and tenor of which letter out of French, wee haue cauſed to be tranſlated into Engliſhe, as enſueth.

The Poges procurators driuen out of England.

The letter of the king of England and nobles of the ſame, to the Pope, againſt the reſeruations and prouiſions which he had in England.

A letter of the Nobles & commons of England to the pope

TO the moſt holy father in God, Lord Clement by the grace of God of the holy church of Rome, and of the vniuerſal church, chiefe and high Biſhop: His humble & deuout children, the Princes, Dukes, Earles, Barons, Knights, Citizens, Burgeſes, and al the comminaltie of the Realme of Englande, aſſembled at the Parliament holden at Weſtminſter the 15. day of May laſt paſt: Deuoute kiſsings of his holy feete, with all humble reuerence and humilitie. Moſt holy father, the holy diſcretion, gouernment & equitie which appeareth to be in you and ought of duety ſo to be (beyng ſo high and holy a prelate, and head of the holy church) by whom the holy vniuerſall churche and people of God ought to be, as by the ſunne beames inlightened: Geueth vs good hope and likelyhode, that the iuſt petitions (to the honour of Ieſus Chriſt & holy Church, and your holineſſe alſo) by vs declared, ſhalbe of you graciouſly heard and conſidered. And that all errours and other iniquities quite taken away and remooued: in ſtede thereof, fruitfull exployts and neceſſary remedies (by the grace of the holy ſpirite; which you in ſo high an eſtate haue receiued) may be by you likewiſe graciouſly ordained and diſpoſed. Wherfore moſt holy father all we (vpon great deliberation and common aſſent) come vnto your holines: ſhewing and declaring that the noble kings of England our progenitours, our auncitours, and we (according to the grace of the holy ſpirite to them and vs geuen, euery one according to his deuotion) haue eſtabliſhed, fouded, and endowed within the realme of Englande: Churches, Cathedrals, Colleges, Abbeis, Priories, and other diuers houſes of religion in the ſame ordained: and to the Prelates and gouernours of the ſame places, haue geuen landes, poſſeſsions, patrimonies, franchiſes, aduowſons, and patronages of dignities, reuenues, offices, churches, with many and diuers other benefices vnto them geuen: whereby the ſeruice of God and faith of Chriſt might haue bene honoured and had in reuerẽce: that the hoſpitals & almes houſes that are made, with all the churches & edifices, might be honeſtly kept & maintained: and that deuout praiers might in thoſe places be made for the founders, & the poore pariſhioners aided and comforted. And ſuch only ought to haue the cure therof, as are able to heare confeſsions, and in their owne naturall toung otherwiſe meete to informe & teach their pariſhioners. And for ſo muche as (moſt holy father) that you cãnot well come to the notice of diuers ſuch errours & defaults, neither yet vnderſtand the condition of the places being ſo far of, vnles your holines be enformed & aduertiſed. We hauing the perfect intelligence and vnderſtanding of the ſayd errours and defaultes, of the places aboueſayd, within the ſayd Realme, haue thought meete to ſignifie the ſame vnto your holines. That diuers reſeruations, prouiſions and collations by your predeceſſours Apoſtolicke of Rome, and by you moſt holy father in your time haue bene graunted (and that more largely then they haue bene accuſtomed to be) vnto diuers perſons, as well ſtraungers and of ſundry nations, as vnto ſome ſuch as are our enemies, hauing no vnderſtanding at all of the tongue and conditions of them, of whom they haue the gouernment & cure. Whereby, a great number of ſoules are in perill, a great many of their pariſhners in daunger, the ſeruice of GOD deſtroyed, the almes and deuotion of all men diminiſhed, the hoſpitals periſhed, the churches with their appurtenaunces decayed, charitie withdrawne, the good and honeſt perſons of our realme vnaduaunced, the charge and gouernement of ſoules not regarded, the deuotion of the people reſtrayned, many poore ſchollers vnpreferred and the treaſure of the realme caryed out againſt the myndes and intentes of the founders. All which errours, defaultes, and ſlaunders moſt holy father we neyther can nor ought to ſuffer nor indure. We therefore moſt humbly require your holines, that the ſlaunders, errors and defaultes, which we haue declared vnto you, may be through your great diſcretion conſidered: and that it may pleaſe you that ſuch reſeruations, prouiſions, and collations may be vtterly repelled, that from henceforth the ſame be no more amongſt vs vſed. But to take ſuch order and remedy therein, that the ſaid benefices, edifices, rightes, with their apertinentes, may be to the honour of God by our owne countrymen cured, defended and gouerned. And that it may further pleaſe your holines, by your letters to ſignifie vnto vs without delay and other detract of tyme, what your pleſure is touching this our lawful requeſt & demaund, and that we may doe our indeuour with dilligence herein for the remedy, correction, and amendment of thoſe enormities aboue ſpecified. In witnes wherof, vnto theſe letters patentes we haue ſet our ſeales. Geuen in the full Parliament at Weſtminſter the 18. day of May, an 1343.

Decay of the Church of England by the Pope.

After theſe thinges thus paſſed ouer, the King ſhortly after ſent ouer his Procuratours, Earle of Lancaſter and Darby, Hugh Spencer, L. Rafe Stafforde, wyth the Byſhop ot Exetor and diuers other, to the popes court to diſcuſſe and plead about the right of his title, before the pope.

The Popes meſſage to the king.

Unto whom the ſaid Pope Clement the 6. not long after, ſent down thys meſſage: how that Ludouike duke of Bauarie, the Emperour whom the pope had before depoſed, had ſubmitted himſelfe to hym in all things, and therefore deſerued at his hands the benefite of abſolution: And how the pope therfore had cōferred and reſtored vnto him iuſtly and graciouſly the Empire, which he before vniuſtly did holde. &c.

The kings aunſwere to the Popes meſſage.

Which meſſage when the King did heare, beyng therwith moued to anger, anſwered againe, ſaying: That if he did agree and compound alſo with the Frenche king, he was ready to fight with them both. &c. Ex chro. Albanen.

{ Anno. 1344. }

The Caſtle in Windſore enlarged.

The rounde table builded in Windſore.

Within the time of this yere, pence, halfepence, and farthings began to be coyned in the tower. And the next yere folowing, which was an. 1344. the caſtle of Windſor (where the king was borne) began to be repared: and in the ſame, the houſe called the rounde table was ſituate, the diameter wherof from the one ſide to the other, contained 200. feete, to the expēces of which houſe weekly was allowed an C. li. for the mainteining of the kings chiualrie: till at length by the occaſion of the French warres, it came downe to ix. li. a weeke. By the example whereof, the Frenche king being prouoked, began alſo the like round table in Fraunce, for the maintaining of the knighthoode. At which time the ſayd French king moreouer gaue free libertie through his realme to fel downe trees for making of ſhips & maintayning of his nauie, whereby the Realme of Englande was not a litle dammified.

Tenthes graunted to the king by the clergy for 3. yeares.

Priuileges graunted by the king to the clergie.

During the ſame yere, the Clergie of England graunted to the king tenthes for 3. yeres: for the which the king in recompence againe graunted to them his Charter containing theſe priuiledges: that no Archbiſhop nor Biſhop ſhould be arreigned before his Iuſtices, ſiue ad ſectam ſuam, ſiue partis, if the ſayd clarke do ſubmit & claime his cleargy, profeſſing himſelfe to be a member of holy Church, who ſo doing ſhall not be bound to come to his anſwer before the Iuſtices. And if it ſhall be layd vnto them to haue maryed two wiues, or to haue maried a widow: the Iuſtices ſhall haue no power to procede againſt them, to inquire for the matter: So that the cauſe ſhall be reſerued to the ſpirituall court. &c.

By this it is lyke that prieſtes had wiues.

Prince Edward firſt prince of Wales.

About this preſent time at the ſetting vp of the rounde table, the king made Prince Edwarde his eldeſt ſonne the firſt prince of Wales. Al this while yet continued the truce betweene the 2. kings. Albeit it is likely to be thought that ẏ French king gaue many attempts to infringe the ſame.

{ Anno. 1345. }

Henry Erle, after made duke of Lancaſter ſent ouer to Gaſconie.

Wherupon Henry earl of Lancaſter wͭ 600. men at armes, and as many archers as were ſent ouer to Gaſcoin, ẏ yere after, an. 1345. who there ſo valiantly is ſaid to behaue himſelfe, that he ſubdued 55. towneſhips vnto the king, 23. noble men, he toke priſoners, encountring wͭ the French men at Allebroke. So curteouſly and liberally he dealt with his ſouldiors, ẏ it was a ioy to them and a preferment to fight vnderneath him. His maner was in winning any towne, litle or nothing to reſerue to himſelf, but to ſparſe ẏ whole ſpoile to his ſouldiors.

A rare example of a liberal captaine to his ſouldiours.

One example in the author (whom I follow) is touched: howe the foreſaide Earle at the winning of the towne of Bryers, where he had graunted to euery ſoldior for hys bootie, the houſe wͭ all the implements therein, which he by victory ſhould obtaine: among other his ſoldiors to one named Reh, fell a certaine houſe wͭ the implements thereof, wherein was contained the mint and mony coyned for that country, to the valure of a great ſubſtance: which when the ſoldior had found, in breaking vp a houſe, where firſt the groſſe mettall was not yet perfectly wrought, he came to the Earle declaring to him the treaſure, to know what was his pleaſure therein. To whome the Earle anſwerd that the houſe was his, & whatſoeuer he found therein. Afterwarde the ſouldior finding a whole mint of pure ſiluer ready coyned, ſignified the ſame to the earle, for ſomuch as he thought ſuch treaſure to be to great for his portion, to whom the ſayd Earl againe anſwering, declared that hee had once geuen him the whole houſe, and that he had once geuen, he would not call backe againe as childrē vſe to play. And therfore bad hym enioy that which was grāted to him: And if the mony were thrice as much it ſhould be his owne: Ex chron. Albanenſ. Which ſtory whither it was true or otherwiſe in thoſe dayes, I haue not to affirm. But certes, if in theſe our couetous wretched daies nowe preſent, any author ſhould reporte the like acte to be practiſed, I would hardly beleeue it to be true.

The liberall heart and conſtant voyce of a worthy captain.

The Scots partly a meane of breaking truce.

As the erl of Lancaſter was thus occupied in Gaſcony the Scots were as buſy here in England, waſting & ſpoyling without mercy. Which were thought (& not vnlike) to be ſet on by ẏ French king. And therfore was iudged both by that, & by other diuers wayes to haue broken the couenants of truce betwene him and the king of England.

The 1. viage of K. Edw. into France.

Wherfore ẏ next yere inſuing. An. 1346. king Edward firſt ſending his letters to the court of Rome, & therin cōplaining to the pope of Philip de Valois, how he had trāſgreſſed, and brokē the truce betwene them made, which by euidēt probations he there made manifeſt: about the mōth of Iuly made hys voyage into Normandy in ſuche ſecrete wiſe, that no man wel knewe whether he intended.

The battell at Cardein,

Where firſt he entred the towne of Hogs, from thence proceeded vnto Cardone. Where, about the 27. of Iuly by the riuer of Cardone he had a ſtrong battel, wͭ the Normandes & other French men, which to ſtop hys paſſage, defended ẏ bridge. At the which battel were taken of the Lords of France, the erle of Ewe, the erle of Tankeruile. And of knights wyth other men of armes, to the number of an 100. of foote men 600. and the towne and ſuburbs beaten downe to the hard wals. And all that could be borne away tranſported to the ſhippes.

A little before mention was made how the French K. began firſt to infringe the truce taken, and howe the Earle of Lancaſter, vpō the ſame was ſent vnto Gaſcony. Now for the more euidence of the matter cōcerning the falling of the French king from the league, and other his wrongs & vntrue dealing: It ſhal better in the kings letter appeare, who hearing word ẏ the Lord Philip de Valois (contrary to the forme of truce taken at Vanes) had apprehēded certaine of his nobles of Englande, and had brought them to Paris to be impriſoned & put to death: beſide other ſlaughters and ſpoilings made in Britaine, Gaſcony, and other places moe. He therfore ſeing the truce to be broken of the French kings part, & being thereto of neceſſity compelled: In the yeare aboue prefixed, the 14. of the month of Iune, did publiſh and ſend abroad hys letter of defiance, containing thys effect.

The kings letters of defiance againſt the French king.

The kings letters of defiance againſt the French king.

TO all and ſingular, to whom theſe preſents ſhal come, publike greeting. We thinke it is not vnknowen vnto you all, that after the deceaſe of Charles late king of Fraunce of famous memorie, brother to our redoubted Lady mother Quene Iſabel, Quene of England. That the crowne of Fraunce, by iuſt inheritance hath fallen vnto vs, as to the next heire male now liuing after the ſayd king. Nowe Phillip de Valoys, being ſonne but only to the vncle of the foreſayde king Charles, and therefore by degree of conſanguinity being further of remoued from the ſame (we being in the time of our minoritie) hath violently by force and power cōtrary to God and iuſtice vſurped, occupied, and yet doth occupy the ſame, inuading further and ſpoyling our landes in the Dukedome of Aquitania, and ioyning himſelfe with our rebellious ennemies the Scots, ſeeking our ſubuerſion both by land and by ſea, to the vttermoſt of hys endeuour. And although wee to preuent the damages which might riſe by warre, haue offred to the ſayde Phillip diuers friendly waies of peace: to the entent we might better intend our purpoſed voyage againſt Chriſtes enemies the Turkes: Yet could nothing preuaile with him in obtaining any peaceable way of reformation, driuing vs of by crafty diſsimulatiō, through falſe pretenſed wordes, but perfourming nothing with heart and dede. Whereuppon, wee not neglecting the grace and the gyft of God, to defend the right of our inheritāce, and to repulſe the iniuries of our enemie, haue not refuſed by force of armes, cōming downe to Britanie to encounter with him in open fielde. And ſo wee being occupied in our warres, there repaired vnto vs the reuerend father biſhop of Preueſt, and of Tuſculane Cardinals, and Legates from Pope Clement 6. to entreate ſome reformation of peace betweene vs. At whoſe requeſt wee conſented, agreeing to ſuch formes and cōditions of peace as then were taken betwene vs, ſending moreouer our Embaſſadours to the court of Rome, ſpecially to intreat of the ſame matter. And thus while ſome hope of truce ſeemed betwene vs to appeare: Newes ſodenly came vnto vs, which not a little aſtonied our minde, of the death of certaine of our nobles and adherents, whom the ſayd Phillip vniuſtly, and cruelly at Paris commaunded to be executed. Beſide the waſting and ſpoyling our lands and ſubiects in Britany, Gaſcony and other places: with innumerable wrongs and iniuries deceitfully intended againſt vs both by ſea and land. By reaſon wherof, the truce on his part being notoriouſly broken, it is moſt manifeſt to haue bene lawfull for vs, forthwith to haue ſet vppon him with open warre. Yet notwythſtanding to auoid thoſe incommodities that come by warre, wee thought firſt to prooue, if by any gentle meanes ſome reformation might be had touching the premiſſes. And therfore ſondry times, haue ſent Embaſſadours to the Popes preſence for the Treatyſe of peace, and reformation to be had in thoſe aforeſaid exceſſes: requiring alſo for the tractation therof, certayne termes of times to be appoynted, alwayes, reſeruing to our ſelues notwithſtanding free liberty to reſume warre at our pleaſure, according as the doinges of the ſayd Philip ſhall conſtrayne vs therunto. And now foraſmuch as the foreſayd termes be already expired, and yet no reaſonable offer of peace appeareth, neither will the ſayd Philip come to any conformity, being required and moniſhed notwithſtanding by the Popes letters therunto, (as the Pope by his letters hath written vnto vs) but alwayes hath multiplied his conſpiracy and obligations vſing extremeties agaynſt vs, to omit here to ſpeak of the exceſsiue enormity of the Popes Legate, who being ſent by the Biſhop of Rome for the keeping of truce, and whoſe part had bene rather to haue quenched and ſtayd the diſcord: hath ſtirred vp our enemy more egerly agaynſt vs. In the which doing neither hath the Biſhop of Rome (ſauing his reuerēce) as yet prouided any remedy, albeit he hath bene diuers times required of vs ſo to do. Which things being ſo, we ought to be excuſed both before God and man, if for the defect of other remedy to be had, we ſhalbe conſtrayned our ſelues to finde remedy agaynſt ſuch wrongs and iniuries: the caſe of iuſtice and neceſsity conſtrayning vs to geue out theſe our letters of defiance, agaynſt the violator of the truce, & the vniuſt inuader of our kingdome. Proteſting that this we do, not vpon any diſpleaſure to the Biſhop of Rome, or to the Apoſtolicke ſea but onely for the moderation of equity, ſtanding vpon the defence of our owne right & lawfull inheritaunce, intēding alwayes rather to haue peace, if by any reaſonable way it might be had. And thus much for the ſtopping of ſlaunderous fame and the mouthes of backbiters, We thought good to ſignify firſt to the high Biſhop of Rome, & the foreſayd Cardinals: that by them as perſons indifferent, and mediators, the ſame may be inſinuated to the contrarye part, and alſo vnto your whole vniuerſity in general: recommending vnto you all the innocency of my cauſe and the community of iuſtice. Dated at Weſtminſter the 14. of Iune, the 19. yeare of our reigne in England, and of Fraunce the 6.

The Popes legate ſtirreth vp war.

Lyke legate lyke Pope.

And thus much for the kinges letter. Now let vs agayne returne to his paſſage, from whence a litle we haue degreſſed. Concerning the which paſſage of the king, with the order of his actes atchieued in the ſame, from the winning of Cadane or Cordoyne, vnto the towne of Puſiack, is ſufficiently deſcribed by one of the Kinges Chaplaynes and his confeſſour, who being a Dominick Fryer and accompanying the King through all his iourney, writeth thereof as followeth.

Benedicere debemus Deum Cœli. &c. Great cauſe we haue to prayſe and laud the God of heauen, and moſt worthely to cōfeſſe his holy name, who hath wrought ſo his mercy to vs. For after the conflict had at Cadame, in the which many were ſlayne, and the City taken and ſackt euen to the bare walles, the Citty of Baia immediately yelded it ſelfe of his owne accord, fearing leaſt theyr coūſelles had bene bewrayed. After this the Lord our king directed his progreſſe toward Roane Who being at the towne of Lexon, there came certayne Cardinals to him, greatly exhorting him to peace. Which Cardinals being curteouſly entertayned of the K. for the reuerence of the Popes ſea, it was thus anſwered to them agayne. That the king being much deſirous of peace, had aſſayd by all wayes and meanes reaſonable how to mayntayne the ſame. And therfore hath offered conditions and manifolde wayes of peace to be had to the no ſmall preiudice of his owne cauſe. And yet is ready to admit any reaſonable offer of peace, if by any meanes it may be ſought &c. With this anſwere the Cardinalles going to the french king the kinges aduerſary, to perſwade with him in like maner: returned to King Edward agayne, offering to hym in the French Kynges name the Dukedome of Aquitania, in as full aſſurance as his father before him euer had it, beſides further hope alſo of obteining more, if intreatye of peace might be obteined. But for ſo much, that cōtēted not enough the kings mind, neither did the Cardinals finde the frēch king ſo tractable and propenſe to the ſtudye of peace as they looked for, the Cardinals returned, leauing the matter as they founde it. And ſo the king ſpeeding forward, by the way as his iourney did lye, he ſubdued the country and the great townes without any reſiſtāce of the inhabitans, who did all flye and run away. Such feare God ſtroke into them, that it ſeemed they had loſt their hartes. In the ſame voiage, as the king had gotten many townes and villages, ſo alſo he ſubdued Caſtles and Munitiōs, very ſtrong, and that with little ſtreſſe. His enemy being at the ſame time at Roane had reared a great army, who notwithſtanding being well manned, yet euer kept on the other ſide of the riuer Seane, breaking downe all the bridges that we ſhoulde not come ouer to him. And although the countrey roūd about continually was ſpoyled, ſackt, and with fire conſumed by the circuit of 20. miles round about: yet the French king being diſtant ſcarſe the ſpace of one mile frō vs, either would not or els durſt not (when he might eaſily haue paſſed ouer the riuer) make any reſiſtaunce for the defence of his countrey and people. And ſo our king iourneying forwarde came to Puſiacke or Poiſy; where the French king had likewyſe broke downe the bridge: and keeping on the other ſide of the riuer, would reſt in no place.

The kings comming to Puſiacke.

After whoſe comming to Poiſie, the foreſayd chaplain and confeſſor to the king, named Michaell Northburgh, deſcribing the kings voyage and the actes of the Engliſhmen from the town of Poiſie, to his comming to Calis, in his letters writeth in this wiſe.

¶ A Letter of W. Northburghe the Kyngs confeſſor, deſcribing the kings voyage into Fraunce.

SAlutations premiſed, we geue you to vnderſtand, that our ſoueraigne Lord the king came to the towne of Poiſye the daye before the Aſſumption of our Lady, where was a certayne bridge ouer the water of Seane broken downe of the enemye, but the king taried there ſo long till that the bridge was made again. And whiles the bridge was in repayring, there came a great number of men at armes and other ſouldiours were armed, to hinder the ſame. But the Earle of Northhampton iſſued out agaynſt them & ſlew of them more then one thouſand: the reſt fled away thankes be to God. And at an other time our men paſſed the water although with much trauell, and ſlew a great number of the common ſouldiours of Fraunce, about the Citty of Paris, and countrey adioyning, being part of the French kinges army, and thorowly well appoynted: ſo that our people haue now, made other good bridges vpon our enemyes, God be thanked, without any great loſſe and damage to vs. And on the morrow after the Aſſumption of our Ladye, the king paſſed the water of Sceane, and marched toward Poiſye, which is a towne of great defence and ſtronglye immured, and a maruellous ſtrong Caſtle within the ſame, which our enemies kept. And when our vaundgard was paſſed the towne, our reregarde gaue an aſſault thereunto and tooke the ſame: where were ſlayne more then 300. men at armes of our enemyes part. And the next day following, the Earle of Suffolke and Sir Hugh Spenſer marched forth vpon the commons of the countrey aſſembled and well armed, and in fine diſcomfited them, and ſlew of them more then 200. and tooke 60. Gentlemen priſoners, beſides others. And after that, the Kyng marched toward Graund Villers, and while he was there encamped, the kinges vaundgard was diſcried by the men of armes of the king Bename: whereupon, our men iſſued out in great haſte and ioyned battell with them, but were inforced to retyre. Notwithſtanding, thankes be vnto God, the Earle of Northhampton iſſued out and reſkued the horſemen with other ſouldiours: ſo that few or none of them were either taken or ſlayne ſauing onely Thomas Talbot, but had agayne the enemye in chaſe within 2. leagues of Amians: of whom we tooke 8. and ſlew 12. of their beſt men at armes, the reſt being well horſed, tooke the towne of Amians. After this, the king of England marched toward Pountiſe vpon Bartholomew day, and came vnto the water of Som, where the French king had layd 500. men at armes, and three thouſand foote men: purpoſing to haue kept and ſtopped our paſſage: but thankes be to God, the king of England and his hoſte entred the ſame water of Som, where neuer man paſſed before, without the loſſe of any of our men: and after that encountered with the enemy and ſlewe of them more then two thouſand, the reſt fledde to Abeuyle, in which chaſe was taken many Knights, Squiers, and men at armes. The ſame day, Sir Hugh Spenſer tooke the towne of Croylay, where he and his ſouldiours ſlew foure hundred men at armes, and kept the towne, where they found great ſtore of victuals. The ſame night, encamped the king of England in the Foreſt of Creſſy vpon the ſame water, for that the French kinges hoſte came on the other ſide of the town neare vnto our paſſage: But he woulde not take the water of vs, and ſo marched towarde Abeuile. And vpon the Friday next following, the King beyng ſtill encamped in the ſayd Foreſt, our Scuriers diſcried the french king, which marched toward vs in foure great battelles: And hauing then vnderſtanding of our enemies (as Gods will was) a little before the euening tide we drew vnto the playne fielde, and ſet our battelles in aray: and immediately the fight began, which was ſore and cruell, and indured long, for our enemyes behaued themſelues right nobly. But thankes be geuen to God, the victory fell on our ſide, and the Kyng our aduerſary was diſcomfited with all hys hoſte, and put to flight: Where alſo was ſlayne the Kyng of Bename, the Duke of Loren, the Earle of Dabeſon, the Earle of Flaunders, the Earle of Blois, the Earle of Aarcot, with his two Sonnes, the Earle of Damerley, the Earle of Nauers, and his Brother, the Lord of Tronard, the Archbyſhoppe of Myemes, the Archbiſhop of Saundes, the high Prior of Fraunce, the Earle of Sauoy, the Lord of Morles, the Lord de Guis, Segniour de S. Nouant, Seigniour de Roſingburgh, with ſixe Earles of Almayn, and diuers other Earles, Barons, Knightes, and Squyres, whoſe names are vnknowne. And Philippe de Valoys himſelfe, with another Marques which was called Lord Electour among the Romaynes, eſcaped from the battell. The nnmber of the men at armes whiche were founde dead in the field, beſide the common Souldiours and footemen, were 1542. And all that night the king of England with his hoſte abode armed in the field where the battell was fought. On the next morrow before the Sunne roſe, there marched towardes vs an other great hoſte, mightye and ſtrong, of the Frenchmen. But the Earle of Northhampton, and the Earle of Northfolke iſſued out agaynſt them in 3. battels, and after long and terrible fight, them in likewiſe they diſcomfited by Gods great help and grace (for otherwiſe it could neuer haue bene) where they tooke of Knights and Squires a great number, and ſlew aboue 2000. purſuing the chaſe three leagues from the place where the battell was fought. The ſame night alſo the king encamped himſelfe agayne in the foreſt of Creſſy, and on the morow marched toward Boleyne, and by the way he took the town of Staples: and from thence he marched toward Calis where he entendeth to plant his ſiege and lay his battery to the ſame. And therfore our ſoueraigne Lord the king willeth and commaūdeth you in all that euer you may, to ſend to the ſaid ſiege victuals cōuenient. For after the time of our departing frō Chaam, we haue trauelled through the countrey with great perill and daunger of our people, but yet alwayes had of victuall plenty thankes be to God therfore. But now as the caſe ſtandeth, we partly need your helpe to be refreſhed with victuals. Thus fare you well. Written at the ſiege before the towne of Calis the 14. day of September.

Siege of Calys.

After the ſiege and winning of Poiſie, the third day of September an. 1346. the king through the midſt of Fraūce directed his paſſage vnto Calis, as by the tenor of this letter you heare, & beſieged ẏ ſame: which ſiege he continued from the third of September aforeſayd, til the third day of Auguſt the yeare next enſuing, vpon the which day it was rendered vp vnto the ſayd king Edward the third, and ſubdued vnto the crowne of England, as after the Lord willing ſhall more appeare.

Dauid king of Scots inuadeth England.

In the mean time during the ſiege of Calis, Dauid the Scottiſh king at the requeſt of ẏ French king with a great army braſt into the North parts of England, and firſt beſieging the towne of Lidell, within ſixe daies obteined the greateſt part of the towne, & there taking all that he could find, with Sir Walter Salby a valiant knight which was the keper of the hold, cauſed him vncurteouſly to be put to the ſword, and ſo from thence proceeded further into England, till at length being met with all by William Surthe Archbiſh. of Yorke, and the L. Percy, and the L. Neuell, wt other nobles of thoſe parties (calling & gathering their men together) in the plain nere to Durham, the 17. day of October in the yere aboueſayd through the gracious hand of Chriſt, there were ſubdued & conquered. In the which conflict, the Earles of Murrife, and Stratheron, with the flower of all the chiualry and principall warriors of Scotland were ſlaine. Alſo the foreſayd king Dauid, with the Earles of Mentiffe & Fiffes, and other Lords, and Williā Douglas Maſ klime, fleming, and William Douglas, & other many moe men of armes were taken priſoners, & ſo the miſchiefe which they intended to other, fell vpon theyr owne heads.

The Scots ouerthrowen.

Dauid the Scottiſhe K. taken priſoner.

❧ The letter of the Pope to the king of England, in the behalfe of the Frenchmen.

CLement the Biſhop, ſeruaunt of Gods ſeruaunts: To his welbeloued ſonne in Chriſt, Edward the puiſſaunt king of England Salutation and Apoſtolical bleſſing. If you diligētly conſider deare ſonne (as ought a catholicke Prince to do) the ſlaughter of ſuch an innumerable ſort, bought with the precious bloud of Chriſt our redemer: the loſſe of their ſubſtaunce & ſoules, and the lamētable perils, which the diſſentions and warres ſtirred vp betwene you and our welbeloued ſonne Philippe, the noble king of Fraūce haue brought vpō vs, and yet dayly do without intermiſſiō: And alſo the bewayling of ſo many poore people, crying out of Orphans and pupils, lamentation of widowes, and other miſerable people, which be robbed and ſpoyled, and almoſt famiſhed: what exclamation they make with teares running downe theyr cheeks, yelling and crying vnto God for helpe, as alſo the deſtruction of churches, monaſteries, & holy places, holy veſſels and other ornamēts vnto gods ſeruice dedicated: the ſacrilegious robberies, takings, & impriſonings: the ſpoyling of holy churches & religious perſons, with many other ſuch innumerable, deteſtable, execrable miſchiefes, offending the eies of the diuine maieſty: All which, if your princely hart woulde conſider and well remember with this alſo that Catholicke fayth (eſpecially in the Eaſt partes) and the Chriſtians there abiding by meanes of the ſame diſſentiōs and warres, deſtitute of the helpes of ſuch catholicke men as are in the Weſt parties, are ſo afflicted of the Infidels ſeyng the other partes of Chriſtendome ſo troubled, with cruell perſecutions, yea and more crueller then euer it hath bene (although in theſe times to amplify this our fayth in the ſayd Eaſt parts is cruell perſecution ſhewed more then hath bene of many yeares paſt) doubtles we beleue it would pity your hart. And to the end that ſuch and ſo great euils ſhould no further proceed, nor yet that ſo great good as might be done by delating of our foreſayd fayth in theſe times ſhould be let & hindered, we deſire you that ye would applye your minde to make ſome agreement and peace with the foreſaid king. For if (my welbeloued ſonne) God hath geuen vnto you proſperous ſucceſſe and fortune, ye ought rather to humble thē to extoll your ſelfe; and ſo much the more readier to encline to his peace, and to indeuour your ſelfe to pleaſe God which loueth peace, and delighteth in peaceable men, and to eſchew the foreſayd euils which without doubt doe grieuouſly offend him. Furthermore, we maruell greatly that vnto our reuerend brother Anibaldus Byſhop of Tuſculane, and our beloued ſonne Stephen of the title of S, Iohn, and Paule, prieſt and Cardinall of the apoſtolicall ſea, being ſent as Legats by vs and the ſame ſee Apoſtolical to intreat a peace, who diligently and faythfully laboring for the ſame as louers of verity, iuſtice and equity, and therwithall regarders of your honour: could not be ſuffered touching the intreatye of the ſame peace, to come vnto your Graces preſence.

Wherefore we deſire your kingly highneſſe more earneſtly, & for the mercy of God with more vehemence require the ſame: that you taking vp the foreſaid horrible euils and preuenting the ſweetnes of piety and compaſſion, may eſcape the vengeance of Gods indignation, which were to be feared, if you ſhould perſeuer in your former euils as God forbid. And as touching the intreaty for peace, for which our foreſayd Cardinals were ſent vnto you (howbeit ſecretly leaſt it ſhould be any derogation to your honor) we deſire you to condeſcend therunto, & with all your affection you will incline your minde to the ſame, ſo pleaſaunt vnto God, ſo deſired of the world, as alſo to you the foreſayd king, & vnto the catholicke fayth profitable. And that the ſame peace by Gods help & grace eſtabliſhed & made perfect, you might aſſay your puiſſant ſtrength about gods buſines in the foreſaid eaſt partes (ſo good occaſion ſeruing as before is ſayd in theſe our times) being ſo apt aduaūcements of your honor, & happy increaſing of your princely name: for ſeruētly we haue heard of you reported to behaue your ſelfe, in all your attemptes. Thus we doubt not but that you wil write vnto vs again touching the premiſſes, and the purpoſe of your intention touching the ſame. Dated at Auinion the 18 of February, and 5 yeare of our Papacy.

K. Edward anſwereth to the pope.

MOſt holy father, we vnderſtand by the letters of the reuerēd fathers in God the Byſhop of Tuſculan, and Stephen of the title of S. Iohn Prieſt, Cardinals & Legats of the Court of Rome, as alſo by the letters of your holyneſſe ſent vnto vs, that ye maruell greatly for that your ſayd Legates were of purpoſe ſent vnto vs, and commaunded to intreat of a peace betwene our aduerſary of Fraunce and vs, that we would not ſuffer them ſecretly to talke with vs, for the ſafegard of our honor: The intention of your hart to make the foreſayd peace, complayning and bewayling therein the death of Chriſten men, the loſſe of their goodes, the perill of their ſoules, the lamentable waylings of the poore, of orphanes, the widowes, and deſtruction of other pittyfull perſons, the pillage and robberies of Churches, and other miſchiefes innumerable, and namely the diminiſhing of Chriſten fayth in the Eaſt partes, which by the warre betwene our aduerſary of Fraūce and vs is ſore decayed, as the ſaid letters playnely do import: And that foraſmuch as God hath geuen you triumphant fortune, that ſo much the more we ought to abaſe and humble our hart and to be the readyer to make and incline to a peace. As touching theſe thinges holy Father, we geue your holyneſſe to vnderſtand that aſwell vnto your foreſayd Legates as other meſſengers ſent from you vnto vs, we haue offered vnto euerye of them reaſonable wayes of peace, and euery day declare the ſame, and that not ſecretly but openly: For we doubt not to let our purpoſe be vnderſtoode, for he that is the high Iudge both of him and vs, in whoſe diſpoſition all thing lyeth, hath geuen vnto vs the crowne of Fraunce to our right and proper heritage. The which right, our foreſayd aduerſary hath by force, of long time deteyned from vs we ſeeking to obtayne the ſame in peaceable wiſe and yet do, if we might obtayne the ſame in any good maner, rather for the benefit of chriſten men, and that the foreſayd euilles might ceaſe, which by his wrongfull meanes onely haue increaſed & growne. Yet notwithſtanding as before this time you know we aſſented to a truce with certayne Articles conteined in the ſame writing, all this he hath infringed: Neither doth the wrong ſuffice him which he offereth vs in our foreſayd heritage, but endeuoureth himſelfe during the ſayd truce to inuade our realme of England and other our landes; and further, maynteineth the Scottes, & aydeth them to the vtter deſtructiõ of vs, our people, & lands aforeſayd: whereby we were inforced for the ſafegarde of our people and landes, by ſuch lawfull meanes we may, to defend our ſelues and put him from his wicked purpoſe. And furthermore, for the ſame our quarell being in the handes of God, haue we commen againſt him to conquere our inheritaunce of Frãce ouer whom God hath geuen vs diuers victories as we haue truſted he would by his rightwiſe iudgement and power, whiche thing he hath ſhewed vpon vs, (all chaunce of fortune ſet a part) in reſpect of our rightfull title therein, and without our deſertes: Wherefore with all humility of hart we geue him thanks alwaies therefore, moſt deuoutly night and day prayſing his holy name, for we acknowledge the ſame commeth not by our ſtrength and force. Wherefore moſt holy Father we deſire your holyneſſe, and ſomuch as in vs lyeth require the ſame, that you that ſupplye the place of the ſonne of God in earth, and hath the gouernement of the ſoules of all Chriſten men and ought to be vpright and equall towardes all men, without exception of perſons: that ye will receiue good information and true, of the obiections aboue ſayd, and will put to your holy helping hand, as much as in you is, that our ſayed aduerſarye of Fraunce may acknowledge his wrong whiche he hath done to vs herein, and may be by your ayde redreſſed, and that he in this his wrong haue no mainteynance and ayde at your hand. For if it be ſo, we then appeale vnto the iudge of iudges which ſuffereth for a time wronges to be donne for the ſinnefull default of man, but in the end redreſſeth the ſame, leauing no good deed vnrewarded, nor euill vnpuniſhed: moſt humbly requiring him to be to vs a true and vpright iudge of all our controuerſyes, for his mercies ſake, as in the meane time we repoſe our full truſt and confidence in him. The holy ſpirit of God. &c.

The kyng appealeth from the P. to God.

Moreouer during yet the ſiege of Calis, the French king had ſent certayn offers to the men of Flaunders that if they would relinquiſh the king of England and adhere to him.

Firſt he would remitte all their former tranſgreſſions.

Secondly, he would vnburdẽ them of their interdict.

Thirdly, he would ſend vnto them ſuch plẽty of corne, that what was ſold for 12. s. with them, ſhould be ſold for 4. s. and that for 6. yeares.

Offers made to the men of Flaunders to forſake K. Edwarde.

Fourthly, he would ſtore them with plenty of French woll, to make cloth for a ſmall price, & that they might ſell the ſayd clothes both in Flaunders and in Fraunce: & that the Frẽch men ſhould vſe the ſame cloth, for ſo much as al other maner of cloth ſhould be forbid in Fraunce, ſo long as any of that (made of French woll) might be found.

Fiftly, he would reſtore them to theſe three Cities Inſulam, Rowocum, and Betony.

Sixtly, he would defend them from all their aduerſaries. And in pledge of the ſame, would ſẽd them mony before hand.

Seuenthly, ſuch as were able and forward men amõg them, he would reteine and promote them. &c.

But theſe offers ſeming to proceed more of faire words to ſerue the preſẽt turne, then of any harty truth, were not receiued. Thẽ the L. Iohn, Prince & heyre to the French king, during the foreſayd ſiege of Calis aboue mentioned, comming with a mighty army of French men, ſet vpon yͤ men of Flaũders and Engliſh men in the towne of Caſſels. In the which conflict during from morning to noone, the Frenchmẽ were vanquiſhed and the young Dolphin driuen backe from whence he came. Of whoſe number diuers were ſlaine, and taken priſoners. Where on the other ſide (through the Lordes defence) not one is reported to be grieuouſly wounded.

The Dolphin with the French diſcomfited at Caſſeles.

As this paſſed on, not long after about yͤ 7. day of Iune an. 1347. king Edward continuing ſtill his ſiege agaynſt Calis, Philip the French king came downe with a mighty army purpoſing to remoue the ſiege: where not farre of from the Engliſh hoſt, he incamped himſelfe. Which done 2. Cardinals, Ambaldus, & Stephanus (procured for the ſame purpoſe) going betwene the two kinges, gaue to the king of England thus to vnderſtand: that if he would cõdeſcend to any reaſonable way of peace, the French king was ready to offer ſuch honeſt profers vnto him, as to reaſon & to his contentation ſhould ſeme agreable. But in cõcluſion when it came to talke, the nobles could not agree vpon yͤ conditions. Wherefore the french king ſeing no other remedy, did it to be ſigniſied to king Edward: that betwene that preſent Teuſday, & the next friday, if he would come forth into the field, he ſhould haue battell geuẽ him. Thus the place being vewed of foure Captaines of either hoſt, for the battaile to be fought: it ſo fell, that the French K. on Wedneſday at night before the battell ſhould ioyne, ſecretly by night ſetting his pauilions on fire, returned backe with his army, out of the ſight of Engliſh men.

Upon the Friday folowing, they which were beſieged in the towne of Calis, ſeeing the king to be retyred (vpon whoſe helpe they truſted, being alſo in great penury & famine for lack of victuals, & otherwiſe in much miſery vehemently diſtreſſed) ſurrendered the towne to the kinges handes: who like a mercifull Prince onely deteining certeine of the chiefe, the reſt with the whole cõmons he let go with bagg & baggage, diminiſhing no part of their goods, ſhewing therein more Princely fauour to them, then they did of late in Queene Maries dayes vnto our men, in recouering the ſayd towne of Calis agayne.

The towne of Calice wonne.

After the winning thus of Calis as hath bene premiſed, king Edward remaining in the ſayd towne a certaine ſpace, was in conſultatiõ concerning his voyage & proceding farther into Fraunce. But by meanes of the foreſayd Cardinals, truce for a certayne time was takẽ, and inſtrumentes made (ſo prouided) that certayne noble mẽ as well for the french K. as for the king of England, ſhould come to the Pope there to debate vpon the Articles. Unto the which king Edward, for peace ſake was not greatly diſagreing. Which was. an. 1347. Ex Tho. Walſingh.

The next yeare folowing which was an. 1348. fell a ſore plague, which they call the firſt generall peſtilence in yͤ realme of England, This plague (as they ſay) firſt ſpringing frõ the Eaſt, & ſo ſpreading weſtward, did ſo mightely preuaile here in this land, beginning firſt at Dorceſter & the countryes thereabout, that euery day lightly 20. ſome dayes 40. ſome 60. & moe dead corſes were brought & layd together in one pitte. This beginning the firſt day of Auguſt: by the firſt of Nouember it came to Londõ. Whereas the vehement rage therof was ſo hoate, and did increaſe ſo much: that from the firſt day of February, til about the beginning of May in a Churchyard then newlye made by Smithfield, aboue 200. dead corſes euery day were buried, beſides them which in other Churchyardes of the Cittye were layd alſo. At lẽgth by the grace of Chriſt ceaſing there it proceded from thence to the Northparts, where alſo the next yeare after. an. 1349. it ſwaged.

After this in the next yeare inſuing. an. 1350. the towne of Calis was by treaſon of the keper of the Caſtle, almoſt betrayed and wonne from the Engliſh men. Within the compaſſe of which yere, dyed Philip the French king. After whom king Iohn his ſonne ſucceded in the crowne. Who the next yeare after vnder falſe pretence of frendſhip, cauſed the Conſtable of Frãuce Erle of Ewe to be beheaded: who being taken priſoner before in warre by Engliſh men, and long deteined in priſon in England, was licẽſed by king Edward to viſite his country of Fraunce. In the ſame yere the town of Gwines was takẽ by Engliſhmẽ, while the keepers of the hold were negligent and a ſleepe.

In this battell were taken 9. Knightes, Eſquires, and Gentlemen. 140. The French men & Britaines, by this victory were exceedingly diſcouraged, and there pride cut downe.

In the yere after, was Henry firſt made Duke of Lãcaſter, which before was Earle of Derby and Lancaſter. Alſo diuers good ordinannces were appoynted in yͤ Parliament at Weſtminſter. Which after by auarice, and parciall fauour of the head men, were agayne vndone.

First Duke of Lancaſter.

Concord and agreement about the yeare. 1354. began to come well forward, & inſtruments were drawne vpon the ſame, betwene the 2. kings. But that the matter being brought vp to Pope Innocent 6. partly by the quareling of the Frẽch men, partly by the winking of yͤ Pope which euer held with the French ſide, the conditions were repealed, which were theſe: That the king of England, all the Dukedome of Aquitanie with other lands there, ſhould be to him reſtored, without homage to the French king. And that king Edward agayn ſhould ſurrender to him all his right and title, which he had in Fraunce: whereupon roſe the occaſion of great war and tumult, which folowed after betwene the two Realmes.

The third viage of K. Edward into Fraunce.

Not long after this in yͤ ſame yere, word being brought to king Edward that Iohn the Frēch king was ready to meet him at S. Omers there to geue him battayle, gathered his power & ſet ouer to Calis with his 2. ſonnes, Leonell Earle of wilton: and Iohn of Gaunt, Earle of Richmond: & with Henry Duke of Lancaſter, &c. who beyng come to S. Omers, the French king with a mighty army of his francklings hearing of his cōming, the nerer he approched to them the further they retyred backe: waſting & deſtroying behind them, to the intēt that the engliſh army in purſuing thē ſhould finde no victuals. By reaſō whereof, king Edward folowing him by yͤ ſpace of 9. or 10 dayes vnto Hadē (whē neither he could finde his enemy to fight, nor victuals or forage for his army) he returned vnto Calis: where warre agayne being offered in the name of the king vpon vnſtable conditions, and yet the ſame not performed, king Edward ſeeing the ſhrinking of his enemy, frō Calis croſſed the ſeas into England: where he recouered agayne the towne of Barwicke, which the Scots before by ſubtle traine had gotten. At which time was graūted vnto the king in Parliament 50. s. for euery ſacke or packe of wooll that ſhould be caried ouer, for the ſpace of 6. yeares together. By the which graunt, the king might deſpend euery day by eſtimation aboue 100. marks ſterling. And for as much as euery yere 100000. ſacks of wooll were thought to be exported out of the Realme: the ſum thereof for 6. yeres ſpace was eſteemed to mount to 1500000. poūd ſterling.

The French K. taken priſoner by prince Edward.

It were too long, and litle pertayning to the purpoſe of this hiſtory to comprehend in order all the doinges of this king, with the circumſtances of his victoryes, of the bringing in of the french king into England, of his abode there, of the raunſome leuied on him and of Dauid the Scottiſh king, of which, the one was rated at 3. millions of Scutes, yͤ other at 100000. marks to be payd in 10 yeres how the ſtaple was after tranſlated to Calis, with ſuche like, I referre them that would ſee more, to the Chronicle of Tho. Walſing. of S. Albans, of Iohn Froyſard, Adā Merimouth, who diſcourſe all this at large.

Euery Scute valuing 6. ſhillings 8. pence.

Thus hauing diſcourſed at large al ſuch marſhal affairs and warlicke exploytes incident in the reigne of this king betwixt him and the realmes of Fraunce and Scotland: Now to returne agayne to our matters eccleſiaſticall, followeth in order to recapitulate and notifye the troubles & contentions growing betwene the ſame king & the Pope and other eccleſiaſticall perſons in matters touching the church in order of yeares remayning in the Tower taken out of the recordes as followeth. As where firſt in the 4. yeare of his reigne the king wrote to the Archbi. of Canterbury to this effect. That whereas King Edward the 1. his graund father did geue to a Clerke of his owne, being his Chaplain the dignity of Treaſurer of York, the Archbiſhopricke of Yorke being then vacant and in the kinges handes, in the quiet poſſeſſion whereof the ſayde Clerke continued vntill the Pope miſliking therewith woulde haue diſplaced him, and promoted to the ſame dignitye a Cardinal of Rome to the manifeſt preiudice of the crown of England. The King therefore ſtraightly chargeth the Archbiſhop of Yorke not to ſuffer any matter to paſſe that may be preiudice to the donation of his graundfather, but that his owne Clerke ſhould enioy the ſayd dignity accordingly, vpon payne of his highnes diſpleaſure.

The like precepts were alſo directed to theſe Biſhops folowing, vide. to the Biſhop of Lincolne, Biſhop of worceſter, Biſhop of Sar, Monſer Marmion, Archdeacon of Richmond, Archdeacō of Lincolne, the Prior of Lewē, the Prior of Lenton, to maiſter Rich of Bintworth, to M. Iherico de Concoreto the Popes Nuncio, to M. Guido of Calma. And withall wrote his letters to the Pope touching the ſame matter conſiſting in three partes. Firſt in the declaration and defence of his right and title to the donatiō and gift of all maner of temporalties, of offices, prebendes, benefices and dignities eccleſiaſticall holden of his in capite as in the right of his crown of England. Secondly in expoſtulating with the Pope for intruding him ſelfe into the auncient right of the crowne of England intermedling with ſuch collations contrary to right & reaſon and the example of all his predeceſſours which were Popes before. Thirdly intreating him that he would hereforth abſteyne and deſiſt from moleſting the Realme wyth ſuch nouelties and ſtraunge vſurpations, and ſo much the more for that in the publique Parliament late holden at weſtminſter it was generally agreed vpon by the vniuerſall aſſent of all the eſtates of the Realme that the Kyng ſhould ſtand to the defence of all ſuch rightes and iuriſdictions as to his crowne appertayned.

After this in the 9. yeare of the Reigne of this Kyng Pope Benedict the 12. ſendeth down letters touching his new creation with certayne other matters and requeſtes to the King whereunto the King aunſwering agayne declareth how glad he is of that his preferment adding moreouer yͤ his purpoſe was to haue ſet vnto him certain Ambaſſadors for congratulatiō of the ſame: But being otherwiſe occupyed by reaſon of warres could not attend hys holyneſſe requeſtes: notwithſtanding he minded to call a Parliament about the feaſt of Aſcention next, whereupon the aſſēbly of his clergy and other eſtates, he would take order for the ſame and ſo direct his Ambaſſadours to his holyneſſe accordingly.

The next yeare after which was the 10. yeare of his reigne the King writeth an other letter to the Pope that foraſmuch as his clergy had graūted him one yeres tenth for the ſupportation of his warres, and for that the Pope alſo had the ſame time to take vp the payment of 6. yeares tenth graunted him by the Clergy a litle before, therefore the Pope woulde vouchſafe at his requeſt to forbeare the exaction of that money for one yeare, till that his tenth for the neceſſities of his warres were diſpatched.

The ſame yere he wrote alſo to the Pope to this effect. That whereas the Prior and Chapter of Norwiche did nominate a Clerke to be Biſhop of Norwich and ſet him to Rome for his inueſtiture without the Kinges knowledge, therefore the Pope woulde withdraw his conſent & not intermedle in the matter appertaining to the Kings peculiar iuriſdiction and prerogatiue.

After this in the 16. yeare of this King it happened that the Pope ſent ouer certayne Legates to heare and determine matters appertayning to the right of patronages of Benefices: which the King perceiuing to tend to the no ſmall derogation of his right and the liberties of hys ſubiectes writeth vnto the ſayd Legates admoniſhing and requiring them not to proceede therein nor attempt any thing vnaduiſedlye otherwiſe then might ſtand with the lawfull ordinaunces & cuſtomes of the lawes of his realm and liberty of his ſubiectes.

Writing moreouer the ſame yeare to other Legats being ſent ouer by the Pope to treate of peace betweene the King and the French King with requeſt that they would firſt make their repayre to the french King who had ſo oftentimes broken with him, and proue what conformitye the french king would offer: which if he found reaſonable, they ſhould ſoone accord with him: otherwiſe exhorted thē not to enter into the land nor to proceede any further in that behalfe.

The yeare following which was the 17. of his reigne enſueth an other letter to the Pope agaynſt his prouiſiōs and reſeruations of benefices, worthy here to be placed & ſpecified, but that the ſumme thereof is before ſet downe to be found in the page. 386.

The yeare following an other letter likewiſe was ſet by the King to the Pope vpon occation takē of the church of Norwich: requiring him to ſurceaſe his reſeruations and prouiſions of the Biſhoprick within the Realme, and to leaue the elections thereof free to the Chapters of ſuche Cathedrall Churches according to the auncient grauntes and ordinaunces of his noble progenitors.

Proceeding now to the 19. yeare of this kinges reigne there came to the preſence of the king certayne Legats frō Rome complayning of certayne ſtatutes paſt in hys parliament tending to the preiudice of the Church of Rome & the Popes primacy viz. that if Abbots, Priors, or any other eccleſiaſticall patrons of benefices ſhoulde not preſent to the ſayd benefices within a certayne time, the lapſe of the ſame ſhoulde come to the ordinary or chapter thereof, or if they did not preſent, then to the Archbiſhop: if the Archbiſhoppe likewiſe did fayle to preſent, then the gyft to perteyne not to the Lord Pope but to the Kyng and hys heyres. An other complaynt was this that if Archbiſhops ſhould be ſlack in geuing ſuch benefices as properly pertayned to theyr owne patronage in due time, then the collation thereof likewiſe ſhoulde appertayne to the foreſayd King and his heires. An other complaynt was that if the Pope ſhoulde make voyde any elections in the Church of England for any defect foũd therein, and ſo had placed ſome honeſt and diſcreete perſons in the ſame, that then the King and his heires was not bounde to render the Temporaltyes vnto the partyes placed by the Popes prouiſion. Whereupon the Pope being not a little agrieued, the Kyng writeth vnto him certifying that he was miſinformed, denying that there was any ſuch ſtatute made in that Parlyament. And further as touching all other thinges he woulde conferre with his Prelates and Nobles and thereof would returne aunſwere by hys Legates.

In the 20. yeare of his raigne an other letter was written to the Pope by the King, the effect whereof in few wordes to expreſſe, was this, to certify him that in reſpect of his great charges ſuſteyned in hys warres, he hath by yͤ counſell of his Nobles taken into his owne handes the fruites and profites of all hys benefices here in England.

To proceed in the order of yeares that in the 26. yeare, of this King one Nicholas Heath Clerke a buſy headed body and a troubler of the Realme had procured diuers Byſhops and others of the Kinges counſell to be cited vp to the Court of Rome there to anſwere ſuch complayntes as he had made agaynſt them: whereupon commaundement was geuen to the King to all the portes of the realme for the reſtraynt of all paſſingers out, and for ſearching and areſting all perſons bringing in any Bulles or other proces from Rome tending to the derogation of the dignity of the crowne or moleſtation of the ſubiectes concerning which Nicholas Heath the King alſo writeth to the Pope his letters complayning of the ſayd Heath and deſiring him to geue no eare to his lewd complaynts.

The ſame yeare the King writeth alſo to the Popes Legate reſident in England requiring him to ſurceaſe from exacting diuers ſummes of money of the Clergy in the name of firſt fruites of benefices.

The 31. yeare of this Kinges reigne the King by hys letters complayneth to the Pope of a troubleſome fellow named Nicholas Stanneway remaining in Rome, whiche by his ſlaunderous complayntes procured diuers citations to be ſent into the Realme, to the great diſturbaunce of diuers and ſundry honeſt men: whereupon he prayeth and aduiſeth the Pope to ſtay himſelfe and not to ſend ouer ſuch haſty Citatiõs vpon euery light occaſiõ.

To paſſe further to the 38. yeare of the ſame King thus we finde in the Rolles. That the King yͤ ſame yeare tooke order by two of his Clergy, to witte Iohn a Stocke and Iohn of Norton to take into their handes all the temporaltyes of all Deaneryes, Prebendes, Dignityes, and Benefices being then vacant in England and to anſwere the profites of the ſame to the Kinges vſe.

The ſame yeare an ordinaunce was made by the King and his Counſell and to the ſame proclaymed in all porte townes within the Realme, that good and diligent ſearch ſhould be made, that no perſon whatſoeuer comming frõ the Court of Rome. &c. doe bring into the Realme with him any Bull, inſtrument, letters patentes, or other proces that may be preiudiciall to the King or any of his ſubiectes: nor that any perſon paſſing out of this Realme toward the Court of Rome doe cary with him any inſtrument or proces that may redound to the preiudice of the King or his ſubiectes: and that all perſons paſſing to the ſayd Court of Rome. &c. with the Kinges ſpeciall licenſe do notwithſtanding promiſe and finde ſurety to the Lord Chauncellour, that they ſhall not in any wiſe attempt or purſue any matter to the preiudice of the King or his ſubiectes vnder payne to be put out of the Kinges protection and to forfeyt his body, goods, and Cattelles according to the ſtatute thereof made Anno. 27.

And thus much concerning the letters and writinges of the King with ſuch other domeſticall matters, perturbations, and troubles paſſing betwene him and the Pope taken out of the publique Recordes of the Realme, whereby I thought to geue the Reader to vnderſtand the horrible abuſes, the intollerable pride, and the vnſatiable auarice of that Byſhop more like a proud Lucifer then a paſtor of the Church of Chriſt, in abuſing the king and oppreſſing his ſubiectes with exactions vnmeaſurable: not onely exerciſing his tyranny in this Realme; but raging alſo agaynſt other Princes both farre and neare, emongſt whom neither ſpared he the Emperour himſelfe. In the ſtory and actes of which Emperour Ludouicus mentioned a litle before, pag. 173. whom the Pope did moſt arrogantly excommunicate vpon maundy thurſday, and the ſelfe ſame day placing an other Emperour in his roome. Relation was made of certayne learned men which tooke the Emperours part agaynſt the Pope. In number of whom was Marſilius Patauinus, Guilermus Ockam, Ioannes Gandauenſis, Luitpoldus, Andreas Landenſis, Vlricus Hangenor treaſurer to the Emperour, Dantes, Aligerius. &c. Of whom Marſilius Patauinus compiled and exhibited vnto the Emperor Ludouike, a worthy worke intituled Defenſor pacis: writtẽ in the Emperors behalfe agaynſt the Pope. Wherin (both godly & learnedly diſputing agaynſt the Pope) he proueth, all Biſhops and Prieſtes to be equall: And that the Pope hath no ſuperiority aboue other Biſhops, much leſſe aboue the Emperour. That the word of God ought to be onely the chiefe iudge in deciding and determining cauſes eccleſiaſtical: That not onely ſpiritual perſons, but laymen alſo being godly and learned ought to be admitted into generall councels: That the Clergy and the Pope ought to be ſubiect vnto Magiſtrates: That the Church is the vniuerſity of the faythfull, and that the foundation and head of the Church is Chriſt, and that he neuer appoynted any vicar or Pope ouer his vniuerſall church: That Biſhops ought to be choſen euery one by their own Church and Clergy: That the mariage of Prieſtes may lawfully be permitted: That S. Peter was neuer at Rome: That the Clergy and Sinagoge of the Pope is a denne of theeues: That the doctrine of the Pope is not to be folowed, becauſe it leadeth to deſtruction: And that the corrupt maners of the Chriſtians doe ſpring and flow out of the wickednes of the ſpiritualty. &c. He diſputeth moreouer in an other worke of free iuſtification by grace: And extenuated merits, ſaying that they are no cauſes efficient of our ſaluation, but onely ſine qua non, that is to ſay, that workes be no cauſe of our iuſtification, but yet our iuſtificatiõ goeth not without them. For the which his doctrine moſt ſound and Catholicke, he was condemned by the Pope. an. 1324. by the Popes decree extrauagant, cap. Licet intra doctrinam. Concerning the which man and his doctrine: I thought good thus much to commit to hiſtory, to the entent men may ſee, that they which charge this doctrine now taught in the Church with the note of noueltye or newnes, how ignoraunt and vnſkilfull they be in the hiſtoryes and order of times fore paſt.

In the ſame number and cataloge, commeth alſo Guillermus Ockam, who was in the yeare of our Lord 1326. as is afore mentioned pag. 375. and wrote likewiſe in defence of Ludouicus the Emperour agaynſt the Pope: and alſo in defence of Michael Generall of Grayfriers, whom the Pope had excommunicated & curſed for an hereticke. Diuers treatiſes were by the ſayd Ockam ſet forth, whereof ſome are extant and in print, as his queſtions & diſtinctions: ſome are extinct and ſuppreſſed (as Aſcentius reporteth) quoòd eſſent aliquando aſperiora. Some againe be publiſhed vnder no name of the author, being of his doing: as the dialogue betwene the ſouldiour and the clarke: wherin it is to be coniected, what bookes and workes this Ockam had collected agaynſt the Pope. Of this Ockã Iohn Sledane in his hiſtory inſerteth mention, to his great cõmendation, whoſe wordes be theſe: William Ockam in time of Ludouicus, 4. In the which booke he handleth theſe 8. queſtions very copiouſly: Whether both the adminiſtrations of the Biſhops office, and of the Emperors may be in one man. 2. Whether the Emperour taketh his power and authority onely of God, or els of the Pope. 3. Whether the Pope and Church of Rome haue power by Chriſt, to ſet and place kinges and Emperors, and to commit to them theyr iuriſdiction to be exerciſed. 4. The pope the whore of Babilon.

Dantes an Italian wryter a Florentine, lyued in the time of Ludouicus themperour, about the yere of our lord 1300. and tooke his parte with Marſilius Patauinus againſt three ſortes of men, which he ſayd were enemyes to the truth: That is, the pope: Secondly, the order of religious men, which count thēſelues the children of the church, whē they are ȳ children of the deuil their father: Thirdly, the Doctors of decrees and decretals. Certain of his wrytings be extant abroad, wherein he prooueth the Pope not to be aboue the Emperour, nor to haue any right or iuriſdiction in the Empire. He cōfuteth the Donation of Conſtantine to be a forged and a fained thing, as which neither did ſtande with any lawe or right. For the which, he was taken of many for an hereticke. He complaineth moreouer very much, the preaching of Gods worde to be omitted: and in ſtede thereof, the vaine fables of monkes and friers to be preached and beleued of the people: and ſo the flock of Chriſt to be fed not with the foode of the Goſpell, but wyth winde. The Pope ſayeth he, of a paſtor is made a wolfe, to waſt the church of Chriſt, and to procure with his Clergie not the word of God to be preached, but his own decrees. Ex lib. Iornandi. Pope Antichriſt.

An admonition to the Romains.

Hereunto may be added the ſaying out of the booke of Iornandus vnprinted, with the foreſaid Dantes: that forſomuch as Antichriſt commeth not before the deſtruction of the Empire, therefore ſuch as go about to haue the Empire extinct, are forrunners and meſſengers in ſo doing of Antichriſt. Therfore let the Romaines (ſayth he) and their Byſhops beware, leaſt their ſinnes and wickednes ſo deſeruing by the iuſt iudgement of God, the prieſthood be taken from them. Furthermore, let all the prelates and princes of Germany take hede. &c.

Taulerus of Germany, a preacher againſt the popes proceedings.

And becauſe our aduerſaries which obiecte to vs the newnes of our doctrine, ſhall ſee the courſe and fourme of this religion now receaued, not to haue ben, eyther ſuch a newe thing nowe, or a thing ſo ſtraunge in times paſt: I will adde to theſe aboue recited, maſter Taulerus a preacher of Argentine in Germany. An. 1350. who contrary to the Popes proceedings, taught openly againſt al mennes merites, and againſt inuocation of Saintes, and preached ſincerely of our free iuſtificatiō by grace, referring al mans truſt onely to the mercy of God, and was an enemy to all ſuperſtition.

Franciſcus petrarcha. Vide 20. epiſtolam Franciſci Petrarcha. Rome the mother and ſchole of errour.

With whom alſo may be adioyned Frāciſcus Petrarcha, a wryter of the ſame age, who in hys works and hys Italian meeter ſpeaking of Rome: calleth it the whore of Babylon, the ſchole and mother of error, the temple of hereſy, the neſt of traichery growing and increaſing by ȳ oppreſſing of others: and ſayeth farther that ſhee, (meaning the Popes Court) extolleth her ſelfe againſt her founders that is, the Emperours, who firſt ſet her vp and did ſo enriche her: And ſemeth plainly to affirme that the pope was Antichriſt, declaring that no greater euil could happen to any man then to be made Pope. Thys Franciſcus was about the yeare of our Lord. 1350.

Ioannes de rupe ſciſſa. Iohn caſt into priſon.

And if time would ſerue vs to ſeeke out olde hyſtories, we ſhould finde plenty of faithful witneſſes of old and ancient time, to geue witneſſe with vs againſt the Pope beſide the other aboue rehearſed: as Ioannes de Rupe ſciſſa. an. 1340. who for rebuking the ſpiritualtie for theyr greate enormities, and neglecting their office and duety, was caſt in pryſon.

Church of Rome, the whore of Babilon.

The reformation of the Church before propheſied.

Illyricus a wryter in our dayes, teſtifieth that he founde & red in an old Pamphlet, that the ſayd Ioannes ſhould call the church of Rome, the whore of Babylon: and the Pope to be the miniſter of Antichriſt, and the Cardinals to be the falſe prophetes. Being in pryſon he wrote a booke of Propheſies, bearing the title: Vade mecum in tribulationem: in which booke (which alſo I haue ſeene) he propheſied & admoniſhed affliction and tribulation to hang ouer the ſpiritualty. And pronoūceth plainly that God wil purge his Clergy, and wil haue prieſtes that ſhalbe poore, godly, and that ſhal faithfully feede the Lordes flocke: moreouer, that the goods of the church ſhal returne againe to the lay men. He propheſied alſo the ſame time, that the French king and his army ſhould haue an ouerthrow. which came likewiſe to paſſe during the time of his impriſonment. Of this Ioannes de Rupe, wryteth Froyſard in hys time, and alſo Wickliffe, of whoſe propheſies, more may be ſaid at more leiſure (Chriſt willing) hereafter.

Conradus Hager.

The Maſſe to be no ſacrifice.

Conradus caſt in priſon.

Ex bullis quibuſdam Othonis Epiſ. Herbipoli.

About the ſame yeare of our Lorde 1340. in the Citie Herbipoli, was one named maſter Cōradus Hager. who (as appeareth by the old bulles and regiſters of Otho byſhop of the ſaid citye) is there recorded, to haue mainteined and taught the ſpace of 24. yeares together, the Maſſe to be no maner of ſacrifice: neither that it profiteth any man ether quicke or dead, and that the money geuen of the dead for Maſſes, be very robberies & ſacrilege of prieſts, which they wickedly do intercept and take away from the poore. And ſayd moreouer, that if he had a ſtoone full of golde and ſiluer, hee would not geue one farthing for any Maſſe. For the ſame his doctrine, thys good preacher was condemned and incloſed in pryſon: what afterward became vpon him, we doe not finde.

Pœnitentiarius Aſini.

The pope and his ſpiritualitie cōfederate againſt the laitie.

The pope maketh the Emperour & lay mē Aſſes

There is among other old and ancient recordes of antiquity belōging to thys preſent time, a certain monument in verſes Poetically compiled, but not wythout a certaine morall, intituled, Pœnitentiarius Aſini, the Aſſes confeſſor: bearing the date and yeare of our Lorde in thys number, Completus An. 1343. In this treatiſe be brought foorth the Wolfe, the Foxe, and the Aſſe comming to ſhrift and doing penaunce. Firſt the wolfe confeſſeth hym to the Fox, who eaſely doeth abſolue hym from all hys faultes, and alſo excuſeth hym in the ſame. In like maner the wolfe hearyng the Foxes ſhrifte, ſheweth to hym the like fauour agayne. After thys commeth the Aſſe to cōfeſſion, whoſe fault was thys: that hee being hungry, tooke a ſtrawe out from the ſheafe of one that went in peregrination vnto Rome. The Aſſe although repenting of his fact, yet becauſe he thought it not ſo heynous as ȳ faults of the other, the more hee hoped for hys abſolution, But what followed? After the ſely Aſſe had vttered his crime in auricular confeſſion, immediatly the diſcipline of the lawe was executed vppon hym with ſeueritie: neither was hee iudged worthy of any abſolution, but was apprehended vpon the ſame, ſlayne and deuoured. Whoſoeuer was the author of thys fabulous tale, had a miſticall vnderſtanding in the ſame, for by the wolfe no doubt was meant the Pope. But the Foxe was reſembled to the Prelates, Curtiſans, Prieſtes, and reſt of the ſpiritualtie. Of the ſpiritualtie, the Lord Pope is ſoone abſoyled, as contrary, the Pope ſoone doeth abſoyle them in like manner. By the Aſſe is ment the poore laitie, vppon whoſe backe the ſtraite cenſure of the law is ſharpely executed: eſpecially when the Germane Emperors come vnder the Popes Inquiſition, to be examined by hys diſcipline, there is no abſolution nor pardon to be found, but in all haſte he muſt be depoſed, as in theſe ſtories may partly appeare before. And though the matter be not the weyght of a ſtrawe, yet what ſayeth the holy father the wolfe, if it pleaſe hym to make any matter of it.

Immenſum ſcelus eſt, iniuria quam peregrino
  Feciſti, ſtramen ſubripiendo ſibi.
Non aduertiſti quòd plura pericula paſſus
  Plurima paſſurus, quòd peregrinus erat.
Non aduertiſti, quòd ei per maxima terræ
  Et pelagi ſpacia, ſit peragranda via.
Non aduertiſti, ſanctos, nec limina ſancta,
  Sanctorum ſanctam ſed nec Hieruſalem.
Ille retranſiuit eadem loca, tam violentum
  Ex inopinato ſenſit adeſſe malum.

De Papa Taceo, cuius protectio talem,
Conduxit, cuius tu vilipendis opem,
Totius Eccleſiæ fuerit quam nuncius iſte,
Pertulit abſtracto gramine damna viæ. &c.

And thus they aggerating and exaggerating the fault to the vttermoſt, flye vpon the poore aſſe & deuour him. By the which Apologie, the tyrannicall and fraudulent practiſes of theſe ſpirituall Romaniſtes are liuely deſcribed.

Gerhardus Ridder, a writer againſt mōkes and Friers.

Not long after theſe aboue rehearſed, about the yeare of our lord 1350. Gerhardus Ridder, wrote alſo againſt the Monkes and Friers a booke intituled, Lacrima Eccleſiæ: wherein he diſputeth agaynſt the foreſaid religious orders namely againſt the begging Friers: prouing that kinde of life to be farre frō Chriſtian perfection, for that it is againſt charitie to liue vppon other, when a man may liue by his own labours. And affirmeth them to be hipocrites, filthy liuers, and ſuch as for mans fauour, and for lucre ſake, doe mixt with true diuinitie: fables Apocriphas, and dreames of vanitie. Alſo, that they vnder pretence of long prayer, deuour widdowes houſes: and with their confeſſions, ſermons, and burials doe trouble the Church of Chriſt manifold wayes. And therfore perſwaded the prelates to bridle and keepe ſhort ẏ inordinate licence and abuſes of theſe Monaſticall perſons. &c.

Yet I haue made no menſiō of Michael Ceſenas, prouinciall of the gray friers, ner Petrus de Corbaria, of whō writeth Antoninus, in quarta parte ſummæ & ſayth they were condemned in the extrauagant of Pope John, with one Joānes de Poliaco. Their opiniōs ſaith Antoninus were theſe: That Peter the Apoſtle was no more the head of the Church, then the other Apoſtles: And that Chriſt left no Vicare behinde him or head in hys Church: And that the Pope hath no ſuch authoritie to correct and puniſhe, to inſtitute or depoſe the Emperour. Item, that all Prieſtes of what degree ſo euer, are of equall authoritie, power, and iuriſdiction by the inſtitution of Chriſt: but by the inſtitution of the Emperour, the Pope to bee ſuperiour, which by the ſame Emperour alſo may be reuoked agayne. Item that neyther the pope nor yet the Church may puniſh any man, punitione coactiua. That is, by externe coaction: vnleſſe they receiue licence of the Emperour. This foreſayd Michaell, generall of the gray Friers, wrote againſt the tiranny, pride, and primacie of the pope, accuſing him to be Antichriſt: and the Churche of Rome, to be the whore of Babilon dronke with the bloud of Saintes. He ſayd there were two Churches, one of the wicked floriſhing, wherein raigned the pope: the other of the godly afflicted. Itē, that the veritie was almoſt vtterly extinct: And for this cauſe he was depriued of his dignitie & condemned of the Pope. Notwithſtāding, he ſtode conſtant in his aſſertions. This Michaell was about the yeare of our Lord 1322. And left behinde him many fautours & followers of his doctrine, of whom a great part were ſlayne by the Pope: Some were condemned, as William Ockam, ſome were burned as Ioannes de Caſtilione, and Franciſcus de Arcatara. In extrauag. Ioan 23.

The opiniōs of Michael againſt the Pope. Michael Ceſenas depryued and condemned of the Pope.

Martyres, Ioannes de Caſtilione, Franciſcus de Arcatara burned.

With him alſo was condemned in the ſayd Extrauagāt Ioannes de Poliaco, aboue touched, whoſe aſſertions, were theſe: That the pope coulde not geue licence to heare confeſſions to whom he would, but that euery paſtour in hys owne Church ought to ſuffice. Item, that paſtours and biſhops had theyr authoritie, immediately from Chriſt & his Apoſtles, and not from the pope, Itē, that the conſtitution of pope Benedict. 11. wherein he graunteth larger priueleges to the Friers aboue other paſtours, was no declaration of the law, but a ſubuerſion. And for this he was by ẏ ſayd Friers oppreſſed, about the yeare of our Lord. 1322.

Archbyſhoppes of Cant. the one ſucceeding the other.

After Symon Mepham Archbiſhop of Caunterbury before mentioned, who liued not lōg: ſucceded Joh. Stretford. After whom came John Offord, who liued but x. monethes. In whoſe rowme ſucceeded Thomas, & remained but one yeare. an. 1350. And after him Simon Iſlypp was made archbiſhop of Canterbury, by Pope Clemēt the vi. who ſat xvii. yeares, and builded Caunterbury Colledge in Oxford. which Symon Iſlyp ſucceeded the Byſhop of Ely named Symon Langham, who within two yeares was made Cardinall. In whoſe ſtede Pope Vrbane the 5. ordeined William Wittleſey biſhop of Worceter to be archbiſhop of Caunterbury. an. 1366. In which yeare, William Biſhop of Wincheſter elected and founded the newe colledge in Oxford.

New Colledge in Oxforde founded an. 1366.

Pope Innocent. 6.

Two Franciſcanes burned at Auinion.

Agayne in the order of the popes, next vnto Pope Clement the 6. before mentioned, about the ſame time. an. 1353, ſucceeded pope Innocent the 6. In the firſt yeare of which Pope two Friers Minors or Franciſcans, were burned at Auinion. Pro opinionibus (as mine author ſayth) erroneis, prout. D. Papæ & eius Cardinalibus videbatur. i. For certaine opinions, as ſeemed to the pope and his Cardinals, erroneous. Ex Chron. Walſ. Of the which two Friers, I finde in the Chronicles De actis Rom. pontificum, and in the hiſtory of Præmonſtratenſis, that the one was Joannes Rochetaylada. Or rather as I finde in Catal. teſtium tited out of the Chronicle of Henricus de Herfordia, his name to be Hayabalus. who being (as he recordeth) a Fryer Minorite, began firſt in the time of Pope Clement the 6. an. 1345. to preach and affirme openly that he was by Gods reuelatiō charged and commaunded to preach: that the Churche of Rome was the whore of Babilon, and the Pope with hys Cardinals to be very Antichriſt. And that pope Benedict & the other before him his predeceſſours were dāned, with other ſuche like wordes, tending much agaynſt the Popes tirannical maieſty. And that the foreſaid Hayabalus being brought before the Popes face, conſtauntly did ſtand in the ſame, ſaying: that he was commaunded by Gods reuelatiō ſo to ſay, and alſo ẏ he would preach the ſame, if he might. To whom it was then obiected that he had ſome heretical books, and ſo was committed to priſon in Auiniō. In the time of his accuſation it happened, that a certain prieſt cōming before the Pope, caſt the Popes Bull downe before his feete, ſaying, Lo here, take your Bull vnto you, for it doth me no good at al. I haue laboured now theſe 3. yeares withall, and yet notwithſtanding for all this your Bull I cannot be reſtored to my right. The Pope hearing this, commaunded the poore Prieſt to be ſcourged, and after to be layd in priſon with the foreſayd Fryer. What became of them afterward, the foreſayd wryter Henricus de Herfordia maketh no mention. But I may probably coniecture this Prieſt, and this Friar Rochetayladus, or rather Hayabalus were the two, whome mine author Thom. Walſingham, writeth to be burned at this time in Auinion, about the firſt beginning of this Pope Innocentius the 6. Of thys Roichtaylada, I thought good here to inſerte the teſtimony and mention of John Froyſayd, written of him in hys firſt volum; chap. 211. in theſe wordes.

Ioan. Rochetaylada Martyr.

The church of Rome declared to be the whore of Babilon by Gods reuelatiō.

Rochtaylada with an other Frier, Martyrs.

A prieſt for caſting the popes bull before the popes feete ſcourged, caſt in priſon, and after burned at Auinion.

Anno. 1354.

There was (ſayth Froyſard) a Frier Minor full of great Clergy in the City of Auinion, called Frier John of Rochetaylada, the which Frier pope Innocent 6. held in priſon in the Caſtell of Baignour for ſhewing of many meruails after to come, pricipally he ſhewed many things to fall vnto the Prelates of the Church for the great ſuperfluitie and pryde, that was then vſed among them. And alſo he ſpeake many thinges to fall of the realm of Fraunce and of the great Lordes of Chriſtendome, for the oppreſſions ẏ they did to the poore cōmon people. This Fryer ſayd he would proue all his ſayinges by the authoritie of the Apocalips, & by other bookes of holy Saints and prophets the which were opened to him by ẏ grace of the holy ghoſt: he ſhewed many things hard to beleue, & many things fell after as he ſayd. He ſaid thē not as a prophet but he ſhewed them by authoritie of ancient Scriptures and by the grace of the holy Ghoſt, who gaue him vnderſtanding to declare the ancient prophetes, & to ſhew to all Chriſten people the yeares and times whē ſuch things ſhould fall, he made diuers books founded on great ſciences and Clergy, whereof one was made the yeare of our Lord. 1346. wherin was written ſuche meruailes that it were hard to beleue them howbeit many thinges, according thereto fell after. And when he was demaunded of the warres of Fraunce he ſaid that al that had bene ſene, was not like that ſhould be ſeen after. For he ſayd that the warres in Fraunce ſhoulde not be ended till the Realme were vtterly waſted & exiled in euery part. The which ſaying was well ſene after, for ẏ noble realme of Fraunce was ſore waſted and exiled: & ſpecially in the the terme that the ſayd Fryer had ſet. The which was in the yeares of our Lord. 1356. 57. 58. & 59. He ſayd in thoſe yeares the Princes and Gentlemen of the Realme ſhould not for feare ſhew themſelues agaynſt the people of low eſtate, aſſembled of all countries without head or captayne, and they ſhoulde doe as they liſt in the Realme of Fraunce, the which fell after as ye haue heard, how the cōpanions aſſembled them together, and by reaſon of theyr robbery and pillage waxed rich & became great captains.

Ex Ioan. Froiſardo Volu. 1. cap. 211.

Ex ſcripto Godfri. de Fontanis.

A contention in France betwene the Prelates and the Friers there.

About the ſame time happened in Fraunce a certayne contention betwene the French Prelates, and ẏ Fryers of Paris, teſtified and recorded by Godfridus de Fontahis, the briefe effect of which ſtory is this. The Prelates of France conuenting and aſſembling together in the City of Paris after a long deliberation among themſelues: cauſed by the Bedels to be called together all the Studentes, maiſters & Bachelers of euery facultie, with the chiefe heads alſo of al the Religious houſes and Friers in the vniuerſitie of Paris, who being al there congregated together in the biſhop of Paris his houſe, where there were preſẽt 4. archbiſhops and 20 Biſhops: firſt ſtod vp the Biſhop of Biturecenſe, who there making his Sermon, toke for his theame the place of S. Paule to the Epheſians, Fratres vt ſciatis quæ ſit longitudo, latitudo, altitudo, & profunditas charitatis &c. and concluded therupon, firſt that true charity would compell them to ſee and prouide for their flockes. Secondly, that the vigore of charity would arme them, to withſtand errors. Thirdly he concluded, that by duety of charity, they were bound to geue theyr liues for the ſoules of theyr flock committed to their charge. Fourthly, that by the ſame charity euery man to holde himſelfe content with that which was his owne, and not to intermeddle or buſye himſelfe further then to him appertayned, or belonged to his office: For there (ſayth he) all order eccleſiaſticall is diſſolued, where as men not contenting themſelues in their owne precincts, preſume in other mẽs charges where they haue nothing to doe. But this charity (ſayth he) now a dayes wareth colde, and all Eccleſiaſticall order is confounded and vtterly out of order. For many there be, which nowe a dayes preſume to thruſt in themſelues where they haue nothing to do, ſo that now the Church may ſeeme a monſter. For as in a natural body appeareth a monſter, where one mẽber doth the office of an other: ſo in ỷ ſpirituall body, which is the church, may be thought likewiſe. As whẽ our learned and prudent brethren, to wit, the Friers maiors and minors, do take vpon them to vſurpe and occupye the office to vs ſpecially apperteining: namely, where as the ſcripture warneth vs all, none to take vpõ him any office, except he be called thereunto of the Lord, as Aaron was. Wherfore we haue heretofore oftentimes cauſed the ſayd Friers, both by the king himſelfe in his owne perſon, & alſo by other nobles to be ſpoken to, and deſired: to ſurceaſe from doing and intermedling in our office, & yet they would not, but haue preached agaynſt our willes through all our dioceſſes, & haue heard confeſſiõs, ſaying that they haue the Popes priuiledge to beare them out therein. For the which cauſe we come to you, and not we here preſent onely, but alſo we haue the handwriting and the full conſent of all other our fellow Biſhops throughout the kingdome of Fraunce, to complaine to you of this ſo great inſolency and preſumptiõ of the Friers. For that as we are, you ſhall be. Neither do I thinke to be any of vs prelates here now, which haue not ſometime bene taken out of this vniuerſity of yours. We haue deſired moreouer, and cauſed to be deſired the foreſayd Friers, to ſend their priuilegies to the Apoſtolicke ſee, to be interpreted and expounded more playnely by the Lord Pope: which they refuſed alſo to do. Wherefore, to the intent you may the better vnderſtand and ſee what their priuiledges be, and how farre they do extend: we haue appoynted the ſaid priuilege here openly to be read vnto you.

That is, the Dominicke Friers and the Franciſcane Friers.

Then ſtod vp an other in the publicke place, and there read the priuileges of both the orders: and afterward read alſo the conſtitution of Pope Innocent 3. written in the 5, of the decretals, and beginneth: Omnis vtriuſque ſexus. &c. which conſtitution was repugnant and contrary to the foreſayd priuilegies, as he there manifeſtly proued, declaring how both the ſaid priuiliges were derogatory to that conſtitution.

The conſtitution of Pope Innocent. 3. Omnis Vtriuſque ſexus.

The Friers priuilegies proued contrary to the Popes conſtitution.

This done, then roſe vp the Biſhop Ambianenſis, a great Lawyer: who diſcourſing frõ article to article, there proued by good law, that the ſayd conſtitution ſtod in hys full force and vigore, and ought not to be infringed by the friers priuilegies in no part. And therfore by the vertue of that conſtitution, that the Friers ought not ſo miſorderly to intrude themſelues in hearing confeſſiõs, in inioyning of penaunce, and in preaching in Churches and Dioceſſes without ſpeciall licence of the Biſhop of the Dioces, & curate of the pariſh: vnto whoſe words, neuer a Frier at that time replyed againe. And ſo the Biſhop proceeding to his concluſion, deſired the vniuerſity to aſſiſt them in that caſe wherin they were all determined (ſaith he) to ſtand firmely to the ſhedding of theyr bloud, in reſiſting that miſorder and iniuries of the Friers. This happened the 6. day of December which they dedicate to S. Nicholas.

The Biſh. Ambianenſis.

Friers ought not to preach in Churches without ſpecial licence of them to whom the church belongeth.

The next day being ſonday, one of the order of the minorites or Franciſcanes, went to the Church of the maiorites or preaching Friers: where he made a ſermon (whiche was neuer ſene before, the one order to come and reſort with the other) beginning in the forſayd matter to reply, & to expound in order through euery article as well as he could: adding moreouer and ſaying, that they went not ſo farre in their priuilegies, as they lawfully might. And ſaid moreouer, that what time the ſayd priuileges were in obteining in Rome: the Biſhop Ambianenſis was there preſent himſelfe, reſiſting the ſame with all his power, yea all the Prelates alſo of Fraunce ſent and wrote vp to the Court agaynſt the ſame, and yet did not preuaile. For whẽ the Friers there preſently declared & opened to the Pope in what maner and how farr they had vſed priuileges: the Pope the ſame time ſayd, Placet: That is, agreed vnto the ſame. And now (ſayth he) the Prelates require & demaund of vs to ſend vp our priuiledges to the Court, which were great folly in vs: For in ſo doing, what ſhould we els but geue place & occaſiõ, to reuoke agayn the authority which is geuen in our handes already. Furthermore, our wardẽ and maiſter is now lately dead, and the maiſter here of the Dominike Friers, is not now preſent. Wherfore, we dare not determine in ſuch a weighty cauſe (touching the priuileges of our order) without the preſence of them. And therfore we deſire you of the Vniuerſity to holde vs therin excuſed, and not to be ſo lightly ſtirred againſt vs, for we are not the worſt and vileſt part of the Vniuerſity. &c.

The Friers reply againſt the Prelates.

The next day being the 8. day of the ſame moneth, whiche is alſo dedicate to the conception of our Ladye, vpon which day it was determined likewiſe: that one of the Dominicke Friers, ſhould preach in the Church of the Franciſcane or gray Friers, and ſo he did: tending to the ſame end, as the other frier in the other church had done before. Whereby it may ſeeme the prouerb well aunſwered vnto, wherof we read in the Goſpell: Facti ſunt amici Herodes & Pilatus in ipſa die.

Herode and Pilate were made friends in crucifying of Chriſt.

It was not long after, that the feaſt of S. Thomas the Apoſtle folowed, in whoſe Vigile all the heads of the Vniuerſity againe, were warned the third day after to congregate together in the Church of S. Bernard at the ſermon time. Which being done, and the aſſembly meeting together, an other Sermõ was made by a Diuine of the Vniuerſity, whoſe theame was: Prope eſt Dominus omnibus inuocantibus eum in veritate. &c. Wherin he with many words and great authorities argued agaynſt them, that would not be obedient vnto theyr Prelats. &c. The ſermon being ended then roſe vp againe the Biſhop Ambianenſis, who proſecuting the reſt of the Theame, and comming to the word in veritate: deuided it in three parts, according to the common gloſe of the decretals.

An other ſermon agaynſt the Friers.

Biſhop Ambianenſis. In Veritate &c.

Eſt verum vitæ, doctrinæ, iuſticiæque,
Primum ſemper habe, duo propter ſcandala linque.

Shewing and declaring by many authorities both of canonicall ſcriptures and out of the law, and by euidẽt demonſtratiõ of experience: that the Friers firſt had no verity of life, becauſe they were full of hypocriſy: neither had they verity of doctrine, becauſe in their hart they bare gall, and in theyr toung hony: neither verity of iuſtice, becauſe they vſurped other mens offices. And thus concluding wͭ the ſame, cauſed agayn to be read the ſayd priuileges, with ỷ conſtitution aboue ſpecified. And ſo expoũding place by place, did argue and proue that the ſayd conſtitution, in no part was enacuat or infringed by ỷ priuilegies aforeſayd. Which thing being declared he added moreouer, that wher as the Friers ſay (ſayd he) that I ſhould be preſent in the obteining of the priuileges, I graunt it to be true, & when word came to me thriſe therof, I went to the Pope reclayming & requiring the ſayd priuileges to be reuoked. But the next day after, it ſo pleaſed the Pope to ſend me out abroad vpon weighty affayres, ſo that then the matter had no end. After that, we ſent alſo other meſſengers with our letters, for the ſame cauſe vnto the Court of Rome, whom the Friers ſay not to haue preuailed, but they lye therein. For the ſayd meſſengers agayne brought vs letters, from the chief of the court of Rome, ſealed wͭ their ſeales which letters, we haue diuers times preſented to our king & wil ſhortly ſhew them vnto you all. In the which letters, the Lord Pope hath promiſed the ſayd priuiledges, either to be vtterly abrogate, or els to be mitigated with ſome more playnely interpretation, of the which we truſt ſhortly to haue the publicke Bulle or writ from the Pope.

Veritie in three partes conſiſteth.

The Friers proued with a lye.

At laſt, the ſayd Biſhop required & deſired of all there of what Dioces, or countrey ſo euer they were: that they would copy out the foreſayd priuiledges, and ſend them abroad into their coũtries, that all men might ſee what they were, and how far they did extẽd. In fine, the matter comming into open diſputation, it was cõcluded by M. Giles one of the Auſtine Friers (who was thought to be moſt reaſonable of all the other Friers, in this wiſe) that after his ſentence, the Prelates were in the truer part. &c. Hæc ex Godfrido de Fontanis.

The Friers priuilegies confuted in diſputation at Paris.

¶Concerning this wrangling contention betwene the Vniuerſity and Friers of Fraunce heretofore mentioned, wherof partly the original cauſe there may be vnderſtand by that which hath bene ſayd to riſe vpon certaine priuilegyes gies graũted by popes to the Friers, to intermedle in matters of Pariſh churches: As to heare confeſſiõs, to preach and teach, with power therto annexed to gather for theyr labor, to bury within their houſes, and to receiue impropriations, &c. becauſe it were long here to deſcribe the full circumſtances therof, alſo becauſe the ſayd contention dyd endure a long time not onely in Fraũce but alſo came ouer to englãd: The whole diſcourſe therof more ample (Chriſt willing) ſhalbe declared in the beginning of the next booke folowing, when we come to the ſtory of Armachanus.

About what time & yere, this brawle was in the Uniuerſity of Paris betwene the Friers and Prelats there, as hath bene declared: the like contẽtion happened alſo in the vniuerſity of Oxford in the yeare aboue prefixed. 1354. ſaue onely that the ſtrife amõg the maiſters of Paris as it roſe vpon Frierly ceremonies, ſo it went no farther, then brawling wordes and matter of excõmunication: but this tumult riſing of a dronken cauſe, proceeded further vnto bloudy ſtripes. The firſt originall wherof began in a tauerne, betwene a ſcholer & the good man of the houſe. who falling together in altercatiõ, grew to ſuch heat of words, that the ſtudent (contra ius hoſpitij) poured the wine vpon the head of the hoſt and brake his head with the quart pot. Upon this occaſion geuen, eftſoones parts began to be taken betwene townes men & the ſcholers. In ſomuch that a grieuous ſedition & conflict folowed vpõ the ſame: wherin many of the townes men were wounded, & to the number of 20. ſlayn. Diuers alſo of the ſcolers grieuouſly hurt. The ſpace of 2. dayes this hurly burly continued. Upon the ſecond day, certain religious and deuout perſõs ordeined a ſolemne proceſſiõ general, to pray for peace. Yet notwithſtanding, all yͤ proceſſion as holy as it was, it would not bring peace. In the which proceſſion (the ſkirmiſh ſtil waxing hoat) one of the ſtudentes being hardly purſued by the towneſmen, for ſuccour in his flight, came running to the Prieſt or Frier, which caried about (as the maner was) the pixe: thinking to finde refuge at the preſẽce of the tranſubſtãtiated God of the aultar there caried & inboxed. Notwithſtanding, the God there not preſẽt, or els not ſeing him, or els peraduẽture being a ſleepe: the ſcholer foũd there ſmall helpe. For the townesmen in the heate of the chaſe, forgetting belike the vertue of the popes tranſubſtãtiation, folowed him ſo hard, that in the preſẽce of the pixe they brake his head, & woũded him greuouſly. This done, at length ſome peace or truce for that day was taken. The next morow folowing, other towneſmẽ in the villagies about, ioyning with the towneſmẽ of Oxford: confederated together in great force and power to ſet vpon the ſtudẽtes there, and ſo did, hauing a black flag borne before thẽ, and ſo inuaded the Uniuerſity men. wherupõ, the ſcholers being ouermatched & compelled to flee into their haules and hoſtles, were ſo purſued by theyr enemies, that 20. of the dores of their haules and chambers were broke open, & many of them wounded, and (as it is ſayd) ſlain and throwen into priuies: their books with kniues and bils cut all in pieces, and much of theyr goods caried away. And thus the ſtudentes of that Uniuerſity being conquered by the towneſmen of Oxford, and of the country about, departed & left the vniuerſity. So that for a time, the ſcholes there, and all ſchole acts did vtterly ceaſe from all exerciſe of ſtudy, except onely Mertõ Colledge haule, with a few other remayning behinde.

A ſeditious commotion betweene the townes men and the ſcholers in the vniuerſitie of Oxforde.

Proceſsion for peace. The holie proceſſion would bring no peace.

Tranſubſtãtiation will not helpe in time of need

A conqueſt of the ſcholers of Oxforde.

This being done the 12. day of February, the Queene at the ſame time being at woodſtock, was brought to bed, and purified on the firſt Sonday in Lent with great ſolẽnity of Iuſting: About which time, the Biſhop of Lincoln their Dioceſane hearing of this exceſſiue outrage, ſendeth his inhibition to all Parſons and Prieſtes, forbidding thẽ throughout all Oxford, none to celebrate Maſſe or any diuine ſeruice in the preſence of any lay perſõ within the ſaid Towne of Oxford, interdicting withal the whole Town. which interdiction endured the ſpace of a whole yere and more.

The vniuerſitie of Oxford diſſolued for a tyme.

The towne of Oxford interdicted.

The king alſo ſẽt thether his Iuſtices to examine and enquire of the matter. Before whom diuers lay men & of the clergy were indicted. And foure of yͤ chiefe burgeſes of the ſayd towne were indicted, & by the kinges commaundement ſent to the tower of London, were there impriſoned. At length through much labor of the nobles, the king ſo tooke vp the matter, that ſending his writings vnto all Shiriffes in England, offered pardõ to all & ſingular ſtudents of that Uniuerſity, (whereſoeuer diſperſed) for that tranſgreſſion, whereby the Uniuerſity in ſhort time was repleniſhed againe as before. Moreouer was graunted to the Uicechauncellor or Commiſſary (as they terme him) of the towne and Uniuerſity of Oxford, to haue the aſſiſe of bread, ale, wine, and all other victuals, the Maior of the ſayd town being excluded. Alſo was graũted and decreed, that yͤ commõs of Oxford ſhould geue to the vniuerſity of Oxford 200. pound ſterling in part of ſatiſfaction for theyr exceſſes: reſerued notwithſtanding to euery one of the ſtudents his ſeuerall action agaynſt any ſeuerall perſon of yͤ towneſmen. &c.

Graunted to the Commiſſary of Oxford to haue the aſſiſe of bread and ale and other priuilegies aboue the Maior of the towne.

About the yeare of our Lord. 1354. The king with the conſent of his counſell, reuoked home agayne out of Flaunders the ſtaple of wolle, with all things thereunto appertayning, & ſtabliſhed the ſame in ſondry places within the realme, namely in weſtminſter. Canterbury, Chicheſter, Briſtow, Lincolne, and in Hulle. which Staple after an. 1362. was tranſlated ouer into Calice.

Of Simon Iſlip Archbiſhop of Canterb. mentioned a litle before, pag. 363. I read in the ſaid author aboue ſpecified, that he by his letters patent directed to al parſons & vicars within his prouince: ſtraitly charged them & theyr Pariſhioners vnder payne of excõmunication, not to abſtaine frõ bodely labor, vpõ certaine Saints dayes, which before were wont to be hallowed & conſecrated to vnthrifty idlenes. Item, that to Prieſts ſhould be geuen no more for their yearely ſtipend, but 3. pound 6. s. 8. pence, whiche made diuers of them to robbe and ſteale. &c. an. 1362. The next yeare following, which was 1363. the foreſayd Kyng Edward kept his Parliament at London in the month of October: wherin was prohibited, no gold nor ſiluer to be worne in kniues, girdles, brooches, ringes, or in any other ornament belonging to the body, except the wearer might diſpend 10. poũd by yeare. Itẽ, that none ſhould weare either ſilks or coſtly furres, except ſuch as might diſpẽd 100 pound by yeare. Alſo that Marchaunt venterers ſhould not export ouer any marchaũdiſe out of the realme, or ſeek for wines in other country: wherby other nations ſhould be conſtrayned rather to ſeeke to vs. &c. But none of thys did take any great effect.

An holſome decree of a good Archb. not to abſtaine from bodely labour vpon certaine holy dayes.

A parliament

After this Simon Iſlip as is aboue recorded, folowed Simon Langham, then w. wittleſey, after whome next in the place ſucceeded Simon Sudbury.

Simon Sudbury Archb. of Cant.

Much about the ſame time, the Nunnes of S. Bridgits order began firſt. About which time alſo was builded the Queenes Colledge in Oxford, by Queene Philippe of England, wife to king Edward the third Circa annum domini. 1360.

The Nuns of S. Bridges order.

Moreouer in the time of this Pope Innocent, Fryer Iohn Lyle Biſhop of Ely, moued with certaine iniuries (as he thought) done to him by the Lady Blanche, made his complaynt to the Pope. who ſending down his curſe to the Biſhop of Lincolne, and other Prelates to be executed vpon the aduerſaries of the Biſhoppe of Ely: commaunded them, that if they did know any of the ſayd aduerſaries dead and buried (that notwithſtanding) they ſhould cauſe the ſame to be taken vp: which alſo they performed accordingly, of whom ſome had bene of the Kings counſell. wherefore the king being diſpleaſed and not vnworthely, did trouble and moleſt agayn the ſayd Prelats. This comming to the Popes hearing, certayne were directed downe from the court of Rome, in the behalf of the foreſayd Biſhop of Elye: who meeting, with the Byſhop of Rocheſter the kinges treaſurer, deliuered vnto him being armed, letters from the Biſhop of Rome, the tenour wherof was not known. which done, they incontinent auoyded away. But certayne of the kinges ſeruaunts purſuing, did ouertake them: of whom ſome they impriſoned, ſome they brought to the iuſtices, and ſo were condemned to be hanged. Wherein may appeare what reuerence the Popes letters in this kinges dayes had in this realme of England, Ex Chro. Walſing. This Pope Innocẽt ordeined the feaſt of the holy ſpeare, and of the holy nayles.

This Ladye Blanch was Duckeſſe of Lancaſter.

Dead men excommunicated by the Pope.

The Popes meſſengers hanged.

The feaſt of the ſpeare and of the holy nailes.

And here to make an end of this fourth booke, now remayneth after our order and cuſtome before begunne, to proſecute the race of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, in this foreſayd fourth booke conteined, beginning where before we left, pag. 170. at Lancfrancus.

¶ A Table

A Table of the Archbiſhoppes of Caunterbury, in this fourth Booke conteyned.

34. Lanfrancus. 19.

Polyd. Virg. lib. 9. numbereth this Lanfrancus to be the 33. Archbiſh. But by the count of other authors (namely by ẏ chronicle of the Monke of Douer) ſemeth to be deceiued as he was in the 28. yeares of Dunſtane, whiche in deede did ſit but 19. or 26. at ẏ moſt. This errour of Pol. ſeemeth to come by leauing out either Elſius, which was the 23. or by leauing out Elfricus, which was the 26. as in ſome authors I finde.

Moreouer here is to bee noted, that although the ſayd Elfricus were left out, yet Lanfrancus cannot be. 33.

Note alſo, that in the table of the 3. Booke before, after Siricius to put in Sanctus Aluredus. whiche in the order of Archbiſhops I left out in the end of the 3. booke. pag. 170.

This Lanfrancus was an Italian, and a ſtout Champion of the Pope. After his ſtubberne diſſention with Thomas Archbiſhop of Yorke, he wrot againſt Berengarius, intitulyng hys Booke Opus Scintillarum. pag. 172.

Alſo the ſame Lancfranke builded the newe Churche at Canterbury, and pluckt downe the olde. By him was builded the Church of S. Gregorye. At length he was expulſed by king Wil. Rufus.

35. Anſelmus. 16.

Of this Anſelmus, and the ſtrife betwene him and the king, looke in the pag. 185.

36. Radulphus. 8.

Under Rad. the order of Ciſtercians began.

37. Guilielmus Curboil. 13.

By this W. the newe worke of the Church of S. Martines at Douer was builded.

38. Theobaldus. 24.

By this Theobald, Monkes were firſt brought into ẏ church of Douer. He was expulſed by king Stephen. In his time the church of S. Gregory was burned at Cant.

39. Tho. Becket. 9.

Of the life and death of thys Becket, ſee the pag. 205.

Ex hiſtor. Crickladenſi.

Ex Crikeladenſi. Magnates in Anglia interdixerunt, ne quis martyrem Thomam nominaret ne quis eius miracula prædicaret, intermināntes minas mortis ſeu maximarum pœnarum omnibus confitentibus eum fuiſſe martyrem, & miracula eius prædicantibus. &c.

40. Richardus. 10.

This Richard was a Monk: in his time Chriſtes Church at Canterbury was burned.

41. Baldwinus. 7.

Betweene this Baldwine & the Monkes was great diſcord. He ſuſpended the Prior from his Priorſhip, and 22. Monkes from all ſeruice. He cauſed the Subprior with all his adherēts to be excommunicate through al Kent.

42. Hubertus. 14.

In the time of thys Hubert the Chappell of Lamheth was pluckt downe. Alſo the Church of Douer was burned.

43. Stephanus Langhton. 22.

This Stephen with the Monkes of Caunterbury, were expulſed by king John.

This Stephen intending to geue orders in the Chappell of Lamheth, was ſtopped by the Monkes of Cant. through their appeale and prohibition. wherfore he required Euſtace Biſhop of London, to miniſter the ſame orders in the Church of Saynct Paule.

In his time fell great variaunce betweene the Monkes of Rocheſter and the Monkes of Canterb. for the election of their B. which election the Monkes of Cant. would not admitte, before the Rocheſter Monkes had preſented the Byſhops ſtaffe in the Church of Cant. ſo that both the Churches ſent their meſſengers to the court of Rome.

44. Richardus Magnus. 4.

At the conſecration of this Richarde, contention roſe betwene the Biſhop of Rocheſter and biſhop of Bath, who ſhould conſecrate him.

Item, betwene the ſayd Richard and the Monkes of Canterbury fell a greuous diſcord about certayne libertyes belonging to the Archb.

The ſayd Archbiſhop for certayne quarels agaynſt the king, went up to Rome, who dyed in Tuſcia.

After this Richard, the election of 3. Archbiſh. was caſſate at Rome: of Rodulphus de noua villa, of John Prior of Cant. John Blund.

45. Edmund of Abenden. 7.

This Edmund was called S. Edmund. At whoſe election the Prior of Douer thinking to be preſent, as at the mariage of his Mother, was not permitted by the Monkes of Canterbury. For the which iniurye he appealed and went to Rome to complayne, not againſt the elect, but agaynſt the election: where he obteined of the Pope for all the Priors and ſucceſſors of Douer, to haue full intereſt in the election of the Archbi. beſides other priuiledgies which he obteined, percaſe not without ſome good ſtore of mony. Afterward ẏ Monkes of Cant. accuſed him to the Archbiſhoppe as though he ſtood agaynſt the perſon of the elect, & ſo obtayned of the Archbi. being angrye with him, to haue brought him under the chapter of Canter. there to be puniſhed. whereupon the Prior ſeing him ſo deſtitute of all helpe of Lawyers, was conſtrayned in the foreſayd chapter to crye peccaui. Then being ſuſpended from his Priorſhip was at lēgth ſet home to Douer, being compelled firſt to ſet his hand to a certayn compoſition betwene him & the foreſayd Monkes.

The ſayd Edmūd Archb. alſo hauyng ſome quarell agaynſt the king, went up to Rome, and dyed before his comming home.

46. Bonifacius. 25.

46. Bonifacius. 25.

In the time of this Boniface Pope Gregory wickedly graunted to king Henry 3. (for the getting of the kingdome of Sicile whiche belonged not to him to geue, nor to the other to take,) tenthes of goodes temporall and ſpirituall, for fiue yeares, Item, all the firſt yeares fruites of churches that ſhould be vacant for 5. yeares. Item, halfe of all the goodes of beneficed men not reſident at their benefices. Item, all Legaces not diſtinctly geuen. And yet the kingdome of Sicile neuer came to his hands whiche belonged to Manfredus, ſonne of Fredericke Emperour. Strife betweene thys Boniface, and the prior of Cant. Item, betwene him and biſhop of Roff. Item, betweene him & the Chapter of Lincolne, all which was after agreed. Chro. Doueren. fol. 20. pag. 2.

Strife in winchester, about chuſing the biſhop after yͤ death of Ayonarus yͤ kings Brother.

Strife in the Conuocation whiche Boniface did holde at Lambheth. In the which councell were recited the ſtatutes of Octobonus and other new ſtatutes made: Agaynſt whiche, J. Hemelingforde the Kynges Chaplaine with other moe, and prince Edward on the Kynges behalfe did appeale. Chro. Douer. fol. 21.

Under this Boniface Archb. Tunbridge & Hadlo firſt came vnder the cuſtody of the Archb. of Cant.

Maiſter John of Exeter bought the Biſhoprick of winchester for 6000. marks: which being known he was fayne to pay the ſame ſumme agayne to the Pope, and ſo was ſent home.

Boniface the Archb. being in the partes of Sebaudia. an. 1262, fell an other alteration betwene the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury on the one part, and the Prior and Chapter of Douer on the other part. which two houſes almoſt were neuer in quiet, and all about certayne liberties and Priuilegies: as for making the ſubprior, for receiuing in of monkes, and for viſitations of the Church of Douer.

An. 1268. Boniface Archb. interdicted the Cittye of London, becauſe in the ſame Cittye the Archb. of Yorke did holde vp his Croſſe, the Archbiſhoppe of Cant. being there preſent, the king holding then hys Parliament at weſtminſter.

This Archb. died in the partes of Sebaudia.

John Prior of Canterbury was elected by the Monkes agaynſt the kinges minde, but by the Pope refuſed.

Adam Chilinden was elect, but he reſigned his electiõ to the Pope.

47. Robert Kilwarby. Frier. 6.

In the time of this Robert Kilwarby, appeale was taken agaynſt the Chapter of Canterbury by the Biſhop of winchester, of worceſter, and Exceter: for the which cauſe the ſayd Byſhops wẽt vp to Rome to proſecute the appeale. The matter was becauſe they did not theyr obedience to the Monkes of Caunterbury, the ſee beyng empty.

walter Giffard Archb. of Yorke, going toward the generall councell, bare vp his croſſe through the middle of Kent, in the time of this Robert Archbiſhop of Canterbury. an. 1272.

By Pope Gregory 10. in the generall Councell at Lyons, all the orders of Fryers were put downe 4. orders onely except, that is Dominicks, Franciſcans, Carmilites, and Auguſtines.

This Robert Kilwarby by the commaundemẽt of Pope Nicholas was made Cardinall of Rome, Biſhop of Portenſis.

An vntruth in Polyd. Virgil.

where is to be noted an vntruth in Polid Virgill, which ſayth that he was made cardinal by pope Gregory, which could not be.

48. John Peckham. 13

Robert Burnell Byſhop of Bathe was elected, but by the Pope refuſed: For whom John Peckham a gray frier, was placed by Pope Nicho.

In the firſt yeare of this Frier Peckham, will. wikewane Archb. of Yorke comming from his conſecration at Rome to Douer, bare vp his Croſſe thorough the midſt of Kent, wherat was no litle adoe.

Robert Gernemine Archdeacon of Cant. went to law to Rome for the liberties & poſſeſſions of his Archdeaconſhip 2. yeares and there dyed.

In his time alſo another wrãgling fell betwene yͤ Monks of Cãnt. & the Monkes of Douer, in yͤ time of this J. Peckhã; for admitting certayne Nouices of Douer into orders. Ex chr. Monach. Douer. fol. 42.

This Peckham holding a councell at Lambheth ordeyned diuers ſtatutes, and cauſed the ordinances of the councell of Lyons, and of Boniface Archb. of Cant. and his predeceſſor to be obſerued.

Great ſtrife and hatred was betwene this Pecham and Thomas Byſhop of Hereford. who being excõmunicated by Peckham, appealed to Rome, & went to the Pope.

The Prior & couent of Cant. made their appeale agaynſt this archb. Peckham, that he ſhould not cõſecrate walter le Schamell new elect biſhop of Saliſbury, in any other place, except onely in the church of Cant. but by theyr leaue and licence firſt obteined. Notwithſtãding the archb. nothing regarding their appeale, proceeded in the conſecration of the ſayd biſhop nere to the towne of Reading, whereupon the Prior and Couent ceaſed not to proſecute theyr appeale agaynſt the Archbiſhop.

Betwene Richard Ferringes archdeacõ of Cãt. of the one party, and the Barõs of Douer of yͤ other party, the ſame yeare fell an other like wrãgling, for that the Archdeacon claymed to viſite the Church of Douer, contrary the barons affirmed, that none had nor ſhould haue to do there to order or diſpoſe in ſpirituall matters but onely the archb. & the Prior and couent of S. Martin. Ex eod. chron. fol. 46.

After the death of william wicwane Archb. of Yorke, John de Roma ſucceeded after him and cõming from his conſecratiõ at Rome to Douer, bare his croſſe through the midle of Kent, contrary to the inhibition of John Peckham.

48. Rob. Winchelſey. 19

This Rob. which was archb. in the latter time of K. Edward the 1. for certeine diſpleaſure of yͤ K. cõceiued againſt him, departed yͤ realme, & in his baniſhmẽt remayned 2. or 3. yeares. And about the beginning of the raign of K. Edwa. the 2. was reſtored againe. an. 1309. Ex chro. Rich. 2.

Thus few Archb. of Cant. we finde, with whom kinges haue not had ſome quarell or other. The cauſe betweene the K. and him (ſayth mine author) was this: that the K. accuſed him to Pope Clement to diſturbe his Realme, and to take part with rebels. &c. Ex chro. S. Albani.

This Robert alſo excommunicated walter Biſhop of Couent. for holding with the King and Peter Gaueſton againſt the ordinances of the Barons wherefore the ſayd Biſhop appealed to the Pope, agaynſt whom the Archb. ſent Adam Mirimouth.

This Adam Mirimouth was compiler of the ſtory of K. Edw.

In the time of this Robert Archbiſhop, the order of Templaries were aboliſhed by Pope Clemẽt 5. in the councell of Vienna with this ſentence diffinitiue. Quanquam de iure non poſſumus, tamẽ ad plenitudinem poteſtatis dictum ordinem reprobamus.

50. Gualter Reynald. 15

After the deceaſe of Robert winchelſey, who departed. an. 1312. Thomas Cobham a learned man was elected by full cõſent of the Monkes: who came to Auinion, to haue his election confirmed, But the Pope reſeruing the vacant ſeat to his owne handes put in walter Reynald B. of worceſter Chauncellor of England, who gouerned the ſeat 15. yeares.

	The chronicler of S. Albans, recordeth alſo how in the dayes of this Archb. an. 1319. certayne Lepers conſpiring with the Turkes and Iewes went about to empoiſonate, and infect all Chriſtendome, by inuenemíng their fountains, lakes, pits, barrels, and ſuch other places. Of the which crime diuers of thẽ being conuict, were worthely burned in Fraunce. About the which yeare, the ſayd author maketh alſo relation, how in ẏ realme of England much morain fell among the beaſtes: in ſo much, that the dogs eating vpon their fleſh (infected belike by the waters and fountaines) fell downe dead incontinent. Neyther durſt men for that cauſe almoſt taſt of any beefe. an. 1318. 1319. Ex Chron. Alban. This Walter Archb. taking part with the Queen Iſabell agaynſt K. Edward her husband, dyed the ſame yere in which he was depoſed. an. 1237. Ex chr. S. Albani. After Walter the Archb. as affirmeth the chron. of S. Alban, ſucceeded Simon Mepham. Of whom I marueil that Polydor, maketh no word mention: belike he ſate not long, after folowed I. Stratford.
51. Iohn Stratford. 29.	In the ſtorye of Adam Mirimouth is recorded that this I. Stratforde intending to viſite the dioces of Northfolk, was not receiued by the Biſhop, the chapter and clergy there, alledgyng that he obſerued not the ordinarye Canon therein. To whom the Archb. ſayd agayne, he had the Popes letters and ſhewed the ſame. But the other aunſwered, that thoſe letters were falſly obteined and tended to the ſuppreſſion of the Clergy, & therfore they would not obey: wherfore the Archb. excommunicated the Biſhop, and ſuſpended the Prior, & interdicted the couent. an. 1343.
52. Ioh. Offord. 10. monethes.	M. Iohn Offord Chauncellor of England was elected and confirmed Archb. of Canter. but not conſecrated, and ſate but 10. monethes, about the yeare of our Lord 1350. Peſtilentia in Anglia.
53. Tho. Braidwarden. 1.	This Tho. Bradwarden following after I. Stratford ſat not long but died within 10 moneths of the plague, as they ſay. Which was called then the firſt great plague in England, raging ſo ſore in all quarters, that it was thought ſcarce the tenth part of men to be left aliue.
54. Simõ Iſlepe. 17.	In the time of Simõ Iſlepe which folowed after Bradwarden: K. Edward. an. 1362. is reported after the blinde ſuperſtition of thoſe daies, to offer in the church of Weſtminſter the veſtimentes wherin S. Peter did celebrate maſſe. Which belike wer well kept from mothes, to laſt ſo long. Ex Chron. Alban. The ſame Simon Iſlepe, among other conſtitutions ordeined through all Churches & Chappelles vnder paine of excõmunication: that no man ſhould abſtayne from bodely labors vpon certayne Saints dayes, as is before touched. Which fact of his is not a litle noted in our monkiſh hiſtoryes. This Simon builded Canterbury Colledge in Oxford.

The Concluſion of this Fourth Booke.

The concluſion of this booke. Antichriſt in his pride.

¶ Foraſmuch as Sathan being cheyned vp all this while, for the ſpace of a thouſand yeares, beginneth about this time to be loſed and to come abroad, according to the forewarning of S. Iohns Reuelation. Therefore to conclude the fourth Booke, wherein ſufficiently hath bene deſcribed the exceſſiue pride and pompe of Antechriſt, floriſhing in his ruffe and ſecuritye, from the time of William Conquerour hitherto: now (Chriſt willing & aſſiſting vs thereunto) we minde in theſe latter Books hereafter following, in order of hiſtory to expreſſe the latter perſecutions and horrible troubles of the Church, rayſed vp by Satanas in his miniſter Antechriſt, with the reſiſtaunce agayne of Chriſtes Church agaynſt him. And ſo to proſecute (by the mercifull grace of Chriſt) the proceeding and courſe of times till we come at length to the fall and ruine of the ſayd Antechriſt. To the intent that if any be in ſuch errour to thinke that Antechriſt is yet to come, let him conſider and ponder well the tragicall rages, the miſerable and moſt ſorrowfull perſecutions, murders, and vexations of theſe latter 300. yeares now following, and I doubt not but he will be put out of all doubt to know, that not onely Antechriſt is already come, but alſo to know where he ſitteth, & how he is now falling apace (the Lord Chriſt be thãked for euer) to his decay and confuſion.

The looſing out of Sathan.

THE FIFT BOOKE CONTEYNING THE LAST 300. YEARES FROM THE LOOSING OUT OF SATAN.

The fifte booke.

THVS hauing diſcourſed in theſe former Bookes, the order and courſe of yeares, from the firſt tying vp of Sathan vnto the yeare of our Lorde 1360. I haue a little ouerpaſſed the ſtint of time in the Scriptures appoynted, for the looſing out of hym againe. For ſo it is wrytten by S. John Apocal. 20. that after a thouſande yeares, Satanas the olde Dragon ſhalbe let looſe againe for a ſeaſon, &c.

The yeares and tyme of looſing out Satan examined.

For the better explanation of the whych myſterie, let vs firſt conſider the context of the ſcripture: afterward, let vs examine by hiſtory and courſe of times, the meaning of the ſame. And firſt to recite the wordes of the Apocal. the text of the Prophecy is this, cap. 23.

Apoc. 20.

> And I ſaw an Aungell deſcending from heauen, hauing a kay of the bottomleſſe pitte, and a great chaine in his hande. And hee tooke the Dragon the olde Serpente, whych is the deuill and Satanas, and bounde hym for a thouſand yeares, and put hym in the bottomleſſe dungeon and ſhutte him vp, and ſigned him with hys ſeale, that he ſhould no more ſeduce the Gentiles, till a thouſande yeares were expired. And after that he muſt be looſed againe for a little ſpace of time. And I ſawe ſeates, and they ſate vpon them: and iudgement was geuen vnto them, and the ſoules I ſawe of them which were beheaded for the teſtimonie of Ieſus. &c.

By theſe wordes of the Reuelation heere recited, three ſpeciall times are to be noted.

1. Firſt, the being abroade of Sathan to deceyue the world.
2. The binding vp of him.
3. Thirdly, the loſing out of him againe, after a thouſand yeares conſummate, for a time.

The place of the Apocal. 20. Expounded, for the looſing out of Satã.

Concerning the interpretation of whych times, I ſee the common opinion of many to be deceiued by ignorance of hyſtories, and ſtate of things done in the church: ſuppoſing that the chaining vp of Sathan for a thouſand yeares, ſpoken of in the Reuelation, was meant from the birthe of Chriſte our Lorde. wherein I graunt that ſpiritually the ſtrength and dominion of Sathan in accuſing & condemning vs for ſinne, was caſt downe at the paſſion and by the paſſion of Chriſt our ſauiour, and locked vp not onely for a thouſande yeares, but for euer and euer. Albeit as touching the malitious hatred and furie of that Serpent, againſt the outward bodies of Chriſtes poore ſaints (which is the heele of Chriſt) to afflicte and torment the Churche outwardly: That I iudge to be meant in the Reuelation of S. John, not to be reſtrained til the ceaſing of thoſe terrible perſecutions of the primitiue Church. At what time it pleaſed God to pity the ſorrowfull affliction of his poore flocke, being ſo long vnder perſecution, the ſpace of three hundred yeares, and ſo to aſſwage their griefes and torments. which is meant by binding vp of Sathan, worker of all thoſe miſchiefes: vnderſtanding thereby, that forſo much as the Deuill prince of thys worlde had now by the death of Chriſt the ſonne of God loſt al his power and intereſt againſt the ſoule of man, ſhoulde turne his furyous rage & malice which he had to Chriſt againſt the people of Chriſt, (which is meant by the heele of the ſeede. Geneſ. 3.) in tormenting their outward bodies. which yet ſhuld not be for euer, but for a determinate time, when as it ſhoulde pleaſe the Lord to bridle the malice, and ſnaffle the power of the olde Serpent, and geue reſt vnto his Church for the terme of a thouſand yeares. which time being expired, the ſayd ſerpent ſhould be ſuffred looſe againe for a certaine or a ſmall time. Apoc. 20.

What the looſing of Satan doth meane in Scripture.

And thus to expound this Prophetical place of ſcripture I am led by three reaſons.

Three reaſons. The firſt reaſon.

The firſt is, for that the binding vp of Sathan, and cloſing hym in the bottomles pit by the Angell, importeth as much that hee was at libertye, raging and doyng miſchiefe before. And certeſſe thoſe ſo terrible and ſo horrible perſecutiõs of the primitiue time vniuerſally through the whole world, during the ſpace of three hundreth yeares of the Church, do declare no leſſe. wherein it is to be thought and ſuppoſed, that Sathan all that time, was not faſtened and cloſed vp.

The 2. reaſon.

The ſecond reaſon mouing me to thinke that the cloſing vp of Sathan was after the ten perſecutions of the primitiue Church, is taken out of the twelfe chapter of the Apocalips. where we read, that after the woman (meaning the Church) had trauailed forth her man childe, the olde Dragon the Deuill, the ſame time being caſt downe from heauen, drawing the thirde part of the ſtarres wyth him: ſtoode before the woman with great anger, and perſecuted her (that is the Church of God) with a whole floude of water (that is, wyth aboundance of all kindes of torments) and from thence went moreouer to fight agaynſt the reſidue of her ſide, and ſtoode vpon the ſands of the ſea, wherby it appeareth that he was not as yet locked vp.

The 3. reaſon.

Apoc, cap. 13.

The thirde reaſon I collect out of the Apocalyps thirteenth Chapter, where is wrytten of the beaſt, ſignifying the Emperiall Monarchie of Rome: that hee had power to make warre fourtie and two monethes. By the whych monethes is meant no doubt, the tyme that the Dragon, and the perſecuting Emperours, ſhould haue in afflicting the Saintes of the primitiue Church. The computation of which fortie two monethes (counting euery moneth for a Sabboth of yeares, that is for ſeuen yeares, after the order of Scripture) riſeth to the ſumme (counting from the paſſion of the Lord Chriſt) three hundred yeares lacking ſixe, at what time Maxentius the laſt perſecutour in Rome fighting againſt Conſtantinus, was drowned wyth his ſouldiours, like as Pharao was drowned perſecuting ye children of Iſrael in the red ſea. Vnto the which xlij. moneths, or Sabbothes of yeares, if yee adde the other ſixe yeares wherein Licinius perſecuted in the Eaſt: ye ſhal finde iuſt three hundred yeres, as is ſpecified before in the firſt booke of thys volume, pag. 97.

Xlij. monethes in the Apocal. cap. 13. examined.

What time Satan was tied vp.

After the which fortie and two monethes being expired, manyfeſt it is that the furie of Sathan, that is, hys violent malice and power ouer the Saints of Chriſt, was diminiſhed and reſtrained vniuerſally through the whole world.

Thus then the matter ſtanding euident, that Sathan after 300. yeares, counting from the paſſion of Chriſt, began to be chayned vp, at what time the perſecution of the primitiue Church began to ceaſe: Nowe let vs ſee, howe long thys binding vp of Sathan ſhoulde continue, which was promiſed in the booke of the Reuelation to be a thouſand yeares. which thouſand yeares, if yee adde to the xlij. monethes of yeares, that is, to 294. yeares: they make 1294. yeares, after the paſſion of the Lord. To theſe moreouer adde the 30. yeares of the age of Chriſt, and it commeth to the yeare of our Lord 1324. which was the yeare of the letting out of Sathan, according to the prophecie of the Apocalips.

About what time and yeare Satan was let out, by the cõut of the Apocalips.

The time of Antichriſt, examined.

Unto the which count of yeares doeth not much diſagree that I founde in a certaine olde Chronicle propheſied and wrytten in the latter ende of a booke, which booke was wrytten as it ſeemeth, by a monke of Douer, & remayneth yet in the cuſtodye of William Cary, a Citizen of London: alledging the Propheſie of one Hayncardus a gray Frier, grounded vpon the authoritie of Ioachim the Abbot, propheſying that Antichriſt ſhoulde be borne the yeare from the Natiuitie of Chriſt. 1260. which is, counting after the Lordes paſſion, the very ſame yere and time, when the orders of Friers both Dominickes and Franciſcans began firſt to be ſette vp by Pope Honorius the 3. and by Pope Gregorius 9. which was the yere of our Lord counting after his paſſion. — 1226.

Anno. 1360.

A brief rehearſall of faythfull learned men, which withſtood the proceedings of the Pope.

Thus then to begin wyth the yeare of our Lord. 1360. wherin I haue a litle as is aforeſayd, tranſgreſſed the ſtint of the firſt looſing out of Sathan: we are come now to the time wherin the Lord, after long darknes beginneth ſome reformation of hys Churche, by the diligent induſtrie of ſondry hys faithful and learned ſeruauntes: of whome diuers already we haue foretouched in the former booke before, as namely Guliel. de Sancto Amore, Marſilius Patauinus: Ockam: Robertus Gallus: Robertus Groſted: Petrus de Cugnerijs: Ioannes Rupeſciſſanus: Conradus Hager: Ioannes de Poliaco, Ceſenas, wyth other moe: whych withſtode the corrupt errours, and intollerable enormities of the Byſhop of Rome. Beſide them which about theſe times were put to death by the ſaide biſhop of Rome, as Chaſtilion, & Franciſcus de Arcatara in the booke before recorded: alſo the two Franciſcanes, Martyrs, which were burned at Auinion, mentioned, pag. 391.

Now to theſe (the Lord willing) we will adde ſuch other holy Martyrs and confeſſors, who following after in the courſe of yeares with like zeale and ſtrength of Gods worde, and alſo with like daunger of their liues, gaue the like reſiſtance againſt the enemie of Chriſtes religion, and ſuffered at hys handes the like perſecutions. Firſt beginning wyth that godly man, whoſoeuer he was the author of the Booke (hys name I haue not) intituled the prayer and complaint of the Ploughman; wrytten as it appeareth, about thys preſent time.

The author of the plowmans prayer not knowne.

Which booke as it was faithfully ſet forth by William Tindall, ſo I haue as truely diſtributed the ſame abroade to the Readers handes: neyther chaunging any thyng of the matter, neyther altering many wordes of the phraſe thereof. Although the oldneſſe and age of hys ſpeache and termes be almoſt growne nowe out of vſe: yet thought I it ſo beſt, both for the vtilitie of the booke to reſerue it from obliuion, as alſo in his owne language to let it go abroad, for the more credite and teſtimonie of the true antiquity of the ſame. Adding withal in the margent for the better vnderſtanding of the reader, ſome interpretation of certaine difficult termes and ſpeches, as otherwiſe might perhaps hinder or ſtay the reader. The matter of this complaining prayer of the ploughman, thus proceedeth.

An olde auncient wryting, intitled, The prayer and complaint of the Ploughman.

An olde booke intituled, the ploughmans prayer, written as ſeemeth about Wickliffes tyme.

IESV CHRIST that was ybore of the maid Marie, haue on thy poore ſeruauntes mercie and pitie, and helpe them in their great nede to fight againſt ſinne, and againſt the deuill that is author of ſinne, and more nede nes there neuer to cry to Chriſt for helpe, then it is ryght nowe. For it is fulfilled that God ſayde by Iſay the Prophet: ye riſeth vp erlich to follow drunkenneſſe, and to drinke till it be euen, the harpe and other minſtrelſies beeth in your feaſtes and wine. But the woorke of God ye ne beholdeth not, ne taketh no kepe to the workes of his handes: And therfore my people is take priſoner, for they ne had no cunning. And the noble men of my people deyeden for hunger, and the multitude of my people weren dry for thirſt, and therefore hel hath drawen abroade theyr ſoule, and hath yopened hys mouth wythout any ende. And eftſoones ſayeth Iſay the Prophet: The worde is floten away, and the highneſſe of the people is ymade ſicke, and the earth is infecte of his wonnyers, for they haue broken my lawes, and ychaunged my right, and han deſtroyed mine euerlaſtynge bonde and * forward betwene them & me. And therfore curſing ſhal deuour the earth, and they that wonneth on the erthly ſhallen done ſinne. And therefore the earth tilyars ſhullen waxe woode, and fewe men ſhullen een yleft vpon the earth. And yet ſayth Iſay the Prophet, this ſayeth God, for as much as this people nigheth me with their mouth, & glorifieth me with their lippes, and their hart is farre from me. And they han ydrad more mens commandement, then mine, and more draw to their doctrines, then mine. Therefore will I make a great wondring vnto this people, wiſedome ſhall periſh away from wiſe men, and vnderſtanding of ready men ſhall be yhid. And ſo it ſeemeth that an other ſaying of Iſay is fulfilled, there as God bad hym goe teach the people, and ſayd go forth and ſay to this people: eares haue ye, and vnderſtād ye not, and eyes ye haue and ſight ne know ye not. Make blinde the hart of this people, & make their eares heauy, and cloſe their eyen, leaſt he ſee with his eyen, and yheare with his eares, and vnderſtand with his hart, and by yturned, and ych heale him of his ſicknes. And Iſay ſayd to God: how long Lord ſhall this be? And God ſayd: For to that the cities ben deſolate withouten a wonnier, and an houſe withouten a man.

The complaynt of Eſai applied to theſe times.

* Forward, that is, couenant.

Here is mychel nede for to make ſorow, & to cry to our Lord Ieſu Chriſt hertilich for helpe and for ſuccour, that hee wole forgeue vs our ſinnes, and geue vs grace and cōning to ſeruen him better here after. And God of his endles mercy geue vs grace and cōning trulich to tellen which is Chriſtes law in helping of mens ſoules, for we beth lewde men, and ſinfull men, and vnconning, and if he woll be our helpe and our ſuccour, we ſhullen wel perfourme our purpoſe. And bleſſed be our Lorde God that hideth his wiſdome from wiſe men, and fro ready men, and teacheth it to ſmall children, as Chriſt teacheth in the Goſpell.

Chriſten men haue a law to keepe, the which lawe hath twe parties. Beleue in Chriſt that is God, & is the foundmēt of their law, and vpon this foundement, as he ſayde to Peter, and the goſpel beareth witnes, he woll byelden his Churche, and thys is the firſt party of Chriſtes law. The ſecōd party of this law beth Chriſtes commaundements that beth written in the goſpel, and more verilich in Chriſten mens hartes.

The law of Chriſt ſtandeth on two partes.

And as touching the beleue, we beleuen that Chriſt is God, and that there ne is no God but he. We beleuen neuertheles that in the Godhead there bene three perſons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt, and all theſe three perſons ben one God, and not many Gods, and all they beth ylich mighty, ylich good, and ylich wiſe, and euer haue bene, and euer ſhullen ben. We beleuen this God made the worlde of nought, and man he made after hys owne likeneſſe in Paradiſe that was a land of bliſſe, and gaue him that land for hys heritage, and bad him that he ſhould not eate the tree of knowledge of good and euil, that was * a midde Paradiſe. Then the deuell that was fallen out of heauen for his pride, had enuie to man, and by a falſe ſuggeſtion he made man eate of this tree, and breake the commaundement of God, and tho was man ouercome of the deuill, and ſo he loſt his heritage, and was put out therof into the world that was a land of trauel, and of ſorow vnder the feendes thraldome, to be puniſhed for hys treſpaſſe. There man followed wickednes and ſinne, and God for the ſinne of man ſent a floud into this world, and drownd all mankind ſaue eight ſoules. And after this flud he let mē multiply in the world, and ſo he aſſaied whether man dread him or loued him, & among other he found a man that hight Abraham: this man he prooued whether he loued him and drad him, and bad hym that he ſhould offeren Iſaac his ſonne vppon an hill, and Abraham as a true ſeruaunt fulfilled his Lords commaundement: and for this buxumnes and truth, God ſware vnto Abraham that he would multiply his ſeede as the grauell in the ſea, and as the ſtarres of heauen, and he behight to him and to his heires the lande of beheſt for heritage for euer, gif they wolden ben his true ſeruauntes and keepe his heſts. And God * held him forward, for Iſaac Abrahams ſonne begat Iacob and Eſau: and of Iacob that is ycleped Iſrael, comen Gods people that he choſe to be his ſeruaunts, and to whome he behight the land of beheſt. This people was in great thraldome in Egypt vnder Pharao that was king of Egypt: and they crieden to God that he ſhould deliueren them out of that thraldome, and ſo he did: for he ſent to Pharao, Moſes and his brother Aaron, and bad him deliuer his people to done him ſacrifice: and to fore Pharao he made Moſes done many wonders, or that Pharao wold deliuer his people, and at the laſt by might he deliuered his people out of thraldom, and led them through a deſert toward the lande of beheſt, and there he gaue them a lawe that they ſhulden lyuen after, when they comen into their countrey, and in their way thitherward, the ten commaundements God wrote himſelf in two tables of ſtone: the remnaunt of the lawe he taught them by Moſes his ſeruaunt, how they ſhoulden do euerychone to other, and gif they treſpaſſed againe the law, he ordeined how they ſhoulden be puniſhed. Alſo hee taught them what maner ſacrifices they ſhould doe to him, and he choſe him a people to ben his prieſtes, that was Aaron and his children, to done ſacrifices in the tabernacle, and afterwarde in the temple alſo. He cheſe him the remnant of the children of Leuy to ben ſeruauntes in the tabernacle to the prieſtes, and he ſayde: When ye come into the lande of beheſt, the children of Leuy they ſhullen haue none heritage amōgſt their brethren, for I would be their part, & their heritage, & they ſhullen ſerue me in the tabernacle by dayes and by nightes, and he ordeined that prieſts ſhould haue a part of the ſacrifices that were offred in the tabernacle, and the firſt begotten beaſtes, both of men and beaſtes and other things as the lawe telleth. And the other children of Leuy that ſerued in the tabernacle, ſhould haue tythings of the people to their liueloode, of the which tythings they ſhould geuen the prieſtes the tenth partie in forme of offering. The children of Leuy both prieſtes and other, ſhoulde haue houſes and croftes, and leſewes for their beaſts in the land of beheſt, & none other heritage: & ſo God gaue thē their land of beheſt, and bade them that they ne ſhoulde worſhip no other God then him. Alſo he bade that they ſhould kepe his cōmandements, and gift they did ſo, all their enemies about them ſhuld drede thē and be their ſeruaunts. And giue they worſhipped falſe gods and ſo forſaken his lawes, he bihight them that he woulde bring them out of that land & make them ſerue their enemies, but yet he ſaid he would not benemen his mercy away from them, if they would cry mercy and amende their defautes, and all thys was done on Gods ſide.

Gods loue to man.

And heere is much loue ſhowed of God to man. And who ſo looketh the Bible, hee ſhall finde that man ſhowed him little loue againeward: for when they were come into their heritage, they forgetten their God, and worſhipped falſe gods. And God ſent to them the Prophetes and his ſeruaunts * fele times to bidde them withdrawen them from their ſinnes, and other they haue ſlowen them, or they beaten them, or they ledde them in priſon: and oft times God tooke vpon them great vengeance for their ſinnes, & when they cried after helpen to God, he ſent them helpe and ſuccour. This is the generall proceſſe of the old Teſtament, that God gaue to his people by Moſes his ſeruaunt. And al this Teſtament and this doing ne was but a ſhadow and a figure of a newe Teſtament that was geuen by Chriſt. And it was byhoten by Ieremie the Prophet, as S. Paul beareth witnes in the Epiſtle that he wryteth to the Iewes. And Ieremy ſayeth in this wiſe: Loe dayes ſhall come, God ſayth, and I will make a new band to the houſe of Iſrael, and to the houſe of Iuda, not like the forward that I made with their fathers in that day that I tooke their hand to leade them out of the lande of Egypt, the which forward they maden veyne, and I had Lordſhip ouer them. But this ſhalbe the forward that I wold make with them after thoſe daies: I wil geue my lawes with them in their inwardnes, and I will wryten them in their hearts, and I wil be their God and they ſhould be my people, and after that a man ſhall not teach his neighbour ne his brother. For all (God ſayeth) from the leaſt to the moſt, ſhould knowe me, for I will forgeuen them their ſinnes, and I wil no more thinke on their ſinnes.

Feile times that is, oft tymes.

Thys is the newe Teſtament, that Chriſte both God and man borne of the maid Marye, he taught here in this worlde to bryng man out of ſinne and out of the deuils thraldome and ſeruice to heauen, that is land of bliſſe and heritage to all tho that beleeuen on him and kepen hys commaundements, and for his teaching he was done to the death. But the third day aroſe againe from death to life, and fette Adam and Eue and many other folke out of hell, and afterward he came to his diſciples and comforted them. After he ſtied vp to heauen to his father, and tho hee ſent the holy Ghoſt amonges his diſciples: and in time comming he wol come and demen all mankinde after their werkes, and after the wordes he ſpake vpon earth: ſome to bliſſe, with in body and in ſoul euer withouten end, and ſome to paine withouten end, both in body and in ſoule.

This is our beleue and all chriſten mennes, and this beleue is the firſt poynt of the newe Teſtament that yche Chriſten man is holde ſtedfaſtly to beleue, and rather to ſuffe the death than forſaken this beleue, and ſo this beleue is the bread of ſpirituall life, in forſaking ſinne, that Chriſt brought vs to life.

But for aſmuch as mans liuing ne ſtondeth not all onlych by bread, he hath ygiuen vs a draught of water of life to drink. And who that drinketh of that water, he ne ſhall neuer afterward ben a thurſt. For this water is the cleare teaching of the goſpel, that encloſeth ſeuen commaundements.

Special precepts or leſſons of the Goſpell.

The firſt is this: thou ſhalt loue thy G O D ouer all other things, and thy brother as thy ſelfe, both enemy and frend.

The ſecond commaundement is of meekenes, in the whych Chriſt chardgeth vs to forſake Lordſhip vppon our brethren and other worldly worſhips, and ſo he did himſelfe.

The third commandement, is in ſtonding ſtedfaſtliche in truth and forſaking all falſenes.

The fourth commaundement, is to ſuffer in this world diſeaſes and wrongs withouten ageinſtondings.

The fifth commaundement is mercy, to forgeuen our brethren their treſpaſſe, as often time as they gilteth, without asking of vengeaunce.

The ſixth commaundement is poorenes in ſpirite, but not to ben a begger.

The ſeuenth commaundement, is chaſtity: that is a forſaking of fleſhlich likings diſpleaſing to God. Theſe commaundements encloſen the ten commaundements of the old law, and ſomwhat more.

Thys water, is a bleſſed drinke for chriſten mennes ſoule. But more harme is, much folke would drinke of thys water, but they mowe not come thereto: for God ſayth by Ezechiel the prophet: when iche geue to you the moſt cleane water to drinke, ye troubled that water with your feete, and that water ſo defouled, yee geue my ſhepe to drink. But the clene water is yhid fro the ſhepe, and but gif God cleare this, it is dread leaſt the ſheepe dyen for thurſt. And Chriſt that is the wiſdome of the father of heauen, & well of thys wiſdome that come from heauen to earth to teache man this wiſdome, thorow the which man ſhould ouercome the ſleights of the deuill that is principall enemy of mankinde: haue mercy and pity of his people, and ſhew if it be his will howe thys water is troubled, and by whom: and * ſith clere thys water that his ſheepe mowne drinken hereof, and kele the thurſt of theyr ſoules. Bleſſed mote our Lord bene, for he hath itaught vs in the Goſpell, that ere then hee woulde come to the vniuerſall dome, then ſhould come many in his name and ſayen, that they weren Chriſt: and they ſhoulden done many wonders, and begilen many men. And many falſe prophets ſhoulden ariſen and begylen much folke.

* Heigheth, that is, exalteth.

A Lord thou forgaue ſomtime Peter his ſinnes and alſo Mary Magdaleine, and many other many ſinfull men without ſhriuing to prieſts, & taking penance of prieſts for their ſinnes. And Lord thou art as mighty now as thou were that time, but gif any man haue bynomen thee thy might. And we lewed men beleuen, that there nys no man of ſo great power, and gif any man maketh him ſelfe of ſo great power he * heigheth himſelfe aboue God. And S. Paul ſpeaketh of one that ſitteth in the temple of God & highten him aboue God, and gif any ſuch be, he is a falſe Chriſt.

Obiection of the prieſtes to maintain ſhrift. Anſwere to the obiection.

But hereto ſeyn prieſts, that whē Chriſt made cleane leprous men, he bade them goe and ſhewe them to prieſts. And therefore they ſeyn that it is a commandement of Chriſt, that a man ſhould ſhewen his ſinne to prieſts. For as they ſeyn, lepre in the olde lawe betokeneth ſinne in this new lawe. A Lorde God, whether thine Apoſtles knew not thy meaning as well as men done nowe? And gif they hadden yknow that thou haddeſt cōmanded men to ſhriuen them to prieſts, and they ne taught not that commandement to the people, me thinketh they hadden ben to blame: But I trow they knewen wel that it was none of thy commaundements, ne nedeful to heale of mans ſoule. And as me thinketh the law of lepre, is nothing to the purpoſe of ſhriuing: for prieſtes in the olde law hadden certain poynts and tokens to know whether a man were leprous or not: and gif they were leprous, they hadden power to putten them away from other cleane men, for to that they weren cleane, & then they hadden power to receiuen him among his brethren, and offeren for him a ſacrifice to God.

This nis nothing to the purpoſe of ſhriuing. For there nis but one prieſt, that is Chriſt, that may knowe in certaine the lepre of the ſoule. Ne no prieſt may make the ſoul cleane of her ſinne, but Chriſt that is prieſt after Melchiſedekes order: ne no prieſt here beneath may ywit for certaine whether a man be cleane of hys ſinne or cleane aſſoyled, but gif God tell it him by reuelation. Ne God ordeined not that his prieſtes ſhould ſet men a penance for their ſinne after the quantitie of the ſinne, but this is mannes ordinaunce, and it may well be that there commeth good thereof. But I wote well that God is much vnworſhipped thereby. For men truſt more in his abſolutions, and in his yeres of grace, than in Chriſtes abſolutions, and therby is the people much appaired. For now, the ſorow a man ſhould make for his ſinne, is put away by this ſhrift: and a man is more bold to do ſinne for truſt of thys ſhrift, and of this bodilich penance.

Penaunce for ſinne, is mans ordinance and not Gods.

Miſchiefes that come by auricular confeſſion.

An other miſchiefe is, that the people is ybrought into thys beleefe, that one prieſt hath a greater power to aſſoylen a man of his ſinne and clennere, then an other prieſt hath.

An other miſchiefe is this, that ſome prieſt may aſſoylen them both of ſinne and paine, and in this they taken them a power that Chriſt granted no man in earth, ne he ne vſed it nought on earth himſelfe:

Popiſh prieſtes charged wich Simony.

* Beth, that is, bee.

An other miſchiefe is, that theſe prieſtes ſellen forgeuenes of mens ſinnes and abſolutions for money, and this is an hereſie accurſed that is ycleped ſimonie: and all thilke prieſtes that axeth price for graunting of ſpirituall grace, * beth by holy lawes depriued of their prieſthode, and thilke that aſſenteth to this hereſy. And be they ware, for Helyſe the prophet toke no mony of Naaman when he was made cleane of his lepre, but Gieſi his ſeruant: and therefore * the lepree of Naaman abode with him and wyth his heires euermore after.

Here is much matter of ſorow, to ſee the people thus far ylad away from God and worſhupen a falſ god in earth, that by might and by ſtrength hath ydone away the great ſacrifice of God out of his temple: of which miſchiefe and diſcomfort, Daniel maketh mention, and Chriſt beareth thereof witnes in the goſpell. Who that readeth it vnderſtand it. Thus we haue ytold apertie, how he that ſaith he ſitteth in Chriſts ſtede, *bineth Chriſt his worſhip and his ſacrifice of his people, and maketh the people worſhepen him as a God on earth.

* Bynemeth, that is, taketh away.

Cry we to God, and knowledge we our ſinnes euerichone to other as S. Iames teacheth, and pray we hartilich to God euerichone for other, & then we ſhulen hopen forgeuenes of our ſinnes. For God that is endles in mercy ſayth, that he ne wil not a ſinful mans death, but that he be turned from his ſin & liuen. And therfore, when he came downe to ſaue mankinde, he gaue vs a lawe of loue and of mercy: and bade, gif a man do a treſpas, amend him priuilich: and gif he leue not his ſinne, amend him before witnes: and gif he ne amendeth not, men ſhould tel to the church: and gif he ne amendeth not than, men ſhuld ſhone his company as a publicane, or a man that is misbeleued, and this lawe was yfigured in the law of lepre, who that readeth it, he may ſee the ſooth.

But Lord God, he that ſitteth in thy ſtede, hath vndo thy lawe of mercy and of loue, Lord, thou biddeſt loue enemies as our ſelf: as thou ſheweſt in the goſpell, there as the Samaritane had mercy on the Iewe. And thou biddeſt vs alſo prayen for them that curſen vs, and that defamen vs, & purſuen vs to death. And ſo Lorde thou didſt, & thine apoſtles alſo. But he that clepeth himſelfe thy vicar on earth, and head of thy church, he hath vndone thy lawe of loue and mercy. For gif we ſpeaken of louing our ennemies, he teacheth vs to fight with our enemies, that Chriſt hath forboden. He curſeth and deſireth vengeance to them that ſo doth to hym. Gif any man purſueth him, hee curſeth him, that it is a ſorowe a Chriſten man to hearen the curſinges that they maken, and blaſphemies in ſuch curſing. Of what thing that I know, I may beare true witnes.

The Pope breaketh the law of loue, & mercye.

But gif we ſpeake of louing of our brethren, this is vndone by him that ſayth he is Godsvicar in earth. For Chriſt in the goſpell biddeth vs, that we ſhoulden clepen vs no father vpon earth: But clepen God our father, to maken vs loue perfitlich together. And he clepeth himſelf father of fathers, & maketh many religions, & to euerich a father. But whether is loue and charity encreaſed by theſe fathers and by their religions, or els ymade leſſe? For a Friar ne loueth not a monke, ne a ſecular man neither, nor yet one frier a nother that is not of the order, and it is againward.

The Pope would be a father, but he beareth no loue.

A Lord, me thinketh that there is litle perfection in theſe religions. For Lorde, what charity hauen ſuch men of religion, that knowen how they mown againſtand ſin, and fleen away frō their brethren that ben more vncūning then they ben, & ſuffren them to trauelen in the world withouten their cōūcell as beaſtes? Trulich Lorde, me thinketh that there is but litle charity, and then is there litle perfection. Lorde God, when thou were on earth, thou were among ſinful men to drawen them from ſin, & thy diſciples alſo. And Lord, I trow thou ne grāuteſt not one mā more kūning then an other al for himſelf: and I wote wel that lewd mē that ben laborers, ne trauel not alonlich for himſelf. Lord our belief is, that thou ne wer not of the world, ne thy teaching neither, ne thy ſeruantes that liueden after thy teaching. But all they forſaken the world, and ſo euery chriſten man muſt. But Lorde, whether thou taughteſt menne forſake their brethrens companie and trauell of the worlde, to liuen in eaſe and in reſt, and out of trouble and anger of the worlde, by their brethrens trauell and ſo forſaken the world?

To forſake the world is not to liue in eaſe from company.

A Lord, thou ne taughteſt not a mā to forſaken a pore eſtate and trauel, to ben afterward a Lord of his brethren, or ben a lords fellow and dwelling with Lords, as doth men of theſe new religions. Lord thou ne taughteſt not men of thy religion thus to forſake the world, to liuen in perfection by them ſelfe in eaſe, and by other mens trauell. But Lord they ſayen they ben ybound to thy ſeruiſe, and ſeruen thee both night and day in ſinging their prayers, both for themſelfe and for other men, that done them good both quicke and dead, and ſome of them gone about to teach thy people when they hauen leiſure.

True ſeruice of God ſtādeth not in long prayer, but in keeping Gods commandements.

A Lord, gif they ben thy ſeruauntes: whoſe ſeruaunts ben we that cannot preyen as they done? And when thou were heere on earth, for our nede thou taughteſt thy ſeruauntes to preyen thy father priuilich and ſhortlich: And gif there had beene a better maner of praying, I trowe thou wouldeſt haue taught it in helpe of thy people. And Lorde thou reproueſt hypocrites that preyen in long preyer and in open places, to ben yholden holy men. And thou ſeyſt in the goſpel, wo to you Phariſees hypocrits. And lord thou ne chargedeſt not thy ſeruaunts with ſuch maner ſeruice: But thou ſeeſt in the goſpel, that the Phariſes worſhopē thee with their lippes, and their hart is farre from thee. For they * chargen more mens traditions than thy commaundements.

* Chargen, that is, they care for.

And Lord, we lewed men han a beleeſe, that thy goodneſſe is endles: and gif we keepen thine heſtes, than ben we thy true ſeruauntes. And though we preyen thee but a litle & ſhortlich, thou wilt thinken on vs, and grāūten vs that vs nedeth, for ſo thou behighted vs ſomtime: And Lord I trowe, that pray a man neuer ſo many quaint prayers, gif he ne kepe not thine heſts he is not thy good ſeruaunt. But gif he keepe thine heſtes, than he is thy good ſeruaunt, and ſo me thinketh. Lorde that praying of long prayers ne is not the ſeruice that thou deſireſt, but keping of thine heſtes: and than a lewd man may ſerue God as wel as a man of religion: though that the Plowman ne may not haue ſo muche ſiluer for his prayer, as men of religion. For they * kunnen not ſo wel preiſen their prayers as theſe other chapmen: But Lorde our hope is, that our prayers be neuer the worſe though it be not ſo wel ſolde as other mens prayers.

* Behited, that is, promiſed.

* Kunnen, that is, they can.

Lorde, Ezechiel the Prophet ſayth that whan he ſpake to the people thy words,they turned thy words into ſongs & into tales, And ſo Lord men done now: they ſingin merilich thy words,and that ſinging they clepen thy ſeruice.But Lord I trow that the beſt ſingers he herieth thee not moſt: But he that fulfilleth thy wordes he * herieth thee full well,though he wepe more then ſing. And I trow that weping for breaking of thy commandements, be more pleaſing ſeruice to thee,than the ſinging of thy words. And wold God that men would ſerue him in ſorow for their ſinnes,andthat they ſhoulden afterward ſeruen thee in mirth.For Chriſt ſayth,ybleſſed ben they that maken ſorow, for they ſhoulden ben yconforted. And woe to them that ben merry and haue theyr comfort in this world. And Chriſt ſayd that the world ſhould ioyen,& hys ſeruãts ſhulden be ſory, but their ſorow ſhuld be turned into ioy.

*Heryeth, that is, worſhippeth.

Singing in churches falſly called Gods ſeruice. Weping for ſinnes,better ſeruice then ſinging in church.

A Lord,he that clepeth himſelfe thy vicar vpon earth, hath y ordained an order of prieſtes to doe thy ſeruice in church to fore thy lewd people in ſinging matens,euenſong & maſſe. And therfore hee chargeth lewde men in paine of curſing, to bryng to hys prieſts tithyngs and offerings to finden his prieſts,and he clepeth that Gods part,& due to prieſts that ſeruen him in church.

But Lord,in the olde law, the tithings of the lewde people ne were not due to prieſtes , but to that other childer of Leuie that ſerueden thee in the temple,and the prieſt haddẽ their part of ſacrifices,and the firſt bygeten beaſtes and other things as the lawe telleth. And Lorde,S.Paul thy ſeruant ſayth,that the order of the prieſthode of Aaron ceaſed in Chriſtes comming and the lawe of that prieſthode. For Chriſt was end of ſacrifices yoffered vpõ the croſſe to the father of heauen, to bring man out of ſinne and become himſelf a prieſt of Melchiſedeks order.For he was both king & prieſt without beginning and end,and both the prieſthoode of Aaron,and alſo the law of that prieſthode, ben ychaunged in the comming of Chriſt.And S.Paul ſayth it is reproued,for it broghc no man to perfection. For bloude of gotes ne of other beaſtes ne might done away ſinne, for to that Chriſt ſhad his bloud.

A Lord Ieſu,wether thou ordeneſt an order of prieſts to offrẽ in the auter thy fleſh and thy bloude to bringen men out of ſinne, and alſo out of peine? And whether thou geue them alonelych a power to eat thy fleſh and thy bloud, and wether none other man may eate thy fleſh and thy bloud with outen leue of prieſtes?Lord, we beleeuen, that thy fleſh is verey meate and thy bloude verey drinke, and who eateth thy fleſh and drinketh thy bloud dwelleth in thee,and thou in him, and who that eateth this bread ſhall liue without end. But Lord thine diſciples ſayd,this is an hard worde, but thou anſwereſt them and ſeideſt: When yee ſeeth mans ſoone ſtiuen vp there hee was rather, the ſpirite is that maketh you liue, the wordes that yche haue ſpoken to you ben ſpirite & life Lord, ybleſſed mote thou be,for in this worde thou teacheſt vs that hee that kepeth thy wordes and doth after them, eateth thy fleſhe and drinketh thy bloude,and hath an euerlaſting life in thee. And for we ſhoulden haue minde of thys liuing, thou gaueſt vs the ſacrament of thy fleſh and bloud in forme of bred and wine at thy ſupper,before that thou ſhouldeſt ſuffer thy death,and tooke bread in thine hand,and ſaideſt: take ye this,and eate it, for it is my body: and thou tookeſt wine , and bleſſedeſt it,and ſayde: thys is the bloud of a new and an euerlaſting teſtament,that ſhall be ſhed for many men in forgeuenes of ſinnes:as oft as ye haue done, doo ye this in minde of me.

The order of prieſtes, not made to offer Chriſts bodie.

A Lord,thou ne bede not thine diſciples makẽ this a ſacrifice, to bring men out of paines, gif a prieſt offred thy body in the alter:but thou bede them go and*fullen all the folke in the name of the father, & the ſonne, and the holy ghoſt, in forgeuenes of their ſinnes: and teache ye them to keepe thoſe thynges that ych haue cõmanded you.And Lord,thine diſciples ne ordeined not prieſts principallich to make thy body in ſacrament, but for to teach the people,and good husbandmen that well gouern their houſholds, both wiues & children,& their meiny, they ordeind to be prieſts to teachen other men the law of Chriſt,both in worde,in dede,& they liuedein as true Chriſten men,euery day they eaten Chriſtes body,and drinken his bloude,to the ſuſtenance of liuing of theyr ſoules,and otherwhiles they tooken the ſacrament of his body in forme of bread and wine,in mind of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt.

The ſacrament of the body of the Lord abuſed.

*Fullen that is,baptiſe.

But all this is turned vpſe downe: for now who ſo will liuen as thou taughteſt,he ſhal ben holden a foole.And git he ſpeake thy teaching,he ſhal ben holden an heretick,& accurſed. Lord yhaue no lenger wonder hereof,for ſo they ſeiden to thee whẽ thou wer here ſome time.And therefore wee moten take in pacience theyr wordes of blaſphemy as thou dideſt thy ſelfe, or els we weren to blame.And truelych Lord I trowe,that if thou were nowe in the world,and taughteſt as thou diddeſt ſome time, thou ſhuldeſt ben done to death.For thy teaching is damned for hereſy of wiſe men of the world, and then moten they nedes ben heretickes that teachen thy lore,and all they alſo that trauelen to liue thereafter.

Prieſts principally ſent to preach, not to ſay maſſe,or to make the lords bodie.

He that ſpeaketh Gods teaching,is holden an heretike.

And therfore Lord,gif it be thy wil,helpe thine vnkunning & lewde ſeruaunts , that wolen by their power and their kunning, helpe to deſtroy ſinne. Leue Lorde, ſithe thou madeſt woman in helpe of man,& in a more fraile degree then man is, to be gouerned by mans reaſon:What perfection of charity is in theſe prieſts and in men of religion,that haue forſaken ſpouſhod that thou ordeinedſt in Paradiſe betwixt man and woman , for perfection to forſaken traueile , and liuen in eaſe by other mens traueile? For they mow not do bodilich workes for defouling of their handes, with whom they touchen thy precious body in the aulter.

Leue Lorde, gif good men forſaken the company of woman, & nedes they moten haue the gouernaile of man, then motẽ they ben ycoupled with ſhrewes,and therfore thy ſpouſhode that thou madeſt in clennes from ſinne,it is nowe ychaunged into liking of the fleſh. And Lord,this is a great miſchiefe vnto thy people. And young prieſtes and men of religion, for defaulte of wiues maken many women horen , and drawen through their euell enſample many other men to ſinne,and the eaſe that they liuen in,and their welfare,is a great cauſe of this miſchiefe. And Lord me thinketh, that theſe ben quaint orders of religion and none of thy ſect,that wolen taken horen, whilke God forſendes, and forſaken wiues that God ne forſendeth not And forſaken trauail that God commaunds ,and geuen their ſelfe to idlenes, that is the mother of all noughtines.

What incontinence by the vnmaried liues of prieſtes.

He complaineth of the idlenes of prieſtes.

And Lorde,Mary thy bleſſed mother and Ioſeph,touched oftentimes thy body,and wroughten with their honds, and liueden in as much clennes of ſoule, as our prieſtes done nowe, and touched thy body , and thou touchedeſt them in their ſoules. And Lorde our hope is, that thou goen not out of a poore mans ſoule that traueileth for his liuelode with his handes. For Lord, our beliefe is,that thine houſe is mans ſoul, that thou madeſt after thine owne likenes.

But Lord God,men maketh nowe great ſtonen houſes full of glaſen windowes, and clepeth thilke thine houſes and Churches. And they ſetten in theſe houſes Mawmets of ſtockes and ſtones, and*to fore them they knelen priuilich & apert,and maken their prayers, and all this they ſayen is thy woorſhip, and a great * heriеng to thee. A Lorde,thou forbiddeſt ſometime to make ſuche Mawmetes,and who that had yworſhipped ſuch, had be woorthy to be deeade.

What is the true church of Chriſt.

*To fore,that is,before.

*Heryng,that is worſhipping.

Lorde in the Goſpell thou ſayſt,that true * heriers of God ne herieth him not in that hil beſide Samarie, ne in Hieruſalem neyther, but true heriers of God herieth him in ſpirite and in trueth. And Lord God what herying is it to bilden thee a church of dead ſtones,and robben thy quicke Churches of their bodyliche lyueloode? Lord God what heryeng is it,to cloth mawmets of ſtockes and of ſtones in ſiluer and in golde , and in other good colours? And Lorde I ſee thine image gone in colde and in hete in clothes all to broken, without ſhone and hoſen, an hungred and a thuſt. Lorde what heryenge is it to teende tapers and torches before blinde mawmets that mowen not I ſeyen: And hide thee that art our light and our lanterne towarde heauen and put thee vnder a buſhell that for darkenes we ne may not ſeene our way towarde bliſſe? Lorde what heryenge is it to kneele tofore mawmetes that mowe not yheren,and worſhepen them with preyers, and maken thine quicke images knele before them, and asken of them abſolutions and bleſsings, and worſhupen them as gods, and putten thy quicke images in thraldom and in traueil euermore as beſtes, in colde and in heate, and in feeble fare to finden them in liking of the world? Lord what herieng is it to fetch deed mennes bones out of the ground there as they ſhulden kindelich roten,and ſhrinen them in golde and in ſiluer: And ſuffren thy quicke bones of thine images to rot in priſon for default of clothingh? And ſuffren alſo thy quicke images to periſh for default of ſuſtenaunce, and rooten in the hoore houſe in abhominable lecherie?Some become theeues and robbers, and manquellers that mighten ben y holpen with the golde and ſiluer that hongeth about deed mens bones and other blind mawmetes of ſtockes and ſtones.

*Heriers, worſhippers.

He complaineth of images in churches.

¶ Lorde here ben great abhominations that thou ſhewdiſt to Ezechiel thy Prophet, that prieſts done in thy temple, & yet they clepen that thine heryenge. But leue Lorde,me thinketh that they louen thee litle that thus defoulen thy quick images, & worſhippen blinde mawmetes.

And Lord an other great miſchiefe there is now in the world, an hunger that Amos thy Prophet ſpeaketh of, that there ſhal comen an honger in the earth,not of bread ne thruſt of drinke, but of hearing of Gods worde.And thy ſheepe woulden be refreſhed, but their ſhepheards taken of thy ſhepe their liuelode,as tythings. &c.and liuen them ſelfe thereby where them liketh.

He cõplayneth of falſe paſtors that liue by their flocke, but feedeth not them.

Of ſuch ſhepheardes thou ſpeaketh by Ezechiel thy Prophet, and ſeiſt: wo to the ſhepheards of Iſrael that feden them ſelfe,for the flockes of ſheepe ſhoulden ben yfed of their ſhepheardes: but yee eaten the milke and clothen you with their wolle, and the fat ſheepe ye ſlow, and my flocke ye ne fede not, the ſicke ſhepe ye ne healed not, thilke that weren to broken yee ne knit not together, thilke that periſhed ye ne brought not againe: but ye ratled them with ſternſhip and with power. And ſo the ſhepe be ſprad abroad in deuouring of all the beaſts of the feelde. And Ieremie the Prophet ſayeth: wo to the ſhepehards that diſparſeth abroad and teareth the flocke of my * leſewe.

*Leſew,that is, paſture.

¶ A Lorde, thou were a good ſhepheard, for thou putteſt thy ſoul for thy ſheep:but lord thou teldeſt that thilke that comẽ not in by the dore ben night theues & day theues,and a theſe as thou ſeeſt cōmeth not but for to ſteale, to ſleine,& to deſtroy. And Zachary the prophet ſayth,that thou wouldeſt reren vp a ſhepherde vnkunning, that ne wol not hele thy ſhepe that*beth ſick,ne ſeek thilke that beth loſt. Apon his arme is a ſwerd,and vpon his right eye: his arme ſhall waxe dry, and his right eye ſhall leſe his light. O Lorde, helpe,for thy ſhepe beth at great miſchiefe in the ſhepheards defaute.

* Beth,that is, bee.

Againſt hirelings.

But Lord,ther commeth hired men,& they ne fedden not thy ſhede in thy plenteous leſew,but feeden thy ſheep with *ſweuēs and falſe miracles & tales. But at thy trewth they ne comen not, For Lord,I trowe thou ſendeſt them neuer. For haue they hire of thy ſheep they ne careth but little of the feding and the keping of thy ſhepe,Lord of theſe hired men ſpeaketh Ieremy the Prophet, and thou ſeyſt that woorde by him:I ne ſende them not,and they ronne*bliue:I ne ſpeake vnto them,and they propheciden. For if they hadden ſtonden in my couſel, and they had made my words knowē to the puple, ich wold haue turned them away from their yuell way and from their wicked thoughtes. For Lorde,thou ſeyſt that thy woordes ben as fire, and as an hammer breaking ſtones. And Lord,thou ſaiſt:Lo I to theſe Prophetes meeting ſweuens of leſing, that haue ytolde her ſweuens, and haue begyled my puple in their leſing & in their falſ miracles,when I neither ſent ne bede them. And theſe haue profitet nothing to my puple. And as Ieremie ſayth, from the leſt to the * meſt all they ſtudien couetiſe,and from the Prophet to the prieſt,all they done gyle.

* Sweuens, that is dreames.

* Bliue,quickly.

* Meſte,moſt.

A Lord,here is mych miſchief & matere of ſorow,& yet there is more. For gif a lewed man wold teach thy people trewth of thy words as he is y holde by the commaundement of charite,he ſhal be forboden and put in priſon gif he do it. And ſo Lord,thilk that haue the key of conning, haue y lockt the trewth of thy teaching vnder many wardes, & yhid it from thy children. But Lorde,ſith thy teaching is y come from heauen aboue,our hope is,that with thy grace it ſhall breaken theſe wardes,and ſhowe hym to thy puple,to kele both the hunger and the thruſt of the ſoule. And then ſhal no ſhepheard,ner no falſ hiridman begile thy puple no more. For by thy law I wryte,as thou*highteſt ſome time,that from the leſt to the meſt,all they ſhullen knowen thy wil,and*weten howe they ſhullen pleaſe thee euer more in certaine.

Popiſh prieſts neither teach themſelues,nor wyl ſuffer other beſide thēſelues to teach.

*I highteſt,promiſed.

* Weten,know.

And leue Lord, gif it be thy will helpe at thys nede,for there is none helpe but in thee. Thus Lord,by him that maketh himſelfe thy viker in earth,is thy commaundement of loue to thee & our brethren ybroken, both to him and to thy puple But Lorde God, mercy and pacience that beth * tweyne of thy commandements, beth deſtroyed,and thy puple hath forſake mercy. For Lord,Dauid in the Sauter ſayth: Bleſſed beth they that done dome and rightfulnes in euerich time.

* Tweyne,that is,two.

O Lord,thou haſt itaught vs as rightfulnes of heauen, & haſt ybeden vs forgeuen our brethren as oft as they treſpaſſen againſt vs. And Lord,thine olde lawe of iuſtice was,that ſuch harme as a man did his brother,ſuch he ſhould ſuffer by the law,as eye for an eye,and tooth for a tooth But Chriſt made an end of this law,that one brother ſhould not deſire wracke of an other: but not that he would that ſinne ſhoulde ben vnpuniſhed, for thereto hath he ordained Kinges and Dukes and other lewde officers vnder them, whilke as S.Paule ſayth,ne carien not the ſwerd in vaine,for they ben the miniſters of God, and wrakers to wrath,to them that euil done. And thus hath Chriſt ymade an ende of this olde lawe,that one brother may not ſuen an other himſelfe, *for that to wreken without ſinne,for breaking of charity. But this charity Lord hath thy vicar ybroke,and ſays that we ſinnen, but gif we ſuen for our right. And we ſe I wote that thou taughteſt vs ſometime to geue our mantell alſo,euer that we ſhoulden ſuen for our coate. And ſo Lord beleuē we,that we ben ybounden to don by thy law, that is all charitye,& officers duty is to defenden vs from thilke theuery though we cōplainen not But lord,thy law is turned vpſedown.

*For that,i, but.

A Lord,what dome is it to ſleane a theefe that take a mās cattell away from hym, and ſuffren a ſpouſebreaker to liue,and a lecherour that killeth a womans ſoule? And yet thy lawe ſtoned the ſpouſebreakers and leachours,and let the theeues liuen and haue other puniſhment.

He complaineth for puniſhing litle faults,and to let great faultes eſcape.

If he be an heretike that breaketh mans lawe what is the P. that breaketh Gods lawe.

A Lord, what dome is it to ſleane a theſe for ſtealing of a horſ, and to let him liue vnpuniſhed, & to maintaine him that robbeth thy poore people of their liuelod,and the ſoule of his foode?

Lorde,it was neuer thy dome to ſayen, that a man is an heretike and curſed for breaking of mans lawe, and demen hym for a good man for breaking thine heſtes.

Lord,what dome is it to curſe a lewd man if he ſmite a prieſt, and not curſe a prieſt that ſmiteth a lewed man, and leeſeth hys charitie.

A leud mā, that is,a lay man.

Lord,what dome is it to curſe the lewd people for tythings, and not curſe the parſon that robbeth the people of tythings,and teacheth them not Gods lawe,but feedeth them with painting of ſtone walles,and ſongs of Latin that the people knowen not?

Lord,what dome is it to puniſh the poore mā for his treſpas, and ſuffer the rich to continue in his ſin for a quantity of mony?

Lord, what dome is it to ſlaine an vncunning lewed man for his ſinne, and ſuffer a prieſt, other a clerke that doth the ſame ſin, ſcape a liue? Lord the ſinne of the prieſt or of the cleark is greater treſpaſſe then it is of a lewd vncunning man, and greater enſample of wickednes to the common people.

Lord, what maner people be we, that neither keep thy domes and thy rightfulnes of the old teſtament that was a law of drede, nor thy domes and thy rightfulnes of thy new teſtament that is a law of loue and of mercy: but haue an other law,and taken out of both thy lawes that is liking to vs, and remnaunt of heathen mennes lawes,and Lord this is a great miſchiefe.

Againſt the canon law.

O Lord thou ſayeſt in thy law, deme ye not and ye ſhould not be demed: for the ſame meſure that ye meten to other men, men ſhall meten to you againeward. And Lord thou ſayſt that by their worke we ſhould know them And by what we knowe that thou commaunded vs not to demen mens thoughts, nor their workes that were not agaynſt thy law expreſly. And yet Lord he that ſaith he is thy vicar, will demen our thoughtes and aske vs what we thinke: not of the Lord, of thy heſtes, for they caren little for them but of him and of his whilke they ſate aboue thine, and maken vs accuſen our ſelfe, or els they willen accurſen vs,for our accuſers mowen we not knowne. And Lord thou ſayeſt in thyne olde law, that vnder two witnes at the leaſt or three, ſhoulde ſtand euery matter And that the witnes ſhoulden euer be the firſt that ſhoulden helpe to kill them.

The popes law againſt Gods lawe, in cauſing men to accuſe themſelues.

Mowē, that is,may.

And when the ſchribes and the Phariſes ſome tymes brought before thee a woman that was itake in ſpouſe breaking, and exeden of the a dome, thou didſt write on the earth, and then thou gaue this dom: He that is without ſinne: throw firſt at her a ſtone, and Lord they went forth away from thee and the woman: & thou forgaue the woman her treſpaſſe, and bad her go forth and ſinne no more.

Sweete Lord, if the prieſtes tooke keepe to thy dome, they would be agaſt to demen men as they done. O Lord if one of them breake a commaundement of thy law, he will axe mercy of thee, and not a peine that is due for the ſinne, for peyne of death were to little. O Lord, how daren they demen any man to the death for breaking of theyr lawes, other aſſent to ſuch law? for breaking of thy law they will ſet penaunce or pardon them, and mayntayne them as oft as they treſpaſſen. But Lorde, if a man ones breake theyr lawes or ſpeake agaynſt them, he may done penaunce but ones, and after be burnt. Trulych Lord thou ſayſt, but if euery of vs forgeue other his treſpaſſe, thy father will not forgeuen vs our ſinnes. And Lord when thou honge on the croſſe, thou prayedſt to thy father to haue mercy on thine enemies.

Tooke kepe, that is, tooke heede.

The breakyng of the popes lawe more puniſhed, then the breaking of Gods law

And yet the ſain Lord, that they demen no man to the death, for the ſain they ne mowen by their law demen any man to the death. A leeue Lord, euen ſo ſaden theyr forefathers the phariſeis, that it ne was not lawfull for them to kill any man. And yet they bidden Pilate to done thee to the death agaynſt his owne conſcience, for he wold gladly haue iquitte thee, but for that they threatened him with the Emperour, and broughten agaynſt thee falſe witneſſe alſo. And he was an heathen man.

¶ O Lord, how much truer dome was there in Pilate that was an heathen iuſtice, then in our kinges and iuſtices that woulden demen to the death and berne in the fire him: that the Prieſts deliueren vnto them withouten witnes or preſe? For Pilate ne would not demen thee: for that the Phariſeis ſayden that gif thou ne haddeſt not bene a miſdoer we ne would not deliuer him vnto thee: for to, they broughten in theyr falſe witneſſe agaynſt thee. But Lord, as thou ſaydeſt ſometime that it ſhould ben lighter at domes day to Tyro and to Sydon and Gomorra, than to the cities where thou wrought wonders and miracles: ſo I dred, it ſhall be more light to Pilate in the dome, then to our kinges and domes men that ſo demen without witneſſe and preſe. For Lord to demen thy folke for heretickes: is to holden thee an hereticke: and to brennē them, is to brennen thee, for thou ſaydeſt to Paule when he perſecuted thy people: Saule, Saule, wherefore perſecuteſt thou me, & in the dome thou ſhalt ſay, that ye haue done to the leſt of mine ye haue done to me.

For to,that that is, therfore,

Pilate more commended then the pope.

Thus Lord, is thy mercy & iuſtice foredone by him that ſayth he is thy vicar in earth: for he neither keepeth it himſelfe nor nill not ſuffer other to do it.

¶ The third commaundement, that is patience and ſufferance is alſo ibroken by this vicar. Lord thou biddeſt ſufferen both wrōges and ſtrokes withouten againſtanding, and ſo thou diddeſt thy ſelfe to geuen vs enſample to ſufferen of our brethren. For ſuffering nouriſheth loue, and agaynſtandeth debate. All thy lawes is loue, or els the thing that draweth to loue.

¶ But Lord, men teachen, that men ſhoulden pleten for their right and fighten alſo therefore, and els they ſeyn, men ben in perill: and thou bid in the olde law men fight for theyr countrey. And thy ſelfe haddeſt two ſwordes in thy company when thou ſhouldeſt go to thy paſſion, that as theſe clerkes ſeyn, betokeneth a ſpirituall ſword and a temporall ſworde, that thou gaue to thy vicar to rule with, thy church.

Lord this is a ſleight ſpeech, but Lord we beleuē that thou art king of bliſſe, and that is thine heritage and mankindes countrey and in this worlde wee ne bene but ſtraungers and pilgrimes.

The Pope breaketh patience.

For thou Lord ne art of this world, ne thy law nether, ne thy true ſeruauntes that kepen thy law. And Lord, thou were king of Iuda by enheritage if thou wouldeſt haue ihad it, but thou forſooke it and pletedeſt not therfore, ne fought not therfore.

¶ But Lord, for thy kinde heretage and mankindes countrey, that is a land of bliſſe, thou foughteſt mightilich: In battaile thou ouercame thy enemie, & ſo thou wonne thine heretage. For thou that were a Lord mightieſt in battail, and alſo Lord of vertues, are rightfullich king of bliſſe, as Dauid ſaith in the Pſalter. But Lorde, thine enemie ſmote the diſpitefullich, and had power of thee and hang thee vpō the croſſe as thou haddeſt ben a thefe, & benomyn thee all thy clothes, and ſticked thee to the hart with a ſpere.

¶ O Lord, this was an hard aſſault of a battaile, and here thou ouercome by paciēce mightilich thine enemies, for thou ne woldeſt not done againſt the will of thy father. And thus Lorde thou taughteſt thy ſeruants to fight for their countrey. And Lorde this fighting was in figure itaught in the old law. But Lord men holdē now the ſhadow of the old fighting & leuen the light of thy fighting, that thou taughteſt openlych both in word and in deede.

Chriſtes vicare and his prieſtes will ſuffer nothing.

O Lorde whether axſedeſt thou after ſwerdes in time of thy paſſion to again ſtond thine enemies? nay forſooth thou Lorde. For Peter that ſmote for great loue of thee, had no great thanke of thee, for his ſmiting. And Lorde thou were mighty ynough to haue againe ſtonde thine ennemies, for through thy looking they fellen downe to the ground, Lorde ibleſſed mote thou be. Heere thou teacheſt vs that we ſhoulden ſuffren: For thou were mighty ynow to haue agaynſtand thine ennemies, and thou haddeſt wepen, and thy men weren harty to haue ſmitten.

O ſweet Lord, how may he for ſhame clepen himſelfe thy Viker and head of the Church, that may not for ſhame ſuffer? Sithe thou art a Lord: and ſuffered ſt of thy ſubiectes, to geuen vs enſāple: and ſo did thy true ſeruauntes.

O Lord: whether geue thou to Peter a ſpirituall ſworde to curſe & a temporal ſwerd to ſle mens bodies? Lord I trow not for thē Peter that loued thee ſo much, wold haue ſmitwith thy ſwerds: But Lord, he taught vs to bleſſen them that curſen vs, and ſuffren and not ſmiten. And Lord he fed thy people as thou bed him, and therefore he ſuffered the death as thou didſt.

No temporall ſword geuen to Peter.

O Lord, why clepeth any man him Peters ſucceſſor that hath forſaken patience, and feedeth thy people with curſing and wyth ſmiting? Lord thou ſaydeſt in thy Goſpell, when thy diſciples knewen well that thou were Chriſt, and that thou muſteſt goe to Ieruſalem, and ſufferen of the Scribes and Phariſes, ſpittinges, reproſes, and alſo the death. And Peter tooke thee aſide, and ſayd God forbid that. And Lord thou ſaydſt to Peter, goe behinde me Sathanas, thou ſclaundereſt me in Iſraell. For thou ne ſauoreſt not thilke thinges that ben of God, but thilke that ben of men. Lord to mens wyt it is vnreaſonable, that thou or thy Vicar, gif thou madeſt any on earth, ſhoulden ſuffren of your ſuggets.

Thilk things, thoſe things. Faith commeth not by outward force.

A Lord, whether thou ordeyneſt an order of fighters to turne men to the beliefe? Other ordeineſt that knightes ſhoulden ſwear to fighte for thy wordes?

A Lord, whether bede thou, that gif a man turne to the fayth, that he ſhould geue his goodes and cattell to the Vicar that hath great Lordſhips, and more then him needeth? Lord I wot wel that in the beginning of the church men that weren cōuerted, threwen adowne theyr goodes before the Apoſtles feete. For all they weren in charitie, and none of them ſayd thus is myne, ne Peter made himſelfe no Lord of theſe goodes.

But Lord, now he that clepeth himſelfe thy Vicar vpon earth, and ſucceſſor to Peter, hath ybroke thy commaundement of charitie, for he is become a Lord. And he hath alſo broken thy commandement of mercy, and alſo of patience. Thus Lord we be fallen into great miſchiefe and thraldome, for our chiefetayne hath forſaken war and armes, and haue treated to haue peach with our enemies.

Pope breaketh the rule of charitie, of mercy and of patience.

A Lord, gif it be thy will draw out thy ſwerd out of his ſheth that thy ſeruauntes may fight therewith agaynſt their enemies, & put cowardiſe out of our hartes. And comfort vs in battaile, or than thou come with thy ſword in thy mouth, to take vengeance on thine enemies For gif we bene accorded with our enemies til that time come, it is dread leaſt thou take vengeaunce both of thē and of vs together. A Lord, there is no helpe nowe in this great miſchiefe, but onely in thee.

Or then, before that.

Lord, thou geueſt vs a commaundement of truth, in bidding vs ſay yea, yea, nay, nay, and ſweare for nothing. Thou geue vs alſo a maundement of meekenes, and an other of poorenes, But Lord he that clepeth himſelf thy Vicar on earth, hath both ybrokē theſe commaundements, for he maketh a law to compell men to ſweare and by his lawes he teacheth that a man to ſaue his life, may forſweare and lye And ſo Lord, through cōfort of him and his lawes, the people ne dreadeth not to ſweare and to lye, , ne oft times to forſwearen them. Lord here is little truth.

The P. breaketh the law of ſwearing.

O Lord, thou haſt ybrought vs to a liuing of ſoules that ſtandes in beleeuing in thee, & keeping thy heſtes, and when we breaken thine heſtes, than we ſlen our ſoule. And leſſe harme it were to ſuffer bodylich death.

Lord, king Saule brake thine heſtes, and thou tooke his kingdome from his heyres euermore after him, and gaue it to Dauid thy ſeruaunt, that kept thine heſtes. And thou ſaydſt by Samuell thy prophat to Saule king, that it is a mannour of worſhipping of falſe Gods to breake thy heſtes. For who that loueth thee ouer all thinges, and dreadeth thee alſo: he nole for nothing breake thyne heſtes.

O Lord, gif breaking of thine heſtes be heryeng of falſe gods, I trow that he maketh the people breake thyne heſtes, and commaundeth that his heſtes ben kept of the people, maketh himſelfe a falſe GOD on earth: as Nabuchodonoſor did ſome tyme: that was king of Babilon.

Nole, i. would not.

But Lord, we forſaken ſuch falſe Gods, and beleuen that ther ne ben no mo Gods then thou And though thou ſuffer vs a while to bene in diſeaſe for knowledging of thee: we thanken thee wyth our hart, for it is a token thar thou loueſt vs, to geuen vs in thys world ſome penaunce for our treſpas.

Lord, in the old law, thy true ſeruauntes tooke the death, for they would not eaten ſwynes fleſhe that thou haddeſt forbid them to eat. O Lord, what truth is in vs to eaten vncleene mete of the ſoule, that thou haſt forbid? Lord thou ſayſt, he that doth ſinne is ſeruaunt of ſinne, and then he that lyeth in forſwearing hymſelfe, is ſeruaunt of leſing: and then he is ſeruaunt to the deuill that is a lyer and father of leſinges. And Lord thou ſayſt no man may ſerue two Lordes at ones. O Lord then euery lyer for the tyme that he lyeth, other forſweareth himſelfe, and forſaketh thy ſeruice for drede of hys bodyly death, and becommeth the deuils ſeruaunte.

O Lord, what truth is in him that clepeth himſelfe ſeruaunt of thy ſeruantes. & in his doing, he maketh him a Lord of thy ſeruauntes: Lord thou were both Lord and maiſter, and ſo thou ſayd thy ſelfe, but yet in thy warkes thou were as a ſeruaunt. Lord this was a great truth and a great meeknes: but Lord bid thou thy ſeruaunts that they ſhould not haue Lordſhip ouer theyr brethren? Lord thou ſaydſt kings of the heathē men han Lordſhip ouer their ſubiectes, and they that vſe their power be cleped well doers.

Seruant of ſeruants, the popes ſtile abuſed.

But Lord, thou ſaydſt it ſhoulde not be ſo amongeſt thy ſeruantes, But he that were moſt ſhould be as a ſeruaunt. Thou Lorde thou taughteſt thy diſciples to be meeke. Lord in the old law thy ſeruauntes durſt haue no Lordſhip of theyr brethren, but if that thou bid them. And yet they ſhould not doe to theyr brethren as they did to thrailes that ſerued them. But they ſhould doe to theyr brethren that were theyr ſeruauntes as to theyr owne brethren. For all they were Abrahams Children, And at a certaine tyme they ſhould let theyr brethren paſſe from them in all freedome, but if they would wilfullich abiden ſtill in ſeruice.

Thralles, that is to ſay bond men

O Lord thou gaue vs in thy comming a law of perfect loue, & is token of loue thou clepedſt thy ſelfe our brother. And to make vs perfect in loue, thou bid that we ſhoulde clepe to vs no father vpon earth, but thy father of heauen we ſhould cleape our father. Alas Lord, how violently our brethren and thy childrē ben now put in bodily thraldome, and in deſpite as beaſtes euermore in greeuous trauell to finde proude men in eaſe: But Lord, if we take this defoule and this diſeaſe in pacience and in meeknes and kepe thine heſts, we hope to be free. And Lord geue our brethren grace to come out of thraldome of ſinne, that they fal in through the deſiring and vſage of Lordſhip vpon theyr brethren. And Lord thie prieſtes in the old law had no Lordſhips among theyr brethren, but houſes and paſtures for theyr beaſtes: but Lord our prieſtes nowe haue great Lordſhip, and put theyr brethren in greater thraldome then lewed men that be Lordes. Thus is meekeneſſe forſaken.

Pride of prieſts.

Lord thou biddeſt in the Goſpell that when a man is bid to the feaſt he ſhould ſit in the loweſt place, and then he may be ſet hyer with worſhip when the Lord of the feaſt beholdeth how his geiſtes ſitteth. Lord it is drede that they that ſit now in the hyeſt place ſhould be bidd in tyme comming ſit beneath. And that will be ſhame and vileny for them. And it is they ſaying, thoſe that hyeth himſelfe ſhuld be lowed, and thoſe that loweth themſelues ſhould be an heyghed. O Lord thou biddeſt in thy Goſpell to beware of the Pharaſeis, for it is a poynt of pryde contrary to meekeneſſe. And Lord thou ſayſt that they loue the firſt ſittinges at ſupper, and alſo the principall chaires in churches, and greetings in cheeping and to be cleped mayſters of men. And Lord thou ſayeſt be ye not cleped maiſters, for one is your maiſter, and that is Chriſt and all ye be brethren. And clepe ye to you no father vpon earth, for one is your father that is in heauen. O Lord this is a bleſſed leſſon to teach men to be meke.

Meekenes commended in Miniſters.
Vicar in earth not tollerable in the pope.
Sweuens, that that is dreames.

But Lord he that clepeth himſelf thy vicar on earth he clepeth himſelfe father of fathers agaynſt thy forbidding. And all thoſe worſhips thou haſt forbad. He approueth them,and maketh them maiſters to many, that teach thy people their owne teaching,and leaue thy teaching that is nedefull, and hiden it by quainte gloſes from thy lewd people, and feede thy people with ſweuens that they mete,and tales that doth little profit: but much harme to the people. But Lorde, theſe gloſers obiecte that they deſire not the ſtate of maſtry to be worſhipped therby, but to profit the more to thy people whẽ they preach thy word. For as they ſeggẽ the people will beleue more the preaching of a maiſter that hath taken a ſtate of ſchole, then the preaching of an other man that hath not take the ſtate of maiſtry.

¶ Lorde whether it bee any neede that mayſters beren witnes to thy teaching that it is true and good? O Lord whether may any maiſter mowe by his eſtate of maiſterie, that thou haſt forboden, drawe any man from his ſinne, rather then an other man that is not a maiſter, ne wole bee none, for it is forboden him in thy Goſpell? Lord thou ſendeſt to mayſters to preach thy people, and thou knowledgiſt in the Goſpel to thy father that he hath hid his wiſedome from wiſe men and redy men, and ſhewed it to litle Children. And Lord, maiſters of the law hylden thy teaching foly, and ſeiden that thou wouldeſt deſtroy the people with thy teaching. Trulich Lord, ſo theſe maiſters ſeggeth now: for they haue written many bookes agaynſt thy teaching that is truth,& ſo the prophecie of Ieremy is fulfilled, when he ſayth: Truelich the falſe points maiſters of the law hath wrought leaſing. And now is the time come that S.Paul ſpeaketh of,where he ſayth:time ſhal come when men ſhall not ſuſteine wholeſome teaching. But they ſhullen gather to hepe maiſters with hutching eares, and from trueth they ſhullen turnen away their hearing, and turnen them to tales that maiſters haue maked to ſhowne their maiſtry and their wiſedome.

Maſterſhip and Lordſhip in Preachers.

¶ And Lord a man ſhall beleue more a mans workes then hys words,& the dede ſheweth well of theſe maiſters that they deſiren more maiſtrie for their own worſhip than for profit of the people, For when they be maiſters, they ne preachen not ſo oft as they did before. And gif they preachen, commonlich it is before riche men there as they mowen beare worſhip and alſo profite of their preaching. But before poore men they preachen but ſeldem,when they ben maiſters: and ſo by theyr woorkes wee may ſeene that they ben falſe gloſers.

And Lord,me thinketh that who ſo wole keepen thine heſtes him needeth no gloſes: but thilke that clepen them ſelfe Chriſten men, and lyuen agaynſt thy teaching and thine heſtes, needelich they mote gloſe thine heſtes after their liuing,other els men ſhulden openlich yknow their hipocriſie and their falſhod.

Falſe gloſers.

But Lord,thou ſayſt that there ys nothing yhid that ſhall not be ſhewed ſome time. And Lord ybleſſed mote thou be. For ſomewhat thou ſheweſt vs now of our miſchiefes that wee bene fallen in through the wiſedomes of mayſters,that haue by ſleightes ylad vs away from thee and thy teaching,that thou that were thy maiſter of heauen taught vs for loue,when thou were here ſome time to heale of our ſoules,withouten error or hereſie. But maiſters of worldes wiſedome and their founder, haue ydamned it for hereſie and for errour.

O Lord,me thinketh it is a great pride thus to reproue thy wiſedome and thy teaching. And Lord me thinketh that this Nabugodonoſor king of Babilon that thus hath reproued thy teaching and thine heſtes, and commandeth on all wyſe to kepen his heſts: maken thy people hearen him as a God on earth, and maketh thẽ his thrales and his ſeruauntes.

But Lord: we lewd men knowen no God but thee, & we with thine help and thy grace forſaken Nabugodonoſor and his lawes. For he is in his proud eſtate wole haue all men vnder him, and he nele be vnder no man. He ondoth thy lawes that thou ordeyneſt to ben kept,and maketh his owne lawes as him liketh: and ſo he maketh him king aboue all other kinges of the earth, and maketh men to worſhippen him as a God, and thy great ſacrifice he hath ydone away.

Nele, that is, will not.

Pouertie of Chriſt not folowed.

O Lord,here is thy commaundement of meekenes, miſchiflich to broke: And thy bleſſed commaundement of poorenes is alſo to broken,and yhid from thy people. Lord, Zacharie thy prophet ſayth,that thou that ſhouldeſt be our king, ſhouldeſt bene a poore man,and ſo thou were: for thou ſaydeſt thy ſelfe. Foxes haue dens, and birdes of heauen neſtes, and mans ſonne hath not where to legge his head on. And thou ſaydeſt ybleſſed ben poore men in ſpirite for thy kingdome of heauen is therein. And woe to riche men,for they han theyr comfort in this world. And thou bad thy diſciples to ben ware of all couetiſe,for thou ſaydeſt,in the aboũdance of a mans hauing, ne is not his lyfelode. And ſo thou teacheſt that thilke that han more then them needeth to theyr liuing lyuen in couetiſe. Alſo thou ſayſt,but gif a man forſake all things that he oweth,he ne may not bene thy diſciple. Lord, thou ſayeſt alſo that thy worde that is ſowne in riche mens hartes, bringeth forth no fruite: for riches and the buſines of this world maken it withouten fruit

Couetiſe.

O Lord, here bene many bleſſed teachinges to teach men to bene poore,and loue porenes. But Lord harme is, poore men and poorenes ben yhated,and ryche men ben yloued and honoured. And gif a man be a poore man, men holden him a man without grace, and if a man deſireth poorenes,men holden him but a foole. And if a man be a rich man, men clepen him a gratious man, and thilke that ben buſy in getting of riches: ben yhold wyſe men and ready: but Lord theſe rich men ſayen that it is both leſul and needefull to them to gather riches together. For they ne gathereth it for themſelfe,but for other men that ben needy, and Lord their woorkes ſhewen the truth. For if a poore needy man woulde borowen of theyr riches, he nele leane him none of his good,but gif he mow be ſeker to haue it againe by a certayne day.

Pouertie counted folly.

Nele, that is, will not.

But Lord, thou bede that a man ſhould lend, and not hoping yelding againe of him that he lendeth to: and thy father of heauen wol quite him his mede. And gif a pore aske a rich man any good, the rich man will geue him but a little, and yet it ſhall be little worth. And Lord me thinketh that here is little loue and charitie, both to God and to our brethren.

For Lord,thou teacheſt in thy Goſpell, that what men doe to thy ſeruauntes: they done to thee. A Lord, gif a poore man axe good for thy loue,men geueth him a little of the wurſt. For theſe rich men ordeinen both bread and ale for Gods men of the wurſt that they haue. O Lord, ſith all good that men hath commeth of thee: how dare any man geue thee of the wurſt,and kepe to himſelfe the beſt? How may ſuche men ſay that they gatheren riches for others need, as well as himſelfe,ſith their workes ben contratrary to their words? And that is no great truth. And be ye ſeker theſe goods that rich mẽ han,they ben gods goods, ytake to your keeping, to loke how he wolen be ſetten them to the worſhipping of God. And Lord, thou ſayeſt in the Goſpell, that who ſo is true in litle, he is true in that thing that is more. And who that is falſe in a litle thing,who wole taken him toward things of a greater value? And therfore, be ye ware that han gods goods to keep. Spend ye thilke truelich to the worſhip of God, leaſt ye leeſen the blyſſe of heauen,for the vntrue deſpending of Gods goods in this world.

God is ſerued of the worſt.

A leſſon for them that haue goods well to ſpẽd them.

Seggen, that is, do ſay.

O Lord, theſe rich men ſeggen that they done much for thy loue. For many poore labourers ben yſound by them, that ſhoulden fare ſebelich, ne were not they and their readines: Forſooth me thinketh that poore labourers geueth to theſe rich men,more then they geuen them agaynward. For the poore men mote gone to his labour in cold and in heate, in wete and dry,and ſpend hys fleſh and his bloud in the richmens works,vpon Gods gound,to finde the rich man in eaſe,and in liking,and in good fare of meate of drink and of clothing. Here is a great gift of the poore man,for he geueth his owne body. But what geueth the richman hym agayneward? Certes feeble meat, and feeble drinke,and feeble clothing. What euer they ſeggen, ſuche be their workes, and here is little loue. And whoſoeuer looketh well about, all the worlde fareth as we ſeggẽ. And all mẽ ſtudieth on euery ſide,how they may wexe rich men. And euerich man almoſt is aſhamed to ben holden a poore man.

And Lord,I trow for thou were a poore man,men token litle regarde to thee,and to thy teaching. But Lord thou came to geue vs a new teſtament of loue, & therefore it was ſemelich that thou came in poorenes,to prooue who wold loue thee,and kepen thine heſtes. For gif thou haddeſt ycome in forme of a rich man and of a Lord,men wold rather for thy dread then for thy loue,haue ykept thyne heſtes. And ſo Lord now thou might wel yſee which louen thee as they ſhould in keeping thyne heſtes. For who that loueth thee in thy poorenes and in thy lownes,needes he mote loue thee in thy Lordſhip and highneſſe.

The pouertie of Chriſt rightly conſidered.

But Lord,the world is turned vpſe downe,& men loue poore men but a litlene porenes neither But men be aſhamed of poorenes,and therefore Lord, I trow that thou art a poore king. And therefore I trow that he that clepeth himſelfe thy vicare on earth, hath forſaken poorenes, as he hath do the remnaunt of thy lawe: and is become a rich man and a Lord,& maketh his treaſure vpon the earth that thou forbiddeſt in the Goſpell. And for his right and riches he will plete,and fight & curſe. And yet Lord, he will ſegge that he forſaketh all thinges that he oweth, as thy true diſciple mete done after thy teaching in the Goſpell.

A poore kyng, and a proud Vicar, howe ioyne theſe two together.

But Lord thou ne taughteſt not a man to forſaken his goodes and plete for them and fight, and curſe. And Lord he taketh on him power to aſſoyle a man of all maner things,but if it be of det. Truely Lord, me thinketh he knoweth litle of charitie. For who that beth in charitie,poſſeſſeth thy goodes in common and not in proper at his neighbours nede. And then ſhall there none of them ſegge this is mine,but it is Gods that God granteth to vs to ſpenden it to his worſhip. And ſo if any of them boroweth a porcion of thoſe goodes,and diſpendeth them to Gods worſhip: God is apayed of this ſpending,and alloweth him this true doyng: And if God is payed of that diſpẽding that is the principal Lord of thoſe goods, how dare anye of his ſeruauntes axen there of, accountes, Chriſt a ſeruaunt vpon earth: the pope a Lord.

The pope for his right and riches wil pleade, fight and curſe.

other challenge it for dette? Serten, of one thing I am incerteine, that theſe that charge ſo much det of worldly cattell, they knowe little of Chriſtes lawe of charitie. For if Ich am a bayly of Gods goodes in the world. If I ſee my brother in nede, I am holde by charitie to part with him of theſe goodes to his nede: and if he ſpendeth them well to the worſhop of God, I mote be well apayd as though I my ſelfe had ſpended them to the worſhip of GOD. And if the principall Lord is well payed of my brothers doyng, and the deſpending of his goodes: howe may I ſegge for ſhame that my brother is dettour to me, of the goodes that I tooke hym to ſpend in Gods worſhip at his nede? And if my brother ſpendeth amiſſe the goodes that I take him, I am diſcharged of my deliueraunce of the goodes; If I take him in charitie thilke goods at his nede. And I am hold to be ſory of his euill diſpending, ne I may not axen the goodes, that I tooke him to his nede in forme of dette, for at his neede they were his as well as myne. And thus is my brother yholde to done to me gif he ſee me in nede, and gif we bene in charitie, little ſhould we chargen of dette. And ne we ſhold not axen ſo dettes, as men that knowen not God. And than we be poore in forſaking all thinges that we own, For gif we ben in charitie, we wollen nother fight nor curſe, ne plete for our goodes with our brethren.

Proprietye of goods here, is not take away, but charitie is required to helpe the neede of our neighbour.

O Lord thus thou taughteſt thy ſeruauntes to lyuen. And ſo they lyueden while they hadden good ſhepheards, that fedden thy ſheepe and robbed them nat of their liſelode, as Peter thy good ſhepheard and thy other Apoſtles. But Lord, he that clepeth hym ſelfe thy vicar vpon earth and ſucceſſour to Peter: he robbeth thy puple of their bodylich lyſelode, for he ordeneth proud ſhepherds to lyuen in eſe by the tenth party of poore mens trauell. And he geueth them leue to lyuen where them lyketh. And gif men no wolen wilfullich geuen them the tithinges, they wolen han them agaynſt their will by mayſterye & by curſing, to maken thē riche.

¶ Lord, how may any man ſegge that ſuch ſhepherdes that louen more the wolle then the ſheepe, and feden not thy ſheepe in body ne in ſoul, ne ben ſuch rauenours & theeues? And who may ſegge that the mayntaynour of ſuch ſhepherdes, ne is not a maintenour of theeues and robbers? How wole he aſſoyle ſhepherdes of their robbing without reſtitution of theyr goodes, that they robben thy ſheep of againſt their will? Lord of all ſhepherdes, bleſſed mote thou be. For thou louedſt more the ſheepe then theeir wole. For thou feedeſt thy ſheepe both in body and ſoule. And for loue of thy ſheepe thou tooke thy death to bring thy ſheepe out of Wolues mouthes. And the moſt charge that thou goue to Peter was to feede thy ſheepe. And ſo he did truelich, and took the death for thee and for thy ſheepe. For he came in to the fold of ſhepe by the that were the dore. And ſo I trowe a fewe other did as he did, though they clepen himſelfe ſucceſſors to Peter, for theyr workes ſhowen what they ben. For they robben and ſleen and deſtroyen: they robben thy ſheepe of the tenth part of their trauel, and feden themſelfe in eaſe. They ſleen thy ſheepe, for they pyenen them for hunger of theyr ſoule to the death. They deſtroyen the ſheepe, for with might and with ſternſhip they rulen thy ſheepe: that for dred they beene diſparſed abroade in mountaynes, and there the wilde beaſts of the field deſtroyeth thē for default of a good ſhepeheard.

The Pope a maintayner of theeues and robbers.

Chriſt a good ſhepeheard in deede.

Compariſon betweene the popes ſheepheards and Chriſt.

¶ O Lord, gif it be thy will deliuer thy ſheepe out of ſuch ſheepherdes ward that retcheth not of thy ſheepe, they han their wolle to make them ſelfe rich. For thy ſhepe ben in great miſchiefe and foule accombred with their ſhepheardes.

*¶ But for thy ſhepheardes wolden ben excuſed, they haue ygeten them hyred men to feede thy people, and theſe comen in ſheepes clothing. But dredles, their workes ſhewen that * with in forth they ben but Wolfes. For han they theyr hyre, they ne retcheth but a little howe ſorilich thy ſheepe ben kept. For as they ſeggen themſelfe, they ben but hyred men that han no charge of thy ſheepe. And when the ſhulden feden thy ſheepe in the plentuous *leſewe of thy teaching, they ſtonden betweene them & theyr leſewe, ſo that the ſheepe ne han but a ſight of thy leſewe, but eatē they ſhall not therof. But they fedē them in a ſorry ſowre leſewe of leſinges & of tales. And ſo thy ſheepe fallen into greeuous ſicknes through this euill leſewe. And gif any ſhepe breake ouer into thy leſewe to taſten the ſweetnes therof, anon theſe hyred men driue him out with hounds. And thus thy ſhepe by theſe hyred men, ben ykept out of their kindlich leſewe, and ben yſed with ſoure graſſe & ſory baren leſewe. And yet they feden but ſeldome, and when they han ſorilych fed them, they taken great hyre, and gone away from thy ſheepe and letten them a worth. And for drede leaſt thy ſheepe wolden in theyr abſence goe to thy ſweet leſewe, they han encloſed it all about ſo ſtronglich and ſo high, that there may no ſheepe comen there with in, but gif it be a * waliſch leper of the moūtayns that may with his long legs lepen ouer the wallys. For the hirid men ben ful certayn, that gif thy ſheepe had ones ytaſted the ſweetnes of thy leſewe: They ne would no more bene yſed of theſe hyred men in their ſoure leweſes, & therfore theſe hyred mē kepen thē out of that leſewe. For hadden the ſheepe once ytaſted well of thy leſewe, they wouldē without a leder go thider to their mete, and then mote theſe hired men ſechen them another labour to liue by than keping of ſhepe. And they bene fel and ware ynowe thereof, and therefore they feden thy ſheepe with ſoure meate that naught is & hiden from thy ſhepe the ſweetenes of thy leſewe. And ſo though theſe hyred men gone in ſhepes clothing, in their works they ben wolues, that much harme done to thy ſheepe as we haue ytold.

*But for, that is, but becauſe.
*Within forth, i. inwardly.

*Leſew, paſture.

Wolfes in lambeskins deſcribed.

¶ O Lord, they comē as ſhepe, for the ſeggē that they ben poore and haue forſaken the world to liuen parfetlich as thou taughteſt in the goſpell. Lord this is ſhepes clothing. But Lord thou ne taughteſt not a man to forſaken the trauelous liuing in porenelle in the world, to liuen in eſe with riches by other mens trauell, & haue Lordſhip on their brethrē. For lord this is more to forſakē thee & go to the world.

¶ O Lord thou ne taughteſt not a man to forſake the world to liuen in poorenes of begging by other mens trauell that bene as feble as they ben. Ne Lord thou ne taughteſt not a man to liuen in poorenes of begging, that were ſtrong inough to trauell for his liſelode. Ne Lord thou ne taughteſt not a man to ben a begger to beg of mē more then him nedeth, to build great caſtles and make great feaſts to thilke that han no need.

He complayneth againſt the valiant beggers the Friers.

¶ O Lord thou ne taughteſt not men this poorenes, for it is out of charitye. But thy poorenes that thou taughteſt, nouriſheth charitye, Lord ſith Paul ſayth, that he that forſaketh the charge of thilke that ben *homelich with him, hath forſaken his fayth and is worſe then a miſbeleued man: How then now theſe men ſeggen that they beleuē in Chriſt, that han forſake their poore feeble frendes, & let them liue in trauell and in diſeſe, that trauelled full ſore for thē, when the weren young and vnmighty to helpen themſelfe? And they wolē liue in eſe by other mens trauell euermore begging withouten ſhame.

*Homelich, that is, of his houſeholde.

¶ Lord thou ne taughteſt not this maner poorenes, for it is out of charite. And all the law is charity and thing that nouriſheth charite. And theſe ſhepheards ſend about to kepe thy ſhepe & to feden thē other whiles bareyne lewſewes. Lord thou ne madeſt none ſuch ſhepheardes, ne kepers of the ſheepe that feeden ſorylich thy ſhepe, and for ſo litle trauell taken a great hyre, and ſithe al the yeare afterward, do what them liketh, and let thy ſhepe periſh for defaut of keping.

Wilfull pouertie abhorred.

But thy ſhepherdes abiden ſtill with their ſheepe, and feden thē in thy plenteous leſewe of thy teaching, and gone bifore thy ſhepe, and teachen them the way into the plenteous and ſwete leſewe, and kepen thy flocke from rauening of the wilde beaſtes of the field.

O Lord deliuer the ſheepe out of the ward of thoſe ſhepheardes and theſe hyred mē, that ſtonden more to kepe their riches that they robben of thy ſhepe, than they ſtonden in keping of thy ſheepe.

The propertie of good ſhepeheards.

O Lord, when thou come to Ieruſalem, ſome time thou droue out of the temple ſellers of beſtes and of other chaffre, and ſaydeſt: Mine houſe ſhouldē ben cleped an houſe of prayers: but they maden a dē of theues of it. O Lord, thou art the temple in whom we ſhoulden prayen thy father of heauen. And Salomons temple that was ybelded at Ieruſalem, was figure of this temple. But Lord, he that clepeth himſelfe thy vicar vpon earth, and ſayth that he occupyeth thy place here on earth: is become a chapman in the temple, and hath his chapmen walking in diuers countreys to ſellen hys chaffare, and to maken him rich. And he ſayth, thou gaue him ſo great a power abouen all other men, that what euer he bindeth other vnbindeth in earth, thou bindeſt other vnbindeſt the ſame in heauen. And ſo of great power he ſelleth other men forgeuenes of their ſinne. And for much money he will aſſoylen a man ſo cleane of his ſinne, that he *behoteth men the bleſſe of heauen withouten any payne after that they be dead, that geuen him much mony.

Biſhopriches & cherches, & ſuch other chaffares he ſelleth alſo for mony, and maketh himſelfe rich And thus he beguiled the puple.

The pope is a chapman in Gods temple.

O Lord Ieſu, here is much vntruth, and miſchiefe, and matter of ſorow. Lord thou ſaydeſt ſome time, that thou wouldeſt be with thy ſeruantes into the end of the world. And thou ſaydeſt alſo, there as tweyne or three ben ygadred to gedder in thy name, that thou art in the midle of thē. A Lord, then it was no need to thee to maken liefetenaunt, ſith thou wolte be euermore amongeſt thy ſeruauntes.

*Behoteth, that is, promiſeth.

Lorde thou axedſt of thy diſciples, who they trowed that thou were. And Peter aunſwered and ſayd, that thou art Chriſt Gods ſonne. And thou ſaydeſt to Peter. Thou art Ibleſſed Symon Bariona, for fleſh and bloud ne ſhowed not this to thee, but my Father that is in heauen. And I ſay to thee, that thou art Peter, and vpon this ſtone ych wole byld my Churche, and the gates of hell he ſhullen not auailen agens it. And to the ych wole geue the keyes of heauen and what euer thou byndeſt vppon earth, ſhall be bound in heauen: & what euer thou vnbyndeſt on earth, ſhalbe vnbounden in heauen. This power alſo was graunten vnto the other diſciples as well as to Peter as the Goſpell openlich telleth. In this place men ſeggen that thou graunted to Peters ſucceſſors, the ſelue power that thou gaue to Peter. And therefore the Biſhop of Rome, that ſayth he is, Peters ſucceſſour, taketh this power to him to binden and vnbynden in earth what him liketh. But Lord, ych haue much wonder how he may for ſhame clepen himſelfe Peters ſucceſſour. For Peter knowledged that thou were Chriſt and God, and kept the heſtes of thy law: but theſe han forſaken the heſtes of thy law, and hath ymaked a law contrary to thyne heſtes of thy law. And ſo he maked himſelf a falſe Chriſt and a falſe God in earth. And I trow thou gaue hym no power to vndoe thy law. And ſo in taking this power vpon him, maketh him a falſe Chriſt & Antichriſt. For who may be more agens Chriſt, than he that in his wordes maketh himſelfe Chriſtes vicar in earth. And in hys werkes vndoth the ordinaunce of Chriſt, and maketh men byleuē that it is needful to the heale of mens ſoules: to byleuen that he is Chriſtes vicar in earth. And what euer he byndeth in earth is ybounden in heauen, & vnder this colour he vndoth Chriſtes law, and maketh men alwayes to kepen his law, and heſtes. And thus men may yſeene that he is agenſt Chriſt, and therefore he is Antichriſt that maketh men worſhupen him as a God on earth, as the the proud K. Nabugodonoſor did ſomtime, that was K. of Babylon. And therfore we lewed men that knowne not God but thee Ieſu Chriſt, beleuen in thee that art our God, and our king, and our Chriſt, and thy lawes. And forſaken Antichriſt and Nabugodonoſor that is falſe God, and a falſe Chriſt, and hys lawes that ben contrary to thy preaching. And Lord ſtrength thou vs agenſt our enemies. For they ben about to maken vs forſaken thee and thy lawe, other elles to putten vs to death. O Lord, onlich in thee is our truſt to helpe vs in this miſchiefe, for thy great goodnes that is withouten end.

Lord, thou ne taughteſt not thy diſciples to aſſoylen men of her ſinne, and ſetten them a penaunce for their ſinne, in faſting ne in prayeng, ne other almous dede: ne thy ſelfe, ne thy diſciples, vſeden no ſuch power here on earth. For Lord, thou forgeue men their ſinnes, and bede him ſinne no more. And thy diſciples *fulleden men in thy name, in forgeueneſſe of her ſinnes. Nor they toke no ſuch power vpon them as our prieſtes dare nowe. And Lord, thou ne aſſoyledeſt no man both of his ſinne and of his peyne, that was dew for his ſinne, ne thou grauntedſt no man ſuch power here on earth.

* Fulleden, that is, baptiſed.

And Lord, me thinketh that gif there were a purgatorye, and any earthliche man had power to deliueren ſinfull men from the peynes of Purgatory, he ſhoulde and he were in charitie, sauen euerich man that were in waye of ſaluation from thilke peynes, ſith they make them greater then anye bodeliche peynes of thys world. Alſo gif the Biſhop of Rome had ſuch a power, he himſelfe ſhould neuer comen in purgatory ne in hell. And ſith we ſee well that he ne hath no power to kepen himſelfe ne other men nother out of theſe bodillych peynes of the world, and he may goe to hell for his ſinne as an other man may: I ne byleue not, that he hath ſo great power to aſſoylen men of their ſinne as he taketh vpon hym abouen all other men. And I trowe that in this he higheth hymſelf aboue God.

Purgatorie.

As touching the ſelling of Byſhopricks & perſonages, I trow it be a poynt of falſehed. For agenſt Gods ordinaunce he robbeth poore men of a porcion of theyr ſuſtenaunce, and ſelleth it, other geueth it, to finde proud men in idleſnes that done the lewd puple litell profite, but much harme as we told before. Thus ben thy commaundementes of trewth, of meekenes, and of poore neſſe, vndone by him that clepeth himſelfe thy vicar here vppon earth.

Selling of Byſhoppricks and benefices.

A Lord thou gaue vs a commaundement of chaſtice that is aforſaking of fleſhlich luſtes. For thou broughteſt vs to a liuing of ſoule that is ygouerned by the word. For Lord, thou ordeinediſt woman more frele than man to ben ygouerned by mans rule & his help to pleaſe thee & kepe thine heſts. Ne thou ne ordeinediſt that a man ſhould deſire the company of a woman, and maken her his wife, to lyuen with her in hys luſtis, as a ſwyne doth or a horſ. And his wife ne like him not to his luſtes, Lord thou ne gaue not a man leaue to departen hym from his wyfe, and taken hym an other.

Mariage.

But Lord, thy mariage is a common accord betwene man & woman, to lyuen together to theyr liues ende, and in thy ſeruice eyther the better for others helpe, and thilke that thus ben ycome together, bene ioyned by thee, and thilke that God ioyneth, may no man depart. But Lord, thou ſayeſt that gif a man ſee a woman to coueten her, than he doth with the woman lecherye in his hart. And ſo Lord, gif a man deſire his wife in couetiſe of ſuch luſtes, and not to flye from whoredome, his weddins is lechery, ne thou ne ioyneſt them not together. Thus was Raguels doughter ywedded to ſeuen huſbandes that the deuill inſtrangled. But Toby tooke her to lyue with her in clennes, and bryngyng vp of her children in thy worſhip, and on him the deuill ne had no power. For the wedding was I maked in God, for God, and through God,

A Lord, the people is farre ygo from this maner of wedding. For now men wedde theyr wyues for fairenes, other for riches, or ſome ſuch other fleſhlich luſtes. And Lord, ſo it preueth by thē for the moſt part. For a man ſhall not finde two wedded in a lande, where the huſband loues the wife, and the wife is buxum to the man, as they ſhoulden after thy law of maryage. But other the mā loues not his wife, or the wife is not buxum to her man. And thus Lord is the rule of preſe, that neuer fayleth no preue whether it be done by thee or no. And Lord, all this miſchiefe is common among thy people, for that they knowe not thy worde, but theyr ſhepheardes and hyred men ſedden them with their* ſweuens and leaſinges. And Lord, where they ſhoulden gon before vs in the field, they ſeggen theyr order is ſo holy for thy mariage. And Lord, he that calleth himſelfe thy vicar vpon earth, will not ſuffren prieſtes to taken them wiues, for that is agaynſt hys law: But Lord, he will diſpenſen with them to kepen horen for a certayne ſomme of mony. And Lord, all horedome is forfended in thy law. And Lord, thou neuer forfendeſt prieſtes their wiues, ner thy Apoſtles neyther. And well I wote in our land, prieſtes hadden wiues vntill Anſelmus dayes in the yeare of our Lord God, a leuē hundred and twenty and nyne, as Huntingdon writes. And Lord, this makes people for the moſt part beleuen, that lechery is no ſinne. Therefore we lewd men prayen thee that thou wolt ſend vs ſhepheardes of thine owne that wolen feeden thy flocke in thy leſewe, and gon before thēſelfe, and ſo written thy law in our harts, that from the leaſt to the moſt all they mayen knowne thee. And Lord, geue our king and his Lordes, hart to defenden thy true ſhepheardes and thy ſheepe from out of the wolues mouthes, and grace to know thee that art the true Chriſt, the ſonne of thy heauenly father, from the Antichriſt, that is the ſonne of pride. And Lorde, geue vs thy poore ſheepe pacience and ſtrength to ſuffer for thy law, the cruelnes of the miſchieuous Wolues. And Lord, as thou haſt promiſed, ſhorten theſe dayes. Lord we axen this now, for more neede was there neuer.

I doubt not gentle reader, but in reading this goodly treatiſe aboue prefixed, the matter is manifeſt & playne of it ſelfe without any further explication, what is to be thought and iudged of this vicare of Chriſt, and ſucceſſour of Peter, whome we call the Biſhop of Rome: whoſe life here thou ſeeſt not onely to be ſo diſordered in all poynts, ſwaruing from the ſteppes and example of Chriſt the Prince and Byſhop of our ſoules, but alſo whoſe lawes and doctrine is ſo repugnant and contrary from the preceptes and rule of the Goſpell, that almoſt there is no conuenience betweene them: as in the peruſing of this complaynyng prayer, thou mayeſt notoriouſly vnderſtand. Wherefore hauing no neede to ſtand in any further expreſſing of thys matter, but leauing it to thine own conſideration, and diſcretion: I will ſpeede my ſelfe (Chriſt willing) to procede toward the time of Iohn Wickliffe, and his fellowes taking by order of yeares as I go, ſuche thinges by the way as both happened before the ſaid time of Wickliffe, and alſo may the better prepare the minde of the reader, to the entring of that ſtory. Where firſt I think it not inconuenient to inſerte a propheticall parable, written about this time or not much before, which the author morally applieth vnto the Byſhop of Rome. To what author this propheci or morall is to be aſcribed, I haue not certainly to affirme. Some ſay, that Rupeſciſſanus (of whome mention is made before. pag. 390. was the author therof, & alledge it out of Froyſard, but in Froiſard as yet I haue not found it. In ỹ mean ſeaſō, as I haue foūd it in Latin expreſſed, becauſe it painteth out ỹ Pope ſo rightly in his fethers & colours, as I thought the thing not to be omitted, ſo I tooke this preſent place, as moſt fit (although peraduenture miſſing the order of yeares a litle) to inſert the ſame. The effect of which parable followeth here vnder written.

In the time of Pope Innocent the 6. aboue ſpecified, this Ioannes de Rupe ſciſſa: a Fryer among other hys prophecies merueilouſly foreſpake (as alledged Froyſard, who both hard and ſaw him) of the taking of Iohn the Frenche king priſoner, and brought forth many other notable collections concerning the perils, mutations and changings in ỹ Church to come. And at what time the pope kept hym at Auinion in priſon (where Froyſard is ſayd to ſee hym and to ſpeake with him) the ſayd Froyſard hard in ỹ popes Court this example and parable, recited by the foreſayd Fryer Rupeſciſſanus, to the two Cardinals, to wit, Cardinall Hoſtienſis, and Cardinal Auxercenſis, which followeth in theſe wordes.

When on a certayne time, a byrde was brought into the worlde all bare and without fethers, the other byrdes hearing thereof, came to viſite her: & for that they ſawe her to be a merueilous fayre and beautifull byrd they counſailed together howe they might beſt do her good, ſith by no meanes without fethers, ſhe might eyther flee or liue commodiouſly. They all wiſhed her to liue for her excellent forme and beauties ſake, in ſo muche that among them all there was not one, that would not graunt ſome part of her own fethers to decke this byrde withall: yea, and the more trim they ſawe her to be, the more fethers ſtill they gaue vnto her, ſo that by this meanes ſhe was paſſing well pēned and fethered, and began to flee. The other byrdes that thus had adourned her with goodly fethers, beholding her to flee abroad, were merueilouſly delighted therwith. In ỹ end, this byrd ſeeing her ſelfe ſo gorgeouſly fethered, & of al the reſt to be had in honor: began to waxe proud & hauty. in ſo much that ſhe had no regard at all vnto thē, by whōe ſhe was aduaunced: yea ſhe punged them with her beak, plucked them by the ſkinne and fethers, and in all places hurted them. Whereupon the byrdes ſitting in councell agayne, called the matter in queſtion, demaūding one of an other what was beſt to be done touching this vnkind bird whom they louingly with their own fethers had decked & adourned: Affirming, that they gaue not theyr fethers to ỹ intent that ſhe therby puft vp with pride, ſhould contemptuouſly diſpiſe them all. The Pecocke therefore aunſwereth firſt. Truely ſayth he, for that ſhe is brauely ſet forth with my paynted fethers, I wil againe take them frō her. Then ſayth the Falcon, and I alſo will haue mine againe. This ſentence at length took place among them all, ſo that euery one plucked frō her thoſe fethers which before they had geuen, chalenging to them their owne agayne. Now this proude byrd ſeeing her ſelfe thus to be dealt wythall, began forthwith to abate her hauty ſtomacke, and humbly to ſubmit her ſelfe openly, cõfeſſing and acknowledging yͤ of her ſelfe ſhe did nothing: but that her fathers, her honor and other ornamentes was their gifte: ſhe came into the world all naked & bare, they clad her with comely fethers, and therefore of right may they receaue thẽ againe. wherfore in moſt humble wiſe ſhe deſireth pardon, promiſing to amend all that is paſt, neither would ſhe at any time hereafter commit, whereby through pride ſhe might loſe her fethers againe. The gentle byrdes that before had geuen their fethers, ſeing her ſo humble and lowly, being moued with pitie, reſtored againe the fethers whiche lately they had taken away, adding withall this admonition. we will gladly, ſay they, behold thy flying amõg vs, ſo long as thou wilt vſe thine office with humblenes of minde, which is yͤ chiefeſt comelines of al the reſt. But this haue thou for certainty, that if at any time hereafter thou extoll thy ſelfe in pride, we will ſtraightwayes depriue thee of thy fethers, & reduce thee into thy former ſtate wherin we found thee. ❀ Armachanus.

The life and ſtory of Armachanus Archb. and primate of Ireland.

IN the Catalogue of theſe learned and zelous defenders of Chriſt againſt Antichriſt aboue rehearſed, whome the Lord about this time began to rayſe vp for reformation of his Churche, being then farre out of frame, I cannot forget nor omit ſomething to write of the reuerend Prelate, and famous Clerke Richard Armachanus, primate and Archb. of Ireland: A man for his life and learning ſo memorable, as the condition of thoſe dayes then ſerued, that the ſame daies then as they had but fewe good, ſo had none almoſt his better. His name was Richard Fizraf, made primate and Archb, as is ſayd, of Ireland. Firſt brought vp in the vniuerſitie of Oxford, in the ſtudy of all liberall knowledge, wherin he did exceedingly profite vnder John Bakenthorpe his tutor and inſtructor. In this time the begging Friers began greatly to multiply and ſpread, vnto whome this Bakenthorpe, was euer a great enemye. whoſe ſteppes the ſcholler alſo following, began to do the like. Such was the capacitie and dexteritie of this Fizraf, that he being commended to king Edward the 3. was promoted to him, firſt to be Archdeacon of Lichfield, then to be the commiſſary of the vniuerſitie of Oxford. At length to be Archbiſhop of Armach in Ireland. He being Archbiſhop, vppon a time had cauſe to come vp to London: At what time here in the ſaid city of London was contention betweene the Friers and the clergie about preaching, and hearing confeſſions &c. whereupon, this Armachanus being requeſted to preach, made 7. or 8. ſermons. wherein he propounded 9. concluſions agaynſt the Friers, for the which he was cited vp by the Friers before this pope Innocent the 6. to appeare, And ſo he did, who before the face of the pope valiantly defended, both in preaching & in writing the ſame concluſions, & therein ſtood conſtantly vnto the death, as the wordes of John wickliffe in his Trialogo do well teſtifie in this wiſe: Ab Anglorum Epiſcopis conductus Armachanus, nouem in Auinione concluſiones coram Innocentio 6. & ſuorum Cerdinalium cœtu, contra fratrum mendicitatem, audacter publicauit, verbóque ac ſcriptis ad mortem vſque defendit. The like alſo teſtifieth of him Waldenus in faſcilo ziziannioru m. Alſo Volateranus reporteth the ſame. Gulielmus Botonerus teſtifying of him in like maner, ſaith: that Armachanus firſt reproued begging Friers for hearing the confeſſions of profeſſed nonnes, without licence of their ſuperioures, and alſo of maryed women without knowledge of their huſbandes. what daungers and troubles he ſuſteyned by his perſecutors, and howe miraculouſly the Lord deliuered him from their handes: In ſo muche, that they meeting him in the open ſtreetes and in cleare day light, yet had no power to ſee him, nor to apprehend hym. In what perill of theeues and ſearchers he was in, and yet the Lord deliuered him, yea and cauſed his mony being take from him, to be reſtored againe to him by portions, in time of his neceſſitie and famine. Alſo from what dangers of the kinges officers, which comming with the kings letters layd all the hauens for him: yet howe the Lord Ieſus deliuered him, ſhewing him by what wayes how to eſcape them. Moreouer, what appeales were layd agaynſt hym, to the number of 16. and yet how the Lord gaue him to triumph ouer al his enemies. How the Lord alſo taught him & brought him out of the profound vanities of Ariſtotles ſubtlety, to the ſtudy of the Scriptures of God. All this & muche more, he himſelfe expreſſeth in a certaine prayer or confeſſion made to Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, in which he deſcribeth almoſt the whole hiſtory of his owne life. whiche prayer I haue to ſhewe in old written hand, and hereafter (Chriſt willing) intẽd as time ſerueth to publiſh the ſame. The beginning of the prayer in latin is this.

The comendation of Armachanus.

Armachanus cited by the Friers, to appeare before the P.

The troubles & perſecutions of Armachanus.

Armachanus preſerued manifold wayes by the Lord.

The prayer of Armachanus.

Tibi laus, tibi gloria, tibi gratiarum actio, Ieſu piiſſime, Ieſu potentiſsime, Ieſu dulciſsime: qui dixiſti, Ego ſum via, veritas & vita. Via ſine deuio: veritas ſine nubilo: & vita ſine termino. Quod tute viam mihi oſtendiſti. Tute veritatem me docuiſte Et tute vitã mihi promiſiſti: Via eras mihi in exilio. Veritas eras in conſilio. Et vita eris mihi in premio. with the reſt that followeth in the foreſayd prayer.

Thus what were the troubles of this good man, and how he was cited vp by the Friers to the P. you haue partly heard: Nowe what were his reaſons and argumentes wherwith he defendeth his cauſe in the popes preſence, followeth to be declared. For the tractation whereof firſte I muſt put the reader in remẽbrance of the controuerſie mẽtioned before in the ſtory of Guliel de ſancto de Amore. Pag. 322. Alſo in the ſtory of the vniuerſitie of Paris contending againſt the Friers pag. 392. For ſo long did this controuerſie continue in the Churche, from the yeare. 1240. whẽ yͤ Oxford men began firſt to ſtand againſt the Fryers to the time of this Armachanus, that is, to the yeare 1360. and after this time yet more encreaſed. So it pleaſed the ſecret prouidence of God (for what cauſe he beſt knoweth) to ſuffer his Churche to be entangled and exerciſed ſometimes with matters and controuerſies of no great importance. Eyther to keepe the vanitie of mens wits thus occupyed frõ idlenes, or els to prepare their mindes by theſe ſmaller matters, to the conſideration and ſearching out of other thinges more graue and weighty. Like as nowe in theſe our Queenes dayes, we ſee what tragidies be rayſed vp in Englãd about formes & faſhions of miniſters wearinges, what troubles grow, what placing and diſplacing there is about the ſame: Euen ſo at this time happened the like ſtirre about the liberties and priuilegies of the Friers, which not a little troubled, and occupied al the churches & Diuines almoſt through Chriſtendome. The whiche controuerſie, to the intent it may better be vnderſtanded (all yͤ circumſtances therof being explayned) we will firſt begyn from the originall and foundation of the matter, to declare by order and courſe of yeres, vpon what occaſion this variance firſt riſing, in continuance of time increaſed & multiplide in gathering more matter, and braſt out at length to this tumultuous contention among learned men.

Concerning therfore this preſent matter, firſt it is to be vnderſtand, that in the yeare of our Lord. 1215. vnder pope Innocent the 3. was called a generall cõucell at Laterane, mentioned before. Pag. 253. in the dayes of king John. In the which councell among many other thinges, was conſtituted a certaine law or Canon, beginning Omnis vtriuſq; ſexus. &c. the tenour of which canon in Engliſh is thus.

Can. omnis vtriuſque ſexus. Sex. ex. de Pe & re.

Be it decreed, that euery faythfull Chriſtian, both man and woman comming to the yeares of diſcretion, ſhall confeſſe hymſelfe alone of all his ſinnes, to the prieſt of hys own proper pariſh, once in the yeare at leaſt: and that he ſhall endeuour by hys owne ſelf to fulfil the penance, whẽſoeuer he receiueth the ſacrament of Euchariſtie, at leaſt at the time of Eaſter. Vnleſſe by the aſſent of his Miniſter, vpon ſome reaſonable cauſe to abſtayne for the time. Otherwiſe dooing, let him both lacke the communion of the Churche being aliue, and Chriſtian buriall when he is dead. Wherefore be it decreed, that this wholeſome conſtitution ſhalbe publiſhed accuſtomably in Churches, to the end that no man of ignorance or of blindnes make to himſelfe a cloke of excuſe. And if any ſhall confeſſe himſelfe to any other prieſt then of his owne pariſhe vpon any iuſt cauſe, let him aske and obtayne firſt licence of his owne prieſt: Other els, the Prieſt to haue no power to binde him or to looſe him. &c.

Note here he calleth not the ſacrament of the altar.

In the time of this Innocentius, and of this Laterane councell, was Dominicke, the firſt author and founder of the preaching Fryers: who laboured to the ſaid Pope Innocent, for the confirmation of his order, but did not obteyne, in his life time.

Frier Dominike in the time of Pope Innocent the 3. obtained not the confirmation of his order.

The next yeare after this Laterane councell, dyed pope Innocent. an. 1216. after whome came Honorius 3. who in the firſt yeare of his Popedome confirmed the order of the frier Dominicke, and gaue to him and his fryers authority to preach and to heare confeſſions, with diuers other priuilegies more. And vnder this Pope whiche gouerned 10. yeares, liued Dominick fiue yeares after yͤ confirmatiõ of his order and dyed an. 1221. About which yeare, the order of the Franciſcane Friers began alſo to bread, & to ſpread in the world, through preaching and hearing confeſſions.

After this Honorius next followed Pope Gregory the 9. about the yeare of our Lord 1228. who for the promoting of the forſayd order of Dominickes, gaue out this Bull, in tenour as followeth.

The bul of pope Gregory in the behalfe of the Dominike Friers.

* Iniquitie hath abounded at Rome.

* Nay to the preaching rather of mēs traditions againſt the word of God.

The Friers autoriſed to heare confeſſions & to enioyne penaunce.

Gregorius biſhop ſeruaunt of Gods ſeruauntes, to his reuerende brethren, Archbiſhops Biſhoppes, and to his welbeloued Children, Abbots, Priors, and to All Prelates of churches, to whom ſoeuer theſe preſentes ſhall come, greting, and Apoſtolical bleſsing. Becauſe* iniquitie hath abounded, & the charity of man hath waxt cold: Behold, the Lord hath rayſed vp the order of our welbeloued children the preaching Friers, who not ſeking things of their owne, but pertayning to Ieſus Chriſt, to the extirping as wel of hereſies as to the roting out alſo of other pernitious peſtilencies: haue dedicate themſelues to the preaching of the* word of God We therfore minding to aduaunce their ſacred purpoſe. &c. and followeth, commaunding you to ſee the ſayd perſons, gently to be receaued among you: And that your flockes committed to your charge do receaue deuoutly the ſeede of Gods word out of their mouth, and doe confeſſe their ſinnes vnto them, all ſuche as liſt, whome wee haue authoriſed to the ſame, to heare confeſsions, and to enioyne penaunce. &c. Pope Innocent the 4. againſt the Friers.

This pope Honorius dyed about the yeare of our Lord 1241. after whom came Celeſtinus the fourth and ſat but 18. daies, then came Innocentius the fourth and ſat 11. yeares and 6. monethes. Who although he began firſt to fauour the friers: yet afterward being altered by certayn Diuines of Vniuerſities, Prelates of Churches, and Curates: and debarred them of their liberties and priuiledges, & gaue out agayne preceptes and excommunications, as well agaynſt the Friers, as all other religious perſons. And not long after the ſame he was diſpatched.

Pope Alexander the 4. vndoeth the actes of Pope Innocent the 4. his predeceſſour.

Extrau. non ſine multa.

Gul. de S. Amore, Simon Iornalenſis. Godfridus de fontibus. Hen. de Gandauo, foure champions againſt the Friers.

Innocentius being thus remoued out of the way, about the yeare of our Lord. 1253. Then ſucceded Pope Alexander the fourth a great mayntainer of the Friers, and ſat 7. yeares. He reuoked and repealed the Actes and writinges of Pope Innocent his predeceſſour, geuen forth agaynſt the Friers: wherwith the Diuines and Students of Paris being not wel contented, ſtirred vp foure principall Doctours: The firſt and chiefe captayne was Guliel. de ſancto Amore, mentioned before. pag. 322. againſt whom wrote Albertus Magnus, and Thomas Aquine. And at laſt he was condemned by this forſayd Pope Alexander the 4. in the Extrau. Non ſine multa. The ſecond was Simon Iornalenſis, the third, Godfridus de Fontibus, the iiii. Henricus de Gandauo. Theſe foure with other their complices, compiled a certaine booke againſt the begging order of Friers, both Dominicans, and Franciſcās intituled, De periculis Eccleſiæ, cōteining xiiii. chapters. wherof the 14. which is the laſt, with 39. articles agaynſt the Friers we haue already trāſlated and expreſſed, pag. 317. Beſide theſe. 39. articles, be other vii. articles moreouer to the ſaid booke annexed, vnder the name of the ſtudents of Paris againſt the Friers, prouing why the ſayd Friers ought not to be admitted into their ſocietie. Which vii. articles becauſe they are but ſhort, I thought here better to place, then to omit them.

❋ Certaine articles geuen out by the Studentes of Paris, agaynſt the Fryers, why they ſhould not be admitted to theyr ſocietie.

Articles of the ſtudents of Paris againſt the Friers.

First we ſay, they are not to be admitted to the ſocietie of our ſchole, but vpon our will and licence. For our company or fellowſhip ought not to be coactiue, but voluntary and free.

Secondly, we ſay they are not to be admitted, for ſomuch as we oft proued their community, manifold wayes to be hurtfull and incommodious.

Concilium Hiſpan.

Thirdly, ſeeing they be of a diuers profeſſion from vs (for they are called regular, and not ſcholaſticall) we therfore ought not to bee ioyned and aſſociate together in one ſcholaſticall office. For aſmuch as the Councell of Spayne doth ſay, thou ſhalt not plough with the Oxe, and with the Aſſe together. Which is to ſay: Men of diuers profeſſions ought not together to be matched in one kinde of calling, or ſtanding, for theyr ſtudies and conditions be diſagreeing and diſſeuered from ours, and cannot frame or couple together in one communion.

The friers make diſſentions.

Fourthly we affirme, by the Apoſtle that they are not to be admitted becauſe they worke diſſenſions and offences: For ſo ſayth the Apoſtle Rom vlt. We deſire you brethren, that ye obſerue, and take heede of ſuch as make diſſentions and offēdicles about the doctrine which you haue learned by the Apoſtles, and auoyd them. For ſuch ſerue not the Lord, but their own belly. Gloſe Some they flatter ſome they backbyte, whereby they might feede their belly. That through their ſweete and pleaſaunt wordes, and by their benedictions, they may deceaue the hartes of the ſimple. Gloſe. That is, with their fine ſugered, and trimme couched wordes, they ſet forth their own traditions, wherewith they beguile the hartes of the ſimple innocentes.

Friers deuour mens houſes.

Penetrant domos.

Fiftly, we ſay they are not to be admitted. For that we feare leaſt they be in the number of them, which goe about and deuoure mens houſes. For they thruſt in themſelues into euery mans houſe, ſearching and ſacking the conſciences and ſtates of all perſons. And whom they finde eaſie to be ſeduced, as women: ſuch they doe circumuent, & lead them away from the counſailes of their Prelates, bynding them either in acte or oth: from ſuch we are warned by the Apoſtle to auoyd.

Friers preach vncalled.

Sixtly, wee ſay they are to bee auoyded: becauſe wee feare they are falſe Prophetes. Whiche being neither Byſhops, ner pariſh prieſts, nor yet their Vicares, nor ſent by them, yet they preach (not ſent) againſt the minde of the Apoſtle, Rom. 10. ſaying: How ſhall they preach except they be ſent? For els there appeareth in them no ſuch great vertue, for the whiche they ought to be admitted to preach vncalled. Seing therefore that ſuch are ſo daungerous to the Church, they ought to be auoyded.

Friers haue no order of any calling in the church.

Seuenthly, we ſay they are not to be admitted, becauſe they be a people ſo curious in ſearching & inquiring of other mens doings and ſpirituall demaynour. And yet be they neyther Apoſtles, nor yet ſucceſſours of yͤ Apoſtles, as biſhops: nor of the number of the 72. Diciples of the Lord: nor their ſucceſſors, yͭ is pariſh Prieſtes: nor their helpers, nor yet Vicares, wherefore, ſeing they liue ſo in no order, by the ſentence of the Apoſtle we are commaunded to auoyd them. 2. Theſſ. vlt. where he ſaith: we admoniſh and denounce vnto you (O brethren) in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: that is, as the Gloſe, ſayth (we commaund you by the authoritie of Chriſt) that you withdrawe your ſelues from euery brother, that walketh inordinately, and not after the tradition, which you haue receaued of vs. &c. Looke vpon the common gloſe of this place, and you ſhall finde, that ſuch are to be auoyded till time they amend from ſo doing. &c.

Certain cōcluſiōs in the vniuerſitie of Paris to be diſputed of againſt the Friers.

Beſides theſe articles aboue rehearſed, certaine propoſitions or concluſions were alſo propounded in the ſcholes of Paris the ſame time, ſolemnly to be diſputed and defended agaynſt the Fryers: which in a briefe ſome of wordes to collect, were theſe.

First, that the begging Friers were not in the ſtate of ſaluation.

Secondly, that they were bound to labour with theyr handes that could, and not to begge.

Thirdly, that they ought not to exerciſe the office of preaching, or to heare the confeſſiōs of them that wil come to them, although being licenſed thereunto by the Byſhop of Rome, or by the Dioceſane: for ſomuch as the ſame is preiudiciall to the miniſters and Prieſtes of the Pariſhes.

Pope Alexander the 4. a great fauourer of the Friers.

All theſe forſayd articles & concluſions, in the booke ſet forth by theſe Paris men: This Pope Alexander the 4. condemned to be aboliſhed and burned, writing his preceptes to the French K. and alſo the Vniuerſitie of Paris, in the fauour of the Friers: willing and commaunding the ſayd Fryers to be reſtored to all their priuiledges and libertyes, in as ample maner as in Pope Gregories tyme before.

An other pilgrimage giuen to the Friers by Pope Clement 4.

Ex Clement Quidam temerè.

Not long after Pope Alexander the 4. followed Clement the 4. an. 1263. and ſate 3. yeares. Who alſo gaue the priuiledge to the Friers, beginning: Quidam temerè &c. In which priuiledge he condemneth them that ſay, that no mā without licence of his Curate or miniſter, ought to confeſſe him to the Friers, or that a ſubiect ought to aſke licence of theyr miniſters ſo to doe, whiche was agaynſt the Canon Omnis vtriuſque ſexus. &c. made by the Pope Innocent the 3. before recited.

Pope Martin the 4. holdeth with curates againſt the Friers.

After this Clement, agayn came Pope Martine the 4. an. 1281. who renued again the Canon. Omnis vtriuſque ſexus: in the behalfe of the Curates againſt the Friers.

Pope Boniface holdeth with the friers againe.

Ex Clement conſtit. Boniſ. Super cathedram.

Then Pope Boniface the 8. began to ſit, an. 1294. viii. yeares. ix. monethes. Who taking ſide with the Fryers, gaue to them an other priuiledge, beginning, Super Cathedram. &c. In the whiche priuiledge he licenſed the Fryers, that without licence of Vicares of Churches, they ſhal firſt preſent themſelues to the Prelates to be admitted: by whō if they be refuſed the ſecond time, then they vppon ſpeciall authoritie of this Pope, ſhall be priuiledged: without eyther Byſhop or Curate, to preach, to bury, and to heare cōfeſſions who ſoeuer will come to them, reuoking all that was decreed by his predeceſſours before to the contrary notwithſtanding.

By this Pope Boniface, a certayne Dominick Frier was made Cardinall named Nicholaus de Teruiſio, and after the death of Boniface, was made alſo Pope. an. 1303. ſurnamed Pope Benedictus 11. who ſeing the conſtitucio̅ of Boniface his predeceſſor to gender diſſenſion betweene the Priſts and Friers, made an other conſtitution, beginning: Inter cunctas &c. reuoking the conſtitution of Boniface his predeceſſour. Upon which conſtitution of Pope Benedict, Ioannes Monachus, make a Gloſe, reuoked alſo his other Gloſe made vpon the conſtitution of Boniface before.

Ex Clemēt. inter cunctas.

Ioan. Monach. reuoketh his gloſe.

Again, after this Benedictus the 11. folowed pope Clement the 5. an. 1335. and ſat 9. yeeres, who in his generall Councell holden at Uienna, reuoked the conſtitution of Benedictus his predeceſſor, and renewed agayne the former decree of Boniface, by a new conſtitution of his, beginning: Dudum a Bonifacio. 8. &c. Whiche conſtitution moreouer was confirmed afterwarde by Pope Iohn the 22. an. 1316. which Pope alſo cauſed Ioannes de Poliaco to recant.

Pope Clement the 5. holdeth with the Fryers and repealeth the cōſtitution of Benedictus.

Ex Clement cap. dudum.

Upon this variable diuerſity of the Popes (one diſſenting and repugning from an other) roſe among the Diuines & ſcholemen in Uniuerſities great matter of cōtention, as well in the Uniuerſity of Paris, as the Uniuerſity of Oxford about the begging Friers, ſome holding one way, ſome an other way. But eſpecially 5. principal opinions to be noted of learned men, who the̅ diſputing againſt the friers, were condemned for heretickes, and their aſſertions reproued.

Fiue diuers opinions of learned mē in this age holdyng againſt the Fryers.

The firſt, was the opinion of the̅ which defended, that the friers might not by the licence of the Byſhop of Rome and of the Prelats, preach in Pariſhes, and heare confeſſions. And of this opinion was Guliel. de Sāc̄to Amore, with his felowes, who as is ſayd, were condemned.

The ſecond opinio̅ was this, that friers, although not by theyr own authority, yet by priuiledge of the Pope and of the Biſhop, might preach and heare confeſſions in Pariſhes, but yet not without licence of the Pariſh Prieſtes. Of this opinion was Bernardus gloſing vpon the cano̅. Omnis vtriuſque ſexus, afore mentioned,

The 2. opinion.

Bernardus ſuper cap. Omnis vtriuſque.

The third opinion was, that friers might preach and heare confeſſions, without licence of the Pariſh Prieſtes: but yet the ſayd pariſhners notwithſtanding were bou̅d, by the Canon: Omnis vtriuſque ſexus: to repeate the ſame ſinnes again, if they had no other, to theyr own proper curate: and of this opinion were many, as Godfridus de Fontibus: Henricus de Gandauo: Ioannes Monachus Cardin: Ioannes de Poliaco. Which Ioannes de Poliaco, Pope Iohn the 22 cauſed openly in Paris, to recant and retract.

The 3. opinion.

Ioan. de Poliaco.

This Ioannes de Poliaco Doctor of diuinity in Paris, being complayned of by yͤ friers for certaine articles or aſſertions, was ſent for to the Pope: where time and place being to him aſſigned, he in the audience of the Pope and of Frierly Cardinals & other doctors: was ſtraitly examined of his articles. To make the ſtory ſhort, he at length ſubmitting himſelfe to the authority of the terrible ſee of Rome: was cauſed to recant his aſſertions openly at Paris. His aſſertions which he did hold, were theſe.

Ex libro fratris Egelberti.

¶ The three aſſertions of Ioannes de Poliaco, which he was cauſed by the Pope to recant at Paris.

John de Poliaco cauſed to recant by P. Iohn the 22.

His three aſſertions.

Whereof the firſt was, they which were confeſſed to friers, although hauing a generall licence to heare confeſſions: were bounde to confeſſe agayne their ſinnes to their own Pariſh Prieſt, by the conſtitutio̅, Omnis vtriuſque ſexus. &c.

The ſecond was, that the ſayd co̅ſtitution, Omnis vtriuſque ſexus, ſtanding in his force, the Pope coulde not make: but pariſhners wer bou̅d once a yere to confeſſe theyr ſinnes to their Prieſt. For the doing otherwiſe importeth a contradiction in it ſelfe.

The 3. was, that the Pope coulde not geue generall licēce to heare confeſſio̅s ſo, but yͭ the pariſhners ſo confeſſed were bound to reiterate yͤ ſame confeſſion made, vnto his owne Curate. Which he proued by theſe places of the Canon law, 25. q. 1. Quæ ad perpetuam. Thoſe thinges which be generally ordeyned for publique vtilitye, ought not to be altered by any chaunge. &c. Item, the decrees of the ſacrat Canons, none ought to keepe more then the Biſhop Apoſtolicall. &c. Ibidem. Item, to alter or to ordeine any thing agaynſt the decrees of the fathers, is not in the authoritye or power, no not of the Apoſtolicall ſea. Ibidem.

The 3. aſſertions of Ioan. de Poliaco againſt the Fryers.

25. q. 1. Quæ ad perpetuam. Contra ſtatuta patrum condedere vel mutare aliquid nec huius quidem ſedis poteſt autoritas.

The fourth opinion was, that the Friers by the licēce of the Pope and of the Biſhops might lawfully heare co̅feſſions, and the people might be of them confeſſed and abſolued. But yet notwithſtanding, it was reaſon, cōuenie̅t, honeſt and profitable, that once in the yeare they ſhould be confeſſed to theyr curats (although being cōfeſſed before to the friers) becauſe for the adminiſtration of Sacraments, eſpecially at Eaſter. Of which opinion was Gulielmus de monte Landuno. Henricus de Gandauo alſo held, not onely to be conuenient, but alſo that they were bound ſo to doe.

The 4. opinion.

Guilielmus de monte Lāduno. Henricus de Gandauo.

The fiſt opinion was, that albeit the Friers might at all times, and at Eaſter alſo, heare confeſſions as the Curates did: yet it was better and more ſafe, at the time of Eaſter to confeſſe to the curates, the̅ to the Friers. And of this opinio̅ was this our Armachanus, of whom we preſently now entreat.

The fiſt opinion.

¶ And thus haue ye, as in a brieſe ſumme opened vnto you, what was the matter of contention betweene the friers and the Church men. What Popes made with the friers: and what Popes made againſt the̅. Moreouer, what learned me̅ diſputed againſt them in Paris, and other places, and what were theyr opinions.

These conſiderations and circu̅ſtaunces hetherto premiſed, for the more opening of this preſent cauſe of Armachanus ſuſteined agaynſt the idle beggerly ſects of friers, in whom the reader may well perceiue Antechriſt plainly reigning, and fighting againſt the Church: Now remayneth, that as I haue before declared the trauelles & troubles of diuers godly learned me̅ in the Church ſtriuing agaynſt the ſayd friers, continually from the time of Guliel. de Amore, hetherto: So now it remaineth, that for ſo much as this our Armachanus labouring and in the ſame cauſe ſuſteined the like conflict with the ſame Antechriſt: we likewiſe collect and open his reaſons and argu̅ments vttered in the conſiſtorye and in the audience of the Pope himſelfe wherwith he maynteyneth the true doctrine and cauſe of the Church agaynſt the peſtiferous canker creeping in, by theſe friers after ſubtle wayes of hypocriſy, to corrupt the ſincere ſimplicity of Chriſtes holy fayth & perfect Teſtament. The which reaſons and argumentes of his, with the whole proceſſe of his doinges: I thought good and expedient for the vtility of the Church, more amply and largely to diſcourſe and proſecute, for that I note in the ſects, inſtitutions, and doctrine of theſe friers, ſuch ſubtle poyſon to lurke: more pernitious & hurtfull to the religion of Chriſt and ſoules of Chriſtians, then all men peraduenture do conſider.

Ex libro cui titulus. Defenſorium curatorum.

Thus Armachanus ioyning with the clergy of England, diſputed and contended with the friers here of England land. an. 1358. about a double matter. wherof the one was concerning confeſſiõ and other exchetes which the friers encroched in pariſh Churches agaynſt the Curates, and publicke paſtors of Churches. The other was concerning wilfull beggery and pouerty, which the Friers then tooke vpon them, not vpon any neceſſity being otherwiſe ſtrõg inough to worke for their liuing, but onely vpon a wilfull and affected profeſſion. For the which cauſe the Friers appealed him vp to the court of Rome. The occaſion wherof thus did riſe.

¶ It befell, that Armachanus vpon certayne buſines comming vp to London, found there certayne Doctours diſputing and contending about the begging of Chriſt our Sauior. wherupon (he being greatly vrged and requeſted oft times therũto) at requeſt, made ſeuen or eight ſermõs vnto the people at London, wherein he vttered 9. concluſions. wherof the firſt and principal concluſion was, touching the matter of the friers priuiledges, in hearing confeſſions. His concluſion was this.

Firſt, that if a doubt or queſtion be moued for hearing cõfeſſiõs, which of 2. places is rather to be choſẽ. The pariſh church is to be preferred before the church of the friers.

Secondly, being demaunded whether is to be taken (to heare the confeſſion of the pariſhioners the Parſon, or the Curate, or the frier) It is to be ſayde, rather the Parſon or the Curate.

Thirdly, that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in his humayne conuerſatiõ was alwayes poore, but not that he loued pouerty, or did couet to be poore.

Fourthly, that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt did neuer beg, wilfully profeſſing to be poore.

Fiftly, that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt did neuer teach wilfully to beg, or to profeſſe wilfull beggery.

The ſixt concluſion was, that Chriſt our Lord did cõtrary, that men ought not wilfully or purpoſely wythout meere neceſſity to beg.

Seuẽthly, that there is neither wiſedome nor holines, for any man to take vpon him wilfull beggery, perpetually to be obſerued.

The eight, that it is not agreeing to the rule of the Obſeruants, or Friers Minorites, to obſerue wilful pouerty.

The laſt concluſion was, touching the Bull of Pope Alexander the 4. whiche condemned the libell of the maiſters of Paris: that the ſame Bull touched none of theſe 7. laſt concluſions.

Vtilitie.

Commoditie.

Vpon theſe 9. concluſions premiſed, Armachanus being appealed, cited, and brought vp to the preſence of the Pope: began to proue the ſame his foreſaid concluſions or aſſertions vnder proteſtation made, that his intẽtion was not to affirme any thing contrary to the chriſtian fayth, or to the Catholicke doctrine, or that ſhould be preiudicial or deſtructiue to ẏ orders of the begging friers, ſuch as were approued by holy Church, or confirmed by the high Byſhops: But onely his intẽtiõ was, to haue the ſayd orders reduced to the purity of their firſt inſtitution. Concerning which matter, he deſired his reaſons to be heard, which if they ſhould be foũd weaker then the reaſons of the friers, the puniſhment ſhould be his. If otherwiſe, that then the friers iuſtly to be rewarded, for their ſlãderous obtrectation and publique cõtumelies, & iniurious dealinges both priuatly and publickly wrought and ſought agaynſt him: And ſo taking for his Theame: Nolite iudicare ſecundum faciem, ſed iuſtum iudicium iudicate. &c. That is. Iudge not after the outward face, but iudge true iudgement. &c. Iohn. 7. he entreth to the probation of his concluſions: Firſt beginning with the former concluſion, that the Pariſh churche was a place more fit and conuenient, for the confeſſiõs or burials of the Pariſhioners to be vſed, then any other exempt Church or place of the Friers. which he proued by three cauſes: Firſt for the more ſurenes or certaynty to the conſcience of the Pariſhioners confeſſed. Secondly, for the more vtility and profit of him. Thirdly, for the leſſe incommodity enſuing by confeſſions taken in Pariſh churches, then in friers Churches.

The firſt part of the firſt concluſiõ confirmed.

Deut. 12.

Leuit. 4. 5.

As touching the firſt, for the more aſſuredneſſe and certeinty, thus he argued vpon the place of Deu. 12. vnto that place, which ẏ Lord your God ſhall aſſigne of all your tribes, to place his name and dwell therin: thether ſhall you reſort, to offer vp your oblations, tithes. &c. And the ſame place God ſayth: See thou offer not thy ſacrifice in euery place that liketh thee: but in that place alone which the Lord hath elect in one of the tribes, and thou ſhalt doe in all thinges as I commaund thee. Alſo vpon the wordes of Leuit. 4. and 5. which be theſe. Whoſoeuer ſinneth of ignorance, ſhal offer to the prieſt, and he ſhall pray for him, and he ſhalbe forgeuen &c. Vpon theſe places thus he argued: that foraſmuch as the Sacramẽts of the Church are to be frequented and vſed in no other place but onely in that, which by God himſelfe peculiarly is aſſigned and commaunded for the ſame: And ſeing that elect place in the law repreſenteth the Pariſh Churches: neither can it be proued that the Friers Churche is the place preſcribed of God, but onely permitted by Byſhops of Rome: He concluded therefore, that Pariſh Churches for confeſſions and burialles, were more ſure and certayne to the conſcience of Pariſhioners, then the exempt places of the Friers.

The firſt part of the firſt concluſion, confirmed by an other reaſon

By an other reaſon alſo he confirmed the ſame, for that the pariſh Church commonly ſtandeth free frõ the Popes interdict, ſo do not the Churches of the Friers. As which ſtand not ſo cleare, but that they are vnder ſuſpition, and doubt of the Popes interdict: by the Decretall. De ſepulturis in ſexto. cap Animarum periculis. In which Decretall, all ſuch conuentuall Churches and Churchyardes of Friers be interdicted, which do induce any perſon or perſons, either by oth or promiſe made, to chuſe their burying places in their churches, as commonly the friers are reported to do. For els what pariſhner would forſake his owne churche & pariſh where his aunceſtors do lye, to be buryed among the Friers, if the Friers did not induce thẽ ſo to do:

The ſecond part of the firſt concluſion confirmed.

An other confirmatiõ of the ſecõd part of the firſt article.

Moreouer for the ſecõd part, concerning the vtility of the place, that he confirmed doublewiſe. Firſt, for that confeſſiõ made within the pariſh church, hath a double merit of obedience, both for obeying the commaũdement of God in opening his confeſſiõ ¶ thus he ſpeaketh according to ẏ blindnes of that time, for that auricular confeſſiõ hath any cõmaundement of God, cannot be proued: & alſo in obeying the commaundemẽt of God in obſeruing the place by him appointed, ẏ which ſecond merit of obedience lacketh in ẏ Friers part. Secondly, he proued to be greater vtility for a pariſhioner to confeſſe him in his pariſh Church, thẽ with the Friers. Becauſe commonly the number of Chriſten people praying, is ten times more in pariſh churches. wherby is to be thought, that ech ſinguler perſõ may better be helped through moe prayers, then in the Oratories of the Friers, &c.

The third part of the firſt concluſion proued.

Farther as touching the third part of the firſt concluſion or Article he proued, that it had fewer incõmodities to reſort euery man to his pariſh Church, then to the friers: for that both great vtilitye, and more certaynety (as hath ben proued) did enſue therof: which two being take away, (as muſt need, in reſorting to the friers Church) thẽ two ſpeciall commodities ſhould be hindred, & ſo great incommodities therof ſhould follow. And thus much for ẏ place of the friers.

The 2. concluſion or Article.

3. reſpectes or cauſes to be proued.

Now to the ſecond concluſion or Article touching the perſon of the frier, and of the ordinary Curate. If the queſtiõ be, which of theſe two is to be preferred in the office of Eccleſiaſticall adminiſtratiõ: the opinion of Armachanus was, that the ordinary Curate was better then the extraordinary frier, and that for the three foreſayd reſpectes, to wit, for certaintie or aſſuraunce, for vtility, and for incommodity to be auoyded.

Ca. Religioſi. Clement. de decimis.

In Clementino de priuilegijs cap. Religioſ.

The Friers proued to be excommunicate by the Popes lawe.

Firſt that it is more ſafe and ſure for the pariſhioners to reſort to theyr ordinary or pariſh prieſt, hee argued by 3. reaſons: firſt becauſe the perſon of the lawfull ordinary or prieſtes is expreſſely of God commaũded, where the perſõ of the frier is not, and therfore is forbid. Secondly, becauſe the pariſhner may more truſt to his ordinary Curate, as who is more bound & obliged to prouide and to be carefull for him, then any other extraordinary perſon, Thirdly, becauſe in the perſon of the ordinary curate, commonly there is no doubt of any interdict to bind him: whereas contrary in the friers be halfe: there is good matter to doubt, whether he ſtand bound vnder the popes cẽſure of excõmunication or not, and that for diuers cauſes, as by the cap. Religioſi, in Clemẽtinis de decimis. Where is decreed, that all ſuch religious mẽ, which hauing no benefices or cure of ſoule, preſume to improperate vnto them glebe land or other tithes due vnto Churches, and not appertayning to them (by any maner of colour or fraudulent circumuention) do incurre the ſentence of excommunication, ipſo facto. Alſo by another cap Religioſi, De priuilegijs. in Clement. Where it is ſayd, that all ſuch religious men are excommunicated De facto, whoſoeuer doe abſolue any, agaynſt whom the ſentence of excommunication hath bene denounced by ſtatute prouincial, or ſinodal: as it is commonly ſaid, that the friers hearing mẽs cõfeſſions are accuſtomed to do, in looſing them whom the cenſure of prelates, or their Officials haue bound. Wherof the ſayd Armachanus bringeth forth example of his own Dioces: For I (ſayd he) in mine own Dioces of Armachan, haue as good as two thouſãd vnder me, who by the cenſure of excommunication euery yere, denoũced againſt wilfull murtherers, common theues, burners of mens houſes, & ſuch like malefactors, ſtand accurſed: Of all which number notwithſtanding, ſcarcely 14. there be, which come to me or to any about me for their abſolution. And yet all they receiue the Sacramentes as other do, & all becauſe they be abſoyled, or becauſe they faine themſelues to be abſoyled by none other then by friers: who in ſo doing, are proued to be vnder the daūger of excommunication, both the friers, and alſo the pariſhners, if they knowing therof do conſent to theyr error.

Cap. Cupientes de pœnis. Clement.

The Friers proued to be excommunicated by the popes lawe.

Alſo out of the ſaid Clementines, by three other places in one chapter, he proued the friers to be excōmunicate, to wit in the chap. Cupientes, De pœnis in Clement. In ẏ which chapter: Firſt, all ſuch religious men are excommunicate, which in their Sermons preſume to withdraw their hearers from their tithes paying, due vnto churches. Secōdly, in the ſayd chapter all ſuch friers are ſuſpended from preaching, and ſo are excommunicate, which within a certayne time did not make a conciō to ſuch as come to theyr confeſſions, in paying their tythes truely and duely to the Church. Thirdly, in the foreſayd chapter alſo, all ſuch religious perſons be bound in excōmunication, which induce men by any maner of meanes, either by vow, othe, or promiſe, to chuſe theyr burials within their Churches, or not to chaūge the ſame, if they haue made any ſuch promiſe before. In all which three poyntes, he proued the friers to be culpable and excommunicate.

An other proofe, that the pariſhner may more ſafely goe to his curate, then to the Fryers.

Moreouer, for the more ſurer way for ẏ pariſhners to reſort to their appointed curates, thē to ẏ friers, he argued thus. For that the pariſh Prieſt or Curate being better acquaynted with his owne pariſhner thē is a ſtraunger, can better iudge of the nature and diſpoſitiō of his diſeaſe, and miniſter to him due Phiſick of penaunce for the ſame, and alſo wilbe more carefull in curing him.

The ſecond part of the ſecond concluſion proued.

Thus the firſt part of the ſecond concluſion or article being proued and argued, Armachanus procedeth farther to proue the ſecond part: that is better for the pariſhners to leaue the Friers, and to reſort to their owne Paſtors. Which he proued by eight or nine reaſons.

Firſt, for that the ordinary paſtor, is properly appointed of God vnto that miniſtery: wheras the Frier, is but onely permitted of man therunto.

Secondly, for that in reſorting to the ordinary of the pariſh, is a double reward of merite, wheras in comming to the Friers there is but one.

Thirdly, becauſe the ordinary is more bounde to his owne flocke, and is to be thought to be more tender and carefull ouer them, then a ſtraunger.

Fourthly, becauſe to reſort to the perſon of his owne ordinary, there is more aſſuraunce and certainty, (as is aboue declared) then to an other.

Innocent cap. Si animarū.

Fiftly, becauſe (as Innocentius, Cap. Si animarum, ſayth) the comming to the curate or paſtor ordinary, is more eaſy and light, both in the night and in neceſſity.

Sixtly, for ſo much as the pariſhner muſt needes come to his Curate at ſome time, and eſpecially beeing in neceſſity: It is expedient and profitable, that his former life before were knowne to him, rather then to the other.

Seuenthly, for that (as the ſayd Innocentius affirmeth) it ſtriketh more ſhame of his ſinne to the pariſhner to be confeſſed to his curate whom he ſeeth euery day, then to a frier vnknowne.

Eightly, becauſe it is more profitable eſpecially for thē that liue in Matrimony, that he which heareth the confeſſion of the one, ſhould heare alſo the cōfeſſion of the other. So that one hearing the confeſſion of them both as a ſpirituall Phiſition taking two cures in one body, may better know what ſpirituall coūſell is to be miniſtred to the one, after he hath cured the other. &c.

The third part of the ſecond concluſion argued.

These things thus proued before, then Armachanus conſequently proceedeth to the third part: Arguing, how the greater detrimentes and inconueniences do enſue by confeſſions, burials, and other Eccleſiaſtical functions exerciſed by the friers, then by paſtors & ſecular curats, ſeruing in pariſhes. About the which matter, the ſayd Armachanus learnedly and worthely inferreth a long diſcourſe prouing and inferring how pernicious theſe orders of friers are to the whole ſtate of the church: And what miſchief commeth by the priuiledges of certain Popes, which haue priuiledged them to intermeddle in the office & function of Eccleſiaſticall miniſters, to preach, and to take almes, and tithes of the people, and impropecrations from the church. All which his reaſōs & argumēts to proſecute in order as he hath left them in writing, it would make a matter of a large booke. Notwithſtanding, becauſe it ſhall not be vnfruitfull both for the time preſent & the poſterity, to know the manifold detrimētes and diſcommodities receiued by theſe friers, and to know what benefit God hath done for vs in vnburdening the Church of this monſtrous generation: And eſpecially becauſe the booke of Armachanus is rare otherwiſe to be found, intituled, Defenſorium Curatorum: I haue briefly therfore contracted out of the ſame, certaine of his reaſons, ſuch as ſemed moſt apperteining and moſt worthy of noting.

Defenſorium. Curatorum. Armachanus.

And firſt, alleadging the authority of Innocent the 4. He importeth foure incōueniēces riſing by the friers, which be theſe: Contempt of the people againſt their ordinaries, decreaſing of deuotion, taking away of ſhame frō the people by confeſſing to the friers, deteining of oblations, ſuch as the people are wont to geue at their confeſſiō & burials, and which by right belong to the pariſh churches.

Cap. Dudum.

Item, by the ſayd priuiledges of the Popes, graunted to the friers, many other great enormities do riſe. As firſt becauſe therby, the true ſhepheards do not know the faces of their flocke.

The harmes that come to the world by the Friers, declared.

Item, by the occaſion of theſe priuiledges, geuen to the Friers, great contention, and ſometimes blowes riſe betwene the friers and ſecular curates, about tythes, impropecrations, and other auayles.

Item, by the occaſion of the foreſayd priuiledges, diuers yoūg men as well in vniuerſities as in their fathers houſes, are allured craftely by the friers their confeſſors, to enter their orders: from thence afterward, they can not get out though they would, to the great griefe of their parentes, and no leſſe repentaunce to the young men themſelues. The example wherof, Armachanus in the ſayd hys treatiſe inferreth, of a certayne ſubſtantiall Engliſh man being with him at his Inne in Rome: who hauing a ſonne at the vniuerſity of Oxford, which was entiſed by ẏ friers to enter into their order, could by no meanes after releaſe him out. But whē his father & his mother woulde come vnto him, they could not be ſuffered to ſpeake with him, but vnder the friers cuſtody. Wheras the Scripture commaundeth plainly, that who ſo ſtealeth any man & ſelleth him (being therof conuicted) ſhalbe put to death. Exod. 21. And for the ſame cauſe, the father was compelled to come vp to Rome to ſeek remedy for his ſonne. And thus ſayth Armachanus, it may appeare what damage and detriments come, by theſe friers vnto the common people.

Example of the Friers theft in Oxford.

Friers hinderers of Vniuerſities.

And no leſſe inconuenience and daunger alſo by ẏ ſayd friers, riſeth to the Clergy: for ſo much, as lay men ſeeyng their childrē thus to be ſtollē frō thē in the vniuerſities by ẏ friers, do refuſe therfore to ſend thē to their ſtudies: Rather willing to keep them at home to their occupation, or to folow the plough, then ſo to be circumuēted and defeated of their ſonnes at the vniuerſity, as by dayly experiēce (ſayth he) doth manifeſtly appeare. For where as in my time (ſayth Armachanus) there were in the vniuerſity of Oxford 30000. ſtudentes: now are there not to be founde 6000. The occaſion of which ſo great decay, is to be aſcribed to no other cauſe, but to this circumuention onely of the friers aboue mentioned.

30. thouſand ſtudents in Oxford, in the time of Armachanus.

The Friers a great cauſe of decay of learning.

Ouer and beſides this, an other incōuenience as great or greater, the ſaid Armachanus inferred to proceed by the friers, through the decay of doctrine, and knowledge in all maner faculties and liberall ſciences, which thus he declared. For that theſe begging friers through their priuileges obteined of the Popes, to preach, to heare confeſſions, and to bury: and through theyr charters of impropecratiōs, did grow therby to ſuch great riches and poſſeſſions by theyr begging, crauing, catching and intermedling with church matters, that no booke could ſtirre of any ſcience, either of Diuinity, law, or Phiſicke, but they were both able and ready to buy it vp. So that euery couent hauing a great library full ſtuffed and furniſhed with all ſortes of bookes, and being ſo many couents within the realme, & in euery couent ſo many friers increaſing dayly more and more: by reaſon therof, it came to paſſe, that very few books or none at all remayne for other ſtudents. Which by his owne experiēce he thus teſtifieth, ſaying: that he himſelfe ſent forth to the vniuerſity foure of his owne Prieſts or chaplaynes, who ſending him word agayne ẏ they could neither finde the Bible, nor any other good profitable booke of diuinitye meete for theyr ſtudye, therefore were minded to returne home to their country: and one of them, he was ſure, was returned by this time agayne.

Bookes not to be gotten for the Friers.

Example what lacke of bookes commeth by the Friers.

The Friers giltie in 3. faultes.
1. Diſobedience.
2. Auarice.
3. Pride.

Furthermore, as he hath proued hetherto, the Friers to be hurtful both to the laity, and to the clergy: ſo proceeding farther, he proueth them to be hurtfull alſo to themſelues. And that in 3. poynts, as incurring the vice of diſobedience agaynſt God, againſt their owne rule: The vice of auarice: and the vice of pride. The probatiō of all which poyntes, he proſecuted in a long diſcourſe.

Armachanus chargeth the Friers with diſobedience.

Firſt (ſayth he) they are diſobedient to the law of God: Thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbors houſe, Oxe nor Aſſe, nor any thing that is his: In that they procure the Popes letters to preach in Churches, and to take burials from churches, with licence annexed withal to receiue the auailes which riſe of the ſame, which properly belōgeth to the right of pariſh prieſtes.

Friers diſobedient to the rule of Scripture.

Item, they are diſobedient to this rule of the Goſpell: So do to other, as thou would haue done to thee.

Itē, they be diſobediēt agaynſt theyr owne rule, which being foūded vpon ſtraight pouerty and beggery, this licence obteined for thē to require neceſſary for theyr labors of the people, is repugning agaynſt the ſame foundation.

Item, they be diſobedient to the rule of the Scripture, which ſayth: let no man take honor vnto him, except he be called, as Aarō, Alſo ſaith S. Paul, how ſhall they preach, vnleſſe they be ſēt. And how obſerue they this rule of obedience, who profeſſing to keepe the perfection of the Goſpell, yet contrary to the Goſpell, procure to thēſelues priuiledges to runne before they be ſent?

Itē, to theyr own rule they are diſobediēt: For where theyr chapter ſayth, that if any wil take vpō them this order, & will come to our brethren: let our brethren firſt ſend them to the prouincials to be examined of the Catholicke fayth and Sacraments of the Church. &c. Cōtrary whereunto the friers haue procured a priuiledge, that not onely the prouincials, but other inferiors alſo may take vnto them indifferently, whom they can catch: ſo farre without al examination, that almoſt at this day there is no notable houſe of friers, wherin is not either a whole, or halfe a couent of lads & boyes vnder 10. yere old, being circūuented, which neither can ſkill of the Creed nor Sacraments.

Friers diſobedient to their own profeſsiō.

Agayne, the rule of Fraunciſe ſayth: that his brethren Obſeruaunts muſt obſerue not to preach in the Dioces of any biſhop, without the conſent of the Biſhop: And moreouer the ſayd Frauncife in his teſtament ſayth: that if he had as much wiſedome as Salomon, and found poore ſecular prieſts in the pariſhes where the dwel: yet he would not preſume to preach without theyr will, and alſo would feare, loue, & honor them, & all other as his maiſters, & ſo they be Hæc ille. Againſt which rule, how the friers do diſobey, how litle they reuerence Biſhops or ſecular prieſts: what priuileges, exemptions, & immunities they procure agaynſt them, the world may ſee and iudge.

Itē, when none may be admitted to preach, or to heare confeſſions, vnles they be entred into orders: and ſeing by the cōmō law of the Church, none muſt be admitted into holy orders, except he haue ſufficient title of liuing and clothing: The friers therefore hauing no ſuch title (being wilfull beggers) do diſobey in both reſpects, that is, both in entring into ſuch orders without conuenient title, and in exerciſing the office of preaching without ſuch lawfull orders.

Moreouer the foreſayd Frauncife in his teſtament cōmaundeth thus: I commaund (ſayth he) firmely by vertue of obedience, to all and ſingular my brethren whereſoeuer they be: that none of them preſume to obtayne in the court of Rome any letter or writing, either by himſelfe or by any other meanes, neither for the Church nor for any other place nor vnder any coulour of preaching, nor yet for the perſecuting of their owne bodyes &c. Againſt which teſtamen of Franciſe, the Franciſcanes in procuring theyr priuiledges from the Biſhop of Rome, haue incurred manifeſt diſobediēce, as all the world may ſee. Neither will this obiectiō ſerue them, becauſe the Pope hath diſpenſed with Franciſe rule. For if the teſtament of Franciſe as he ſayth came from GOD, (and ſo ſhould God haue three teſtaments) how then can the Pope repeale his precept, or diſpenſe with his rule, when by the rule of the law. Par in parem non habet imperium?

Armachanus chargeth the Friers with auarice.

Secondly, concerning the vice of auarice, manifeſtly it may be proued vpon them (ſayth Armachanus) for els, ſeing ſo many charges belong to the office of a ſecular pariſh prieſt, as to miniſter the Sacrament at Eaſter, to viſit the ſicke with extreme vnction to baptiſe childrē, to wed, with ſuch other wherein ſtandeth as great deuotion: how then happeneth that theſe friers making no labor for theſe, onely procure to thēſelues priuiledges to preach in churches, to heare confeſſions, and to receiue licence to bury frō pariſh churches but becauſe there is lucre and gayne in theſe to be looked for, in the other is none?

An other proofe

Which alſo may appere by this: for otherwiſe if it were for mere deuotion onely, that they procure licence to bury from pariſh churches, and to preach: why then haue they procured with all, licence to take offerings? oblations and legacies for theyr funerals. And for theyr preaching, why haue they annexed alſo licence to require and take of the people neceſſaryes for theyr labor, but onely auarice is the cauſe thereof.

An other proofe.

Likewiſe for hearing of confeſſiōs: whē all good men haue enough to know theyr owne faults, and nothing liſt to heare the faultes of other: It is probably to be ſuppoſed by this theyr priuilege of hearing all mens confeſſiōs, that they would neuer haue bene ſo deſirous of procuring that priuilege, were it not that theſe friers did fele ſome ſweetnes and gayne to hang vpon the ſame.

An other proofe.

Item, where the rule of frier Franciſe forbiddeth them to company with any womē, to enter into Monaſteries, to be Godfathers and Goſſips to men and women: how commeth it, that they contrary to theyr rule, enter into the ſecret chambers of Queenes and other women: and made to know the moſt ſecret counſels of theyr doings, but that auarice and commodity haue ſo blinded their eyes, & ſtyrred theyr hartes.

Armachanus chargeth the friers with pride.

Thirdly, that the friers fall into the vice of pride & ambition, the ſayd Armachanus proued thus.

To ſeek or to procure any high place in the Church, is a poynt of pride & ambition. Chriſoſt. in opere perfecto: Nūquam ſine ambitione deſideratur primatus in Eccleſia.

The friers ſeek and procure a high place in the church. Ergo. the friers be proud and ambitious.

The Minor he proueth: To haue the ſtate of preaching and hearing confeſſions, is in the church a ſtate of honor.

The friers ſeeke and haue procured the ſtate of preaching and hearing confeſſions.

Ergo, The friers ſeeke and procure an high place in the Church. &c.

The 3. concluſion or article.

His third concluſion was, that the Lord Chriſt in his humane conuerſation was alwayes poore, not for that he loued or deſired pouerty for it ſelf. &c, Wherin this is to be noted, that Armachanus differed not frō the friers in this that Chriſt was poore, and that he loued pouerty: but here in ſtood the difference, in maner of louing, that is whether he loued pouerty for it ſelf, or not. Wherin the foreſayd Armachanus vſed foure probations.

Firſt, forſomuch as to be poore, is nothing els but to be miſerable: and ſeing no man coueteth to be in miſery for it ſelf: Therfore he concluded, that Chriſt deſired not pouerty for it ſelfe.

Ariſt. Ethic. lib. 1.

His ſecond reaſon was deriued out of Ariſtotle. Nothing (ſayth he) is to de loued for it ſelfe, but that frō which (all commodities being ſecluded which folow therupō) is voluntarily ſought and deſired. But take from pouerty al reſpect of cōmodities folowing ẏ ſame, it would be ſought neither of God nor mā. Ergo, he cōcluded, Chriſt loued not pouerty for it ſelfe.

Thirdly agayne: No effect of ſinne, ſaid he, is to be loued for it ſelfe. But pouerty is the effect of ſinne. Ergo, pouerty was not loued of Chriſt for it ſelfe.

Fourth, Item, no priuation of the thing that is good, is to be loued for it ſelfe. Pouerty is the priuation of the thing that is good, that is of riches (for God hymſelfe is principally rich:) Ergo, pouerty for it ſelfe was not loued of Chriſt.

The 4. concluſion of Armachanus againſt the Friers.

The fourth concluſion was, that Chriſt our Lord and Sauior did neuer begge wilfully. Which he proued by ſondry reaſons.

1. Firſt, for that Chriſt in ſo doing ſhould breake the law, which ſayth: Thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbors houſe, his wife, his ſeruāt, his maid, his oxe, his aſſe, or any thing that is his, Exod. 20. In the daunger of which cōmaundement, he that beggeth voluntaryly muſt needes incurre.

2. Item, if Chriſt had begged voluntaryly he ſhould haue committed agaynſt an other cōmaundement, which ſayth. There ſhalbe no begger, nor needy perſon among you &c. Deut. 6.

3. Item, Chriſt in ſo doing ſhould haue tranſgreſſed the Emperours law, vnder which he would himſelfe be ſubiect (as appeareth by geuing, & bidding tribute to be geuē to Ceſar) foraſmuch as the ſame Emperours law ſayth. There ſhall no valiant begger be ſuffered in the City.

4. Item, if Chriſt had bene a wilfull begger, he had broke the law of louing his neighbor: whō he had vexed, hauing no need. For who ſo without need aſketh or craueth of his neighbor, doth but vexe him, in ſuch ſort as he would not be vexed himſelfe. Which Chriſt would neuer do.

5. Item. if Chriſt had begged wilfully, he had moued ſlaūder therby to hys owne Goſpell, which he with miracles did confirme. For then they that ſaw his miracle in feeding 5000. in wildernes, would haue thought much with them ſelues how that miracle had bene wrought, if he in feeding other, either could not, or would not feed himſelfe.

6. Item, if Chriſt had begged wilfully, then he had done that which himſelfe condemneth by Paule: for ſo we read. 1. Timo. 6. That Paule condemneth them, which eſteme piety to be gayne and lucre. Which all they do that vnder the coulour of piety, hunt or ſeeke for gayne, when otherwiſe they need not.

7. Item, if Chriſt had begged wilfully, he has offended in declaring an vntruth, in ſo doing. For he that knoweth in his mind, that he needeth not in deed that thing whych in word he aſketh of other: Declareth in himſelfe an vntruth as who in word pretendeth to be otherwiſe then he is in very deede, which Chriſt without doubt neuer did nor would euer do.

8. Item, if Chriſt had begged wilfully, that is, hauing no true need thereunto: then had he appeared either to be an hypocrite, ſeeming to be that he was not, and to lacke whē he did not: or els to be a true begger in very deed, not able to ſuffice his neceſſity. For he is a true begger in deed, which being conſtrayned by mere neceſſity, is forced to aſke of other that which he is not able to geue to himſelf. But neither of theſe two agreeth in Chriſt.

Ex Vita S. Clementis.

9. Item, if Chriſt had begged wilfully, then why did Peter rebuke the mother of S. Clement his diſciple, finding her to ſtād amōg the beggers, whō he thought to be ſtrōg inough to labor with her handes for her liuing: If ſhe in ſo doing had folowed the example of Chriſt?

Clements example contrarie to the Friers.

10. Item, if Chriſt had begged wilfully: And if the Friers do rightly define perfectiō of the Goſpell by wilful pouerty: thē was Clement S. Peters ſucceſſor to blame, which labored ſo much to remoue away beggery and pouerty frō among al them, that were conuerted to the faith of Chriſt: and is ſpecially for the ſame commended of the Church?

13. quaeſt. cap. 1.

11. Agayne, why did the ſayd Clement, writing to Iames Byſhop of Ieruſalem, commaund ſo much to obey the doctrine and examples of the apoſtles: who as he ſheweth in that Epiſtle, had no begger nor needy perſon amōgſt thē, If Chriſtian perfection (by the friers Philoſophy) ſtādeth in wilfull beggery?

12. Item, if Chriſt the high prieſt had begged wilfully, thē did holy Church erre wittingly, which ordeined that none without ſufficient title of liuing & clothing, ſhould be admitted to holy orders. And moreouer, when it is ſeyd in ỹ canonicall decrees, that the biſhop or clerke that beggeth, bringeth ſhame vpon the whole order of the clergy.

13. Item: if Chriſt had wilfully begged, then the example of wilful pouerty had perteyned to the perfection of Chriſtian life, which is contrary to the old law: which commaūdeth the Prieſtes (which liued then after the perfection of the law) to haue poſſeſſions and tithes, to keep them from beggery.

14. Item, if Chriſt did wilfully begge, then beggery were a poynt of chriſtian perfection. And ſo the Church of God ſhould erre, in admitting ſuch patrimonies and donatiōs geuen to the Church, and ſo in taking from the Prelates their perfection.

15. Agayne, what will theſe friers which put their perfection in begging, ſay to Melchiſedech: who without begging or wilfull pouerty, was the high Prieſt of God, and King of Salem, and prefigured the order and Prieſthoode of Chriſt?

16. And if beggery be ſuch a perfection of the Goſpell (as the friers ſay) how cōmeth it, that the holy Ghoſt geuen to the Apoſtles, which ſhould lead them into all trueth: tolde them no word of this beggerly perfection, neither is there any word mentioned therof through the whole Teſtamēt of God.

17. Moreouer, where the Prophet ſayth, I neuer did ſee the iuſt man forſaken, nor his ſeed go begging their bread: How ſtandeth this with the iuſtice of Chriſt, which was moſt perfectly iuſt, if he ſhould be forſaken, or his ſeede goe begge their bread? And thē how agreeth this with the abhominable doctrine of friers Franciſcan, which put theyr perfection in wilfull begging?

18. Finally, doe wee not read that Chriſt ſent his diſciples to preach without ſcripp or wallet, and bid them ſalute no man by the way? Meaning that they ſhould begge nothing of no man? Did not the ſame Chriſt alſo labor with his handes, vnder Ioſeph? S. Paule likewiſe did he not labour with his handes, rather then he would burden the Church of the Corinthians? And where now is the doctrine of the friers, which putteth ſtate of perfectiō in wilfull begging.

The 5. concluſion of Armachanus againſt the Friers.

The fift concluſion of Armachanus agaynſt the friers was this: that Chriſt neuer taught any man wilfully to begge, which he proued thus. It is written Actes. 1. Chriſt began to do and to teach. If Chriſt therfore, which did neuer wilfully beg himſelfe, as hath bene proued, had taught men otherwiſe to do, then his doing and teaching had not agreed together.

Item, if Chriſt which neuer begged himſelfe wilfully, had taught men this doctrine of wilfull begging contrary to his owne doing: he had geuen ſuſpition of his doctrine, and miniſtred ſlaunder of the ſame; as hath bene proued in the fourth concluſion before.

Moreouer in ſo teaching, he had taught cōtrary to the Emperors iuſt law, which expreſly forbiddeth the ſame.

The 6. concluſion of Armachanus againſt the Friers.

The ſixt concluſion of Armachanus agaynſt the Friers was, that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt teacheth vs, that we ſhould not beg wilfully, which he proueth by ſeuē or eight reaſons.

Firſt where it is written Luke. 14. When thou makeſt a feaſt call the poore, weake, lame, and blind: and thou ſhalt be bleſſed, for they haue not wherewith to reward thee agayne.

To this alſo perteineth ỹ decree of ỹ apoſtle. 2. Theſ. 3. He that will not worke let him not eat. Furthermore, the ſame Apoſtle addeth in the ſame place: For you haue vs for exāple how we were burdenous to no mā, neither did we eat our bread freely: but with labor and wearines, toiling both day and night, and all becauſe we would not burthē you. &c.

4. Item, where we read in the ſcripture, the ſlouthful mā reprehended, Pro. 6. Why ſlepeſt thou O ſluggard, thy pouerty and beggery is comming vpon thee like an armed man. &c. And agayne in the ſame booke of Prouerbs. The ſlouthfull man (ſayth the ſcripture) for colde would not go to the plough, therfore he ſhal beg in ſommer, and no man ſhall geue him. &c. Alſo in the ſayd booke of Prouerb. laſt chapter. The diligent labouring woman is commended, whoſe fingers are exerciſed about the rocke & ſpindle. And all theſe places make agaynſt the wilfull begging of ſturdy Friers.

The rule of Frier Fraunces.

5. Item, Frier Frances their owne founder in his owne teſtament ſayth: And I haue laboured with mine owne hands, and will labor, and will that all my frierlings ſhall labor and liue of theyr labor, wherby they may ſupport thē ſelues in an honeſt meane. And they that cannot worke, let them learne to worke, not for any couetouſneſſe to receiue for theyr labor, but for example of good workes, and to auoyd idleneſſe. And when the price of theyr labor is not geuen them, let them reſort to the Lords table, & aſke their almes from dore to dore. &c. Thus much in his Teſtamēt. And in his rule he ſayth: Such brethren to whom ỹ Lord hath geuen the gift to labor, let them labour faithfully and deuoutly. &c. Wherfore it is to be maruelled, how thoſe friers with their wilfull begging, dare tranſgreſſe the rule & obedience of Frier Frauncis their great graundfathers teſtament.

6. Item, if Chriſt at any time did beg or did lacke, it was more becauſe he would vſe a miracle in his own perſō, thē becauſe he would beg wilfully; as when he ſent Peter to ỹ ſea to finde a groat in the fiſhes mouth. Which thing yet he thought rather to do, thē to beg the groat of the people, which he might ſoone haue obteined.

7. Item, by diuers other his examples he ſemeth to teach the ſame as where he ſayth: The workmā is worthy of his hier. Alſo the workeman is worthy of his meate. Math. 10. Luke 10. And whē he ſpake to Zache, that he would turne into his houſe. And ſo likewiſe in Bethany and all other places he euer vſed rather to burden his frends thē to beg of other, vnacquaynted.

8. Item, with playn precept thus he ſendeth forth his diſciples, willing them not to go from houſe to houſe, Luke. 10. ſo as Friers vſe now to goe. Many other Scriptures there be, which reproue begging: as where it is ſayd. The foot of a foole is ſwift to the houſe of his neighbor, Eccl. 29. And in an other place: My childe (ſayth he) ſee thou want not is the time of thy life, for better it is to die then to lack. Eccl. 21.

9. Itē, where Chriſt counſelling the young man, bad him go and ſel that he had and geue to the poore and folow him if he would be perfect: doth not there cal him to wilful begging, but calleth him to folow him, which did not beg wilfully.

The ſeuenth cōcluſion of Armachanus againſt the Fryers.

The ſeuenth concluſion of Armachanus is: that no wiſe nor true holy man can take vpon him wilfull pouerty to be obſerued alwayes, which he proueth by foure reaſons.

Firſt, that wilfull beggery was reproued both by the doctrine of Chriſt and of the Apoſtles, as in the concluſion before hath bene declared.

2. Item, a man in taking vpon hym wilfull beggery, in ſo doing ſhould lead himſelfe into temptation, which were agaynſt the Lordes prayer. For as muche as Salomon

Wilful beggery not to be promiſed.

Prouerb.30.ſaith: O Lord, beggery and great riches geue me not, but onely ſufficiency to liue vpon: leaſt if I haue to much, I be driuen to deny thee, & ſay: who is the Lord. Agayne, if I haue to litle, I be forced thereby to ſteale, and to periure the name of my God. wherfore ſayth Eccle.27. For need many haue offēded. And therfore they that chuſe wilfull pouerty, take to them great occaſion of temptatiō.
3. Item, they that take wilfull pouerty vpon them when they need not induce themſelues voluntaryly to break the commaundemēt of God: Thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbours houſe.ac. Agayne, where it is commaunded, there ſhalbe no begger among you. &c.
4. Item, he that taketh vpon him needles and wilfully to beg, maketh himſelfe vnapt to receiue holy orders, hauing (as is ſayd) no ſufficient title thereunto, according to the lawes of the Church.

The 8. concluſion of Armachanus againſt the Friers.

The 8. concluſiō of this matter: That it is not agreeing to the rule of the Friers obſeruant, to obſerue wilfull beggery. which (ſaith he) may be proued, for that Frier Frances, both in his rule and in his Teſtamēt, being left to his Franciſcans, doth plainly preferre labor before begging.

The 9. concluſion of Armachanus.

Touching this booke of the maiſters of Paris condemned, looke pag.404.

The 9. and laſt concluſion of this matter is. That the bull of pope Alexander the 4. which condemneth the booke of the maiſters of Paris, impugneth none of theſe concluſions premiſed. For the profe therof, he thus inferred.

Ex Clement.

Quia quorundā

Pope Nicolas the 3. reuoketh the Bul of pope Alexander the fourth.

1. Firſt, that Pope Iohn the 24. in his conſtitutiō, beginning thus: Quia quorundam, affirmeth expreſly, how Pope Nicholas the 3. reuoked and called backe the ſayd Bull of Pope Alexander the 4. and all other writings of his: touching all ſuch articles, which in the ſame foreſayd conſtitution of this Pope Iohn be cōteined and declared. wherin alſo is declared, how ſtrayt the pouerty of the friers ought to be, which they call wilfull pouerty.
2. Item, it is manifeſt and notorious to all men, how the ſayd Pope Nicholas the 3. in his declaratiō ſheweth, how the friers both ought to labor with their handes and how moreouer the ſayd Friers ought not to preach within the dioces of any biſhop, whereſoeuer they be reſiſted. which being ſo, the concluſion appereth, that the bull of Pope Alexander the 4. as touching theſe articles, is voyde and of none effect. Beſide the which articles, there is nothing els in the ſayd Bull of Alexander (that I remember) which impugneth any of theſe concluſions premiſed.

The ende and concluſion of this Oration of Armachanus before the pope. Ex defenſorio curatorum.

Many things mo (ſayd he) I had beſide theſe, both to obiect and to annſwere again to the ſame: and to confirme more ſurely and firmely theſe my reaſons and aſſertions premiſed. But I haue already to much weried your holyneſſe, and your reuerend Lordſhips here preſent. wherefore I conclude and humbly and deuoutly beſeech you, according to my former petition premiſed in the beginning of this matter: that you iudge not after the outward face, but iudge ye true iudgement. Iohn.7. Ex libro Armachani, cui titulus Defenſorium Curatorum.

Notes to be obſerued.

BY this Oratiō of Armachanus the learned Prelate, thus made before Pope Innocent and his Cardinals, diuers and ſundrye thinges there be for the vtility of the Church worthy to be obſerued. Firſt what troubles and vexations came to the Church of Chriſt by theſe Friers. Alſo what perſecution foloweth after by the meanes of them, agaynſt ſo many learned mē & true ſeruants of Chriſt. Furthermore, what repugnance and contrariety was among the Popes, & how they could not agree among themſelues about the Friers. Fourthly what peſtiferous doctrine, ſubuerting welneare the teſtament of Ieſus Chriſt. Fiftly what decay of miniſters in Chriſtes church, as appereth pag.411. Sixtly, what robbing and circumuenting of mens children, as appeareth, pag.411. Seuenthly, what decay of vniuerſities, as appeareth by Oxforde, pag.411. Eightly, what damage to learning, and lacke of books to ſtudents came by theſe friers, as appeareth pag.411. Ninthly, to what pride vnder coulour of feined humility to what riches, vnder diſsimuled pouerty they grew vnto, here is to be ſeene. In ſo much that at length through theyr ſubtle & moſt daungerous hipocriſy they crept vp to be Lordes, Archbiſhops, Cardinals & at laſt alſo, Chauncelors of realmes, yea and of moſt ſecret counſell with king and queenes, as appeareth pag.411.

Contrarietie among the popes

Whether the Fryers make vp the bodie of Antechriſt or not.

All theſe things wel cōſidered, now remaineth in the church to be marked: that forſomuch as theſe Friers (with theyr new foūd teſtament of Frier Fraunces) not beeing contented with the teſtamēt of God in his ſonne Chriſt, began to ſpring the ſame time, when as Satan was propheſied to be let looſe, by the order of the Scripture, whether therfore it is to be doubted, that theſe Friers make vp the body of Antechriſt, which is propheſied to come in the Church, or not: ſo much more to be doubted, becauſe who ſo liſt to trie ſhall finde, that of all other enemies of Chriſt, of whom ſome be manifeſt, ſome be priuy, all be together cruel: yet is there no ſuch ſort of enemies which more ſleightly deceiueth the ſimple chriſtian, or more deepely drowneth him in damnation, then doth this doctrine of the Friers.

The death of godly Armachanus. The teſtimony of a Cardinall vpon Armachanus.

But of this Oration of Armachanus enough, which Oration what ſucceſſe it had with the Pope, by ſtory it is not certain. By his own life declared, it appereth, that the Lord ſo wrought, that his enemies did not triumph ouer him. Notwithſtāding, this by ſtory appereth, that he was 7. or 8. yeares in baniſhment for the ſame matter, & there died in the ſame at Auiniō, Of whom a certayne Cardinal hearing of his death openly proteſted, that the ſame day, a mighty piller of Chriſtes church was fallen.

Ex Chron. reg. Rich. 2.

After the death of Armachanus, the Friers had contention likewiſe with the monkes of Benedictes order about the ſame yeare, 1360. and ſo remoued theyr cauſe both againſt the monkes and agaynſt the vniuerſity of Oxford, vnto the court of Rome, wherin ſeyth the author, they lacked an other Richard. Ex Botonero. By this appeareth to be true, which is teſtified in the firſt tome of Wald. that lōg debate continued betwene the friers and the vniuerſity of Oxford: Againſt whom firſt ſtood Robert Groſted biſhop of Lincolne aboue mentioned: Then Seualius of Yorke. Afterward Ioannes Bachothorpe, and now this Armachanus, of whom here preſently we entreate. And after hym agayne Iohn wickliffe, of whom (Chriſt willing) we will ſpeake hereafter. Ex Waldeno. Againſt this foreſayd Armachanus wrote diuers Friers, Roger Conaway a Franciſcan, Iohn Heyldeshā Carmelite, Galfridus Hardby frier Auguſtine. Alſo frier Engelbert a Dominican, in a booke intituled, Defenſorium priuilegiorum, and diuers other. I credibly heare of certayne olde Iriſh Bibles tranſlated long ſince into the Iriſh toung, which if it be true, it is not other like but to be the doing of this Armachanus. And thus much of this learned prelate and Archbiſhop of Ireland, a man worthy for his chriſtian zeale of immortall cōmendation.

Pope Vrbane.5. { Anno. 1360. }

After the death of this Innocent, next was poped in ẏ ſea of Rome, pope Vrbane the fift, who by the fathers ſide was an engliſhman. This Vrbane had bene a long wayter in the court of Rome: and when he ſaw no promotion would light vpon him, complayning to a certayn frend of his, made to him his mone, ſaying: That he thought veryly, if all the Churches of the world ſhould fall, yet none would fall in his mouth. The which frend after ſeing him to be Pope, and inthroniſed in his threefold crowne, commeth to him, & putting him in remembrance of his words to him before, ſayth: that where his holyneſſe had moned his fortune to him, that if all the Churches in the world would fall, none would fall vpō his head: Now (ſayth he) god hath otherwiſe ſo diſpoſed, that all the churches in the world are fallen vpon your head. &c.

Vrbane cōplaineth that no promotiō wold fall vpon him. An anſwere againe to Vrbane being made Pope.

Ex Sabel. Enead 9. lib.8.

This Pope mayntayned and kindled great wars in Italy, ſending Egidius his Cardinall and Legate, and after him Arduinus a Burgundian his legate and Abbot with great puiſſaunce and much mony agaynſt ſundry cities in Italy: By whoſe meanes, the townes and Cittyes which before had broken frō the biſhop of Rome were oppreſſed: alſo Bernabes & Galeaceus princes of Millam, vanquiſhed. By whoſe example other being ſore feared, ſubmitted themſelues to the Church of Rome. And thus came vp that wicked church to her great poſſeſſiōs, which her patrons would needes father vpon Conſtantine the godly Emperor.

Howe the church of Rome came by their roiall poſſeſſions.

Nicholaus Orem.

In the time of this Pope Vrbane the 5. and in the ſecond yeare of his raign, about the beginning of the yere of our Lord.1364. I finde a certayne Sermon of one Nicolas Orem, made before the Pope and his Cardinalles on Chriſtmas euen. In the which Sermon, the learned man doth worthely rebuke the prelates and prieſts of his time, declaring their deſtruction not to be farre of, by certayne ſignes taken of their wicked and corrupt life. All the ſayings of the Prophets ſpoken agaynſt the wicked prieſtes of the Iewes, he doth aptly apply againſt the clergy of his time, comparing the Church then preſent to the ſpirituall ſtrumpet ſpoken of in the 16. of the Prophet Ezechiel. And proueth in concluſion the clergy of the church then, to be ſo much worſe then the old Synagoge of the Iewes, by how much it is worſe to ſell ẏ church & Sacraments, thē to ſuffer doues to be ſolde in the church. with no leſſe iugement alſo and learning he anſwereth to the old and falſe obiection of the papiſts: who albeit they be neuer ſo wicked, yet thinke themſelues to be the church which the Lord cannot forſake. All which thinges to ẏ entent they may the better appeare in his owne words, I haue thought here to tranſtate and exhibite the Sermon as it was ſpoken before the Pope.

¶ A copy of a Sermon made before Pope Vrbane.5.the fourth ſonday in Aduent 1364. by Nicholas Orem.

A Sermon made before the Pope.

Eſay.56.

The worlde deuided into two ſorts of men before the incarnation of Chriſt.

IVxta eſt ſalus mea, vt veniat,& iuſtitia.&c. That is: My ſauing health is neare at hand to come, and my righteouſnes to be reuealed.&c.Eſay.56. After the ſentence of S. Paule Rom. 2. and in diuers other places, before the Natiuity of Chriſt: the whole world was deuided into two ſorts of men, the Iewes and Gentils. The Iewes who wayted for the opening of the dore of Paradiſe, by the bloud of the Sauior to come. The Gentiles who yet ſitting in darckeneſſe were to be called to light, and to be iuſtified by fayth, as is written.Rom.5.

This ſaluation perteining both to the Iew and Gentile. God promiſed before time to the Fathers by the Prophets, to ſtirre vp the deſire thereof in their hartes the more: and to encreaſe theyr firme hope and fayth in the ſame. As firſt in Mich.6. the voyce of the Lord cryeth: Health and ſaluation ſhall be to all men which feare my name. And Eſay.46. I will geue in Sion ſaluation, and in Ieruſalem my glory.&c. with diuers ſuch other places like. And forſomuch as hope in many times which is deferred, doth afflict the ſoule, and conceiueth wearineſſe of long deferring: He therefore propheſying of the neareneſſe of the commyng thereof ſayeth moreouer.Eſay.14. his time is neare at hande to come. Alſo Abacuc.2.He will come and will not tary, with many ſuch other places moe. So then the holy Fathers being in Limbo, looked & hoped that he ſhould bring out them that ſate bound, and which in the houſe of priſon ſat in darckeneſſe, as is read Eſay.41. Then the time drew on in which came the fulneſſe of the Gentiles, and in which the Lord would declare the riches of this miſtery being hidden from the world, and from generations.Col.1. Wherefore the Lord in this text doth both certifye our fathers of the comming of our Sauior, and doth comfort them touching the neareneſſe thereof, and alſo teacheth the iuſtification of the Gentils by fayth approching now neare at hand, according to the words of my text, Iuxta eſt ſalus mea.&c. Which words were fulfilled thẽ, what time the Lord did manifeſt his ſaluation, and did reueale his righteouſnes in the ſight of all the Gentiles. And is deuided in 3. partes. Of which the firſt ſpeaketh of the neareneſſe of his comming, where is ſayd, Iuxta eſt ſalus.&c. The ſecond concerneth the miſtery of the Aduent of Chriſt and his incarnation, where he ſayth: Vt veniat.&c. Thirdly is conſidered the ſeuerity of God, his terrible reuenging iudgement to be reuealed, where he ſayth: Vt reueletur.&c. which is to be expounded of his primitiue iuſtice: whereof ſpeaketh Amos the 5. ſaying: And iudgement ſhall be reuealed like a floud, and righteouſneſſe like a ſtrong ſtream. Wherfore for our contẽplation let vs receiue with ioy the ſolemnities of his holy vigile, the word I ſay of God the father, that is, Chriſt. To whom it is ſayd Eſay.49. I haue geuen thee to be a light to the Gentiles, and to be my ſaluation, through the ends of the world. Agayne Eſay.46. My ſaluation ſhall not ſlacke.&c

Diuiſion.

1 Iuxta eſt.

2 Vt veniat.

3 Vt reueletur.

Amos.5.

As touching the neerenes thereof, it is in theſe dayes opened to vs by the goſpell, where we read in S.Math. When the virgine Mary was diſpouſed vnto Ioſeph, before they did come together: ſhe was found with childe by the holy Ghoſt. By this it was euident to vnderſtand, that our ſauior ought ſhortly to proceed out of the chaſte wombe of the virgin, according as the Prophet dyd foretell, ſaying: Behold a virgine ſhall conceiue and bring forth a ſonne.&c. For like as the grape when it waxeth great and full, is neare to the making of wine, and the floure when it ſhooteth abroad, it haſteth to the fruit: So the ſaluation of the world in the ſwelling and growing of the virgins wombe, began to draw nigh to mankinde. For then appeared the grace and bengnity of our Sauior, when his mother was foũd to haue in her wombe by the holy Ghoſt as is declared in that as followeth by the Angell ſaying: for that which is borne of her, is of the holy Ghoſt.

The ſecond part of his theame.

Touching the 2.part of that which is ſayd, vt veniat: this may be applyed to the contemplation of the miſtery of Chriſtes comming in the fleſh. Wherof ſpeaketh Aggeus the Prophet 2. He ſhal come, who is deſired and looked for of all nations.&c. Albeit the ſame alſo may be applied to the ſecond Aduent, ſpoken of the 3. of Eſay. The Lord ſhall come to iudgemẽt &c. In memoriall wherof, the 4.ſonday was dedicate, in the olde time of the fathers. And of this day of iudgement is writtẽ in the Prophet Sophon.cap.1. The day of the Lord is neare: great & mighty it is approching at hande & wondrous ſhoort. &c. And albeit not in it ſelfe, yet it may be expoũded in tribulatiõs that go before, as preambles vnto the ſame: as Greg. ſaith: The laſt tribulation is preuẽted with many & ſundry tribulations going before, although the end of al be not yet.

Aggeus.2.

The third part of his ſermon.

Wherfore now cõming to the 3. part of my ſermõ or theam, let vs ſee of thoſe tribulations that go before the laſt comming of Chriſt, if there be any ſuch tribulation approching nigh at hand, wherof this laſt part of my theame may be verified, where is ſaid: vt reueletur, that my righteouſnes ſhalbe reuealed to wit the righteouſnes primitiue, that righteouſneſſe may be brought, and the Propheſy of Daniel fulfilled Dan.9. Concerning which matter, 4. thinges here come in order to be declared.

First concerning the reuealing of tribulation, according to that part of my theame. Vt reueletur.&c.

1. Vt reueletur.

Secondly, concerning the nearenes of the tribulatiõ cõming according to the part of my theame. Quia iuxta eſt.&c.

2. Vt iuxta eſt.

Thirdly, of the falſe opinions of ſome, vpon this part of my theame. Vt veniat &c.

3. Vt veniat.

Fourthly, what meanes and conſultation we ought to take. Vt iuxta eſt ſalus.

4. Salus.

As for the firſt, it is ſo notorious and ſo commõ in the ſcriptures that the church ſhould ſuffer and abide tribulation, that I need not here to ſtand in alleadging any thing touching either the cauſes to be weid, or the terme to be coniectured thereof. As concerning the which cauſes, I will geue 2.rules to be noted before, for the better opening of that to follow. The firſt rule is, that by the 2.kingdomes of the nation of Hebrues, which were in the olde time, to wit, by the kingdome of Iſrael, whoſe head was Samaria, is ſignified in the prophets the erronious ſinagoge: And by the ſecond kingdome of Iuda, of whoſe ſtock came Chriſt, whoſe head metropolitane was Ieruſalem, is ſignified the true Church. And this rule is not mine, but is an authentike gloſe of S.Ierome, and alſo is the rule of Origene in the laſt Homely vpon the olde teſtament, and is approued by the church.

The firſt part of the ſubdiuiſion.

Two rules to be noted.

The kingdome of Iſrael ſignifying the falſe Church.

The kingdome of Iuda ſignifieth the right church.

The 2.rule.

The ſecond rule is, that by the brodell houſe and fornication mentioned in the Prophets: is ſignified ſimony, and abuſed diſpẽſations, and promotions of perſons vnworthy, for lukers ſake, or els for any other partiall fauour, whiche by vnlawfull wayes, by al lawes of the world to come to office and honor. Merx dicitur namque a merendo, that is, for gaine or price is deriued of gaining: For the which gayne or price, that is ſolde which by nature ought not to be ſolde. Therefore, to geue any thing for reſpect of gayne or hier, which ought to bee geuen freely for vertues ſake, is a kinde of ſpirituall corruption & as a man would ſay, an whoriſh thing, wherof the prophet Eſay, complayneth ſpeaking of Ieruſalem, and ſaying: The Citty which once was faythfull and full of iudgement, how is it now become an whoriſh city? And in like maner Oſee alſo the prophet.chap.9. Ieruſalem, thou haſt fornicated and gone an whoring frõ thy God. Thou haſt loued like an harlot, to get gayne in euery barne of corne. And in many other places of Scripture, where fornication can not be otherwiſe expounded.

Eſay.1.

Oſee.9.

Theſe two rules thus premiſed, now let vs marke the Scriptures, and according to the ſame iudge of the whole ſtate of the Church, both that is paſt, and that is to come: firſt intreating of the cauſes of tribulation to come: ſecõdly of the vicinity of time of the ſayd tribulation to come.

Fiue ſtates of the church deſcribed.

And firſt concerning the ſtate of the Church, & of cauſes of tribulation. Thus ſayth the Lord in the prophet Ezechiel. 16.cap. ſpeaking to the Church vnder the name of Ieruſalem. In the day of thy byrth I came by thee, and ſaw thee troden downe in thine owne bloud.&c. Here he ſpeaketh of the time of the martyrdome of the Church. Then it followeth: After this thou waſt clenſed frõ thy bloud, that waſt growne vp, & waxen great: thẽ waſhed I thee with water, I purged thy bloud from thee (ſpeaking of ceaſing of perſecution) I annoynted thee with oyle, I gaue thee chaunge of rayments, I girded thee with white ſilke, I decked thee with coſtly apparel, I put ringes vpon thy fingers, a chayn about thy neck, Spangs vpon thy forehead, and Earinges vpon thine eares. Thus waſt thou deckt with ſiluer & gold, & a beautifull crowne ſet vpon thine head. Meruelous goodly waſt thou & beautifull, euen a very queen waſt thou: For thou waſt excellẽt in my beuty, which I put vpon thee, ſayth the Lord God.&c. This prophecy or rather hiſtory ſpeaketh of and declareth, the proſperity of the church.

1. The martyrdome of the Church.

2. The proſperity of the church

3. The corruption of the church

And now heare the corruptiõ and tranſgreſſion of the churche, for ſo it followeth: But thou haſt put confidence in thine own beauty, and playd the harlot, when thou haddeſt gotten thee a name. Thou haſt committed whoredome with all that went by thee, and haſt fulfilled their deſires: Yea thou haſt taken thy garments of diuers coulors and decked thine altars therwith, wherevpon thou mighteſt fulfill thy whoredome of ſuch a faſhion as neuer was done, nor ſhall be. Which whoredome can in no wiſe be expounded for carnall, but ſpirituall whoredome. And therfore, ſee how liuely he hath paynted out the corruption and falling of the Church.

And therefore followeth now the correction and puniſhmẽt of the Church. It followeth: Beholde, I ſtretch out my hand ouer thee, and will diminiſh thy ſtore of foode, and deliuer thee ouer into the willes of the Philiſtines, and of ſuch as hate thee: And they ſhall breake downe thy ſtues, and deſtroy thy brodell houſes (that is, the place wherein thou didſt exerciſe this wickedneſſe) they ſhall ſtrippe thee out of thy clothes: All thy fayre and beautifull iuels ſhall they take from thee, and ſo let thee ſit naked and bare.&c.

and followeth more in the ſayd chapter. Thine eldeſt ſiſter is Samaria, ſhe and her daughters vpon thy left hand: But the yongeſt ſiſter that dwelleth on thy right hand is Sodoma with her daughters, whoſe ſinnes were theſe: pride, fulneſſe of meate, aboundãce and idleneſſe, neither retched they theyr hand to the poore. And yet neither Sodoma thy ſiſter with her daughters, hath done ſo euill as thou and thy daughters: Neither hath Samaria (that is the Sinagoge) done half of thy ſinnes, yea thou haſt exceeded them in wickedneſſe. Take therefore and beare thine owne confuſion. &c. Agayne in the 23. chapter of Ezechiel. After the Prophet hath deſcribed at large the wickedneſſe, corruption, and puniſhment of the Sinagoge, turning to the Church, ſayth: And when her ſiſter ſaw this, ſhe raged and was madde with luſt, loue of riches, and folowing voluptuouſnes. Her fornication and whoredome ſhe committed with Princes and great Lordes, clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell: ſo that her pappes were bruſed, and her breſtes were marred. And then ſpeaking of her puniſhment, ſayth: Then my hart forſooke her, like as my hart was gone from her ſiſter alſo. And moreouer repeating againe the cauſe thereof, addeth: Thy wickedneſſe and thy fornications hath wrought thee all this. &c.

Oſee.2.

The like we finde alſo in Eſay, Ieremy, Ezechiel and in all the other Prophetes, who propheſying all together in one meaning and almoſt in one maner of wordes: Do conclude with a full agreement and prophecye to come, that the Church ſhall fall, and then bee puniſhed for her great exceſſes, and to bee vtterly ſpoiled except ſhe repent of all her abhominations. Whereof ſpeaketh Oſeas chap. 2. Let her put away her whoredome out of her ſight, and her aduoutry from her breſtes, leaſt I ſtrip her naked and ſet her euen as ſhe came naked into the world (that is in her primitiue pouerty) So if ſhe do not it, it ſhal folow of her as in the prophet Nahum, chap. 3. For the multitude of the fornication of the fayre and beautifull harlotte, which is a maiſter of witchcraft, yea and ſelleth the people through her whoredome, and the nations through her witchcraft. And followeth vpon the ſame: Behold I will vpon thee ſayth the Lord of hoſtes, and will pull thy clothes ouer thy head, that thy nakednes ſhall appeare among the heathen, and thy ſhame among the kingdomes. &c.

5. The reformation of the Church.

Wherefore by theſe it is to be vnderſtand, that vpon this Church the primitiue iuſtice of God is to be reuealed hereafter. And thus much of the firſt of the foure members aboue fore touched.

Certaine notes and ſignes, that the tribulation of the Church draweth neare.

2. Theſſ. 2.

Now to the ſecond member of my theame, Iuxta eſt: concerning the neareneſſe of time. Although it is not for vs to knowe, the momẽts and articles of time: yet by certaine notes and ſignes peraduenture it may be collected and gathered, that whiche I haue here to ſay. For the tractation whereof, firſt I grounde my ſelfe vpon the ſaying of the Apoſtle Paule. 2. Theſſal. 2. where he writeth: That vnleſſe there come a defection firſt. &c. By the whiche defection. Ierome vltima quæſt. ad inquiſitiones Ianuarij, gathereth and expoundeth allegoricallye, the deſolation of the monarchy of Rome: Betweene the which deſolation, and the perſecution of the Church by Antechriſt, he putteth no meane ſpace. And now what is the ſtate of that common wealth, if it be compared to the maieſty of that it hath bene, iudge your ſelues. An other gloſe there is that ſayth, how by that defection is ment: that from the Church of Rome ſhall come a departing of ſome other Churches.

Except there come a defection firſt: howe it is to be vnderſtanded.

2. Note or token.

The Sinagogue and the church compared together in maners.

The ſecond note and marke is this, when the Church ſhalbe worſe in maners then was the Sinagoge: as appeareth by the ordinary gloſe vpon the 3. of Ieremy where it is written. The backſlider Iſraell, may ſeeme iuſt and righteous in compariſon of ſinfull Iuda. That is, the Sinagoge in compariſon of the Churche of God. Whereof writeth Origenes ſaying: Thinke that to be ſpokẽ of vs what the Lord ſayth in Ezech. 16. Thou haſt exceeded thy ſiſter in thine iniquities. Wherefore now (to compare the one with the other) Firſt ye know how Chriſt rebuked the Phariſeis, who as Ierome witneſſeth were then the Clergye of the Iewes; of couetouſneſſe, for that they ſuffered doues to be ſolde in the temple of God. Secondly, for that they did honor God with their lips and not with theyr mouth, & becauſe they ſayd, but dyd not. Thirdly, he rebuked them, for that they were hypocrites. To the firſt then let vs ſee, whether it be worſe to ſell both Church & Sacramentes, then to ſuffer doues to be ſolde in the Temple or not. The ſecond, where as the phariſeis were rebuked for honouring to God with their lips, and not with hart: there be ſome, which neither honor God with hart, nor yet with lips: And which neyther do well, nor yet ſay well, neither do they preach any word at all, but be domb dogs not able to barke, impudent and ſhameles dogs that neuer haue enough, ſuch paſtors as haue no vnderſtanding declining & ſtraying all in their owne way, euery one geuẽ to couetouſnes from the higheſt to the loweſt. And thirdly, as for hipocriſy there be alſo ſome, whoſe intollerable pride & malice is ſo manifeſt and notorious, kindled vp like a fire; that no cloake or ſhadow of hypocriſy can couer it, but are ſo paſt all ſhame, that it may be well verified of them which the Prophet ſpeaketh. Thou haſt gottẽ thee the face of an Harlot, thou wouldeſt not bluſh. &c.

3. Note or token.

The 3. ſigne and token of tribulation approching neare to the Church, may well be taken of the to much vnequall proportion ſeene this day in the church. Where one is hungry and ſtarueth, another is dronke: By reaſon of which ſo great inequality, it cannot be that the ſtate of the Church as it is now, can long endure. For like as in good harmony to make the muſick perfect, is required a moderate and proportionat equality of voyces, which if it do much exceed it taketh away all the ſweet melody: So according to the ſentence of the Philoſopher, by to much immoderate inequality or diſpariety of citizens, the cõmon wealth falleth to ruine. Cõtrary, where mediocrity, that is, where a mean inequality with ſome proportion is kept; that pollicy ſtandeth firme & more ſure to continue. Now among al the politicke regiments of the gentils, I thinke none more is to be found in hiſtories, wherin is to be ſeene ſo great and exeeeding oddes, then in the pollicye of Prieſtes: Of whom ſome be ſo high, that they exceed all Princes of the earth, ſome agayne be ſo baſe, that they are vnder all raſcals, ſo that ſuch a pollicy or common wealth, may well be called Oligarchia.

Oligarchia, is where a fewe beare al the ſway, and all the reſt be nothingworth

This may we playnely ſee and learne in the body of man, to the which Plutarchus (writing to Thracinius) doth ſemblablye compare the common wealth. In the which body, if the ſuſtinãce receiued ſhould all runne to one member, ſo that that member ſhould be to much exceedingly pampered, and all the other parts to much pined, that body could not long continue: So in the body of the wealth eccleſiaſtical, if ſome who be the heads be ſo enormely ouergrown in riches and dignity, that the weaker members of the body be ſcant able to beare them vp; there is a great token of diſſolution and ruine ſhortly. Wherupon commeth well in place the ſaying of the Prophet Eſay. Euery head is ſicke, euery hart is full of ſorrow, of the which heads it is alſo ſpoken in the Prophet Amos. chap. 6. Wo be to the ſecure and proud wealthye in Sion, and to ſuch as thinke themſelues ſo ſure vpon the mount of Samaria, taking themſelues as heads and rulers ouer other. &c. And moreouer in the ſayd prophet Eſay it followeth: Frõ the top of the head to the ſole of the foot, there is no whole part in all the body, to witte: In the inferiours, becauſe they are not able to liue for pouerty: in the ſuperiours, becauſe for theyr exceſſiue riches, they are left from doing good. And followeth in the ſame place: But all are woundes and botches and ſtrypes, beholde here the daunger comming, the woundes of diſcorde and deuiſion, the botch or ſore of rancor and enuy, the ſwelling ſtripe of rebellion and miſchiefe.

Pride of Prelates noted.

The 4. ſigne is the pride of Prelates. Some there haue bene which fondly haue diſputed of the pouerty of Chriſt, and haue inueyed agaynſt the Prelates, becauſe they liue not in pouertye of the ſaynts. But this phantaſy cõmeth of the ignoraunce of morrall Philoſophy and diuinity, and of the defect of naturall prudence: for that in all nations, and by common lawes, prieſts haue had and ought to haue wherewith to ſuſtayne themſelues more honeſtly then the vulgare ſort, and Prelates more honeſtly then the ſubiectes. But yet hereby is not permitted to them their great horſes, theyr troupes of horſemen, their ſuperfluous pompe of theyr wayting men and great famylyes, whyche ſcarcely can bee maynteyned without pride, neyther can be ſuſteyned with ſafe iuſtice, and many not without fighting and iniuries inconueniẽt: not much vnlike to that as Iuſtine the hiſtorician writeth of the Carthaginenſes. The family (ſayth he) of ſo great Emperours was vntolerable to ſuch a free Citty. In ſemblable wiſe, this great pride in the Church of God (eſpecially in theſe dayes) doth moue not ſo few to due reuerence, as many to indignation: and yet mo to thoſe thinges aforeſayde, which thinke no leſſe but to doe ſacrifice to God if they may robbe and ſpoile certayne fatte prieſts and parſons namely ſuch as neither haue nobility of bloud, and leſſe learning to beare themſelues vpon but are lyers, ſeruile and fraudulent, to whome the Lorde ſpeaketh by his Prophet Amos fourth. Heare you fatted kine of Samaria, ye that doe poore men wrong, and oppreſſe the needye, the daye ſhall come vpon you. &c.

Sap. 16.

The fiſt ſigne is the tyranny of the Prelates and Preſidentes, which as it is a violent thing, ſo it cannot be long laſting. For as Salomon ſayth, Sap. 16. For it was requiſite that (without any excuſe) deſtruction ſhoulde come vpon thoſe whiche exerciſed tyranny. The property of a tyraunt is to ſeeke the commodity not of his ſubiectes, but onely his will and profite. Such were the Paſtours that fedde not the Lordes flocke, but fed themſelues: of whom and to whom ſpeaketh the Prophet Ezech. 34. Woe be vnto thoſe Paſtours of Iſrael that feede themſelues. Shoulde not the ſhepheardes feede the flockes? With many other threatninges agaynſt them in the ſayd chapter. Wo be vnto them which reioyce at the tranſgreſſions of ſuch whom it lieth in theyr power to cõdemne, neither do they ſeeke what he is able to pay, to whom crieth Micheas the Prophet 3. chap. Ye hate the good and loue the euill, ye pluck of mens ſkinnes and the fleſh, from the bones: ye eat the fleſh of my people, and flay of their ſkin: ye break their bones, ye chop them in peeces as it were into a Caudron, and as fleſh into the pot.&c. And therefore the foreſayd Ezechiel pronounceth: Behold I will my ſelfe vpon the ſhepheardes, and require my ſheepe from theyr handes, and make them ceaſe from feeding my ſheep, yea the ſhepheards ſhall feed themſelues no more, for I will deliuer my ſheep out of theyr mouthes, ſo that they ſhall not deuour them any more.

Ezech.34.

6.Signe. Promoting of vnworthy miniſters.

The ſixt ſigne is in promoting of the vnworthy, and of neglecting them that be worthy. This as Ariſtotle ſayth, is a greate cauſe many times of the diſſolution of common weales. And oftentimes it ſo happeneth in the wars of princes, that the contẽpt and ſmall regarding of the valiant, and the exalting of others that be leſſe worthy, ingendereth diuers kindes & kindlinges of ſedition. For by the reaſõ partly of the ſame, partly of the other cauſes aboue recited: We haue read not only in books, but haue ſene with our eies, diuers floriſhing Cities welneare ſubuerted. Wher as good men be not made of, but are vexed with ſorrow & griefe by the euil: the contentiõ at length braſteth out vpon the prince, as Haymo reciteth out of Origen. This hath alwayes bene the peruers incredulitye of mans harde heart, that not onely in hearing, but alſo in ſeing: yet will they not beleue that other haue periſhed, vnleſſe they alſo periſh themſelues.

Haymo.

7.Signe.

The ſeuẽth ſigne is the tribulation of outward policy & commotions of the people, which in a great part is now happened already. And therefore foraſmuch as Seneca ſayth: Men do complayne commonly that euils onely come ſo faſt: It is to be feared leaſt alſo the eccleſiaſtical policy be afflicted not onely outwardly but alſo in it ſelfe. And ſo be fulfilled in vs, that in Ieremy is propheſied cap. 4. Murther is cryed vpon murther, and the whole land ſhall periſh and ſodenly my tabernacles were deſtroyed, and my tentes very quickly. And Ezec. 7. Wherfore I will bring cruell tyraunts from among the heathen, to take theyr houſes in poſſeſsion, I will make the pompe of the proud, to ceaſe, and their ſãctuaryes ſhall be taken. One miſchiefe and ſorow ſhall follow another, and one rumor ſhall come after an other, then ſhall they ſeek viſions in vayne at theyr prophets, the law ſhall be gone frõ theyr Prieſts, and wiſedome from their Elders &c,

8.Signe.

The eight ſigne is the refuſing of correction, neither will they heare theyr faultes tolde them, ſo that it is hapned to the princes and rulers of the Church, as it is written in the prophet Zach. ca. 7. They ſtopped their eares that they would not heare: yea they made their hartes as an Adamant ſtone, leaſt they ſhoulde heare the law and words which the Lord of hoſtes ſent in his holy ſpirite by the Prophetes aforetime. Alſo Eſay witneſsing after the ſame effect. cap. 30. ſayth: For it is an obſtinate people, lying children and vnfaythfull, children that will not heare the law of the Lord: which ſay to the Prophetes, meddle with nothing, and tell vs nothing that is true aud right, but ſpeake frendly wordes to vs. &c. All this ſhall be verified when the Prelates begin to hate thẽ that tell them trueth, and haue knowledge, like vnto ſuch of whõ Amos ſpeaketh, chapter. 5. They beare him euil wil that reproueth them openly and who ſo telleth them the playne trueth, they abhorre him And therefore ſayth the Lord to the Church of Ieruſalem. Oſe 4. Seing thou haſt refuſed vnderſtanding, I haue refuſed thee alſo, that thou ſhalt no more be my prieſt. And for ſo muche as thou haſt forgotten the law of thy God, I will alſo forget thy children, and chaunge theyr honor into ſhame. And ſo ſhall it be like prieſt, like people &c. And many other ſayinges there be in the prophets, ſpeaking of the deiecting and caſting downe of the prieſtly honor.

Lack of learned prieſtes.

Beſides theſe foreſayde ſignes and tokens hitherto recited, there be alſo diuers other: As the backſliding from righteouſnes, the lacke of diſcreete and learned Prieſtes, promoting of childrẽ into the Church with ſuch other like. But theſe being alreadye well noted and marked, you may eaſely iudge and vnderſtand, whether theſe times now preſent of ours be ſafe and cleare from tribulation to be looked for, and whether the word of the Lord be true according to my theame. Iuxta eſt iuſtitia mea vt reueletur, my righteouſnes is neare at hande to bee reuealed.&c. And thus muche of the ſecond part.

The third part or mẽber of the ſubdiuiſion.

Now to the third part or member of my ſubdeuiſion, which is concerning the falſe and perilous opinions of ſome, vpon thys word of my theame vt veniat &c. which opinions principally be 4. repugning all agaynſt the truth of the canonicall Scripture.

The firſt opinion.

The firſt opinion is of ſuch men, who hauing to much confidence in thẽſelues, do think and perſwade with themſelues, that the Prelates be the Church, which the Lord will alwayes keepe and neuer forſake as he hath promiſed in the perſons of the Apoſtles. Mathew. 28. ſaying: And I will be with you to the end of the world.&c But this is to be vnderſtanced of fayth, whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh Luke. 21. I haue prayd for thee, that thy fayth ſhall not fayle. Whereof we read Eccleſiaſt. 40. fayth ſhall ſtand for euer. &c. And albeit Charity waxe neuer ſo colde, yet fayth notwithſtanding, ſhall remayne in few, and in all diſtreſſes of the world: of the which diſtreſſes, our Sauiour doth prophecy in many places to come And leaſt peraduenture ſome ſhoulde thinke themſelues to be ſafe from tribulation becauſe they be of the church, this opinion the Lord himſelfe doth contrary in Ieremy the 7. Truſt not (ſayth he) in falſe lying wordes, ſaying: the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, and a litle after, but you truſt in wordes and lying counſelles which deceiue you and doe you no good.

Ieremy.7.

The 2. opinion.

The ſecond opinion is of them, which deferre tyme, for thys they well graunt, that the Church ſhall abide trouble, but not ſo ſhortly: thinking thus with thẽſelues, that theſe cauſes & tokens afore recited, haue bene before at other times as well in the churche. For both by Gregory and Bernard holy doctors, in time paſt the Prelates haue bene in like ſort reprehended, both for theyr bribinges, for theyr Pompe and pride, for the promoting of perſons and children vnfitte vnto eccleſiaſticall functions and other vyces moe, which haue reigned before this in the Church of God more then now, and yet by God his grace, the Churche hath proſpered and ſtand. Doe ye not ſee, that if an houſe haue ſtand and continued ruinous a long ſeaſon, it is neuer more neare the fall thereby, but rather to be truſted the better? Moreouer, many times it commeth ſo to paſſe in Realmes and Kingdomes, that the poſterity is puniſhed for the ſinnes of the predeceſſors. Whereof ſpeaketh the booke of Lamentations the 5. chapter. Onr fathers haue ſinned, and are now gone, and we muſt beare their wickedneſſe.&c. Agaynſt this cogitation or opinion well doth the Lord aunſwere by the Prophet Ezechiel chapter 12 ſaying: Beholde thou ſonne of man the houſe of Iſrael ſayeth in this maner. Tuſh as for the viſion that he hath ſeene, it will bee many a day or it come to paſſe: It is farre of yet, the thing that he prophecieth. Therefore ſay vnto them, thus ſayth the Lord God: The wordes that I haue ſpoken ſhall be deferred no longer, looke what I haue ſayd, ſhall come to paſſe ſayth the Lord. &c. We haue ſeene in our dayes thinges to happen, which ſeemed before incredible. And the like hath bene ſeene in other times alſo: as we read written in the booke of Lamentations chapter. 4. The kinges of the earth nor all the inhabitaunce of the worlde would not haue beleeued, that the enemy and aduerſary ſhoulde haue come in at the gates of the Citty, for the ſinnes of her prieſtes, and for the wickeneſſe of her Elders that haue ſhedde Innocentes bloud within her.&c. by Hieruſalem, as is ſayd, is ment thẽ Church.

Thren.5.

Ezech.12.

Thren.4.

The third opinion, or errour.

The third opinion or error is very perilous and peruerſe, of all ſuch as ſay, veniat, let come that will come: Let vs conſorme out ſelues to this world, and take our time with thoſe Temporiſers which ſay in the booke of wiſedome. Sap. 2. Come let vs enioy our goodes and pleaſures that be preſent, and let vs vſe the creature as in youth quickly.&c. Such as theſe be, are in daungerous caſe, and be greatly preiudicial to good men in the Church: And if the heades and rulers of the Church were ſo vile to haue any ſuch deteſtable cogitation in them, there were no place in hell to deepe for them. This Church founded by the Apoſtles in Chriſt, conſecrated with the bloud of ſo many Martyrs, enlarged and increaſed with the vertues and merites of ſo many Payntes, and indued ſo richly with the deuoſion of ſo many ſecular princes, and ſo long proſpered hetherto: If it now ſhould come into the hands of ſuch perſons, it ſhould fall in great daunger of ruine, and they for theyr negligence and wickednes well deſerued of God to be curſed, yea here alſo in this preſent world to incurre temporall tribulation and deſtruction, which they feare more: by the ſentence of the Lord ſaying to them in the booke of Prouerbes cap. 1. All my counſels ye haue deſpiſed, and ſet my correctiõ at nought. Therefore ſhall I alſo laugh in your deſtruction, when tribulation and anguiſh ſhall fall vpon you.

Sap.2.

Prouer.cap.1.

The fourth opinion, or errour.

Fourthly, an other opinion or errour is of ſuch as being vnfaythfull, beleue not any ſuch thing to come. And this errour ſemeth to haue no remedy, but that as other thinges & other kingdomes haue theyr endes and limittes ſet vnto them, which they cannot ouerpaſſe: So it muſt needes be, that ſuch a domination & gouernment of the Church haue an end, by reaſon of the demerites and obſtinacyes of the gouernors prouoking and requiring the ſame: like as we reade in the Prophet Ieremy cap. 8. There is no man that taketh repentaunce for his ſinne, that will ſo much as ſay, wherefore haue I done this? But euery man runneth forth ſtill like a wilde horſe in a battell And the Prophet Ieremy in the 13. chapter of his prophecy: Like as the man of Inde may chaunge his ſkinne, and the Cat of mountayne her ſpottes, ſo may ye that be exerciſed in euill, doe good. Whereunto alſo accordeth that which is written of the ſame Prophet. chap. 17. ſpeaking of Iuda ſignifying the Church: The ſinne of Iuda (ſayth he) is written in the table of your hartes, and grauen ſo vpõ the edges of your altars with a penne of Iron, and with an Adamant claw, which is as much to ſay, as indelible, or which cannot be raced out: as alſo Ezechiell ſpeaking of the puniſhment, chapter 21. ſayth: I the Lord haue drawne out my ſword out of the ſheath, and cannot be reuoked. Notwithſtanding, all theſe ſignifye no impoſsibility, but difficulty, becauſe that wicked men are hardly conuerted: for otherwiſe the Scripture importeth no ſuch inflexibilitye with God, but if conuerſion come, he will forgeue. So we read in the Prophet Ionas cap.3. Who can tell? God may turne and repent, and ceaſe from his fierce wrath that we periſh not. And to the like effect ſayth the ſame Lord in Ieremy. cap 26 Looke thou keepe not one word backe, if peraduenture they will harken and turne euery man from his wicked way, that I alſo may repent of of the plague which I haue determined to bring vpon them, becauſe of their wicked inuentiõs.&c. For the further proofe wherof Niniuy we ſee conuerted, and remayned vndeſtroyd.&c. Likewiſe, the Lorde alſo had reuealed deſtruction vnto Conſtantinople by ſundry ſignes and tokens, as Auguſtine in a certayne Sermon doth declare. And thus for the third part or member of my deuiſion.

The fourth part or member of the ſubdiuiſion.
Ieremy.18.
Eſay.5.
Eſay.30.

Fourthly and laſtly remayneth to declare, ſome wholeſome concluding now vpon the cauſes preceding: That is, if by theſe cauſes and ſignes (heretofore declared) tribulation be prepared to fall vpon the Church, then let vs humble our mindes mildely and wiſely. And if we ſo returne with hart and in deed vnto God, verely he ſhall reſcue and helpe after an ineſtimable wiſe: and will ſurceaſe from ſcourging vs, as he promiſeth by his Prophet Ieremy.18. If that people agaynſt whom I haue thus deuiſed, cõuert from their wickedneſſe, immediately I will repent of the plague that I deuiſed to bring vpon them: ſpeaking here after the maner of men:&c. Now therefore, for ſo much as tribulation and affliction is ſo neare comming toward vs, yea lyeth vpon vs alreadye, let vs be the more diligent to call vpon God for mercy. For I thinke verely theſe many yeares there hath not bene ſo many and ſo deſpightfull hartes and euill willers, ſtout, and of ſuch a rebellious hart aganſt the Church of God, as be now adayes: neither be they lacking that would worke all that they can agaynſt it, and louers of new fanglenes: whoſe hartes the Lord happelye will turne that they ſhall not hate his people and worke deceipte agaynſt his ſeruauntes, I meane agaynſt Prieſtes whom they haue now in little or no reputation at all: Albeit many yet there bee through Gods grace, good and Godly. But yet the furye of the Lord is not turned away, but ſtill his hand is ſtretched out. And vnleſſe ye be conuerted, he ſhaketh his ſworde, he hath bent his bowe, and prepared it readye. Yet the Lorde ſtandeth wayting, that he may haue mercy vpon you. Eſay. 30. And therefore as the greatneſſe of feare ought to incite vs, ſo hope of ſaluation may allure vs to pray and call vpon the Lord, eſpecially now toward this holy and ſacrat time and ſolemnity of Chriſtes natiuity: For that holy and continuall prayer without intermiſsion is profitable and the inſtant deuotion and vigilant deprecation of the iuſt man, is of great force. And if terreine kinges in the day of celebration of their natiuity, be wont to ſhew themſelnes more liberall and bounteous, how much more ought we to hope wel, that the heauenly king of nature moſt benigne, now at his natall and byrth day, will not denye pardon and remiſsion to ſuch as rightly call vnto him.

And now therefore as it is written in Ioſue chap. 7. Be you ſanctified agaynſt to morow. &c. And ſaw vnto him as it is written in the firſt booke of Kinges chap.25. Now let thy ſeruaunts I pray thee finde fauour in thy ſight, for we come to thee in a good ſeaſon. Moreouer ye may finde that ye aske, if that ye aske that which he brought in the day of his Natiuity, that is, the peace of the Church, not ſpirituall onely but alſo temporall, which the angelicall noyſe did ſounde, and experience the ſame time dyd proue, teſtifyed by T. Liuius, Plinius, and other heathen ſtorywriwriters, which all maruelled thereat ſaying: that ſuch an vniuerſal peace as that could not come on earth but by the gift of God. For ſo God did forepromiſe in the Prophet Eſay. chap.66. Behold I will let peace into Ieruſalem like a waterfloud. &c. And in the Pſalme.71. In his time righteouſneſſe ſhal floriſh, yea and aboundance of peace.&c.

Eſay.51.

Thereſore now (O reuerend fathers in the Lord,) & you here in this preſent aſſembly, behold I ſay the day of life and ſaluatiõ: Now is the oportune time to pray vnto god, that the ſame thing which he brought into the world at his byrth, he will graunt in theſe dayes to his Church that is, his peace. And like as Niniuye was ſubuerted ouerturned, and not in members but in maners: ſo the ſame wordes of my theame, Iuxta eſt iuſtitia mea vt reueletur, may be verified in vs, not of the primitiue iuſtice, but of our ſanctification by grace, ſo that: As to morow is celebrated the natiuity of our Sauiour, our righteouſneſſe may riſe together with him, and his bleſsing may be vpon vs, which God hath promiſed, ſaying: My ſauing health is neare at hand to come.&c. Whereof ſpeaketh Eſay the Prophet, chapte.51. My ſauing health ſhall endure foreuer.&c. This health graunt vnto vs the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt. Amen.

This Sermõ was made by maiſter Nicholas Orem before Pope Urbane and his Cardinals vpon the eue of the Natiuity of the Lord, being the fourth Sonday of Aduent, in the yeare of our Lord, 1364. and the ſecond of hys Popedome.

The order of Ieſuites.

In the 5. yere of this forenamed Pope Urbane, began firſt the order of the Jeſuites. And vnto this time whiche was about the yeare of our Lord, 1367. the offices here in England, as the Lord Chauncellor, Lord Treaſurer, & of the priuy ſeale: were wont to be in the handes of the clergy. But about this yeare through the motion of the Lords in the Parliamẽt, and partly (as witneſſeth mine author) for hatred of the clergy: all the ſayd offices were remoued from the clergy, to the Lordes temporall.

Anno. 1367.
The chiefe officers of the realme tranſlated from the clergie, to the Lordes temporal.
Pope Gregory.xj.

After the death of Pope Urbane, next ſucceeded Pope Gregory the 11. who among his other actes, firſt reduced agayne the papacy out of Fraunce vnto Rome, which had from thence bene abſent, the ſpace now of 70. yeres, being therto moued (as Sabellicus recordeth) by the anſwere of a certain biſhop, whom as the Pope ſaw ſtanding by him asked, why he was ſo long from his charge and church at home, ſaying: not to be the part of a good Paſtor, to keepe him from his flocke ſo long. Wherunto the Biſhop aunſwering agayne, ſayd: And you your ſelfe being the chiefe Biſhoppe, who may and ought to be a ſpectacle to vs all: why are you from the place ſo long where your Church doth lye? By the occaſion whereof, the Pope ſought all meanes after that to remoue and to rid his Court out of Fraunce againe to Rome, and ſo he did.

Anno. 1370.
The papacy reduced againe from Fraunce to Rome.

This 11. Gregory in a certayne Bull of his ſent to the Archb. of Prage, maketh mẽtion of one named Militzius a Bohemiã, & ſaith in ỷ ſame bull ỷ this Militzius ſhould hold apinion & teach. an. 1366. that Antechriſt was alredy come. Alſo that the ſaid Militzius had certayn cõgregations folowing him: & that in the ſame congragation were certain harlots, who being conuerted frõ theyr wickednes were brought to a godly life. Which harlots being ſo conuerted, he vſed to ſay were to be preferred before al the holy religious virgins. And therfore commaunded the archbiſhop to excõmunicate and perſecute the ſayd Militzius, which in foretime had bene a religious man of Prage, and after forſooke his order, and gaue himſelfe to preaching, and at length was by the foreſayd Archb. impriſoned.

Militzius a Bohemian, for the truth perſecuted by the pope Ex Bulla Gregorij.11

The cõming of Antichriſt propheſied.

Iacobus Miſnenſis a learned man and a writer in ỷ time of J. Hus, maketh mention of this Militzius, and calleth him a worthy and a famous Preacher. Alſo citeth many things out of his writings: In the which writinges thys good Militzius thus declareth of himſelf how he was moued & vrged by the holy Ghoſt to ſearch out by the ſacred Scriptures, concerning the comming of Antechriſt. And that he was compelled by the ſame holy ſpirite at Rome publickly to preach, and alſo before the Inquiſitor there to proteſt plainly, that ỷ ſame great Antechriſt which is propheſyed of in ỷ holy Scriptures, was alredy come. Moreouer his ſaying was, that the church through negligẽce of the paſtors was deſolate, did abound in temporall riches, but in ſpirituall riches to be empty. Alſo that in ỷ Church of Chriſt, where certayne Idols which deſtroyd Ieruſalẽ, and defaced the Temple, but hypocriſye cauſed that thoſe Idols could not be ſene. Alſo that many there were which denied Chriſt, becauſe that knowing the truth, yet for feare of mẽ they durſt not confeſſe their conſcience. &c. And thus much of good Militzius, liuing in the time of Gregory 11. and king Edward the third. an. 1370.

K. Edward cõplaineth of the popes reſeruation of benefices.

The which king of England holding a Parliamẽt in the 3. yeare of this Pope, ſent his Embaſſadours to hym, deſiring him: that he from thenceforth would abſtayne frõ his reſeruatiõs of benefices vſed in the court of England. And that ſpiritual men within his realme promoted vnto Biſhopricks, might freely enioy theyr electiõs within the realme, and be confirmed by theyr Metropolitanes, according to the auncient cuſtome of the realme. Wherfore, vpõ theſe and ſuch other like wherein the king and the realme thought thẽſelues greued, he deſired of the Pope ſome remedy to be prouided. &c. Wherunto the Pope returned a certayne anſwere agayne vnto the king, requiring by his meſſengers to be certified agayn of the kings mind cõcerning the ſame. But what anſwere it was, it is not in ỷ ſtory expreſſed, ſaue that the yere folowing, which was 1374. there was a tractation at Burges vpon certain of the ſaid articles betwene the king & the Pope, which did hãg two yeares in ſuſpẽſe, ſo at length it was thus agreed betwene them: that the pope ſhould no more vſe his reſeruatiõs of benefices in England, and likewiſe the king ſhoulde no more cõferre and geue benefices vpon the writ, Quare impedit. &c. But as touching the freedome of elections to be confirmed by the Metropolitane, mentioned in the yeare before, therof was nothing touched.

The Pope put from his reſeruing of benefices in England.
Quare impedit.

As touching theſe reſeruations, prouiſiõs, and collations, with the elections of Archbiſhops, Biſhops, beneficed men and other, wherwith the Pope vexed this realme of England, as before you haue heard. The king by ỷ conſent of the Lordes and commons, in the 25. yeare of hys raigne enacted: that according to a ſtatute made in the 30.

yeare of his graundfather Edward the firſt, wherein was made an act againſt ỹ rauenous pillage of the Pope, thorough the ſame prouiſions, reſeruations, & collations. &c. but not put in execution. By the which prouiſions, ỹ ſtate of the realme decreaſed more and more, the kings royaltie & prerogatiue greatly obſcured and diminiſhed, innumerable treaſure of the realme tranſported, aliens & ſtraungers placed in the beſt and fatteſt byſhoprickes, abbeyes, and benefices within the realme. And ſuche, as eyther for their offices in Rome, as Cardinalſhips & ſuch like could not be here reſident, or if reſident, yet better away for cauſes infinite, as partly haue bene touched before: Not onely reuiued the ſayde ſtatute made by Edward the firſt hys graundfather, but alſo inlarged the ſame. Adding thervnto very ſtrayt and ſharpe penalties againſt the offenders therin, or in any part therof, as exemptiõ out of the kings protection, loſſe of al their lands, goods, and other poſſeſſions, and theyr bodies to be impriſoned at the kings pleaſure: And farther, who ſo euer was lawfully conuict, or otherwiſe for want of appearance by proces directed forth, were wythin the lappes of this ſtatute or premunire (for ſo bare the name therof) ſhuld ſuffer al and euery ſuch moleſtation & iniuries, as men exempted frõ the protection of the king. In ſo much, that who ſo euer had killed ſuch mẽ, had bene in no more daunger of lawe therefore, then for the killing of an outlaw, or one not worthy to liue in a commõ weale. Lyke vnprofitable members were they then in that tyme, yea of ignoraunce eſteemed in thys common weale of Englande, as would offer themſelues to the wilfull ſlauery and ſeruile obedience of the pope: which thyng in theſe dayes, yea and that amõgſt no ſmall fooles, is coũted more then Euangelicall holynes. He that liſt to peruſe the ſtatute, and would ſee euery braunch and article therof at large diſcuſſed and handled, wyth the penalties therfore due: Let him read the ſtatute of prouiſion and premunire, made in the 25. yeare of thys kynges dayes. And let hym read in the ſtatutes made in the parliamentes holden the 27, yeare, and 38. yeare of hys raigne: And vnder the ſame title of prouiſion and premunire ſhall finde, the popes primacie and iuriſdiction wythin this Realme more nearely touched, and much of hys papall power reſtrayned: In ſo much, that who ſoeuer for any cauſe or controuerſy in law, either ſpirituall or temporal, ỹ ſame being determinable in any of ỹ kyngs courts (as all matters were) whether they were perſonall or reall, citations or other: or ſhould eyther appeale or conſent to any appellation, to be made out of the realme to the pope or ſee of Rome: ſhould incurre the ſayd penaltie and daunger of premunire. Diuers other matters wherein the Pope is reſtrained of his vſurped power, authoritie & iuriſdiction within this realme of England: are in the ſayd titles and ſtatutes expreſſed, & at large ſet forth, who euer liſt to peruſe the ſame, which for breuities ſake I omitte, haſtening to other matters.

Ex lib. reuelationum. Diua Bridgitta.

About this tyme, being the yeare of our Lorde. 1370. lyued holy Brigit, whom the Church of Rome hath canoniſed not onely for a ſaint, but alſo for a Propheteſſe: who notwithſtanding in her booke of reuelations, which hath bene oft times imprinted, was a great rebuker of the pope, and of the filth of his clergie, callyng him a murtherer of ſoules, a ſpiller, and a pyller of the flocke of Chriſt: more abhominable then Iewes, more crueller thẽ Iudas: more vniuſt then Pilate, worſe then Lucifer hymſelfe. The ſee of the Pope ſhe propheſieth, ſhalbe throwne down into the deepe, lyke a mylſtone. And that his aſſiſter ſhall burne wt brimſtone: Affirmyng, that the prelates, byſhops, & prieſts are the cauſe, why the doctrine of Chriſt is neglected, and almoſt extincted. And that the clergie haue turned the ten commaundementes of God into two wordes, to wyt, Da pecuniam, that is, Geue money. It were long and tedious to declare all that ſhe againſt them writeth. Among the reſt which I omytte, let this ſuffice for all, where as the ſayde Briget affirmeth in her reuelations, that when the holy Virgine ſhould ſay to her ſonne, howe Rome was a fruitfull and fertile field: yea, ſayd hee, but of weedes onely and cockle. &c.

Da pecuniam.

Rome a fertile grounde of weedes & cockle.

Catherina Senenſis.

Ex Antonino. part.3. hiſtor.

To thys Briget I will ioyne alſo Catherina Senenſis, an holy virgin, which lyued much about the ſame tyme, ann. 1379. Of whome writeth Antoninus. part. hiſtoriæ. 3. Thys Katherine hauyng the ſpirite of propheſie, was wõt much to complaine of the corrupt ſtate of the church, namely of the prelates of the court of Rome, & of the pope: propheſying before of the great ſchiſme, which then folowed in the Church of Rome, and dured to the Councell of Conſtance, the ſpace of xxxix. yeares. Alſo of the great warres and tribulation, which enſued vpon the ſame. And moreouer declared before and foretold, of this ſo excellẽt reformation of religion in the Church now preſent. The wordes of Antoninus be theſe. After this Virgine in her going to Rome, had tolde her brother of the warres and tumultes that ſhould riſe in ỹ coũtries about Rome, after ỹ ſchiſme of the two Popes. I then curious to know of thinges to come, & knowing that ſhe vnderſtood by reuelation what ſhould happen, demaunded of her: I pray you (good mother) ſayd I, and what ſhall befall after theſe troubles in the Church of God? And ſhe ſayd: By theſe tribulations and afflictions, after a ſecret maner vnknowne vnto man, God ſhall purge his holy Church, and ſtirre vp the ſpirit of his elect. And after theſe thinges ſhall follow ſuche a reformation of the holy Churche of God, and ſuche a renouation of holye Paſtors, that the onelye cogitation and remembraunce thereof maketh my ſpirit to reioyce in the Lord And as I haue oftentimes tolde you heretofore, the ſpouſe which now is all deformed and ragged, ſhall be adorned and deckt with moſt rich and precious ouches and brouches. And all the faythfull ſhall be glad and reioyce to ſee themſelues ſo beautified with ſo holy ſhepheards. Yea and alſo the Infidels then allured by the ſweet ſauour of Chriſt, ſhall returne to the catholicke folde, and be conuerted to the true Biſhop and ſhepheard of their ſoules. Geue thankes therefore to God, for after this ſtorme, he will geue to his a great calme. And after ſhe had thus ſpoken, ſhe ſtayd, and ſayd no more.

The reformatiõ of religion prophecied of before.

The prophecie of Katherine.

Note.

Beſide theſe aforenamed, the Lord which neuer ceaſeth to worke in his Church: ſtyrred vp agaynſt the malignant church of Rome, the ſpirites of diuers other good & godly teachers, as Matthias Pariſienſis, a Bohemian borne, who about the yeare of our Lord 1370. wrote a large booke of Antechriſt, and prooueth him already come, and noteth ỹ Pope to be the ſame. Which booke one Illiricus a writer in theſe our dayes hath, & promiſeth to put it in print. In this booke he doth greatly inuey againſt the wickedneſſe and filthines of the Clergy, and agaynſt the neglecting of theyr duety in gouerning the church. The Locuſtes mentioned in the Apocalips, he ſayth, be the hypocrites raigning in the church. The workes of Antechriſt he ſayth be theſe, the fables and inuentions of men raigning in the Church: the Images & fained reliques that are worſhipped euery where. Itẽ, that men do worſhip euery one his proper Saint and Sauior beſide Chriſt, ſo that euery mã and City almoſt hath his diuers and peculiar Chriſt. He taught and affirmed moreouer, that godlines & true worſhip of God, are not boũd to place, perſons, or times, to be heard more in this place, thẽ in an other, at this time more thẽ at an other. &c. He argueth alſo agaynſt the cloiſterers which leauing the onely and true Sauior, ſet vp to them ſelues theyr Franciſcanes, theyr Dominickes, and ſuche other: and haue them for theyr Sauiors, glorying and triumphing in them, and fayning many forged lyes vpon them. He was greatly and much offended with Monks & friers, for neglecting or rather burying the word of Chriſt and in ſtead of him, for celebrating & ſetting vp theyr own rules and canons, affirming it to be much hurtfull to true godlines, for that Prieſtes, Monkes, and Nunnes do account themſelues onely ſpirituall, and all other to be lay & ſecular, attributing onely to themſelues the opinion of holynes, & contemning other men, with al theyr politick adminiſtration & the office as prophane in cõpariſon of theyr owne. He further writeth that Antechriſt, hath ſeduced all Vniuerſities & Colleges of learned men, ſo that they teach no ſincere doctrine, neither geue any light to the Chriſtiãs with theyr teaching. Finally, he forewarneth that it will come to paſſe, that God yet once againe will raiſe vp godly teachers, who being feruent in the ſpirite and zeale of Helias, ſhall diſcloſe and refute the errors of Antechriſt, and Antechriſt himſelfe, openly to the whole world. This Mathias in the ſayd booke of Antechriſt alledgeth the ſayinges and writinges of the Vniuerſity of Paris, alſo the writings of Guilielmus de ſãcto amore, and of Militzius afore noted.

Mathias Pariſienſis a writer againſt the pope.

Antichriſt alreadie come. The doctrine & proteſtation of Mathias.

About the ſame time, or ſhortly after. an. 1384. we read alſo of Ioannes of Mountziger, Rector of the Vniuerſity of Vlme, who opẽly in the ſcholes in his Oratiõ propoũded that the body of Chriſt was not God, and therfore not to be worſhipped as God with that kinde of worſhip called Latria, as the Sophiſter termeth it, meaning thereby the Sacrament not to be adored, which afterward he alſo defended by writing: affirming alſo that Chriſt in his reſurrection tooke to him agayne all his bloud which in hys paſſion he had ſhed. Meaning thereby to inferre, that the bloud of Chriſt which in many places is worſhipped, neither can be called the bloud of Chriſt, neither ought to be worſhipped. But by and by he was reſiſted and withſtood by the Monks and friers: who by this kinde of Idolatry were greatly enriched, till at length the Senate & councell of the city was fayne to take vp the matter betwene them.

Nilus the archbiſhop of Theſſalonica.

about this time. He wrote a long worke agaynſt the Latins that is, agaynſt ſuch as tooke part and held with the Church of Rome. His firſt booke being written in Greeke, was after tranſlated into latin, & lately now into engliſh, in this our time. In the firſt chap. of his booke, he layeth all the blame and fault of the diſſention & ſchiſme betwene the Eaſt and the weſt Church vpon the Pope. He affirmed that the Pope onely would commaund what him liſted, were it neuer ſo contrary to all the olde & auncient canōs. That he would heare and folow no mans aduiſe: that he would not permit any free coūcels to be aſſēbled. &c. And that therfore it was not poſſible, that the cōtrouerſies betwene the Greeke Church and Latine Church, ſhould be decided and determined.

In the ſecond chap. of his booke, he purpoſedly maketh a very learned diſputation. For firſt he declareth that he no whit at all by Gods commaūdement, but onely by humain law, hath any dignity, more thē hath other biſhops: which dignity, the Councels, the fathers, & the Emperors haue graunted vnto him: Neither did they graūt the ſame for any other conſideration more, or greater ordinaunce: then for that the ſame City then had the Impery of all the whole world: and not at all for that that Peter euer was there, or not there.

Secondarily he declareth, that the ſame premacy or prerogatiue is not ſuch and ſo great as he and his Sicophāts do vſurpe vnto thēſelues. Alſo he refuteth the chiefeſt propoſitions of the Papiſtes one after an other. He declareth that the Pope hath no dominion more thē other Patriarches haue, and that he himſelfe may erre as well as other mortall men: and that he is ſubiect both to lawes & councels, as well as other Biſhops. That it belonged not to him, but to the Emperor, to call generall councels: & that in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes he could eſtabliſh and ordeine no more then all other Biſhops might. And laſtly, that he getteth no more by Peters ſucceſſion, then that he is a Byſhop as all other Biſhops after the Apoſtles be. &c.

Iacobus Miſuēſis and Militzius.

I can not among other, folowing here the occaſion of this matter offered, leaue out yͤ memory of Iacobus Miſnenſis, who alſo wrote of the comming of Antechriſt. In yͤ ſame he maketh mentiō of a certayn learned man, whoſe name was Militzius, which Militzius (ſayth he) was a famous and worthy preacher in Parga. He liued about yͤ yere. 1366. long before Huſſe, and before wickliffe alſo. In the ſame his writings he declareth, how yͤ ſame good man Militzius was by the holy ſpirit of God incited, and vehemently moued to ſearch out of yͤ holy Scriptures the maner and comming of Antechriſt: and found that now in his time he was all ready come. And the ſame Iacobus ſayth, that the ſayd Militzius was conſtrayned by the ſpirite of God to go vp to Rome, & there publickely to preach. And that afterward before yͤ Inquiſitour he affirmed the ſame. That the ſame mighty and great Antechriſt, the which the Scriptures made mention of, was already comen.

He affirmed alſo, that the Church by the negligence of the Paſtors, ſhould become deſolate: and that iniquitye ſhould abound, that is, by reaſon of Mammon, maſter of iniquitie. Alſo, he ſayde that there were in the Church of Chriſt idols, which ſhoulde deſtroy Ieruſalem, and make the tēple deſolate, but were cloked by hypocriſy. Further, that there be many whych deny Chriſt, for that they keepe ſilence: neither do they heare Chriſt, whome all the world ſhould know and cōfeſſe his verity before men, which alſo wittingly do detaine the verity and iuſtice of God.

Militzius perſecuted by the Pope.

There is alſo a certaine Bull of Pope Gregory 11. to the Archbiſhop of Praga: wherin he is commanded to excommunicate and perſecute Militzius and his auditours. The ſame Bull declareth, that he was once a Chanon of Praga, but afterward he renounced his Canonſhip, & began to preache: who alſo for that he ſo manifeſtly preached of Antichriſt to be already come: was of Iohn Archbiſhop of Praga put in priſon, declaring what hys errour was. To wit, howe he had his company or cōgregation to whō he preached, and that amongſt the ſame were certain conuerted harlots, which had forſaken their euill life, and did liue godly and well: whych harlots he accuſtomed in hys ſermons to preferre before all the bleſſed virgins that neuer offended. He taught alſo openly, that in the Pope, cardinals, Biſhops, prelates, prieſts, & other religious men: was no truth, neither that they taught the way of truth, but that onely he, & ſuch as held with him, taught the true way of ſaluation. His Poſtill in ſome places is yet to be ſene. They alledge vnto him certaine other inconuenient articles, which notwͭſtanding I thinke, the aduerſaries to depraue him with all, haue ſlanderouſly inuented againſt hym. He had as appeared by the foreſaid Bull, very many of euery ſtate and condition, as wel rich as pore, that cleaued vnto him.

About the yeare of our Lord. 1371. liued Henricus de Iota, whom Gerſon doth much commend, and alſo his companiō Henricus de Haſsia, an excellent learned and famous man. An Epiſtle of this Henricus de Haſsia which he wrote to the Biſhoppe of Normacia, Iacobus Cartſienſis inſerted in his booke De erroribus Chriſtianorum. In the ſame Epiſtle, the author doth greatly accuſe the ſpirituall men of euery order, yea and the moſt holyeſt of all other the Pope himſelfe, of many and great vices. He ſayd, that the Eccleſiaſticall gouernors in the primitiue Church, were compared to the ſunne ſhining in the day time, and the politicall gouernors, to the Moone, ſhyning in the night. But the ſpirituall men he ſaid, that now are, do neuer ſhine in the day time, nor yet in yͤ night time, but rather with theyr darckenes do obſcure both the day and night, that is: with theyr filthy liuing, ignorance, and impiety. He citeth alſo out of the propheſy of Hildegaris theſe words: Therfore doth yͤ deuill in himſelfe ſpeake of you Prieſts: Dainty bankets & feaſts, wherin is all voluptuouſnes do I finde amongſt theſe men: In ſo much that mine eies, mine eares my belly, and my vaynes, be euen filled with the froth of them, & my breſtes ſtand aſtrut with the riches of them. &c. Laſtly, ſaith he, they euery day more and more as Lucifer did, ſeeke to climbe higher and higher: till that euery day with hym more and more, they fall deeper and deeper.

Henricus de Haſsia.

The citizens of Mogūtia.

About the yeare of our Lord. 1390. there were burned at Bringa 36. Citizens of Moguntina, for the doctrine of waldenſes, as Bruſhius affirmeth: which opiniō was nothing contrary to that they held before, wherein they affirmed the Pope to be that great Antechriſt, which ſhould come: Vnleſſe peraduenture the Pope ſeemed then to be more euidently conuicted of Antechriſtianity thē at any other time before, he was reueled to be.

A briefe rehearſall of ſuche as were put to death for holding againſt the Byſhop of Rome before the time of Wickliffe.

For the like cauſe, many other beſide theſe, are to be found in ſtoryes, which ſuſteined the like perſecutiō by the Pope, if leyſure would ſerue to peruſe all that might be ſearched. As where Maſſeus recordeth of diuers to the nūber of 140. which in the prouince of Narbone choſe rather to ſuffer whatſoeuer greuous puniſhment by fire, thē to receiue the decretals of the Romiſh Church, contrary to the vpright truth of the Scripture.

What ſhould I here ſpeake of the 24. which ſuffered at Paris. an. 1210? Alſo in the ſame author is teſtified that an. 1211. there were 400. vnder the name of heretiques burned 80. beheaded: Prince Americus hanged, and the Lady of the Caſtle ſtoned to death.

Moreouer, in the Chronicles of Houedon, and of other writers be recited, a maruelous nūber, which in the countryes of Fraunce were burned for heretiques. Of whom, ſome were called Publicans, ſome Catharits, ſome Paterines, and other by others names. What their aſſertions were, I finde no certayne report worthy of credit

An Heremit diſputing againſt the Popes ſacrament. Ranulphus.

Likewiſe I let paſſe the heremite, of whom Iohn Bacon maketh relation, in hys 2. Diſt. Quæſt. 1. who diſputing in Paules church, affirmed that thoſe Sacraments, which were then vſed in yͤ church, were not inſtituted by Chriſt, An. 1306. Peraduenture it was the ſame Ranulphus, mētioned in the floure of hyſtories, & is ſayd to die in priſon: for the time of them doth not much differ.

In Boetius, why the Pope ſhould ſo much commend a certaine king, becauſe for one man, he had ſlaine 400. cutting away the genitals from the reſt, I can not iudge, except the cauſe were that, which the Pope calleth hereſie.

But to let theſe things ouerpaſſe that be vncertayne, becauſe neither is it poſſible to comprehēd all them which haue wͭſtand the corruption of the popes ſea: neyther haue we any ſuch firme teſtimony left of their doings, credibly to ſtay vpon: we wil now (Chriſt willing) cōuert our ſtory, to thyngs more certaine & vndoubted, grounding vpon no light reportes of feble credit, nor vpō any fabulous legendes wythout authority: But vpon the true and ſubſtantial copies of the publique recordes of the Realme, remaining yet to be ſene vnder the kings moſt ſure & faithfull cuſtody. Out of the which records, ſuch matter appeareth againſt the Popiſh church of Rome, and againſt hys vſurped authority, ſuch open ſtādyng & crying againſt the ſayd ſea, & that not priuely, but alſo in open parliament, in the daies of this king Edward the third: that neyther wil

Parcial diſſimulation in our hiſtories of the Church of England.

Ye heard a litle before, pag.381. howe Iohn Stratford Archb. of Cant. being ſent for and required by the king to come vnto hym, refuſed ſo to do. What the cauſe was why he denyed to come at the kings ſending, is neither touched of Polidore Virgil, nor of any other monkiſh Chronicler, wryting of thoſe actes and times. Whoſe part hath bene, faithfully to haue diſpenſed the ſimple truth of thynges don to theyr poſterity. But that whych they diſſemblingly and colourably haue concealed, contrary to true lawe of ſtorie, the true cauſe thereof we haue found out by the true Parliament roles, declaring the ſtory thus.

Ex anno. 6. reg. Edou.3. tit.1.

King Edward the 3. in the 6. yeare of hys raigne, hearing that Edward Bailol had proclaimed himſelfe kyng of Scotland: Required counſell of the whole eſtate to wit, whether were better for hym to aſſayle Scotlande, and to claim the demeſing or demeines of the ſame: or els by making hym party to take hys aduauntage. And thereby to enioy the ſeruice, as other hys aunceſters before hym had done. For thys cauſe he ſommoned a Parliament of all eſtates to meete at Yorke, about the beginning of December. where the kyng was alredy come, waiting for yͤ comming of ſuch as were warned thereunto. For the want of whoſe comming, the parliament was reiourned til monday, and from thence to Tueſday next enſuing. But forſomuch as moſt of the ſtates were abſent, the aſſembly required the continuance of the parliament, vntil the vtas of S. Hillary then enſuing at Yorke, whych was graunted. And ſo a new ſommons was eſpecially awarded to euery perſon with ſpecial charge to attend, ſo that the affaires of the king and the realme myght not be hindered, becauſe of the debate betwene the Archb. of Cant. and Archbiſhop of Yorke, for the ſuperiour bearing of theyr croſſe.

The Archb. of Cant. came not to the parliament at Yorke, and all for bearing the croſſe.

In concluſion, for all the kyngs ſommoning, none other of all the Clergy came, but onely the Archb. of Yorke, the byſhop of Lincolne, and of Carliel, & Abbots of Yorke and Selby. So that hereunto came not the Archb. of Canterb. nor any other of hys prouince, and all for bearing the croſſe. Wherby the ſame was not onely a loſſe to the oportunitie to Scotland: but alſo an importable charge to the whole eſtate by a newe reaſſembly. And thus much out of the recordes. Whereby thou mayeſt eaſely iudge (prudent Reader) what is to be thought of theſe Pope holy Catholique Churchmen) being of the Popes brode and ſetting vp whom ſuch friuolous cauſes of contention ſtirre vp to ſuch diſquietnes, both among themſelues, and alſo to ſuch diſobedience againſt their Prince: excuſe them who can. Ex An. 6. Regis Edwardi 3.

Ex an 17. reg. Edouardi.3. tit.39. The Popes prouiſions reſtrayned. tit.59.

It foloweth moreouer in the ſame recordes, concerning the abandoning of the popes prouiſions: how that the cõmons finde great default at prouiſions commyng from Rome, wherby ſtraungers were enabled wͭin this realme to enioy eccleſiaſtical dignities, & ſhew diuers inconueniences enſuing thereby, namely the decay of daily almoſe, yͤ tranſporting of the treaſure to nouriſh the kings enemies the diſcouering of the ſecrets of the realme, & the diſabling and impoueriſhing of the clerkes within this realme.

The church of England ſpoyled by the pope & his foreiners

They alſo ſhew how the pope had in moſt couert wyſe graunted to two new Cardinalles wythin thys Realme, (and namely to Cardinall Peragotz) aboue ten thouſand markes of yerely taxes: They therfore required the kyng and nobles to finde ſome remedy, for that they neuer could ne would any longer beare thoſe ſtraunge oppreſſions, or els to helpe them to expell out of thys realme the Popes power by force.

The acte of K. Edwarde the firſt, renued for premunire, tit.60.

Hereupon, the King, Lords, and commõs, ſent for the act made at Carliel, in the 35. yere of king Edward yͤ firſt, vpon the lyke complaint: thereby forbidding, yͭ any thyng ſhoulde be attempted or brought into the Realme, whych ſhould tend to the blemiſhing of the kings prerogatiue, or to the preiudice of hys Lords or commons. And ſo at thys time, the ſtatute called the acte of prouiſion was made by common conſent, whych generally forbiddeth the bryngïng in of any Bulles, or ſuch trinkets from the Court of Rome, or the vſing, enioying, or allowing of any ſuch bil, proceſſe, inſtrument, or ſuch ware, as therby at large doth appeare. Whereof ſufficiently is touched before, pag.353.

Anno. Reg. Edouardi. 3. 18. tit 32. Preſentation within 4. monethes, an.reg.18. tit.34.

The penalty of whych ſtatute afterwarde followed in the next parliament, An. Reg. Ed. 18. tit. 31. the whych penalty was this: the tranſgreſſors therof to lie in perpetuall priſon, or to be forjured the land. And that al iuſtices of aſſize, gaile deliuery, and Oyer and determiner, may determine the ſame. Required withall, that the ſame act of prouiſion, ſhould continue for euer.

Item, that the ſayd 18. yeare of the raigne of king Edward, tit 34. it was moreouer propoũded: that if any archbyſhop, or any perſon religious or other, doe not preſent wͭin 4. monthes ſome able clerke to any dignitie, where any perſon hath obtayned from Rome any prouiſion, Bul, &c. but ſurceaſe the ſame: that then the Kyng may preſent ſome able clerke.

No elections to be taken by the pope, but onely by the K. anno. reg.18. tit.35.

Item, propounded in the ſayd Parliament, an.18. Reg. Ed 3. that if any Byſhop elect, ſhall refuſe to take any ſuche byſhopriks, other then by ſuch Bull: that then ſuch elect, ſhal not enter ne enioy hys temporalties without his ſpeciall licence.

Diſpoſitions of benefices onely in the kynges hand. an 18. Ed. 3. tit.36.

Alſo, that the king ſhall diſpoſe all ſuch benefices and dignities of ſuch aliens his enemies, as remain in the cõtrey of hys enemyes, and employ the profites therof to the defence of the realme.

Bulls frõ Rome forbidden. an. 18 reg. Ed. 3. tit. 37.

Moreouer propounded, that commiſſioners be ſent to all the kings portes, to apprehend all ſuch perſons as ſhal bring in any ſuch inſtrument frõ Rome, and to bring them forthwyth before the counſaile to anſwere thereto.

The Deanrie of Yorke taken frõ the Cardinal. an.18. reg. Ed. 3. tit.38.

Propounded farthermore, that the Deanry of Yorke which is to be recouered by iudgemẽt in the kyngs court, may be beſtowed vpon ſome able man within the realme, who will maintaine the ſame agaynſt hym (meanyng the Cardinall, who holdeth the ſame by prouiſion frõ Rome, being the enemy to the king and to the realm) and that the profites may be emploied to the defence of the realme.

The kings aunſwere & agreement to the foreſayd petitions.

The kynges aunſwere. To all whych petitions aunſwere was made in forme followyng: It is agreed by the King, Earles, Barons, Iuſtices, & other wiſe men of the Realme, that the petitions aforeſayd, be made in ſufficient forme of law, according to the petitions aforeſayd.

Note, that the Byſhops be not here named, and yet the parliament ſtandeth in force.

¶ Note in thys anſwere of the kyng (good reader) that at the graunt hereof, the conſent of the byſhops is neyther named, nor expreſſed, with the other Lords of the Parliament: and yet, the Parliament ſtandeth in hys full force, notwythſtanding.

Alien monkes to auoyd, an.20. Ed.3. tit.30.

TO paſſe farther in the 20. yeare of the kings reigne in the Parliament holden the ſame yere, it was propoũded: that all alien Monkes ſhould auoyde the Realme by the day of S. Michael, and that theyr liuings ſhuld be diſpoſed, to young Engliſh ſcholers. The liuings of theſe the king tooke to hys handes.

Item, that the king may take the profites of all others ſtrangers liuings, as Cardinals and others, during their liues. The profites of whõ were alſo in the kings hands.

The liuinges of ſtraungers beneficed taken into the kings hand. tit.21. The liuings of Romiſh ſtraungers diſpoſed to Engliſh men, tit.32. tit.33.

That ſuch aliens enemies, as be aduanced to liuyngs here in England (being in their owne countreys, ſhomakers, tailers, or chamberlaines to Cardinals) ſhuld depart before Michaelmas, and theyr liuynges diſpoſed to poore Engliſh ſcholers. The lyuings alſo of theſe remayned in the kings handes.

The commons denied to pay any paiment, to any cardinals lying in Fraunce, to entreat of war or peace: which alſo was graunted of the kings part as reaſonable.

Cardinals depriued of their lyuings in England. tit.34.

Item, propounded and fully agreed, that the yearely aduauncement of two thouſand markes (graunted by the pope to two Cardinals, out of the prouinces of Canterb. and Yorke) ſhould be reſtrained, and ſuche as ſhall purſue therfore to be out of the law.

Lykewiſe enacted and agreed, that no Engliſh man ſhould take any thing in ferme of any Alien religious, ne buy any of their goods, nor be of theyr counſaile, on payne of perpetuall impryſonment.

Enacted further, that no perſon ſhould bryng into the realme to any Byſhop or other, any Bul, or any other letters from Rome, or from any Alien: vnleſſe he ſhewe the ſame to the Chauncelour or Warden of the Cinque ports, vpon loſſe of all he hath.

Finally, in the end of the ſaid Parliament, the biſhops were commaunded before the next conuocation, to certify into the Chancery the names of ſuch Aliens, of their benefices, and the values of the ſame.

Ex Arch 25. an. reg. Ed 3. The popes firſt fruits & reſeruatiõs more hurtfull to the realm thẽ al the kyngs wars, tit.14.

THe Parliament of the 25. yeare, was begon the 6. day of February, the 25. yeare of king Edwarde 3. In the which parliament beſide other matters mo, was propoſed: that remedy might be had againſt the popes reſeruations, by which brocage and meanes the pope receiued the firſt fruits of all Eccleſiaſtical dignities: A more conſumption to the Realme, then all the kings warres.

Alſo the like remedy myght be had againſt ſuche, as in the Court of Rome preſume to vndoe any iudgement geuen in the kinges courte, as if they enforced to vndoe the lawes of the realme.

To breake of all appeales to Rome, tit.14.

Wherunto it was anſwered, that there was ſufficient remedy prouided by law.

The requeſt of the K. for cauſes not to be determined at Rome. tit.7.

IN the Parliament holden at Weſtminſter, the 38. yeare of Edward 3. in the vtaues of Hillary (Symon Byſhop of Ely being Lorde Chauncelour) it was required by the kings owne mouth, & declared to the whole eſtates: How daily citations & falſe ſuggeſtions were made to the pope, for matters determinable in his courtes win the Realme, and for procuring prouiſions to Eccleſiaſticall dignities, to the great defacing of the ancient lawes, to the ſpoyling of his crowne, to the daily conueying away of the treaſure to the waſting of eccleſiaſtical liuings, to the withdrawing of diuine ſeruice, almoſe, hoſpitalitie, and other acceptable workes, and to the daily increaſe of all miſchiefes: wherfore, in perſon and by hys owne mouth, the king required the whole eſtate to prouide hereof due remedy.

What miſchiefs come by transporting cauſes to Rome, tit.co.

To be noted finally in thys parliament of the 38. yere, that the Acte of prouiſors, brought in thys parliament, although in the printed copy. cap.1.2.3.4. doth agree with the recorde, in maner: yet in the ſaide recordes vnprinted, are moe biting wordes againſt the Pope: a myſterie not to be knowen of all men.

✻ Notes of the 40. yeare of king Edward the third.

IT followeth moreouer in the ſayd Acts of king Edward the 3. and in the 40. yere of his raigne, an other Parliament was called at Weſtminſter the 3. of May. An. 1366. the Biſhop of Ely being Lord Chauncelour and ſpeaker. Who in the 2. day of the ſayd aſſembly in the preſence of the King, Lordes and commons, declared: howe the day before, generally they vnderſtode the cauſe of thys their aſſembly, and now more particularly ſhuld vnderſtand the ſame: ſpecially howe that the king vnderſtode, yͤ the Pope (for the homage which K. Iohn made to the ſea of Rome for the Realmes of Englãd & Ireland, and for the tribute by him granted) ment by proces to cite the king of Rome, to aunſwere thereto. Wherein, the king required their aduiſes, what were beſt for him to do, if any ſuch thing were attempted. The Byſhops by their ſelues required reſpite of anſwere, vntill the next day. So did the Lordes & commons euery of them by their ſelues.

The pope mindeth to ſend for the king vp by proceſ.

The ſame next day, the whole eſtates reaſſembled together, & by common conſent enacted in effect following, vz. Forasmuch as neither K. Iohn nor any other kyng, coulde bring his realme & people in ſuch thraldome & ſubiection, but by common aſſent of Parliament, the whyche was not done: and therefore done againſt his othe at hys coronation (beſides many other cauſes.) If therefore the Pope ſhould attempt any thing againſt the King, by proceſſe or other matter in deede: That the king with all his ſubiects, ſhould withall their force and power reſiſt the ſame.

K. Iohn could not without conſent of parliament become tributary to the pope. tit.8.

Agreed by parliament, that the K. by force ſhould reſiſt the Pope.

Braule betweene the 4. orders of Friers and the two vniuerſities. Ex. tit.10.

Here moreouer is not to be omitted, howe in the ſayd preſent Parliament, the Vniuerſities of Oxford & Cambridge on the one ſide, and the Friers of the foure orders medicants in the ſaid vniuerſities on the other ſide: Made long complaintes the one againſt the other, to the kyng in Parliament, and in the ende ſubmitted themſelues to the kings order.

After which, the king vpon full digeſting of the whole matter (by aſſent of Parliament) tooke order: that as well the Chancelour & ſcholers, as the friers of thoſe orders in the ſayd Vniuerſities: ſhould in al graces and other ſchole exerciſes, vſe eche other in frendly wiſe, wythout any rumor as before. That none of thoſe orders, ſhoulde receyue any ſcholers into theyr ſayde orders, being vnder the age of 18. yeares.

That the ſaid Friers ſhall take no aduantage, ne procure Bulles or other proceſſe from Rome, againſt the ſaid vniuerſities, or procede therein.

The Friers ſubiect to the kings order only in all their controuerſies, parliament. tit.12.

And that the kyng haue power to redreſſe all controuerſies, betweene them from thence forth. And the offenders to be puniſhed at the pleaſure of the King, and of the counſaile.

✻ Notes of the 50. yeare of king Edward the third.

IN proceſſe of the foreſayd Actes and Rolles, it followeth more, that in the 50. yeare of the reigne of king Edward the 3. the yeare of our Lorde 1376. an other great Parliament was aſſembled at Weſtminſter the xxiiij. of April: where, Syr Iohn Knyuet being Lorde Chauncelour of England, a certaine long Bill was put vp againſt the vſurpatiõs of the Pope, as being the cauſe of all yͤ plagues, murrions, famine, and pouerty of the realme, ſo as thereby was not left the third perſon, or other cõmodity within the realme that lately was.

2. That the taxes payed to the Pope of Rome for Eccleſiaſticall dignities, doe amount to fiue fold as much, as the taxe of al profites as apperteine to the king by the yeare of his whole Realme: And that for ſome one Byſhopricke or other dignitie, the Pope by way of tranſlation and death, hath 3.4. or 5. ſeuerall taxes.

Againſt the vſurpation of the pope.

3. That the brokers of that ſinfull Citie, for money promote many caitifes (being altogether vnlearned and vnworthy) to a 1000. markes lyuing by yeare, where the learned and worthy can hardly obteine 20. marks, whereby learning decayeth.

The Pope cauſe of all miſchiefes in England.

4. That aliens (enemyes to this land) who neuer ſaw ne care not to ſe their pariſhioners, haue thoſe liuings wherby they deſpiſe Gods ſeruice, & conuey away the treaſure, and are worſe then Iewes or Saraſens.

The treſure of the Realme conueyed away by the popes meanes. tit. 97.

5. Alſo it was put vp in the ſaid Bill to be conſidered, that the lawes of the church, would ſuch liuings to be beſtowed for charitie, onely without praying or paying.

6. That reaſon woulde that liuings geuen of deuotion, ſhould be beſtowed in hoſpitality.

7. That God had committed his ſheepe to the Pope, to be paſtured and not ſhoren or ſhauen.

8. That lay patrones perceiuing the couetouſnes and ſimony of the pope, do therby learne to ſell their benefices to beaſts, none otherwiſe then Chriſt was ſold to the Iewes.

The Pope geueth example to ſel benefices, tit.99.

9. That there is none ſo rich a Prince in Chriſtendome, that hath the fourth part of ſo much treaſure, as the Pope hath out of this realme, for churches moſt ſinfully.

Ineſtimable that the P. hath here out of England, tit.100

10. Ouer and beſides in the ſayd Bill, repeting againe the tendering zeale, for the honor of the Church: was declared and particularly named, all the plagues whych haue iuſtly fallen vpon this realme, for ſuffering the ſame church to be ſo defaced, wyth declaration that it will daily encreaſe wythout redreſſe.

11. Wherupon, with much perſuaſion this was deſired, to helpe to reedifie the ſame: and the rather for that, this was the yeare of Iubiley, the 50. yeare of the kynges reigne, the yeare of ioy and gladneſſe, then the whych there coulde be no greater.

Reſeruation of the church of England deſired in the Parliamét, tit.111.

12. The meanes howe to begyn this, was to wryte 2. letters to the Pope: the one in Latine vnder the kyngs ſeale, the other in French vnder the ſeales of the nobles, importing their particularities, & requiring redres, of the which letter of the Lordes; the effect may be ſeene in a like letter mentioned before, pag.479.

13. And for a further accompliſhment hereof to enact, that no money were caried forth of the realme by letter of Lumbardy or otherwiſe, on paine of forfaiture and impriſonment, and to enact the articles hereafter enſuing.

Actes made for no money to be tranſported. tit,103.

14. The king hath heretofore by ſtatute prouided ſufficiẽt remedy, and otherwiſe purſueth the ſame with the holy father the Pope, & ſo mindeth to do from time to time, vntill he hath obteined aſwel for the matters before, as for the articles enſuing being in a maner all one.

15. That the popes collector & other ſtraungers the kings enemies, and onely lyger ſpies for Engliſh dignities, and diſcloſing of the ſecretes of the realme, may be touched.

Againſt the Popes lyger ſpies, & collectors, tit. 104.

16. That the ſame collectour being alſo receauour of the popes pence, keepeth a houſe in London with clerkes and officers therto, as it were one of the kings ſolẽne courtes, tranſporting yearely to the Pope xx. M. markes, and moſt commonly more.

The Popes collection what it cometh to. tit. 205.

17. That Cardinals & other aliens remaining at Rome, wherof one Cardinall is Deane of Yorke, an other of Saliſbury, an other of Lyncoln, an other archdeacon of Canterbury, an other Archdeacon of Durreſme, an other archdeacon of Suffolk, an other Archdeacon of York, an other prebendary of Thame & Naſſington, an other prebendary of Buckes in the Church of Yorke: Haue diuers of the beſt dignities of England, & haue ſent ouer to them yerely xx. M. marks ouer and aboue that whych Engliſh brokers lying there, haue.

The beſt dignities in England, in the Cardinals. tit.106.

18. That the Pope (to raunſome the Frenchmenne the kings enemyes, who defend Lumbardy from hym) doeth alwaies at his pleaſure leuie a ſubſidy of the whole Clergie of England.

The Pope maintaineth the kings enemies with the kyngs money. tit. 207.

19. That the Pope for more gaine maketh ſundry tranſlations of all the Byſhopricks and other dignities wythin the Realme.

The Popes practiſe in England to make money. tit. 108.

20. That the popes collector hath this yeare taken to hys vſe the firſt fruits of all benefices, by collatiō or prouiſion.

The law of premunire to be renued.

21. To renue all the ſtatutes againſt prouiſors frō Rome, ſith that the Pope reſerueth all the benefices of the worlde for hys owne proper gift, & hath thys yere created 12. new Cardinals, ſo as nowe there are thirty, where was wont to be but 12. and all thoſe Cardinals, except 2. or 3. are the kings enemies.

22. That the Pope in tyme, wil geue the temporall mannors of thoſe dignities to ẏ kings enemies, ſith he ſo daily vſurpeth vpon the Realme, and the kings regalities.

Againſt the popes vſurpation, tit. 112.

23. That all houſes and corporatiōs of religion, who vnto the kings raigne nowe had free election of heades, the Pope hath encroched the ſame to hymſelfe.

24. That in all legacies from the Pope, whatſoeuer: the Engliſh clergie beareth the charge of the legates, and all for the goodneſſe of our money.

Engliſhe money payeth the Popes legacies, tit. 113.

25. And ſo it appeareth, that if the money of the Realme were as plentiful as euer it was: the Collectors aforeſaid, wyth the Proctors of Cardinals, would ſone conuey the ſame.

No good money in the realme for the pope and Card. tit. 114.

26. For remedy heereof it may be prouided, that no ſuche Collector or Proctor doe remayne in Englande, on payne of lyfe and member. And that no Engliſh man on the like payne, become any ſuch Collector or Proctor, or remayne at Rome.

The Popes collector or proctor driuen out of the realme, tit. 115.

27. For better information hereof, and namely touchyng the Popes Collector, for that the whole clergy beyng obedient to him, dare not diſpleaſe hym: It were good, that ſyr Iohn Strenſale, parſone of S. Botulphes in Holborne, may be ſent to come before the Lordes and commons of this Parliament. Who beyng ſtraightly charged, can declare much more, for that hee ſerued the ſame Collector in houſe 5. yeares.

The Popes collector to be examined.

Engliſh mē good aſſes.

¶ And thus much of this bil touching the popes matters: wherby it may appere, not to be for nought that hath bene vpon vs reported by the Italians and other ſtraungers, which vſed to call Engliſh men good Aſſes: for they beare all burdens that be layd vpon them.

The effect of the Chācellors Oration.

In which Parliament, the Byſhop of S. Dauids being Lord Chauncelour, making a long oration, taking his theame out of S. Paul: Libenter ſuffertis inſipientes. &c. Declaring in the ſayde Oration many thyngs, as firſt, in ſhewing the ioyfull newes of the olde kings recouerye: then declaring the loue of God toward the king and realme, in chaſtiſing hym wyth ſickeneſſe: Afterwarde ſhewyng the bleſſing of God vpon the king, in ſeeing hys childrēs children: Then by a ſimilitude of the head & members, exhorting the people as members to cōforme themſelues to the goodneſſe of the head. Laſtly, hee turned his matter to the Lordes and the reſt, declaring the cauſe of that aſſembly: that forſomuch as the Frenche kyng had allyed hymſelfe wyth the Spanyardes and Scottes the kyngs enemyes, whych had prepared great powers, conſpiring to blot out the Engliſh tonge and name: the king therefore was willyng to haue therein their faithfull counſaile.

The cauſe of this parliament chiefly for the Popes vſurpation againſt the king.

This being declared by the Biſhop: Sir Robert Aſhton the kings chamberlaine, declaring ẏ he was to moue them from the king, for the profit of the realme (the whych wordes percaſe lay not in the Byſhops mouth, for that it touched the Pope) vz. By proteſting firſt, that the Kyng was ready to do al that ought to be done for the pope. But for that diuers vſurpations were done by the Pope to the Kyng hys crowne, and Realme, as by particular billes in thys parliament ſhould be ſhewed, he required of them to ſeeke redreſſe.

In theſe rolles and recordes of ſuch Parliamentes as was in thys kings time continued, diuers other thynges are to be noted muche worthy to be marked, and not to be ſuppreſſed in ſilence. Wherein the Reader may learne and vnderſtand the ſtate of the kings iuriſdiction here wythin this realme, not to be ſtraightned in thoſe daies (although the Pope then ſeemed to be in his chief ruffe) as afterward ſince in other kings dayes was ſeene. As may appeare in the parliament of the 15. yeare of thys king Edward the 3. and in the 24. article of the ſayde Parliament: where it is to be read, that the kings officers and temporall Iuſtices did then both puniſh vſurers, ans impeached the officers of the Church for bribery, and for taking mony for temporall paine, probate of willes, ſolemnitie of Mariage, &c. al the pretenſed liberties of the popiſh church to the contrary notwythſtanding.

Puniſhment of the clergie in the temporall mens handes.

Clarkes ſubiect to temporall lawe.

Furthermore, in the Parliament of the 25. yeare, appeareth: that the liberties of the clergie and their exemptions in claiming the deliueraunce of men by their booke vnder the name of Clerks, ſtode then in litle force, as appeared by one Hauketyne Honby knight: who for impriſonning one of the kings ſubiectes, till hee made fine of 20. li. was therefore executed, notwithſtanding the liberty of the Clergie, whych by his booke would haue ſaued hym, but could not.

The like alſo appeared by iudgement geuen agaynſt a prieſt at Notingham, for killing of hys maiſter.

And likewiſe by hanging certaine monks of Combe.

Item, in the Parliament of the 15. yeare, by apprehending of I. Stratford, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and hys arrainment: concerning which his arrainment, all things were committed to ſir William of Kildiſby.

Beſides theſe truthes and notes of the kings Parliaments, wherin may appeare ẏ toward procedings of this king & of all his commons againſt the pretenſed church of Rome: Thys is moreouer to be added to the commendation of the king, how in the volumes of the actes & rolles of the king appeareth. That the ſayd king Edward the 3. ſent alſo Iohn Wickleffe, reader then of the Diuinitie lector in Oxford, wyth certaine other Lords & Ambaſſadors ouer into the partes of Italy, to treat wyth the Popes Legates concerning affaires betwixt the King and the Pope wt ful cōmiſſion: the tenor wherof here foloweth expreſſed.

Iohn Wickliffe ſent with the kings Ambaſſadours by the K.

Rex vniuerſis, ad quorum notitiam preſentes literæ peruenerint. &c. In Engliſh thus.

The King to all and ſinguler to whome theſe preſentes ſhall come greeting. Know ye, that we repoſing aſſured confidence in the fidelitie and wiſdome of the reuerend father Iohn Biſhoppe of Bangor, and other our louing and faithful ſubiects, M. Iohn Wickliſſe, reader of the diuinitie lecture, M. Iohn Gunter Deane of Segobyen. and M. Symon Moulton doctor of the lawe, Syr William Burton Knight, M Iohn Belknappe, & M. Iohn Honnington, haue directed them as our Ambaſſadors and ſpecial Commiſsioners to the partes beyond the ſeas. Geuing to the ſayde our Ambaſſadors and Commiſsioners, to ſixe or fiue of them, of whome I will that the ſayde Biſhop ſhalbe one, full power and aucthoritie, wyth commaundement ſpeciall, to treat and conſult mildely and charitably with the Legates and Ambaſſadors of the L. Pope touching certaine affaires. Whereupon of late we ſent heretofore the ſayd Biſhop, and M. William Vghtred monke of Dureſme, and M. Iohn Shepie to the ſee Apoſtolicall: And hereof to make ful relation of all things done and paſt in the ſayd aſſembly, that all ſuch things which may tend to the honor of holy Church and the aduauncement of our crowne and this our realme may by the aſſiſtaunce of God and the wiſedome of the ſee Apoſtolicall bee brought to good effect, and accompliſhed accordingly. Witnes our ſelues. &c. at London dated the 26. day of Iuly in the 48. yeare of our raigne.

By the which it is to be noted, what good wil the king then bare to the ſayd Wickleffe, and what ſmal regarde he had to the ſinfull ſea of Rome.

Of the whych Iohn Wickleff, becauſe we are now approched to his time: remaineth conſequently for our ſtory to entreat of, so as we haue heere to fore done of other lyke valiant ſouldiours of Chriſtes Church before him.

¶ Iohn Wickliffe.

Here beginneth the ſtory of Iohn Wickliffe

AFter all theſe heretofore recited, by whome (as ye haue heard) it pleaſed the Lord ſomething to worke againſt the Byſhop of Rome, & to weaken the pernitious ſuperſtition of the Friers. Nowe remayneth conſequently following the courſe of yeares, orderly to enter into the ſtory and tractation of Iohn Wickleffe our countreyman, and other moe of his time, and ſame countrey, whom the Lord (wyth the like zeale and power of ſpirit) rayſed vp here in England, to detect more fully and amply the poiſon of the Popes doctrine, & falſe religion ſet vp by the Fryers. In whoſe opinions and aſſertiõs, albeit ſome blemiſhes perhaps may be noted: yet ſuch blemiſhes they be, whych rather declare him to be a mã that might erre, then which directly did fight againſt Chriſt our Sauiour, as the Popes procedings and the friers did. And what doctor or learned man hath ben from the prime age of the church, ſo perfect, ſo abſolutely ſure, in whome no opinyon hath ſometyme ſwarued awry? And yet be the ſayd articles of hys, neither in number ſo many, nor yet ſo groſſe in themſelues and ſo cardinall, as thoſe Cardinal ennemies of Chriſt perchance doe geue them out to be: if his bookes whõ they aboliſhed, were remaining to be conferred wt thoſe blemiſhes, which they haue wraſted to the worſte, as euill will neuer ſayde the beſt.

The blemiſhes of Wickliffe made worſe then they be.

This is certaine and can not be denied, but that he being the publike Reader of Diuinitie in the Vniuerſitie of Oxford: was for the rude time wherein he liued, famouſly reputed for a great clerke, a deepe ſcholeman, & no leſſe expert in all kinde of philoſophie. The which doth not onely appeare by his owne moſt famous and learned wrytings and monuments, but alſo by the confeſſion of Walden hys moſt cruel & bitter enemy, who in a certain Epiſtle wrytten vnto pope Martin the fift, ſayth that he was wonderfully aſtonyſhed at his moſt ſtrong arguments, wyth the places of authority whych hee had gathered, wyth the vehemency and force of hys reaſons. &c. And thus much out of Walden. It appeareth by ſuch as haue obſerued the order and courſe of times, that this Wickleffe floriſhed about the yeare of our Lord. 1371. Edward the third raigning in England: for thus we doe finde in the Chronicles of Caxton. In the yere of our Lord 1371. (ſayeth he) Edward the third, king of England in his Parliamẽt, was againſt the Popes clergy: He willingly harkned and gaue eare to the voices and tales of heretickes, wyth certaine of his counſel: conceiuing and folowing ſiniſter opinions againſt the Clergy. Wherefore (afterward) he taſted and ſuffred much aduerſity & trouble. And not long after, in the yeare of our Lord (ſayth he) 1372. he wrote vnto the Byſhop of Rome, that he ſhould not by any meanes entermeddle any more wtin his kingdom as touching the reſeruation, or diſtribution of benefices: and that all ſuch byſhops as were vnder hys dominion, ſhould enioy their former and anciẽt liberty, and be confirmed of theyr Metropolitanes, as hath ben accuſtomed in times paſt. &c. Thus much wryteth Caxtõ: But as touching the iuſt number of the yere and time, we will not be very curious or carefull about, at this preſent. Thys is out of all doubt, that at what time all the worlde was in moſt deſperate and vile eſtate, & that the lamentable ignorance and darknes of God his truth had ouerſhadowed the whole earth: this man ſtepped forth like a valiant champiõ, vnto whom it may iuſtly be applyed that is ſpoken in the boke called Eccleſiaſticus of one Simon the ſonne of Onias. Euen as the morning ſtar being in the middeſt of a cloud, & as the Moone being ful in her courſe, and as the bryght beames of the Sunne, ſo doeth he ſhine and gliſter in the temple and Church of God.

Ex Caxtono.

Thus doth almighty God continually ſuccor & helpe, whẽ all thinges are in diſpaire: being alwaies (according to the Prophecye of the Pſalme) a helper in tyme of need. The which thing neuer more playnely appeared, then in theſe latter dayes and extreme age of the Church: when as the whole ſtate & condition (not onely of worldly things, but alſo of Religion) was depraued and corrupted. That like as the diſeaſe named Lethargus among the Phiſitions, euen ſo the ſtate religion amongſt the Diuines, was paſt al mens helpe and remedy. The onely name of Chriſt remayned amongeſt Chriſtians, but his true & liuely doctrine was as farre vnknowne vnto the moſt part, as his name was cõmon vnto al men. As touching fayth, cõſolation, the end & vſe of the law, the office of Chriſt, of our impotency and weaknes, of the holy ghoſt, of the greatnes & ſtrength of ſinne, of true works, of grace and free iuſtification of liberty of a Chriſtian man, wherein conſiſteth and reſteth the ſumme and matter of our profeſſion: there was no mention or any word almoſt ſpokẽ of Scripture, learning & diuinity, was knowne but vnto a few, & that in the ſcholes onely: & there alſo turned & cõuerted almoſt al into ſophiſtry. In ſtead of Peter & Paule, men occupyed theyr time in ſtudying Aquinas and Scotus, and the maiſter of ſentẽce. The worlde leauing & forſaking the liuely power of Gods ſpirituall word and doctrine, was altogether led and blinded with outward ceremonies & humaine traditions, wherein the whole ſcope, in a maner of all chriſtian perfection did conſiſt & depend. In theſe was all the hope of obteining ſaluation fully fixed: hereunto all thynges were attributed. In ſo much, that ſcarcely any other thyng was ſene in the temples or Churches, taught or ſpoken of in ſermõs, or finally intẽded or gone about in theyr whole life, but only heaping vp of certain ſhadowed ceremonies vpon ceremonies, neither was there any end of theyr heaping.

A deſcriptiõ of Wickliffes time.

The people were taught to worſhip no other thing but that which they did ſee, and did ſee almoſt nothing whiche they did not worſhip.

The Church being degenerated from the true Apoſtolick inſtitutiõ aboue al meaſure (reſeruing onely the name of the Apoſtolick Church, but farre from the truth thereof in very deede) did fall into all kinde of extreme tyranny: where as the pouerty and ſimplicity of Chriſt was chaunged into cruelty and abhomination of life. In ſtead of the Apoſtolicke giftes and continuall labours and trauelles, ſlouthfulnes & ambitiõ was crept in amongſt the prieſts. Beſides all this, there aroſe & ſprong vp a thouſand ſortes and faſhions of ſtraunge religions, being the onely root & well head of all ſuperſtitiõ. How great abuſes and deprauations were crept into the Sacramentes, at what tyme they were compelled to worſhip ſimilitudes and ſignes of thinges, for the very things themſelues: and to adore ſuch things as were inſtituted and ordeined onely for memorials? Finally what thing was there, in the whole ſtate of Chriſten religion ſo ſincere, ſo ſound and pure, which was not defiled and ſpotted with ſome kind of ſuperſtitiõ? Beſides this, with how many bondes & ſnares of dayly new fangled ceremonies, the ſely conſciences of men redeemed by Chriſt to liberty, were ſnared and ſnarled? In ſo much, that there could be no great differẽce almoſt perceiued betwene Chriſtianitie and Iuiſhnes, ſaue onely the name of Chriſt, ſo that the ſtate and condition of the Iewes, might ſeeme ſomwhat more tolerable then ours. There was nothing ſought for out of the true fountaines, but out of the dirty pudles of the Philiſtians. The chriſtian people were wholy caried away as it were by the noſes, with mere decrees and conſtitutions of men, euen whether as pleaſed the biſhops to lead them, and not as Chriſtes will did direct them. All the whole world was filled and ouerwhelmed with errours and darkneſſe. And no great maruell, for why the ſimple and vnlearned people being far from all knowledge of the holy Scripture: thought it ſufficient inough for them, to know onely theſe things whych were deliuered them by their paſtors and ſhepheards, and they on the other part taught in a maner nothing els, but ſuch things as came forth of the Court of Rome. Whereof the moſt part tended to the profite of their order more then to the glory of Chriſt.

All good things defiled & ſpotted with ſuperſtition.

The Chriſtian faith was eſteemed or counted none other thing then, but ye euery man ſhould know that Chriſt once ſuffered, that is to ſay, that all men ſhould know and vnderſtand ye thing which the deuils thẽſelues alſo knew. Hypocriſie was counted for wonderful holines. All men were ſo addict vnto outward ſhewes, that euen they thẽſelues which profeſſed ye moſt abſolute & ſingular knowledge of the ſcriptures, ſcarſly did vnderſtãd or know any other thing. And thys euidẽtly did appere, not only in the common ſort of doctours and teachers, but alſo in the very heades and captaines of the Church: whoſe whole religion gion and holines, conſiſted in a maner in the obſeruing of dayes, meates, and garments, and ſuch like rethorical circumſtances, as of place, time, perſon. &c. Hereof ſprang ſo many ſorts & faſhions of veſtures and garments: ſo many differences of colours & meates: with ſo many pilgrimages to ſeuerall places, as though S. James at Compoſtella could do that, which Chriſt could not do at Canterbury: Or els that God were not of like power & ſtrength in euery place, or could not be found but being ſought for by running & gadding hether and thether. Thus the holines of the whole yere was trāſported and put of vnto the Lent ſeaſon. No countrey or land was counted holy, but onely Paleſtina, where Chriſt had walked himſelfe wyth his corporall feete. Such was the blindnes of yͤ time, men did ſtriue and fight for the croſſe at Hieruſalem, as it had bene for the chief and onely force and ſtrength of our faith. It is a wonder to reade the monumentes of the formore times, to ſee and vnderſtand what great troubles & calamities thys croſſe hath cauſed almoſte in euery Chriſtian common wealth. For the Romiſh champions neuer ceaſed, by wryting, admoniſhing, and coūſailing, yea and by quarelling, to moue & ſtirre vp Princes mindes to warre & battail, euen as though the faith & beleefe of the goſpell, were of ſmall force or little effect wᵗout that wooden croſſe. This was yͤ cauſe of yͤ expedition of the moſt noble prince K. Rich. vnto Jeruſalem. Who being taken in the ſame iourney, and deliuered vnto the Emperour: could ſcarſly be raunſomed home againe, for xxx. M. markes. pag. 248. In the ſame enterpriſe or iourney, Fridericus the Emperour of Rome a man of moſt excellent vertue, was muche endamaged in the ſame iourney. an. 1179. And alſo Philip the king of Fraunce, ſcarſly returned home againe in ſafety not without great loſſes: ſo much did they eſteeme the recouery of the holy citie and croſſe.

Pope Vrbane.

Lambert Pope,

The knowledge of the Goſpell groſely expounded by the Romapiſtes.

Upon this alone, all mens eyes, minds, & deuotions, were ſo ſet and bent: as though either there were no other croſſe but that, or that the croſſe of Chriſt were in no other place but onely at Hieruſalem. Such was the blindneſſe and ſuperſtition of thoſe daies, which vnderſtood or knew nothing but ſuch as were outwardly ſene: wheras yͤ profeſſion of our religion ſtandeth in much other higher matters and greater myſteries. What was the cauſe why that Urbanus did ſo vexe and torment himſelfe? Becauſe that Antioche with the holy croſſe, was loſt out of the hands of the Chriſtians. For ſo we doe finde it in the Chronicles, at what time as Jeruſalem with king Guido, and the croſſe of our Lord was taken, and vnder the power of Sultan: Urbanus toke the mater ſo greuouſly, that for very ſorow he died. In whoſe place ſucceded Lambertus which was called Gregory the 8. by whoſe motion it was decreed by the Cardinals, that (ſetting apart all riches and voluptuouſnes) they ſhould preach the croſſe of Chriſt, and by their pouerty and humility firſt of all ſhuld take the croſſe vpon them, & go before others into the lād of Jeruſalem. Theſe are the words of the hiſtory, wherby it is euident vnto the vigilant reader, vnto what groſenes the true knowledge of the ſpiritual doctrine of the goſpel was degenerate and growen vnto in thoſe daies: How great blindnes & darknes was in thoſe dayes, euen in the firſt primacy, & ſupremacy of the biſhop of Rome: as though the outward ſucceſſion of Peter and the Apoſtles, had ben of greater force and effect to that matter. What doeth it force in what place Peter did rule or not rule? It is much more to be regarded that euery man ſhould labor and ſtudy with all theyr endeuor to followe the life & confeſſion of Peter: And that man ſeemeth vnto me to be the true ſucceſſour of Peter, againſt whom the gates of hel ſhall not preuaile. For if that Peter in the goſpell do beare the type & figure of the chriſtian church (as all men in a maner do affirme) what more fooliſh or vaine thyng can there be: then thorough priuate vſurpation, to reſtraine and to binde that vnto one man, which by the appoyntment of the Lorde, is of it ſelfe free and open to ſo many?

The ryſing vp of Wickliffe in a troublous tyme.

Thus in theſe ſo great and troublous times and horrible darkenes of ignoraunce, what time there ſeemed in a maner to be no one ſo litle a ſparke of pure doctrine left or remaining: This foreſayd Wickliffe by Gods prouidence ſprang and roſe vp: thorough whom, the Lord would firſt waken and raiſe vp agayne the worlde, which was ouermuch drowned and whelmed in the depe ſtreames of humaine traditions. Thus you haue heere the time of Wickliffes originall.

Wickliffe a Deuine in Oxford.

Which Wickliffe after he had now by a long time profeſſed deuinity in the vniuerſity of Oxford, and perceiuing the true doctrine of Chriſtes Goſpell to be adulterate and defiled, with ſo many filthy inuentions of Biſhops, ſectes of monkes, and darke errours: And that he after long debating and deliberating with himſelfe (with many ſecrete ſighes and bewailing in hys mind the generall ignorance of the whole world) could no lōger ſuffer or abide the ſame but that he at the laſt, determined with himſelfe to healpe and to remedy ſuch things as he ſaw to be wide and out of the way. But for ſo much as he ſaw that this daungerous medling, could not be attempted or ſtirred wythout great trouble, neyther that theſe things which had bene ſo long time with vſe and cuſtome rooted and grafted in mennes mindes, coulde not be ſodenly plucked vp or taken away, he thought wᵗ himſelfe that this matter ſhould be done by litle & litle. Wherfore he taking his original at ſmall occaſions, thereby opened himſelfe a way or meane to greater matters. And firſt he aſſailed his aduerſaries in logicall & metaphiſical queſtiōs, diſputing wᵗ them of the firſt forme & faſhion of things, of the increaſe of time, and of the intelligible ſubſtance of a creature, wᵗ other ſuch like ſophemes of no great effect: but yet notwithſtanding did not a little helpe and furniſh him, which minded to diſpute of greater matters. So in theſe matters, firſt began Kegningham (a Carmelite) to diſpute and argue againſt John Wickliffe.

Wickliffe depriued of his benefice at Oxford by S. Sudbery. Ex Chron. D. Albani.

Duke of Lancaſter, & Lord H. Percy, great maintayners of I. Wickliffe.

By theſe originals, the way was made vnto greater poynts, ſo that at the length he came to touch the matters of the ſacraments, and other abuſes of the Church. Touching whych thinges this holy man tooke great paynes, proteſting (as they ſaide) openly in the ſcholes, that it was hys chiefe and principall purpoſe and intent: to reuoke and call backe the Church from her Idolatry to ſome better amendment, eſpecially in the matter of the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Chriſt. But this bile or ſore could not be touched wythout the great griefe and paine of the whole world. For firſt of all, the whole glutte of Monkes and begging Friers were ſet on a rage or madnes, which (euen as Hornets wyth their ſharpe ſtings) did aſſayle this good man on euery ſide: fighting (as is ſayd) for their aultars, paunches and bellies. After them the prieſts, and then after them the Archb. tooke the matter in hand being then S. Sudbury, who for the ſame cauſe depriued him of his benefice, which then he had in Oxford. Notwythſtanding he being ſomwhat friended & ſupported by the king, as appeareth, continued and bare out the malice of the Friers, and of the Archb. all this while of his firſt beginning, till about the yeare of our Lorde. 1377. After whych time now to proſecute likewiſe of his troubles & conflict, firſt I muſt fetch about a little compaſſe, as requiſite is, to inferre ſome mention of John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaſter the kings ſonne, and Lord Henry Percy, whych were his ſpeciall maintainers.

Alice Perris, the kings concubine.

The K. bewitched by a woman thorough the helpe of a Fryer.

The propertie of an whore.

As yeares and time grew on, king Edward the third, which had reigned nowe about 51. yeares, after the deceaſe of prince Edwarde his ſonne, who departed the yeare before: was ſtroken in great age, & in ſuch feblenes withall, that he was vnweldy through lacke of ſtrēgth to gouerne the affairs of the realm. Wherfore, a parliament being called the yeare before his death, it was there put vp by the knights & other the burgeſſes of the Parliament (becauſe of the miſgouernment of the realme by certain gredy perſons about the king, raking all to themſelues, without ſeing any iuſtice done) that 12. ſage and diſcrete Lordes and Pieres, ſuch as were free from note of all auarice, ſhuld be placed as tutours about the King, to haue the doing and diſpoſing vnder him (6. at one time, and in their abſence 6. at another) of matters pertinent to the publike regiment. Here by the way I omit to ſpeake of Alice Perris the wicked harlot, which (as the ſtory geueth) had bewitched the kings hart, & gouerned all and ſate vpon cauſes her ſelf through the diueliſh help of a Frier Dominick: who by the duke of Lancaſter was cauſed to be take, and was conuicted, & ſhould haue ſuffred for the ſame, had not the Archb. of Cant. and the Friers (more regarding the liberty of their Churche, then the puniſhing of vice) reclaimed hym for their own priſoner. This Alice Perrys, notwithſtanding ſhe was baniſhed by this Parliament from the king, yet afterward ſhe came againe, & left him not: til at hys death ſhee tooke all his rings vpon his fingers and other iewels frō him, and ſo fled away like an harlot. But thys of her by the way.

12. Gouernours aſſigned about the kyng.

Theſe 12. gouernours by the parliament aforeſayd being appoynted to haue the tuition of the king, & to attend to the publike affaires of yͤ realme: remained for a certaine ſpace about him, till afterward it ſo fel out, that they being againe remoued, all the regiment of the realme next vnder the King, was committed to the Duke of Lancaſter the kings ſonne. For as yet Richard the ſonne of prince Edward latly departed, was very yong and vnder age.

This Duke of Lancaſter had in his heart of long time conceiued a certaine diſpleaſure againſt the popiſh clergy:

Ex Chron. Monaſterij Albani.

whether for corrupt and impure doctrine ioyned wᵗ lyke abhominable exceſſe of life, or for what ſome other cauſe, it is not preciſely expreſſed. Onely by ſtory the cauſe thereof may be geſſed, to riſe by William Wickam biſhop of Wincheſter. The matter is thys.

A practiſe of the prelates againſt the Duke of Lancaſter.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter (as the ſaying went then) was reported to affirme, that the foreſaid Ihon of Gaunt duke of Lācaſter, was not the ſonne of king Edward, nor of the Quene. Who being in trauel at Gaūt, had no ſonne (as he ſayd) but a daughter: which the ſame time by lying vppon of the mother in the bedde, was there ſmothered. Wherupon, the Quene fearing the kings diſpleaſure, cauſed a certaine manchilde of a woman of Flaunders (borne the very ſame time) to be conueyed and brought vnto her in ſtead of her daughter aforeſayde. And ſo brought vp the child whom ſhe bare not, who now is called duke of Lancaſter. And this (ſaid the Biſhop) did the Queene tell him, lying in extremes on her death bed vnder ſeale of confeſſion: charging hym if the ſayde Duke ſhould euer aſpire to get the crowne, or if the kingdome by any meanes ſhould fall vnto hym, he then ſhould manifeſt the ſame, & declare it to the worlde, that the ſayde Duke of Lancaſter was no part of the kings bloud, but a falſe heire of the king. This ſlaunderous report of the wicked Byſhop, as it ſauoureth of a contumelious lie, ſo ſeemeth it to procede of a ſubtile zeale toward the Popes religion, meaning falſhode. For that the foreſayd Duke by fauouring of Wickliff, declared hymſelfe to be a profeſſed enemy againſt the Popes profeſſion. Whych thing was then not vnknowen, neyther vnmarked of the Prelates and Byſhops then in Englande. But the ſequele of the ſtory thus followed.

Thys ſlanderous vilany of the Byſhops report being blaſed abroad, and comming to the Dukes eare: he therwᵗ being not a litle diſcontented (as no marueil was) ſought againe by what meanes he coulde, to be reuenged of thys forenamed Biſhop. In concluſion, the Duke hauing now al the gouernment of the realm vnder the king his father, in hys own hand: ſo purſued ẏ byſhop of Wincheſter, that by acte of parliament he was condemned and depriued of al his temporal goods, which goods wer aſſigned to prince Rich. of Burdeux, the next inheritour of the crowne after the king, and furthermore inhibited the ſaid biſhop not to approch nere to ẏ court by 20. miles. Further as touching thys biſhop, the ſtory thus procedeth. Not lōg after in the yeare of our Lord. 1377. a Parliament was called by the meanes of the Duke of Lancaſter, vpon certaine cauſes & reſpects: in which parliament great requeſt, and ſute was made by the cleargy for the deliueraunce of the B. of Wincheſter. At length whē a ſubſidie was aſked in the kyngs name of the clergy, and requeſt alſo made in the kings behalfe for ſpedy expedition to be made for the diſſoluing of ẏ parliament, the Archb. therfore accordingly conuented the biſhops for the tractation thereof. To whō the B. wᵗ great lamentation cōplained for lack of their felow and brother B. of Wint. Whoſe iniury ſaid they, did derogate to the liberties of the whole church: And therfore denied to ioyne themſelues in tractation of any ſuch matters, before al the members together were vnited wᵗ the head: And (ſeing the matter touched them altogether in common, as well him as thē) would not otherwiſe do. And ſeemed moreouer to be moued againſt ẏ Archb. for that he was not more ſtout in the cauſe, but ſuffered him ſo to be cited of the duke.

W. Wickham B. of Wint. depriued.

Byſhops holde together. Liberties of the Church a great matter.

B of Wint. ſent for to the conuocation.

The Archb. although hauing ſufficient cauſe to excuſe himſelfe, wherefore not to ſend for him (as alſo he dyd) becauſe of the perils which might enſue therof: yet being enforced & perſuaded therunto, by the importunitie of the biſhops, directed downe his letters to the foreſaid biſhop of Wintch. willing hym to reſort vnto the conuocation of the clergy. Who being glad to obey the ſame, was receyued wᵗ great ioy of the other biſhops. And at length by ẏ meanes of Alice Perris, the kings paramor, aboue mētioned, (geuing to her a good quantity of mony) the ſayd Wincheſter was reſtored to his temporalities againe.

I. Wickliffe ſent for by the Duke of Lancaſter.

As the Biſhops had thus ſent for Wintch. the Duke in the meane time had ſent for Iohn Wickliffe: who as is ſaide, was then the diuinity reader in Oxford, and had cōmenced in ſondry actes and diſputations, contrary to the forme and teaching of the Popes church in many things: who alſo for the ſame had bene depriued of his benefice, as hath bene afore touched. The opinions which he began in Oxford, firſt in his lectures, and ſermōs to entreat of, and wherfore he was depriued were theſe. That the Pope had no more power to excommunicate any man, then hath an other. That if it be geuē by any perſō to the pope to excōmunicate, yet to abſolue the ſame is as much in the power of an other prieſt, as in hys. He affirmed moreouer, ẏ neyther ẏ king nor any temporall Lord could geue any perpetuity to the church, or to any eccleſiaſticall perſon: for that when ſuch eccleſiaſticall do ſinne, habitualiter, continuing in the ſame ſtill, the temporal powers ought and may meritoriouſly, take away from them, that before hath bene beſtowed vpon thē. And that he proued, to haue bene practiſed before here in England by Williā Rufus. Which thing (ſayd he) if he did lawfully, why may not the ſame alſo be practiſed now? if he did it vnlawfully, then doth the church erre (ſayth he) & doth vnlawfully in praying for him. But of his aſſertions more ſhall follow (Chriſt willing) hereafter. The ſtory which aſcribeth to him theſe aſſertions being taken out (as I take it) of ẏ monaſtery of S. Albons addeth withall: that in his teaching and preaching he was very eloquent, but a diſſembler (ſaith he) and an hipocrite. Why he ſurmiſeth him to be an hypocrite, the cauſe was this:

Example of W. Rufus.

Ex hiſt. Monaſterij D. Albani.

Firſt, becauſe he reſorted much to the orders of the begging Friers, frequenting and extolling the perfection of their pouerty.

Secondly, becauſe he and his felowes vſually accuſtomed in their preaching to go barefote, and in ſimple ruſſet gownes.

By this I ſuppoſe, may ſufficiently appeare to the indifferent, the nature and condition of Wickliffe, how far it was frō the ambitiō & pride, which in the ſlaundrous pen of Polydore Virgil, reporting in his 19. booke of him, that becauſe he was not preferred to higher honors and dignities of the church (conceiuing therfore indignation agaynſt the clergy) became theyr mortall enemy. How true this was, he onely knoweth beſt, that rightly ſhall iudge both ẏ one and the other.

The ſlaunderous pēne of Polydore.

In the meane time, by other circūſtaunces & partes of his life, we may alſo partly cōiecture what is to be thoght of ẏ mā. But howſoeuer it was in him either true or falſe: yet it had bene Polidors part, either not ſo intemperatly to haue abuſed his pen, or at leaſt to haue ſhewed ſome greater authority and ground of that his report. For to follow nothing els but flying fame, ſo raſhlye to defame a man whoſe life he knoweth not, is not the part of a faythful ſtory writer.

Wickliffe falſly charged with ambition by Polydore.

But to returne from whēce we digreſſed. Beſide theſe his opinions and aſſertions aboue recited, with other mo, which are hereafter to be brought in order: He began alſo then ſomething nearely to touch the matter of the Sacrament, prouing that in the ſayd Sacrament, the accidences of bread remayned not without the ſubiect, or ſubſtaunce: both by the holy Scriptures, and alſo by the authoritye of the doctors, but ſpecially by ſuch as were moſt aunciēt. As for the latter writers, that is to ſay ſuch as haue written vpon that argumēt vnder the thouſand yeres ſince Chriſtes time, he vtterly refuſed: ſaying, that after theſe yeares Sathan was loſed & ſet at liberty. And that ſince that time the life of man hath bene moſt ſubiect and in danger of errors: the ſimple and playne truth to appeare and conſiſt in the Scriptures, wherunto all humain traditions whatſoeuer they be, muſt be referred, and ſpecially ſuch as are ſet forth & publiſhed now of late yeares. This was the cauſe why he refuſed the latter writers of decretals, leaning onely to the Scriptures & auncient doctors: moſt ſtoutly affirming out of them that in the Sacramēt of the body which is celebrate, with bread the accidēce not to be preſent without the ſubſtaunce. That is to ſay, that the body of Chryſt is not preſent without the breade, as the common ſorte of Prieſtes in thoſe daies did dreame. As for his arguments what they were: we wyll ſhortly at more oportunity by Gods grace, declare them in an other place. But herein the trueth (as the Poet ſpeaketh very truely) had gotten Iohn Wickcliffe great diſpleaſure and hatred, at many mens handes: and ſpecially of the Monkes and richeſt ſort of Prieſtes.

Wickliffe beginneth to touch the matter of the ſacramēt.

The latter writers of the Church to be miſdoubted.

The accidēces not to be in the ſacrament without the ſubſtance.

Albeit through the fauor and ſupportation of the duke of Lancaſter, and Lord Henry Percy, he perſiſted hitherto in ſome meane quiet againſt their woluiſh violence & cruelty: Till at laſt about the yeare of our Lord. 1376. the Byſhops ſtill vrging and inciting their Archbiſhop Symon Sudberye, who before had depriued him, and afterward prohibited him alſo not to ſtirre any more in thoſe ſorts of matters: had obteined by proceſſe and order of citation to haue him brought before them. Whereunto both place and time for him to appeare after theyr vſuall forme was to him aſſigned.

The Duke hauing intelligence that Wickliffe his client ſhould come before the Biſhops, fearing that he being but one, was to weake agaynſt ſuch a multitude: calleth to him out of the orders of Friers, foure Bachelers of Diuinity, out of euery order one, to ioyne them with Wickliffe alſo for more ſurety. When the day was come aſſigned to the ſaid Wickliffe to appeare, whiche day was Thurſday, the 19. of February: Iohn Wickliffe accompanied with the foure Friers aforeſayd, and with them alſo, the Duke of Lancaſter, and Lord Henry Percy, Lord Marſhal of England, the ſaid Lord Percy alſo going before them to make rowme and way wherewith Wickliffe ſhould come.

Ex hiſt. Monachi. D. Albani ex accommodato D. Math. Archiepiſ. Cant.

Thus Wickliffe (through the prouidence of god) being ſufficiently garded, was comming to the place where the Biſhops ſate: whome by the way they animated and exhorted not to feare nor ſhrink a whit at the company of the biſhops there preſent, who were all vnlearned (ſaid they) in reſpect of him. For ſo procede yͤ wordes of my foreſaid author, whom I follow in this narration: neither that he ſhold dread the concourſe of the people, whom they would themſelues aſſiſte and defend, in ſuch ſort as he ſhould take no harme. With theſe wordes, and with the aſſiſtaunce of the nobles: Wickliffe in hart encouraged, approcheth to yͤ church of S. Paule in London. Where a mayne preaſe of people was gathered to heare, what ſhold be ſayd & done. Such was there the frequencie and throng of the multitude, that the Lordes (for all yͤ puiſſance of the high Marſhall) vnneth with great difficulty could get way through. In ſo much, that the biſhop of London (whoſe name was William Courtney) ſeeing the ſtir that the Lord Marſhal kept in the Church, among the people, ſpeaking to yͤ Lord Percy, ſayd: that if he had knowne before what maiſtries he would haue kept in the church, he would haue ſtopped hym out, from comming there.

Striuing for the Lordes to paſſe by the people.

W. Courtney Biſhop of London.

The wordes of the B. of London to the L. Percy

At which wordes of the Byſhop, the Duke diſdayning not a little, aunſwered to the Byſhop agayne, and ſayd: that he woulde keepe ſuch maiſterie there, though he ſayd nay.

I. Wickliffe bid to ſitte downe before the Byſhops.

Wickliffe denied by the Byſhop of London to ſit downe

Strife betweene the L. Marſhall and Byſhop of London.

The people ſet in a ſtirre

At laſt, after much wraſtling they pierced through and came to our Ladies chappell. Where the Dukes and Barons were ſitting together with the Archbiſhops & other Biſhops. Before whome the foreſayd Iohn Wickliffe according to the maner, ſtode before thē, to know what ſhold be laid vnto him. To whome firſt ſpake the Lord Percy, bidding him to ſit downe, ſaying: that he had many things to anſwer to, and therfore had need of ſome ſofter ſeat. But the biſhop of London caſt eftſoones into a fumiſh chafe wͭ thoſe words, ſayd: he ſhould not ſit there. Neither was it ſayd he: according to law or reaſon, that he which was cited there to appeare to anſwere before his ordinary, ſhould ſit downe during the time of his aunſwere, but ſhold ſtād. Upon theſe words a fire began to heat & kindle betweene them. In ſo much that they began to rate and to reuile one the other, that the whole multitude therewith diſquieted, began to be ſet on a hurrey.

Strife betweene the Duke of Lācaſter & B. of London.

The B. ouergoeth the Duke in ſcoulding.

This B. of London was W. Courtney, ſonne to the Earle of Deuonſhire.

Then the Duke taking the Lord Percies part wyth haſty wordes began alſo to take vp the biſhop. To whom the Biſhops again nothing inferiour in reprochful checks and rebukes, did render & requite not onely to him as good as he brought: but alſo did ſo far excell him, in this rayling arte of ſcolding, that to vſe the words of mine author, Erubuit Dux quòd non potuit præualere litigio. i. that the Duke bluſhed and was aſhamed, becauſe he could not ouerpaſſe the Biſhop in brawling and rayling, and therefore fell to playn threatning, manaſing yͤ biſhop, that he would bring down the pride not onely of him, but alſo of all the prelacie of Englande: And ſpeaking moreouer vnto him: Thou (ſayd he) beareſt thy ſelf ſo brag vpon thy parentes, which ſhall not be able to helpe thee: They ſhall haue enough to do to helpe themſelues. For his parentes were the Earle and counteſſe of Deuonſhire. To whom the byſhop again aunſwered, that to be bold to tell truth, his confidence was not in his parentes, nor in any man els, but onely in God in whō he truſted. Then yͤ Duke ſoftly whiſpering in the eare of him next by him, ſayd that he woulde rather plucke out the Biſhop by the heyre of his head out of the Church, then he would take this at his hand. This was not ſpoke ſo ſecretly, but that the Londiners ouerheard him. Whereupon being ſet in a rage, they cryed out, ſaying: that they would not ſuffer theyr biſhop ſo cōtemptuouſly to be abuſed. But rather they woulde looſe their liues, then that he ſhould ſo be drawen out by the heyre. Thus that counſell being broken with ſcolding and brawling for that day, was diſſolued before 9. of the cloke. And the Duke with the Lord Percy went to the Parliament. Where the ſame day, before dinner a bill was put vp in the name of the king by the Lord Thomas Woſtock, and Lord Henry Percy, that the Cittie of London ſhoulde no more be gouerned by a Mayor, but by a Captayne, as in times before. And that the Marſhall of England ſhold haue al the adoe in taking the Areſtes within the ſaid Citty, as in other citties beſide, with other petitions moe, tending to the like derogation of the liberties of London. Which bill being read, ſtandeth vp Iohn Philpot Burgeſſe then for the citty, ſaying to thē which read the bill, that that was neuer ſeene ſo before: & adding moreouer that the Mayor woulde neuer ſuffer any ſuch things, or other areſt to be brought into the citty, with mo ſuch wordes of like ſtoutnes.

The Duke threateneth to draw out their B. by the heare out of the Church.

Londiners take part with their Byſhop.

Petitions put vp in the Parliament againſt the Citie of Lōdon.

Haſty counſaile of the Lōdiners.

The next day following, the Londiners aſſembled thēſelues in a councell, to conſider among them vpon the Bill for chaunging the Mayor, and about the office of the Marſhall, alſo concerning the iniuries done the day before to theyr Biſhop.

In which meane time they being buſy in long conſultation of this matter, ſodenly and vnawares entred in the place two certaine Lordes, whether to come to ſpy, or for what other cauſe the author leaueth it vncertayne, the one called Lord Fitzwalter: the other Lord Guy Brian. At the firſt comming in of thē, the vulgare ſort was ready forthwith to flee vppon them, as ſpies, had not they made theyr proteſtation with an othe, declaring that their comming in was for no harme toward them. And ſo were compelled by the citizens to ſweare to the city their truth and fidelity, contrary to the which othe if they ſhoulde rebell, contented to forfeit whatſoeuer goods and poſſeſſions they had within the citie.

The Oration of Lord Fitzwalter to the Londiners.

This done, thē began the Lord Fitzwalter in this wiſe to perſwade and exhort the Citizens: firſt declaring how he was bound and obliged to them and to theyr Citty, not for the othe onely now newly receiued, but of old and ancient good will from his great graundfathers tyme. Beſide other diuers ducties, for the which he was chiefly bound to be one of their principall fautors: for ſo muche as what ſo euer tended to their damage and detriment, redounded alſo no leſſe vnto his owne, for which cauſe he coulde not otherwiſe chuſe, but that as he did vnderſtand to be attempted againſt the publike profite and liberties of the Citye, he muſt needs communicate the ſame to them. Who vnleſſe they with ſpeedy circumſpection do occurre and preuent perils that may and are like to enſue, it would turne in the end to theyr no ſmall incōmoditie. And as there were many other thinges, whiche required their vigilant care and diligēce, ſo one thing there was, which he could in no wiſe but admoniſh them of: which was this, neceſſary to be cōſidered of them all, how the Lord Marſhall Henry Percy in his place within himſelfe had one in ward and cuſtody, whether with the knowledge, or without the knowledge of them, he coulde not tell: this he coulde tell, that the ſayd Lord Marſhall was not alowed any ſuche ward or priſon in his houſe, within the liberties of the Citty. Which thing if it be not ſeene to in time, the example therof being ſuffered, would in fine breede to ſuch a preiudice vnto their cuſtomes and liberties, as they ſhoulde not hereafter, when they would reforme the iniurie thereof.

The Citizens of Lōdon breake vp the L. Peters houſe at Sauoy.

Gods prouiſion in ſauing his ſeruantes.

The houſe of the Duke of Lācaſter ſearched of the Londiners.

The Duke and L. Percy flye to the Prince.

Theſe words of the Lord Fitzwalter were not ſo ſoone ſpoken, but they were as ſoone taken of the raſh Citizens, who in al haſty fury running to their armour & weapons, went incontinently to the houſe of the Lord Percy, where breaking vp the gates, by violence they tooke out the priſoner, & burned the ſtockes wherein he ſate, in the midſt of London. Then was the Lord Percy ſought for (whome ſayth the ſtory) they woulde doubtleſſe haue ſlayne if they might haue fōd him. With their bils and iauelins, al corners and priuy chambers were ſearched, beds & hangings torne a ſunder. But the Lord Percy (as God would) was then with the Duke, whome one Iohn Yper the ſame day with great inſtance had deſired to dinner. The Londiners not finding him at home, and ſuppoſing that he was wyth the Duke at Sauoy, in all haſty heat turned their power thither, running as faſt as they could to the Dukes houſe. Where alſo in like maner they were diſapoynted of their cruell purpoſe. In yͤ meane while as this was doyng, cōmeth one of the Dukes men rūning poſt haſt, to yͤ Duke & to the Lord Percy, declaring what was done. The Duke being then at his oyſters, without anye further tarying, and alſo breaking both his ſhinnes at the forme for haſte, tooke boate with the Lord Percy, and by water went to Kingſtone, where then yͤ princeſſe with Richard the yong Prince did lye. Who there declared vnto the Princeſſe all yͤ whole matter, cōcerning the outrage of the Londiners as it was. To whom ſhe promiſed againe, ſuch an order to be taken in the matter, as ſhoulde be to his contentation. At what time the commons of London, thus as is ſayd, were about the Dukes houſe at Sauoy, meeteth with thē a certain prieſt, who marueling at the ſodain rage & concourſe, aſked what they ſought. To whome aunſwere was geuen agayne of ſome, that they ſought for the Duke and Lorde Marſhall, to haue of them the Lord Peter de la Mare, whom they wrongfully had deteined in priſon. To this the Prieſt aunſwered agayne more boldly then opportunely. That

A prieſt in the Duke of Lancaſters houſe cruelly killed.

Peter (ſayd he) is a falſe traytour to the king, and worthy long ſince to be hanged. At the hearing of theſe wordes, the furious people with a terrible ſhoute cryed out vpon him, that he was a traytour and one that tooke the Dukes part and ſo falling vpon him with theyr weapons ſtriued who might firſt ſtrike at him. Who after they had wounded him very ſore, ſo being wounded they had him into priſon, where within few dayes vpon the ſorenes of his woundes he dyed.

Neither would the rage of the people thus haue ceaſed had not the biſhop of London leauing his dinner come to them at Sauoy, and putting them in remembraunce of the bleſſed tyme (as they terme it) of Lent, had perſwaded them to ceaſe and to be quyet.

The villany of the Londiners againſt the Duke.

The Londiners ſeeing that they could get no vantage againſt the Duke: who was without theyr reach: To wreke theyr anger they tooke hys armes, whiche in moſt deſpitefull wiſe, they hanged vp in the open places of ẏ city in ſigne of reproch, as for a traitour. In ſo much that when one of his gentlemen came through the Citty with a plate conteyning the Dukes armes, hanging by a lace about his necke the citizens not abiding the ſight therof, caſt him frõ his horſe, and pluckt his ſcutchine from him, had were about to work the extremitie againſt him, and not the mayor reſcued him out of theyr handes, and ſent him home ſafe vnto the Duke his mayſter. In ſuch hatred was then the Duke among the vulgar people of London.

The meſſage of the princeſſe to the Londiners.

After thys, the princeſſe vnderſtanding the hartes and broyle of the Londiners ſet againſt the foreſaid Duke, ſent vnto London 3. Knightes, ſyr Albred Lewer, ſir Symon Burle, and ſir Lewes Clifford, to entreat the citizens to be reconciled with the Duke. The Londiners anſwered: that they for the honour of ẏ princeſſe, would obey and do with all reuerẽce, what ſhe would require. But this they required & enioyned the meſſẽgers to ſay to the Duke, by word of mouth, that he ſhould ſuffer the byſhop of Wincheſter afore mentioned and alſo the Lord Peter de la Mare, to come to their aunſwere, & to be iudged by theyr pieres. Wherby eyther they might be quite if they were giltles: or otherwiſe, if they be found culpable, they might receaue according to theyr deſertes after the lawes of the realme. What griefe and diſpleaſure the Duke conceiued and reteyned in his minde hereof: Agayne what meanes & ſute the Londiners for their part made to the old king for their liberties: What rymes and ſonges in London, were made agaynſt the Duke: Howe the Biſhops at the Dukes requeſt were moued to excõmunicate thoſe malicious ſlaunderers: And moreouer, howe the Duke at laſt was reuenged of thoſe contumelies & iniuries: How he cauſed them to be brought before the king: How ſharply they were rebuked for their miſdemeanour, by the worthy oration of the Lord Chamberlayne, Robert Aſton in the preſence of the king, Archbiſhops, Byſhops, with diuers other ſtates, the Kinges children, and other nobilities of the realme: In concluſion how the Londiners were compelled to this at length, by the common aſſent, and publike charges of ẏ citty, to make a great taper of waxe, whiche with ẏ Dukes armes ſet vpon it, ſhoulde be brought with ſolemne proceſſion to the church of S. Paule, there to burne continually before the Image of our Lady: And at laſt, how both the ſayd Duke and the Londiners were reconciled together, in the beginning of the new king, with the kiſſe of peace, in the ſame reconcilement publikely denounced in the church of Weſtminſter, and what ioy was in the whole citty therof: Theſe becauſe they are impertinent, and make to long a digreſſiõ from the matter of Wickliffe, I cut off with breuitie, referring the reader to other hiſtoryes, namely of S. Albones, where they are to be found at large.

The Duke reuenged of the Londiners.

The Londiners cauſed to beare a Taper of waxe in proceſsion, in honour of the Duke.

A ſtory of the Byſhop of Norwich.

Example of pride in the popes clergie.

As theſe aforeſayd for breuitie ſake I paſſe ouer, ſo will I not be long and yet cannot omitte that, which happened the ſame tyme and yeare, to the Biſhop of Norwich, to ẏ intent that this poſteritie now may ſee, to what pryde the clergy then of the Popes Church was growne to. The ſame tyme as this broyle was at Lõdon, the Biſh. of Norwich a litle after the time af Eaſter comming to the towne of Lennam, belonging to his Lordſhip: being not contented wͭ the olde accuſtomed honour due vnto him, & vſed of his predeceſſours before in the ſame town, required moreouer with a nue and vnuſed kind of magnificence to be exalted: In ſo much, that when he ſaw the chiefe Magiſtrate or Mayor of that towne to go in the ſtreetes with his officer going before him, holding a certayne wand in his hand tipped at both endes with black horne, as the maner was: He reputing himſelfe to be Lord of that towne (as he was) and thinking to be higher then the higheſt, commaunded ẏ honour of that ſtaffe due to the Mayor, to be yelded & born before his Lordly perſonage: The Mayor or Bailiffe, with other the towneſmen, courtuouſly anſwered to him again that they were right willing and contented with all theyr hartes to exhibite that reuerence vnto him, and woulde ſo do, if he firſt of the king and counſaile coulde obtayne ẏ cuſtome, and if the ſame might be induced after any peaceable way with the good willes of the commons and body of ẏ town: Other els, ſayd they, as the matter was dangerous ſo they durſt not take in hand any ſuch newe alteration of ancient cuſtomes and liberties leaſt the people (whiche is alwayes inclinable and prone to euill) do fall vpon them wͭ ſtones, & driue them out of the towne. Wherefore kneeling on theyr knees before hym, and humbly they beſought him that he would require no ſuch thing of them: that he would ſaue his owne honour and their liues, who otherwiſe if he intended that way, were in great daunger. But the biſhop youthfull and hauty, taking occaſion by their humblenes, to ſwell the more in himſelfe, anſwered that he woulde not be taught by their counſaile, but that he wold haue it done, though all the commons (whome he named Ribals) ſayd nay. Alſo rebuked the Mayor and his brethrẽ for mecockes and daſtardes, for ſo fearing the vulgar ſort of people.

The courteſie of the towneſmen toward the Byſhop.

The ſtout anſwere of the Byſhop to the townſhip.

The citizens perceauing the wilfull ſtoutnes of the biſhop, meekly anſwering againe, ſayde, they minded not to reſiſt him, but to let him doe therin what he thought good, onely deſired him that he would licẽce them to depart, and hold them excuſed for not wayting vppon him, & conducting hym out of the town with that reuerence which he required. For if they ſhould be ſeene in his company, all the ſuſpicion thereof would be vpon them, and ſo ſhould they be all in daunger, ſo much as theyr liues were worth. The Byſhop not regarding their aduiſe and counſaile, commaunded one of hys men to take the rod borne before the Mayor, & to cary ẏ ſame before him. Which being done, & perceaued of the commons: the Byſhop after that maner went not farre, but the rude people rũning to ſhut ẏ gates came out with their bowes, ſome with clubbes and ſtaues ſoome with other inſtrumentes, ſome wͭ ſtones, & let driue at the Biſhop and his men, as faſt as they might: in ſuche ſort, that both the biſhop & his horſe vnder him with moſt part of his men were hurt & wounded. And thus the glorious pride of this iolly prelate, ruffling in hys new ſcepter, was receaued and welcomed there. That is, was ſo pelted wͭ battes and ſtones, ſo woũded with arrowes and other inſtrumentes fit, for ſuch a ſkirmiſhe, ẏ the moſt part of his men, with hys mace bearer, & all running away frõ him, the poore wounded biſhop was there left alone, not able to keepe hys old power, which went about to vſurpe a new power more thẽ to hym belonged. Thus at is cõmõly true in al, ſo is it wel exemplified here, which is cõmõly ſayd, and as it is commonly ſeene, that pride will haue a fall, and power vſurped will neuer ſtand. In like maner if the Citizens of Rome, following the example of theſe Lennam men, as they haue the like cauſe, and greater to doe by the vſurped power of theyr Byſhop, would after the ſame ſauce handle the pope, and vnſcepter him of hys mace and regalitie which nothing pertaineth to him: They in ſo doing both ſhould recouer theyr owne liberties, with more honour at home, and alſo win muche more commendation abroad Ex chron. mon. D. Albani.

The towne of Lennam riſeth againſt the Biſhop.

Pride will haue a fall. Power vſurped will neuer ſtand.

The vſurped power of the pope would haue a bridle.

This tragedy with all the partes thereof, beyng thus ended at Lennam, whiche was little after Eaſter (as is ſaid) about the month of April. an. 1377. the ſame yeare vpon the 12. day of the moneth of Iune next after, dyed the worthy and victorious Prince king Edward the 3, after he had raygned yeares 51. A prince no more aged in yeares thẽ renowmed, for many ſinguler & heroicall vertues, but principally noted and lauded for his ſinguler meekenes & clemency toward his ſubiects and inferiors, ruling them by gentlenes and mercy, without all rigour or auſtere ſeueritie. Among other noble and royall ornamentes of his nature, worthely & copiouſly ſet forth of many, thus he is deſcribed of ſome, which may briefly ſuffice for the comprehẽſion of all the reſt. Orphanis erat quaſi pater, afflictis compatiens, miſeris condolens, oppreſſos releuans, & cunctis indigentibus impendens auxilia opportuna. That is. To the Orphans he was as a father, compacient to the afflicted, mourning with the miſerable, releuing the oppreſſed, and to all them that wanted an helper in time of neede. &c. But chiefly aboue all other thinges, in this Prince to be commemorate in my mynde, is thys: that he aboue all other Kinges of this Realme vnto the time of king Henry the eight was the greateſt bridler of the popes vſurped power and outragious oppreſsions during all the time of whiche king, neyther the Pope could greatly preuayle in thys Realme, and alſo Iohn Wickliffe was maintained with fauour and ayde ſufficient.

The death of K. Edw.

The commẽdation of K. Edward.

But before we cloſe vpp the ſtory of this king: there commeth to hand that which I thought not good to omit a noble purpoſe of the king in requiring a viewe to be taken in all his dominions of all benefices and dignities eccleſiaſticall remayning in the handes of Italians and Alions with the true valuation of the ſame directed down by commiſſion in the time of king Richard the ſecond whereof the like alſo is to be found: the tenour of which commiſſion of king Edward I thought here vnder to ſet down for worthy memory.

The king directed writtes vnto all the Byſhop's of England in this forme.

Anno. 48. Edward. tertij.

EDward by the grace of God king &c. To the reuerend father in Chriſt. N. By the ſame grace Biſhop of L. greeting. Beyng willing vpon certayn cauſes to be certified what and how many benefices aſwell Archdeaconries & other dignities as vicaradges perſonages Prebendes and Chappels within your dioces be at this preſent in thandes of Italions and other ſtrangers, what they be of what valour, and how euery of the ſayd benefices be called by name. And how much euery of the ſame is worth by the yere, not as by way of Taxe or extent, but according to the true valor of the ſame: likewiſe of the names of al & ſinguler ſuch ſtrangers being now incombentes or occupying the ſame and euery of thē: moreouer the names of all them, whether Engliſhmen or Straungers, of what ſtate or condition ſoeuer they be whiche haue the occupacion or diſpoſicion of any ſuch benefices with the fruites and profites of the ſame in the behalfe or by the authoritie of any the foreſayd Straungers by way of ferme, or title or procuration or by any other wayes or meanes whatſoeuer, and how long they haue occupyed or diſpoſed the ſame: and withall if anye the ſayd ſtraungers bee nowe reſidents vppon any benefices: commaunde you as wee heretofore commaunded you that you ſende vs a true certificat of all and ſinguler the premiſſes into our high Court of chauncerie vnder your ſeale diſtinctly and openly on this ſide the feaſt of thaſcention of our Lord next comming without farther delay: returning vnto vs this our writte withall. Witneſſe our ſelfe at Weſtminſter 16. day of April in the 48. yeare of our Reigne of England, and ouer Fraunce the 35. yeare.

BY vertue hereof certificat was ſent vp to the king into his chauncerie out of euery dioces of England of al ſuch ſpiritual liuings as were then in the occupation eyther of Priors Aliens or of other ſtraungers whereof the number was ſo great, as being all ſet downe would fill almoſt halfe a quyer of paper. Whereby may appeare that it was highe time for the king to ſeeke remedie herein, either by treatie with the Pope or otherwiſe: conſidering ſo great a porcion of the reuenewes of his realme was by this meanes conueyed awaye and employed either to the reliefe of his enemies, or mayntenaunce of the forreners: Amongſt whiche number, the Cardinals of the courte of Rome lacked not their ſhare. As may appeare by this which followeth.

King Richard the ſecond.

K. Richard. 2.

After king Edward the third ſucceeded hys ſonnes ſonne Richard the ſecond beyng yet but yong, of the age of eleuen yeares: who in the ſame yeare of his fathers deceaſe wͭ great pompe and ſolemnitie was crowned at weſtminſter, an 1377. who following his fathers ſteppes, was no great diſfauorer of the way & doctrine of wickliffe: albeit at the firſt beginning, partly through the iniquitie of tyme partly through the popes letters, he could not doe that he would. Nothwithſtādiug ſomething he did in that behalf, more perhaps then in the end he had thanke for of the Papiſtes, as more (by the grace of Chriſt) ſhall appeare. But as times do chaunge, ſo changeth commonly the cauſe and ſtate of man. The biſhop nowe ſeeing the aged king to be taken away, during yͤ time of whoſe olde age all yͤ gouernment of the realme depended vpon the Duke of Lancaſter. And now the ſayd Byſhops agayne ſeeing the ſaid Duke, with the Lord Percy, the Lord marſhall to geue ouer their offices, and to remayne in their priuate houſes without intermedling, thought now the time to ſerue them, to haue ſome vauntage againſt John wickliffe, who hetherto vnder the protectiō of the foreſayd Duke, and Lord Marſhall had ſome reſt and quiet. Concerning the ſtory of whiche wickliffe, I truſt (gentle reader) it is not out of thy memory what went before pag. 427. how he being brought before the Byſhops, by the meanes of the Duke and Lord Henry Percy, the councell was interrupted, and brake before ix. of the clocke. By reaſon whereof, wickliffe at that tyme eſcaped without anye further trouble. who notwithſtanding being by the biſhops forbid to deale in that doctrine any more, continued yet with his fellowes going barefoot, and in long friſe gownes preaching dilligentlye vnto the people. Out of whoſe ſermons theſe articles moſt chiefelye at that time were collected.

The biſhops take vātage of tyme.

The firſt article collected out of Wickliffes ſermons.

That the holy Euchariſt after the conſecration, is not the very body of Chriſt, but figurally.

That the churche of Rome, is not the head of all churches more then any other churche is: Nor that Peter hath anye more power geuen of Chriſt, then anye other Apoſtle hath.

Item, that the Pope of Rome hath no more in the keyes of the Church, then hath any other within the order of Prieſthoode.

Item, if God be: the Lordes temporall may lawfullye and meretoriouſly take away theyr temporalties from the churchmen offending, habitualiter.

Item, if any temporall Lord doe know the Churche ſo offending, he is bound vnder payne of damnation, to take the temporalties from the ſame.

Item, that the Goſpell is a rule ſufficient of it ſelfe to rule the life of euery chriſtian man here, without any other rule.

Item, yͭ all other rules vnder whoſe obſeruances, diuers religious perſōs be gouerned, do ad no more perfection to the goſpell, then doth the white colour to the wall.

Item, that neyther the Pope nor any other Prelate of the church, ought to haue priſons wherin to puniſh tranſgreſſours.

The articles of John Wickliffe ſent to the pope.

Beſide theſe articles, diuers other concluſions afterward were gathered out of hys writings and preachings by the byſhops of England, which they ſent diligently to Pope Gregory at Rome: where the ſayde articles being red and peruſed, were condemned for hereticall and erroneous by 23. Cardinals.

Pope Gregory the xj.

Wickliffe called before the Archbiſhop of Cant.

In the meane time the Archb. of Cant. ſending forth hys citations, as is aforeſayd: called before hym the ſayde John wickliffe in the preſence of the Duke of Lancaſter, and Lord Percy, who vpon the declaration of the Popes letters made, bound him to ſilence, forbidding him not to entreat any more of thoſe matters. But then through the diſturbaunce of the Biſhop of London and the Duke, and lord Percy that matter was ſoone diſpatched, as hath bene aboue recorded, pag. 427. And all thys was done, in the daies & laſt yere of king Edward the 3. and pope Gregory the eleuenth.

Anno. 1378.

The next yeare folowing, which was the yeare of our Lord 1378. being the firſt yere of king Richard the ſecond. The ſayd Pope Gregory taking hys time, after the death of king Edward, ſendeth his bull by the hands & meanes (peraduenture) of one maſter Edmund Stafford, directed vnto the vniuerſity of Oxford, rebuking thē ſharply, imperiouſly and like a Pope, for ſuffring ſo long the doctrine of John wickliffe to take roote, and not pluckyng it vppe wyth the crooked cicle of their Catholike doctrine. whych Edmunde Stafforde bringer of the Popes Bull.

The maſters of Oxford doubt whether to receiue or reiect the Popes Bull.

Bull when it came to be exhibite vnto their handes, by the Popes meſſenger aforeſayd: the proctors and mayſters of the Vniuerſitie ioyning together in conſultation, ſtood lōg in doubt deliberating with themſelues, whether to receiue the Popes Bull with honour, or to refuſe and reiect it wyth ſhame.

I cannot here but laugh in my minde to behold the authours of this ſtory whom I follow: what exclamations, what wondrings and maruels, they make at theſe Oxford men, for ſo doubting at a matter ſo playne, ſo manifeſt of it ſelfe, (as they ſay) whether the popes Bull ſent to them frō Rome was to be receaued or cōtrary. Which thing to our monkiſh writers ſeemed then ſuche a prodigious wonder, that they with bluſhing cheekes are feyne to cut of the matter in the middeſt with ſilence.

The copy of this wilde Bull, ſent to them from the Pope, was this.

❧ Gregory the Biſhop, the ſeruant of Gods ſeruaunts, to his welbeloued ſonnes, the Chauncellour and Vniuerſitie of Oxford, in the dioceſſe of Lincolne greeting, and Apoſtolical benediction.

The Popes mad Bull ſent to Oxford.

WE are compelled not onely to meruell, but alſo to lament that you conſidering the Apoſtolicall ſeate hath geuen vnto your vniuerſitie of Oxford ſo great fauour and priueledge and alſo for that you flow as in a large ſea in the knowledge of the holy Scriptures, and ought to be champions and defenders of the ancient and Catholicke fayth, (without the which there is no ſaluation) by your great negligence and ſlouthe, will ſuffer wylde cockle, not onely to grow vp among the pure wheate of the floriſhing field of your Vniuerſitie, but alſo to waxe more ſtrong and choke the corne. Neither haue ye anye care (as we are enformed) to extirpe and plucke the ſame vp by the rootes, to the great bleblemiſhing of your renowmed name, the perill of your ſoules, the contempt of the Church of Rome, and to the great decay of the auncient fayth. And further (which greueth vs) the encreaſe of that filthy weed was more ſharpely rebuked & iudged of in Rome then in England where it ſprang. Wherefore let there be meanes ſought by the help of the faithful, to roote out the ſame. Greuouſly it is come to our eares, that one Iohn Wickliffe, parſon of Lutterworth in Lincolne dioces, a profeſſour of diuinitie (would god he were not rather a maiſter of errours) is runne into a kinde of deteſtable wickednes, not onely and openly publiſhing, but alſo vomiting out of the filthy dungeon of his breſt, diuers profeſsions falſe and erroneous concluſions, and moſt wicked and damnable hereſies. Whereby he might defile the faythfull ſorte, and bring them from the the right path headlong into the way of perdition ouerthrow the ſtate of the Churche, and vtterly ſubuert the ſecular policy. Of which his miſchieuous hereſies, ſome ſeem to agree (onely certayne names and termes chaunged) with the peruerſe opinions, and vnlearned doctrine of Marcelius of Padua, & Iohn of Gandune, of vnworthy memory: whoſe bookes were vtterly aboliſhed in the realme of England, by our predeceſſour of happy memory Iohn 22. Which kingdome doth not onely floriſhe in power, and aboundance of faculties, but is much more glorious and ſhyning in purenes of fayth: Accuſtomed alwayes to bring forth men excellentlye learned in the true knowledge of the holye ſcriptures, ripe in grauitie of manners, men notable in deuotion, and defenders of the Catholicke fayth. Wherefore wee will and commaunde you by our writing Apoſtolicall, in the name of your obedience, and vpon payne of priuation of our fauour, indulgences and priueledges graunted vnto you and your vniuerſitie, from the ſayd ſee Apoſtolicall: that hereafter ye ſuffer not thoſe peſtilent hereſies, that thoſe ſubtile and falſe concluſions and propoſitions, miſconſtruing the right ſenſe of fayth and good workes (how ſoeuer they terme it, or what curious implication of wordes ſoeuer they vſe) any longer to be diſputed of, or brought in queſtion: Leaſt if it be not withſtoood at the firſt, and plucked vp by the rootes, it might perhaps be to late hereafter to prepare medicins when a greater number is infected with the contagion. And further, that ye apprehend immediately or cauſe to be apprehended the ſayd Iohn Wickliffe, and deliuer him to be deteyned in the ſafe cuſtodie of our well beloued brethren, the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, and the byſhop of London or eyther of them. And if you ſhall finde any gaynesayers, corrupted wyth the ſayde doctrine (whiche God forbid) in your ſayd vniuerſitie wythin your iuriſdiction, that ſhall obſtinately ſtand in the ſayd errours; that then in lyke manner ye apprehend them, and committe them to ſafe cuſtodie, and otherwiſe to doe in this caſe as it ſhall appertayne vnto you: So as by your carefull proceedynges herein, your negligence paſt concernyng the premiſſes, may now fully be ſupplyed and recompenſed with preſent diligence. Whereby you ſhall not onely purchaſe vnto you the fauour and beneuolence of the ſeate Apoſtolicall, but alſo great reward and merite of almightie God.

¶ Beſide this Bull ſent to the Vniuerſitie of Oxford, the ſayd Pope Gregory directed moreouer his letters the ſame tyme to the Archbyſhoppe of Canterbury Symon Sudbury: to the Byſhoppe of London named william Courtney, with the concluſions of Iohn wickliffe therein incloſed, commaūdyng them, by vertue of thoſe his letters Apoſtolicall, and ſtraitly enioyning them to cauſe the ſayd Iohn wickliffe to be apprehended, and caſt in priſon: And that the king and the nobles of England ſhould be admoniſhed by them, not to geue any credite to the ſaide Iohn wickliffe, or to his doctrine in any wiſe. &c.

Iuni. and the 7. yeare of the raigne of the Pope: I finde moreouer in the ſayd ſtory, two other letters of the Pope concernyng the ſame matter, but differyng in forme, ſent vnto the ſame Byſhops, and all bearyng the ſame date both of the day, yeare, and moneth of the raigne of the ſayd Pope Gregory. Whereby it is be ſuppoſed, that the Pope either was very exquiſite and ſolicitous about the matter, to haue wickliffe to be apprehēded which wrote three diuers letters to one perſon, and all in one day, about one buſineſſe: or els that he did ſuſpect the bearers thereof, the ſcruple whereof I leaue to the iudgement of the Reader.

Three ſundry letters of the pope to one perſon, about one matter.

Furthermore beſide theſe letters writtē to the Vniuerſitie, and to the Byſhops, he directeth alſo an other Epiſtle bearyng the ſame date vnto kyng Edward (as one of my ſtories ſayth) but as an other ſayth, to the kyng Richard, whiche ſoundeth more neare to the truth, forasmuch as in the 7. yeare of Pope Gregory the xi. which was the yeare of our Lord. 1378. Kyng Edward was not aliue. The copy of his letters to the kyng here followeth.

The Popes letter to King Richard agaynſt I. Wickliffe.

The kyngdome of England which the moſt higheſt hath put vnder your power and gouernaunce, beyng ſo famous and renowmed in valiancy and ſtrength, ſo aboundaunt and flowyng in all kynde of wealth and riches: but much more glorious reſplendent and ſhynyng through the brightneſſe and cleareneſſe of all godlyneſſe and fayth: hath accuſtomed alwayes to bryng forth men endued with the true knowledge and vnderſtandyng of the holy Scriptures, graue in yeares, feruent in deuotion, and defenders of the Catholicke fayth: The which haue onely directed and inſtructed their own people through their holeſome doctrine and preceptes into the true path of Gods commaundementes, but alſo as we haue heard by the report and information of many credible perſons (to our great grief & hart ſorow) that Iohn Wickliffe Parſon of Lutterworth, in the Dioces of Lincolne, profeſſor of diuinitie (I would to God he were no author of hereſie) to be fallen into ſuch a deteſtable and abhominable madnes: that he hath propounded and ſet forth diuers and ſundry concluſions full of errours and cōteinyng moſt manifeſt hereſie, the which do tende vtterly to ſubuert and ouerthrow the ſtate of the whole Churche. Of the whiche, ſome of them (albeit vnder coloured phraſe and ſpeache) ſeeme to ſmell and ſauour of peruerſe opinions, and the fooliſhe doctrine of condemned memory of Marſilius of Padua, and Iohn of Ganduno, whoſe bookes were by Pope Iohn the 22. our predeceſſour, a man of moſt happy memorye reproued and condemned. &c.

¶ Hitherto gentle reader, thou haſt heard how wickliffe was accuſed by the Byſhop. Now you ſhall alſo heare the Popes mighty reaſons and argumentes, by the which he did confute him to the kyng. It followeth.

Therefore, for ſo much as our Reuerend brethren the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Byſhop of London haue receiued a ſpeciall commaundement from vs by our authoritie, to apprehend and committe the forenamed Iohn Wickliffe vnto priſon, and to tranſporte his confeſsion vnto vs: If they ſhall ſeeme in the proſecution of this their buſineſſe to lacke your fauour or helpe, we require and moſt earneſtly deſire your maieſtie euen as your moſt noble predeceſſors haue alwayes bene moſt earneſt louers of the Catholicke fayth (whoſe caſe or quarell in this matter, is chiefly

The Articles included in the popes letters whiche he ſent to the Biſhoppes, and to the king againſt Wickliffe, were theſe as in order do follow.

✻ The concluſions of Iohn Wickliffe exhibited in the conuocation of certayne Biſhops at Lambeth.

All the whole race of mankinde here on earth beſides Chriſt, hath no power ſimply , to ordayne that Peter and all his offſpring ſhould politickely rule ouer the world for euer.

2. God cannot geue to any man for him and hys heyres anye ciuill dominion for euer.

3. All writinges inuented by men,as touching perpetuall heritage,are impoſsible.

4. Euery man being in grace iuſtifiyng , hath not onely right vnto the thing, but alſo for his time hath right in deede aboue all the good thinges of God.

Certayne concluſions of Iohn Wickliffe.

5. A man cannot onely miniſtratoriouſly geue any temporal or continuall gift,eyther as well to his naturall ſonne,as to his ſonne by imitation.

6 If God be, the temporall Lordes may lawfully and meritoriouſly take away the riches from the Church,when they do offend habitualiter.

7. We know that Chriſtes Vicar cannot, neyther is able by hys Bulles,neyther by his owne will and conſent, neither by the conſent for his colledge , eyther make able or diſable any man.

8. A man cannot be excommunicated to his hurt or vndoyng, except he be firſt and principally excommnnicate by himſelfe.

9. No man ought,but in Gods cauſe alone,to excommunicate, ſuſpend,or forbid,or otherwiſe to proceede to reuenge by anye eccleſiaſticall cenſure.

10. A curſe or excommunication doth not ſimply binde,but in caſe it be pronounced and geuen out agaynſt the aduerſarye of God s law.

11. There is no power geuen by any example, eyther by Chriſt or by his Apoſtle,to excommunicate any ſubiect,ſpecially for the denying of any temporalties,but rather contrariwiſe.

12. The diſciples of Chriſt haue no power to exact by anye ciuill authoritie,temporalties by cenſures.

13. It is not poſsible by the abſolute power of God, that if the Pope or any other Chriſtian,doe pretend by any meanes to bynd or to loſe, that thereby he doth ſo bynde and looſe.

14. We ought to beleue that the Vicar of Chriſt, doth at ſuche tymes onely bynde and looſe , when as he worketh conformably by the law and ordinaunce of Chriſt.

15. This ought vniuerſally to be beleued that euery prieſt righly and duely ordered, according vnto the law of grace,hath power according to his vocation,whereby he may miniſter the ſacramentes,and conſequently abſolue any man confeſsing hys faulte, being contrite and penitent for the ſame.

16. It is lawfull for kinges (in cauſes licenced by the lawe) to take away the temporalties from the ſpiritualty, ſinning habitualiter,that is,which continue in the cuſtome of ſinne, and will not amend.

17. Whether they be temporall Lordes or any other men whatſoeuer they be, which haue endowed any Churche with temporalties:It is lawfull for them to take away the ſame temporalties, as it were by way of medicine, for to auoyd ſinne, notwithſtanding any excommunication or other eccleſiaſticall cenſure,for ſo much as they are not geuen but vnder a condition.

18. An eccleſiaſticall miniſter , and alſo the Byſhop of Rome may lawfully be rebuked of his ſubiectes , and for the profite of the Church,be accuſed eyther of the Clergy or of the Laitie.

These letters with the articles incloſed being thus receiued from the pope,the biſhops toke no litle hart, thinking and fully determining with themſelues and that in open profeſsion,before their prouinciall Councell, that all maner reſpectes of feare or fauour ſet apart,no perſon neither high nor low ſhould let them, neither woulde they be ſeduced by the intreaty of any mā,nor by any threatnings or rewards, but that in this cauſe they would execute moſt ſurely vpright iuſtice and equitie:yea albeit preſēt danger of life ſhould follow therupon. But theſe ſo fierce brags, & ſtout promiſe, with the ſubtile practiſes of theſe Byſhops, which thought them ſo ſure before:the Lord (againſt whō no determination of mans counſaile can preuayle) by a ſmall occaſion,did lightly confound & ouerthrowe. For the day of examination being come,a certayn perſonage of the princes court,& yet of no great noble byrth,named Lewes Clifford , entring in among the Byſhops : commaunded them that they ſhold not proceed with any diffinitiue ſentence againſt Iohn Wickliffe. with which wordes all they were ſo amaſed and their combes ſo cut,that(as in the ſtory is mentioned) they became ſo mute and ſpeachleſſe, as men hauing not one word in their month to anſwere. And thus by the wonderous worke of God his prouidence, eſcaped Iohn Wickliffe the ſecond time out of the Byſhops hands,and was by them clearely diſmiſſed vppon his declaration made of his articles as anone ſhall follow.

The ſtout brags of the Byſhops ouerthrowne

Wickliffe againe called before the Byſhops, Lewes Clifford,

Moreouer here is not to be paſſed ouer, how at the ſame tyme, and in the ſayd Chappell of the Archb. at Lambeth, where the byſhops were ſitting vpon Iohn Wickliffe, the ſtory writing of the doing therof, addeth theſe wordes, ſaying: Non dico ciues tantùm Londinenſes,ſed viles ipſius ciuitatis ſe impudenter ingerere præſumpſerunt in eandem capellam, & verba facere pro eodem,& iſtud negotium impedire,confiſi, vt reor,de ipſorum præmiſſa negligentia prælatorum.&c. That is, I ſay not onely, that the Citizens of London, but alſo the vile abiectes of the Citty, preſumed to be ſo bold in yͤ ſame Chappell at Lambeth, where the Byſhops were ſitting vppon Iohn Wickliffe: both to entreat for him, and alſo to let and ſtoppe the ſame matter truſting as I ſuppoſe, vpon the negligence which they ſawe before in the Byſhops.&c.

Iohn Wickliffe againe deliuered from the Byſhops.

Ouer and beſide, here is not to be forgotten, how yͤ ſayd Iohn Wickliffe, the ſame time of his examination, offered and exhibited vnto the Biſhops, in writing a proteſtation, with a declaration or expoſition of his owne minde, vpon the ſayd his articles, the effect whereof here followeth.

✻ The proteſtation of Iohn Wickliffe.

First I proteſt (as I haue often before done) that I doe minde and intend with my whole hart (by the grace of God) to be a true Chriſtian, and as long as breath ſhal remayne in me, to profeſſe and defend the law of Chriſt. And if it ſhall happen that through ignoraunce or otherwiſe, I ſhall fayle therein. I deſire my Lord God of pardon & forgeuenes. And now againe as before alſo, I do reuoke and make retractation, moſt hūbly ſubmitting my ſelfe, vnder the correction of our holy mother yͤ church. And for ſomuch as the ſentence of my fayth , whiche I haue holden in the ſcholes and els where, is reported euen by children, & moreouer, it is caried by children euen vnto Rome : Therefore leſt my deare beloued brethren ſhould take any offence by me, I wil ſet forth in writing the ſentēce and Articles, for the which I am nowe accuſed and impeached: the whiche alſo euen vnto the death I will defend . As I beleeue all Chriſtians ought to doe, and ſpecially the Byſh. of Rome and all other prieſtes and miniſters of the Church. For I do vnderſtand the concluſions after the ſenſe and maner of ſpeaking of the ſcriptures and holy doctours , the whiche I am ready to expound: And if they ſhall be found contrary vnto the faith, I am ready to reuoke and ſpeedily to call them backe agayne.

The proteſtation of Iohn Wickliffe.

✻ An expoſition vpon the concluſions of Iohn Wickliffe, exhibited by him to the Byſhop.

All the race of mankinde,here in earth beſide Chriſt , hath no power ſimply to ordayne,that Peter.&c.

This concluſion of it ſelfe is euident, for as much as it is not in mans power to ſtop the cōming of Chriſt to hys finall iudgement, but he muſt needes come, according to yͤ article of our Creede, to iudge both the quick and the dead. And then (as the ſcripture teacheth) ſhall ſurceaſe all ciuill and politicke rule here , I vnderſtand the temporall and ſecular dominion, pertaining to men here dwelling in this mortall life. For ſo doe the Philoſophers ſpeake of ciuill dominion. And although the thing which is terminable, & hath an end, is called ſometimes perpetuall: yet becauſe in holy ſcripture, and in vſe of the Church, and in the bookes of Philoſophers moſt commonly that is takē to be perpetuall, which hath no ende of tyme hereafter to come: according to the which ſenſe, the Church ſingeth Glória Patri.&c. nunc & perpetuum. I alſo after the ſame ſignification do take here this woorde (perpetually) and ſo is this concluſion conſonant to the principles of the Scripture, that it is not in mans power to ordayne the courſe and voyage of the Church, here perpetually to laſt.

Expoſition of Iohn Wickliffe vpon his cōcluſions.

2. God can not geue to any man.&c.

¶ To the ſecond concluſion I aunſwere , vnderſtanding

Expoſition of the ſecōd concluſion.

ciuil dominion, as in the concluſion before. And ſo I hold, that God, firſt by his ordinate power cannot geue to any perſon ciuil dominion here for euer: Secondly, by his abſolute power it is not probable for hym ſo to doe. For ſo much as he cānet euer detaine his ſpouſe in perpetual priſon of thys life, nor alwayes deferre the finall beatitude of hys Church.

3. To the third concluſion. Many wrytings or chartes inuented by men, as touching perpetual hereditage ciuile, be vnpoſsible.

❧ The verity of this concluſion is incident. For we muſt not canonize all maner of Charts, what ſoeuer, as Catholicke, or vniuerſal: for then it were not lawful by any meanes to take away or ſequeſter thyngs geuen by Charte or charter, when any doth vniuſtly occupye the ſame. And ſo, if that ſtand confirmed and ratified by the fayth of the Churche, great occaſion thereby ſhould be miniſtred to men ſo chartered, to truſt to their temporall chartes, and ſo might grow thereby much libertie and licence to ſinne. For like as by what ſuppoſition euery truth is neceſſary: ſo by the ſame ſuppoſition, euery falſe thyng is poſſible, as it is playne by the teſtimony of Scripture, & of holy Doctours ſpeakyng of neceſſitie of thynges to come.

In gratia gratificante finaliter.

4. Euery man beyng in grace iuſtifying finally, hath not onely right vnto the thyng, but alſo for his tyme hath right in deede, ouer all the good thynges of God.

Note here he ſpeaketh onely of the right of things in the country to come: and not in this exile.

❧ The veritie hereof is euidēt, by holy Scripture Math. 24. where veritie promiſeth to euery mā entryng into his ioy: verely (ſayth he) I tell you, he ſhall ſet & place him ouer all the goodes he hath. For the right and title belōgyng to the cōmunion of Saintes, in their countrey (he meaneth in the kingdome of heauen) Fundatur obiectiuè ſuper vniuerſitatem bonorum Dei: That is: Hath his relation, as vnto his obiect, to all the goodes and poſſeſſion of God.

5. A man can but onely miniſtratoriouſly, geue any temporall dominion or gift perpetuall, as well to his owne naturall ſonne, as to his ſonne by imitation.

❧ It is euidēt. For euery mā ought to recogniſe himſelfe in all his workes and doyngs, as an humble ſeruaunt, and miniſter of God. As the wordes of Scripture doth teach vs. Let a man ſo eſteeme of vs as the miniſters of Chriſt. Yea ſo Chriſt himſelfe did teach his chief Apoſtles to miniſter, but in their countrey the Saints ſhall geue vnto their felow brethren the dominion of their goodes vt pater de ſuis corporibus & bonis eis inferioribus in natura accordyng to the wordes of Luke. 6. They ſhall geue you and put into your boſomes a good meaſure and perfect, well filled and heaped vp, and runnyng ouer.

6. If God be, temporall Lordes may lawfully and meritoriouſly take away the goodes of fortune from the Church when they do offend, habitualiter.

❧ This concluſion is correlatiue with the firſt Article of our fayth: I beleue in God the father almighty. &c. where I vnderſtand this word (may) in this concluſion after the maner of autentique Scripture, which ſayth & graunteth: that God is able, of theſe ſtones to rayſe vp children to Abraham, for otherwiſe all Chriſtian Princes were heretiques. For this concluſiō, thus ſtādeth the reaſon: If God be, he is omnipotēt: & if he be almighty, he is able to commaunde the Lordes temporall ſo to do: & if he may ſo commaunde, thē may they lawfully ſo take away ſuch goods. &c. And ſo by the vertue of the ſame principle, Chriſtian Princes haue practiſed the ſayd ſentence vpon the Church mē heretofore, as did William Rufus. &c. But God forbid that any ſhould beleue hereby my intention to haue bene, that ſecular Lords may lawfully take away what goodes ſoeuer and by what meanes ſoeuer, by their owne naked authority at theyr pleaſure: but only by the authority of the church may ſo do, in caſes and forme limited by the law.

7. We know that it is not poſsible that the vicare of Chriſt is able by his pure Bulles. &c.

❧ This is manifeſt by the Catholique faith, for aſmuch as the Church doth fully beleue that the abling of any mā, ought firſt to procede and come of God: wherfore, no man being Chriſt his vicar, hath any power in this matter, but onely as vicar in the name of the Lord ſo far forth as he is enabled of the Lord, to notify vnto the church whom God hath enabled. wherfore if any mā do any thing not as vicar in the name of the Lord, whom he ought to forethinke to be his author and head: It is a preſumption of Lucifer, for ſo much as Chriſt by his Apoſtle ſayth. 1. Cor. 3. all our hability or ſufficiency cōmeth of God. And ſo conſequently, it commeth not purely by the miniſterie of hys Vicarſhip, that he is inabled, but the ableneſſe or vnableneſſe of him being the Vicar of Chriſt, commeth to hym an other way from aboue.

8. A man can not be excommunicate to his hurt or vndoing, except he be excommunicate firſt and principally, of himſelfe.

❧ It is euident, foraſmuch as all ſuch excommunication ought to procede & begin originally of his owne ſin which is damnified: wherupon Auguſtine ſayth De verbis Domini, Sermone 51. Doe not thou conculcate thy ſelfe, and man ouercōmeth thee not. And moreouer the faith of the church doth teach, quòd nulla ei nocebit aduerſitas, ſi nulla dominetur iniquitas, that is to ſay. No aduerſitie ſhall hurt, if no iniquitie haue the vpper hand. And yet notwithſtanding, euery excommunication for many cauſes is alſo to be feared, although that the excommunication of the Churche to the humble man being excommunicated, be not damnable but wholeſome.

9. No man ought but in Gods cauſe alone to excommunicate, ſuſpende. &c.

❧ It is cleare, for aſmuch as euery iuſt cauſe is the cauſe of God, whoſe reſpect ought chiefly to be wayed and pondered. Yea the loue of the perſon excommunicate ought to ſurmount the zeale of reuengement, and the deſire of all temporall goodes whatſoeuer, for otherwiſe he that doeth excommunicate, doth damnify himſelfe. To this 9. concluſion notwithſtanding it is congruent, that a Prelate may excommunicate in the cauſe alſo of man, ſo that his principal reſpect in ſo doing be had to ẏ iniury done to his God, as appeareth 13. quæſt. 4 Inter querelas.

10. Nc curſe or excommunication can binde ſimply, but in caſe it be geuen out againſt the aduerſary of Chriſtes lawe.

❧ And it appeareth thus, becauſe that God doth bynde ſimply euery one that is bound, who cannot excommunicate but onely for trāſgreſſion of his law. whereunto it is conſonant notwithſtādyng, that the cenſure of the Church doth not binde ſimply, but ſecondarely in that caſe and reſpect, as it is denounced againſt the aduerſary of the members of the Church.

11. There is no example of Chriſt which geueth power to hys diſciples to excommunicate any ſubiecte (eſpecially for denying of any temporalties) but contrary.

❧ which is thus declared by the fayth, whereby we beleue that God is to be beloued aboue all thynges, and our neighbour and enemy are to be beloued aboue all tēporall goodes of this world neceſſaryly, for the law of God cannot be contrary vnto it ſelfe.

12. The diſciples of Chriſt haue no power by any ciuill coaction, to exact temporall things by their cenſures.

❧ This appeareth by the fayth of the Scripture. Luke 23. where Chriſt did forbid hys Apoſtles ciuilly to raigne or to beare any lordſhip. The kings (ſayth he) of the Gentiles beare rule ouer them, but you not ſo. And after thys ſenſe it is expounded of S. Bernarde, of S. Chryſoſtome, and other holy men: which concluſion notwithſtanding, yet may they exact temporal things by eccleſiſtical cēſures incidently, if caſe be that it appertaine to the reuengement of their God.

13. It is not poſsible by the abſolute power of God, that if the Pope or any other Chriſtian doe pretende to binde or looſe at their pleaſure, by what meanes ſoeuer, that thereby hee doeth ſo binde and looſe.

❧ The contrary of this cōcluſion will deſtroy the whole Catholicke fayth, importyng no leſſe but him to be a blaſphemer whiche ſo vſurpeth ſuch abſolute power of the Lord. And yet by this concluſion I entend not to derogate from the power of the Pope or of any other Prelate of the Churche, but that he may by the vertue of the head ſo bynde and loſe. But doe vnderſtand the conditionall of this negatiue (to be impoſſible) after this ſenſe: that it cannot bee that the Pope or any other Prelate of the Church can pretend by himſelfe to bynde or loſe (how and after what maner he lyſt himſelfe) except in ſuch ſorte, that hee doe in deede ſo bynde and loſe before God as he doth pretend to doe.

14. We ought to beleue, that the vicare of Chriſt doeth at ſuche times onely binde and looſe, when as hee worketh conformably by the lawe, and ordinaunce of Chriſt. &c.

❧ The reaſon thereof is thys, becauſe otherwiſe it is vnlawfull for hym ſo to do, except he ſhould do it in the vertue of that law, and ſo conſequently, vnleſſe it be cōformable to the law and ordinaunce of Chriſt.

The power of all prieſtes toward God equall.

15. To this concluſion, this ought vniuerſally to be beleeued, that euery Prieſt rightly and duely ordered, hath power according to hys vocation, &c.

Ordo ſacerdotalis non ſuſcipit maius & minus.

Poteſtas ordinis.

Poteſtas regiminis.

¶ The reaſon heereof is this, becauſe ẏ the order of prieſthode in his owne nature and ſubſtance, receaueth no ſuch degrees, either of more, or of leſſe. And yet notwithſtanding, the power of inferiour Prieſts, in theſe daies be vpon due conſideration reſtrained, and ſome times againe in time of extreme neceſſity releaſed. And thus according to the Doctours, a Prelate hath a double power, to wit, the power of order, & the power of iuriſdictiō or regimēt. And according to this ſecond power, the Prelates are in an higher Maieſtie, and regiment.

16. It is lawfull for Princes and Kynges (in caſes by the law limited) to withdraw temporall commodities, from Church men abuſing the ſame, habitualiter.

❧ The reaſon therof is playne for that temporall Lordes ought rather to leane to ſpirituall almes, which bryngeth with it greater fruite, then to corporall almes the caſe ſo ſtandyng, that ſome tyme it were a neceſſary work of ſpirituall almes, to chaſtiſe ſuch Clerkes by takyng from them their temporall liuinges, which vſe to abuſe the ſame to the damnifyeng both of their ſoule and body. The caſe, which the law doth limite in this matter, were the defect of correctyng his ſpirituall head or elles for lacke of correctyng the fayth of the Clerke which ſo offendeth, as appeareth. 16.q.7.filijs. Diſt.40.cap.Si Papa.

16.q.7.filijs.

27 Whether they be temporall Lordes, or any other men whatſoeuer, which haue endued any Church with temporalities.&c.

❧ The truth thereof is euidently ſinne, for that, nothyng ought to ſtoppe a man frō the principall workes of charitie neceſſarily, becauſe in euery action and worke of man is to be vnderſtand a priuy condition neceſſary of God his good will concurring with all, as it is in the ciuill law de c.Conradi cap.5.in fine collat. x. And yet God forbid, that by theſe wordes occaſion ſhould be geuen to the Lordes temporall to take away the goodes of fortune from the Church.

18. An Eccleſiaſticall miniſter, yea the Byſhop of Rome may lawfully be rebuked of his ſubiectes, and for the profite of the Church be accuſed, either of the Clergie, or of the laytie.

❧ The prouſe of this is manifeſt hereby, becauſe the ſayd Byſhop of Rome is ſubiect to fall into the ſinne agaynſt the holy Ghoſt, as may be ſuppoſed, ſauyng the ſanctitude, humilitie and reuerence due to ſuch a Father. For ſo long as our brother is ſubiect vnto the infirmitie of fallyng, he lyeth vnder the law of brotherly correction. And when the whole Colledge of Cardinals may be ſlouthfull in miniſtryng due correction for the neceſſary proſperitie of the Churche: it is apparent that the reſidue of the body of the Churche, which poſſibly may ſtand moſt of lay men, may wholeſomely correct the ſame accuſe and bryng him to a better way. The poſſibilitie of this caſe is touched. Diſt.40. Si Papa. If the Pope doe erre from the right fayth. &c. For like as ſuch a great fall ought not to bee ſuppoſed in the Lord Pope without manifeſt euidence: ſo agayne ſuch an obſtinacie ought not to be ſuppoſed in hym, poſſibly beyng fallen, but that hee will humbly receaue the wholeſome medicine of his ſuperiour, correctyng him in the Lord. The practiſe of whiche concluſion alſo is teſtified in many Chronicles. Farre be it from the Church of Chriſt that veritie ſhould be condemned, which ſoundeth euill to trāſgreſſours and other ſlouthfull perſons, for then the whole fayth of the Scripture were in a damnable caſe.

Thus Iohn Wickleffe in geuyng his Expoſition vnto his foreſayd propoſitions and concluſions, as is aboue prefixed, through the fauour and diligence of the Londoners, either ſhifted of the Byſhops, or elles ſatiſfied them ſo: that for that tyme he was diſmiſſed and ſcaped clearely away, onely beyng charged and commaunded by the ſayd Byſhops, that he ſhould not teach or preach any ſuch doctrine any more, for the offence of the lay people.

Thus this good man beyng eſcaped from the Biſhops, with this charge aforeſayd, yet notwithſtandyng, ceaſed not to proceede in his godly purpoſe, labouryng and profityng ſtill in the Church as he had begon.

The death of Pope Gregorie.11.

Vnto whom alſo (as it happeneth by the prouidence of God) this was a great helpe and ſtay, for that in the ſame yeare, or in the begynnyng of the next yeare folowyng, the foreſayd Pope Gregory xi. whiche was the ſtyrrer vp of all this trouble agaynſt hym, turned vp hys heeles and dyed. After whom iſſued ſuch a ſchiſme in Rome, betwene two Popes, and other ſucceedyng after them, one ſtriuyng agaynſt an other: that the ſchiſme thereof endured the ſpace of .xxxix. yeares, vntill the tyme of the Councell of Conſtaunce.

As touching thys peſtilent & moſt miſerable ſchiſme, it would require heere an other Ileade to comprehend in order all the circumſtaunces and tragicall partes thereof, what trouble in the whole Church, what partes taking in euery Countrey, what apprehending and impryſoning of prieſts & prelates, takē by land and ſea, what ſheddyng of bloud did folow therof. How Ottho duke of Brunſewyke & Prince of Tarentum, was taken and murthered. Howe Ioane Queene of Hieruſalem and Sicilia his wife, who before had ſent to Pope Vrbane, beſide other gifts at hys coronation, xl.M. Duckets in pure gold: after by the ſayd Vrbane was committed to priſon, and in the ſame pryſon ſtrangled. What Cardinalles were racked, and miſerably wythout all mercy tormented on gibbettes to death, what ſlaughter of men, what battails were fought betwene the two Popes, whereof 5000. on the one ſide were ſlaine, beſide the number of them which were taken priſoners. Of the beheading of 5. cardinals together after long tormēts, and how the biſhop Aquilonenſis, being ſuſpected of pope Vrbane, for not riding faſter with the Pope, his horſe being not good, was there ſlaine by the Popes commaundement, ſending his ſoldiours vnto him, to ſlay him, and cut hym in peeces. All whych things, with other diuers moe acts of horrible cruelty, happening in the time of thys abhominable ſchiſme, becauſe they are aboundantly diſcourſed at full, by Theodorike Niem, who was neare to the ſayde Pope Vrbane, and preſent at all his doings: therefore as a thing needleſſe, I here pretermit, referring them who couet to be certified more amply herein, vnto the 3. bookes of the ſayd Theodorike aboue mentioned.

Rebellion in England by Iacke Strawe.

Simon the Archb.beheaded.

W.Courtney Archb. of Cant.

About the ſame time, alſo about 3. yeres after, there fel a cruell diſſention in England, betwene the common people and the nobilitie, the which did not a little diſturbe and trouble the common wealth. In thys tumult, Symon of Sudbury Archbyſhop of Canterbury, was taken by the ruſtical & rude people, and was beheaded. In whoſe place after, ſucceeded William Courtney, which was no leſſe diligent then his predeceſſor had ben before him, in doing his diligence to roote out heretickes. Notwithſtanding, in the meane ſeaſon Wickleffes ſecte increaſed priuely, and daily grewe to greater force, vntill the time that William Barton Vicechancellor of Oxford, about the yeare of our Lord 1380. had the whole rule of that vniuerſitie: who callyng together 8. monaſtical doctors, and 4. other, with the conſent of the reſt of hys affinitie, putting the common ſeale of the vniuerſitie vnto certaine wrytings: he ſet forth an Edict, declaring vnto euery man, and threatning them vnder a greeuous penaltie, that no men ſhould be ſo hardie, hereafter to aſſociate thēſelues wyth any of Wickliffs fautors or fauourers: and vnto Wickliffe himſelfe, he threatned the greater excommunication, and farther impriſonment, and to all his fautors, vnles that they after 3. dayes canonical admonitiō or warning, or as they cal it, peremptory, did repent & amend. The which thing whē Wickliffe vnderſtood, forſaking the pope & all the clergy, he thought to appeale vnto the kings maieſtie: but the Duke of Lancaſter comming betweene, forbad hym that he ſhoulde not heereafter attempt or begin any ſuch matters, but rather ſubmit himſelfe vnto the cenſure and iudgement of his ordinary. Whereby Wickliffe being beſet wyth troubles and vexations, as it were in the middeſt of the waues, he was forced once againe to make cōfeſſion of his doctrine: in the whych his confeſſion, to auoid the rigor of things, he anſwered as is aforeſaide, making his declaration, and qualifying his aſſertions after ſuch a ſorte, that he did mitigate and aſſwage the rigor of hys enemies.

An edict againſt the Wicliuiſtes.

The next yere after, whych was 1382. by the commandement of William Arch. of Cant. there was a conuocation holden at London, where as Iohn Wickliffe was alſo commanded to be preſent. But whether he there appeared perſonally, or not, I find it not in ſtory certainly affirmed. The mandate of the Archb. Wil. Courtney (ſent abrode for the conuenting together of this councell) heere followeth vnder wrytten, truely copied out of his owne regiſters.

Anno. 1382.

The mandate of the Archb.

Memorandum, that where as well amongeſt the nobles as commons of this realme of England, there hath a certain brute ben ſpread of diuers cōcluſions both erroneous, Ex Regiſtro Archb. W. Courtney.

ous, & alſo repugnant to the determination of the Church which tend to the ſubuerſion of the whole Church, and to our prouince of Canterburie, and alſo to the ſubuerſion of the whole realme, being preached in diuers & ſundry places of our ſayd prouince, generally, commonly, & publikely: we William by Gods permiſſion Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Primate of all England, and Legate of the ſea Apoſtolicall, beeing minded to execute our office and duetie heerein: haue conuocated or called together, certaine our fellow brethren & others a great many, as well Doctours and Bachelers of diuinitie, as doctours of the Canon and ciuil law, and thoſe whome we thought to be the moſt famous men, ſkilfulleſt men. and men of ſoundeſt iudgemēt in religion, that were in all the realme, whoſe names here vnder enſue. And the ſame being (the 17. day of the month of May) in the yere of our Lord 1382. in a certaine chamber within the territories of the priory of the friers preachers of London before vs and our foreſayd fellow brethren aſſembled, then and there perſonally preſent: After that the ſayd concluſions (the tenour whereof here vnder enſueth) were opēly proponed, and diſtinctly and plainly read: we burdened our foreſayd fellow brethren, doctours, and bachelers, in the faith wherin they ſtode bound to our Lorde Jeſus Chriſt, and as they would aunſwer before the hygh iudge in the day of iudgement, that they ſhuld ſpeake their opinions touching the ſayde concluſions, and what euery of them thinketh therein.

And at length, after good deliberation had vppon the premiſſes, the foreſaid our brethren the biſhops, doctours, & Bachelers, reaſſembled before vs the 21. day of the ſame moneth in the foreſayd chamber, the foreſayde concluſions being againe and againe repeated and plainly read: by vs and by the common conſents of vs all it remaineth publiſhed and declared, that ſome of the ſaid concluſions are hereticall, and other ſome erroneous and contrary to the determination of the Church, as hereafter moſt manifeſtly ſhall appeare. And for as much as by ſufficient information we finde & perceiue, that the ſayd concluſions in many places of our ſayde prouince, haue bene as is ſayde, bothe taught & preached: and that diuers other perſons do hold and maintaine the ſame, and be of hereſie vehemently and notoriouſly ſuſpected: haue thought good as wel generally as ſpecially, to ſend out thys proceſſe vnder wrytten.

¶ The letter of the Archbyſhop directed to the Byſhop of London, agaynſt Wickleffe and his adherentes.

A letter of the Archb. of Cant. againſt Wickliffe.

WIlliam by Gods permiſsion Archbyſhop of Canterbury, Metropolitane of all England, and of the Apoſtolicall ſea Legate: To our reuerend brother by the grace of God Byſhop of London, ſalutation. The Prelates of the Churche ought to be ſo much the more vigilant and attentiue about the charge of the Lordes flocke committed vnto them: how much the more they ſhall vnderſtand the Wolues beyng clothed in ſheepes apparell, fraudulently to goe about to woory and ſcatter the ſheepe. Truly, by the continuall cry and bruted fame (which it greeueth me to report) it is come to our knowledge: that although by the canonicall ſanctions, no man beyng forbidden or not admitted, ſhould either publickely or priuily without the authoritie of the Apoſtolicall ſea or Byſhop of that place, vſurpe or take vpon him the office of a Preacher: Some notwithſtandyng, ſuch as are the children of damnation, beyng vnder the vale of blynde ignoraunce, are brought into ſuch a dotyng mynde, that they take vppon them to Preache, and are not affrayde to affirme and teach diuers and ſundry propoſitions and concluſions here vnder recited, both hereticall, erroneous, and falſe, condempned by the Church of God: and repugnaunt to the decree of holy Churche, whiche tend to the ſubuertyng of the whole ſtate of the ſame, of our prouince of Canterbury, and deſtruction and weakenyng of the tranquilitie of the ſame: and that as well in the Churches, as in the ſtreetes, as alſo in many other prophane places of our ſayd prouince, generally, cōmonly, and publikely, do preach the ſame, infecting very many good Chriſtians, cauſing thē lamentably to wāder out of the way, & frō the catholick Church, without which there is no ſaluation. We therfore conſidering, that ſo pernicious a miſchiefe whych may creepe amongeſt many, wee ought not to ſuffer, and by diſsimulation to paſſe ouer, which may with deadly contagion ſlea the ſoules of men, leaſt their bloud be required at our hands: are willing ſo much as God wil permit vs to do, to extirpate the ſame. Wherefore, by the counſaile and conſent of many of our brethrẽ and Suffraganes, we haue conuented diuers and ſundry Doctours of Diuinitie, as alſo profeſſours and other Clerkes of the Canon and Ciuill lawes, the beſt learned wythin the Realme, and of the moſt ſoundeſt opinion and iudgement in the Catholicke faith, to geue their opinions and iudgements cõcerning the foreſayde concluſions. But for as much as the ſayde concluſions and aſſertions: being in the preſence of vs, and our fellowe brethren and other conuocates, openly expounded, and diligently examined, and in the end found by common counſaile and conſent, as wel of them as of vs, and ſo declared that ſome of thoſe concluſions were heretical, and ſome of them erroneous & repugnant to the determination of the Church, as here vnder are deſcribed: Wee will and commaund your brotherhoode, and by vertue of holy obedience ſtraightly enioyne, all and ſingular our brethren and Suffraganes of our body and Church of Canterbury, that with all ſpeedye diligence you poſsible can, you likewiſe enioyne them (as we haue enioyned you) and euery of them. And that euery one of them in their Churches & other places of their Citie and Dioces, doe admoniſh and warne, and that you in your Church and other Churches of your Citie and Dioces, do admoniſh and warne, as we by the tenor of theſe preſents, do admoniſh and warne the firſt time, the ſecond time, and the third time: and yet more ſtraightly doe warne, aſsigning for the firſt admonition one day, for the ſecond admonition an other day, & for the third admonition canonicall and peremptorie, an other day: That no man from hence forth of what eſtate or cõdition ſoeuer, do hold, preach or defend the foreſayd hereſies and errors or any of them: nor that hee admitte to preach any one that is prohibited or not ſent to preach, nor that he heare or hearken to the hereſies or errours of him or any of them, or that he fauour or leane vnto hym either publiquely, or priuely: But that immediatly he ſhonne hym as he would auoide a Serpent putting forth moſt peſtiferous poiſon, vnder paine of the greater curſe, the which we commaund to be thundered againſt all and euery one which ſhalbe diſobedient in this behalfe, and not regarding theſe our monitions, after that thoſe 3. dayes be paſt which are aſsigned for the canonical monition, and that their delay, fault or offence, committed require the ſame: That then according to the tenour of theſe wrytings, wee commaund both by euery one of our felowe brethren & our Suffraganes in their Cities and Dioces, and by you in your City and Dioces (ſo much as belongeth both to you and them) that to the vttermoſt, both ye and they cauſe the ſame excommunications to be pronounced. And furthermore, wee will and commaunde our foreſayd felowe brethren, and all & ſingular of you a part by your ſelues, to be admoniſhed, and by the aſperſion of the bloud of Ieſus Chriſt we likewiſe admoniſh you: that according to the inſtitution of the ſacred Canons, euery one of them in their Cities & Dioces, bee a diligent inquiſitour of this hereticall prauitie: and that euery one of you alſo in your Cities and Dioces, be the like inquiſitor of the foreſayd heretical prauitie: And that of ſuch like preſumptions they and you carefully and diligently inquire, and that both they and you (according to your dueties and office in this behalfe) wyth effect do procede againſt the ſame, to the honor and praiſe of his name that was crucified, and for the preſeruation of the Chriſtian faith and Religion.

Had ye tryed them by the truth, you ſhuld haue found thẽ otherwiſe.

Bruta Fulmina.

He that killeth you, ſhal thinke he doth God good ſeruice.

Yea rather for the honour of your pope, and deſtruction of Chriſtian fayth.

Here is not to be paſſed ouer, the great miracle of gods diuine admonition or warning: for when as the Archbyſhop and ſuffraganes, with the other Doctours of diuinitie, and lawyers with a great company of babling Friers, & religious perſons were gathered together to conſult, as touching Iohn wickleffes bookes, and that whole ſecte: when as they were gathered together at the Gray fryers in Lõdon, to begin their buſines, vpon S. Dunſtons day after dinner, about 2. of the clocke the very houre & inſtant ẏ they ſhould go forward with their buſineſſe: a wonderfull and terrible earthquake fell, through out al England: wherupon, diuers of the ſuffraganes being feared, by the ſtrange and wonderfull demonſtration, doubting what it ſhuld meane, thought it good to leaue of from their determinate purpoſe. But the Archbyſhop (as chiefe captaine of that army, more raſh and bold then wiſe interpreating the chaunce which had happened, cleane contrary to an other meaning or purpoſe, did confirme & ſtrengthen their harts and minds, which were almoſt daunted with feare, ſtoutly to proceede and go forward in theyr attempted enterpriſe. Who then diſcourſing wickliffes articles, not according vnto the ſacred Canons of the holy Scripture, but vnto theyr owne priuate affections and traditions, pronounced and gaue ſentence, that ſome of them were ſimply and plainely hereticall, other ſome halfe erroneous other irreligious, ſome ſeditious, and not conſonant to the Church of Rome.

An earthquake what time Wickliffe was examined.

Determination vpon the articles of Wickliffe.

Item, the 12. day of Iune, in the yeare aforeſaid, in the chamber of the Friers preachers: the foreſayd M. Robert Rigges Chauncelor of the vniuerſitie of Oxford, & Thomas Brightwell profeſſors of diuinitie, beyng appoynted the ſame day and place, by the foreſayde reuerend father in God Archbyſhop of Canterbury: appeared before hym, in the preſence of the reuerend father in God, Lord William, by the grace of God Byſhop of Wincheſter, and diuers others doctours and bachelers of Diuinitie and of the Canon and ciuill lawe, whoſe names are before recited. And firſt the ſayd Chauncelor by the ſaid Lord Archb. of Cant. being examined what his opinion was touching the foreſayd articles: Publiquely affirmed and declared, that certaine of thoſe concluſions were hereticall, and certaine erronious, as the other doctors and clerks afore mentioned had declared: And then immediately next after hym, the foreſaid Thomas Brightwel was examined, which vpon ſome of the concluſions at firſt ſomewhat ſtaggered, but in the end being by the ſayd Archbiſhop, diligently examined vpon the ſame, did affirme and repute the ſame to be hereticall and erroneous, as the foreſayd Chancelor had done. An other Bacheler of Diuinitie alſo there was named N. ſtammering alſo at ſome of thoſe concluſions, but in the end affirmed that hys opinion therein was, as was the iudgement of the foreſayd Chauncelour and Thomas as is aboue declared. Wherſuppon, the ſayde Lord Archb. of Cant. willing to let and hinder the perill of ſuch hereſies & errours: Deliuered vnto the foreſayd Chauncelour there being publiquely read his letters patents, to be executed, the tenour whereof in theſe wordes doth folow.

A letter of the Archb. of Cant. to the Chauncelour of Oxford.

William by the grace of God Archb. of Cant. primate of all England, and Legate of the Apoſtolicall ſee: To our welbeloued ſonne in Chriſt the Chancelor of the vniuerſitie of Oxford, within the dioceſſe of Lincolne, greeting, grace and benediction. The prelates of the Church, about the Lordes flocke committed to their charge, ought ſo much to be more vigilãt as that they ſee the wolfe clothed in ſheepes attire fraudulẽtly go about to worow and ſcatter the ſheepe. Doubtles, the common fame & brute is come vnto our eares. &c. Vt in mandato præcedenti. We will therefore and commaunde, ſtraightly enioyning you, that in the Church of our bleſſed Lady in Oxforde, vpon thoſe dayes the which accuſtomably the Sermone is made, as alſo in the ſchooles of the ſayde Vniuerſitie vppon thoſe dayes the Lectures be read, ye publiſh and cauſe by others to be publiſhed to the clergie and people, as well in their vulgare tounge, as in the Latine tounge, manifeſtly and plainly without any curious implication, the ſame hereticall and erronious concluſions, ſo repugnant to the determination of holy Church, as is aforeſayd: to haue bene & be condemned, and which concluſions alſo we declare by theſe our letters to be vtterly condemned: And that farthermore you forbid, and canonically admoniſh, and cauſe to be admoniſhed, as we by the tenour of theſe preſents doe forbid and admoniſh you, once, twiſe, and thriſe, and that peremptorily: that none hereafter hold, teach, preach, or defende the hereſies and errours aboue ſayde, or any of them eyther in ſchoole or out of ſchoole by any ſophiſtical cauillation or otherwiſe: or that any admit to preache, heare, or hearken vnto Iohn Wyckliffe, Nicholas Hereford, Philip Reppindon Chanon reguler, or Iohn Ayſhton, or Laurence Readman, which be vehemently and notoriouſly ſuſpected of hereſie, or els any other whatſoeuer, ſo ſuſpected or defamed: or that either priuely or publiquely, they either aide or fauoure them or any of them, but that incontinently they ſhunne and auoide the ſame as a Serpent which putteth foorth moſte peſtiferous poyſon. And farthermore, we ſuſpend the ſayd ſuſpected perſons from al ſcholaſticall acte, till ſuch time as they ſhall purge themſelues before vs in that behalfe, and that you denounce the ſame publiquely, by vs to haue bene and be ſuſpended, and that yee diligently and faithfully inquire, of all their fautours and fauourers, and cauſe to be inquired throughout all the haules of the ſayde vniuerſitie. And that when you ſhall haue intelligence of their names & perſons, that yee compell all and euery of them to abiure their outragies by Eccleſiaſticall Cenſures and other paines Canonicall whatſoeuer vnder paine of the greater curſe, the whych againſt al and ſingular the rebellious in thys behalfe, and diſobeying our monitions wee pronounce: ſo that their fault, deceit, and offence in thys behalfe, deſerue the ſame (the ſayde monition of ours being firſt ſent) which in this behalfe we exteeme and allowe Canonicall, that then and agayne accordyng to the effect of theſe our letters. &c. The Abſolution of all and ſingular ſuch, whych ſhall incurre the ſentence of thys inſtrument by vs ſent foorth (whych God forbidde) Wee ſpecially reſerue vnto oure ſelues: exhortyng you the Chauncellour by the aſperſion of the bloud of IESVS CHRIST, that to the vttermoſt of your power hereafter you doe your indeuoure, that the Clergie and people being ſubiecte vnto you, if there be whych haue ſtrayed from the Catholique faith by ſuch errours, may be brought home againe, to the laud and honour of his name that was crucified, and preſeruation of the true faith. And further our will is, that whatſoeuer you ſhal do, in the premiſſes in maner & forme of our proceſſe in this behalfe, to be had and done: that you for your parte, when you ſhalbe required thereunto, plainly & diſtinctly do certifie vs by your letters patents, hauing the tenour hereof.

Make ſure worke.

The concluſions and articles here mentioned in thys letter, are aboue prefixed. Of which ſome were cõdemned for hereticall, ſome for erroneous.

After this, within fewe daies the foreſayd Archbyſhop W. Courtney, directed down his letters of admonition to Robert Rigge commiſſary of Oxford, for the repreſſing of thys doctrine. Which yet notwithſtanding both then, and yet to this day (God be praiſed) doth remaine. The copie of his monition to the Commiſſary here out of hys owne Regiſter, foloweth.

¶ The monition of the Archbyſhop, vnto the foreſayd Chauncellour.

An other letter of the Archb. to the Commiſſary of Oxford.

IN Dei nomine Amen. Where as we William by the permiſſion of God Archbyſhop of Canterbury Lorde Primate of England and Legate of the Apoſtolicall ſea, by the conſent of our ſuffraganes, haue cauſed to be aſſembled together diuers clerkes both ſecular and regular of the vniuerſitie of Oxford, wythin our prouince of Canterbury and other Catholicke perſons to informe vs of, and vpon certaine concluſions heretical and erroneous generally and commonly preached and publiſhed in diuers places of the ſayd prouince of Canterbury to the ſubuerſion of the whole ſtate of the Church, and our ſayd prouince: And alſo mature deliberation had vpon the ſame: by the common counſaile of the ſaid our ſuffraganes & their conuocates, it was declared, that certain of the ſayde concluſions, to haue bene and be condemned, ſome for heretical, and ſome for erroneous, and notoriouſly repugnãt to the determinatiõ of the church, which we alſo our ſelues haue declared to be damnable: And haue vnderſtode by credible information, and partly by experience that thou Robert Rigge, Chancelor of the vniuerſity aforeſaid, haſt & doeſt incline partly to the foreſaid damnable concluſions, whome alſo we in thys part haue partly ſuſpected, doeſt intend to moleſt theſe our Clerkes aboue ſpecified, & others adhering vnto vs in this behalf, as they ought to do: through thy ſubtill and ſophiſticall imaginations, ſondry & manifold wayes, therfore we admoniſh thee M. Robert Chauncelour aforeſaid, the firſt, ſecond, and third time, and peremptorily: that thou doeſt not greue, let, or moleſt, iudicially or extraiudicially, apertly or priuely, or cauſe to be greued, let and moleſted, or procure directly or indirectly, by thy ſelfe, or any other, as much as in thee lieth to be greued, the foreſayd Clerks ſecular or regular, or ſuch as fauor them in the premiſſes, in their ſcholaſtical acts or in any other condition whatſoeuer. And that thou ſuffer none, hereafter to teach, maintaine, preach, or defend any ſuch hereſies or errours in the ſayde Vniuerſitie, either within or wythout the ſcholes: Neither that thou do admit I. Wickliffe, Nicholas Herford, Philip Repindon, Iohn Ayſhton, or Laurẽce Redman, which are vehemently and notoriouſly ſuſpected of hereſie, or any other ſo ſuſpected or defamed, vnto that office of preaching. But that thou denounce the ſayd perſons to be ſuſpended, whom we haue ſuſpended from all ſcholaſtical act, whileſt they cleare their innocencie in this part before vs, vnder the paine of the greater curſe, which we here in theſe wrytings denounce againſt thy perſon if thou ſhalt not obey thoſe our admonitions, with effecte, as thy crime, ſubteltie and offence in this behalfe ſhal require according to this our admonition premiſed, which we repute in thys parte for canonicall, as well then as now, and now as wel as then, reſeruing the abſolution of this ſentence excommunicatorie, if it happen to light vpon thee, as (God forbid) ſpecially vnto our ſelues. Teſtified with the handes of the Iurers, aboue in the page 410. before ſpecified.

¶ The examination of Nicholas Herford, Philip Repingdon, and Iohn Ayſhton.

THe 18. day of the month and yere aforeſaid in the chamber of the preaching Friers afore mentioned, before the foreſayde Archb. in the preſence of diuers Doctours and Bachelers of Diuinitie, and many Lawyers both Canon and Ciuil, whoſe names are vnder written: appeared M. Nich. Herford, Philip Repingdon, & Iohn Ayſhton Bachelers of diuinity. Who after a corporal oth taken to ſhew their iudgements vpon the cõcluſions aforeſayd, were examined ſeuerally eache one by himſelfe, before the Archb. Who there required day and place to deliberate vpon the concluſions aforeſayd, and to geue their anſwere vnto the ſame in wryting. And alſo required to haue a copie of the ſayde concluſions to be deliuered vnto them. The which copy, the ſayd Nicholas & Philip (being openly read vnto them) receiued. Alſo the foreſayd M. Iohn Ayſhton lykewiſe was examined, and iudicially admoniſhed by the ſaid Archbiſhop by vertue of his othe, that hee ſetting aſide all ſophiſticall wordes & ſutteltie, he fully and plainly would ſay his minde vpon the concluſions aforeſayd. And being asked moreouer by the ſaid Archbiſhop whether he would haue a further day to deliberate vpon his anſwers, as the foreſaid Nicholas and Philip had before: ſaid expreſly that he would not, but would anſwer preſently to thoſe cõcluſions. And ſo for finall aunſwere ſayde, as concerning all theſe concluſions (containing them all together) that hys iudgement was in this behalf to hold his peace. Wherfore the foreſaid Archbiſhop reputing the ſaide Iohn herein to be ſuſpected, admoniſhed him in form of wordes as foloweth: We admoniſh thee Iohn Ayſhton, whome we repute to be defamed, & notoriouſly ſuſpected of hereſie, the firſt, the ſecond, and third time: that in our prouince of Canterbury hereafter, thou do not preach publickely or priuately wout our ſpeciall licence, vnder paine of the greater curſe, which we denoũce here by theſe preſents againſt thy perſon, if thou obey not our monitions, for now as for then. And conſequently, for as much as the ſayd Iohn being asked of the Archb. confeſſed that hee had heard before of the publication of the Archbyſhops Mandate, wherein was inhibited ẏ no perſon prohibited or not ſent, ſhould preach hereafter: the foreſayde Archb. aſſigned to him Friday next folowing, which was the 20. day of the ſame moneth, after dinner to appeare before hym, either at Lambeth, or in the ſame place: to ſay for himſelfe, wherefore he myght not be pronounced for an heretick, & for ſuch a one to be denounced through hys whole prouince. Alſo the ſaid Archbiſhop aſſigned to the foreſaid Nicholas and Philip, the ſaide day & place to anſwer peremptorily, and to ſay fully & plainly to the concluſions aforeſayde, all ſophiſtication of wordes and diſputation ſet a part.

If a man be duely contrite, that all externall confeſſion is to him ſuperfluous and vnprofitable.

we graunt that it is hereſie.

If the Pope be a reprobate & an euill man, and conſequētly a member of the deuil: He hath no power ouer the faithful of Chriſt, giuē to him of any, vnleaſt it be of Ceſar.

we graunt that it is hereſie.

That after Pope Vrbane the 6. none is to be receyued for Pope, but that wee ought to liue after the maner of the Grecians vnder our owne lawes.

we graunt that it is hereſie.

To ſay that it is againſt the holy Scripture for eccleſiaſticall perſons to haue temporall poſſeſſions.

If obſtinacie be ioyned withall: wee graunt that it is hereſie.

That no Prelate ought to excommunicate any man, vnles he know him before to be excommunicate of God.

we graunte that it is an errour. Vnderſtandyng thys knowledge to meane an experimental knowledge: ſo that heerewith may ſtand the Decree of the Church. 11.q.3. Nemo Epiſco.

That he which doth ſo excommunicate, is thereby an hereticke or excommunicate.

After the ſenſe agreeing wt the other before, we graunt to be an errour.

That a Prelate excommunicating a clerke, whych appealeth to the king or counſell of the realme, in ſo doing is a traitor to God, the king, and the realme.

we graunt it is an errour.

That they whych leaue off to preache, or to heare the word of God & the goſpel preached, for the excommunication of men, are excommunicate: and in the day of iudgement ſhalbe counted for traytors to God.

Vnderſtanding this cōcluſion vniuerſally ſo, as ſcripture and lawes do vnderſtand ſuch indefinit propoſitiōs: we graunt it is an errour.

To affirme that it is lawful for any Deacon or Prieſt, to preach the word of God without the authority of the ſea Apoſtolique or catholique Byſhop, or of any other whoſe authority he knoweth ſufficient.

we graunt it is an errour.

To affirme that there is no ciuile Lord, no Biſhop nor Prelate whileſt he is in mortall ſinne, wee graunt it is an errour.

That temporall Lordes may at their pleaſure take away the temporal goodes from Churches offending habitualiter: we graunt it is an error, after this ſenſe that they may ſo take away temporall goodes of the churches wythout the caſes limited in the lawes of the Church and kingdomes.

That the vulgar people may correct the Lordes offending at their pleaſure: vnderſtanding by thys word may, that they may do it by the law: we graunt it is an errour, becauſe that ſubiectes haue no power ouer theyr Lordes,

That tithes be pure almes, and that pariſhioners may for the offences of their Curates detaine the ſame and beſtow them to others at theyr pleaſure: vnderſtanding by thys word may, as before, to may, by the lawe: we graunt it is an errour.

That ſpecial praiers applied to any one perſon by prelates or religious men, do no more profit then the general praiers, if there be no let by the way to make them vnlike: Vnderſtanding thys concluſion vniuerſally negatiuely, & vnderſtanding by ſpecial prayers, the prayers made vpon ſpecial deuotion and general praiers of general deuotion: then after this ſenſe, no ſuch ſpecial prayers applied to any one perſon, by ſpecial orators do profite more ſpecially the ſaid perſon, then general praiers doe, which are made of ẏ ſame and for the ſame perſons, we graunt it is an errour.

He that geueth almes to the friers, or to any frier that preacheth, is excommunicate both he that geueth, & he that taketh: Vnderſtanding thys propoſition vniuerſally or conditionally as is aforeſayd: we graunt to be an errour.

That who ſo entreth into any priuate religiō what ſoeuer, is thereby made more vnapt and vnmete to obey the commaundements of God: we graunt it is an errour.

That ſuch holy men as did inſtitute any priuate religions whatſoeuer, as well of ſecular hauing poſſeſſions, as of friers hauing none, in ſo inſtituting did ſinne: Vnderſtanding thys reduplicatiuely or vniuerſally: wee graunt it is an error. After thys ſenſe, that what Saint ſoeuer dyd inſtitute priuate religiōs, inſtituting the ſayd religion vpon that conſideration as they did, did ſinne.

That religious men liuing in priuate religiōs, be not of the religion of Chriſt: Vnderſtanding the propoſition vniuerſally as is aforeſayd: we graunt it is an errour.

That friers are bound to get their liuings by the labor of their handes and not by begging: Vnderſtanding this propoſitiō vniuerſally as before: we graūt it is an errour.

The iudgement of the doctors vpon theſe articles.

These things haue we ſpoken reuerend father & Lord, in all humility, vnder your gracious ſupportation and benigne correction, according to our abilities & ſlender capacities for this preſent (the honor of god, the verity of our belief, and ſafe cōſcience in all poynts reſerued) more humbly yet beſeeching you: that if any other thing there be that ſemeth meete vnto your excellency & diſcretion to be more or otherwiſe ſaid & ſpoken: that your gracious fatherhood would vouchſafe to informe vs as children by the ſacred ſcriptures by the determination of the church, or authoryties of the holy Doctours. And doubtles with redy wils, and obedient mindes we wil conſent and agree vnto your wholſom doctrine. May it therfore pleaſe your fatherhode right reuerende in God, according to ẏ accuſtomed maner of your benignity, fauourably to accept theſe our wordes and ſayings, forasmuch as the foreſayde concluſions were neuer by vs either in ſcholes affirmed, or els in Sermons publikely preached.

¶ Further examinations and proccedings againſt the foreſayd Nich. Herford, Phillip Reppindon, and Io. Aiſhton.

Farther examinations againſt the ſayd Nic. Phil. and Iohn. Nic. Herford. Phil. Repington. Iohn Aſhe. ton, examined. 20. Iunij. an. 1382.

WHen all theſe anſwers were made vnto the ſaid lord Archb. of Canterb. the ſayde Nicholas and Phillip, for that they aunſwered not vnto the meaning and wordes of the firſt concluſion expreſly: but contrary to the ſenſe of the decretall Firmiter credimus, were there iudicially examined what their ſenſe and meaning was, but they wold not expreſſe the ſame. Then was it demaunded of them according to the ſenſe of the ſame concluſion declared on the behalfe of the ſayd Lord of Cant. whether the ſame materiall bread in numero, whych before the conſecration is laid vpon the aulter, remaine in the proper ſubſtance and nature, after the conſecration in the Sacrament of the aulter, and likewiſe of the wine? To this the ſaid Nicholas & Phillip aunſwered, that for ẏ time they could ſay no more therein, then that they had already aunſwered, as is afore alledged in writing. And for that vnto the ſence and wordes of the ſecond concluſion they aunſwered not fully and expreſly, but in a ſence contrary to the Decretall Cum Marthe, beyng aſked what was ẏ meaning, would not expreſſe the ſame. Therfore it was demanded of them according to the ſenſe of the ſame concluſion, declared in the behalfe of the ſayde Lord of Caunterbury, whether thoſe corporall accidences which formally were in the bread and wine before the cōſecration of them: after the conſecration were in the ſame bread and wine, or els were ſubiected in anye other ſubſtaunce? To this they aunſwered, that better to anſwere, then before in theyr writinges they already had, for that time they could not. To the meaning alſo and wordes of the third concluſon, for that they aunſwered not playnly and expreſly, but in ſenſe contrary to the decretall in the Clementines Si dudum, being aſked what was that ſenſe and meaning, woulde not declare the ſame: wherefore it was then demaunded of them according to the ſenſe of the ſame concluſion, declared on the behalfe of the ſayd Lorde of Canterbury. Whither the ſame body of Chriſt whiche was aſſumpted of the Virgine, be in the ſacrament of the aulter, ſecundum ſe ipſum, euen as he is really in carnall ſubſtance, proper eſſence, and nature. To this they aunſwered, that for that time they could ſay no more then that they had ſayd, as before is ſpecified in writing.

An other day aſsigned for the examinates to appeare,

Proceſſe made by the Aarchb. againſt Iohn Aſheton.

Furthermore, to the ſenſe and text of the ſixt concluſion, for that they aunſwered not fully and expreſly, beyng aſked whether God ought any maner of obedience to the Deuill or not: they ſaid yea, as the obedience of loue, becauſe he loueth him, and puniſhed him as he ought. And to proue that God ought ſo to obey the deuill, they offered themſelues to the fire.

To the 11. concluſion, for that they aunſwered not expreſly, being aſked whither a prelate might excommunicate any man being in the ſtate of grace: ſaid yea.

Vnto the 20. cõcluſion, for that they anſwered not fully, ſimply, and expreſly, being demaunded whether ſpecial or generall prayers did moſt profit, and were of greater force? They would not ſay but that ſpeciall.

Vnto the laſt concluſion, for that they aunſwered neyther ſimply nor expreſly, and being demanded particularly, whether any frier were bounde to get his liuing wyth his manuall labour, ſo that it might not be lawfull for them to liue by begging? They would make no aunſwere at all.

The iudgement of the doctors vpon theſe articles.

After that, the foreſaid Lord Archb. of Cant, demaunded of all the foreſaid Doctors, what their iudgement was touching the anſweres that were made vpon all & ſinguler ſuch concluſions. All which doctors and euery of them ſeuerally, ſayd: yͤ there all the anſweres geuen vnto the firſt ſecond, third, and ſixt cõcluſions (as is before recited) were inſufficient, hereticall and ſubtill, and that all the anſweres made ſpecially to the tenth, ninth, and laſt concluſions, as is aboue mentioned: were inſufficiẽt, erroneous and peruerſe. Whereupon the Lord ſayd Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, conſidering the ſayd aunſweres to be hereticall, ſubtill, erroneous and peruerſe, accordingly as the ſaid Doctors (as is aforeſayd) had wayed and conſidered: admoniſhed the ſaid Nicholas and Phillip ſufficiently, vnder theſe forme of wordes.

Admonition and citation of the Archb. againſt the examinates.

The name of Chriſt being called vpon: we William by Gods permiſſion, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Metropolitane of al England, and Legate of the Apoſtolique ſee, and through all our prouince of Caunterbury, Inquiſitor of all heretical prauitie: do ſufficiently and lawfully admoniſh and cite you Nicholas Herford and Phillip Repingdon profeſſors of Diuinitie, hauing this day and place aſſigned you by your own conſent and our prefictiõ, peremptorily to anſwere and to ſay, fully and playnely your opinions touching theſe concluſions wherunto we do referre you (all ſubtill, ſophiſticall, and Logicall wordes ſet apart) being therunto ſworne, cited, & commanded: which thyng to do, without cauſe reaſonable or any licence geuen thereunto, you neither haue bene willing nor are willing, nay rather ye contemptuouſly refuſed to aunſwere to ſome of thoſe concluſions before vs iudicially, according to the effect of our monition, citation and commaundement beforeſayd. But for that, ye haue aunſwered vnto ſome of them heretically, and to other ſome erroneouſly, although not fully, we admoniſh and cite you once, twice, and thrice, and that peremtorily: that plainely and fully (all ſubtile, ſophiſticall and logicall wordes ſet apart) you and euery of you anſwer vnto the ſame concluſions, and vnto that ſenſe and meaning by vs limitted: vnder the payne that otherwiſe ſuch concluſions deſerue by you confeſſed, and that for the ſame concluſions you ought to haue.

arther examinations gainst the ayd Nic. Phil. and ohn. Nic. Herord. Phil. Repington. ohn Aſheton, examined Iunij. an. 82.

Which admonition being made and done, for that the foreſayd Nicholas and Phillip woulde make none other anſwere: The ſaid Lord archbiſh. of Caunterbury concluded that buſines, prefixing and aſſigning vnto the foreſayd Nichalas and Phillip 8 dayes ſpace, that is to ſay, vntill the 27. day of the ſame month: And that then they ſhoulde appeare before the ſayd Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury whereſoeuer within the ſame his prouince of Caunterbury hee ſhoulde fortune to be, to heare his decree that ſhoulde be made in that behalfe. This done, the foreſayd Archbiſh. of Caunterbury, moniſhed and cited lawfully and ſufficiently, Iohn Aiſhton vnder the the tenour of theſe wordes following.

An other day aſsigned for the examinates to appeare.

Proceſſe made by the Aarchb. againſt Iohn Aſheton.

In the name of God: we William by Gods permiſſiõ, Archb. of Cant. Primate of all England, Legate of the ſee Apoſtolicall, and through all our prouince of Cant. of all heretical prauitie chiefe Inquiſitour: do moniſh & cite thee, Iohn Aſheton maiſter of arte, and ſtudent in diuinitie appearing before vs, iudicially to ſay and ſpeake the playne veritie touching theſe concluſions to the which we doe referre thee: and to the which we haue cauſed thee to ſweare, laying thy hand vpon a booke: as being alſo otherwiſe by vs admoniſhed and commaunded to keepe this daye and place by vs appointed, for the third time peremptorily, to propone ſuch reaſonable cauſe (if thou haſt any) wherefore thou oughteſt not to be pronounced an hereticke. And ſufficiently and lawfully we moniſh and cite thee, the firſt, ſecond and third time, and that peremptorily, that thou, fully and playnely (all ſubtill, ſophiſticall, and logicall wordes ſet apart) doe aunſwere vnto the ſame concluſions, vnder the payne that vnto ſuch concluſions belong & on thy part confeſſed; and that thou for ſuche concluſions oughteſt to ſuffer. Which monition, being thus premiſed: The ſayde Archbiſhop read the firſt concluſion, and of the ſayd Iohn inquired what was his opinion and meaning therein, and thereupon he ſaid his minde concerning the foreſayd monition. Then, the foreſaid Iohn Aſheton being often required by the archbiſhop that he woulde aunſwere in the Latine tongue to thoſe queſtions which were demaunded of him, becauſe of the lay people that ſtood about him: he crying out into the Engliſhe tongue, vttered friuolous and approbrious contumelies to moue and excite the people againſt the ſaid Archbiſhop as it ſhould ſeem. Neyther did he vnto the firſt concluſion nor vnto any of theſe other concluſions, effectually and pertinently ſeeme to them to aunſwere: but rather by the ſubtilties & ſhiftes, ſaying oftentimes and as expreſly as Luke did, it was ſufficiẽt for him to beleue as the holy Church beleued. Then the ſaid Archbiſhop examined him vpon the firſt concluſion touching yͤ Sacrament of the aulter: whether, that after the wordes of conſecration, there remayneth materiall bread particuler bread, or vniuerſall bread? He ſayde the matter paſſed his vnderſtanding, and therefore ſaid: he woulde in that forme and maner aunſwere and other wiſe not. But amongeſt other things, he ſpake in deriding wiſe vnto the ſaid Archb. againſt this worde Materiall, ſaying, you may put that in your purſe if you haue any. Whereupon the ſaid Archbiſhop, calling that an vnwiſe and fooliſhe aunſwere as the reſt of the doctors did (of whome mention was made before) rather for that he was a graduat in the ſchooles, farther proceeded againſt the ſaid Iohn Aſheton in this wiſe.

I. Aſheton ſeuerally examined.

The Archb. and his Friers doe flee the Engliſh tongue for the people.

Whether materiall bread remaine in the ſacrament.

And thou Iohn Aſheton moniſhed and commaunded by vs as is aforeſayd, after thine oth taken: without anye reaſonable cauſe or any other other licence, neither wouldeſt thou nor yet will, but refuſed and yet doeſt contemptuouſly, to aunſwere vnto ſuch concluſions before vs, iudicially according to our monition & commandement aforeſad doe hold all ſuch concluſions by thee confeſſed, & thee the foreſaid Iohn with all thy ſaid concluſions, conuicted. And therfore we do pronounce and declare by ſentence geuing, that thou Iohn Aſhton cõcerning thoſe cõcluſions, which by vs with good deliberation of diuers prelates our ſuffraganes, and alſo diuers and ſondry profeſſours of diuinitie, and other wiſe men and learned in the lawe according to yͤ Canonicall ſanctions, being condemned and declared for an hereticke and hereticall: to haue bene and ſtill is, an hereticke, and thy concluſions heretical. And as touching thy other concluſions by vs hertofore counted erroneous, and for erroneous condemned: we doe pronounce and declare ſententially by theſe our writinges, that doth thou haſt erred and doeſt erre.

Vpon the ſame 20. day of Iune in the yeare and place aboue recited: the foreſaid Lord of Caunterbury being deſirous, as he pretended to be informed by Thomas Hilmã bacheler of diuinitie there being preſent and ſomewhat fauouring the ſaid M. Iohn Aſheton what his iudgement & opinion was touching yͤ foreſaid concluſions: prefixed and aſſigned vnto the ſaid Thomas (for that time demaunding the ſame deliberation and day) 8. dayes after, that is to ſay, the 28. of the ſaid month: that he appeare before the Biſhop of Cant. whereſoeuer within his ſaid prouince of Canterbury, he ſhould then happen to be, to declare playnely and fully what his iudgement and opinion was, touching the foreſaid concluſions. 28. day of Iune. an. 1382.

The Friday next following, that is to ſay, the 28. day of Iune: the foreſaid M. Nicholas, Phillip, and Thom. Hilman, appeared before the ſaid Archb. and lord Inquiſitour of Canterbury, in the chappell of his manor of Otfurd, in the Dioces of Canterbury, there ſitting in his Tribunall ſeat. To whom the ſayd biſhop of Canterbury ſaying, that for becauſe at that time he had not the preſence & aſſiſtence of the doctors in diuinitie, and of the Canon and ciuil law: He continued the ſayd buſines touching the ſayd Nicholas Phillip, and Thomas, in the ſame ſtate wherin thē it was till Teweſday next & immediately enſuing: that is to ſay, the firſt day of July, the yeare of the Lord aboueſayd; and prefixed vnto the ſaid Nicholas, Phillip, and Thomas Hilman the ſame day to appeare before him, whereſoeuer within his prouince of Caunterb. he ſhould then chaunce to be, to do that whiche vppon the ſayd 18. day, they were purpoſed to doe together or a part.

The 1. day of Iuly, an 1312.

Which Tueſday being come, the foreſaid Archb. in the chiefe houſe of his Churche at Canterbury, before the houre of 9. with the doctours, whoſe names are vnder conteined and other Clerkes a great multitude: Expected the foreſaid Nicholas, Phillip, and Thomas, long time by the bedle calling them and looking after them. Who neuertheleſſe appeared not before two of the clocke after dinner the ſame day, continuing the foreſayd buſines in the priſtine ſtate til the ſame houre. At which houre the foreſaid Archbiſhop of Cant. hauing aſſiſtentes, the doctors, & clerkes, vnder recited: examined the foreſayd maiſter Thomas Hilman, thē and there iudicially appearing, what his opiniō was touching the foreſayd concluſions: who at them and the meaning of them ſomewhat ſtammering, at laſt, to all and ſinguler the ſame concluſions then to him red and expounded thus aunſwered. J ſuppoſe and iudge all & ſinguler thoſe concluſions lately condemned by my Lord of Canterbury that now is, together with the coūſaile and conſent of hys clerkes, to be hereticall and erroneous, euē as the ſame my Lord of Caunterbury, and other doctours of Diuinitie of the Canon and ciuill law, by common conſent & counſaile haue ſuppoſed and thought. And that the ſame (being for hereſies and errours as before is ſayd condemned) doe as much as in me is condemne: proteſting that J will holde and affirme the contrary of thoſe cōcluſions, & in the ſame fayth liue and dye. Then ſayd the archbiſhop of Caunterbury, then & there ſitting as Tribunall or iudge, pronouncing the ſaid maiſters Nicholas and Phillip (long in court called before and taried for, and yet not appearing) guilty of contumacy and diſobedience: excommunicated them for the penaltie of this their cōtumacie, in tenor of theſe wordes following.

The anſwere of Tho. Hilman.

Nic. Hereford and Phil. Repington for not appearing excommunicated.

We William by the grace of God archbiſhop of Caunterbury, Primate of Englande, Legate of the Apoſtolicall ſee, and thorough all our prouince of Canterbury, of al hereticall prauitie chiefe Jnquiſitour: Do pronounce maiſter Nicholas Herford, and maiſter Phillip Repingdon, profeſſours of diuinitie, hauing this day and place by our prefiction appoynted to heare & decree in this buſines of hereticall prauitie (being in Court by our Bedle long called & taried for, and yet not appearing) to be ſtubburne and diſobedient perſons: and for the penalty of this their contumacie, we do excommunicate them and either of them by theſe preſentes.

The excommunication of Herforde & Repington, denoūced at Pauls croſſe.

Againſt this blind excommunication of the ſaid archb. the parties excommunicate, commenced and exhibited their appeale vnto the biſhop of Rome. Which appeale of theirs as inſufficient, or rather to him vnpleaſaunt, the ſaid archbiſhop vtterly reiected (as might oftētimes ouercommeth right) proceeding in his preconceaued excommunication againſt thē, and writing moreouer his letters to hym that ſhould preach next at Paules croſſe, as is aforeſaid, to denounce and to publiſhe openly the ſaid Nicholas Herford, and Phillip Repington to be excommunicate, for that not appearing and theyr terme aſſigned. Whiche was in the 13. day of the month of July.

Hitherto no lawe to burne any man for religion.

The archb. yet not contented with this, doth moreouer by all meanes poſſible, ſollicite the king to ioyne withall, the power of his temporall ſword, for that he well perceaued, that hitherto as yet the popiſhe Clergy had no authoritie ſufficient by any publique law or Statute of thys land to procede vnto death againſt anye perſon whatſoeuer, in caſe of Religion, but onely by the vſurped tyranny and example of the court of Rome. Rich.2. where among ſundry other Statutes then publiſhed and yet remayning in the printed bookes of Statutes, this ſuppoſed Statute is to be found Cap.5.& vltimo. as followeth.

The firſt law to be found practiſed by the clergy for burning the profeſſours of religion. An.5. R. ſecundi. This ſtatute was made by the clergie without conſent or knowledge of the commons.

Item forasmuch as, it is openly knowne that there be diuerſe euill perſons within the realme going from county to countie and from Towne to Towne in certayn habites vnder diſſimulation of great holineſſe and without the licence of the ordinaries of the places or other ſufficient authoritie, preaching dayly not onely in Churches & churchyardes, but alſo in markets, fayres, and other open places where a great congregation of people is (diuers ſermons contayning hereſies and notorious errours to the great emblemiſhing of Chriſten fayth and deſtruction of the lawes, and of the eſtate of holy Churche to the great perill of the ſoules of the people and of all the realme of England as more plainly is found and ſufficiently proued before the reuerend father in God the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury and the biſhops and other prelates maiſters of Diuinitie, and doctors of Canon & of ciuil law, and a great part of the clergy of the ſaid Realme ſpecially aſſembled for this great cauſe, which perſons do alſo preach diuers matters of ſlaunder to engender diſcorde and diſcention betwixt diuers eſtates of the ſaid realme as well ſpirituall as temporall, in exciting of the people to the great peril of all the Realme, which preachers cited or ſummoned before the ordinaries of the places thereto: aunſwere of that whereof they be impeached, they will not obey to their ſommons & commandementes, nor care not for their monitions nor cenſures of the holy Church, but expreſſely deſpiſe them. And moreouer by their ſubtile and ingenious wordes doe drawe the people to heare theire Sermons, and doe mayntayne them in their errours by ſtrong hand and by great rowtes It is ordayned & aſſented in this preſent parliament, that the kinges commiſſions be made and directed to the Sheriffes and other miniſters of our ſoueraigne Lord the king or other ſufficiēt perſons learned, and according to the certifications of the prelates therof to be made in the Chauncery from time to time to areſt all ſuch preachers, and alſo their fautours, mayntaynours, and abbettours, and doe hold them in arreſt and ſtrong priſon till they wil iuſtify to them according to the law and reaſon of holy Church. And the king will and commaund that the Chauncellour make ſuch commiſſions at all times that he by the Prelates or any of them ſhalbee certified and thereof required as is aforeſaid.

Note that this ſtatute was repealed afterwardes at the inſtance of the commons.

✽ An examination of the foreſayd ſuppoſed Statute and of the inualiditie therof.

Which ſuppoſed ſtatute for as muche as it was the principall ground whereuppon proceeded all the perſecution of that time, it is therefore not impertinent to examine the ſame more perticularly, wherby ſhall appeare that as the ſame was fraudulently and vnduly deuiſed by the Prelates onely: ſo was it in like maner moſt iniuriouſly and vnorderly executed by them. For immediately vpon the publiſhing of this lawe, without further warrant eyther from the king or his councell, commiſſions vnder the great ſeale of England were made in this forme. Richard by the grace of God &c. vt patet act pag. 541. Witneſſe my ſelf at Weſtminſter the 26. day of Iune in the ſixt yeare of our raigne. Without more wordes of warrant vnder written ſuch as in like caſes are both vſuall and requiſite. Viz. per ipſum Regem: per Regem & Concilium: or per breue de priuato Sigillo: all or any of which wordes being vtterly wanting in this place as may be ſeene in the kinges Recordes of that time: it muſt therfore be done eyther by warrant of this foreſayd Statute, or els without any warrant at all. Whereupon it is to be noted, that wheras the ſaid Statute appointed the commiſſions to be directed to the Sheriffe, or other miniſters of the kings, or to other ſufficient perſons learned for the areſting of ſuche perſons: the ſayd commiſſions are directed to the Archbiſhop and his Suffragans, being as it appeareth parties in the caſe, autoriſing thē further without either the wordes or reaſonable meaning of the ſayde Statute to impriſon them in their owne houſes or where els pleaſed them.

No vſuall wordes of warrant affixed to this cōmiſſion.

In the Vtas of S. Michell next following at a parliament ſummoned and holden at Weſtminſter the ſixt yeare of the ſaid king, among ſondry petitions made to the king by his commons, whereunto he aſſented, there is one in this forme. Articl. 52.

Item, prayen the commons, that wheras an Eſtatute was made the laſt parliament in theſe wordes. It is ordayned in this preſent Parliament that commiſſions from the king be directed to the Sheriffes and other miniſters of the king or to other ſufficient perſons ſkilfull, and according to the certificates of the Prelates thereof to be made vnto the Chauncerie from time to time to areſt all ſuche preachers & theyr fautoures maintenors and abbettours. And them to deteine in ſtrong priſon, vntill they will iuſtifie themſelues according to reaſō, & law of holy church. And the king willeth and commaundeth that the Chauncellor make ſuch commiſſions at all times as ſhalbe by the prelates or any of them certified and thereof required as is aforeſayd. The which was neuer agreed nor graunted by the commons: but what ſoeuer was moued therein was without their aſſent. That ẏ ſaid ſtatute be therfore diſanulled. The petition of the commons for the repealing the foreſayd ſtatute.

The ſtatute repealed.

The K. ratifieth the repeale.

Hereby notwithſtanding the former vniuſt lawe of Anno.5. was repealed, and the fraude of the framers therof ſufficiently diſcouered: yet ſuch meanes was there made by the prelates, that this acte of Repeale was neuer publiſhed nor euer ſithence imprinted with the reſt of the ſtatutes of that Parliament. In ſo much as the ſayd Repeale being concealed, like commiſſions and other proces were made from time to time by vertue of the ſayd Baſterd ſtatute aſwel during al the raign of this king as euer ſithence againſt the profeſſors of religion: As ſhall hereafter by the grace of God appeare in the ſecond yeare of king Henry the fourth, where the Clergy purſued the like practiſe. And now againe to the ſtory of our Oxford Diuines, and of the Archbiſhop to whom the king writeth his letters patents firſt to the Archbiſhop then to the Vicechauncellor of Oxford in forme as followeth.

✽ The kinges letters patentes to the Archbiſhop.

Richard by the grace of God king of England and Lord of Ireland: To all thoſe to whome theſe preſent letters ſhall come, greeting. By the petition of the reuerend father in God, William Archb. of Caunterbury, Primate of England exhibited vnto vs, we right well vnderſtand: That diuers and ſondry concluſions very contrary to wholeſome doctrine and redounding both to the ſubuerſion of the Catholike fayth, the holy Church, and his prouince of Cant. in diuers and ſundry places of ths ſame of his prouince haue bene openly and publiquely preached, although damnably preached. Of the which concluſions, ſome as hereſies, other ſome as errours haue bene condemned: but not before good and mature deliberation firſt therein had and vſed, and by common counſaile of the ſaid Archbiſhop, his ſuffragans and many doctors in diuinitie and other clerkes and learned men in the holy Scriptures, were ſententially and holeſomely declared. Whereupon the ſayd Archbiſhop hath made his ſupplication vnto vs: that both for the coertion and due caſtigation of ſuch as ſhall henceforth of an obſtinate minde preach or mayntaine the foreſaid concluſions that we would vouchſafe to put to the arme and helping hand of our kingly power. We therefore moued by the zeale of the catholicke faith, whereof we be and will be defendours, and vnwilling that any ſuch hereſies or errours ſhoulde ſpring vp within the limites of our dominion: Geue and graunt ſpeciall licence and authoritie by the tenour of theſe preſentes, vnto the foreſayd Archbiſhop, and to his Suffraganes, to areſt and impriſon either in their owne priſons or any other, all and euery ſuch perſon and perſons as ſhall either priuely or apertly preach and mayntayne the foreſayd concluſions ſo condemned, and the ſame perſons ſo impriſoned there at their pleaſures to detayne, till ſuch time as they ſhall repent them and amend them of ſuche hereticall prauities, or els ſhall be of ſuche areſtes by vs and our counſaile otherwiſe determined and prouided. Further charging and commaunding all and ſinguler our liegemen miniſters, and ſubiectes, of what ſtate and condition ſo euer they be, vpon their fidelitie & allegeance wherin they ſtand bound to vs: that by no meanes they eyther fauour, counſayle, or helpe the preachers or els mayntayners of the ſayde concluſions ſo condemned or their fauourers, vpon payn and forfaiture of all that euer they haue: But that they obey and humbly attend vpon the ſaid Archbiſhop, his Suffraganes, and miniſters in the execution of theſe preſentes, ſo that due and maniſeſt publication agaynſt the foreſaid concluſions and their mayntayners,

An other letter of the K. to the Vicechancellor.

THe king: To the Chauncellour and the procuratours of the vniuerſitie of Oxford which now be, or for the time being ſhall be: Greeting, Moued by the zeale of chriſtian fayth, whereof we be and alwayes will be defenders, and for our ſoules health induced thereunto, hauing a great deſire to repreſſe, and by condigne puniſhmēt to reſtraine the impugners of the foreſaid fayth, which newly and wickedly go about and preſume to ſow their naughty and peruerſe doctrine within our kingdome of England, and to preach and hold damnable concluſions ſo notoriouſly repugnant and contrary to the ſame faith, to the peruerting of our ſubiectes and people as we vnderſtand: Before they any further proceed in their malicious errours, or els infect others: We haue by theſe preſentes appoynted you to be inquiſitour generall (all the chiefe diuines of the ſayd vniuerſitie being your aſsiſtents) and the ſame likewiſe to be done of all and ſingular the Graduates, Diuines, & lawyers of the ſame vniuerſitie. And if they ſhall know any which be of the iuriſdiction of the ſayd vniuerſitie of Oxford, whiche be probable of them to be ſuſpected in the fauour, belyefe, or defence of anye hereſie or errour, and eſpecially of any of the concluſions publiquely condemned by the reuerend Father, William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by the Counſaile of his Clergye, or els of any other concluſion like vnto anye of them in meaning or in wordes: and that if henceforth you ſhall finde any that ſhall beleue: fauoure, or defend anye of the foreſayd hereſies or errours or anye other ſuche like, or els which ſhall be ſo bolde to receaue into their houſes and Innes Maiſter Iohn Wickliffe, M. Nich. Herforde, M Phillip Repingdon, or M. Iohn Aſheton, or anye other noted by probable ſuſpicion of anye the foreſayd hereſies or erroures, or any other like vnto them in meaning or in worde: Or that ſhall preſume to communicate wirh anye of them, or els to defend or fauour anye of ſuche fauourers, receauers communicantes and defendours: within 7. dayes after the ſame ſhal appeare and be manifeſt vnto you, to baniſh and expell them from the Vniuerſitie and towne of Oxford, till ſuch time as they ſhall declare their innocency before the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury for the time being, by manifeſt purgation. So notwithſtanding, that ſuch as be compelled to purge themſelues, you certifie vs and the ſayd archbiſhop vnder your ſeales, frō time to time within one month that they be ſuch maner of men. Commaunding furthermore, that thorough all the halles of the ſayd vniuerſitie, ye cauſe dilligently to be ſearched and inquired out of hād: If any man haue any book or tractation of the Edition or compiling of the foreſayd M. Iohn Wickliffe, or Nicholas Herford: and that when and wherſoeuer ye ſhall chaunce to finde any ſuch booke or tractation, ye cauſe the ſame to be areſted and taken, and vnto the foreſayd Archbiſhop within one month (without correction, corruption, or mutation, whatſoeuer) word for word, & ſentēce for ſentence, to be brought and preſented And therefore we ſtraightly enioine and command you, vpon your fidelitie and allegeaunce wherein ye ſtand bound vnto vs, and vpon payne of forfaiture of all and ſinguler your liberties and priuilegies of your ſayde vniuerſitie, and of all that euer you haue beſides: that you geue your diligent attendance vpō the premiſſes, and that well and faythfully you execute the ſame in maner and forme aforeſayd. And that you obey the foreſayde Archbiſhop, and his lawfull and honeſt mandates, that he ſhall thinke good to direct vnto you in this behalfe, as it is meete ye ſhould. And we geue in charge vnto the Vicechauncellour and Mayor of Oxford for the time being, and to all and ſinguler our Sheriffes, vnderſheriffes, Bayliffes, and ſubiectes, by theſe preſents: that they ayde, obey, and be attendaunt vpon you in the execution of the premiſſes. * Matters incident of Robert Rigges, Vicechauncellor of Oxford. Nicholas Herford, and Phillip Repington, with other.

Rob. Rigs Vicechauncellour of Oxford.

THe vicechauncelor the ſame time in Oxforde was M. Robert Rigges. The 2. proctors were Iohn Huntman, & walter Diſhe, who then as farre as they durſt, fauoured the cauſe of Iohn wickliffe and yͤ ſide. In ſo much yͭ the ſame time and yeare, which was an. 1382. when certaine publicke ſermons ſhould be appoynted cuſtomably at yͤ feaſt of the Aſcention, and of Corpus Chriſti, to be preached in the cloyſter of S. Frideſwyde (now called Chriſts church) before the people, by the vicechanceller aforeſayd & the proctoures (the doinges thereof the vicechauncellor aforeſaid and proctors had committed to Phillip Repington, and N. Her. ſo yͭ N. Her. ſhold preach on yͤ Aſcention day, and Repington vpō Corpus Chriſti day) Firſt Herford beginning was noted to defend Iohn wickliffe, opēly to be a faythful, good, & innocent man: for the which no ſmall adoe with outcries was amongſt the Fryers. This Herford, after he had long fauoured & mayntayned wickliffes part, grew firſt in ſuſpicion amongſt the enemies of the truth. For aſſone as he began ſomewhat liberally and freely to pronounce & vtter any thing which tended to the defence of wickliffe, by and by the Carmelites, and al the orders of religion were in his top, and laid not a few hereſies vnto his charge, the which they had ſtrayned here and there out of his ſermons, & had cōpyled together in a certaine forme, by the handes of a certayne notaries, through the induſtry & diligence of one Peter Stokes a Carmelite a kind of people prone & ready to all kinde of miſchiefe, vprores, debate, and diſcention. After this the feaſt of Corpus Chriſti drue neare, vppon which day it was looked for that Repington ſhould preach. This man was a Canon of Leiceſter, & had before taken his firſt degree vnto Doctorſhip: who preaching the ſame time at Bradgate for the ſame Sermon he became firſt ſuſpected, and hated of the Phariſaicall broode of the Fryers. But through the great amd notable dexteritie of his wit, (which all men did behold and ſee in him) accompanied with like modeſty and honeſty: he did ſo ouercome, or at the leaſt aſſwage thys cruelty and perſecution whiche was towardes him, that ſhortly after, by the conſent of the whole fellowſhip, he was admitted doctour. who as ſoone as he had taken it vpon him, by and by he ſtepped forth in the ſchooles, and began immediately to ſhewe forth and vtter, that whiche he had long hidden and diſſembled. Proteſting opēly, that in all morall matters, he would defend wickliffe. But as touching the ſacrament he woulde as yet hold his peace, vntill ſuche time as the Lorde ſhall otherwiſe illuminate the hartes and mindes of the clergye.

Ni. Herford preaching on the Aſcenſion day, defended Wickliffe.

Repington firſt Chanō of Leiceſter, after B. of Lincolne.

Repington commenſed Doctor.

Nowe the day of Corpus Chriſti aforeſayd approching neare, when the Fryers vnderſtood that this man ſhould preach ſhortly, fearing leaſt that he would rub the galles of their religion, they conuented with the Archb. of Cant. that the ſame day a little before that Phillip ſhold preach, wickliffes concluſions which were priuately condemned, ſhould be openly diffamed in the preſence of the whole vniuerſitie. The doing of which matter, was committed to Peter Stokes Fryer, ſtonderd bearer and chiefe champion of that ſide againſt wickliffe.

Peter Stokes ſtanderd bearer to the papiſts.

There were alſo letters ſent vnto the commiſſary, that he ſhould: helpe and ayde him in publiſhing of the ſame concluſions, as is before declared.

These thinges thus done and finiſhed, Repingdon at the houre appointed proceeded to his ſermon. In ẏ which ſermon among many other thinges, he was reported to haue vttered theſe ſayinges, or to this effect

Notes of the Sermon of Repington.

That the Popes or Byſhops ought not to be recommended aboue temporall Lordes.

Alſo that in morall matters he woulde defend maiſter Wickliffe as a true Catholicke doctor.

Moreouer that the Duke of Lancaſter was very earneſtly affected and minded in this matter, and would that all ſuch ſhould be receaued vnder hys protection: Beſides many thinges moe which touched the prayſe and defence of Wickliffe.

And finally, in concluding his ſermon, he dimiſſed the people with this ſentence: I will (ſayd he) in the ſpeculatiue doctrine, as appertayning to the matter of the ſacrament of the aulter, keep ſilence and hold my peace, vntill ſuch time as God otherwiſe ſhall inſtruct and illuminate the hartes of the Clergie.

When the ſermon was done, Repington entred into Saint Frideſwides Church, accompanied with many of his friendes: who, as the enemies ſurmiſed, were priuilye weaponed vnder their garmentes, if need had bene. Frier Stokes the Carmelite aforeſayd, ſuſpecting all this to be againſt him, and being afrayd of hurt, kept to himſelf win the ſanctuary of the church, not daring as then to put out his hed. The Vicechauncellor and Repington, friendly ſaluting one an other in the church porch, ſent away the people, and ſo departed euery man home to his owne houſe. There was not a little ioy thorough the whole vniuerſitie for that ſermon, but in the meanetime, the vnquiet & buſie Carmelite, ſlept not his matter. For firſt by his letters he declared the whole order of the matter vnto the archbiſhop exaggerating the perils and daungers that he was in, requiring and deſiring his helpe and ayd, pretermitting nothing, wherby to moue & ſtirre vp the archbiſhops minde, which of his owne nature was as hote as a toſte as they ſay, and ready inough to proſecute the matter of his owne accord, though no man had prickt him forward thereunto. Beſides all this (3. dayes after) with a fierce and bold courage, the ſayd Fryer breathing out threatninges and hereſies agaynſt them, tooke the way vnto the ſchooles: mynding there to proue, that the Pope and the Biſhops ought to be prayed for before the Lordes temporall. Whiles thys Frier was thus occupyed in the ſchooles, he was mocked and derided of all men, and ſhortly after he was ſent for by the Archbiſhop to London: whom immediately after, the Vicechauncellor & Brightwell followed vp, to purge and cleare themſelues and their adherentes from the accuſations of this Frier Peter. At the length they being examined vpon Wickliffes concluſions ẏ were condemned: they did all conſent, that they were worthily condemned. The Vicechauncelor being afterward accuſed for the contempt of the Archbiſhops letters, when as he perceaued & ſawe, that no excuſe would preuayle to auoyd that daunger, hūbling himſelfe vpon his knees, he deſired pardon. The which when he had now againe (as is aforeſaid) albeit very hardly obtayned: By the help of the Biſhop of Wincheſter, he was ſent away agayn with certayne commandementes, and ſuſpencions of heretickes. Then began the hatred on eyther part ſomewat to appeare and ſhew, and ſpecially all men were offended, and in the toppes of theſe Friers and religious men, vpō whom whatſoeuer trouble or miſchiefe was rayſed vp, they did impute it as to ẏ authors and cauſers of the ſame. Amongeſt whome there was one Henry Crompe, a monke Ciſtertion, a well learned deuine, which afterward was accuſed by the Byſhops of hereſie, He at that time was openly ſuſpected by the Commiſſary, becauſe in his lectures he called the heretickes Lolardes, from his actes (as they terme them) in the ſchoole. Then he comming by and by vp to London, made his complaynt vnto the Archbiſh. and to the kinges councell.

The vniuerſitie reioyſeth.

Whether the Lordes temporall were to be prayed for before the P. and Byſhops.

The Fryer derided and mocked in the ſcholes.

Religious men firſt cauſers of this trouble.

H. Crompe firſt an accuſer of other, after accuſed himſelfe for hereſie.

Whereupon he obtayning the letters of the king, and of his counſaile, by the vertue therof (returning againe to the vniuerſity) was releaſed & reſtored again to his former ſtate: the wordes of whiche letter here followeth vnder written.

The kynges letter to the Vicechauncelor and proctors of Oxford.

THe king to the Vicechauncellour and procuratoure of the Vniuerſitie of Oxforde, greeting. Where as we of late vnderſtanding by the grieuous complaynt of Henry Crompe monke and regent in deuinitie within the ſayd vniuerſitie, howe that he, being aſsiſted by the reuerend father in God the Archb. of Cant. and by other clerkes and deuines in the City of London, to proceede in thee condemnation of certayne concluſions erroneous and hereticall, hath bene therfore moleſted by you: And that you through ſiniſter ſuggeſtion of ſome aduerſaryes (pretending the peace of the ſayd vniuerſitie) to haue bene broken by the ſayde Henry in his laſt lecture: did therefore call him before you to appeare and anſwere: and for his not appearing, did therefore pronounce him as obſtinate, and conuicte of peace breaking: alſo haue ſuſpended the ſayd Henry from his lectures, and all ſcholaſticall actes. And whereas we, by our writte did call you vp for the ſame, to appeare and aunſwere before our counſayle, vnto the premiſſes: ſo that all thinges being well tryed and examined by the ſayd counſayle, it was found and determined, that all your proceſſe agaynſt the ſayd Henry, was voyde and of none effecte: and commaundement geuen, that the ſayd Henry ſhoulde be reſtored and admitted agayne to his former lectures and ſcholaſticall actes. and to his priſtine ſtate as you knowe. To the intent therefore that this decree aforeſaid ſhoulde be more duely executed of your part, we heare by theſe preſentes ſtraightly charge and commaund you: That you ſpeedily reuoking agayne all your proceſſe againſt the ſayd Henry in the vniuerſitie aforeſayd, with all other that followed thereof: doe admitte and cauſe to be reſtored agayne the ſayd Henry to his ſcholaſticall actes, his accuſtomed lectures and priſtine eſtate, without all delay according to the forme of the decree and determination aforeſayd. Enioyning you moreouer and your commiſſaries or deputies and your ſucceſſoures, and all other maiſters regent and not regent, and other preſidentes, officers, miniſters, and ſcholers of the vniuerſitie aforeſayd, vpon your faith and legeance you owe vnto vs that you doe not impeache, moleſt, or greeue, or cauſe to be greued (any maner of way, priuy or apertly) the ſayd Frier Henry for the cauſes premiſed, or Frier Peter Stokes Carmelite, for the occaſion of his abſence from the vniuerſitie, or Fryer Stephen Packingtō Carmelite, or any other religious or ſecular perſon fauouring them, vpon the occaſion of any eyther word or deed whatſoeuer, concerning the doctrine of maiſter Iohn Wickliffe, Nicholas Herford and Phillip Repindon, or the reproſe and condemnation of their hereſies and erroures, or the correction of their fauourers But that you doe procure the peace, vnitie and quiet, within the ſayd vniuerſitie, and chiefly betweene the religious and ſecular perſons: and that you with all diligence nouriſhe, encreaſe, and preſerue the ſame to the vttermoſt of your ſtrength And that you in no caſe omitte to doe it accordingly, vppon the forfaytures of all and ſingular the liberties and priuiledgies of the vniuerſitie aforeſayd. Witneſſe my ſelfe at Weſtminſter the 14. day of Iuly.

Henry Crompe complayneth to the kings counſell of the moſt ſecular maiſters of Oxford.

Henry Crompe, Peter Stokes, Carm, Steuen Packington Carm. reſtored by the King to their ſcholaſticall actes.

Mention was made, as you heard a little before, how M. Rigges Vicechancellor of Oxford, comming vp wyth M. Bryghtwell to the archb. of Cant. was there ſtraightly examined of the concluſions of Wickliffe, where he notwithſtanding through the helpe of the B. of Wint. obtayned pardon, and was ſent away agayn with commaundementes and charges, to ſeeke out all the fauorers of Iohn Wickliffe. This commaundement being receaued, Nicholas Herford, and Phillip Repington (being priuily warned by the ſayd Vicechauncellor) in the meane ſeaſon cōueied them out of ſight, and fled to the Duke, of Lācaſter for ſuccour & help, but the Duke whether for feare, or what cauſe els, I cannot ſay, in the end forſooke his poore and miſerable clientes.

Herford & Repington fled to the Duke of Lancaſter.

In the meane time, while they were fled thus to the Duke, great ſearch and inquiſition was made for them to cite and to apprehend them where ſo euer they might be found. Wherupon, the archb. of W. Courtney directed out his letters firſt to the Vicechauncellor of Oxford, then to the Biſhop of London named Rob. Braybroke charging them not onely to excommunicate the ſayd Nicholas and Phillip, within their iuriſdiction, and the ſayd excommunication to be denounced likewiſe throughout all the dioces of his ſuffraganes: but alſo moreouer, that dilligent ſearch and watch ſhould be layd for them, both in Oxforde and in Londō, that they might be apprehended: requiring moreouer by them to be certified agayne, what they had done in the premiſſes. And thys was written the 14. day of Iuly. an. 1382. Ex Regiſt.

The 14. day of Iuly. an. 1382.

Unto theſe letters receaued from the archbiſhop, dilligent certificat was geuen accordingly, as well of the Byſhop of London his part, as alſo of the Vicechauncellor, the tenour whereof was this.

❀ The letter certificatorie of the Vicechauncellor to the Archbiſhop.

The letter of Rob. Rigges Vicechauncelor to the Archb.

TO the reuerend father in Chriſt, Lord William Archbiſhop of Caunterbury Primate of all England, and Legate of the Apoſtolique poſtolique ſee, Rob. Rigges profeſſour of diuinitie, and Vicechancellor of the vniuerſitie of Oxforde, greeting with due honour. Your letters bearing the date of the 14. of Iuly I haue receaued: By the authoritie wherof, I haue denounced and cauſed to be denounced effectually, the foreſayd Nicholas and Phillip, to haue bene and to be excommunicate publikely and ſolemnly in the Church of S. Mary: and in the ſchooles, and to be cited alſo perſonally, if by any meanes they might be apprehended, according as you commaunded. But after dilligent ſearch layd for them of my part to haue them perſonally cited and apprehended, I coulde not finde neyther the ſayd M. Nicholas, not M. Phillip: who haue hyd or conuayed themſelues, vnknowing to me, as here is well knowne. Whereof I thought here to geue ſignification to your Fatherhoode. Sealed and teſtified with the ſeale of mine office. From Oxford the 25. of Iuly.

The 25. day of Iuly. an. 1382. Herford & Repington repulſed from the Duke of Lancaſter.

In yͤ meane time Nicholas Herford, and Repington being repulſed of the Duke, and deſtitute (as was ſayde) of his ſupportation, whether they were ſent, or of theyr owne accorde went to the archbiſh. it is vncertayne. This I finde in a letter of the foreſayd archbiſhop, contayned in his regiſter: that Repington the the 23. day of October the ſame yeare 1382. was reconciled agayne to the Archbiſhop and alſo by his generall letter was releaſed and admitted to his ſcholaſticall actes in the vniuerſitie. And ſo was alſo Iohn Aſhton, of whom (Chriſt willing) more ſhall follow hereafter. Of Nicholas Herford all this while I finde no ſpeciall relation.

The 23. day of October. Repington releaſed by the Archb. I. Aiſheton reconciled by the Archbiſhop.

A parliament ſummoned. The 15. of October. 1382.

In the meane time, about the 23. of the month of September the ſayd yeare, the king ſent his mandate to the Archbiſhop for collecting of a ſubſidie and to haue a conuocation of the clergie ſommoned, againſt the next parliament, which ſhould begin the 18. day of Nouember. The Archb. likewiſe on the 15. day of October, directed his letters monitorie (as the maner is) to Robert Braybroke biſhop of London, to geue the ſame admonition to al his ſuffraganes and other of the Clergie within his prouince for the aſſembling of the conuocatiō aforeſayd. All which done and executed, the parliamēt begon being holden at Oxford the 18. day of Nouember, where the conuocation was kept in the Monaſtery of Frideſwide in Oxforde. In the which conuocation, the Archbiſhop with the other biſhops there ſitting in their Pontificalibus, declared two cauſes of that their preſent aſſembly, whereby (ſayth he) to repreſſe hereſies, which began newly in the realme to ſpring, and for correcting other exceſſes in the Churche. The other cauſe (ſayd he) was to ayde and ſupport the king with ſome neceſſary ſubſidie of mony to be gathered, whiche thus declared, the conuocation was continued till the day following which was the 19. of Nouember.

The conuocation of S. Frideſwide in Oxford. The 18. day of Nouemb.

The 19 day of Nouemb. anno. 1382.

At the ſayd day and place, the Archbiſhop with the other Prelates aſſembling themſelues as before: The archbiſhop after the vſed ſolemnitie, willed the procuratoures of the clergy appoynted for euery dioces, to conſult within themſelues, in ſome conuenient ſeuerall place, what they thought for theyr partes touching yͤ redreſſe of thinges, to be notified and declared to him and to his brethren. &c.

Furthermore, forſomuch (ſayth he) as it is ſo noyſed through all the realme, that there were certayn in the vniuerſitie of Oxford, which did hold and mayntayne concluſions (as he called them) heretical and erroneous condemned by him, and by other lawyers and doctours of Diuinitie. He therfore aſſigned the biſhops of Saram, Herford and Rocheſter, with william Rugge then Vicechauncellour of the Vniuerſitie of Oxford (for belike Robert Rigge was then diſplaced) as alſo william Berton, and Iohn Midleton Doctors: geuing them hys full authoritie wyth curſing and banning, to compell them to ſearch and to enquire with all diligence and wayes poſſible, ouer all & ſingular whatſoeuer, eyther Doctors, Bachellers, or ſcholers of the ſayd vniuerſitie, which did hold, teache, mayntaine and defend, in ſchooles or out of ſchooles, the ſayd cōcluſions heretical (as he called them) or erroneous, and afterward to geue certificat truely and playnly touching the premiſſes. And thus for that day the aſſembly brake vp to the next, and ſo to the next, and the third being monday, the 24. day of Nouember. Ex. Regiſt. W. Courtney.

Rob. Rigge diſplaced from Vicechauncellorſhip.

Inquiſitiō made at Oxford.

The 24. day of Nouēb. an. 1382

On the which day, in the preſence of the Prelates and the clergy in the chapter houſe of Saint Frideſwide, came in Phillip Repington (otherwiſe called of the brethren afterward Rampington) who their abiured the concluſions and aſſertions aforeſayd, in this forme of wordes as followeth.

The abiuration of Philip Repington.

In Dei nomine Amen. I Phillip Repington, Canon of the houſe of Leiceſter, acknowledging one catholique and Apoſtolick fayth do curſe and alſo abiure all hereſie, namely theſe hereſies and errours vnder written, condemned & reproued by the decrees canonicall, and by you moſt reuerend father, touching which hitherto I haue ben diffamed: condemning moreouer & reprouing both them and the authors of them, & doe confeſſe the ſame to be catholically cōdemned: And ſweare alſo by theſe holy Euangelies, which here I hold in my hand, and do promiſe, neuer by any perſwaſions of men, nor by anye way hereafter, to defend or hold as true, anye of the ſayd concluſions vnder written: but do & will ſtand and adhere in all thinges, to the determination of the holy Catholicke Church, and to yours, in this behalfe. Ouer and beſides, all ſuche as ſtand contrary to this fayth, I doe pronounce them with their doctrine & followers worthy of euerlaſting curſe. And if I my ſelfe ſhall preſume at any time to hold or preach any thinge contrary to the premiſſes. I ſhall be content to abide the ſeueritie of the Canons. Subſcribed with mine owne hand, & with mine own accord. Phillip Repington. And thus the ſayd Rampington was diſcharged, who afterward was made Byſhop of Lincolne, and became at length the moſt bitter and extreme perſecutor of this ſide, of al the other biſhops wͭin the realm, as in proces hereafter may appeare.

Philip Repington after his abiuration became a terrible perſecutor.

After the abiuration of this Repington, immediately was brought in Iohn Ayſhton, ſtudent of Diuinitie: who being examined of thoſe concluſions, and willed to ſay hys mynde, aunſwered: that he was to ſimple and ignoraunt, and therefore would not, and could not anſwere any thing clearely or diſtinctly to thoſe concluſions. wherupon, the Archb, aſſigned to him Doctor W. Rugge the Vicechauncellour, and other deuines ſuch as he required himſelfe to be inſtructed in the miſtery of thoſe concluſions againſt the after noone: who then appearing again after dinner before the archbiſhop and the Prelates, did in like ſort and forme of wordes abiure as did Repington before.

A ſhort time my Lord, for a mā in one forenoone to learne a faith againſt his cōſcience.

The abiuration of Iohn Aiſheton.

Ex chron. Monaſt. D. Albani.

I. Aiſheton.

Of this Iohn Ayſhton we read, that afterwarde by Tho. Arundell Archb. of Cant. he was cited and condemned, but whether he dyed in priſō, or was burned, we haue yet no certainty to ſhewe. This is certayne by the playne wordes of the chronicle of S. Albans, that when the arch. with his doctors and fryers ſate in examination vpon this ſayd Iohn Aſhton, in London: the Londiners brake open the dore of the conclaue, ipſumq; Archiepiſcopum in ciuitate ſedentem impediuerunt, cum proceſſum feciſſit contra Iohannē Aſhton. &c. That is and did let the Archbiſhop himſelfe ſitting in the City of London, when he woulde haue made proceſſe agaynſt Iohn Aſheton. an. 1382. And thus muche of Iohn Aſheton.

The Londiners open the dore where the Archb. ſate againſt Ioh. Aiſheton.

As touching Nicholas Herford during the time of this conuocation, he did not appeare: and therefore had the ſentence of excommunication. Agaynſt which he put hys appeale from the archb. to the king and his Counſaile. The Archb. would not admit it, but finding ſtayes and ſtoppes cauſed him to be apprehended and encloſed in priſon. Notwithſtanding through the will of God, and good meanes he eſcaped out of the priſon returning agayn to his former exerciſe, and preaching as he did before, albeit in as couert and ſecret maner as he could. wherupon the Archbiſhop thundring out his boltes of excōmunication agaynſt him, ſendeth to al paſtors and miniſters, willing thē in al churches, and all feſtiuall dayes, to diuulge the ſayd his excommunication againſt him, to al men. writeth moreouer and ſendeth ſpeciall charge to al and ſingular of the laity, to beware that theyr ſimplicity be not deceaued by his doctrine, but that they like Catholicke children will auoyd him, and cauſe him of all other to be auoyded.

Ni. Herford would not appeare.

N. Herforde appealed from the Archb.

Ni. Herford caſt in priſon.

Herford eſcapeth out of priſon.

Furthermore, not contented with this, addreſſeth alſo his letters vnto the king, requiring alſo the ayde of his tēporall ſword to chop of hys neck, whō he had already caſt down. See and note reader, the ſeraphicall charitie of theſe prieſtly prelates towardes yͤ poore redemed flock of Chriſt And yet theſe be they whiche waſhing theyr handes wyth Pylate, ſay and pretend: Nobis non licet interficere quenquá. It is not our partes to kill any man. The copye of the letter written to the king, is this.

The letter of the Archbiſhop to the king.

The cruell letter of the Archb. againſt Nic. Herford to the kyng.

TO the moſt excellent prince in Chriſt, &c. William &c. greeting in him by whom kinges do reigne, & princes beare rule. Vnto your kingly celſitude by the tenour of theſe preſentes we intimate, that one M Nich. Herford D. of diuinitie, for his manifeſt contumacie and offēce in not appearing before vs being called at the day and place aſsigned, therefore is inwrapped in the ſentence of the greater curſe, publiquely by our ordinary authoritie. And in the ſame ſentence hath continued nowe forty dayes, & yet ſtill continueth with indurate hart, wickedly contemning the keyes of the Church, to the great perill both of his ſoule, and to the pernitious example of other. For ſo much therefore, as the holy mother the church hath not to do or to proceed any further in this matter: we humblye deſire your kingly maieſtye, to direct out your letters for the apprehending of the ſayd excommunicat according to the cuſtome of this realme of England, wholſomely obſerued and kept hetherto: to the intent, that ſuch whome the feare of God doth not reſtrayne from euill, the diſcipline of the ſecular arme may bridle and plucke backe from offending. Your princely celſitude the Lord long continue. From Lamheth the 15. of Ianuary.

This is not to ſeeke againe that which is loſt by the rule of Ezechiel.

To this letter of the Archb, might not the king (gentle reader) thus aunſwere agayne, and aunſwere well?

Proſopopoia. What the kyng might haue aunſwered agayne.

YOur letters with your complaynt and requeſtes in the ſame conteyned, we haue receiued and well conſidered. For the accompliſhing wherof, ye ſhall vnderſtand that as we are readely bent to gratify and ſatiſfy your minde in this behalfe on the one ſide: ſo we muſt beware agayne on the other, that our authoritye be not abuſed either to oppreſſe before we know, or to iudge before we haue tryed. Wherfore for ſo much as you in your letters do excite and ſharpen the ſeuere diſcipline of our ſeculer ſword, agaynſt one Nich. Herford, for his not appearing before you: and yet ſhewing in the ſayd your letters no certaine cauſe to vs what you haue to charge him withall: we therfore following the exãple of Alexander Magnus, or rather the rule of equity in opening both our eares indifferently, to heare as well the one part, as the other do aſsigne both to him, when as he may be found, & to you whẽ you ſhalbe called a terme to appeare before vs. To the intẽt that the controuerſy betwene you and him, ſtãding vpon points of religiõ, being tried by the true touchſtone of Gods holy word due correction indifferently may be miniſtred according as the offence ſhall be founde. In the meane time, this we cannot but ſomething maruell at in your ſayde Letters: Firſt, to ſee you mẽ of the Church and Aungels of peace to be ſo deſirous of bloud. Secondly, to conſider you again ſo fierce in proſecuting the breach of your lawe: and yet ſo colde in purſuing the breache of the expreſſe law of God and his commaundementes. Thirdly, to behold the vnſtable doubleneſſe in your proceedings, who pretending in your publick ſentence, to become as intreaters for them to vs in the bowels of Ieſus Chriſt, that we will withdraw from them the rigour of our ſeuerity, and yet in your letters you be they which moſt ſet vs on. If not appearing before you: be ſuch a matter of contumacy in caſe of your lawe, that is in no caſe to bee ſpared: what ſhoulde then our Princely diſcipline haue done to men of your calling? Henry Spencer Biſhop of Norwich, being at Cant. was ſent for by our ſpeciall commaundement to come to our ſpeach, denyed to come, and yet we ſpared him. Iohn Stratforde Archbyſhop your predeceſſour, being required of our progenitour king Edward the third to come to him at Yorke, would not appeare: by the occaſion whereof, Scotland the ſame time was loſt, & yet was he ſuffered. The like might be ſayd of Robert Winchelſey in the dayes of king Edwarde the firſt, and of Edmunde Archb. of Cant in the daies of K. Henry 3. Stephen Langhton was ſent for by K. Iohn to come, he came not. The like cõtumacy was in Becket toward K. Henry. 2. Alſo in Anſelme toward K. Henry. 1 All theſe for theyr not appearing before their princes, ye do excuſe, who notwithſtanding might haue appeared without daunger of life. This one man for not appearing before you, you think worthy of death: whoſe life you would haue cõdemned notwithſtanding, if he had appeared. It is no reaſon if the Squirill climing to the tree from the Lyons clawes, would not appeare, being ſet for to be deuoured: that the Eagle therfore ſhould ſeiſe vpon him without any iuſt cauſe, declared agaynſt the party. Wherfore according to this, and to that aforeſayde when he ſhall appeare, and you be called, and the cauſe iuſtly wayed, due execution ſhall be miniſtred.

Biſhops of Cant. appeared not before theyr kyngs, and yet they were not perſecuted.

And thus farre concerning Nicholas Herforde, & the other aforeſayd, but all this meane while what became of Iohn Wickliffe it is not certaynly knowen. Albeit ſo farre as may be gathered out of Walde, it appereth that he was baniſhed, and driuen to exile. In the meane time it is not to be doubted, but he was aliue during all this whyle, whereſoeuer he was as by his letter may appeare, which he about this time wrote to Pope Vrbane the 6. In the which letter he doth purge himſelfe, that being commaũded to appeare before the Pope at Rome, he came not: declaring alſo in the ſame a briefe confeſsiõ of his fayth. The copy of which Epiſtle here followeth.

¶ The Epiſtle of Iohn Wickliffe ſent vnto Pope Vrbane the 6. An. 1382.

The Epiſtle of I. Wickliffe to pope Vrbane.

VErely I do reioyce to open and declare the fayth which I do holde vnto euery man. And ſpecially vnto the Biſh. of Rome, the which for ſo much as I doe ſuppoſe to be ſound and true, he will moſt willingly confirme my ſayd fayth, or if it be erroneous amend the ſame.

Firſt I ſuppoſe, that the Goſpell of Chriſt, is the whole bodye of Gods law, and that Chriſt which did geue that ſame law hymſelfe, I beleue him to be a very man, and in that poynt, to exceed the law of the Goſpell, and all other partes of the Scripture. Agayne I do geue and holde, the Biſhop of Rome, for ſo much as he is the Vicare of Chriſt here in earth, to be bound moſt of all other men vnto that law of the Goſpell. For the greatneſſe amongeſt Chriſtes Diſciples, did not conſiſt in worldly dignity or honours but in the neare and exact following of Chriſt, in his life and maners: wherupon I do gather out of the hart of the law of the Lord, that Chriſt for the time of his pilgrimage here, was a moſt poore man, abiecting and caſting of all worldly rule and honour, as appeareth by the Goſpell of Math. the 8. and the 2. Corinthians. 8. chapter.

Hereby I do fully gather, that no faythfull man ought to folow, neither the Pope himſelfe, neither any of the holy men, but in ſuch poynts, as he hath folowed the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For Peter and the ſonnes of Zebede by deſiring worldly honour, contrary to the folowing of Chriſtes ſteppes did offend, and therfore in thoſe errors, they are not to be folowed.

The true diſciples of Chriſt ſeeke no honor.

Hereof I do gather, as a Cõſell, that the Pope ought to leaue vnto the ſecular power, all temporall dominion and rule, & therunto effectually to moue and exhort his whole Clergy: for ſo did Chriſt, and ſpecially by his Apoſtles. Wherfore, if I haue erred in any of theſe poyntes, I will moſt humbly ſubmitte my ſelfe vnto correction euen by death if neceſsitye ſo require: And if I coulde labor according to my will or deſire in my owne perſon, I would ſurely preſent my ſelfe before the Biſhop of Rome: but the Lorde hath otherwiſe viſited me to the cõtrary, and hath taught me rather to obey God then men. For ſo much then, as God hath geuẽ vnto our Pope, iuſt and true Euangelicall inſtinctions, we ought to pray, that thoſe motions be not extinguiſhed by any ſubtle or crafty deuiſe.

And that the Pope and Cardinals, be not moued to doe anye thing, contrary vnto the law of the Lord. Wherefore let vs praye vnto our God, that he will ſo ſtirre vp our Pope Vrbane the ſixt as he began, that he with his Clergye may folow the Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, in life and maners: and that they may teach the people effectually, and that they likewiſe may faithfully folow them in the ſame. And let vs ſpecially pray, that our Pope may bee preſerued from all maligne and euill counſell, as which do know that euill and enuious men of his houſeholde would geue him. And ſeing the Lord will not ſuffer vs to be tempted aboue our power, much leſſe then will he require of any creature to do that thing which they are not able, forſomuch, as that is the playne condition and maner of Antichriſt.

Thus muche wrote Iohn Wickliffe vnto Pope Vrbane: but this pope Vrbane otherwiſe termed Turbanus was ſo hote in his warres againſt Clement the Frenche Pope his aduerſary, that he had no leaſure, and leſſe lyſt, to attend vnto Wickliffes matters. By the occaſion of which ſchiſme, God ſo prouided for poore Wickliffe, that he was in ſome more reſt & quietnes. Cõcerning which ſchiſmaticall wars of theſe popes, for as much as we haue here entred into ye mention therof, it ſhall not be impertinent frõ the order of our ſtory, digreſſyng a litle from the matter of Iohn Wickliffe, to touch ſomething of the tragical doings of theſe two holy popes ſtriuing for the triple crowne: to the intent that the Chriſtian reader (iudging by their fruits and proceedings) may ſee and vnderſtand what difference is betweene theſe popes, and Chriſt and his Apoſtles. For though in the ſtory of the Goſpel it is read, that certaine of the diſciples did ſtriue which ſhuld be the greater, yet neither do we read that one of them toke euer weapõ againſt the other: and moreouer in the ſayd ſtory of the Goſpell it doeth appeare, that they in ſo ſtriuing as they did, were therefore ſharpely rebuked of our Sauiour Chriſt, & were taught by him an other leſſon.

The Pope occupied ſo in ſchiſmaticall warres that he had no leyſure to other matters.

Difference betweene the Apoſtles and the Popes in ſtriuing for preeminence.

About the beginning of the next yeare folowing, which was an. 1383. Pope Vrbane ſettyng all his ſtudy howe to repreſſe and cõquere the contrary Pope his aduerſary, being then at Auinion (ſeing al his other means to fayle, and that his croſſe keyes coulde doe no good) toke to hym the ſword of Romulus, & ſet vpõ him with open warre. And firſt deuiſing wt himſelfe whom he might beſt chuſe for hys chief champion: thought none meeter for ſuch affaires the Henry Spenſer beyng then Biſhop of Norwich, a young and a ſtout Prelate, more fitter for the camping cure, then for the peaceable church of Chriſt, as partly alſo might appeare before by his acts done at Lẽnam in ſtriuing for the Mayres Mace, mẽtioned before, pag. 428. Vnto this byſhop of Norwich, the Pope had ſent his bulles about this tune, to Croiſy whoſoeuer would go wͭ him into Fraũce, to deſtroy the Antipope which named himſelfe Clemẽt, & to make warre agaynſt all thoſe that took his part. Which Bulles, for that they gaue vnto him ſuch great authority, he cauſed to be publiſhed in the Parliamẽt houſe, & cauſed the copyes of the ſame to be ſent all about, & to be ſet vp & faſtened vpon all the church dores & monaſtery gates that al men might read thẽ. In the which Buls theſe priuiledges were graunted, the copy wherof here foloweth.

The very fruites of Antichriſt.

1. In primis, that the ſayd Biſhop of Norwich may vſe his ſword againſt the Antipope, & all his adherents, fauorers, and councelers, and with violence put them to death.
2. Item, that he hath full power to inquire of all & ſingular ſuch ſchiſmatikes, and to put them in priſon: & to confiſcate all their goods moueable and immoueable.
3. Item, that he hath power and authority to depriue all lay men that are ſuch ſchiſmatikes of all maner ſecular offices whatſoeuer, and to geue theyr offices to other fit and conuenient perſons.
4. Item, that he may depriue all ſuch clerks, and declare them to be ſchiſmatickes, and in this behalfe to geue & beſtow their benifices either with cure or without cure, their dignities perſonages or offices, to other perſõs more meet for the ſame.
5. Item, he hath power & authority ouer lay perſõs that are exempt, and Clerkes both ſecular and regular, yea although they be Friers mendicantes, or maiſters & profeſſors of other houſes or hoſpitals of S. Iohns of Ieruſalem, or S. Mary of Flaunders, or profeſſours of what orders ſoeuer els.
6. Item; he hath power to diſpenſe with what ſecular Clerkes ſoeuer; being beneficed either with cure or without cure; and alſo with ſuch as haue dignities, perſonages or offices; being regulars either exẽpt or not exempt, that euery one of them may be abſent with him from their dignities & benefices. &c. vnder the ſtãderd of the croſſe, without licence of any of thier Prelats required, and yet to receiue and take the intire cõmodities of their benefices, as though they had bene perſonally reſident vpon the ſame.
7. Itẽ, there is graunted to all that paſſe the ſeas in this quarel, either at their own expenſes or at the expẽſes of any other, full remiſſion of their ſins: & as large priuileges are grãted to all thoſe that go ouer the ſea with him, as to any that pay their mony, or go to fight for the holy land.
8. Alſo, all ſuch as with their proper goods & ſubſtaunce ſhall geue ſufficient ſtipend to able ſouldiors, at the diſcretiõ of the foreſayd Lord Biſhop muſtered, or by any other his deputy, although he himſelfe be not perſonally at this buſines aforeſaid: yet ſhall he haue like remiſſion, & indulgẽce, as they which haue bene perſonally with him in this expedition.
9. Itẽ, all they are pertakers of this remiſſiõ, which ſhal geue any part of theyr goods to the ſayd Biſhop to fight agaynſt the ſayd ſchiſmatikes.
10. Item, if any ſhall chaũce to dye in the iourny, that are ſouldiors vnder the ſayd ſtandard of yͤ croſſe, or els before the quarell by ſome meanes be finiſhed: ſhall fully & wholy receiue the ſayd grace, and ſhalbe partakers of the foreſayd remiſſion and indulgence.
11. Item, he hath power to excommunicate, ſuſpend, and interdict what perſons ſoeuer be rebellious or diſturbers of him in yͤ execution of his power & authority committed vnto him: of what dignity, ſtate, degree, preheminẽce, order, place, or cõditiõ ſoeuer they ſhalbe: whether they ſhall be either of regal, queenly, or imperial dignity, or of what dignity els ſoeuer either eccleſiaſticall or mundane.
12. Item, he hath power and authority to compell and inforce what religious perſons ſoeuer, to appoynt them and ſend them ouer Sea, if it ſeeme good to him: yea although they be profeſſors of the Friers mendicants, for the execution of the premiſſes.

¶ The Popes abſolution by the Biſhop pronounced.

By the authority Apoſtolicall to me in this behalfe committed, we abſolue the A.B. from all thy ſinnes confeſſed with thy mouth, and being contrite with thy hart, and wherof thou wouldſt be cõfeſſed if they came vnto the memory: & we graunt vnto thee, plenary remiſſion of all maner of ſinnes, and we promiſe vnto thee thy part of the reward of all iuſt men, and of euerlaſting ſaluation. And as many priuileges as are graunted to them that go to fight for the holy land, we graunt vnto thee: & of all the prayers & benefites of the church the vniuerſall Synode, as alſo of the holy Catholicke Church, we make thee partaker of.

Chriſtes paſſion hath here no place.

This couragious or rather outragious biſhop armed thus with the Popes authority, and prompt with his priuilegies, in the yeare aforeſayd. 1283. about the time of lẽt, came to the Parliament, where great conſultation & contention, & almoſt no leſſe ſchiſme was about the voiage of this Popiſh Biſhop in the Parliament, thẽ was betwene the Popes themſelues. In the which Parliament many there were, which thought it not ſafe to commit the kings people & ſubiectes, vnto a rude and vnſkilfull Prieſt. So great was the diuerſity of iudgements in that behalfe, that the voiage of the ſayd Biſhop was protracted vnto the ſaterday afore Paſſion Sonday. In the which Sonday was ſong the ſolemne Antheme Ecce crucem Domini, fugite partes aduerſæ. That is, Beholde the croſſe of the Lord: Flye away all you aduerſaries. After which Sonday, the partyes ſo agreed amongeſt themſelues by common decree, that the Biſhop ſhould ſet forward in his voiage, hauing to him geuen the fiften which was graunted to the king in the Parliament before. Which thinges thus concluded in the Parliament, this warlike Biſhop preparing before all thinges in a readineſſe ſet forwarde in his Popeholye iourney. Who about the moneth of May, being come to Canterbury, and there tarying for the winde, in the Monaſtery of S. Auguſtin, receiued a writ from the king that he ſhould returne to the king, and to know further of hys pleaſure. The Biſhop fearing that if he turned agayne to the king, his iourny ſhould be ſtayd, and ſo all his labor & preparance loſt with great deriſion and ſhame vnto him: thought better to commit himſelfe to fortune with that litle army he had, then by tarying to be made a ridicle to his aduerſaryes. Wherfore, he ſent word backe agayne, to the king, that he was now ready prepared, well forward on his iourny. And that it was not expedient now to protract the time for any kinde of talke which peraduenture ſhould be to no maner of purpoſe: and that it was more conuenient for him to haſten in his iournay to Gods glory, & alſo to the honor of the king. And thus he calling his men vnto him, entred forthwith the ſeas, & went to Calis: where he wayting a few dayes for the reſt of his army, after the receipt of them, tooke his iourny firſt to the towne of Grauenidge which he beſieged, ſo deſparatly without any preparaunce of engines of warre or counſell, or of politicke men ſkilfull in ſuch affayres: that he ſeemed rather to flye vpon them, then to inuade them. At lenth through the ſuperſtition of our men, truſting vpon the Popes abſolution, he ſo hariſhly approched the walles and inuaded the enemies, that a great number of them were pitiouſly ſlayn with ſhot & wild fire: till at the end (the inhabiters being oppreſſed and vanquiſhed) our men entred the town with their Biſhop, where they at his commaundement deſtroiyng both man, woman and childe, left not one aliue of all them, which remayned in the whole town. Sicq; crucis beneficio factum, vt crucis hoſtes ita delerentur, quòd vnus ex eis non remanſit: That is. And ſo it came to paſſe by the vertue of the croſſe, that our men croyſed ſo preuayled againſt the enemies of the croſſe, that not one of them remayned aliue. Ex Chron. Mon. D. Albani.

O bloodines of Antichriſt.

Ex Chron. Mon. D. Albani in Vita Rich. 2.

From Grauenidg this warlike Biſhop ſet forward to Dunkyrke, where not long after the Frenchmen meeting with him, ioyned with them in battell: in which battell (if the ſtory be true) 12. thouſand of the Frenchmen were ſlain in the chaſe, and of our men but ſeuen onely miſſing. It would require a long tractatiſe here to diſcourſe all thing done in theſe popiſh warres. Alſo it would be no leſſe ridiculous to view & behold the glorious temerity of this new vpſtart captain. But certes, lamẽtable it is to ſee the pitifull ſlaughter & murther of Chriſts people, by yͤ meanes of theſe pitileſſe Popes, during theſe warres in Fraũce: As when the Biſhop comming frõ Dunkirke to the ſiege of Ypres a great number of Engliſhmen there were loſt, and much mony conſumed, and yet nothing done effect, to the great ſhame and ignominy of the Biſhop. Agayne, after, the ſiege of Ypres (thus with ſhame broke vp) the ſayd biſhop proceeding with a ſmall power, to fight with yͤ frẽch kinges campe, contrary to the counſell of his captaynes, which counted him raſh & vnſkilfull in his attempt, was fayne to breake company with them, whereby part of the army wẽt vnto Burburgh, & the biſhop with his part returned to Grauenidg, which both townes ſhortly after were beſieged by the french army, to the great loſſe both of the Engliſh and French men. In fine, when the Byſhop could keepe Grauenidg no longer, the ſayd Biſhop with his croyſies, croſſing the ſeas, came home agayne as wiſe as he wẽt, & thus making an end of this Pontificall war, we will returne agayne from whence we digreſſed, to the ſtory and matter of Iohn Wickliffe.

Which Iohn Wickliffe returning againe within ſhort ſpace, either frõ his baniſhment, or from ſome other place where he was ſecretly kept, repayred to his pariſh of Lutterworth, where he was parſon, there quietly departing this mortall life, ſlept in peace in the Lord, in the begynning of the yeare 1384. vpon Silueſters day.

Here is to be noted the great prouidēce of the Lord in this man, as in diuers other: whom the Lord ſo long preſerued in ſuch rages of ſo many enemies, frō all their handes, euen to his olde age. For ſo it appeareth by Thomas Walden, writing agaynſt him in his tomes entituled: De Sacramentis contra Wicleuum, that he was well aged before he departed: by that which the foreſayd Walden writeth of him in the Epiloge ſpeaking of Wickliffe, in theſe wordes: Ita vt cano placeret, quod iuueni complacebat. &c. That is: ſo yͭ the ſame thing pleſed him in his old age, which dyd pleaſe him being young. Whereby ſeemeth that Wickliffe liued, till he was an olde man, by this report. Such a Lord is God, that whom he will haue kept, nothing can hurt.

Waldenus 2. tomo de Sacramentis.

This Wickliffe, had written diuers and ſundry workes, the which in the yeare of our Lord 1410. were burnt at Oxford, the Abbot of Shrewſbury being then Commiſſary, and ſent to ouerſee that matter. And not onelye in England, but in Boheme, likewiſe the bookes of the ſayde Wickliffe were ſet on fire, by one Subincus Archbiſhop of Prage, who made diligent inquiſition for the ſame, and burned them: The number of the volumes, whiche he is ſayd to haue burned moſt excellently written, and richly adorned with boſſes of golde, and rich coueringes (as Eneas Siluius writeth) were aboue the number of two hundreth.

The number of Wicliffes bokes came to 200. volumes. Eneas Syluius.

Ioannes Cocleus in his booke De hiſtoria Huſsitarū, ſpeaking of the bookes of Wickliffe, teſtifyeth: that he wrot very many bookes, ſermons and tractations. Moreouer the ſaid Cocleus ſpeaking of himſelfe, recordeth alſo: that there was a certaine Biſhop in England which wrot vnto him declaring, that he had yet remayning in his cuſtodye two huge and mighty volumes of Iohn Wickliffes workes, which for the quantity therof might ſeme to be equal with the workes of S. Auguſtine. Hæc Cocleus.

Amongeſt other of his Treatiſes I my ſelfe alſo haue found out certayne, as de cenſu & veritate ſcripturæ. Item, De Eccleſia. Item, De Euchariſtia confeſsio Wickleui, whiche I entend hereafter: the Lord ſo graunting, to publiſh abroad.

As concerning certayne aunſweres of Iohn Wickliffe which he wrote to king Richard the 2. touching the right and title of the king, and of the Pope: becauſe they are but ſhort, I thought here to annexe them. The effect whereof here foloweth.

¶ Iohn Wickliffes aunſwere vnto K. Richard the ſecond, as touching the right and title of the king and the Pope.

O bloudines of Antichriſt.

Ex Chron. Mon. D. Albani in Vita Rich. 2.

IT was demaunded, whether the kingdom of England, may lawfully in caſe of neceſſity, for his own defence, deteyne and kepe backe the treaſure of the kingdome, that it be not caried away to forreine & ſtraunge nations, yͤ pope himſelfe demaunding and requiring the ſame vnder pain of cenſure, and by vertue of obedience.

Wickliffe ſetting a part the minds of learned mē, what might be ſayd in the matter, either by the canon law, or by the law of England or yͤ ciuil law, it reſteth (ſaith he) now onely to perſwade and proue, the affirmatiue part of this doubt, by the principles of Chriſtes law. And firſt I proue it thus, Euery natural body hath power geuen of God to reſiſt agaynſt his contrary, and to preſerue it ſelfe in due eſtate, as the Philoſophers knew very well.

In ſomuch, that bodyes without life, are indued with ſuch kinde of power (as it is euidēt) vnto whom hardnes is geuen to reſiſt thoſe thinges that woulde breake it, and coldnes to withſtād the heat that diſſolueth it. Forſomuch then, as the kingdome of England (after the maner and phraſe of the Scriptures) ought to be one body: & the clergy with the communalty, the members thereof, it ſeemeth that the ſame kingdome hath ſuch power geuē him of god, and ſo much the more apparaunt: by how much the ſame body is more precious vnto God, adorned with vertue & knowledge. For ſomuch thē as there is no power geuē of god vnto any creature: for any end or purpoſe: but that he may lawfully vſe the ſame to that end and purpoſe: It followeth that our kingdome may lawfully keep backe and deteyn theyr treaſure, for the defence of it ſelfe, in what caſe ſoeuer neceſſity do require the ſame.

Secondarily, the ſame is proued by yͤ law of yͤ goſpell. For yͤ Pope cannot challenge yͤ treaſure of this kingdom, but vnder the title of almes, & conſequētly vnder the pretence of yͤ works of mercy, according to the rule of charity. But in caſe aforeſayd, the title of almes ought vtterly to ceaſe, Ergo, the right and title of chalenging the treaſure of our Realme ſhall ceaſe alſo in the preſuppoſed neceſſitie. For ſo much as all charitie hath his beginning of himſelfe, it were no worke of charitie, but of meere madnes, to ſend away yͤ treaſures of yͤ realme vnto forreine natiōs, whereby the Realme it ſelfe may fall into ruine, vnder yͤ pretence of ſuch charitie.

The bookes of Wicliffe. The Popes riches is but the almes of good mē.

Neceſſitie taketh away the Popes almes.

It appeareth alſo by this, that Chriſt the head of the Church, whom all Chriſten Prieſts ought to follow: liued by the almes of deuoute women. Luke. 7. 8. He hungred and thyrſted, he was a ſtraunger, and many other miſeries he ſuſtained, not onely in his mēbers, but alſo in his owne body, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, Cor. viii. He was made poore for your ſakes, that through his pouertie, you might be rich: wherby, in the firſt endowig of the Church, what ſoeuer he were of the Clergy that had any temporall poſſeſsiōs, he had the ſame by forme of a perpetuall almes, as both writinges and Chronicles do witneſſe.

Whereupon S. Barnard, declaring in his 2. booke to Eugenius, that he could not chalenge any ſecular dominion by right of ſucceſsion, as being the vicar of S. Peter, writeth thus: that if S. Iohn ſhould ſpeake vnto the pope himſelfe, as Barnard doth vnto Eugenius, were it to be thought that he would take it patiently? But let it be ſo, that you do challenge it vnto you, by ſome other wayes or meanes: but truely by any right or title Apoſtolicall, you can not ſo doe. For how could he geue vnto you that, which he had not himſelfe? That which he had he gaue you, that is to ſay, care ouer the Church, but did he geue you any Lordſhips or rule? Harke what he ſayth: Not bearing rule (ſayth he) as Lordes in the Clergy, but behauing your ſelues as examples to the flocke. And becauſe thou ſhalt not thinke it to be ſpoken only in humility, and not in verity, marke the word of the Lord him ſelfe in the Coſpell. The kinges of the people do rule ouer them, but you ſhall not do ſo.

Note well the ſaying here of Bernard.

Here Lordſhip and dominion, is plainely forbidden to the Apoſtles: and dareſt thou then vſurpe the ſame? If thou will be a Lord, thou ſhalt loſe thine Apoſtleſhip, or if thou wilt be an Apoſtle, thou ſhalt loſe thy Lordſhip. For truely thou ſhalt depart from the one of them. If thou wilt haue both, thou ſhalt loſe both, or els thinke thy ſelfe to be of that number, of whom God doth ſo greatly complayne, ſaying: They haue raigned, but not through me. They are become Princes, and I haue not knowne it. Now if it do ſuffice thee to rule with the Lord, thou haſt thy glory, but not with God. But if we will keepe that which is forbidden vs, let vs heare what is ſayd: he that is the greateſt amongeſt you (ſayth Chriſt) ſhalbe made as the leaſt, and he which is the higheſt, ſhalbe as the miniſter: and for example, ſet a childe in the middeſt of thē. So this then is the true forme and inſtitution of the Apoſtles trade. Lordſhip and rule is forbidden, miniſtration and ſeruice commaunded.

The pope muſt leaue his lordſhip or els Apoſtleſhip, let him chuſe whether.

The maner of the Apoſtles.

By theſe wordes of this bleſſed man whom the whole Church doth reuerence and worſhip, it doth appeare that the Pope hath not power to occupy the Church goodes as Lord therof, but as miniſter, and ſeruaunt, and proctor for the poore. And would to God that the ſame proud & greedy deſire of rule & Lordſhip, which this ſeat doth chalenge vnto it, be not a preamble to prepare a way vnto Antechriſt. For it is euident by the Goſpell, that Chriſt through his pouerty, humility, & ſuffering of iniury, got vnto him the children of his kingdome.

How the pope ought to occupy the Church goods.

The way to obtaine the kingdome of Chriſt.

And moreouer, ſo farre as I remember, the ſame bleſſed mā Barnard in his 3. booke writeth alſo thus vnto Eugenius: I feare no other greater poyſon to happen vnto thee, then greedy deſire of rule and dominion.

This Wickliffe albeit in his life time, had many greeuous enemies, yet was there none ſo cruell vnto him, as yͤ Clergy it ſelfe. Yet notwithſtanding he had many good frendes, men not onely of the baſe and meaneſt ſort, but alſo nobility, amongſt whom theſe mē are to be nūbred: Iohn Clēbon, Lewes Clifford, Richard Sturius, Thomas Latimer, William Neuell, Bohn Mountegew, who plucked downe all the Images in his Church. Beſides all theſe, there was the Earle of Saliſbury, who for contēpt in him noted towardes the Sacrament, in carying it home to his houſe: was enioyned by Radulph Ergom Biſhop of Saliſbury, to make in Saliſbury a croſſe of ſtone, in which all the ſtory of the matter ſhould be writtē, and he euery Friday during his life to come to the croſſe barefoot and barehead in his ſhyrt, & there kneling vpon his knees: to do penance for his fact. Ex Chron. Mon. D. Albani in vita Ric. 2.

I. Clenbon, Lewes Clifford, Rich. Sturius. Tho. Latimer, W. Neuell, Ioh. Mountegew. The Earle of Saliſbury. The penance of the Earle of Saliſbury.

The Lōdiners at this time ſomewhat boldly truſting to the Maiors authority, who for that yeare was Ihon of Northamptō: Took vpō them the office of the Biſhops, in puniſhing the vices (belonging to Ciuill law) of ſuche perſons as they had found and apprehēded in committing both fornication and adultery. For firſt they put the womē in the priſon which amongſt thẽ then was named Doliũ. And laſtly bringing them into the market place, wher euery man might behold them, & cutting of their goldẽ lockes from theyr heads: they cauſed them to be caryed about the ſtreets, with bagpipes and trumpets blowne before them to the intent they ſhould be the better knowne & their cõpanyes auoyded: according to the maner then of certayne theeues that were named Apellatores, (accuſers or pechers of others that were guiltles) which were ſo ſerued. And wͭ other ſuch like opprobrious and reprochfull contumelyes did they ſerue the men alſo that were taken with them in cõmitting the forenamed wickednesse and vices. Here the ſtory recordeth how the ſayd Londiners were incouraged hereunto by John wickliffe and others that folowed hys doctrine to perpetrat this act, in the reproch of the Prelats being of yͤ clergy. For they ſayd, that they did not ſo much abhorre to ſee the great negligence of thoſe to whom that charge belonged, but alſo their filthye auarice they did aſmuch deteſt: which for gredynes of money were choked wͭ bribes and winking at the penaltyes due to ſuch perſons by the lawes appoynted, ſuffered ſuch fornicators and inceſtuous perſons fauourably to continue in their wickednes. They ſayd furthermore, that they greatly feared, leaſt for ſuch wickednes perpetrated within the city and ſo apparantly diſſimuled: that God would take vengeance vpõ thẽ & deſtroy their city. wherfore they ſaid, that they could do no leſſe then to purge the ſame: leaſt by the ſufferaunce thereof, God would bring a plague vpon them, or deſtroy thẽ with the ſword, or cauſe the earth to ſwallow vp both them and theyr City. Hæc ex Chron. Mon. D. Albani.

The frutes of good and true doctrine.

Ex Chron. Monaſt. D. Albani.

☞ This ſtory (gentle Reader) albeit the author therof whom I folow, doth geue it out in reprochfull wiſe, to the great diſcõmendation of the Lõdyners for ſo doing. Yet I thought not to omitte, but to commit the ſame to memory, which ſemeth to me rather to tend vnto yͤ worthy cõmendation both of the Londiners that ſo did: & to the neceſſary example of all other Cityes to follow the ſame. After theſe things thus declared, let vs now adioyne the teſtimoniall of the Vniuerſity of Oxford, of John wickliffe.

⁂ The publicke teſtimony geuen out by the Vniuerſity of Oxford, touching the commendation of the great learning and good life of Iohn Wickliffe.

VNto all and ſingular the Children of our holye Mother the Church, to whom this preſent Letter ſhall come: the Vicechauncellor of the Vniuerſity of Oxford with the whole congregation of the Maiſters, wiſh perpetuall health in the Lord. Forſomuch, as it is not commonly ſeene, that the Actes and Mmonumentes of valiaunt men, nor the prayſe and merites of good men ſhould be paſſed ouer and hidden with perpetuall ſilẽce, but that true report and fame ſhould continually ſpread abroad the ſame in ſtraunge & farre diſtant places, both for the witnes of the ſame, and example of others: Forſomuch alſo as the prouident diſcretion of mans nature being recompenſed with cruelty, hath deuiſed and ordayned this buckeler and defence, againſt ſuch as do blaſpheme and ſlaunder other mens doings, that whenſoeuer witnes by word of mouth can not be preſent, the penne by writing may ſupply the ſame.

Ex tomo operũ. Ioan. Huſſe fol. ult.

Hereupon it followeth, that the ſpeciall good will and care which we bare vnto I. Wickliffe, ſometime childe of this our Vniuerſity, and profeſſor of Diuinity: mouing and ſtirring our minds (as his maners and conditions required no leſſe) with one mind, voyce and teſtimony, we do witneſſe all his conditions & doings throughout his whole life, to haue bene moſt ſincere & commẽdable: whoſe honeſt maners and conditions, profoundnes of learning, and moſt redolent renowme and fame, we deſire the more earneſtly to be notified & known vnto all faithful, for that we vnderſtand the maturity and ripeneſſe of his couuerſation, his diligent labors and trauels to tend to the prayſe of God, the helpe & ſauegarde of others, and the profite of the Church.

Great learning ioyned with good life and godlines.

Wherefore we ſignify vnto you by theſe preſents, that his cõuerſatiõ (euen frõ his youth vpwards, vnto the time of his death) was ſo praiſe worthy and honeſt, that neuer at any time was there any note or ſpot of ſuſpition noyſed of him. But in his aunſwering, reading, preaching and determining, he behaued himſelſe laudably, and as a ſtout and valiaunt champion of the fayth: vanquiſhing by the force of the Scriptures, all ſuch who by theyr wilfull beggery blaſphemed and ſlaundered Chriſtes Religion. Neither was this ſayd Doctor conuict of any hereſy, either burned by our Prelates after his buriall. God forbidde that our Prelates ſhould haue condemned a man of ſuch honeſty, for an hereticke: who amongeſt all the reſt of the vniuerſitye, had written in Logicke, Philoſophye, Diuinitye, Moralitye, and the Speculatiue art without peere. The knowledge of which all & ſingular things, we do deſire to teſtify and deliuer forth: to the intent, that the fame and renowne of this ſayd Doctor, may be the more euident and had in reputation amongeſt them, vnto whoſe handes theſe preſent letters teſtimoniall ſhall come.

The bones of Wickliffe were not yet commãded by the cõũcel of Conſt. to be burned.

Ex 2 tomo operum I. Huſſi fol. ult.

In witnes wherof, we haue cauſed theſe our letters teſtimonial to be ſealed with our cõmon ſeale. Dated at Oxford in our congregation houſe, the fift day of October in the yeare of our Lord. 1406.

The teſtimony and wordes of Maiſter Iohn Hus, as touching maiſter Iohn Wickliffe.

VErely, as I do not beleue neither graũt that M. John wickliffe is an hereticke: ſo do I not deny, but hemly hope that he is no hereticke: For ſo much as in all matters of doubt I ought, as neare as I can, to chuſe the beſt part. wherfore I ſurely truſt, that M. I. wickliffe is one of the number of thẽ which are ſaued. The words of Chriſt moueth me therunto, ſaying Math. 7. Doe ye not iudge that ye be not iudged, & Luke the 6. Do not condemn, & ye ſhal not be condemned: and the wordes of the Apoſtle. 1. Cor. 4 Do ye not iudge before the Lord himſelfe do come, yͭ which ſhall opẽ thoſe things that are hid in darknes, to manifeſt the priuities of all hartes.

The teſtimony and iudgement of M. Iohn Hus concerning Iohn Wickliffe.

Secondly, the loue and charity which I ought to bear vnto my neighbor (louing him as my ſelfe) doth moue me thereunto. Luk. 10.

Thirdly his good fame & report moueth me, the which he hath of the good Prieſts, of the vniuerſity of Oxford, & not of the wicked, & commõly of the vulgar ſort, although not of the couetous, proud, and luxurious Prelates.

Fourthly, his owne workes & writings doe ſtirre me therunto, by the which he goeth about wͭ his whole indeuor, to reduce all men vnto the law of Chriſt, & ſpecially yͤ clergy: that they ſhoulde forſake the pompe & dominion of this world, and with the Apoſtles lead the life of Chriſt.

Fiftly, his owne proteſtations, which he doth oftentimes vſe in his ſentences, often repeating the ſame, doth not a litle moue me.

Sixtlye, his earneſt deſire and affection which he had vnto the law of Chriſt, doth not a litle allure me therunto, diſputing of the verity therof, the which cannot fayle in any one iote or title. wherupon he made a booke of the verity of the holy Scripture, approuing euen vnto the vttermoſt, the trueth of Gods law.

Lib. de ſenſu & veritate ſcripturæ per I. Wickleuũ.

wherfore it were too fooliſh a conſequẽt to ſay, that becauſe the number of the Prelates and clergy in England, Fraunce, and Boheme do coũt John wickeliffe for an hereticke, that therfore he is an heretick. &c. Like as the reaſon for burning of the bookes, for it is written in the firſt booke of Machabees firſt chapter: that they did burne the books of the Lord, tearing them in peeces, and whoſoeuer was founde to haue kept any bookes of the Teſtament or will of the Lord, or the which obſerued and kept the lawe of the Lord, they were by the kinges commaundemen put to death. If then the burning of theſe bookes by wicked men did argue or proue the euilneſſe of the books, thẽ was the law of God euill and nought.

True iudgement ſtandeth not vpon number and multitude.

So likewiſe the burning of S. Gregories bookes, and diuers other ſayntes and good men, ſhould argue & proue that they were euill & naughty men. wherupon as it doth not folow, that becauſe the Biſhops, Scribes, and Phariſeis, with the elders of the people, condemned Chriſt Jeſus as an heretick, that therfore he is an heretick: So likewiſe doth it not follow of any other man. The Byſhops, maiſters of diuity, monkes and prelates condemned thys man as an hereticke. Ergo he is an hereticke. For this conſequẽt is reproued by John Chriſoſtom, which was twiſe condemned as an hereticke by the Biſhops and the whole clergy. Likewiſe S. Gregory in his bookes, was condemned by the Cardinals.

Burning of bookesproueth not by and by an hereticke.

A falſe conſequent reproued by I. Chriſoſtome.

By like proofe alſo as they affirme M. John wickliffe to be an hereticke: John Duke of Lãcaſter (a man of worthy memory and progenitor of Henry king of Englande) ſhould alſo be an hereticke. For the ſayd Duke defẽded, fauored, and greatly loued M. John wickliffe, Ergo, the ſayd Duke is or was an hereticke, the conſequent is good. The Minor is well knowne vnto the Engliſhmen. The Maior appeareth in the Canon, where it is ſayd, he which defendeth an hereticke. &c.

Iohn Duke of Lancaſter defender of I. Wickliffe.

But theſe thinges ſet apart, I demaund of the aduerſary, whether M. John wickliff be damned for euer or no? If he ſay that he is damned becauſe he is an hereticke: I propounde this vnto him, whether M. John wickeliffe whiles he liued held any falſe doctrine cõtrary to the holy Scripture: If he do affirme it, let him then ſhew what doctrine it is, and afterward declare that he held it obſtinatly: And he ſhall finde, that in his bookes he alwayes wrote moſt commendable proteſtations agaynſt obſtinacye and ſtifneckedneſſe. And by and by after, M. Iohn Stokes in his intimation ſayth, that M. Iohn Wickliffe in Englād, is counted for an hereticke. This ſeemeth alſo falſe by the letter teſtimoniall of the Vniuerſity of Oxforde: vnto the which there is more credit to be geuē, then vnto him. And this ſhall ſuffiſe for this preſent.

I. Wickliffe proued no heretick.

The councell of Cōſtāce againſt I. Wickliffe.

Now as we haue declared the teſtimony of the Vniuerſity of Oxford, & of Iohn Hus, concerning the praiſe of Iohn Wickliffe: It followeth likewiſe, that we ſet forth and expreſſe the contrary cenſure and iudgementes of his enemies, blinded with malicious hatred and corrupt affections againſt him: eſpecially of the Popes Councel gathered at Conſtance, proceeding firſt in condemning hys bookes, then of his articles, and afterward burning of his bones. The copy of which their ſentēce geuen againſt him by that counſell here followeth.

✻ The ſentence geuen by the Councell of Conſtance, in condemning the doctrine and 45. Articles of Iohn Wickliffe.

The ſentēce of the councell of Conſtāce againſt I. Wickliffe.

THe moſt holy and ſacred councell of Cōſtance, making and repreſenting the catholick Church for the extirpation of this preſent ſchiſme, and of all other errors and hereſies, ſpringing and growing vnder the ſhadow and pretence of the ſame: and for the reformation and amendment of the Church, being lawfully congregate and gathered together in the holy Ghoſt, for the perpetuall memory of the time to come.

We are taught by the acts and hiſtoryes of the holy fathers, that the catholicke fayth without the which, as the holy Apoſtle S. Paule ſaith, it is vnpoſſible to pleaſe God hath bene alwayes defēded by the faythfull and ſpirituall ſouldiors of the Church, by the ſhield of fayth, agaynſt the falſe worſhippers of the ſame fayth, or rather peruerſe impugners: which through their proud curioſity will ſeeme to know more, and to be wiſer then they ought to be, & for the deſire of ẏ glory of ẏ world, haue gone about oft times to ouerthrow the ſame. Theſe kindes of warres and battelles haue bene prefigured to vs before in thoſe carnall warres of the Iſraelites agaynſt the Idolatrous people. For in thoſe ſpirituall warres the holy catholick Church, through the vertue & power of fayth, being illuſtrate [illegible]) the beames of the heauenly light, by the prouidēce of God, and being holpen by the helpe and defence of the Saints & holy men, hath alway continued immaculate, & (the darckenes of errours, as her moſt cruell enemyes being put to flight) ſhe hath moſt gloriouſly triumphed ouer all. But in theſe our daies, the old and vnclean enemy hath rayſed vp new cōtētions & ſtrifes, that the elect of this world might be knowne, whoſe Prince and captayne in time paſt was one Iohn Wickliffe a falſe Chriſtian. Who during his life time, taught and ſowed very obſtinatly many articles, cōtrary and agaynſt the Chriſtian Religion, and the Catholicke fayth. And the ſame Iohn Wickliffe wrote certayne bookes which he called a Dialogue, & a Trialogue, beſides many other treatiſes and works, the which he both wrot and taught, in the which he wrot the aforeſayd, and many other damnable & execrable articles: The which his books for the publication and aduauncement of his peruers doctrine, he did ſet forth opēly for euery man to read. Wherby beſide many offēces, great hurt & damages of ſoules, hath enſued in diuers regions & countryes, but ſpecially in the kingdomes of England and Boheme. Againſt whom the maiſters and Doctors of the Vniuerſities of Oxforde and Prage, riſing vp in the truth and verity of God, according to the order of ſchooles, within a while after did reproue and condemne the ſayd Articles.

The dialoge and trialoge of I. Wickliffe.

The bookes of Wickliffe cōdemned to be burned.

Moreouer, the moſt reuerent fathers the archbiſhops, and biſhops, (for that time preſent) of Cāterbury, Yorke, and Prage, Legats of the Apoſtolick ſea, in the kingdome of England and Boheme, did condemne the bookes of the ſayd Wickliffe to be burnt. And the ſayd Archbiſhoppe of Prage, commiſſarye of the Apoſtolicke ſea, did likewiſe in this behalf determin & iudge. And moreouer he did forbid, that any of thoſe bookes whiche did remayne vnburned, ſhould not be hereafter any more reade. And agayne theſe things being brought to the knowledge & vnderſtanding of the Apoſtolicke ſea, and the generall councell: The Biſhop of Rome in his laſt Councell, condemned the ſayde bookes, treatiſes and volumes, commaunding them to be openly burned. Moſt ſtraightly forbidding, that any men which ſhould beare the name of Chriſt, ſhould be ſo hardy either to keep, read, or expound any of the ſayde bookes or treatiſes, volumes, or workes, or by any meanes to vſe or occupy them: either els to alledge thē opēly or priuely, but to their reproofe & infamy. And to the intent that this moſt daūgerous and filthy doctrine ſhould be vtterly wiped away out of the Church, he gaue commaundemēt throughout al places: that the Ordinaries ſhould diligētly enquire and ſeeke out by the Apoſtolick authority and Eccleſiaſticall cenſure, for all ſuch bookes, treatiſes, volumes, & workes. And the ſame ſo being found, to burne & conſume thē with fire: prouiding withall, that if there be any ſuch foūd, which will not obey the ſame: proceſſe to be made agaynſt them, as agaynſt the fauourers and mayntayners of hereſies. And this moſt holy Synode hath cauſed the ſayd 45. Articles to be examined and oft times peruſed, by manye moſt reuerend fathers of the Church of Rome, Cardinals Biſhops, Abbots, maiſters of diuinitye and Doctours of both lawes, beſides a great number of other learned men: the which Articles being ſo examined, it was found (as in truth it was no leſſe) that many, yea a great number of thē to be notoriouſly for heretical reproued and condemned by the holy fathers: other ſome not to be Catholick, but erroneous: ſome full of offence and blaſphemy: Certayn of thē offenſiue vnto godlye eares and many of thē to be raſhfull and ſeditious. It is found alſo, that his bookes do contain many Articles of like effect and quality, and that they doe induce and bring into the Church, vnſoūd and vnwholeſome doctrine, contrary vnto the fayth and ordinance of ẏ Church. Wherefore in the name of our Lorde Ieſu Chriſt, this ſacred Synode, ratefying and approuing the ſentēces and iudgements of the Archbiſhops & counſell of Rome: do by this their decree and ordinance, perpetually for euer more condemne and reproue, the ſayd Articles and euery one of them, his bookes which he intituled his Dialogue and Trialogue, & all other bookes of the ſame author, volumes, treatiſes & workes, by what name ſo euer they bee entituled or called, the which we will here to be ſufficiently expreſſed and named. Alſo we forbid the reading, learning, expoſition, or alledging of any of the ſayd bookes, vnto all faythfull Chriſtians, but ſo farreforth as ſhall tend to the reproofe of the ſame: forbidding all and ſingular Catholick perſons vnder the payn of curſe, that from henceforth they be not ſo hardy openly to preach, teach, or holde, or by any meanes to alledge the ſayd Articles or any of them, except (as is aforeſayd) that it do tend vnto the reproofe of them: commaunding all thoſe bookes, treatiſes, works, and volumes aforeſayd to be openly burned, as it was decreed in the Synode at Rome, as is afore expreſſed. For the execution whereof duely to be obſerued and done, the ſayd ſacred Synode doth ſtraitly charge & commaund the ordinaries of the places, diligently to attend & looke vnto the matter, according as it appertayneth vnto euery mās duty, by the Canonicall lawes and ordinaunces.

2. As John was figuratiuely Helias, and not perſonally, ſo the bread figuratiuely is the body of Chriſt, and not naturally. And that without all doubt, this is a figuratiue ſpeach, to ſay: this is my body, as to ſay: This John, is Helias.

3. In the Decree, Ergo Berengarius, the Courte of Rome hath determined that the Sacrament of the holy Euchariſt, is naturaly true bread.

4. They which do affirme, that the infantes of the faythful departing without the Sacrament of baptiſme, are not to be ſaued: be preſumptuous, and fooles in ſo affirming.

5. The adminiſtration of the Sacrament of confirmatiō, is not onely reſerued to the Biſhops.

6, In the time of S. Paule, onely two orders of Clerkes did ſuffice in the Church: Prieſts, and Deacons. Neither was there in the time of the Apoſtles any deſtinction of Popes, Patriarches and Archbiſhops, and Biſhops, but theſe the Emperors pride did finde it out.

7. Such as in times paſt either for couetouſnes of temporall lucre, or of hope of mutuall ſuccour by kindred, or for cauſe to excuſe their luſt (although they diſpayred of iſſue) were maryed: were coupled together, not by true Matrimony.

9, Theſe words, I will take thee to wife, are rather to be taken in contract of matrimony, then theſe wordes I doe take thee to wife. And the contract with any party by the words of the future tence, ought not to be fruſtrate for the contract with any party afterward made, by the words of the preſent time.

10. There be 12. diſciples of Antechriſt, Popes, Cardinals, Patriarches, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Archdeacons, Officials, Deanes, Monkes, Chanons, Friers, and Pardoners.

11. In the booke of Numbers the 18. chapter & in Ezechiell. 44. chapter it is commaunded ſimply, that neither the Prieſtes of Aaron, nor the Leuites ſhould haue any part of inheritance with other tribes, but ſhould liue meerly of tithes and oblations.

12. There is no greater hereticke or Antechriſt, then that Clerke which teacheth that it is lawfull for Prieſtes and Leuites of the law of grace, to be indued with temporall poſſeſſions. And if there be any heretickes, Apoſtates, or blaſphemers, theſe Clerkes be ſuch.

13. It is not onely lawfull for the Lords temporal to take away goods of fortune from the Churchmen, ſinning vſually: but alſo are bounde ſo to doe, vnder payne of eternall damnation.

14. He that is the more humble and more ſeruiceable to the Church, and more enamoured with the loue of Chriſt, he is in the church militant, the greater and the more nereſt Vicar of Chriſt.

15. If corporall vnction or aneling were a Sacrament (as now it is fayned to be) Chriſt and his Apoſtles would not haue left the ordinaunce therof vntouched.

16. Unto the true dominion ſecular, is required vertuous life of him that ruleth.

17. All thinges that happen, doe come abſolutely of neceſſity.

18. whatſoeuer the Pope or his Cardinalles can deduce clearely out of the Scripture: that only is to be beleued, or to be done at their monitiō: & whatſoeuer otherwiſe they do commaund is to be condemned as hereticall.

Notwithſtanding, on the contrary part ſome there were againe both learned and godly, which taking ẏ part of wickliffe, without all flattery, defended the moſt of the ſayd articles, openly in ſcholes and other places, as appeareth by the works of John Hus: who in his publicke determinations in the vniuerſity of Prage, ſtoode in defence of the ſame agaynſt all his aduerſaryes. As partly is here to be ſeene in theſe tractations vnder folowing.

¶ THE PVBLICK DEFENCE of certayne Articles of Iohn Wickliffe, in the firſt Act before the whole Vniuerſity of Prage, in Charles Colledge

¶ The determination of I. Hus vpon the xiiij. Article of Wickliffe as touching the preaching and hearing of the word of God, made in the yeare of our Lord. 1412.

For ſo much as to condemne the trueth wittingly or without reaſonable examination doth tende to greate daunger of ſaluation, as the Lord ſayth. Luke the ſixt, doe ye not condemne, and ye ſhall not be condemned: Therefore to auoyd this great dāger, the Uniuerſity of Prage, and the whole communalty there of the Rector Maſters, Doctors, Bachelers and Studentes, in theyr generall aſſembly, not agreeing to the condemnation pronounced by the Doctors in theyr councell houſe, requireth of the ſayde Doctors a reaſonable proofe of theyr condemnation, and that they ſhould by ſcripture, authority or infallible reaſō proue the falſehead of euery thoſe fiue and forty Articles. The which being once done, the ſayd Uniuerſity will agree to the ſayd condemnation as iuſt: For the Uniuerſity doth well know, that as Auguſtine ſayth, in the end of his ſecond booke of Chriſtian doctrine: That what ſo euer a man doth learne beſides the holy ſcriptures, if it be hurtfull, there it is condemned: If it be profitable, there it is founde. And when a man hath founde all thinges therein which he hath profitably learned els where, he ſhall much more aboundantly finde thoſe thinges which are found in no place els, but are learned in the maruelous deapth, and maruellous profoundneſſe of thoſe moſt ſacred Scriptures onely.

The whole Vniuerſitie is againſt the iudgement of the doctours which condemned the 45. articles.

Auguſt. lib. de doct. chri. lib. 2.

Thus writeth Auguſtine: And Gregory in his three & twenty booke of Moralles, ſayth thus, God in the holye ſcripture hath comprehended whatſoeuer thing may happen vnto any man, and in the ſame hath, by the examples of thoſe which are gone afore, taught them which are to come, how to reforme theyr liues. whereby it appeareth that if euery of the fiue and forty Articles conteyneth in it wholly the thing that is falſe and vntruth, the ſame is either playnelye or darckly condemned in the holye Scriptures.

Grego. moral. lib. 23.

Secondly it followeth by the ſentence and minde of this holy man that if the condemation of the fiue and forty Articles be profitable, the ſame is founde in the holy ſcriptures. And where as agayne Saynt Auguſtine writeth vnto Saynt Hierome in his eight Epiſtle and the ninth Diſtinction. I (ſayth he) haue learned to attribute this honor and reuerence vnto thoſe writers onely which are called Canonicall, that I dare affirme none of them to haue erred in theyr workes or writinges. As for all other writers I doe ſo read them that although they abound wyth neuer ſo much holyneſſe, or excell in doctrine, I do not by and by thinke it true becauſe they themſelues do ſo iudge:

but if they can by other Canonicall Authors or probable reaſons perſwade or proue that they doe not degreſſe frõ the trueth.

Alſo the ſayd Auguſtine in his booke De vnico Baptiſmo Lib. 2. ſayeth thus: who doeth not knowe or vnderſtande that the holy canonicall ſcripture to be contayned in hys owne bondes and limittes, and the ſame to be preferred before all other letters and decrees of Biſhops. &c. And a litle after he hath the like ſaying: as for the letters of other Biſhops, which haue bene written or be written (after the Canon being confirmed) they may lawfully be reprehended and reproued both by the word of them that be more ſkilfull in that matter, and alſo by the auncient authority of other Biſhops, or by the prudẽce and wiſedome of ſuch as be better learned, or more expert, or els by generall cõſels if it ſo chaunce that they in any poynt haue erred and gone a ſtray from the ſincere truth.

By theſe ſayings of S. Auſten and other like. &c. The Uniuerſity of Prage hath concluded and determined that they will not receiue the condemnation of the fiue and forty Articles made by the Doctors in their councel houſe as iuſt and true, except they which condemned them, will proue theyr condemnation by the holy Scriptures and probable reaſons vpõ euery of the fiue and forty Articles.

Wherefore for the dew examination of the foreſayd cõdemnation, whether it be effectuall or no, we will at thys preſent take in hand the fouretenth Article of the number of the fiue and forty, which Article is this.

The 14. article of I. Wickliffe.

They which leaue of preaching and hearing of ỹ word of God for feare of excommudication of men, are alreadye excommunicate, and in the day of iudgement ſhalbe counted the betrayers of Chriſt.

The defēce of this 14. Article.

This Article conteineth firſt that all prieſts omitting the preaching of the word of God for feare of the excommunication of men they are already excommunicate.

Secondly, it conteineth that all ſuch as doe omitte the hearing of the word of God, for feare of excommunicatiõ, are already excommunicated.

Thirdlye that both theſe ſortes of men in the daye of iudgement ſhalbe counted traitors of Chriſt.

The preaching of the Goſpel cõmaunded of God.

As concerning the firſt poynt, it is preſuppoſed that the preaching of the word of God, is commaunded vnto the Apoſtles and theyr followers, as it appeareth in Mathew the tenth, where it is ſayd. Ieſus ſent his xij. Diſciples, commaunding them and ſaying goe and preach, that the kingdome of heauen is at hand. Alſo in the laſt of Mathew, and the tenth of Luke. Whereupon, Peter the Apoſtle of Chriſt, acknowledging this precept and commaundement for himſelfe and for the other Apoſtles and ſucceſſors in the 10. of the Actes, ſayth thus, he commaunded vs to preach and to teſtifye, that it is he which is ordayned of God the iudge both of the quicke and the dead. This commaundement alſo, the other Apoſtles did acknowledge, & ſpecially the choſen veſſell pronouncing vnder a great threatning in the firſt Corinthians 9. chap. wo be vnto me if I do not preach the Goſpell. And Pope Nicholas conſidering that great threatning in 43. Diſtinction, ſayeth: the diſpenſation and diſtribution of the heauenly ſeade is commaunded and enioyned vnto vs. Woe be vnto vs, if we doe not ſow it abroode or if we hold our peace. Whiche thing when as the veſſell of election did feare and cry out vpon, how much more ought all other inferiours to feare and dread the ſame. To the ſame purpoſe doth S. Gregory write in his paſtorall in the diſtinction. Sit rector. It is alſo euident by many other doctours and holy men as by S. Auguſtine, Hierome, Iſidore, Bernard, whoſe wordes it were here to long to rehearſe.

Gregorius. Diſt. 44. cap. Sit rector.

The hearing of the word commaunded by God

As touching the ſecond poynt that the hearing of the word and law of God, is commaunded vnto the people it is euident both by the olde and new law, for it is ſayd in the 28. of the Prouerbes, he that turneth away his eare & will not heare the law of God, his prayer ſhall be curſed. And our Sauior rebuking the Scribes and Phareſyes concludeth thus in the 8. of S. Iohn ſaying, he that is of God heareth Gods word: But forſomuch as you are not of God therfore you heare not his word.

Excommunication.

Thirdly it is to be noted that excommunication is a ſeperation from the Communion, the 11. Queſtion 3. Nihil & cap Canonica. And 17. queſtion, firſt, Viduas. 34. Queſtion 3. Cum ſacerdos. And this excommunication is double that is to ſay, either ſecret or manifeſt. The ſecret excommunication is, whereby a man is ſeperated from the miſticall body of Chriſt, and ſo from God through ſinne according vnto the 59. Pſalme. Your iniquities haue made ſeperation betwene your God and you. And with this excommunicatiõ doth the Apoſtle excommunicate euery man which doth not loue the Lorde Ieſu Chriſt. Saying in the firſt Corinth, and the laſt Chapter. If any man do not loue the Lord Ieſu Chriſt, let him be accurſed. The manifeſt and apert excommunication may be deuided into a manifeſt excommunication by God: whereof it is ſpoken. Math. 25. go ye curſed. &c. And often times els in the lawe of God. Alſo into a manifeſt excommunication by men, whereby the Prelate doth either iuſtly or vniuſtly caſt out any man from the participation of the Communion of the Church. Whereof this ſhall ſuffiſe at this preſent.

Excommunication double.

Then as touching the firſt part of the article, it is thus argued. &c.

The probation of the firſt part.

Whoſoeuer forſaketh or leaueth the commaundemẽts of God vndone, they are excommunicate of God. But the Prieſtes which leaue of the preaching of the word of God for feare of ỹ vniuſt excommunication of men do leaue the cõmaundement of God vndone. Ergo thoſe Prieſts which do leaue of preaching of the word of God are excommunicated of God.

The firſt part of this Article is true: The maior appeereth by the Pſalme. Curſed be they which doe decline and ſwarue from thy preceptes. The Minor is euident by the firſt propoſition which proueth that the preaching of the word of God, is the commaundement of God enioyned vnto thoſe Prieſtes and miniſters: whereupon the ſaying of our Sauior, Mathew 15. is ſpoken vnto them. Wherefore do you tranſgreſſe the commaundements of God for your owne traditiõs, preaching the word of God for feare of vniuſt excommunication and ſo diſhonouring the Father Chriſt and the mother the holy Church.

It is thus confirmed all they which do omit or let ſlip any maner of worke, principally and ſtraightly enioyned them of the Lord Ieſu Chriſt, vnder the cloake and coulor of grace for feare of any excommunication of men, they are already excommunicate. But Prieſtes and ſpecially Curates admoniſhed by the ſpirit of God, leauing of the preaching of the word of God for feare of the excommunication of men, they omit and leaue of for feare of the ſame excommunication a work principally and ſtraitly enioyned vnto them of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, vnder the cloake and coulor of grace: Ergo, Prieſtes and ſpecially Curates and ſuch as be admoniſhed and warned by the ſpirite of God, omitting the preaching of the word of God for feare of excommunication, are excommunicate. The conſequence is well knowen. The Maior appeareth by the Pſalme, Curſed be they which do decline and goe away from the commaundements. The Minor is alſo euident, agayne by the firſt ſuppoſition.

The Apoſtles did not obey no wicked inhibition.

Item, if the apoſtles of Chriſt had left of the preaching of the word of God for feare of the excommunication of men which the Lord did foreſhewe vnto them in the 16. of S. Iohn, ſaying. They ſhall excommunicate you out of their Sinagoges. They had bene excommunicated of God. Ergo, by like euidence the Prieſtes and Miniſters of Chriſt, being inſpired with the ſame ſpirite to preach and declare the word of God, if they leaue it vndone for feare of the excommunication of men: They are alreadye excommunicate. The conſequent dependeth vpon a ſimilitude. And the Antecedent is euident, for if the Apoſtles had left of preaching for feare of excommunication, they had broken the commaundements of God. And conſequently had bene accurſed. Wherefore they willing to obſerue and keepe the commaundementes of God, and to put of the excommunication of men, ſayde vnto the hye Prieſtes, Elders and Scribes at Ieruſalem, to Annas, Cayphas, to Iohn and Alexander, and al other of the kindred of the Prieſts which were gathered together and commaunded them that they ſhould not preache nor teach in the name of Ieſu: If it be iuſt in the ſight of God, that we ſhoulde rather obey you then God, that iudge you? Acts 4. and in the 5. of the Acts, they ſayde vnto them: we ought rather to obey God then man. By this ſaying of the Holy Ghoſt, it is concluded that the Prieſtes and miniſters o Chriſt, inſpired by the holy Ghoſt to preach the word of God, ought rather obey the holy Ghoſt then thoſe which ſhall prohibite and commaund them to the contrary, and to ſuffer the excommunication of men patiently. Whereupon P. Anacletus ſpake very well in this, as it is writte diſtinction 43. We know (ſayth he) that many doe goe about to moleſt and trouble the Doctors and Teachers to this end that they might vtterly deſtroy them, and fulfull theyr owne proper luſtes & deſires: yet notwithſtanding the ſaid Doctors as much as in them lyeth ought not to depart or goe backe from theyr good doinges and intent, knowing aſſuredly that bleſſed are they which ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake. Thus much writeth he: And the reuered Bede (vpon theſe words: Ye ſhall finde an Aſſe tyed vp, and an he fole with her, loſe her and bring her vnto mee, & if any man ſay any thing vnto you, ſay ye that the Lord hath need of them) writeth thus. Here it is miſtically commaunded vnto the Doctors and Teachers, that if any aduerſity do let or hinder, or any man doe prohibite or ſtop, that ſinners cannot be loſed from theyr bondes or ſnares, and be brought vnto the Lord, by the confeſſiõ of theyr fayth that they notwithſtanding ſhoulde not leaue of preaching but conſtantly & boldly affirme and ſay that the Lord hath need of ſuch, to edify & build agayne his Church. For ſo did the Apoſtles: ſo likewiſe ought all the humble and meeke Miniſters of Chriſt to do. And S. Hierome writing vnto Ruſticus the Biſhop of Narbone ſaith thus, Let no Biſhop frõ henceforth be puffed vp or enflamed with yͤ enuy of deuiliſh tẽptation, if the Prieſtes nowe and then do exhort and teache the people or preache openlye in the Churches, or as it is ſayd do bleſſe the people. For vnto him which ſhoulde deny vnto me the doing hereof, I would ſay in this maner: He that will not that Prieſtes ſhoulde doe thoſe thynges which they are commaunded by God, let him ſay that he is greater and aboue Chriſt, by the which wordes S. Hierome doth openly declare, that Prieſtes are commaunded to exhort and teach the people and to preach in the Churches. Secondly that a Biſhop denying or forbidding the ſame to be done, ſpecially the Prieſtes or Miniſters being apt men there vnto is extolled aboue Chriſt. And therfore conſequently is not to be obeyed or heard in his doinges.

Hieronymus ad Ruſticum.

If the pope be an heretike the godly Biſhops may preach againſt him.

Item, admit that the Pope be an Heretique and teach peruerſe and contrary doctrine vnto the holy ſcriptures, and that the Biſhop be a catholicke man vnto whom the Pope geueth in commaundement that he ſhall not ſuffer no man to preach contrary to his opinion. As it happened in Pope Leo and Saynt Hillary the Biſhop, adding this alſo that the Biſhop doe execute the Popes commaundement vnder payne of excommunication, this notwithſtãding if the Catholicke Prieſtes, learned in the law of God do leaue of preaching againſt the Popes heresies for feare of excommunication of men they are already excommunicate. The which thing is euident for ſo much as they are accurſed through the conſent of theyr ſcilence, as S. Iſidor ſayth 11. Queſtion. 1. He that doth conſent vnto ſinners or defendeth a ſinner, he ſhall be curſed both before God and man, and ſhalbe puniſhed with a moſt ſeuere rebuke, and in the 7. Queſtion. 4. Omnis, It is ſayde without he that doth neglect to amend that which he may correct committeth no leſſe fault then he which had before offended, for not onely they which do cõmit the offence, but alſo they which conſent thereunto, are iudged partakers thereof. In lyke caſe Prieſts which do not preach agaynſt the hereſy which the Pope teacheth, are dum dogges not able to open their mouthes or barcke agaynſt the woolfe which will kill the ſheep of Ieſus Chriſt: Ergo, how can it then be otherwiſe but they muſt needes be betrayers of the ſheepe of theyr owne ſhepheard.

Albeit the chief prieſts be adulterers yet ought the miniſters to preach againſt adultery.

Item, let it ſo be that the Biſhop with the chiefe Prelates be an aduouterer or otherwiſe an open offender and that he together with his Prelates doe commaund vnder payne of excommunicatiõ, that none be ſo hardy to preach agaynſt adultery, in ſuch a caſe they which do omitte theyr duety in preaching againſt adultery for feare of excommunication of men, are already excommunicated of God. Ergo the firſt part of the Article is true. The Antecedent is proued, for our ſauior in the 8. of Marke ſayth thus. He that acknowledgeth me and my wordes in this wicked and adulterous generation, the ſonne of man ſhall alſo acknowledge and confeſſe him when he ſhall come in the glorye of his Father with his Aungels. Therefore he that ſhall cõfeſſe Chriſt and theſe wordes of Chriſt Math. 5. you haue heard, that it was ſayd to them in olde time, thou ſhalt not commit adulterye: But I ſay vnto you, that euery one, which ſhall beholde a woman to luſt after her, he hath already committed adultery, with her in his heart: Hee I ſay that ſhall confeſſe theſe thinges, before an adoulterous Biſhop, with his chiefe Prelates, the which perchaunce are the wicked and adoulterous generation, the ſonne of man ſhall alſo acknowledge him, when he ſhall come in yͤ glory of his Father, and ſo conſequently is he bleſſed. Cõtrarywiſe he which for the feare of excõmunication of men will not confeſſe Chriſt and his words, before the ſinneful and adoulterous generation, is accurſed. The conſequent holdeth by the wordes of Chriſt. Luk. 9. He that is aſhamed of me and my wordes, him ſhall the ſonne of man be aſhamed of, when he ſhall come in his maieſty, and in the glory of his Father and his holy Aungels, pronouncing that which is ſpoken Math. 25. Verely, I ſay vnto you, I know you not, go you curſed into euerlaſting fire.

The example of Chriſt.

Alſo our Sauiour Ieſu Chriſt, did not omitt or leaue of the preaching of the kingdome of God, for any pretended excommunication of the Biſhops, Scribes and Phariſies: So likewiſe his true and humble Prieſtes, ought not to omit theyr preaching, for any pretenſed excommunication of men, the conſequent holdeth by the ſaying of Chriſt. Iohn. 15. be ye mindfull of the words which I haue ſpoken vnto you, the ſeruaunt is not greater then his maſter: If they haue perſecuted me, they will perſecute you alſo. The Antecedent is apparant by the ſaying of Saynt Iohn in his 9. chapter. Euen now the Iewes had conſpired, that whoſoeuer did confeſſe him to be Chriſt, ſhoulde be excommunicate. And likewiſe Iohn. 7. whether did any of the Princes or rulers, or any of the Phareſeis beleue in him. But this people which knoweth not the law are accurſed.

The obedience of chriſtian prieſts towarde their Prelates,

Alſo the humble and iuſt miniſters of God, ought not vnder payne of ſinne to ceaſe from the fruitfull preaching of the law of God for any vniuſt excommunicatiõ, or vnlawfull commaundement, and it is proued thus: the humble and iuſt miniſters of Chriſt, ought to obey theyr Prelates, in ſuch thinges as are not contrary to God: as all the holy Doctors, and ſuch as are learned in the Lawe of God, do wholy with one conſent affirme. And forſomuch, as an vniuſt excommunication, and vnlawfull commaũdement, are agaynſt God, therefore the iuſt and true miniſters of God, ought not to obey ſuch vnlawfull excommunication, and commaundements, and conſequently ought not to ceaſe for them, from the fruitefull preaching of the Goſpell of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt. But ought boldely and gladly to preach the ſame. For ſo muche, as the Lord doth comfort them in the 5. of Mathew, ſaying thus, bleſſed and happye are ye, when as men doe curſe you, and perſecute you, and ſpeake all kinde of euill againſt you, making lies and ſlaunders vpon you, for my ſake, reioyce and be glad, for great is your reward in heauen.

The power of preaching to edification ought not to ceaſe,

Alſo euery Miniſter hauing power geuen him from aboue, to preach the Goſpell, he hath the ſame geuen vnto him for the edefying of the Church, and not for the deſtruction of the ſame.

As the Apoſtle ſaith 2. Corinth. 10. But euery one, leauing of the preaching of the Goſpell, for feare of any pretenſed excommunication of men, he ſhoulde fruſtrate the power geuẽ him, for the edefying of the Church. And therfore in ſo doing ſhould ſinne agaynſt God and his church: And conſequently ought rather to chuſe, not to ceaſe from preaching, for feare of any ſuch excommunicatiõ, leaſt that he be excommunicate of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt.

The preaching of the Goſpell is not to bee left of for al the popes prohibition.

Item, ſet caſe that the Pope doth commaũd that there ſhall be no preachinge in any place, then the Miniſters of Chriſt, leauing of theyr preaching, for feare of the Popes curſe, are already excommunicated of God. It is euident, for ſo much as they haue neglected the commaundement of God for the commaundement of men. And this caſe is poſſible: For by what reaſon the Pope may commaunde vnder payne of excõmunication that there ſhalbe no preaching in any place, neither in the pariſh Churches, by the ſame reaſon, he may command that no man ſhould preach in any place.

The firſt part is euident by the prohibition of Pope Alexander, who in his bull, did prohibite to preach yͤ word of God, vnto the people in Chappels, although the ſayde Chappels were confirmed by the priuiledge of the Sea apoſtolicke. The which Bull, the Lord Subincon Archbyſhop of Prage, with his Canons, obteyned. By theſe aforeſayd, the firſt part of the Article is euidẽt, which is this that all Prieſtes omitting the preaching of the woorde of God, for feare of the excommunication of men, are already excommunicate.

The ſecond part of the article,

The ſeconde part of the Article is this, that all they which doe omitte, the hearing of the woorde of God, for feare of the excommunication of men are alreadye excommunicate.

And it is proued thus, all ſuch as neglect the cõmaundementes of God, are excommunicate. But they whiche neglect the hearing of the word of God, for the excommunication of men, are they which neglect the commaundementes of God. Therfore they which omit the hearing of the word of God for the excommunication of men are already excommunicate.

The Maior, is apparant by the 118. Pſalme. Curſed be they which decline from thy commaundementes. And the Minor is euident, by the ſecond ſuppoſition, which ſayth, that the hearing of the word of God is commaunded vnto the people.

Meanes neceſſary vnto ſaluation are not to be omitted.

This is confirmed, al ſuch as omit the neceſſary mean vnto ſaluation, are excommunicate: but ſuch as omitte the hearing of the woorde of God for the excommunication by men, be ſuch as do omit the neceſſary mean vnto ſaluation.

tion. Therefore, in ſo doing they are excommunicate: The conſequent is playne: The Maior is made euidēt by this: That all ſuche as do omit the neceſſary meane vnto ſaluation doe alſo neglect theyr ſaluation, and ſo are out of the way of ſaluation, and be excommunicated of God. The Minor appeareth hereby that to heare the word of God is the meane more neceſſary vnto ſaluation, as the apoſtle doth proue in his 10. chapter to the Romains. How ſayth he, ſhall they beleue on him, whō they neuer heard of? And how ſhal they heare without a preacher? And by & by after the Apoſtle inferreth vnto the purpoſe. That fayth commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

Item, what ſo euer is done contrary vnto conſcience, doth edefy vnto eternall damnation: As it is ſaid, as touching the reſtitutiō of the ſpoyled goods. Chap. Literas porro: But to omit the hearing of the word of God, for feare of excommunicatiō of men, is a thing which is done againſt conſcience. Therefore to omit the hearing of the worde of God for excōmunication, doth edefy vnto eternal damnatiō. And therfore cōſequētly ought not to be done, for feare of any excommunication: wherfore a woman being iudged vnto a man, whom ſhe knoweth to be within the degrees of cōſanguinity, which Gods law hath prohibited, ought not to obey that iudgement leaſt that ſhe offend againſt God: but meekly & patiently to ſuſtain yͤ excommunication, as it appereth in the chapter before alledged: So likewiſe all true chriſtians ought rather then to offend agaynſt God, meekly to ſuffer the excōmunication of men, thē to omit the hearing of the word of God. To this purpoſe alſo, ſerueth that which is ſpoken in the 11. queſt. 3. He that feareth the omnipotēt God, will not preſume by any meanes to do any thing contrary vnto the goſpell or apoſtles, either contrary vnto the Prophetes, or the inſtitutions of yͤ holy fathers. By theſe premiſes, the 2. part o. this article is manifeſt, that all ſuch as do omit, the hearing of the word of God, for feare of excommunication of men, they are already excommunicated.

A mā ought to doe nothing againſt his conſcience.

The obedience of chriſtian prieſts towarde their Prelates.

And forſomuch, as all chriſtians, being of lawfull age, not repenting at yͤ end, ſhalbe counted, in a maner as traitors of Chriſt, in the day of iudgement, becauſe that they were vnfaythfull ſeruauntes of Chriſt. Therefore they which through feare omit the preaching & hearing yͤ word of God, for the excommunication of men, ſhall be counted as trayers of Chriſt, and ſhall render account therof, vnto the Lord: whereupon Chriſoſtome, touching both thoſe ſorts in the 41, Homely, ſhewing how the Lord woulde haue ſome to be teachers, and other ſome to be diſciples: ſayth thus. For vnto thoſe which he would haue to be teachers, he ſpeaketh thus by his Prophet Eſay: Ye prieſtes, ſpeak in the harts of the people, for if yͤ prieſtes do not manifeſt all the truth vnto the people, they ſhall rēder accoūt therof at the day of iudgemēt. And likewiſe if the people do not learne the truth they ſhal alſo geue an account at yͤ day of iudgemēt. It is alſo made more euidēt by him, vpō the tenth of Mathew. Do not feare them which kill the body, leaſt that through the feare of death, you do not frely ſpeak that which you haue heard, neither boldly preach that vnto all mē, which you alone haue heard in your eares. So yͤ hereby alone it is euidēt, that not onely he is a betrayer of the truth, which tranſgreſſing the truth, doth openly ſpeak lyes in the ſtead of truth: But he alſo, which doth not freely pronounce or doth not freely defend the truth, which he ought boldly to defēd, is alſo a traytor vnto the truth. For like as the Prieſt is a debter to preach the truth which he hath heard of the Lord: enē ſo the lay man is bound to defend the truth, which he hath heard of the miniſter approued by the ſcriptures, which if he do not, then is he a traytor vnto the truth. For ſtedfaſt beliefe, with the hart preuayleth vnto righteouſnes, the confeſſion which is made with the mouth, helpeth vnto ſaluation. Thus much writeth Chriſoſtome; who together with the people meekely bearing the excommunication of the Biſhops freely preached truth, and the people heard him, and ſo by hys word and his workes he freely taught the truth, leaſt he ſhould be a Traytor vnto the truth, & conſequently be counted as a Traytour vnto our Lord Ieſu Chriſt, in the day of iudgement. And thus the third part of the Article aforeſayde, is manifeſt.

The profes of the third parte,

The ſecond part of the article.

¶ The defenſion of the xv. Article of Iohn Wickliffe by Iohn Huſſe.

The xv. article of Wicliffe.

It is lawfull for any Deacon or Prieſt, to preach the worde of God without the authority of the Apoſtolicke Sea, or of his Catholickes.

Meanes neceſſary vnto ſaluation are not to be omitted.

Firſt I vnderſtand here, by the authority of the Apoſtolicke Sea, properly his ſpeciall conſent, authoriſing. And likewiſe I vnderſtand by authority of the Biſhop, a ſpeciall conſent of the Biſhop, authoriſing the ſayde Deacon or Prieſt to preach.

The confirmation of the article

Now as touching the truth of this Article, I thus argue, like as after matrimony once complete, the man and wife may lawfully without any ſpeciall licēce of the Pope or Biſhop, procreate carnall children: So likewiſe Deacons or Prieſtes by the motion of God through the Goſpell of Ieſu Chriſt may lawfully without any ſpeciall licence either of the Pope or Biſhoppe generate ſpirituall children. Ergo, this Article is true and the antecedent is thus proued. For as it is an acceptable worke vnto God for man and wife without the ſpeciall licence of the Pope or Biſhop to generate carnall children, ſo it is acceptable vnto him, that Deacons or Prieſts by the motion of God through the Goſpel of Ieſu Chriſt, ſhould lawfully generate ſpirituall children without the ſpeciall licence of the Pope or of any other Byſhop, Ergo, the aſſumptio is true.

Euery man being lawfully called of the church ought to preach the word of God without the Popes lycence.

But if any man wil deny this ſimilitude, let him ſhew the diuerſitye. Yea ſeing it is worſe not to receiue, or to choake the ſeed of Gods word, then the carnall ſeed: So contrarywiſe, is it better to receiue and ſow abroad that ſeed of the word of God whereby children might be rayſed vp vnto God, then to receiue or geue ſuch ſeede, whereby carnall children may be gotten. whereupon our Sauiour in the 10. of Mathew ſayth thus: whoſoeuer doth not receiue you, neither heareth your wordes, wype of the duſte from your feete, verelye I ſay vnto you that in the daye of iudgement, it ſhalbe more better vnto the Lande of Sodome and Gomer then to that City.

Alſo a Deacon or Prieſt being ſturred by the ſpirite of Ieſus Chriſt may preache the word of God without the ſpeciall licence of the Pope or Biſhop. Ergo, it is lawful for him ſo to do. The conſequent is thus manifeſt, for ſo much as the ſpirite of God mooning the Deacon or Prieſt vnto the preaching of the Goſpell, is of greater force then anye prohibition of Pope or Biſhop inuented by man: Ergo, according vnto the rule of the Apoſtles they ought infallibly to be obediēt vnto the ſpirit of Chriſt which doth ſo moue them therunto, and rather to obey God then man. Actes. 5. Alſo by like reaſon as Heldad and Medad vpon whom the ſpirit of God did reſt, did lawfully prophecy without requiring any licence at Moyſes handes, as it is written. Numery. 11. by the ſame reaſon may the meeck miniſter of Chriſt, vpon whom the ſpirite of God doth reſt, without the requiring any licence, either of the Pope or Biſhoppe, may lawfully preache the worde of God vnto the people. And would to God in this behalfe all Prelats had the ſpirite of Moyſes, for it is ſayd: Numeri. 11. That when as Heldad and Medad were prophecying in the tentes, a childe ranne vnto Moiſes and tolde him, ſaying, Heldad and Medad do prophecye in the Tentes, and by and by Ioſue the ſonne of Nunne the ſeruaunt of Moyſes which he had choſen out amongſt many, (ſayd) my maiſter Moiſes forbid them, and he ſayd, why enuieſt thou for my ſake, would God that all the people could prophecy, and that the Lord would geue them his ſpirite. O woulde to God the Pope and Biſhops had the affection which this holye man the frend of God had. Then would he not prohibite the meeke Deacons and Miniſters of Ieſus Chriſt, to preach the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt. The like affection had the bleſſed man Gregory which in his 22. booke of Morals writeth vpon theſe wordes of Iob. And I haue afflicted the ſoule of his huſbandmen, he ſayth thus, the huſbandmen of this earth are theſe, which being ſet in ſmall authority, with as feruent deſire as they can, and with as great labor as they may, doe worke by the preaching, of grace to the erudition of the holy Churche, the which huſband men of this world not to afflict, is not to enuy their labors and doinges: neither ought the ruler of the Church, albeit he doe chalenge vnto himſelfe alone the title of preaching, through enuy gaineſay others which do preach truely and vprightly. For the godly mind of the paſture which ſeketh not his owne glory amongeſt men, deſireth to be holpen, the which thing alſo the faythfull preacher doth wiſh, if it might by any meanes, be brought to paſſe, that the trueth which he alone cā not ſufficiētly expreſſe, all mēs mouthes might declare.

God graunt that al the people may prophecye.

wherefore when as Ioſue woulde haue reſiſted the 2. which were prophecying in the hoſt, why doeſt thou enuy (ſayd he) for my ſake, for he did not enuy that good in other which he himſelfe had, this writeth S. Gregory.

Alſo the meeke miniſters of Chriſt haue by a ſpeciall gift of God, knowledge and minde to preach the Goſpell, but neither is it lawfull for the Pope or Biſhop or any other ther man to let or hinder them, leaſt thereby they ſhould let the word of God, that it haue not his free courſe. Ergo, this article is true, for the king doth not ſo much rule ouer the goods of his ſubiects, no not of his owne ſonnes, but yͤ they may geue almes to whom they will: much more the biſhop hath not ſo great authority ouer the knowledge of the meeke miniſter, with his other giftes of God, but that he may frely vnder the title of ſpirituall almes freely preach the goſpell vnto the people. Ergo, foraſmuch it ſhould ſeme ſtraunge that a Biſhop ſhould forbid any man to geue any corporall almes to the poore that are a hũgred, much more ſtraũge and maruelous would it be, if that he ſhould prohibite the ſpirituall miniſter of Chriſt to geue ſpirituall almes, by the preaching of the goſpell of the word of God.

The courſe of the worde of God ought not to be ſtopped.

Item no catholicke man ought to doubt, but that a man able for the purpoſe is more bounde to teache them which are ignoraunt, to councell & comfort the weake in ſpirit, to correct ſuch as are vnruly, to forgeue thoſe that do thẽ wrong, thẽ to do any other work of mercy, forſomuch then as he that hath ſufficient, is bound vnder paine of dãnation to geue corporall almes as it appeareth Math. 25. much more he which is able, is bound to doe ſpirituall almes. And this alms S. Barnard writing vnto Eugenius in his 3. book perceiued to be very neceſſary for the Biſhop of Rome, where as he ſaid thus: I feare no greater poyſõ, nor greater ſword or miſchiefe will happen vnto thee, thẽ this vnſatiable deſire of dominion. With what face then cã the faythfull miniſter withdraw or keepe back, the ſpirituall almes from the Pope and any other, euen without the ſpeciall licence of the Pope or of the Biſhop, which licence through the far diſtance from the Pope, the miniſters can not ſo eaſily obtaine or come by: For all prohibition of anye Prelate beeing broken through neceſſitye is not to be blamed. 11. Queſt. 3. Interceſſor, and alſo in the chapter folowing.

Bernarde.

Item, all authoritye of preaching geuen vnto deacons and Prieſtes in theyr conſecration were but vayne, except that in caſe of neceſſitye without any ſpeciall licence they might preach the goſpell. It is euident, forſomuch as it is not lawfull for them to vſe that authority, by their aduerſary without a ſpeciall licẽce. Ergo, it is geuẽ them in vain. The conſequent is euident by the common ſaying of the Philoſopher, that power is but vayne, wherof proceedeth no vſe of action. But forſomuch as this Article doth as it were depend vpon the article before paſſed, therefore this ſhall ſuffice, ſpoken therof at this preſent.

Obiection.

But agaynſt the affirmations of both theſe Articles, this is obiected, out of the 16. queſt. 1. All faythfull people, and ſpecially all prieſts deacons and all others of the clergy, ought to take heede that they doe nothing without the licence of theyr biſhop. It is alſo obiected out of the 5. book of Decretals, Titulo de hereticis cap. cũ ex iniuncto. Where it is no man ought to vſurp to himſelf, indifferẽtly the office of preaching, forſomuch as the Apoſtle ſayth, how ſhall they preach except they be ſent. Where as alſo Innocentius doth declare, that it is not ſufficiẽt for a man to ſay, that he is ſent of God to preach except he do ſhew the ſame. As touching the firſt poynt, the Gloſe doth ſufficiently aunſwere vpon this word without licence, that is to be expounded, ſayth he, without generall licence: the which is obtayned and geuen, when as a biſhop doth appoynt any prieſt to gouern the people. For therby (ſayth he) it ſemeth a biſhop is thought to geue him generall power to miniſter vnto the people and to rule the church. Thus much in the gloſe. And to the ſame end and purpoſe it is ſayd in the 7. queſt. 1. chap. Epiſcopi Biſhops or Prieſtes, if they come vnto the church of an other Biſhop, for to viſite the ſame, as it is ſaid, gloſe. 1. in honore ſuo. Let them be receiued in their degree, and deſired as well to preach the word, as to do any other conſecration or oblation. Secondly it is to be noted, yͭ which is very wel ſpoken in yͤ ſame place, no man ought to vſurpe vnto himſelfe the office of preaching, as a thing indifferent. For to vſurpe, is vnlawfully to vſe any thing: ergo, the ſame deacon or prieſt, doth then vſurpe the office of preaching as indifferẽtly, who liuing viciouſly, cõtrary vnto the law of Chriſt, or being ignorant of the law of God, doth preach either for gayne, or couetouſnes of lyuing, either for his belly or dainty life, or for any vaynglory, but he whiche doth liue according vnto the lawes of Chriſt, & being moued with the affection of ſincere charity intending purely the honor of God and the ſaluatiõ of him ſelfe & his neighbors, doth preach no lyes nor vayne ieſts or other things not authoriſed, but only the law of Chriſt, & the minds of yͤ holy doctors. And he that doth ſo preach, neceſſity occationing or mouing him therunto, in caſe there be no Pope or Biſhop, or in caſe poſſible to withſtand the preaching of hereticks, or falſe preachers, he in ſo doing doth not vſurpe the office of preaching, and in ſuche caſe there is no doubt but he is ſent of God, and this doth alſo anſwere vnto that, which is conſequently ſayd, that if any man will peraduẽture craftely anſwere, that ſuch preachers are inuiſibly ſẽt of God, although not viſibly of mẽ, when as that inuiſible ſẽding of God is much more better thẽ the viſible ſending of men: A man may reaſonably anſwere therunto, that forſomuch as that internall ſẽding is ſecret, it is not ſufficient for a man onely to ſay that he is ſent of God, forſomuch as euery hereticke may ſo ſay, but he ought to proue the ſame his inuiſible calling, by yͤ working of ſome miracle, or by ſome ſpeciall teſtimony of the ſcripture.

Foure kynds of ſending or calling.

Here it is to be noted, according to S. Auguſtine in his 65. booke of queſt. vnto Oroſius, that there is 4. kindes of ſending. The firſt is from God onely, whereof we read in Moiſes & other, which were inſpired by God. And this kinde of ſending, loſeth from the daunger of the ſtatute: ſo that he whom the ſpirit of God hath enſpired, this prelate geuing thankes, may proceed vnto a better life. Wherupõ Pope Vrbane ſayd 19. queſt. 2. There be (ſayd he) 2. lawes yͤ one publick the other priuate. The publick law is that which is confirmed in writing by yͤ holy fathers, ſuch as is the canon law: which is only geuen for tranſgreſſions: As for example, it is decreed in the canons, that none of yͤ clergy ſhall go frõ one biſhoprick vnto an other, without yͤ letters commendatory of his biſhop, the which was ordeined onely for offẽders, that no infamed perſons ſhould be receiued of any biſhop. For they were wont when they could not celebrate or do their office vnder their owne Biſhopricke, to go vnto another: which now is forbidden by the lawes and precepts. The priuate law is that which by yͤ inſtruction of the holy Ghoſt, is written in yͤ hart as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, of many, which haue yͤ law of God, written in their hartes. And in an other place: For ſomuch as the Gentiles haue not the law of God, but naturally doe thoſe thinges, which are of the law, they are lawes vnto thẽſelues. And afterward he ſayth, yͤ priuate law is much more worthy, then the publicke law. For the ſpirit of god, is a law: And they which are moued by the ſpirit of God, are led by the law of God: And who is he, that can worthely reſiſt agaynſt the holy Ghoſt? Whoſoeuer therfore is led by the ſpirit of God, albeit his biſhop do ſay him nay, let him go freely by our authority, for yͤ law is not appointed for the iuſt man, for where as the ſpirit of God is, there is liberty, and if ye be led by the ſpirite of God, ye are not vnder the law.

The cõmon lawe.

The priuate lawe.

Priuate law that is the ſecrete and inward working of gods ſpirite in the heart.

The words of pope Vrbane.

Beholde here it is affirmed, that the ſending by God, through inſpiration, is not bound vnder yͤ bondage of the law, for that law is more worthye then the publicke law. Secondly that the law is made for tranſgreſſors & offenders, and not for the iuſt. Thirdly, that whoſoeuer is ledd by the ſpirite of God, although his Biſhop ſtand agaynſt him, he may proceed vnto a better life. Wherby it is euidẽt that a deacon or prieſt, diſpoſed to preach, and being led by the ſpirit of God, he may freely preach the goſpell of chriſt without the ſpiritual licence of his biſhop. It is euidẽt forſomuch as it is good, that a deacon or prieſt, do liue well & preach fruitfully. Ergo, he may procede from idlenes vnto the labor & office of preaching, and ſo vnto a better life.

But where as it is ſayde afore, that for ſo much as the inward ſending or calling is ſecret, therfore it is not ſufficient for a man, barely to affirme onely, yͭ he is ſent of god, when as euery heretick may ſo ſay, but it is neceſſary, that he do confirme & proue his inuiſible ſending, by the working of ſome miracle, or by ſome ſpeciall teſtimony of yͤ ſcripture. Here is to be noted, that there are 2. kindes of preachers, ſome true preachers of our ſauior Chriſt, & other ſeducers of Antechriſt. The firſt ſort following the mayſter Chriſt, teach the people in truth: The other ſort, being of a corrupt minde, and reprobate touching faith, reſiſt againſt yͤ verity. And through couetouſnes, by their fained words do make marchandiſe of the people: And theſe mẽ do geue & ſhal geue miracles, as our ſauior ſaith, Math. 24. There ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts, and falſe prophets, the which ſhall ſhew great ſignes and wonders, in ſo much that euen the elect thẽſelues, if it were by any meanes poſſible, ſhoulde be brought into error. And the apoſtle in the 2. to the Theſ. 2. as touching their head Antechriſt, writeth thus, whoſe comming ſhalbe according to yͤ operation of ſathan with al power and ſignes, falſe miracles, ſeducing vnto iniquity, thoſe which do periſh, becauſe they haue not receiued yͤ charity and loue of truth, that they might be ſaued: Therfore will the Lord ſend vpon them the operation of error, that they ſhall geue credit vnto lies. That all ſuch as haue not beleued the truth, but conſent vnto wickednes, ſhould be iudged: Behold, how expreſſely our Sauior by himſelf, Euery man may pretẽd to be ſent of God, immediately.

Two kinde of preachers

Of the ſignes and wonders of Antichriſt.

Why true miracles ſhall ceaſe vnder Antechriſt.

and by his Apoſtle doth teach vs, how the diſciples of Antechriſt, with theyr head, ſhould ſhine through their great ſignes and wōders: But the true diſciples of Chriſt, ſhall not ſo do, in the time of Antechriſt. For as S. Iſidor ſayth in his firſt booke, 22. De ſummo bono: Before that Antechriſt ſhall appeare, all vertues and ſignes ſhall ceaſe from the Church, that he may the boldlier perſecute the ſame, as an abiect. For this profit, ſhall all miracles and ſignes ceaſe, vnder Antechriſt, that thereby the patience of the holy mē might be known, and the lightnes of the reprobate, which are offēded, may be opened, & alſo that the cruelty of ẏ perſecuters ſhuld be made more ſcarce. Thus writeth S. Iſidor, & S. Gregory in his 24. booke of Morals, ſayth: For why by a terrible examination of Gods ſecret diſpēſatiō, ſhall all ſignes of vertue, or power be takē away from the holy church, before that the Leuiathan appeare, in ẏ moſt wicked and damnable man, whoſe ſhape, he doth take vpon him. For prophecy is hidden, the gift of healing is takē away, the vertue of lōg abſtinēce, is deminiſhed, ẏ words of doctrine is put to ſilence, and the wonderfull workes of miracles are extinguiſhed, which things, nothing can vtterly take away: but onely the diſpenſation of God. But this diſpēſatiō, is not ſo openly & manifoldly declared, as it hath bene in times paſt, the which alſo is done by a maruelous diſpenſation, that through one onely thing, both Gods loue & iuſtice ſhould be fulfilled. For a while ẏ power of miracles, being taken away, the holy church appereth the more abiect and forſaken, and the reward of good men doth ceaſe, which reuerēced the ſame for the hope of heauēly riches, & not for any preſent ſignes: And that the minds of euill men agaynſt the ſame, might ẏ ſooner be knowne, which neglect to folow ẏ inuiſible thinges, which ẏ church doth promiſe, whiles they be led with viſible ſignes.

Iob. xxiiij.

The diſcription of Antichriſt out of S. Gregory.

Forſo much then, as the humility of the faithfull is, as it were deſtitute of the multitude, and appering of ſignes, by the terrible working of Gods ſecret diſpenſation, wherby mercy is geuē vnto the good and iuſt, wrath heaped vpō the euill. For ſo much then it is truely ſaid, that before this Liuiathan, ſhall playnely and manifeſtly come, pouerty ſhall go before his face, for before that time, ẏ riches of miracles ſhalbe taken away from the faythfull. Then ſhall that auncient enemy, ſhew himſelfe agaynſt them, by open wonders: That as he is extolled through ſignes & wonders, ſo ſhall he the more manly be vanquiſhed of ẏ faythfull, without any ſignes or miracles. Alſo, in his 16. booke vpon this word, which the bleſſed man Iob ſayde, who ſhall reprehend his way before him, or who ſhall caſt in his teeth, what he hath done, whileſt he did ſpeake of the body of all euill, he ſodenly conuerted his ſpeach vnto the head of all the wicked, for he did ſee, that toward the end of the world Sathan ſhould enter into man whom the ſcripture calleth Antechriſt, he ſhalbe extolled with ſuch pride, he ſhall rule with ſuch power, he ſhal be exalted with ſuch ſignes, & wonders, vnder the pretence of holines, that his doing can not be cōtrolled of mē, for ſomuch, as his ſignes & tokens are ioined with power, & terror, & with a certain ſhew of holynes. wherfore he ſaith who ſhall controll his wayes before him, what man is he, that dare once rebuke or check him, whoſe looke or countenaunce, is he afeard of? But notwithſtanding, not onely Enoc & Elias the which are brought as ample for his exprobation, but alſo all the elect do argue & reproue his way, whiles that they do contemne and by the force and power of their minde, reſiſt his malice: But for ſomuch as this thing is not done by their owne power or ſtrength, but by Gods helpe and grace, therfore is it very well ſayd, who ſhall argue or reproue his waies before him who but onely God? By whoſe help the elect are ayded, and made able to reſiſt.

The proofe of holynes.

And a little after, vpon the ſame booke of Iob Gregory ſaith, in ſo much as holy men do withſtād his iniquity: It is not they thēſelues which do ſo rebuke his wayes, but it is he, thorowe whoſe helpe they are ſtrengthened. Alſo, in his ſecond booke, he ſayth: now the holy Church doth not regarde, but deſpiſe the ſignes and miracles of the heretikes if they do any: for ſo much as ẏ Church doth ſufficiently vnderſtand, that it is no kind of holynes: for why, ẏ profe of holines, is not to make ſignes or wōders, but to loue euery man as him ſelfe, to thinke truely of the very true God, & to thinke better of thy neighbor then of thy ſelfe: for trew vertue & holynes, cōſiſteth in loue, and not in ſhewing of miracles. This ẏ veretie declareth, ſaying: hereby ſhall all men know ẏ ye are my diſciples, if ye loue one an other, but he ſaith not, ẏ hereby mē ſhal know ẏ ye are my diſciples, becauſe ye worke miracles, but contrary wiſe: if ye loue one an other, declaring plainly therby, that it is not miracles, but the mere charitie & loue of God. which maketh vs the ſeruants of God. wherefore the chiefe teſtimony of being Gods diſciple, is to haue the gift of brotherly loue. This thorow out doth S. Gregory write, and often times in other places, he ſpeaketh verye much of miracles, howe that they ſhall ceaſe amongſt the iuſt, and abound amongſt the wicked.

Signes common and indifferent to the miniſters of Chriſt and Antichriſt.

Alſo Chriſoſtome in his lv. Homily, ſayth thus, it is a common & an indifferent worke betwene ẏ miniſters of God & the miniſters of the deuil, to caſt out deuils, but to confeſſe ẏ trueth and to worke righteouſnes, is the onely worke of the ſaints and holy men, therefore whomſoeuer thou doeſt ſee caſting out of deuils, if he haue not the confeſſiō of the trueth in his mouth, neyther righteouſnes in his hands, he is not a man of God, but if thou doeſt ſee a man openly confeſſing & declaring the truthe and doing iuſtice, although he do not caſt out no deuils, yet he is the man of God. And it followeth: let vs know that like as at the cōming of Chriſt, before him, ẏ Prophets, and with him thapoſtles wrought miracles thorow the holy ghoſt, for ſuch as the thing is which is ſturred, ſuch ſent & ſauor wil proceede frō the ſame. He writeth alſo vpon ẏ beginning of Mathew. The whole world did maruel & wōder at three things, ẏ Chriſt roſe againe after his deth, ẏ fleſh aſcendeth into heauē, & that he did conuert ẏ whole world by his xi. apoſtles: There is iiij. cauſes which wrought the ſame. That is to ſay, ẏ contempt of riches or money. The diſpiſing of pomp and glory. The ſeperation of thēſelues from all worldly occupation and buſines, and the pacient ſuffering of tormentes. Thus much writeth Criſoſtome, alſo ſaint Iſydore in his firſt booke and xxv. cha. De ſummo bono, writeth thus, like as in the apoſtles the maruelous effect & power of works was much more cōmendable then the vertue of their ſignes, euen ſo now in ẏ Church is it much more better, to liue wel thē to worke any ſignes or miracles. And the cauſe why that the church of God doth not at this preſent worke miracles as it did in the time of the Apoſtles, is this. That it was neceſſary at that time that the worlde ſhould beleue miracles, and nowe at this preſent euery faithful beleuer ought to ſhine with good workes, for to this end were ſignes & miracles then outwardly wrought, that their fayth thereby might be inwardly ſtrengthned and ſtabliſhed, for what ſoeuer faithfull man he be that ſeketh to worke miracles, he ſeeketh vaine glory to be prayſed of mē, for it is written, miracles are ſignes and tokens vnto the infidels, & miſbeleuers, and not vnto the faythfull. Thus muche wryteth Iſidore.

The principall miracles.

The cauſe why the church now worketh not miracles.

A great miracle to loue a mans enemie.

The true miracles of Chriſtes miniſters.

Item Saint Auguſtine in his Booke of cōfeſſion ſayth thus, there is no greater miracle amongſt mē, thē to loue our enemies. By theſe wordes of theſe holy men, a man may eaſely gather that both in our dayes and in the time to come, ẏ diſciples of Antichriſt both do & ſhall more floriſh and ſhewe thēſelues by ſtraunge ſignes & miracles, thē the diſciples of Chriſt, according to ẏ ſaying of our ſauior Ieſu Chriſt. There ſhall riſe vp amongſt you falſe prophets which ſhall worke ſtraunge miracles. Secōdly, it is approued, that they are greater & ſtrāger miracles, to confeſſe ẏ truth & to do iuſtice, then to worke any other kind of miracle. Thirdly, it is gathered therby, that what ſoeuer miniſter or deacon doth loue his enemies, contemneth riches, deſpiſeth the glorye of the worlde, and flyeth frō al worldly troubles, meekely ſuſtaineth & ſuffreth moſt terrible and cruel threatnings and ſtrokes for ẏ goſpel ſake, he worketh miracles, hauing thereby a teſtimony and witneſſe, that he is the true diſciple of Ieſu Chriſt. And it is euident by the ſaying of our ſauior Ieſu Chriſt. Mathew. v. Let your good workes ſo ſhine before men: ẏ they may ſee your good works & glorify your father which is in heauen. And likewiſe Iohn x. Truſt vnto your good workes, whereupon Saint Gregory in his firſt booke of Dialoges, wryteth thus: the eſtimation of a true life, conſiſteth in ẏ vertue of his workes, and not in ẏ ſhewing of ſignes, whereby it is fourthly concluded, by ẏ which is aforeſayde, that it is a more effectual teſtimony and witnes for a prieſt or a deacon, that he is ſent of God to confeſſe ẏ truth and follow Chriſt in the aforeſayde vertues then to caſt out deuils, or to do any other miracles. As it is euidēt by the ſaying of Chriſoſtome before alleged, whomſoeuer thou doeſt ſee to caſt out deuils, if the cōfeſſion, or acknowledging of the trueth be not in his mouth, neither righteouſneſſe nor iuſtice in his handes, he is not a man of God. This is alſo confirmed by the wordes of Chriſt. Math. 7. Many ſhall ſay vnto me in that day, Lord, Lord, haue not we prophecyed in thy name: haue not we caſt out Deuils in thy name: and haue not we alſo wrought many great wonders and miracles in thy name? Then I will anſwere & ſay vnto them, forſomuch as I haue not knowne you any time, depart frō me ye workers of iniquity, & as touching yͤ ſecond part, Chriſoſtom ſaith: If you ſee a mã confeſſing & preaching yͤ trueth, & working righteouſnes, although he do not caſt out deuils he is a man of God.

The teſtimony of a true prieſt.

Hereby it appeareth that euery deacõ, prieſt, or miniſter confeſſing the truth, and working iuſtice, hath a perfect & ſure teſtimony that he is ſent of God, & that it is not neceſſary for him to approue this his ſending by yͤ working of any miracle, in ſtead of working righteouſnes, neyther by any teſtimonial, the which ſhould plainely declare him by name, that he was ſent of the Lord to preach.

The firſt part appeareth manifeſt, by that which is alreadye ſpoken, that all miracles in the time of Antichriſt ſhal ceaſe in the elect.

The ſecond part is alſo euident, for ſo much as none of the preſent preachers, can ſhew by the ſcripture of yͤ lawe of God, that he is ſpecially named thereunto.

And likewiſe do I alſo affirme & ſay, as touching all preachers which ſhal come hereafter, that they are not named by name: But let no man here obiect Enoc & Elias, which were auncient preachers, & prophecied by the holy ſpirit of God. And it is apparent, that like as it is not a cauſe ſufficient to proue, that this prieſt or deacon is ſent of God to preache; becauſe he worketh miracles, ſo is it not a cauſe ſufficient to proue, that he is not ſent of God to preach, becauſe he doth no miracles, but to confeſſe the truth, to worke righteouſnes, to contemne yͤ world with the glory therof, paciently to ſuffer rebukes is a ſufficient teſtimony for any prieſt or deacon hauing knowledge of yͤ lawe of God, freely to preach the goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt. For ſo much as in ſuch caſe he is ſent of God, & this is the ſending which the Apoſtles ſpeaketh of in yͤ x. Romains. How ſhould they preach without they be ſent? whereupõ yͤ gloſe of S. Auguſtine writeth thus. Theſe things ſerue to ſet forth gods grace, declaring that all our goodneſſe, is preuented of grace.

For he ſayth, beleefe cõmeth of hearing, hearinge commeth of preaching, & preaching by the ſending of God, ſo that altogether holly cõmeth out of the fountain of grace, & preaching truly, cõmeth of ſending. This hath the gloſe how ſhal they then preach, without they be ſent of God? And this is euidẽt, that the firſt & principall ſending is frõ God alone, as it is proued by Moiſes.

The ſecond ſending is both from God & mã, as by the example of Ioſue & others, which were ſent both by God and the rulers to preach.

The third ſending is from man alone, the which is not founded in yͤ lawe of God, but in mens traditions, which they rather eſteeme.

The fourth ſending which hath but the name onely, is proper to them, which of themſelues vnworthely vſurpe the office of preaching, as thoſe falſe prophets, of whõ god ſpeaketh in yͤ xxiij. of Ieremy, I did not ſend them, & they ran. I ſpake not vnto them, and they prophecied. If they had continued in my counſels, & had declared my wordes vnto my people, I would haue conuerted thẽ from their euill waies, & wicked imaginatiõs, & our ſauior ſpeaketh of theſe Prophettes in Mathew, ſaying, There ſhall ariſe falſe Prophets. And peter his true vicar in his ſecond Epiſtle, and ſecond chapter prophecying vnto yͤ faithful beleuers in Chriſt, ſpeaketh thus of thẽ: There were amõgſt the people falſe Prophets, as there ſhalbe amongſt you alſo maiſters of lies, thorow whom the truth ſhalbe blaſphemed and ſlaundered. And that he might the better inſtruct the people to knowe them, he addeth that they ſhall go about wͭ fained wordes, for couetouſnes ſake, to make merchaundice of you.

The difference betweene the miniſters of Chriſt and Antichriſt.

Wherefore euery faithful man, diligently waying theſe things in his minde, may now eaſely perceiue how great a nomber of falſe Prophets there be, thorowe whom the Chriſtian truth is blaſphemed. And all couetous dealyng is exerciſed, & theſe are they which freely preach lies. But the hũble & true miniſters of Chriſt, whereſoeuer they do appeare, by & by they are perſecuted, whereby yͤ prophecie of yͤ Apoſtle is verified, which is written in the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothe the iij. All men ſayth he which deſire to liue godly, ſhall ſuffer perſecution, but yͤ euil men & ſeducers ſhal proſper in their wickednes running dayly more & more into al kinde of errours. The wicked haue now ſo much preuailed yͭ they do preache lies, making heretikes of the faithfull chriſtians, neyther is there any man yͭ dare prohibet them their lying, ſo that they doe not preache agaynſt the vyces of the prelates. Howe then can you ſay that Antichryſt is not exalted aboue all that which is called God, ſuppreſſing downe the members of Chriſt in his office, fortefying and foſtring his members in lying? Therefore the trew and faithfull diſciples of Chriſt ought to ſtand ready girt about their loynes, and ſhewes vpon their feete in defence of the Goſpell, takinge the ſworde in hand, which is the word of God. Ephes. 6. And to fight agaynſt the craftes of Antichriſt, who goeth about vtterly to extinguiſh yͤ true preaching of the Goſpell of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt.

The miniſters of Antichriſt do cloke the vices of their prelates

¶ The Second diſputation in the Vniuerſity of Prage, vpon the 17. Article of Iohn Wickliffe, moſt fruitfull to be read, prouing by 24. reaſons out of the Scriptures, how that Princes and Lordes temporall, haue lawfull authority and iuriſdiction, ouer the ſpiritualty and Church men, both in taking from them, and correcting their abuſes, according to their doinges and deſertes.

TO the honour of almighty God, and of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt, both for the trying out of truth, and the profit of holy mother the church, according to the congregation of our Vniuerſitye of Prage, which auoyding alwayes to doe that ſhall be preiudiciall to the trueth, hath differred to geue theyr conſent vnto the condemnation of the 45. Articles, wiſhing euen vnto this preſent, ſufficient probation to be geuẽ of the condemnation of the ſaid Articles, and perticulerly of euery one of them. Whereupon the ſayd Vniuerſity, doth alwayes require due proofe of the ſame, for ſo much as Pope Damaſus in his Canon diſtinction 68. chapter. Chorepiſcopi, ſayth thus. That it is neceſſarye that what ſo euer thing ſtandeth not by due reaſon, ſhould be rooted out, whereby it appeareth that the condemnation of the 45. Articles, if it ſtand not with proofe and ſufficient demonſtration for euery Article; it is neceſſary to be rooted out.

The condẽnation of the xlv. articles lacketh reaſon, and therefore it not to be allowed.

But if any man will obiect and ſay, that to require a reaſon of euery thing is to derogate from Gods deuine power. Vnto this obiection Maiſter William doth anſwere himſelfe in his Philoſophy, the firſt booke almoſt at the end, where he entreating of the place, in Geneſ. 2. God made man of the ſlime of the earth &c. hath theſe wordes: For in what poynt (ſayth he) are we contrary to the holy ſcriptures, if we ſeeke by reaſon to declare, Wherfore any thing is done, which is ſayd in the ſcriptures to be done, for if that a wiſe man ſhould ſay that a thing is done, and do not declare how it is done: And another manne ſpeaketh the very ſelfe ſame thing, & declareth how it is done what cõtrariety is there? But forſomuch as they themſelues, know not the force of nature, to the intent that they might haue all men partakers with them of their ignoraunce, they would haue no man to enquire it out. But they would haue vs beleue as ignoraunt people, neither to ſeeke any reaſõ of our belief, that the Prophecy might be fulfilled, ſuch as the people is, ſuch ſhall be the prieſt But we truely do ſay, that in all thinges a reaſon is to be ſought, if it may by any meanes be found. But if that any man doe ſtay at any thing, which the ſcripture doth affirme, let him commit the ſame vnto fayth, & vnto the holy ghoſt. For Moiſes ſayth, if the Lambe cannot be eaten, let it not be by and by conſumed in the fire: But let him firſt call hys neighbor, which dwelleth next houſe vnto him, and if they alſo be not ſufficient to eat the Lamb, then let it be burned in the fire: So likewiſe when as we go about to ſeeke any thing as touching the Godhead, and that we be not able of our ſelues to comprehẽd the ſame, let vs call our neighbor which dwelleth next houſe vnto vs: That is to ſay, let vs ſeeke out ſuch a one, as dwelleth in the ſame catholicke fayth with vs, and if then, neither we, neither yet he be able to comprehend the ſame, let it then be burned with the fire of fayth.

An Allegory vpon the Paſchall Lambe.

But theſe men, albeit they haue many neighbours dwelling neare vnto them, yet for very pride, they will not call any mã vnto them, chuſing rather to continue ſtill ignorant, thẽ to aske any queſtion. And if they do know any man to enquire for his neighbor in ſuch caſe, by & by they cry out vpon him, as an hereticke. Preſuming more vpon their own heads, then hauing confidence in their wiſedom. But I exhort you geue no credit, vnto their outward appearance, for already it is verified in thẽ which the ſatyricall Poet ſayth, no credit is to be geuen vnto the outward ſhew for which of them all is it that doth not abound with moſt ſhamefull and deteſtable vices? And in another place he ſayth. They are very daynty of their ſpeach, and haue great deſire to keep ſilence. And thus much hath maiſter Wilhelmus. Let all ſuch here whom this parable doth touche For I with the reſt of the maiſters, bachelers and ſtudentes of our vniuerſity conſidering how heard a matter the condemnation of the 45. articles of Wickliffe without reaſon is, and how greuous a thing it were, if we ſhould thereunto conſent, do call together my neighbors, the doctors of this Vniuerſity, & all others which would obiect any thing agaynſt the ſame, that we might preſently finde out the reaſon of the comdẽnation of this Article, concerning the taking away the temporalityes from the Clergy.

A proteſtation whereby he ioineth lite vnto the Notwithſtanding I do profeſſe that it is not my intent, like as it is not the meaning of the vniuerſity, to perſwade that Princes ender, how the propoſition aforeſayd is to be vnderſtanded, and addeth that the goods of the clergie is not vtterly to be taken away, but in caſe they do abide the ſame.

The 17. article proued by 44. arguments.

ces or ſeculer Lordes ſhould take away the goods from the cleargie when they woulde, or howe they woulde, and conuert them to what vſe they liſt. But our whole intent is, diligently to ſearch out whether this article, as touching the taking away of temporallities from the cleargie may haue in it any true ſence, whereby it may be defended without reprooſe Wherefore this article being the 17. in the nombre of the 45. is propounded vnder thys fourme. The Lordes temporall may at their owne will and pleaſure, take away the temporal goodes from the cleargy, if they doe offend, and therein continue: It is thus prooued. The kings of the old Teſtament toke away the temporall goods at Gods commandement from the cleargie. That is to ſay from the prieſtes offending. Therefore the kings alſo of the new Teſtament, at Gods cōmandement, may do the like. When as the prieſts of the new law do offend. The conſequent dependeth vpon a ſimilitude. And the antecedent is euident. Firſt it is prooued by Salomon in the 3. of the kings 2. chapter. Which Salomon depoſed Abiathar the hygh prieſt, becauſe hee had toke part with Adonias, the brother of Salomon, to make him king, without the aduice either of Dauid, or of Salomon him ſelfe which ought to raigne: And ſet vp Sadoc the prieſt in the place of Abiathar, becauſe he had not conſented with Abiathar vnto Adonias, as it is writtē in the 3. boke of kings 1. chapter. Where it is ſayde, Adonias the ſonne of Agithe, exalted himſelfe, ſaying: I will raigne, and made vnto him ſelfe chariotes and horſemen, and 40. men which ſhould runne before him: neyther did his father rebuke him at any time, ſaying: Wherefore haſt thou don this? For he was very comely being ſecond ſonne, next to Abſolon, and his talke was with Ioab the ſonne of Saruia and Abiathar the prieſt, which toke part with Adonias. But Sadoc the prieſt, and Banaias the ſonne of Ioiada and Nathan the Prophet, and Semei, and Serethi, and Felethi, and all the power of Dauids hoſt, were not on Adonias part.

This was the cauſe of the depoſing of Abiathar, becauſe hee toke part with Adonia, that he ſhuld be king againſt Salomon the eldeſt ſonne of king Dauid, wherefore it is wrytten in the thirde boke and ſecond chapiter of the kings. The king ſayd vnto Abiathar the prieſt, goe your wayes vnto Anatoth thine owne fielde, for thou art a man of death, but this day I will not ſlay thee, becauſe thou haſt caried the Arke of the Lorde before my father Dauid, and diddeſt labour in all things wherein my father laboured. Then did Salomon caſt out Abiathar, that hee ſhould be no more the prieſt of the Lord, that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled which he ſpake vpon the houſe of Hely in Sylo.

Beholde the moſt prudent king Salomon, according to the wiſdome which was geuen him of God, did exerciſe hys power vpon the ſayd prieſts, putting him out of his prieſthode, & ſetting in his place Sadoc the prieſt this was a greater matter thē to take away the temporalities. If then in the law of Chriſt whych nowe raigneth ouer vs, a byſhop, ſhould likewiſe rebell againſt the true heire of the kingdome, willing to ſette vp another for king, why ſhoulde not the king or his heire, haue power in like caſe, to take away the temporalities from him ſo offending?

2. Nabuchodonozor. Item, it is alſo euident by the king Nabuchodonozor whych had power geuen him of God, to lead away the children of Iſrael with their prieſts and Leuites, into the captiuity of Babylon, as it is wrytten 4. booke of the kings 25. chapter.

3. Ioſias. Item it is red in the 4. boke of kings and 12. chapter. How that Ioſias the moſt godly king of Iuda according to the wiſdō which God had granted him, toke away all the conſecrate veſſels, which Ioſaphat, Ioram, and Ochoſias, his forefathers kings of Iuda had conſecrated, and thoſe which hee himſelfe had offered, and all the treaſure that could be found in the temple of the Lord, and in the kings pallace, and ſent it vnto Azahel king of Syria, & he departed from Ieruſalem. Marke how this moſt holy king exerciſed hys power, not onely in taking away the temporalities of the prieſts, but alſo thoſe things which were conſecrate in the temple of the Lord, to procure vnto the common wealth, the benefite of peace.

4. Ezechias. Item, in the 4. boke and 18. chapter of the kings, it is wrytten howe that the holy king Ezechias tooke all the treaſure that was found in the houſe of the Lord, and in the kings treaſurie, & brake downe the pillers of the temple of the Lorde, and all the plates of gold which he himſelfe had faſtned therupon, and gaue them vnto the king of the Aſſyrians, yet was hee not rebuked of the Lorde therefore, as hee was for his other ſinnes, as it appeareth in the 2. boke of Paral. 32. chapter, for ſo much then as in time of neceſſity, all things ought to be in common vnto Chriſtians, it foloweth then that the ſeculere Lordes in caſe of neceſſitie, in many other common caſes, may lawfully take away the mooueable goodes from the cleargie, when they do offend.

5. Dauid. Item, it is alſo read in the 12. of Mathewe, that the diſciples of Ieſus for to ſlake their hunger vppon the Saboth day, pulled the eares of corne, and did eate them, and the Phariſies rebuked them therefore, vnto whome Chriſt aunſwered. Haue ye not read what Dauid did, when hee was hungry, and thoſe that were wyth him, howe he entred into the houſe of the Lorde, and did eate the ſhew breades, which it was not lawfull for hym, neither for them that were with hym to eate, but only for the prieſts. This ſtory is written in the 1 boke of the kings and 21. chapter. And the commandement in the 12. of Deuteronomie. Whereby it appeareth that it is lawfull in time of neceſſitie to vſe any thing, bee it neuer ſo much conſecrate. Otherwiſe children by geuing their moueables to the conſecration of any temple, ſhoulde not be bound to helpe their parents, which is contrary and againſt the Goſpel of S Mathew in the 16. chapter: whereas our Sauiour ſharply rebuked the Phariſies, that for their owne traditions they did tranſgreſſe the commaundement of God.

Caſe of neceſſitie.

6. Titus and Veſpaſian. Item, Titus and Veſpaſian ſeculer princes had power geuen them of God 24. yeares after the Lordes Aſcenſion to take away the temporallities from the prieſtes whych had offended agaynſt the Lordes holy one. And thereby alſo bereft them of their liues, and it ſeemeth vnto many they did, and might worthely doe the ſame according to Gods good wil and pleaſure. Then forſomuch as our prieſts in theſe dayes may tranſgreſſe and offend as much, and rather more againſt the Lordes annoynted, it followeth that by the pleaſure of God, the ſeculer Lordes, may likewiſe punyſhe them for their offence.

7. Our ſauiour being king of kings, and high biſhop wyth hys diſciples did geue tribute vnto Ceſar, as it appeareth Mathewe 17. and commaunded the Scribes and Phariſies to geue the lyke vnto Ceſar Mat. 22. Whereby hee gaue example vnto all prieſtes that ſhoulde come after hym to render tribute vnto their kinges, whereupon bleſſed S Ambroſe in his 4 boke vppon theſe wordes in the 5. of Luke, (caſt out your nettes) wryteth thus. There is an other kinde of fiſhing amongſt the Apoſtles, after which manner the Lord commanded Peter only to fiſh, ſaying, caſt out thy hoke, and that fiſh, which cōmeth firſt vp, take hym. And then vnto the purpoſe he ſayth. It is truely a great & ſpirituall document, wherby all Chriſtian menne are taught, that they ought to be ſubiecte vnto the higher powers, and that no man ought to thinke that the lawes of a king here on earth are to be brokē. For if the ſonne of God did pay tribute, who art thou ſo great a man, that thinkeſt thou oughteſt not to pay tribute? He payed tribute which had no poſſeſſions: and thou which daily ſeekeſt after the luker of the world, why doeſt thou not acknowledge the obedience and duetie of the worlde? Why doeſt thou thorowe the arrogancie of thy minde exault thy ſelfe aboue the worlde, when as thorowe thine owne miſerable couetouſneſſe, thou art ſubiect vnto the worlde? Thus writeth S. Ambroſe, and it is put in the 11 queſt. 1. Magnum quidem. He alſo wryteth vppon theſe wordes in the 10 of Luke, ſhewe me a pennie, whoſe Image it hathe, if Chriſt had not the Image of Ceſar, why did hee pay any tribute? He gaue it not of hys owne, but rendred vnto the worlde, that which was the worldes: And if thou wilt not be in daunger of Ceſar, poſſeſſe not thoſe things which are the worldes, for if thou haſt richeſſe, thou art in daunger of Ceſar.

The example of Chriſt paying of tribute.

S. Ambroſe minde.

Chriſt commanded tribute to be payd vnto themperour.

Wherefore if thou wilt owe nothing vnto any earthly king, forſake all thoſe things, and followe Chriſt If then all eccleſiaſticall miniſters, hauing richeſſe, ought to be vnder the ſubiection of kings, and geue vnto them tribute: It foloweth that kings may lawfully by the authoritye which is geuen them, take away theyr temporallities from them.

Here vpon S. Paule acknowledging him ſelfe to be vnder the iuriſdiction of the Emperour, appealed vnto Ceſar, as it appeareth Actes 25.

Paule appealed to themperour.

S. Ambroſe there in the viij. diſtin.

I ſtand ſayth he, at Ceſars iudgement ſeat, there I ought to be iudged Whereupon in the 8: diſtinction, chapter quo iure. S. Ambroſe alleageth, that all things are lawfull vnto the Emperour, & al things vnder his power. For the confirmation wherof, it is ſaid Daniel ſecond chapter, the God of heauen hath geuen vnto thee a kingdome, ſtrength, Empire, and glory, and all places, wherein the children of men do dwell, and hath geuen into thy power, the beaſtes of the field, and fowles of the aire, and ſet all things vnder thy ſubiection.

Daniel. 2.

9. Alſo in the 11. queſtion and 1. He ſayeth, if the Emperour require tribute, we do not denie that the landes of the Church ſhall pay tribute, if the Emperour haue neede of our landes, hee hath power to chalenge them, let him take them, if hee will, I doe not geue them vnto the Emperour, neither doe I denie them. Thys wryteth S. Ambroſe, expreſly declaring that the ſeculare Lorde hath power at hys pleaſure to take away the lands of the Church, and ſo conſequently the ſeculer Lords haue power at their owne pleaſures to take away the temporal goodes from the Eccleſiaſticall miniſters, when they doe offend.

10. S. Auguſtine. Item S. Auguſtine wryteth, if thou ſayeſt, what haue we to do wyth the Emperour. But nowe as I ſayde, wee ſpeake of mannes lawe. The Apoſtle would be obedient vnto the kings, and honor them, ſaying. Reuerence your kings: and doe not ſay what haue I to doe with the king? What haſte thou then to doe wyth poſſeſſions. By the kings law the poſſeſſions are poſſeſſed, thou haſt ſaid, what haue I to doe with the king: but doe not ſay, what hath thy poſſeſſions to doe wyth the king? For then haſte thou renounced the lawes of menne, whereby thou diddeſt poſſeſſe thy landes.

Thus wryteth S. Auguſtine in his 8.diſtinction, by whoſe wordes it is manifeſt that the king hath power ouer the churche goodes, & conſequently may take them away from the clergie, tranſgreſſing or offending.

11. Magiſtrats, keepers of both lawes.

Item in his 33 Epiſtle vnto Boniface, hee ſayeth, what ſober man will ſay vnto our kings, care not you in our kingdome, by whome the church of the Lorde is maintained,or by whome it is oppreſſed,it partaineth not vnto you, who will bee eyther a religious man,or who will be a church robber? Vnto whome it may be thus anſwered. Doeth it not pertaine vnto vs in our kingdom, who will either liue a chaſt life, or who will be an vnchaſt whoremonger? Beholde this holy man ſheweth heere howe that it is the duety of kings, to puniſh ſuche as are robbers of Churches, and conſequently the proud clergy when as they do offend.

The duetie of kyngs to puniſh the clergy.

Item, hee wryteth in the 33.queſt.7. ſi de rebus. The ſeculare Lordes may lawfully take away the temporall goodes from herittickes, and for ſo much that it is a caſe greatly poſſible that many of the cleargie are vſers of Simonie, and thereby heretickes: Therefore the ſeculare Lordes may very lawfully take away their temporallities from them. For what vnworthy thyng is it ſayeth Saint Auguſtine, if the Catholickes doe poſſeſſe according vnto the will of the Lorde, thoſe thynges whych the heretickes helde? For ſo muche as this is the worde of the Lorde vnto all wycked men. Mathew 21.the kingdome of God ſhall be taken away from you, and geuen vnto an nation, whiche ſhall doe the righteouſneſſe thereof, is it in vaine whych is wrytten in the 11.chapter of the booke of Wiſedome? The iuſt ſhall eat the labours of the wicked.

Math.21.

Sapien.11.

An obiection of the deſire of other mens goods

And whereas it may bee obiected as touching the deſire of other mennes goodes, Saynte Auguſtine aunſweareth that by that euidence the ſeuen nations, whyche did abuſe the lande of promeſſe,and were driuen out from thence by the power of God, may obiecte the ſame vnto the people of God, whyche inhabite the ſame. And the Iewes them ſelues from whome accordynge vnto the woorde of the Lorde, the kingdome is taken away and geuen vnto a people, whiche ſhall doe the woorkes of righteouſneſſe maye obiecte the ſame vnto the Churche of Chriſt, as touching the deſire of other mennes goodes, but Sainte Auguſtines aunſwere is thus.

S. Auguſtine.4. queſtion.4.

Wee,ſayeth he,doe not deſire another mannes goodes, for ſo much as they are oures by the commandement of him, by whom all things were made. By like euidence the clergie hauing offended, their temporall goodes are made the goodes of others, for the profite of the church,to this purpoſe alſo,according to S.Auguſtine,ſerueth the 14.queſtion 4. vnto a misbeleeuer, it is not a halfepennie matter,but vnto the faithfull is a whole worlde of richeſſe,ſhal we not then conuince al ſuch to poſſeſſe an other mans goodes,which ſeemed to haue gathered great richeſſe together, and know not howe to vſe them, for that truely is not an others, whych is poſſeſſed by right,and that is lawfully poſſeſſed, whych is iuſtly poſſeſſed,and that is iuſtly poſſeſſed,which is well poſſeſſed.Ergo,all that is euell poſſeſſed is another mannes,and he doth ill poſſeſſe it,which doth euell vſe it.

If then anye of the cleargie doe abuſe the temporall goodes, the temporall Lordes maye at theyr owne pleaſure, accordynge vnto the rule of charitie take away the ſayde temporall goodes from the cleargie ſo tranſgreſſing. For then according to the allegation aforeſayde, the cleargie doeth not iuſtly poſſeſſe thoſe temporall goodes, but the temporall Lordes proceadyng according to the rule of charitie: Doe iuſtly poſſeſſe thoſe temporallities, for ſo muche as all things are the iuſt mannes. 1.Corrinth. 3.chapter. All thynges ſayeth the Apoſtle are youres. Whether it be Paule or Apollo, or Cephas, eyther the worlde, eyther life,or death,or thynges preſent, or thynges to come, for all thynges be youres, you be Chriſtes,and Chriſte is Goddes. Alſo 23.queſt.7. Quicunque. It is wrytten. Iure diuino omnia ſunt iuſtorum. The woordes of Sainte Auguſtine in that place, ad Vincentium, be theſe: Who ſo euer ſayeth hee,vppon the occaſion of this law or ordinaunce of the Emperour doeth moleſt or perſecute you, not for loue of any charitable correction, but onely for hatered and malyce to doe you diſpleaſure, I holde not wyth hym in ſo doyng.

By Gods lawe cuncta iuſtorum eſſe dicuntur.

And althoughe there is nothyng heere in thys earthe, that any manne may poſſeſſe aſſuredly,but eyther hee muſt holde it,by Goddes lawe,by whyche cuncta iuſtorum eſſe dicuntur: that is, all thynges be ſayde to pertayne to the poſſeſſion of the iuſte: or elſe by mannes lawe,whych ſtandeth in the kinges power to ſette and to ordaine.&c. Hereby the woordes of Auguſtine alledged. Yee ſee all thinges belong to the poſſeſſion of the iuſt,by Goddes lawe.

13. The clergy ſubiect vnto themperour and king by meanes of their poſſeſsiōs.

Item,for ſo muche as the cleargie by meanes of their poſſeſſions are in daunger of the Emperor and King: It followeth that if they doe offend,the Emperour or King, may lawfully take away their poſſeſsions from them. The conſequent dependeth on thys poynte, for ſo much as otherwiſe they were not in ſubiection vnder the Emperour or king, and the antecedent is manifeſt by the 11.queſtion and 1.Parag.His ita reſpondetur. Whereas it is ſpecified in Latine thus. [His ita reſpondetur, clerici ex officio Epiſcopo ſunt ſuppoſiti, ex poſſeſsionibus prædiorum imperatori ſunt obnoxij,ab Epiſcopo vnctionem,decimas, & primitias accipiunt: ab imperatore vero prædiorum poſſeſsiones nanciſcuntur:] that is to ſay. The cleargie by meanes of their office are vnder the Byſhoppe, but by reaſon of theyr poſſeſsions they be ſubiect vnto the Emperour: Of the Byſhoppe they receiue vnction, tithes and firſt fruites of the Emperour, they receiue poſſeſsions. This then it is decreed by the Emperiall lawe, that liuelyhoodes ſhould be poſſeſſed, whereby it appeareth that the cleargie by the poſſeſsion of their liuelyhodes are in daunger of the Emperour, for hym to take away from them, or to correcte them accordyng to their deſeruings, and to haue the controllement of them, as it ſhall ſeeme good vnto hym.

14. Vſers of Simony are puniſhed by the ciuyll magiſtrate.

Item, the temporall Lordes may take away the temporallities from ſuch as vſe Simonie,becauſe they are heretickes. Ergo,thys Article is true.

Paſchaſius in 1.q.ult. cap.pater.

The antecedent is manifeſt,for ſo much as the ſecular Lordes maye refuſe ſuche as vſe Simonye, and puniſhe them except they doe repent. For by the decree of Pope Paſchaſius in the firſt and laſte queſtion it appeareth, that all ſuche as vſed Simonie, were to be refuſed of all faythfull people, as chiefe and principall heretickes, and if they doe not repent after they be warned, they are alſo to bee punyſhed by the externe power. For all other faultes and crimes,in comparyſon of Simonie,be counted but light,and ſeeme ſmall offences.

The laitie correctours of the clergy.

Where vppon the gloſe expounding the ſame text, ſayth that by thys woorde externe, is vnderſtande the laietie, whyche haue power ouer the cleargy,beſides the Church,as in the 17 diſtinct. [Non licuit,& 23 queſt.5.principes.] Whereby it is euident that the temporall Lordes may take away the temporall goodes from the cleargie when as they doe offende.

Gregory writeth to the French Queene.

Item, Saint Gregorie in the Regiſter vppon hys 7.booke 9. Chapiter, wryteth thus vnto the Frenche Queene. For ſo much as it is wrytten that ryghteouſneſſe healpeth the people, and ſinne maketh them myſerable: then is that kingdome counted ſtable, when as the offence whyche is knowen, is ſoone amended.

Wicked prieſtes the deſtruction of the people.

Therefore, for ſo muche as wicked prieſtes are the cauſe of the ruyne of the people, (for who ſhall take vppon hym, to bee interceſſour for the ſinnes of the people,if the prieſt which ought to intreate for the ſame, haue committed greater offences) and vnder youre dominions the prieſtes doe liue wickedly and vnchaſtly: therfore that the offence of a few myght not tourne to the deſtruction of manye, wee oughte earneſtly to ſeeke the punyſhment of the ſame. And it followeth, if wee doe commaunde any perſonne,wee doe ſende hym foorthe, wyth the conſent of your authoritie,who together wyth other Prieſts,ſhall diligently ſeeke out,and according vnto Goddes worde correct and amende the ſame. Neyther are theſe things to be diſsimuled, the whyche wee haue ſpoken of, for hee that may correcte any thyng, and doeth neglect the ſame wythout all doubte, he maketh hym ſelfe partaker of the ſinne or offence.

Therefore foreſee vnto your owne ſoule, prouide for youre neuewes, and for ſuche as you do deſire to raigne after you, prouide for your countrey, and wyth diligence prouide for the correction and puniſhment of that ſinne, before our creatoure doe ſtretch out hys hand to ſtrike.

S.Gregory to the french kyng.

And in hys next Chapter, hee wryteth vnto the French king, what ſo euer you doe vnderſtande, to pertaine eyther vnto the honoure and glorye of oure God,to the reuerence of the church, or to the honour of the prieſtes, that doe you dilligently cauſe to bee decreed and in all poyntes to be obſerued. Wherfore once againe wee doe mooue you,that you commaunde a Synode to be congregate, and as wee wrote lately vnto you, to cauſe all the carnall vices whyche raigneth amongeſt your Prieſts, and all the wickedneſſe and Simonie of your Byſhoppes, whyche is moſte harde to be condemned and reprooued: vtterly to bee baniſhed oute of your kyngdome, and that you wil not ſuffer them to poſſeſſe anye more ſubſtaunce vnder your dominion, then Goddes commaundement doeth allowe.

Beholde howe carefully bleſſed Gregorye doeth exhort the Queene and the Kyng to puniſhe the vices of the cleargie, leaſte through theyr negligence they ſhoulde be partakers of the ſame: and howe they ought to correct their ſubiectes. For as it is conuenient to be circumſpect and carefull againſt the outward enemies, euen ſo lykewyſe ought they to bee agaynſte the inwarde ennemyes of the ſoule. And lyke as in iuſte warre agaynſte the outwarde ennemyes, it is lawefull to take away theyr goodes, ſo long as they contynue in theyr malyce, ſo alſo is it lawefull to take away the goods of the cleargie,being the inward ennemy. The conſequent is prooued thus, for ſo much as the domeſticall enemies are moſt hurtfull.

Item, it is thus argued, if God bee, the temporall Lordes may meritoriouſly and lawfully take away the temporall goodes from the Cleargie, if they doe offende. For thys poynt lette vs ſuppoſe that we ſpeake of power, as the true autentike ſcripture doth ſpeake.Matt.13. God is able euen of theſe ſtones to raiſe vp children vnto Abraham.

Wherupon it is thus argued,for if God be,he is omnipotent, and if he ſo be, he may geue like power vnto the ſeculer Lordes. And ſo conſequẽtly they may meritoriouſly and lawfully vſe the ſame power.But leaſt that any man may obiect that a profe made by a ſtrange thing is not ſufficient, it is therefore declared howe that the temporal Lords haue power to take away their almes beſtowed vpon the church. The church abuſing the ſame,as it ſhall be proued heereafter. And firſt thus,it is lawfull for kings in caſes limitted by the lawe to take away the moueables from the clergie when they do offend,it is thus proued. For the temporall Lordes are moſt bound vnto the workes of greateſt mercy moſt eaſie for them,but in caſe poſsible, it ſhuld be greater almes, & eaſier temporal dominion,to take away their almes frō ſuch as build therewithal vnto eternal damnation, through the abuſe therof,then to geue the ſaide almes for any bodely reliefe, Ergo the aſſumption is true.

Whereuppon firſt this ſentence of the law of Chriſt in the 2. Theſ.3.is noted wheras the Apoſtle wryteth thus.When we were amongſt you,wee declared this vnto you, that he that would not worke ſhould not eate.Wherefore the law of nature doth licence al ſuch as haue the gouernance of kingdoms, to correct the abuſe of the temporalities which wold be the chief cauſe of the deſtruction of their kingdoms:whether the tẽporall Lords or any other had endowed the Church with thoſe temporalities or not. It is lawful for them in ſome caſe to take away the temporalities as it were by way of phiſicke to withſtand ſinne, notwithſtanding any excommunication or other Eccleſiaſticall cenſure. For ſo much as they are not endowed,but only with cōditiō therunto anexed.

Heereby it appeareth that the condition annexed to the endowing or enriching of any church,is that God ſhuld be honoured,the which condition if it once fail the contrary taking place, the title of the gift is loſt:and conſequently the Lord which gaue the almes ought to correct the offence.Excommunication ought not to let the fulfilling of iuſtice, Secondly according to the Canon lawe.16.queſt.7. This ſentence is noted where it is thus ſpoken as touching the children neuewes and the moſt honeſt of the kindred of him which hath builded or endowed any church. That it is lawful for them to be thus circumſpect, that if they perceiue the prieſt doe defraude any part of that which is beſtowed, they ſhould either gently admoniſh or warne him,or els complaine on him to the biſhop,that he may be corrected.But if the biſhop him ſelfe attempt to do the like,let them complaine of him to his Metropolitane, and if the Metropolitane do the like,let them not defer the time,to report it in the eares of the king.For ſo ſaith the canon.Let them not deferre to report it in the eares of the king. To what ende I pray you? but that he ſhuld do correction, neither is it to bee douted but that correction doeth more appertaine vnto he king in this poynt for their goods wherof he is chiefe Lord by a ſubitraction proportional, according to the fault or offence.

When and howe the title of any gift is loſt.

Item it is thus proued.It is lawful for the ſeculer Lords by their power to do correction vpon the clergy by ſome kind of fearfull diſcipline appertaining to their ſeculer power. Ergo, by like reaſon it is lawful for them by their power to do ſuch correction, by all kind of fearful diſcipline pertaining vnto their ſeculer power. For ſo much then as the taking of their temporalities is in kinde of fearful diſcipline pertaining vnto the ſeculer power: It followeth that it is lawfull for them therby to doe ſuch correction. And conſequently it followeth that the truthe is thus to be prooued. The conſequent is euident and the antecedent is proued by Iſidore 23 queſt.5.Principes.Where it is thus wrytten. There ſhuld be no ſeculer powers within the church, but onely for thys purpoſe,that whatſoeuer thing the prieſts or miniſters cannot bring to paſſe by preaching or teachings the ſeculer powers, may command the ſame by the terror and feare of diſcipline:For oftẽtimes the heauẽly kingdom is profited and holpen by the earthly kingdom,that they which are in the church and do any thing contrary vnto faith and diſcipline by the rigour of the princes, may be troden downe. And that the power of the rulers may lay that diſcipline vpon the neckes of the proude and ſtifnecked, which the vtility and profit of the church can not exerciſe or vſe.

It is lawfull for the ciuil rulers to correct the clergie.

Item all things that by power ought to worke or bring to any perfect ende by the reaſonable meaſuring of the meane thereto, it may lawfully vſe by power, the ſubſtraction or taking away of the exceſſe and the addition of the want of the meanes according as ſhall be conuenient or meete for the meaſure to be made. For ſo much then as the ſeculer Lordes ought by their power to prouide for the neceſſary ſuſtentation of the Chriſtian clergie by the reaſonable meaſuring of their temporalties whych they are bounden to beſtow vpon the Chriſtian cleargie, it followeth that they may lawfully by their power vſe the taking away or putting vnto of thoſe temporallities according as ſhall be conuenient for the performance of that reaſonable matter.

Item,it is lawfull for the clergie,by their power to take away the ſacramentes of the Church from the laitie cuſtomably offending forſomuch as it doeth pertaine to the office of the Chriſtian miniſters by their power to miniſter the ſame vnto the lay people. Wherefore,for ſo much as it doeth pertaine vnto the office of the laitie,according vnto their power to miniſter,and geue temporallities to the clergie of Chriſt,as the Apoſtle ſayeth.1.Cor 9. It followeth that it is alſo lawfull for them by their power to take away the temporallities from the clergie, when they do cuſtomably ſinne and offend.

19. Item,by like power may he which geueth a ſtipende or exhibition withdraw and take away the ſame from the vnworthy labourers, as hee hath power to geue the ſame vnto the worthy
20. labourers,for ſo much then as temporallities of the clergie,are the ſtipendes of the laitie : it followeth that the lay people may by as good authority,take away the ſame again from the clergy,which will not worthely labour, as they might by their power beſtowe the ſame vpon thoſe,which would worthely labour according to the ſaying of the Goſpel.Mat.21 The kingdome ſhalbe taken away from you, and geuen vnto a people which ſhall bring foorth the frutes thereof.

Item, it is alſo lawfull for the ſecular Lordes, by their power to chaſtice and puniſh the lay people when they do offend, by taking away of their temporalties, according to the exigẽt of their
21. offence, forſomuch as the lay people are ſubiect vnder their dominion. Wherefore the clergy being alſo ſubiect vnder the dominion of the ſeculer Lordes,as appeareth Rom.13.and many other places,it is euident that it is lawfull by their power to puniſh the cleargie, by taking away of their temporalities, if their offence do ſo deſerue.

Item,the true and eaſie direction of the cleargie vnto the life of Chriſt and the Apoſtles and moſt profitable vnto the laity:that the cleargie ſhuld not liue contrary vnto Chriſtes inſtitution,
22. ſemeth to be the taking away of their alms, and thoſe things which they had beſtowed vppon them. And it is thus proued,that medicine is moſt apt to be laide vnto the ſore, whereby the infirmitie might ſooneſt be holpen,and were moſt agreeable vnto the pacient: Such is the taking away of the temporallities. Ergo,this article is true:The minor is thus proued,for ſo much as by the aboūdance of temporallities the worme or ſerpent of pride is ſpronge vp,where vppon vnſaciable deſire and luſt is inflamed,and thereby proceedeth all kinde of gluttonie and lecherie.It is euident in this poynt,for ſo much as the Temporallities being once taken away, euery one of thoſe ſinnes is either vtterly taken away, or at the leaſt diminiſhed,by the contrary,vertue induced and brought in:It ſemeth alſo moſt pertinent vnto the laity,forſomuch as they ought not to lay violẽt hãds vpon their miniſters or to abiect the prieſtly dignity,neither to iudge any of the cleargy in theyr open courts:It ſemeth alſo by the law of cōſcience,to pertain vnto the lay people, for ſo much as euery man which worketh any worke of mercy, ought diligently to haue reſpecte vnto the habilitie of them that he beſtoweth his almes vpon, leaſt that by nouriſhyng or helping loyterers,hee be made partaker of his offence. Whereupon if a prieſt doe not miniſter of their ſpiritualties, as Hoſtyenſis teacheth in his 3.booke, of their tithes, firſt frutes and oblations,that the people ought to take away the almes of their tithes from them.

23. Item, it is confirmed by the laſt chapiter of the 17.queſtion, out of the decre of rents appropriate vnto the church,quicunq;. Whereas the caſe is put thus,that a certaine man hauing no children, neither hoping to haue any, gaue all his goodes vnto the church, reſeruing vnto him ſelfe the only vſe and profites therof: it happened afterward that he had children,and the biſhop reſtored againe his goodes vnto him,hoping not for it.The biſhop had it in his power, whether to rẽder again or no, thoſe things which were geuen him,but that was by the lawe of man,and not by the lawe of conſcience.If then by the decree of the holy doctoure S. Auguſtine in his ſermone of the life of the cleargie Aurelius the Byſhop of Carthage had no power by Gods lawe to with holde that which is beſtowed vppon the churche, for the neceſsitie of children,by the which law the wanton, proud,and vnſtable clergy being more then ſufficiently poſſeſſed,and enriched,do detain and keepe backe the temporallities to the detrement and hurt of their owne ſtate,and of the whole Militant churche,the ſeculare patrones being thereby ſo impoueriſhed that they are compelled by penurie to robbe and ſteale to oppreſſe their tenants,to ſpoile and vndoe others , and oftentimes by very neceſsitie are driuen to beggerie.

24. Item,ſuppoſe that a prieſt and miniſter, howe greuouſly ſo euer he doe offend by what kinde or ſigne of offence ſo euer it be, as it was in the biſhop Iudas Iſcarioth of the religious monk Sergius,of Pope Leo the hereticke, and many other prieſts, of whom the ſcripture and chronicles make mention,and daily experience doeth teache vs the ſame : It is euident that as it is ſuppoſed, the prieſtes in the kingdom of Boheme greuouſly offending, it is the kings part,forſomuch as he is ſupreme head next vnder God,and Lorde of the kingdome of Boheme, to correct and puniſh thoſe prieſts. And for ſo much as the gentilleſt correction,& puniſhmẽt

Of ſuche as be indurate in their malice, is the caſting away of their temporal goods, it followeth, that it is lawful for the king to take away temporallities. Wherfore it ſhuld ſeme very maruelous and ſtrange, if that prieſts riding about, ſhuld ſpoile virgins, violently corrupt & defile honeſt matrones, if in ſuch caſe it were not lawful for them to take away their armors, weapons, horſes, gunnes and ſwordes from them. The like reaſon were it alſo, if they had vnlawfully conſpired the death of the king, or that they woulde betray the king vnto hys ennemies.

25. Item, whatſoeuer any of the clergy doth require, or deſire of the ſeculer power, according vnto the law & ordinãce of Chriſt, the ſeculer power ought to performe & graunt the ſame. But the clergy being letted by riches, ought to require helpe of the ſeculer power, for the diſpenſation of the ſaid riches. Ergo the ſeculer power ought in ſuch caſe by the law of Chriſt, to take vpon them the office or duty of getting, keping, & diſtributing all ſuch manner of riches, the Minor is heereby proued, that no man ought to haue riches, but to that end, that they be helps, preferring & helping vnto the office which is appoynted of God. Therfore in caſe that ſeculer poſſeſsion doe hinder the cleargy from their duetie. The ſecular power ought to take it away, for ſo did the Apoſtles, Actes 6. ſaying, it is not lawfull for vs to leaue the worde of God vntaught, and to miniſter to Tables.

And thus hetherto hath Iohn Hus proſecuted Wyckleffs articles, with long arguments and reaſons, the which were to long a trauaile, neither agreable for this place, to alledge all the whole order of his reaſons and profes, which he vſed in that deſputatiõ, aboue the nomber of 20. more beſides the teſtimonies of all the wryters before recited, the which hee alledgeth out of the ſcriptures, decretals, S. Ambroſe in his boke of offices, S. Auguſt. in his 5. boke & 5. queſt. and alſo vnto Macedo, Iſydore, the councell of Nice, Greg. his 11. queſt. Bernard vnto Eugenius in his 3. booke, and out of Lyncolnienſis 61. Epiſtle, beſides many other moe. The ſum of al which teſtimonies tend vnto this end, that he might vtterly take away all earthly rule & dominion from the clergy, and to bring them vnder the ſubiection and cenſure of kings & Emperors, as it were within certaine bonds, the which is not onely agreable vnto equity and Gods word, but alſo profitable for the cleargy themſelues. Hee teacheth it alſo to be neceſſary, that they ſhuld rather be ſubiect vnder the ſeculer power, then to be aboue them, becauſe that els it were dangerous, leſt that they being intangled with ſuch kinde of buſines, they ſhould be an eaſier pray vnto ſathan, and ſoner trapped in his ſnares. And therby it ſhould come to paſſe that the gouernance & principality of al things being at the length brought into the hands of the clergy, the lawful authority of kings & princes ſhuld not only be geuen ouer vnto them, but in a maner as it were growe out of vſe: ſpecially for ſo much as already in certaine kingdoms and common wealths, the eccleſiaſtical power is growen vnto ſuch height, that not only in Boheme, but alſo almoſt thorowout al the common welths, they do occupy the 3. or at leaſt the 4. part of the rents and reuenues. And laſt of al, he alleageth the exãple of Greg. and of Mauritius, & afterwarde the prophecy of Hildegardis wryting in this manner.

Hildegardis.

As the Eccleſiaſtical miniſters do willingly receiue rewarde and praiſe of kings & rulers for their good deedes: So alſo ought they when they do offend willingly ſuffer and receiue puniſhmẽt at their hands for their euil doings. The conſequent holdeth thus, forſomuch as the puniſhment mekely and hũbly receiued for hys offence doth more profit a man, then his praiſe receiued for any good work. Wherupon S. Greg. wryteth thus vnto Mauritius the Emperor when he did perſecute him, ſaying: I beleue that you do pleaſe almighty God ſo muche the better, in ſo cruelly afflicting me, which haue ben ſo euel a ſeruaunt vnto him. If then thys holy Pope did ſo humbly and mekely, without any offence ſuffer thys affliction of the Emperor, why ſhould not any of the clergy, when they do offend, mekely ſuſtaine puniſhment, at the kings or rulers hands, vnder whom he is boũden to be ſubiect? When as the true vicar of Chriſt ſayth the 1. of Peter and 2. chap. Be ye ſubiect vnto euery creature for Gods cauſe, whether it bee vnto the kyng, as moſt excellent, or vnto the rulers, as men ſent of God, for the puniſhing of the wicked, and to the praiſe of the good, for ſo is the good will of God.

Gregorius ad Maurium.

Pope Leo ſubmitteth himſelf vnto the Emperour Ludouicus.

Wherupon Pope Leo, leaning vnto thys rule, ſubmitted him ſelf vnto Ludouicus the Emperour, as it is wrytten the 2. queſt. 7. Vnder theſe words: if we haue done any thing incompetently, or that we haue not obſerued the vpright path and way of equitie amongſt ſubiects, wee will amende the ſame, either by your owne iudgement, either els by the aduiſe or iudgement of thoſe whych you ſhal appoynt for that purpoſe. For if we which ought to correct and puniſh other mens fauts, doe commit more greuous our ſelues, we are not then the diſciples of the trueth (but as with ſorow we ſpeake it) we ſhalbe aboue al other, the maſters of error.

And in the 10. diſtinction hee wryteth thus, as touching the obedience vnto the Emperour, as concerning the precepts and commandements of our Emperors, and our predeceſſors biſhops (the which the gloſe nameth Emperors, which are annoynted after the manner of Biſhops) to be obſerued & kept vnbroken, wee do profeſſe our ſelues by all meanes poſsible, as much as in vs lieth, or that wee may and can by the helpe of God preſerue and kepe them both nowe and euer. And if peraduenture any man do informe, or hereafter ſhall informe you otherwiſe, know you him aſſuredly, to be a lier and ſlaunderer.

Marke how this deuout and holy Pope, calling the Emperors biſhops, ſubmitted himſelf according to the rule of S. Peter the apoſtle vnder the obedience, and alſo puniſhment of the Emperor. Wherfore then ſhould not the clergy of the kingdome of Boheme ſubmit themſelues vnder the obedience of their king, for Gods cauſe, for to be puniſhed if they do offende, and not onely ſubmit themſelues vnto the king, but alſo vnto the rulers, and not onely vnto the rulers, but vnto euery other creature? For by how much they do ſo humble, and abaſe themſelues in this world for Gods ſake, ſo much the more ſhal they be exalted with him, but what is the let therof, but only pride wherby Antichriſt doeth exalt hymſelfe aboue the moſt humble and meeke Lord Ieſu Chriſt?

The tyranny & pryde of the cleargie.

The Prophecy of Hildegardis.

Alſo it ſemeth to appere by that which is aforeſayd vpon the taking away of the temporallities out of the prophecie of Hildegardis the virgin, the which he wryteth in his bokes vnder Eugenius the Pope in the councel of Treuerſe approued & allowed by many biſhops of France, Italy, & Almany, which were there preſent, whereas alſo S. Bernard himſelfe was preſent, the which virgin prophecying, ſpake in this manner. The kings & other rulers of the world, being ſtirred vp by the iuſt iudgement of God ſhall ſet themſelues againſt them & run vpon them: ſaying, we wil not haue theſe men to raigne ouer vs with their rich houſes, & great poſſeſsions, and other worldly riches, ouer the which we are ordeined to be Lords and rulers, and how is it mete or comely that thoſe ſhauelings with their ſtoles and chiſils ſhuld haue more ſoldiers or more, or richer armour or artillery then we? So is it not conuenient that one of the clergy ſhould be a man of warre, neither a ſoldier to be one of the clergy. Wherefore let vs take away from them, that which they do not iuſtly, but wrõgfully poſſeſſe. And immediatly after ſhee ſayeth thus: The omnipotent father equally deuided all things: that is to ſay, the heauens he gaue vnto heauenly creatures, and the earth vnto the earthly. And by thys meanes was there a iuſt deuiſion made betweene the children of men, that the ſpiritualty ſhuld haue ſuch things as belongeth vnto them, and the ſecular people, ſuch things as are mete & neceſſary for them, ſo that neither of theſe 2. ſorts ſhuld oppres eche other by violẽce, for God doth not cõmand that the one ſonne or child ſhould haue both the cloke and the cote, and the other ſhould go naked, but he willed that the one ſhuld haue the cloke, and the other the cote. Wherefore the ſeculer ſort ought to haue the cloke for the greatneſſe of their worldly cares, and for their children, which daily increaſe and multiply. The cote hee geueth vnto the ſpiritualty, that they ſhuld not lacke clothing, & that they ſhould not poſſes more then neceſsity doth require. Wherfore we iudge and thinke it good that al theſe aforeſaid be deuided by reaſon & equity. And whereas the cloke and the cote are both found, there the cloke be taken away, & geuen vnto the nedy, that they do not periſh for lacke or want. Theſe aforſaid ſpake the virgin Hildegardis, plainly for ſhewing the taking away of the tẽporalities from the clergy by the ſeculer Lords, and ſhewing for what cauſe they ſhall be ſo taken away. And what manner of deuiſion ſhalbe made of thoſe thinges that are taken away, that they be not conſumed, and ſpent vnprofitably.

For ſo much as mention is heere made of Hildegardis, it ſhall not ſeme impertinent, moued by the occaſiõ hereof to geue forth vnto the reader ſuch things as we haue found in certen olde volumes, touching her prophecie of the comming of certaine falſe Prophets, onely meaning as it ſeemeth, the begging friers, whych ſprang vp ſhortly after her time. The tenour wherof is this, worde for word, as we finde it wrytten.

Hildegardis prophecying of Fryers & mõkes

In thoſe daies, there ſhall riſe vp a people without vnderſtanding, proud, couetous, vntruſty, and deceitfull, the which ſhall eat the ſinnes of the people, holding a certaine order of foliſh deuotion, vnder the fained cloke of beggery, preferring themſelues aboue all other, by their fained deuotion, arrogant vnderſtanding, and pretended holines, walking without ſhamefaſtnes, or the fear of God, inuenting many new miſchiefs being ſtrong & ſtout, but this order ſhalbe accurſed of al wiſe men, and faithful Chriſtians, they ſhal ceaſe from labour, and geue them ſelues ouer vnto idlenes. Chuſing rather to liue thorow flattery, thẽ by begging. Moreouer they ſhall together ſtudy, howe they may peruerſly reſiſt the teachers of the trueth. And ſlay them together wyth the noble men, how to ſeduce and deceiue the nobility, for the neceſsitie of their liuing and pleaſures of thys worlde, for the Deuill will graft in them foure principall vices: that is to ſay, flatterie, enuie, hypocriſie and ſlaunder. Flatterie, that they may haue large giftes geuen them. Enuie, when they ſee giftes geuen vnto other, and not vnto them. Hypocriſie, that by falſe diſsimulation, they maye pleaſe men. Detraction, that they may extoll and commend them ſelues, and backbite others, for the praiſe of menne and ſeducing of the ſimple. Alſo they ſhall inſtantly preache wythout deuotion or example of the Martyrs, and ſhall detract the ſeculer princes, taking away the ſacraments of the church from the true paſtors, receiuing almes of the poore, diſeaſed, and miſerable, and alſo aſſociating them ſelues with the common people, hauing familiaritie with women, inſtructing them howe they ſhall deceiue their husbandes and friendes by their flatterye and deceitfull wordes, and rob their husbandes to geue it vnto them, for they will take all theſe ſtollen and euill gotten, and ſay, geue it vnto vs, and we will pray for you, ſo that they beyng curious to hide other mens faultes, doe vtterly forget their owne, and alas, they will receiue all thinges of rouers, pickers, ſpoylers, theeues and robbers, of ſacrilegious perſons, vſerers, adulterers, Heretikes, Schiſmatikes, Apoſtataies, whores and baudes, of noble men, periurers, merchantes, falſe iudges, ſouldiours, tyrantes, princes, of ſuch as liue contrary to the law, and of many peruers and wicked men, following the perſuaſion of the deuil, the ſweetnes of ſinne, a delicate and tranſitory life, and fulnes euen vnto eternall damnation. All theſe things ſhall manifeſtly appeare in them vnto all people, and they day by day, ſhal waxe more wicked and hard hearted, & whē as their wickednes and diſceits ſhalbe found out, then ſhall theyr gifts ceaſe, and then ſhal they go about their houſes hungry, & as mad dogs loking down vpon the earth, & drawing in their necks as doues, that they might bee ſatisfied with bread, then ſhall the people crye out vpon them. Woe be vnto you ye miſerable children of ſorow, the worlde hath ſeduced you, the deuil hath brideled your mouthes, your fleſh is frayle, and your heartes without ſauour, your mindes haue bene vnſtedfaſt, and your eyes delighted in much vanitie and folly, your daintie bellies deſire delicate meates. Your ſeete ſwift to runne vnto miſchief, remember when you were apparantly bleſſed, yet enuious, poore but rich, ſimple, mightie deuout flatterers, vnfaithfull betrayers, peruerſe detracters, holy hipocrites, ſubuerters of the truth, ouermuch vpright, proude, vnſhamefaſt, vnſtedfaſt teachers, delicate marters, confeſſiours for gaine, meeke ſlaunderers, religious, couetous, humble, proud pitifull, hard harted liers, pleaſant flatterers, peace makers, perſecutors, oppreſſors of the poore, bringing in new ſects newly inuented of your ſelues, mercifull, wicked, louers of the world, ſellers of pardons, ſpoylers of benefices, vnprofitable orators, ſedicious cōſpirators, dronkards, deſirers of honor, maintainers of miſchieſe, robbers of the worlde, vnſaciable, preachers, men pleaſers, ſeducers of women, and ſowers of diſcorde, for Moyſes the glorious prophet, ſpake very well of you in his ſong. A people without coūcel or vnderſtanding, would to God they did know, vnderſtand and foreſee the end. You haue builded vp an high, and when you could aſcend no hier, then did you fall euen as Symon Magus, whom God ouerthrew, and did ſtrike with a cruel plage, ſo you likewiſe thorowe your falſe doctrine, naughtines, lies, detractions and wickednes, are come to ruine, and the people ſhall ſay vnto them. goe yee teachers of wickedneſſe, ſubuerters of the truth, brethren of the Sunamitie, fathers of hereſies, falſe apoſtles, which haue fained your ſelues to followe the life of the Apoſtles, and yet haue not fulfilled it in no part, ſonnes of iniquitie, we wil not follow the knowledge of your waies, for pride & preſumption hath deceiued you, and inſaciable cōcupiſcence hath ſubuerted your erroneous hearts. And whē as yet would aſcēd hier thē was mete or comely for you, by the iuſt iudgement of God, you are fallen backe into perpetual opprobry and ſhame. Thys bleſſed Hildegardis whoſe prophecy this is, flouriſhed about the yeare of our Lord a 1546. as it is wrytten in Martins chronicles.

Hugo de ſacramentis part.2.

Hildegardis prophecying of Fryers & mōkes

Alſo Hugo in his ſecond boke of ſacraments, in the 2. parte, 3. chapter and 7. ſayth, the laity forſomuch as they entermedle wyth earthly matters neceſſary vnto an earthly life, they are the leaſt part of the body of Chriſt. And the clergy for ſo much as they doe diſpoſe thoſe things which pertaine vnto a ſpirituall life, are as it were the right ſide of the body of Chriſt, and afterward interpreting both theſe partes him ſelfe, he ſayeth: A ſpirituall man ought to haue nothing, but ſuch as pertaineth vnto God, vnto whom it is appoynted to be ſuſtained by the tithes and oblations whych are offered vnto God: But vnto the Chriſtian and faithfull laietie, the poſſeſſion of the earth is graunted, and vnto the cleargie the hole charge of ſpiritual matters is committed, as it was in the old Teſtament. And in his 7. chapter he declareth howe that certaine things are geuen vnto the Church of Chriſt, by the deuotion of the faithfull, the power and authority of the ſeculer power reſerued, leaſt there might happen any confuſion: For ſo much as God him ſelſe cannot alow no diſordered thing. Wherupon oftētimes the worldly princes do graunt the bare vſe of the church, and oftentimes vſe and power to exerciſe iuſtice, which the clergy cannot exerciſe by any Eccleſiaſticall miniſter, or any one perſon of the clergy. Notwithſtāding they may haue certain lay perſōs, miniſters vnto that office. But in ſuch ſort ſayeth he, that they do acknowledge the power which they haue to come from the ſeculer prince or ruler, and that they do vnderſtand their poſſeſſions can neuer be alienate away from the kings power, but (if that neceſſity or reaſon doe require) the ſame poſſeſſions in all ſuch caſe of neceſsity do owe him obeiſance and ſeruice. For like as the kings power ought not to turne away the defence or ſauegarde which he oweth vnto other: ſo likewiſe the poſſeſsions obtained and poſſeſſed by the clergy, according to the duty and homage which is due vnto the patronage of the kings power cannot by right be denied. Thus much wryteth Hugo.

In the third acte the ſame yeare, after the feaſt of S. Vitis, as touching Tithes. &c.

¶ Tithes are pure almes.

Almes, Mercy.

Two kindes of miſeries.

Two kindes of goodnes.

Wiſdome. Follye.

The miſeries of the minde and bodie.

VPon this article it is to be noted, that for ſo much as almes is a worke of mercy, as S. Auguſtine, Chryſoſtome, and others do ioyntly affirme, and that mercy (according to Lincolnienſis minde) for the preſent is a loue or deſire to helpe the miſerable out of his miſery: and for ſo much as the miſery of mankinde is double: that is to ſay ſpirituall and bodily: the whiche is the want or taking away of the good, and the goodes of man is eyther the goodes of the ſoule or of the body: And the goods of the ſoule is double (That is to ſay: the lighting of the minde, & the vprightnes of affection) the miſery of the ſoule is alſo double as the darcknes of ignorance and a froward and wilfull ſweruing from the truth. And both the goodes of the ſoule are wont to be comprehended vnder one title of name: that is to ſay, wiſdom, and both the miſeries of the ſoule vnder the name of follie. Wherupon all the hole goodnes of the ſoule is wiſdom, and all the hole miſery thereof is ignoraunce, the miſeries of the body are lacke of meat, that is to ſay, hunger, and lacke of drinke called thirſt: and briefly all miſery is the want of ſome thing which is deſired. Alſo theſe are bodely miſeries, nakednes, lacke of harbour, ſickneſſe, and impriſonment. All the miſeries therfore being nombred together, are but one of the ſoule, the which is folly and lacke of wiſdom, and 6. of the body, the which the Lord in the 25. of Mathew doth plainly reherſe. There are alſo commonly appoynted 7. bodely almes, that is to ſay, to feede the hungry, to geue drinke vnto the thirſty: To clothe the naked, to harber the ſtranger or haberles, to viſit the ſick, & to bury the dead, the which altogether are cōteyned in theſe verſes.

Viſito, poto, cibo, redimo, tego, colligo, condo.

The which Verſe is thus Engliſhed, word for word.

Viſite the ſicke, the hungry feede,
Geue drinke to the thirſty, cloth the naked:
Bury the dead, the captiue redeme,
The harbourles receiue to thy lodging.

What is almes.

There be alſo 7. other ſpirituall almes appoynted, whych are theſe, to teache the ignoraunt, to councell him that is in dout. To comfort him which is in heauineſſe. To correct the offender. To forgeue him which hath offended againſt thee. To beare thoſe which are greeuous. And to pray for all men, the which are alſo conteined in theſe verſes following.

Conſule caſtiga ſolare remitte fer ora.

The which Verſe is thus Engliſhed, word for word.

Inſtruct the ignorant, the weake confirme,
Comfort the heauy hart, and correct ſinne:
Forgeue the offender, beare with the rude,
Pray for all men both euel and good.

So that notwithſtanding vnder the ſame, counſelles and doctrine be comprehended. Thus writeth Thomas in the 2. part of the 2. queſt. 32, article. 2.

What almes is.

Secondly it is to be noted, that in this preſent article our intent is only to intreat of bodely almes (the which as Thomas writeth in his 2. part 2. queſti. 32. Arti. 1.) according vnto ſome mens mindes is this defined. Almes is a worke whereby any thing is giuen vnto the needy of compaſsiō for Gods ſake. And for ſo much as this definition ſerueth as well for the ſpirituall, as for the corporall almes. Therefore to the purpoſe, almes is a worke, whereby any thing is giuen vnto the needy in body for compaſsion, & for Gods ſake. Or that is giuen of compaſsion or pitie vnto the bodely needy for Gods ſake.

Whereupon it is manifeſt that almes as S. Auguſtin & other holy men ſay, is a worke of mercy, as alſo to geue almes. As it appeareth by the name, for in the Greeke it is deriued frō this word Miſericordia, which is mercy, for as in the Latine, this word Miſeratio, which ſignifieth pitie, is deriued of Miſericordia, which is mercy, ſo this word Eleemoſyna, which ſignifieth almes, is deryued of the Greeke word Elemonia, which is to ſay mercy, and of the word Sina, which is to ſay commandement, as it were a commaundement of mercy, or otherwiſe of this word Elemonia. By this letter I, which is to ſay God, and this worde Sina, which is commaundement As if it were ſaid, the commaundement of God as Ianuenſis in his booke intituled Catholicō affirmeth.

For our Sauiour doth commaunde in the xj. of Luke to geue almes, ſaying, geue almes and behold all thinges are cleane vnto you: leaſt that in this point there may be any equiuocation it is ſuppoſed preſently, that the almes giuē of mē is a corporal almes giuen ſimply vnder the name of almes. Secondly, it is to be noted, that Tythes in this effect are the tenth part of goods of fortune, giuen by a man ſimply vnder the name of almes for Gods ſake.

Tythes.

Theſe things being thus noted and ſuppoſed the article is thus proued. Euery gift of fortune, or temporal gift, ſimply giuē vnder the name of almes is almes. But ſome tiths are the gift of fortune, or temporall gift vnder the name of almes. Therfore ſome tithes are almes. This conſequent is manifeſt of his ſelſe. The Maior appeareth by the firſt ſuppoſition. And the Minor by the ſeconde.

Item, euery gift geuen by a man euen of loue, to relieue and helpe the miſerable out of his miſery is an almes. The 10. part of the goodes of fortune geuen by a man, ſimply vnder the name of almes, for Gods ſake, is geuen by the ſame man euen of loue, to helpe the miſerable out of his miſery: Therefore the 10. part of the goods of fortune being geuẽ by any man ſimply vnder the name of almes for Gods ſake is almes. The conſequent is manifeſt. The Maior appeareth by this, that euery ſuch gift is either a ſpirituall or bodely almes. The Minor ſeemeth hereby true, for ſo much as many holy men haue geuen, and do geue, euen for loue to relieue the miſerable out of his miſerie. Neither is it to be doubted, but that ſuch kinde of tithes are almes. For S. Auguſtine vppon theſe words of the Lord in the Goſpell wryteth thus. Woe be vnto you Phariſies which do tithe minte and aniſe. If they cannot be clẽſed without they beleeue in him, he which doth clenſe his heart thorow faith, to what purpoſe is it, that hee ſayth, geue almes, and beholde all things are cleane vnto you. Let vs geue eare, and peraduenture he doth expound it himſelfe. They did take out the 10. part of all their fruites, and gaue it for almes, the which any Chriſtian mã doth not willingly. Then they mocked him, whẽ he ſpake theſe words to them, as vnto men which wold do no almes. Thys the Lord forknowing, ſaid: Wo be vnto you Phariſes which tithe mint and rue, and al kind of herbs. And paſſe ouer the iudgement & charity of God, for this it is to do almes, if thou doſt vnderſtãd it, begin with thy ſelfe: For howe canſt thou be mercifull vnto an other, which art vnmercifull vnto thy ſelfe. This wryteth S. Auguſtine, in plainly ſaying that tithes are almes.

S. Auguſtine proueth tithes to be pure almes

Auguſt in Enchiri.

Alſo in his Enchiridion 76. chap. vpon theſe wordes of Luke in the 11 chapter. Notwithſtanding that which is more then ſufficient, geue in almes and all things ſhall be cleane vnto you, hee ſayth thus: when he had rebuked them that they waſhed thẽſelues outwardly, and inwardly were full of iniquity & abhomination, admoniſhing them, what, and howe a man ought firſt to beſtowe almes vpon him ſelf, and firſt to clenſe him ſelf inwardly, he ſayth. That which doth remaine, geue in almes, & beholde all things are clean vnto you. Afterward, that he might the better declare what he had geuen them warning of, & what they neglected to do, that they ſhuld not iudge him ignorant of their almes: he ſayth, Wo be vnto you Phariſies, as though hee ſhoulde ſay, I verely gaue you warning that you ſhuld geue ſuch almes, wherby al things might be cleane vnto you: but wo be vnto you which do tith mint, rue, and all kinde of herbes, for I do know theſe your almes, that you ſhuld not thinke with your ſelues that you had geuẽ me warning therof: and neglect and paſſe ouer the iudgement and charitie of God, by the which almes ye might be clẽſed from all your inward filthineſſe. And your bodies alſo which you doe waſh ſhoulde be cleane For all theſe things both inward, and alſo outwarde, as it is ſayde in an other place, cleanſe that which is wythin, and the outward things ſhalbe alſo cleane.

But leaſt that he ſhould ſeme to refuſe thoſe almes which are geuen of the frutes of the earth, he ſayd, you ought to haue done theſe thinges: That is to ſay, the iudgement and loue of God, & not to neglect the ſame. That is to ſay, the almes of the frute of the earth This wryteth S. Aug. expreſly calling the tithes almes.

Chriſoſtomus in 11. Luce.

Alſo Chryſoſtome vpon the ſame wordes in the 11. of Luke, that which remaineth geue in almes, he ſayth thus: wheras it was ſpoken of the Iewiſh kind of clenſing it is wholy paſſed. But for ſo much as tithes is a certaine almes, and the time was not yet expreſly come to kil the ſacrifices of the law, for this cauſe he ſaith, ye ought to do thoſe things, & not to omit the other. And S. Thomas alledgeth him in his gloſe vppon S. Luke. And Chryſoſtome himſelfe doth touch two poynts. Firſt that tithes is almes. Secõdly, that tithes are in a manner lawfull, forſomuch as the gift therof vnto the prieſts did not ceaſe in the time of Chriſt.

Alſo Auguſtin in a certaine Sermon of geuing almes, ſayeth thus, what is to ſay: geue almes: And behold all things are cleane vnto you. Let vs geue eare, and peraduenture he doth expounde it him ſelfe. When he had ſpoken theſe words, without dout they thought within them ſelues, who did geue almes, and howe they did geue it. They tithed all that they had, and toke out the 10. part of all their frutes. And gaue it for almes: the which no Chriſtian lightly doth ſo. Marke what the Iewes did, they tithed not onely their wheate, but their wine and oyle, and not that only, but alſo vile things. For the commandement of the Lord, as commin, rue, and aniſe, of the which they tooke the 10. part, and gaue it for almes. I thinke therefore, for ſo much as they called vnto theyr mindes and thought with them ſelues, that our Lord Chriſt ſpake in vaine vnto them that they did no almes, when as they knewe their owne workes, that they tithed the ſmalleſt, and worſt of all their frutes, and gaue almes thereof: They mocked hym amongeſt them ſelues, becauſe he did ſpeake in ſuch ſort vnto them, as vnto men that did no almes. The which the Lord fore ſeeing, by and by added notwythſtanding, wo be vnto you Scribes, Phariſies & hypocrites, which tithe your mint, commin, and rue, and all kinde of herbes: that you may know, I doe vnderſtand your almes Truely, theſe are your tithes. Theſe are your almes, you tithe out the leaſt and worſt of all your frutes, and haue left the waighty matters of the lawe vndone Here S. Auguſtin often expoundeth, that tithes are almes: Alſo he wryteth the like in his booke of homilies in his 6. homelie.

Item, for the proofe of thys article that tithes are pure almes, it is thus argued. For this propoſition, tithes are pure almes is infinite, taking the trueth for many of his particularities. It is moſte certaine that it is not damnable, but moſt catholike, that God is ſomething, the which being falſe in all particulers, it is onely true for that alone which doth ſurmount all kinde. Ergo, by like reaſon this particuler is true, tenthes are pure almes: For it is thus proued. Theſe tenthes of a good lay man being wholy diſtributed by a faithfull miniſter vnto a nedy lay man, according to a good entent, how can they be but pure almes, yea, and more pure then any almes geuen by any of the cleargie being a fornicatour. The whole Antecedent I ſuppoſe as poſsible, and doutfull vnto the condemners, if it be true.

Item, it is alſo thus proued, theſe tithes, and all other goodes of fortune, are pure almes in reſpect of God. Forſomuch as euery man, Emperor and king, is a begger of God. As S. Auguſtin doth oftentimes affirme, and conſequently if he doe receiue frutefully any ſuch goodneſſe at the hand of God, the ſame is pure almes in reſpect of God: neither is there any faithfull man that will deny the ſame, but that it ſimply foloweth that the ſame is pure almes before God, Ergo it is pure almes.

It is alſo thus argued, all tithes are by them ſelues, and euery part of them almes, neither is there any reaſon cõtrary vnto this, that they are almes. Ergo, they are pure almes. For they are by no other meanes or reaſon, then almes, if they be all together themſelues almes: Forſomuch as it followeth, if they be by any other meanes or otherwiſe then almes, then they are otherwiſe then ſome almes, and forſomuch as they themſelues are ſome almes, it foloweth that they are otherwiſe then they are in dede, the which is falſe.

Suſtenance & clothing, geuen to the Apoſtles, was almes ergo alſo tithes.

But now to paſſe beyond the bonds of Logicke, it is to be demaũded, whether before the church was endowed, or that ſuſtenance and clothing were geuen vnto the Apoſtles, there was any pure almes, or that they were geuen by any other meanes by bõd of det, amõgſt men. And forſomuch as the reaſon is not to be fained, but that they were pure almes, ſo afterwarde the cuſteme of the ſame thing according vnto like reaſõ doth not alter the kind of the reaſon. For ſo might beggers chalenge by cuſtome beyond the purity of almes, the temporallities which they do beg. Neither doth det vtterly exclude the purity of almes before God: for euery man duely geuing almes, doth as he ought to do: as euery man duely receiuing his almes, ought ſo to receiue it as according to Gods will. And ſimplie to eſtabliſh any humaine title, vppon the continuance of any ſuch almes, it is altogether contrary vnto the reaſon of almes. Therefore they do continually obſerue, and kepe the reaſon of the purity of almes, which they had from the beginning, when as the bond conditioned, doth not deſtroy the purity thereof. Wherefore there is no cauſe why it ſhould be denied that tithes are pure almes: except that the proud ſhould be maruelouſly extolled, contrary to the humility of Chriſt. For they doe chalenge by the title of their lacke or want ſo to be pleaſed for their tithes. For ſo might the begging Frier, by the continuance of hys daily begging chalenge according vnto the like quantitie or circumſtance But it is no argument, that if the curate doe performe his corporall miniſtrie, that he ought therefore to chalenge tithes by any ciuil title, becauſe that as wel on the behalfe of him, which geueth the tithe, as alſo in the behalfe of the Curate, euery ſuche miniſtry ought frely to be geuen, and not by any ciuill exchange. Forſomuch as it is not required, but that rather the compariſon of ſuch exchaunges are repugnant, forſomuch as alſo no mã frely geueth any almes except he doe looke for the duetie of recompence, by the law of conſcience.

Item, all temporall goods beſtowed vppon the clergie, by the lay people vnder condition, as the goodes of the churche are the almes of them which geue it, it is prooued thus, for ſo much as all thoſe goods are the goods of the poore, as it appeareth by many ſayings of holy men and by the lawes.

But they were not the goods of the pore, after they were mere ſeculer goodes, but onely by the meane of the woorke of mercie, wherby they were beſtowed vpon the pore Ergo, they were pure almes. The cõſequent dependeth vpõ the definitiõ of pure almes.

Item, all things changed to the vſe and power of an other, either by ciuil exchange or Euangelical is changed But the church goods are ſo changed by one of theſe miniſtries. But the Euangelical exchange is not to be fained, becauſe it is not done, neyther by bying or ſelling, or any other ciuill exchange. Therefore there doth not remaine, but only a pure gift, for hope of a heauenly reward, the which is mercy, and ſo pure almes. And it ſemeth to followe conſequently that all the Clergie receiuing ſuch almes, are not onely in reſpect of God, as all other menne: But in reſpect of men beggers. For they wold not ſo inſtantly require thoſe almes except they had neede of them: neither ought we to be aſhamed therof, or to be proud beggers: for ſo much as Chriſt touching his humanitie became a begger for vs, becauſe hee declared his need vnto his Father ſaying. &c.

The clergy beggers.

Item, when any Kyng, Prince, Knight, Citizen, or anye other man doth geue vnto the clergy, or to anye prieſt for his ſtipend, he geueth the ſame vnto the Churche of God, and to the priuate party, as a perpetuall almes, that he ſhould attend to his vocation, preaching, praying and ſtudying. But this kinde of geuing doth not ſuffice to ground any ſeculer dominion amongſt the clergye it followeth that the bare vſe remayneth in them, or the ſeculer vſe without any ſeculer power.

The maior appeareth hereby, forſomuch as otherwiſe almes ſhould not be a worke of mercy. Whereby it may alſo appeare, that tenths are pure alms geuen to the church, to the vſe of the pore.

And hereupon the holy men doe ſay that tenthes are the tributes of the needy ſoules. Whereupon S. Auguſtine in a ſermon made vpon the reſtoring of tithes ſayth. The geuing of Tithes moſt deare brethren are the tributes of the poore ſoules therefore pay your tribute vnto the poore. And by and by after, he ſayth, therefore who deſireth eyther to get any rewarde, or to haue anye remiſsion of ſinnes, by geuing of his tenthes, let him ſtudy to geue almes euen of the ninth part: ſo that what ſoeuer ſhall remayne more then a competent liuing, and decent clothing: that it be not reſerued for riot, but that it be layd vp in the heauenly treaſure, by geuing it in almes to the poore. For what ſo euer God doth geue vnto vs more then we haue neede of: he doth not geue it vs ſpecially for our ſelues: but doth ſend it vs to be beſtowed vpon others by our handes, if wee doe not geue it, we inuade an other mans poſſeſsions.

Tithes are to be giuen of the ninth parte of goods.

Thus much wryteth S. Auguſtine, and is repeted in the xvi. queſtion 1. Decime.

Alſo S. Ierome in an Epiſtle, and it is put in the 16. queſtion, and 2. chap Quicquid. What ſoeuer the clergy hath it is the goods of the poore.

Alſo S. Auguſtine in his 33. Epiſtle vnto Boniface, and it is aleaged in the 1. queſtion and 12.

Sustenance & clothing, geuen to the Apoſtles, was almes ergo alſo tithes.

Alſo in the 23. queſtion 7. If we doe poſſeſſe any thinge priuately, the which doth ſuffiſe vs, they are not oures, but the goods of the poore, whoſe ſtewardes we are, except we doe challenge to our ſelues a property by ſome damnable vſurpatiõ. The gloſe vpon that part of the 23. queſtion 7. ſayth. The Prelates are but onely the ſtewardes of the church goodes, and not Lordes therof.

S. Ambroſe alſo vpon this ſaying of the Goſpell. Luke the 16. Geue accompt of your bailiſhip, or ſtewardſhip: Hereby then doe we learne, that they are not Lordes, but rather ſtewardes and baliffes of other mens ſubſtaunce.

And S. Ierome, writing to Nepotianus ſaieth, howe can they be of the clergye, which are commaunded to contemne and diſpiſe their owne ſubſtaunce, and to take away from a frend, it is theft, to deceiue the Churche it is ſacriledge, and to take awaye that, which ſhould be geuen vnto the poore.

And S. Bernard in his ſermon, vppon theſe wordes (Symon Peter ſayd vnto Ieſus, chap. 17) ſayd. Truely the goodes of the Church, are the patrimony of the poore: And whatſoeuer thyng the miniſters and ſtewardes of the ſame, not Lordes or poſſeſſours do take vnto themſelues more then ſufficient, for a competent liuing, the ſame is taken away from the poore, by a ſacrilegious crueltie.

The clergie are ſtewards of the church goods, and not Lordes thereof.

And Euſebius in his treatiſe vpon the pilgrimage of S. Ierom writeth thus, if thou doeſt poſſeſſe a garment, or anye other thing more then extreme neceſsitie doth require· and doſt not help the needy, thou art a theef & a robber. Wherfore dearly beloued children, let vs be ſtewards of our temporallities, and not poſſeſſors.

And Iſidore in his treatiſe De ſummo Bono chap. 42. ſayth. Let the byſhop know that he is the ſeruaunt of the people, and not Lord ouer them.

Iſidorus de ſummo bono.

Alſo in the 5. booke of decretals, extra. de donationibus, ſub authoritate Alexandri tertij. Epiſcopi pariſienſis. He ſayth, we beleue that it is not vnknowne vnto your brotherhoode, that a Byſhop, and euery other Prelate is but a ſteward of the Churche goodes, and not Lord thereof. By theſe ſayinges of theſe holy men it is euidently declared, that not only tithes, but alſo al other ſubſtaunce which the clergy hath by gift of worke of mercy, are pure almes, which after the neceſsitie of the clergy once ſatiſfied, ought to be tranſported vnto the poore.

Secondly it is declared how that the Clergye are not Lordes and poſſeſſours of thoſe goods, but miniſters & ſtewardes therof.

Thirdly it is ſhewed, that if the Clergye doe abuſe the ſame, they are theeues, robbers, and ſacrilegious perſons, and except they doe repent, by the iuſt iudgement of God they are to be condempned.

AND thus hetherto I may peraduenture ſeeme to haue made ſufficient long reſitall out of Ihon Hus, but ſo notwithſtanding that the commoditie of thoſe thinges, maye aboundantly recompence the prolixitie thereof. Wherfore if I ſhall ſeeme vnto any man in the rehearſall of this diſputation to haue paſſed very farre the boundes of the hiſtory: let him thinke thus of me, that at what tyme I tooke in hand to wryte of theſe Eccleſiaſticall matters, I could not omit theſe thinges whiche were ſo ſtraightly ioyned with the cauſe of the Church.

Neither that I did make more accompt of the hiſtorye which I had taken in hand then of the common vtilitie, whereunto I had chiefe reſpect. There were beſides theſe certayne other articles. whereupon the ſayde Iohn Hus had very wiſely and learnedly diſputed, but theſe ſhal ſuffice vs for this preſent. And for the reſidue we will paſſe them ouer, to the intent we may the more ſpedely retourne whereas our ſtory left, declaring what cruelty they vſed not onely againſt the bookes and articles of Iohn Wickliffe, but alſo in burning his body and bones, commaunding them to be taken vp 41. yeares after he was buryed, as appeareth by the decree of the ſayde Synode, the forme wherof, we thought hereunto to annexe as followeth.

¶ The order and maner of taking vp the body of Iohn Wickliffe and burning his bones 41. yeares after his death.

The aſhes of Wickliffe caſt into the riuer.

✻ The decree of the Synode of Conſtance touching the taking vp of the body and bones of Iohn Wickliffe to be burned 41. yeares after he was buryed in his owne pariſh at Lutterworth.

The decree of the councell for the burning of Wickliffes dead bones.

Ex Actis concilij Conſtant.

FOr ſomuch as by the authoritie of the ſentence & decree of the Councell of Rome, and by the cōmaundement of the Church and the Apoſtolical ſee after due delayes being geuen, they proceeded vnto the condemnatiō of the ſaid I. Wickliffe, and his memory: hauing firſt made proclamation, & geuen cōmaundement to cal forth whoſoeuer would defend the ſaid Wickliffe, or his memory (if there were any ſuch) but there did none appeare, which would either defēd him or his memory. And moreouer witneſſes being examined by Commiſſioners appoynted by Pope Iohn & thys Councell, vpon the impenitencie and finall obſtinacie and ſtubburnes of yͤ ſaid Iohn Wickliffe (reſeruing that which is to be reſerued, as in ſuch buſines, the order of the lawe requireth) and his impenitencie and obſtinacy euen vnto his end, being ſufficiently proued by euident ſignes and tokens, and alſo by lawfull witneſſes of credite, was lawfully geuen thereunto. Wherefore at the inſtaunce of yͤ ſteward of the treaſury, proclamation being made to heare & vnderſtand the ſentence agaynſt this day: the ſacred Synode declareth, determineth and geueth ſentence, that the ſaid Iohn Wickliffe was a notorious obſtinate hereticke, and that he died in his hereſie, curſing and condemning both him and his memory.

This Sinode alſo decreeth and ordeineth, that the body & bones of the ſaid Iohn Wickliffe, if it might be decerned and knowne from the bodyes of other faithfull people to be taken out of the ground, & throwne away farre from the buriall of any church, according vnto the canon lawes & decrees. Which determination and ſentēce definitiue being red & pronounced, the lord preſident, & the foreſaid preſidentes of the 4. nations, being demaunded & aſked whether it did pleaſe them or no? They all anſwered (and firſt Hoſtienſis the preſident, and after him the other preſidents of the nations) that it pleaſed them very well, and ſo they alowed and confirmed all the premiſſes, &c.

¶ What Heraclitus would not laugh, or what Democritus would not weep, to ſee theſe ſo ſage & reuerend Catos, to occupy their heads to take vp a poore mans body, ſo long dead and buryed before, by yͤ ſpace of 41. yeares? & yet peraduenture were not able to finde his right bones, but took vp ſome other body, & ſo of a catholick made an heretike. Albeit, herein Wickliffe had ſome cauſe to geue them thankes that they woulde at leaſt ſpare him ſo long till he was dead, and alſo to geue him ſo long reſpite after hys death 41. yeares to reſt in his ſepulchre before they vngraued him, and turned him from earth to aſhes: which aſhes alſo, they took & threw into the riuer. And ſo was he reſolued into 3. elements, earth, fire, and water, thinking therby vtterly to extinct and aboliſhe both the name and doctrine of Wickliffe for euer. Not much vnlike to the example of yͤ old Phariſeis & ſepulcher knightes, which when they had brought the Lord vnto yͤ graue, thought to make him ſure neuer to riſe againe. But theſe and all other muſt knowe, that as there is no cōſaile againſt the Lord: ſo there is no keeping down of veritie, but it wil ſpring and come out of duſt and aſhes, as appeared right well in this man. For though they digged vp his body, burnt his bones, & drowned his aſhes, yet yͤ word of God and truth of his doctrine with the fruit & ſucceſſe therof they could not burne: which yet to this day for the moſt part of his articles do remaine. Notwithſtāding, the tranſitory body and bones of yͤ man was thus conſumed and diſperſed, as by this picture here aboue ſet forth to thine eyes (gentle reader may appeare.

Ex Th. Walden. lib. de ſacrament.

Theſe things thus finiſhed and accompliſhed, whiche pertayne to the ſtory and time of Wickliffe: let vs now (by the ſupportation of the Lord) procede to entreate & write of the reſt, which either in his time or after his time, ſpringing out of the ſame vniuerſitie, and rayſed vp (as ye wold ſay) out of his aſhes were pertakers of the ſame perſecution. Of whom ſpeaketh Thomas Walden in his book, De ſacramentis & ſacramentalibus. cap. 53. Where he ſaith, that after Wickliffe many ſuffered moſt cruell death, and many mo did forſake the realme.

In the number of whome was William Swinderby, Walter Brute: Iohn Purney: Richard White: William Thorpe: Raynold Pecock B. of S. Aſaph, and afterward of Chicheſter.

Laurence Redman, Dauid Sawtre, Iohn Aſchwerbe,

W. Iames, Th. Brightwell, William Hawli, Rafe Grenhurit, Iohn Scut, Philip Norice, Peter Pain, Lorde Cobham.

To this Catalogue alſo pertayneth (mentioned in ancient writers) Laurence Redman maiſter of Arte, Dauid Sautre deuine, Iohn Aſchwarby vicar as they call him of S. Mary Church at Oxford, William Iames an excellent yong man well learned, Thomas Brightwell, & William Haulam a ciuilian, Rafe Grenhurſt, Ioh. Scut: and Philip Norice: which being excōmunicated by P. Eugenius the 4. in the yeare of our Lord, 1446. appealed vnto a generall or oecumenicall Councell.

Peter Payne, who flying from Oxford into Boheme, did ſtoutly contend agaynſt the Sophiſters, as touchyng both kindes of the ſacrament of the laſt ſupper. Who afterward among the reſt of the Oratours was one of the 14. that was ſent into the Councell at Baſill: whereas by the ſpace of 3. daies, he diſputed vpon the 4. article, which was as touching the ciuill dominion of the clergy, an. 1438. Alſo the Lorde Cobham. &c. with diuers others beſides whoſe names are mencioned in the kinges writte ſent to the Sheriffe of Northampton which writ of the king, followith in this Tenor. Rex vicecomiti Northamptoniæ ſalutem. &c. For ſo much as Iohn Attyate of Chepingwarden: Iohn Warryner. Ro. Brewode &c. be Recettours & fautoures of heretickes and eſpecially of one Iohn Woodward prieſt publiquely diffamed and condemned of hereſy will not be iuſtified by the cenſures of the Churche as the reuerend father I. Biſh. of Lincolne hath certified vs. We therefore willing to withſtand all defenders and fautours of ſuch hereſies doe will and commaunde aſwell the forenamed as namely the foreſaid Iohn Woodward to be apprehended ſtraightly charging the ſame to be empriſoned by theyr bodyes or otherwiſe puniſhed as ſhall ſeeme good to the Iuſtices, vntill they and euery of them ſhall ſubmit them ſelues to the obedience of the foreſayd Biſhop in this behalfe, accordingly. Whereof fayle you not vnder payne of C. li. Witneſſe our ſelues, yeauen at our Mannor of Langley the viij. day of Marche, the 12. yeare of our Reigne.

To theſe aboue rehearſed and other fauourers of Wickliffe within this our countrey of Englande we may adde alſo the Bohemians: forſomuch as the propagation of the ſaid doctrine of Wickliffe, in that Countrey alſo take roote, comming from England to Boheme, by thys occaſion as in ſtory here followeth.

The occaſion how the doctrine of Wickliffe came to Boheme.

There chaunced at that time a certayne ſtudent of the cōutry of Bohemia to be at Oxford, one of a welthy houſe and alſo of a noble ſtocke. Who returning home from the vniuerſitie of Oxford, to the vniuerſitie of Prage: caryed with him certayne bookes of Wickliffe, De realibus Vniuerſalibus, De ciuili iure, & Diuino: De eccleſia, De queſtionibus varijs contra clerum &c. It chaunced the ſame time, a certayne noble man in the City of Prage, had founded and builded a great Church of Mathias and Matheus, which Church was called Bethleem: geuing to it great landes, & finding in it two preachers euery day, to preach both holy day and working day to the people. Of the whiche two preachers, this Iohn Hus was one, a man of great knowledge, of a pregnant wit, and excellently fauoured for his worthy life amongſt them. This Iohn Hus hauing familiaritie wyth this yong man, in reading and peruſing theſe bookes of Wickliffe, tooke ſuch pleaſure and fruit in reading therof, that not onely he began to defend this author opēly in the ſchooles, but alſo in his ſermons: commending him for a good man, an holy man and heauenly man, wiſhing himſelfe when he ſhould dye, to be there placed, where as the ſoule of Wickliffe ſhould be. And thus for the ſpreading of Wickliffes doctrine enough.

Wicleuus vir bonus, ſanctus cœlo dignus.

The great affection of I. Hus to I. Wickliffe.

And thus much briefly concerning the fauourers & adherentes of Iohn Wickliffe, in generall. Now particularly & in order let vs (by Chriſtes grace) proſecute the ſtories and perſecutions of the ſaid parties aforenamed, as the courſe of their times ſhall require, firſt beginning with the valiant champions Wil. Swinderby and Walter Brute.

✻ The hiſtory of William Swinderby.

Anno 1389.

Ex Regiſtro Epiſcopi Herfordēſis.

W. Swinderby firſt examined.

Denouncers of W. Swinderby. 3. Friers, Fresby, Hinkby, Blaxton.

IN the yeare 1389. William Swinderby prieſt within the dioces of Lincolne being accuſed and detected vpon certayn opinions, was preſented before Iohn biſhop of Lincolne, and examined vpon certayne articles in the Church of Lincolne, after the forme and order of the popes law, according to theyr vſuall rite obſerued, his denouncers were theſe: Fryer Friſby obſeruant, Frier Hincely Auguſtine: & Tho. Blaxton Dominican. The articles wherewith they charged him, although in forme of wordes as they put thē vp, might ſeeme ſomething ſtraunge here to be recited: yet to the entent that all men may ſee the ſpitefull malice of theſe ſpider Fryers, in ſucking al things to poyſon, and in forging that is not true, as in proceſſe (Chriſt willing) hereafter ſhall better appeare by his aunſweres, I thought good here to notifie the ſame.

That men may aſke their debtes by charitie, but in no maner for debt to impriſon any man: and that he ſo impriſoning is accurſed.

That if pariſhners do knowe their Curate to be a lechour incontinent, and an euill man: they ought to withdraw from him their tithes, or els they be fautours of his ſinnes.

That tithes purely be almoſe, and in caſe that Curates be euill men, the ſame may lawfully be conferred to other men.

That for an euill Curate to curſe his ſuget for withholding of tithes: is nothing els, but to take with extortiõ wickedly and vnduely from them theyr money.

That no prelate may curſe a man, except he know before that he is curſed of God.

That euery Prieſt may abſolue any ſinner being contrite and is bound (notwithſtanding the inhibition of the Biſhop) to preach the Goſpell vnto the people.

That a Prieſt taking any annuall penſion vppon couenant, is in ſo doing a ſimoniacke and accurſed.

That any prieſt being in deadly ſinne, if he geue himſelfe to conſecrate the body of the Lord, he committeth idolatry rather then doth conſecrate.

That no prieſt entreth into any houſe, but to euill intreat the wife, the daughter or mayde. And therefore he admoniſhed the goodman of the houſe, to take herde what prieſt he let into his houſe.

An other concluſion falſly to him obiected. That a child is not truely baptiſed, if the prieſt that baptiſeth, or yͤ godfather or godmother be in deadly ſinne.

Item, that no man liuing agaynſt the law of God is a prieſt, how euer he were ordeined prieſt of any Biſhop.

W.Swinderby compelled by the Fryers to abiure articles, which hee neuer taught.

These articles or concluſions vntruely collected, were as cruelly exhibited agaynſt him by the Fryers in the Byſhop of Lincolnes court. The which articles although he neuer preached, taught or at any time defẽded, as appereth more in the proceſſe following: yet the Friers with theyr witneſſes ſtanding forth againſt him, declared him to be conuict: bringing alſo dry wood with them to the towne to burne him, and would not leaue him, before he made them promiſe and ſweare for feare of death neuer to hold them, teach them, nor preach them priuily, nor apertly vnder payne of relapſe: and that he ſhoulde goe to certayne churches to reuoke the foreſayd concluſions, which he neuer affirmed. As firſt in the Churche of Loncolne, then in S.Margarets Church of Leyceſter. Alſo in S.Martines Church in Leyceſter, and in our Ladies churches at Newarke: and in other Pariſhe Churches alſo, of Melton Moubray, of Haloughton, Harburgh, and Lenthburgh. which pennaunce being to him enioyned, he did obediently accompliſhe: with this forme of reuocation, whiche they bound him vnto, vnder theſe wordes.

The forced abiuration of W.Swinderby.

The reuocation of William Swinderby whereunto he was forced by the Friers.

I William Swinderby prieſt, although vnworthy of the dioces of Lincolne, acknowledging one true Catholique, and Apoſtolique fayth of the holy Church of Rome, doe abiure all hereſie and errour repugning to the determinatiõ of the holy mother church wherof I haue bene hetherto infamed, namely the concluſions and articles aboue prefixed, and euery one of them to me iudicially obiected, by the Commiſſary of the reuerend father in Chriſt and Lord, L.Iohn by the grace of God Byſhop of Lincolne: and do reuoke the ſame, & euery one of them, ſome as hereticall, ſome as erroneous, and falſe, and do affirme and beleue them to be ſo, and hereafter will neuer teach, preach, or affirme publiquely or priuily the ſame. Neither will make any ſermon within the dioceſſe of Lincolne, but asking firſt and obtayning the licence, of the foreſayd reuerend father and Lord the Byſhop of Lincolne. Contrary to the which if I ſhall preſume hereafter, to ſay or doe, to holde or preach: I ſhalbe content to abide the ſeueritie of the Canon, as I haue iudicially by the neceſsitie of the lawe, ſworne, and doe ſweare &c.

Thus haue you the concluſions and articles of thys good man, falſly obiected to him by the malicious and lying Fryers: and alſo the retractation, whereunto they by force compelled him: wherby it may likewiſe be coniectured, what credite is to be geuen to the articles and concluſions which theſe caueling Fryers wraſting all thinges to the worſt, haue obiected and imputed both to Wickliffe & all other of that ſort, whõ they ſo falſly do infame, ſo ſlaunderouſly doe bely, and ſo maliciouſly doe perſecute. After theſe things thus done and wrought in the dioceſſe of Lincolne: it ſo befell, the ſayd W.Swinderby to remoue to the dioceſſe and countery of Herford, where, he was as much or more moleſted by yͤ friers again, & by Ioh. Treſnant B. of Herford, as by the proceſſe & ſtory here enſuing ſet out at large out of their owne regiſters may appeare.

The proces of the B. of Hereford againſt W.Swinderby.

✱ Here followeth the proceſſe of Iohn Treſnant Biſhop of Herford had againſt the aforeſaid William Swinderby in the cauſe of hereticall prauitie as the popiſhe heretickes cal it.

The floriſhing inuocation of of Gods name.

The glorious name of the prince of peace, and his counſaile (whoſe counſailour no man is, & whoſe prouidẽce in his diſpoſition is neuer deceaued) being inuocated: To all and ſinguler beleuers of Chriſt, which ſhall ſee or heare this our proceſſe vnderwritten, Iohn by the ſufferaunce of God B. of Herford: greeting, and peaceable charitie in the Lord. For aſmuch as God the creator of all things, the keper of iuſtice, the louer of right, and the hater of malice, beholding from the high throne of his prouidence the ſonnes of men, now through the fall of their firſt father, prone and and declining to diſhoneſt and filthy & deteſtable miſchiues and to keep vnder their malice (which wicked tranſgreſſiõ did firſt gender) hath appoynted diuers preſidentes of the world ſtabliſhed in ſundry degrees, by whome and theyr circumſpect prouidence, mans audacitie ſhould be reſtrayned, innocency ſhould be nouriſhed amongſt yͤ good, & terror ſhould be ſtriken into yͤ wicked not to deceiue: alſo that their power to hurt, & theyr inſolency ſhould be bryd'ed in all places. And whereas amongſt many kindes of cares whiche come to our thoughtes, by the ducty of the office committed vnto vs, we are ſpecially bound to extend our ſtrẽgth, chiefly that the catholicke fayth may proſper in our tymes, and hereticall prauity may be rooted from out of yͤ borders of the faythfull: we therfore being excited through the information of many credible and faythfull Chriſtians of our dioces, to roote out peſtiferous plantes, as ſheep diſeaſed with an incurable ſicknes, going about to infect the whole and ſound flocke, are by the care of the ſhepheard to be remoued from the flock, that is to ſay, Preachers, or more truely execrable offendours of the new ſect, vulgarly called lollardes, which vnder a certayn cloked ſhew of holynes, running abroad through diuers places of our dioceſſe, & endeuoring to cut a ſunder the Lords vnſowed coat that is to ſay, to rent the vnity of the holy Church, & of the Catholicke fayth, and alſo to teare in peeces with their tẽpeſtious blaſts yͤ power of S.Peter, that is to ſay, to weaken the ſtrẽgth of the eccleſiaſticall ſtates and degrees, and the determination of the ſame holy church, haue wickedly preſumed & do preſume from day to day to ſpeak, to teach, to mayntayne (and that which is more horrible to be vttered) to preach openly many things hereticall, blaſphemies ſchiſmes, and ſclaunderous diffaminges, euen quite contrary to the ſacred Canons and decrees of the holy fathers ſo that they knowe not to direct their pathes in the wayes of righteouſnes and trueth, in that, yͭ they expounde to the people yͤ holy ſcripture, as the letter ſoundeth, after a Iudiciall ſort, otherwiſe then the holy Ghoſt will needs haue it: wheras the words wander from their proper ſignifications, and appeare to bryng in by geſſing new meanings: whereas the wordes muſt not be iudged by the ſenſe that they make but by the ſenſe whereby they be made, where as the conſtructiõs is not bound to Donates rules: where as fayth is farre placed from the capacitie of reaſon: But they labour by their pernitious doctrines & teachings publike and priuy, to boyle out the poyſõ of ſchiſmes betwene the clergie and the people. We to encounter agaynſt ſuche kinde of preachers, nay rather deceauers, and horrible ſeducers amongeſt the people, aduauncing and rowzing vp our ſelues in Gods behalfe, and holy mother Churche, with the ſpirituall ſword, whiche may ſtrike them wiſely, and wounde them medicinably, for theyr health and welfare: and namely William Swynderby Prieſt (ſo pretending himſelfe to be) as a teacher of ſuche kinde of pernicious doctrine, and an horrible ſeducer amongſt the people: to whom perſonally appearing before vs on yͤ Wedneſday to wit, the 14. of the month of Iune, in the pariſhe Church of Kington of our dioceſſe, in the yeare of our Lord. 1391. he being vehemently diffamed to vs of hereſie, ſchiſme and his peruerſe doctrines both manifeſt and priuy: we therefore haue cauſed many caſes and articles cõcerning the catholicke fayth to be miniſtred vnto him, that he ſhould anſwere to the ſame at a day and place for him meet and conuenient, of his owne choyſe and freewill: that is to ſay, on the Friday, being the laſt of the ſame month of Iune, next following aſſigned to him, at the Churche of Bodenhame of the ſame our dioceſſe. Of whiche caſes and articles exhibited vnto vs, by many of Chriſtes faythfull people, * zelous

Lollards by the popes interpretation, is a word deriued of Lollium.

They counterfait in the prophetes wordes as Apes do in princes apparel. Who expoundeth the ſcripture more after the letter, let the reader iudge by Hoc eſt corpus meum.

If ſuch medicines ſhould bee miniſtred to you, ye would can your Phiſition litle thank.

{ Anno. 1391. }

• Such as were in Queene Maries dayes, as Iohn Beard, Iohn Auales, Robin Papiſt, and other lyke murtherers.

Lord, Lord, a latine worde of their owne making.

lous followers of the catholike fayth to make information to our office (which caſes and articles alſo were by vs adminiſtred, as is before ſayd, to the ſame William Swinderby) the tenor therof followeth, and is thus.

The denunciation of the promoters to the B. of Hereford.

¶ Reuerend father and high Lord, Lord Iohn, by gods ſufferance biſhop of Hereford: It is lamentably declared to your reuerend fatherhood on the behalf of Chriſts faythful people your deuout children of your dioceſſe of Herford that notwithſtading the miſbeliefe of very many lollards, which hath to long a time ſprong vp here in your dioceſſe, there is newly come a certayn child of wickednes, named William Swinderby: who by his horrible perſwaſions & miſchieuous endeuours, and alſo by his open preachings and priuate teachinges, doth peruert as much as in him is the whole eccleſiaſticall ſtate, and ſtirreth vp with all hys poſſible power, ſchiſme betwene the clergy and the people. And that your reuerend fatherhood may be the more fully informed, who and what maner of man the ſame William Swinderby is: there be propoſed and exhibited hereafter to the ſame your fatherhood on the behalf of the ſame faithful people of Chriſt, againſt the ſame William Swinderby, caſes and articles. Which if the ſame William ſhall deny, thē ſhall the ſame caſes and articles moſt euidently be prooued againſt him by credible witneſſe worthy of beliefe, & by other lawfull proofe and euidences to the end that thoſe being proued, the ſame fatherhood of yours, may do and ordeine therin, as to your paſtorall office belongeth.

Matter articulated agaynſt W. Swinderby.

¶ In primis, the ſame William Swinderby pretending himſelfe prieſt, was opēly and publiquely conuicted of certayne articles and concluſions being erroneous, ſchiſmaticall, and hereticall, preached by him at diuers places and times before a multitude of faythfull chriſtian people. And the ſame Articles and concluſions did he by force of lawe reuoke and abiure, ſome as hereticall, and ſome as erroneous and falſe. Aduouching and beleuing them for ſuch, as that from thenceforth he would neuer preach, teach, or affirme openly or priuily any of the ſame concluſions. And if by preching or aduouching he ſhoulde preſume to doe the contrary: that then he ſhoulde be ſubiect to the ſeuerity of the Canons, accordingly as he did take a corporall oth, iudicially vpon the holy Goſpels.

3. Item, the ſayd William, contrary to the former reuocation & abiuratiō, not conuerting to repentance, but peruerted from ill to worſe, and geuen vp to a reprobate ſenſe came into your dioceſſe, where, he running about in ſondry places hath preſumed to preach or rather to peruert and to teach of his own raſhnes many heretical, erroneous, blaſphemous, and other ſlaunderous things contrary and repugnant to the ſacred Canons and the determination of ẏ holy Catholike Church. What thoſe things were, at what place and what time, it ſhall hereafter more particularly be declared.

Item, the ſame William, notwithſtanding your commaundementes and admonitions ſealed with your ſeale, & to all the Curates of your dioceſſe directed: contayning amongſt other thinges, ẏ no perſon of what ſtate, degree, or condition ſoeuer he were, ſhold preſume to preach or to teach or els expound the holy ſcripture to the people, either in hallowed or prophane places, within your dioceſſe, without ſufficient authoritie, by any maner of pretence ẏ could be ſought, as in the ſame your letters monitorie & of inhibition (the tenor wherof hereafter enſueth) is more largely conteined: which letters the ſame William did receiue into his handes, & did read them word by word in the towne of Monemouth of your dioceſſe, in ẏ yeare of our Lord. 1390. ſo that theſe your letters and the contentes thereof came to true and vndoubted knowledge of the ſame William: yet notwithſtanding hath the ſame William preſumed in diuers places and times to preach within the ſame your dioceſſe, after and agaynſt your commaundement aforeſayd. The tenour of the ſame letters before mentioned followeth and is this.

The letter monitory of the B. of Hereford inhibiting to preach without his licence.

IOhn by the ſufferance of God Biſhop of Hereford, to the deane and Chapter of our Church of Hereford, and to all and ſinguler Abbots, Priors, Prouoſtes, Deanes rurall, Parſons and Vicares of Monaſteries, Priores Churches, Colledges and Pariſhes, and to other hauing cure of ſoules within the Citty and dioceſſe of Herford, and to all and euery other being within the ſame Citty and dioceſſe. Greeting, grace, and bleſſing. Foraſmuch as the golden laurell of teaching doctorall, is not from aboue indifferently euery mans gift, neyther is the office of preaching graunted, ſaue to ſuch as are called, and eſpecially by the Church admitted therunto: we doe admoniſhe and require you all and ſinguler Clerkes aforeſayd, and do ſtraightly enioyne you all in the vertue of holy obedience, that you nor any of you do admitte any man to preach or to teach the Catholique fayth, ſauing ſuch as the ſame office of preaching ſhall by the authoritie Apoſtolicall or els your Byſhop be ſpecially committed vnto: but that as much as in you ſhall lye, you doe by worde and deede, labour to let thoſe that woulde attempte the contrary. And you Lordes, Ladyes, Knightes, Barons, Eſquires, and all and ſingular perſons, of what eſtate, degree, preheminence, or condition ſoeuer ye be, remayning within the city and dioceſſe of Herford, we doe beſeech and exhort in our lord that following the wordes of our ſauiour, you beware of the leauen of the Phariſeis.

Would God both they and all men did beware of that leauen.

Item according to the ſaying of the Apoſtle, be not ye caryed away with diuers and ſtraunge doctrines: and that in the meane while (as ſayth the Apoſtle) you be not remoued from the ſenſe of the holy auncient fathers, leaſt that any man by any meanes ſhold ſeduce you, but you agreeing together in one minde ſee that you honor God with one mouth. But if any man to whom that thing is not ſpecially (as is aforeſayd) committed, ſhall attempte to inſtructe or in this your life to directe you into the Catholicke faith do ye denye to geue them audience, and refuſe you to be preſent at their aſſembles and ſhun ye theyr teachinges, becauſe they be wicked and peruerſe. And as for vs we will not omitte to proceede according to the ſacred Canons and preceptes of the holye fathers, agaynſt ſuch as doe the contrary. Dated at London in the houſe of our habitation vnder our ſeale, the laſt day ſaue one of December, in the yeare of our Lorde, 1389. and of our conſecration the firſt.

5. Item, the ſame William in his preaching to ẏ people, on Monday being the firſt of Auguſt, in the yeare of our Lord 1390. in the pariſhe of Whitney of your dioceſſe, dyd hold and affirme: That no Prelate of the world of what eſtate, preheminence or degree ſo euer he were of, hauing cure & charge of ſoule, he being in deadly ſinne, & hearing ẏ confeſſion of any vnder his hand in geuing him abſolutiō, doth nothing: As who neither doth loſe him frō his ſinne, nor in correcting or excōmunicating him for his demerites doth bind him by his ſentence, except ẏ prelate ſhall be free himſelf from deadly ſinne, as S. Peter was, to whom our Lord gaue power to binde and loſe.

That is one of Wicliffes blemiſhes.

6. Item ẏ ſame William in many places ſaid & affirmed in the preſence of many faythfull chriſten people, that after the ſacramentall wordes vttered by the prieſt hauing the purpoſe to conſecrate: there is not made the very bodye of Chriſt in the ſacrament of the aulter.

7. Item, that accidencies cannot be in the ſacrament of ẏ aulter without a ſubiect: and that there remayneth materiall bread there to ſuch as be partakers communicant wyth the body of Chriſt, in the ſame ſacrament.

Bread he meaneth in ſubſtance.

8. Item, that a prieſt being in deadly ſin, cannot be able by the ſtrength of the ſacramentall words, to make the body of Chriſt, or bring to perfection any other ſacrament of the Church, neither yet to miniſter it to the members of the Church.

9. Item, that all prieſtes are of like power in all things, notwithſtanding that ſome of them, in this world are of higher and greater honour, degree, or preheminence.

10. Item, that onely contrition putteth away ſinne, if ſo be that a man ſhalbe duely contrite: and that, all auriculer and outward confeſſiō is ſuperfluous, and not requiſite of neceſſitie to ſaluation.

11. Item, inferior Curates haue not their power of bynding and loſing immediately from the pope or Biſhop, but immediately from Chriſt. And therfore, neither can ẏ pope nor biſhop, reuoke to themſelues ſuch kind of power, whē they ſee time and place at their luſt and pleaſure.

12. Item, that the pope cannot graunt ſuch kinde of annuall & yerely pardons, becauſe there ſhall not be ſo many yeares to ẏ day of iudgement, as are in ẏ Popes bulles or pardons contayned. Wherby it followeth that the pardōs are not of ſuch like value as they ſpeake of, & prayſed to be.

13. Item, it is not in the popes power to graunt vnto any perſon penitent, forgeuenes of the puniſhment or of the faulte.

14. Item, that perſon ẏ geueth his almes to any, whiche in his iudgement is not in neceſſitie, doth ſinne in ſo geuing it.

15. Item, that it ſtands not in the power of any Prelate, of what religion ſoeuer he be of, priuately to geue letters for the benefite of his order, neither doth ſuche benefite graunted, profite them to the ſaluation of their ſoule, to whom they be graunted.

16. Item, that the ſame william vnmindeful of his own ſaluation, hath many and oftentimes come into a certayn deſert wood, called Deruald wood of your dioceſſe, & there in a certain chappell not hallowed, or rather in a prophane cottage: hath in contempt of the keyes, preſumed of hys own raſhnes to celebrate, nay rather to prophanate.

17. Item, the ſame william hath allo preſumed to doe ſuch thinges in a certayne prophane Chappell being ſituate in the park of Newton nigh to the town of Leintwardin of the ſame your dioces.

VPon Friday being the laſt of the month of Iune, in the yeare aboueſayd, about 6 of the clocke, in the ſayd pariſhe Churche of Bodenhone, hath the ſayd William Swinderby perſonally appeared before vs. And he willing to ſatiſfie the terme to him aſsigned as before ſpecified, hath read out, word by word before all the multitude of faythfull chriſtian people, many anſweres made and placed by the ſame William (in a certayne paper booke of the ſheete folded into foure partes) to the ſayd Articles, and the ſame anſwers for ſufficient hath he really to vs exhibited, aduouching them to be agreable to the lawe of Chriſt. Whiche thing beeing done the ſame William (without any moe with him) dyd departe from our preſence, becauſe that we, at the inſtaunce of certayne noble perſonages, had promiſed to the ſame William free acceſſe, that is to wit, on that day for the exhibiting of thoſe aunſweres, and alſo free departing without prefixing of anye terme, or without citation, or els anye other offence or harme in bodye or in goodes.

¶ As for the tenour of the ſame anſwers, exhibited vnto thē by the ſame william, as is before ſpecified: we haue here vnder annexed word for worde, and in the ſame olde language, vſed at that time, when it was exhibited. And followeth in theſe wordes.

✱ The proteſtation of William Swinderby with hys aunſweres to the articles by the promotors, layd agaynſt him to the biſhop of Herford, taken out of the Regiſters in the ſame olde Engliſhe wherein he wrote it.

The proteſtation of W. Swinderby with his anſwers.

IN the name of God amen. I william Swinderby prieſt vnworthy, couenting and purpoſing wholy with all my hart to be a true chriſtian man, with open confeſſiō knowledging mine owne defaultes and vnwiſe deedes: making openly this proteſtation, cleping god to record here before our worſhipfull Biſhop Iohn, through the ſufferaunce of God Biſh. of Herford, with witneſſe of all this people: yͭ it is not mine intent any thing to ſay or affirme, to mayntain or to defend that is, contrary to holy writte, agaynſt the beliefe of holy church, or that ſhould offend the holy determination of Chriſtes Church, or the true ſentences of holy doctors. And if I haue here before through mine vncunning, bene vnordered, or by euill counſaile bene deceiued, or any thing ſayd, preached, holden, mayntayned or taught contrary to the law of God: wholly and fully for that tyme for now and euer with ful will I reuoke it and withdraw it, as euerich chriſten man ſhould: Praying and beſeeching eche chriſten man, to whom this writing ſhal come to, that gif I ought erre (as God forbid that I do) or euer erred in any poynt, contrary to holy writ, that it be had and holden of them, as for thing nought ſayd. And all the trothes that I haue ſayd according with the law of God, that they mayntayne them, and ſtand by them for life or death to Gods worſhip, as a true Chriſten man ſhoulde, ſubmitting me meekely to the correction of our Byſhop that here is, or of any other chriſten man, after Chriſtes lawes and holy writ: in will euer ready to be amended, and with this proteſtation I ſay and aunſwere to theſe concluſions and articles that here followen after, the which bene put to me to aunſwere to.

1. Obiectiō.

The firſt is this: that I william of Swinderby pretending (he ſayth) my ſelfe a prieſt, was iudicially conuented of certain articles, & concluſions of error, falſe ſchiſmatick & hereſie, by me in diuers places & tymes preached (he ſayth) before multitudes of yͤ true chriſten men: & the ſame articles and cōcluſions by nede of law reuoked & forſworn ſome as hereſies, and ſome as errours and falſe: & ſuche I affirmed and beleued them to be. And that none of them from that time forth I ſhould preach, teach, or affirme, openly or priuily, ne that I ſhould make no ſermon to the people, ne preache but by lawfull leaue aſked and gotten. And if I would preſume in doing or affirming the contrary then to the ſeneritie of the lawe, I ſhould be buxom, as by nede of the law I ſwore.

To this I ſay, witneſſing God that is in heauen, to my wit and vnderſtanding, that I neuer preached, helde, ne taught theſe concluſions and articles, the whiche falſely of Friers were put vpon me, and of lecherous prieſtes to the Biſhop of Lincolne. For I was ordayned by proceſſe *yer ſayd, of theyr law, by the byſhop and his commiſſaryes, ſo as I graunted them to bring my purgation of 13. prieſtes of good fame. And ſo I did, with a letter, & 12. ſeales therby, from the Mayor of Leyceſter, and from true Burgeſes and 30. men to witnes with me, as the Duke of Lancaſter knew and heard, the Erle of Darby, and other many great men that were that tyme in the towne, that I neuer ſayd them, taught them, ne preached them. But when I ſhould haue made my purgation, there ſtooden forth fiue friers or moe, that ſome of them neuer ſawe me before, ne heard me, and three lecherous prieſtes openly knowne, ſome liuing in their lechery xx. yeare (men ſayden) or more as by their childer was openly knowen. Some of theſe they clepinden, denounciations, and ſome weren cleped comprobations, that weren there falſely forſworne, they ſuing buſily and crying with many an other Frier, with great inſtaunce to geue the dome, vpō me, to burne me & boughten dry wood before, as men tolden in that towne: & theſe ſleightes, and ſwearing, and mony geuing, as men ſaiden, in fauor of the biſhop (by what law I wot not, but ſothly not by Gods law) they ſayden they held me as conuicted, and might not haue forth my purgatiō. So as I fully forſooke them, and neuer graunted that I ſayd them. Ouer this they made me ſweare neuer to hold them, teach them, ne preach them, priuily ne apertly: and that I would go to certayne Churches to reuoke the concluſions that I neuer ſayd, in ſclaunder of my ſelfe, by great inſtance of the Fryers. And ſo for drede of death and for fleſhly counſell that I had, I aſſented, and ſo I did. And alſo they maden me to ſweare, that I ſhould not preach (by inſtance of yͤ Fryers) within that dioceſſe, withouten licence aſked & graunted, and neuer ſithen I did. And now the ſame concluſions bene rehearſed to me agayne: whether by Fryers counſell I will not deme, God wot, but in ſlaunder of me it is: and therefore I will anſwere now (with Gods helpe) to the concluſions. Of the which the firſt is this.

*Yer ſayd, that is, beforeſayd. Witneſſes with W. Swinderby. 13. prieſts, & 30. other with the letter of the mayor of Leiceſter, and Burgeſes with 12. ſeales.

The chaſtitie of Votaries to be noted.

1. Concluſion.

That men mowen aſken theyr debtes by charitie, but in no maner for debt to inpriſon any man: and that he ſo empriſoning, is accurſed.

Aunſwere. How debt is to be purſued.

So I ſayd not: but thus I haue ſayd, and yet ſay with proteſtation put before: that who ſo purſues his brother with malice, priſoneth him cruelly for debt without mercy that fayne woulde pay it if he might: he ſinneth agaynſt Chriſtes teaching, eſtote miſericordes, ſicut pater veſter miſericors eſt.

2. Concluſion.

The ſecond concluſion, that falſe Friers and lecherous prieſtes putten vppon me was this: that if the parochiens know her Curate to bene a lechour, incontinent, and an euill man: they owen to withdraw from him tithe, and els they bene fautours of his ſinnes.

Aunſwere.

Thus I ſayd not but on this wiſe, and yet I ſay wyth proteſtation put before: that if it be knowne openly to the people, that perſons or Curates come to her benefice by ſimonie, and liuen in notory fornicatiō, and done not their office & her dueties to her parochiens by good enſample of holy life, in true preaching, liuing & reſidence, wendyng away frō his cure, occupied in ſecular office: he owes nought to haue of the parochiens, tithes, ne offrings, ne he mowes not to hold him for her Curate, ny he mowes not to geuen him tithes, leſt they bene gyltie to GOD of conſent and mayntayning of her open ſinne. Nemo militans deo, implicat ſe negotijs ſecularibus. 1. q. 1. ca. quiſquis per pecuniā, & diſt. 80. ca. Si quis.

3. Concluſion.

The thirde concluſion was this, that friers and prieſts putten vpon me, that tithes purely bene almeſſes: And in caſe that curates bene euill men, they mowen leefully be geuen to other men, by temporal Lords, and other temporalties bene done away from men of the Church, actually and openly treſpaſſing.

Aunſwere.

This I ſayd not in theſe termes, but thus I ſaye with proteſtation made before: that it were medefull and leeful to ſecular Lordes by way of charitie, and power geuen to him of God, in default of prelates that amend not by gods law, curſed curates that openly miſuſen the goods of holy church, that ben poore mēs goods and cuſtomably agaynſt the law of God: the which poore men, Lordes ben holden to maintaine and defend, to take away & withdrawe from ſuch curates, poore mens goods, the which they wrongfully holden in helpe of the poore, and their owne wilful offeringes, and their bodely almes deedes, and geue them to ſuch that duely ſerue God in the Churche, and bene needy in vpbearing of the charge that prelates ſhoulden doe, and done it not. Alter alterius onera portate & ſic adimplebitis legem Chriſti. And as anenſte taking away of temporalties I ſay thus with proteſtation made before: that it is leefull to Kynges, Princes, Dukes, and Lordes of the worlde to take away fro popes, Cardinals, fro Biſhops and prelates, poſſeſſions in the Churche, theyr temporalties, and theyr almes that they haue geuen them, vppon condition they ſhoulden ſerue God the better, when they verely ſene that their geuing and their taking bene cōtrary to the lawe of God, to Chriſtes liuing and his Apoſtles: and namely in that, that they taken vpon them (that ſhoulden be next followers of Chriſt and his Apoſtles in poorenes & meekenes) to be ſecular Lords: againſt the teaching of Chriſt and Saunct Peter, Luc. xxij. Reges gentium. Et. 1. Pet. 5. Neq; dominantes in clero. And namely when ſuch temporalties maken them the more proud, both in hart and in araye, then they ſhoulden bene els, more in ſtrife and debate agaynſt peace and charitie, and in euill enſample to the world more to be occupied in worldly buſines. Omnem ſolicitudinem proiicientes in eum. And drawes them from the ſeruice of God, from edifying of Chriſtes Church, in empoueriſhing and making leſſe the ſtate and the power of kings, princes Dukes, and Lordes that God hath ſet them in: in wrongfull oppreſſion of commons for vnmightfulnes of realms. For Paule ſayth to men of the Church (whoſe lore, Prelates ſhoulden ſouerainly followen) Habentes victum, & veſtitum, hiis contenti ſimus.

4. Concluſion.

The fourth concluſion is this, that Friers and prieſts putten vppon me falſely: that an euill Curate curſing hys Soget for withholding of tithes, is naught els, but to take with extortion wickedly and vnduely mony from thē.

Aunſwere. Here may you ſee the falſhood of the papiſtes gathering articles agaynſt good mē, which they neuer ſayd nor meant.

Thus ſaid I not, but thus I ſaid, and yet do with proteſtation made before: that an euil Curate curſing his parochiens, vnmighty to pay their tithing, with vengeance without pitty, for his ſinguler worldly winning agaynſt charitie, and not for heed of their ſoules, there he is holde by his power reaſonably to helpe his needy parochiens, and doth nought of the goodes of the Churche: wickedly and vnduely he withholdes from them, that which is due to them by the law of God. Dimittite & dimittetur vobis: date, & dabitur vobis: verùm mihi vindictam, & ego retribuam, dicit dominus.

5. Concluſion.

The fift concluſion is this, that Friers and Prieſtes falſely putten vpon me: that no man may curſe anye man, but if he were wete him curſed of God, ne the commers wͭ him rennen not into ſentence of curſing in any maner.

Aunſwere.

Thus ſayd I not, but thus I ſayd, and ſay with proteſtation put before: that no man ought to curſe any man, but for charitie and with charitie. Omnia veſtra cum charitate fiant. And ſikerly I ſay, that no wrongfull curſing of Pope or any Prelate in earth, bindes * anenſt God, but when they wrongfully and wittingly curſen men, for that men will not do their ſingular wil, vnreaſonable bidding, with highnes of hart and cruelty (ſtanding pacience and charity in them that they curſen wrongfully) he is bleſſed of almighty God, and they themſelfe bene curſed. Math. 5. Beati eritis cum maledixerint homines. &c. Et in Pſalmo: Maledicent illi, et tu benedices Et Auguſtinus. xi. q. iij chap. illud.

* Agaynſt.

6. Concluſion.

The ſixt concluſion is this, that Fryers and Prieſtes putten vppon me falſely: that each Prieſt may aſſoyle hym that ſinneth, contrition had: and notwithſtanding forbiddinges of the Biſhop, is * holden to preach to the people the Goſpell.

* Holden, that is, bounde.

Aunſwere.

Thus I ſayd not, but thus I ſayd, and yet ſay with proteſtation made before: that each true Prieſt may counſaile ſinfull men, that ſhewen to him her ſinnes, after the witte and cunning that God had geuen him, to turne fro ſinne to vertuous life. And as touching preaching of the Goſpell, I ſay that no B. owes to let a true prieſt, that god had geuen grace, witte, and cunning to doe that office: for both Prieſtes and Deacons, that God had ordeyned Deacons and Prieſtes, ben holden by power genē hem of God to preach to the people the Goſpell, and namely & ſomely, popes, biſhops, prelates, and curates: For this is due to the people and parochiens, for to haue and aſke of hem, and they duely and freely owen to done it. 7. Concluſion.

The 7. concluſion is this, that Fryers and Prieſts falſely putten vpō me, that a Prieſt taking any thing for annuell, through couenaunt: in that, he is ſchiſmaticke & curſed.

Aunſwere.

This ſayd I, neuer in theſe termes: But thus I ſayde, & yet ſay with proteſtation put before: that no Prieſt owes to ſell by bargaining and couenaunt, his ghoſtlye trauaile, ne his maſſes, ne his prayers, ne Gods worde, ne hallowinges, baptiſme, ne confirming, order geuing, for weddinges, for ſhrift, for houſell, or for ennoynting, any worldly mens reward to aſke or take for theſe or for any of theſe, or for any ghoſtly thing, he erres and doth ſimony. Vt patet 1. q. 2. ca. Nullus. Et ex conſilio Triburenti. capit. Dictum eſt. Et Chriſtus in euangelio vendentes, et ementes eiecit de templo. Math. 22.

8. Concluſion.

The viij. concluſion is this, that Fryers and Prieſtes putten vnto me falſely, ſaying that I beleeue ſadly as my ſelf ſayes: that yche prieſt being in deadly ſinne, yet he put him to make Chriſtes body, rather he dos idolatrye then makes it.

Aunſwere.

Thus ſayd I not, but thus I ſayd, and yet ſaye wyth a proteſtation put before: that what Prieſt that puts himſelfe preſumptuouſly and vnworthily in deadly ſinne, wittingly to miniſter and to receaue that holy ſacramēt, and ſo recordes hit curſedly and damnably, he receaues his dome. Qui manducat et bibit indignè, iudicium ſibi manducat & bibit 1. Corin. 11.

9. Concluſion.

The ix. concluſion is this, that Friers & Prieſtes falſely putten vpon me: that no Prieſtes entres into any houſe but euill for to treat the wife, the daughter, or the wenche: and therfore they ſaydē, that I prayed the people that their huſbandes ſhould beware, that they ſuffer no prieſt to enter into her houſe.

Aunſwere.

And if I had ſayd thus, then I had prayed agaynſt my ſelfe, for I come oft into mens houſes: But thus I ſayde, and yet I do, praying chriſten men to beware yͭ they nouriſh nor mayntayne no lecherous Prieſtes in their ſinnes: for there be where (as men well knowne) they ben mayntained in many places, continuing homely wͭ her women And ich man there ſayne they payne therefore a certaine to the B. almes. Et ideo ait Yſido. 11. q. 4 Qui conſentit peccantibus & defendit alium delinquentem, maledictus erit apud deū & homines.

10. Concluſion.

The x. concluſion is this, that Friers and prieſtes putten vpon me falſely: that a childe is not verely baptiſed, if the prieſt that baptiſeth, the godfather, or the godmother, ben in deadly ſinne.

Aunſwere.

God wot in heauen they ſayd full falſe: but thus I ſaid and yet I ſay: that the prayers that an euill Prieſt prayes (liuing in lechery or other deadly ſinne) ouer yͤ child when it ſhalbe holowed, ben not acceptable to God as ben the prayers of a good prieſt. And the better & clenner the prieſt is, the Godfather, and the godmother: the more graciouſly God will heare him, if all they bene not greateſt nor moſt rich in this worlde. Vnde gg. xiij. q. vij. cap. in grauibus. Cum is qui diſplicet ad intercedendum peccator admittitur, irati animus proculdubio ad deteriora prouocatur.

11. Concluſion.

The xi. concluſion is this, that Friers and prieſts putten vpon me falſely: that no man, liuing againſt the law of God is a prieſt, how euer he were ordayned Prieſt of any Byſhop.

Aunſwere.

Certes this is falſe, for I ſayd neuer thus in theſe termes: but thus I ſayd, and thus I ſay with a proteſtation put before, that what euery pope, or Cardinall, Byſhop or Prieſt, or any Prelate of the Churche comes to his ſtate or dignitie by Simony, & in ſimony occupies that office, & holy churches goodes: I ſay that he is a theefe, and that by the dome of God, and comes but to ſteale and kill. Ioh. 10. Fur non venit niſi vt furetur, & mactet, & pardat. And furthermore I ſay, that what Pope, Cardinall, Byſhop, prelate, or prieſt, in maner of liuing, or teaching, or lawes making contrary to Chriſtes liuing and hys lawes, or anye other ground put in ruling of the church of Chriſt, but by Chriſt & his lawes: is very Antichriſt, aduerſary to Ieſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Aliud fundamentum nemo poteſt ponere, præter id quod poſitum eſt, quod eſt Chriſtus. Et patet 1. q. 3 c. Si quis Et 1. q 6. c. Ego autem. Quicunq;.

The true deſcription who was Antichriſt.

But this worſhipfull father B. of Hereford, that here is, ſayes thus in hys writing: that I william of Swinderby, notwithſtanding the foreſayd reuocation and abiuration (not ſetting at hart, but from euill to worſe he ſayes peruerted ſo his dioces) he ſayes I come running about by diuers places: and by mine own folly he ſayes that I haue preſumed to preach manye hereſies, errours, blaſphemies, ſchiſmes, and other diffames, and to holy canons and determinatiō of holy church contrary and repugnant, which where & when within forth more ſpecially it ſhalbe ſhewed, that ye be falſe enformed that I haue preſumed in diuers places in your dioces to preach hereſies, errors, blaſphemies, ſchiſmes and other diffames. And ſyr, all the coūtry knowes whether this be ſooth or not: for ſire I preſum not, ſithen it is the office of a prieſt, by the law of Chriſt to preach the Goſpell: ne nought I did it for preſūption, but for the charge ẏ I haue of God by prieſthood (if al I be vnworthy) & to ẏ worſhip of God, & helpe of chriſten ſoules, freely without gathering of her goods for my preaching. If I erred in this, I will be amended. And ſir touching your maundement that ye ſendē to me, there was ſet none. And ſir I made neuer yet diſobediēce vnto you, ne to your miniſters: & yet all I had, me owes more to obeyche to God then to you, in that that ye bidden contrary to Chriſtes bidding. And ſir as ye ſayne, that I had no minde of my hele, it is to lightly demet: for God forbid, but yet there lye hele more then in your bidding. For God wat for hele I did it, of mine and of the people, and that was in my minde. But ſir it ſemes me that ye charge not by euidence of the puniſhing ſo greatly the breaking of Gods heſts, as ye done of your own. And ſir if it be your wil, in default that the people wanted, you to teache hem (and her curates did not) by the deſire of the people that weren hungry and thirſty after gods word, ichone to beare vp others charge as gods law bids: I preached, not for diſobedience to you, but ſir in fulfilling of ẏ obediēce that Gods law bids me do in excuſing of my ſelfe to you of that ye blame me of, in opē ſhewing to holy Church, with ẏ proteſtation that I firſt made, I aunſwere thus to the Articles that ye haue put to me.

1. Article.
Anno. 1390.

The firſt is this, that I, william of Swinderby, the Monday the firſt of Auguſt, the yeare of our Lorde. 1390. preaching to the people in the Church of whitney of your Dioces, held and affirmed (as ye ſayne) that no Prelate of the world, of what ſtate or degree that he be, hauing cure of ſoules, being in deadly ſinne, and hearing confeſſion of his ſuget, does nought in aſſoyling him, ne he aſſoiles him not of his ſinne: and alſo in amending his ſuget opēly ſinning and him for his deſertes curſing, his ſentence byndes not, but if that Prelate be as cleane out of deadly ſinne as was S. Peter, to whom our Lord gaue power of binding and vnbinding.

Note here how the papiſtes vſe falſely to wraſtle good mens ſayings and articles

Aunſwere.

I neuer thought this ne ſpake this, ne heard it to the time that I ſaw it written in our booke, and that will witnes the Lord of the towne that has the ſame ſermon written, and many gentiles and other that heardē me that day: But thus I ſaid, and thus I ſay with proteſtation put before: that there is no man, Pope, ne biſhop, prelate ne Curate, that bindes ſoothly, verily and ghoſtly, but in as much as his binding or vnbinding accordes with the keyes of heauen that God gaue to Peter. And as S. Gregory ſaies that power han they only, that hold together the enſample of the apoſtles with heere teaching. Illi ſoli in hac carne poſiti ligandi atque ſoluendi poteſtatem habent, ſicut ſancti Apoſtoli qui eorum exempla ſimul cum doctrina tenent: gg. li. quarto ſententiarum.

The popes binding how far it extendeth.

2. Article.

The ſecond article that is put vpon me, is this, that I ſhould haue ſayd, preached, & affirmed in many places before many true men of Chriſt: that after the Sacramentall wordes ſayd of the prieſt, hauing entention of conſecratiō: That in the Sacrament of Gods body, is not very Gods body.

And what if he had ſaid it?

Aunſwere.

This ſayd I neuer God wote, and true men that haue heard me.

3. Article.

The third article is this, that our biſhop puts vpō me, that I ſhould haue ſayd in many places, and affirmed, that accidents mow not be in the ſacrament of the aultar without ſubiect, and ẏ material bread leues not therwith Gods body in the ſacrament.

Aunſwere.

This concluſion I haue not holdē, ne taught, ne preached: for I haue not medled me of that matter, my wit ſuffiſeth not thereto. But here I tell my beliefe with proteſtation put before: that the Sacrament of the aultar made by vertue of heauenly wordes, that Chriſt himſelfe ſayd in the Cene, when he made this ſacrament, that it is bread & chriſtes bodye, ſo as Chriſt himſelfe ſayes in the Goſpell, & S. Paul ſayes, and as Doctors in the common law haue determined to this ſentēce. Math. 26. Mar. 14. Lu. 22. Pa. 1. Cor. 10. & 11. de con. diſtinct. 2. panis: & de conſecra. diſt. 2. Corpus. Iohn. 6 verus panis.

Bread and Chriſtes body in the ſacrament.

4. article.

The 4. article is this, that our Biſhop accuſeth me of, that I ſhould haue preached about and ſayd: that a Prieſt being in deadly ſinne, may not by the ſtrength of the Sacramentall words make gods body, or none other Sacrament of the Churche, either performe to miniſter them to members of the ſame.

Aunſwere. The wickednes of the prieſt impayreth no ſacrament.

Thus I neuer ſaid, thought it, preached it, ne taught it for well I wot, the wickedneſſe of a Prieſt may appaire no very ſacrament: but the wickednes of the Prieſt appayres himſelfen, and all that boldnes & example of his ſinne cauſen the people to liuen the worſe agaynſt Gods law. Vnde Greg. Et ſi ſacerdos in peccatis fuerit, totus populus ad peccandum conuertitur.

5. Article.

The 5. article is this, that our biſhop puts vnto me: ẏ all prieſtes ben of euē power in all things, not withſtāding that ſome of this world bene of higher dignity or more paſſing in highnes of degree.

Aunſwere. Equalitye of prieſtes.

Certes no man would ſay thus as I ſuppoſe, no more did I, ne neuer heard it that I wot of: But this I ſay with proteſtation made before, that what Prieſt liues moſt holily next following the law of God, he is moſt louet of God, and moſt profitable to the Church. If men ſpeakē of worldly power and Lordſhips and worſhips, with other vices that raignen therin, what Prieſt that deſires and has moſt hereof (in what degree ſo he be) he is moſt Antichriſt of all the prieſtes that ben in earth. Vnde Auguſtinus ad Valerium ſcribens ait. Nihil eſt in hac vita, & maximè hoc tempore facilius & leuius, & hominibus acceptabilius, Epiſcopi, præsbiteri aut decani officijs: ſed ſi profunctoriè aut adulatoriè, nihil apud Deum miſerabilius aut triſtius & damnabilius.

Aug ad Valeriū.

6. Article.

The ſixt Article is this, that onely contrition does away ſinne, if a man be duely contrite: and all outward cōfeſſion by word is ſuperfluous and not requiret of need of health.

Aunſwere.

This concluſiō ſaid I neuer that I know of. But thus I ſay with proteſtation put before, that veray contrition of hart, that is neuer without charity and grace: dos away al ſinnes before done of that man that is verely contrite. And all true confeſſiō made by mouth outward to a wiſe prieſt, and a good, profiteth much to man, and it is needfull & helping that men ſhew their life to ſuch, truſting full to gods mercy, and that he forgeues thy ſinne. Vnde Auguſt. de conſe. diſtict. 4. Nemo tollit peccata mundi niſi ſolus Chriſtus qui eſt agnus, tollens peccata mundi.

Confeſſion.

God forgeueth ſinne.

Aug. de conſe. diſt. 4.

7. Article.

The 7. article is this, that I ſhould ſay that lower curates haue not here power of binding & aſſoiling, by mean of pope and biſhop, but of Chriſt without mony. And therfore neither pope ne biſhop may reuoke ſuch maner power for time and place at her will.

Aunſwere.

*Not for thy, that is, notwithſtanding.

Thus ſayd I not, but * not for thy it ſeemes me thus, that no man ſhould graunt any thing after his owne will, ghoſtly, ne bodily. But euerich man ſhould be wel aduiſet, that he graunt nothing but if it be the will of God that he ſo graunt it. And it is no doubt that ne God grauntes * by meane perſons, as does Antichriſt to torment Chriſtes people. Vnde & Ioh. 19. ait Pilatus. Neſſis quia poteſtatem habeo dimittere te. Et Chriſtus. Non haberes poteſtatem aduerſum me vllam, niſi eſſet tibi datum deſuper.

*Some thing here lacketh in the copy.

8. Article.

The 8. article that our biſhop puts me to, is this: that I ſhould ſay that the pope may not graūt ſuch maner indulgence of yeares, for there ſhall not be ſo many yeres vnto ẏ day of dome, as bene conteined in his buls, or in ẏ Popes indulgences: wherof it folowes that indulgences bene not ſo much worth as they ſemen and bene preached.

Aunſwere.

This article I ſayd not thus: but I ſay that the Pope may graunt indulgences written in his letter of yeres, all ſo farre forth that he may graunt him in Gods law, ſo farre to graunt, and farther not: yeares may he graunt no moe then God hath ſet. Yf indulgence ben forgeuenes of ſinne, I wot wel all onely God forgeues ſinne. Yf it be releaſing of paines in Purgatory ordeinet of God, if God haue bidden him releaſe ſo many, or ordeined that he ſhould releaſe ſo many, he may then releaſe him if it be in his own diſpoſing to releaſe whom him likes, & how much, then he may deſtroy Purgatory and let none come there and releaſe his owne payne, as charity wottes. So it ſemes he may be liker to be ſaued, if himſelfe liſt. If any go to Purgatory, thē it ſemes he full fayles charitye. If Bulles bene the indulgence that men bringen from the Court, then ben they not ſo much worth, as they coſten there: for lightly they might be loſt, drenched, or brend, or a rat might eatē them: his indulgence then were loſt. Therefore ſir haue me excuſet, I know not theſe termes: teach me theſe termes by Goddes law, and truely I will learne hem.

Agaynſt pardons

9. Article.

The 9. Article is this that I ſhould haue ſayde: that it is not in the popes power to graūt to any man (doing penaunce) remiſſion from payne, ne from blame.

Leude I am, but this Article ſayd I not thus leudly: But thus I ſay, that ſithen it is onely due to God to geue and to graunt plenary remiſſion from paines & frō blame: that what euer he be, Pope or other, that preſumptuouſly miſtakes vpō him that power that is onely due to God: in that (in as much as in him is) he makes himſelfe Chriſt, & blaſphemeth in God, as Lucifer did, when he ſayd: Aſcendam & ero ſimilis altiſſimo. Farther I ſay, if the Pope holde men of armes, in mainteining his temporalties & Lordſhip to venge him on hem that gilten & offenden him, and geues remiſſiō to fight & to ſlay hem that contraryen hem, as men ſayden he did by the biſhop of Norwich, not putting his ſwerd into his ſheath, as God commaunded Peter. Mitte.&c. he is Antichriſtus, for he dos contrary to the commaundements of Ieſus, that bad Peter forgeue to his brother ſeuēty ſithe ſeuen ſithe. Si peccauerit in me frater meus, quotiens demittam ei? Septies?&c. Et Chriſtus: non dico tibi ſepties, ſed ſeptuageſies ſepties.

10 Article.

The 10. Article is this, that our Biſhoppe puts to me that I ſhould haue ſayd: that a man geuing his almes to any man after his dome (not hauing nede) ſinnes, in ſo geuing, Aunſwer.

This article ſothly I ſayd not in theſe termes: But of this matter I haue ſpoken, & will with proteſtation made before on this wiſe: that it is medefull to geue almes to ich man that aſketh it bodely or ghoſtly, but not to geue to ich ſhameles begger, ſtrong & mighty of body, to get his lifelode leuefull & will not, in what degree ſo he be, men owē not to geue it to ſuch a one, that he vnreaſonably aſketh, for if he geue it to him wittingly, he ſins as fautor of his idlenes. Vnde Sap.12. Si benefeceris, ſcito cui benefeceris; & erit gloria in bonis tuis multa.

He meaneth of begging friers.

11. Article.

The 11. Article is this, that is put to me, that I ſhoulde haue ſayd, that it is not in ỹ power of any prelate of what euer priuate Religion, to graunt letters of the good deeds of her order, ne ſuch benefices grauntet profits not to hele of ſoules to hem that they ben grauntet to.

Aunſwere.

I ſaid neuer thus in theſe termes: but thus I ſay with proteſtation, that prelates of priuate religion mowē graūt letters of the good deedes of her order: But the goſtly mede that comes of good deedes, they mow not graunt, for that is onely propriet to God. And if they blinde, the people in miſbeliefe for her worldlye winning, wittingly behetting hem of her owne graūt goſtly medes in heauen by her letters and her ſeale (vncertaine, who ſhall be damned) but make the people bolder to ſinne by truſt of her praiers: hit is none heal to the ſoules, but harmes to that one & to that other. For God ſhall yeld to echone after here werkes. Ipſe reddet vnicuique ſecundum opera ſua.

Good deedes of the order profite nothing.

12. Article.

The 12. Article is this: that our Biſhops puts to me, that I mony times and oft haue come (he ſayes) to a deſert wode, cleped Derwaldſwode of his dioces: and there in a Chappell not hallowed, but accurſet * ſhepherds hulke, by mine own folly he ſayes haue preſumed to ſing (but rather to curſe) in contempt of the keyes.

Or ſhepcotte.

Aunſwer.

Herto I ſay, that this is falſly put vpō me of hem that told you this. For it is a chappell where a prieſt ſings certaine dayes in the yeare, with great ſolemnity: and certes I neuer ſong therein ſeth I was borne into this world.

The accuſers proued with a lie.

13. Article.

The 13. Article is this, that I ſhould alſo preſume to ſing in an vnhallowet Chappell, that ſtondes in the parke of Newton, beſides the town of Leyntwardy of this ſame Dioces.

An other lye.

Aunſwere.

Truely I wot not where the place ſtondes.

14. Article.

The 14. Article is this, that I ſhould ſay that no man owes to ſweare for any thing, but ſimply withoutē oth to affirme or to deny, and if he ſweare he ſinnes.

Aunſwere.

This article ſayd I not that I haue minde of, in thys maner: But oft I haue ſayd and yet will, that men ſhould not ſweare by any creature by the law of God, and that no man ſhould ſweare in idel, as welnigh al the people vſeth, & therfore me thinkes it is no neede to comfort the people in ſwearing. For from the olde vnto the young, & namely men of holy Church, breken his heſt, and few Biſhoppes purſuen hem therfore.

To ſweare by no creature.

15. Article.

The 15. Article is this, that I ſhoulde haue taught to true men of Chriſt, that on no maner they ſhould worſhip the Image of him that was done on the croſſe, or the Image of the bleſſed mayd his mother, or of other Sayntes into honor and worſhip of the ſame ordeinet in the minde of them. And oft ſithes, the worſhipper of ſuch Image, he has reprouet, ſaying and ſtrongly affirming, that Church men ſinnen and done Idolatry.

Aunſwere.

This concluſion haue I not ſayd in theſe termes. But this I ſay with proteſtation. that God commaūdes in his law in diuers places. Exod.20. Leuit.19.& 26. Deut.5.& 7. Tobiæ 1. Baruc.6. 2. ad Corin.10. Eſay.45. Iere.2.6.8.& 10.22. & vltimo, Sapient.13.& 14.& 15. Mac.5.& Threnorum 4. & poſtremo: that men ſhould not worſhippē grauen Images that ben werkes of mens handes: And alſo he bids that mē ſhould not make to hem grauen Images in likeneſſe of the thinges that bene in heauen, to that end to worſhippen hem: ſethen neither God ne Chriſt by his manhood gaue neuer commaundement to make thes Images, ne expreſſe counſell, ne his Apoſtles in all his law, ne to worſhip ſuch that bene made. But wel I wote, that by mens owne relation that haue miſbeleuet in hem, that many mē ſinnen in mawmetry worſhipping ſuch dead Images: Notforthy, to tho men bene Images good to whom they bene but kalēdars, and through the ſight of hem they knowen the better and worſhippen oft God and his Saints. And to ſuch mē they done harme that ſettē her hope and truſt in hem or done any worſhip to hem agaynſt Gods law & his heſt. Vnde ait Gregorius in Regiſtro libro. 10. in Epiſtola ad Serenum Epiſcopum. These concluſions, poyntes, and articles that I haue vnder proteſtation, in this booke affirmed: I will ſtand by hem, and maintayne hem (with the grace of almighty god) to the time that the cōtrary be prouet dewly by Gods law: And this proteſtation I make for my fayth and my beliefe as I did the beginning: that whenſoeuer this worſhipfull or any other Chriſtē man ſhewes me verayly by gods law the contrary of this, I will holy forſake hem, and take me to the veray trouth and better vnderſtanding of wiſer men, redy to be amended by the law of Ieſu Chriſt, and be a true Chriſten man & faythfull ſonne of holy church: And of theſe I beſeech you all bere witnes where ye commen.

The tenor of the citation.

IOhn by Gods permiſſion Byſhop of Hereford, to his deare ſons our Deane of Leamſter, to the perſons of Croft, Almaly, and Whitney, and alſo to the Vicars of Kingſton, Iarderſley, Wiggemore, and Monmouth Clifford, and of S. Iohns aultar in our cathedrall Church of Hereford, and to the reſt of the Deanes, Parſons, Vicars, Chapleines, pariſh Prieſtes, and to other, whoſoeuer in any place are appoynted through our city and dioces of Hereford: ſendeth greeting, grace, and benediction.

We bid and commaund, charging you ſtraitly, in the vertue of holy obedience, that you cite or cauſe to be cited peremptorily (and vnder the payne of excommunication) William Swinderby, pretending himſelfe to be a Prieſt: That he appeare before vs, or our Commiſſaryes the 20. day of this preſent moneth of Iuly, at North Lodebury, within our dioces, which the continuance of the dayes following in other places alſo to be aſsigned vnto him if it be expedient, till ſuch thinges as haue bene and ſhall be layde agaynſt him be fully diſcuſſed, to aunſwere more at large to certayne poſitions and articles, touching the Catholicke fayth, and the holy mother Churches determination, that haue bene exhibited and miniſtred vnto the ſayd William. And to ſee and heare alſo many thinges that haue openly in indgement before vs and a great number of faythfull Chriſtians by him bene euen in writing confeſſed, to be condemned as hereticall, falſe, ſchiſmaticall and erroneous. And to ſee and heare poſitions and Articles denied by the ſayd William, to be proued by faythfull witneſſes and other lawfull trials againſt the ſayd William. And to receiue for his falſe hereticall, erroneous and ſchiſmaticall doctrine that Iuſtice ſhall appoynt, or els to ſhew cauſes why the premiſſes ſhoulde not bee done.

And if the ſayd William lieth priuely, or els cannot be ſo cited in his proper perſon: we will that in your Churches when moſt people ſhall then come together to diuine ſeruice, you openly with a loud voyce, and that may be vnderſtanded, cauſe the ſaid William peremptorely to be cited vnto the premiſſes: certifying the ſame William, that whether he ſhall appeare the day and place appointed or no, we notwithſtanding will proceed vnto the premiſſes agaynſt the ſayd William according to the canonicall decrees by forme of law, in the abſence or contumacy of the ſayde William notwitſtanding. We will moreouer if the ſayd William ſhall appeare at the ſayd day and place as is aforeſayde before vs, frendly heare him, and honeſtly, and fauorably, as farre as we may with Gods leaue, deale with him: graunting free licence to come and to go for his naturall liberty without any hurt either in body or goods. And ſee that you fully certify vs of the thinges that you or any of you ſhall do about the execution of this our commaundement, and that by your letters patentes ſigned with your ſeale autenticall: geuing alſo faythfully to the ſayde William or to his lawfull Proctor, if he require it, a copye of this our preſent commaundement.

The firſt ſitting againſt W.Swinderby.

Anno. 1391.

On Thurſday, the xx. of July, in yͤ yeare of the Lord aforeſaid: we in the pariſh church of North Lidebury aforeſayd, about 6. of the clocke, ſitting in iudgement, after that it was reported vnto vs how the foreſayd Williã was perſonally taken and lawfully cited: Cauſed the ſayd William then and there openly in iudgement to be called out, to do, heare and receiue ſuch thinges, wherto he was afore cited, & to do otherwiſe that which iuſtice ſhould perſwade. And the ſayd William appeared neither by himſelfe, nor by proctor: but onely by a ſeruaunt (whoſe name we know not) he ſent a certayn ſchedule of paper, made like an indenture vnto vs to excuſe him. After which ſchedule ſene, read and with ripe deliberatiõ wayed, and in any wiſe notwithſtãding we adiudged the ſayd William, after he was oftẽ called, & long euen to the due hour taried for, & by no meanes appering: worthely for his obſtinacy, & for his ſtubbernnes aſſigned vnto him the 29. day of July in the Church of Ponſley, to appeare before vs with the foreſayd ſauegard, to aunſwere more fully to ſuche articles, and otherwiſe to heare, receiue, and do as before is noted.

¶ The ſecond dayes act.

The 2. ſitting agaynſt W.Swinderby.

Upon Saterday being the 29. of July, and in the yeare of the Lord aforeſayd, we John by Gods permiſſion yͤ fore remembred Biſhop in the Church of Ponteſbury, of our Dioces, at ſixe of the clock, or there about, ſitting in iudgement: made the ſayd Williã of Swinderby to be opẽly called, that (as was to him appointed and aſſigned) he ſhould appere before vs, to anſwere to the foreſayd articles more fully and to declare the ſayd articles as the darknes of his aunſweres did worthely require. And that the ſayd William being called, & long for a due time looked for, did make no meanes to appere: and ſo we pronounced him to be obſtinate, and for his obſtinatnes (to ouercome his malice, & of our exceeding fauor) thought good to appoynt and dyd appoynt the 8. of Auguſt, thẽ next following, at Cleobury Mortemere of the ſame our dioces, vnto the ſayd William for the ſame thing.

¶ The third dayes act.

The 3. ſitting againſt W.Swinderby.

Upon Tewſday, the 8. of Auguſt, the yeare aforeſayd, I John by Gods permiſſion Biſhop of Hereford aforeſayd, in the Church of Cleobury Mortemere, about 6. of the clocke, ſitting in iudgement, cauſed the foreſayd Williã Swinderby, to be called many times openly to do and receiue about the premiſſes, according to the appoyntment of the ſame day that iuſtice ſhould aduiſe, which William did not appeare at all. Wherupõ, we after that the ſayd Williã was called, and often proclaymed, and long looked for but not appering at all, did iudge him worthely (as of right apperteined) obſtinate: and for his obſtinatnes, aſſigned him the 16. day of the ſame moneth of Auguſt next folowing, in the pariſh Church of Whithorne of the ſame our dioces, to bring forth, or to ſee brought forth, all lawes, muniments, and other kinds of proofes, & to ſee alſo witneſſes brought forth, admitted and ſworne, by whom and which thinges we intend to proue the foreſayde articles, or at leaſt wyſe ſome of the ſame.

¶ The fourth dayes act.

The 4. ſitting againſt W.Swinderby.

Of this proceſſe mention is made before pag. 465.

Upõ Wedneſday the 16. day of the moneth of Auguſt the yeare aforeſaid we John yͤ biſhop in the pariſh Church of Whithorn aforeſayd of our dioces, ſitting in iudgement, cauſed the ſayd William Swinderby often times to be called, who (as is aforeſayd) appeared not at all: whom after that hee was ſo called, proclaymed & long looked for, & yet by no means appering, we pronoũced to be obſtinate. We receiued alſo by certayne faithfull Chriſtians, and zealous men for the catholicke fayth of our dioces a certayne proces made and had at an other time agaynſt the ſame William, before yͤ reuerend father in God and Lord, Lord John by the grace of God, Biſhop of Lincolne confirmed by the hanging on of the ſeale of the ſame reuerend father, yͤ Lord Biſhop of Lincolne. The tenor wherof word for word is contayned before. And theſe faythfull Chriſtians moreouer agaynſt the obſtinatenes of the ſayd William Swynderby brought forth diſcreet mẽ, M. William Leuiet, parſon of the pariſh Churche of Kyuerſly, and alſo Edmunde Waterdon pariſh Chaplaine of the Chappell of N. & Roger Newton, and Hugh Sheppert, lay men of the dioces of Lincolne, aſking inſtantly that they might be receiued for witneſſes, to proue ſome of the foreſayd articles who agaynſt the obſtinatenes of the ſayd William Swinderby we thought good to receiue and did receiue, and their othes to the holy Goſpels of God being layd handes on corporally in our hand. And did diligẽtly examine them in proper perſon ſeuerally in forme of law: whoſe ſayinges & depoſitions are afterward brought in, & at the inſtance of the ſame faythfull Chriſtians, we aſſigned the ſecond day of Septẽber then next folowing, to the ſayd William Swinderby, to ſay and alledge agaynſt the ſayd proces: witneſſes, and their ſayinges, in the ſayd Church of Whythorne: decreeing, that a copy ſhould be made for him of theſe thinges that were brought forth, and of the depoſitions of the witneſſes.

2. Concluſion.

☞ To the ſecond concluſion that he saien is errour or herecſy, that toucheth taking away of the temporalties and of Lordſhips of prieſts that bene euill liuers.

Declaration.

I ſay me ſeemeth that the concluſion is true, & is thys: that it were medefull and leefull to ſecular Lords by way of charity, and by power geuen to them of God, in default of Prelates that amend naught by Gods law: curſed Curates that openly miſuſe the goodes of the holye Church, that ben poore mens goods: and cuſtomably ayens the law of God, (the which poore men, Lords ben holden to mayntayne and defend) to take away and to draw from ſuch curates, poore mens goodes in helpe of the poore, and theyr owne wilfull offeringes, and theyr bodely almoſe deedes of worldly goodes, and geue them to ſuch as duely ſeruen God in the Churche: and bene ready in vpbearing of the charge that prelats ſhoulden do and done it not. And as anences taking away of temporalties: I ſay thus, that it is leefull to Kinges, to Princes, to Dukes, and to Lords of the world to take away from Popes, from Cardinals, frõ Biſhops, Prelates, and poſſeſſioners in the Church, theyr temporalties, and theyr almes that they haue geuẽ thẽ vpon conditiõ, that they ſhoulden ſerue God the better: whẽ they verely ſeen that theyr geuing & taking bene cõtrary to the law of God, contrary to Chriſtes liuing, and his Apoſtles, and namely in that that they takẽ vpon thẽ, that they ſhouldẽ be next folowers of Chriſt & his apoſtles, in poorenes and meeknes, to be ſecular Lords againſt the teaching of Chriſt and of S. Peter. Truely me ſemeth that all Chriſten men, and namely Prieſtes ſhoulden take keepe, that their doing were according with the law of god, either the old law either the new. The Prieſtes of the olde law wern forbidden, to haue Lordſhippes among theyr brethren, for God ſayd, that he would be theyr part and theyr heritage. And Chriſt that was the higheſt Prieſt of the new Teſtament forſooke worldly Lordſhip, and was here in fourme of a ſeruaunt, and forbad his Prieſtes ſuch Lordſhips, and ſayd, Reges gentium dominantur eorum. &c. vos autem non ſic. That is. The kinges of the heathen, beare dominion and rule. &c. But you ſhall not do ſo. And as Saynt Peter ſayeth. Neque dominantes in clero &c. Not bearing rule and dominion ouer the Clergy. &c. So it ſeemeth me: that it is agaynſt both lawes of God, that they haue ſuch Lordſhips, and that theyr title to ſuch lordſhips is not ful good: And ſo it ſeemeth me, that zif they bene thereto of euill liuing, it is no great perill to take away from them, ſuche Lordſhips but rather medefull, if the taking away were in charity, and not for ſingular couetouſneſſe ne wrath. And I ſuppoſe that if friers, that be bounden to theyr foũders, to liue in pouerty, would break theyr rule and take worldly Lordſhips: might not men lawfully take from thẽ ſuche Lordſhips, and make them to liue in pouerty as theyr rule would? And forſooth it ſeemeth me, that Prieſtes oughten alſo well to keepe Chriſtes rule, as Friers owne to keepe the rule of theyr founder. Jeremy witneſſeth, how God cõmended Rachabs children, for they would not break theyr faders bidding in drinking of wine. And yet Jeremy profered thẽ wine to drinke. And ſo I trow, that God would commend his Prieſtes, if they woulden forſake worldlye Lordſhips, and holden them a payd with lifelot, and with clothing: and buſy them faſt about theyr heritage of heauẽ. And God ſayth. Numeri. 18. In terra eorum nihil poſsidebitis, nec tenebitis partẽ inter eos: Ego pars & hæreditas veſtra in medio filiorum Iſrael. &c. Et Deut. 18. Non habebitis ſacerdotes & Leuitæ & omnes qui de eadem tribu eſtis, partem & hæreditatem cum reliquo Iſrael, quia Sacrificia Domini & oblationes eius cõedent, & nihil accipient de poſſeſsione fratrum ſuorum. Dominus enim ipſe hereditas ipſorum, ſicut locutus eſt illis. Et Lucæ 14. Sic ergo omnis ex vobis, qui non renunciauerit omnibus

3.Concluſion.

☞ The third concluſion toucheth the matter of preaching of Prieſtes, withouten leaue of Biſhops, and is this that ſuch true Prieſtes may counſel ſinnefull men:that ſhewen to them their ſinnes, after the wit and cunning that God hath geuen,to turne hem from ſinne to vertuous life, & as touching preaching of the Goſpell.

Declaration.

I ſay, that no Biſhop oweth to let a true Prieſt ,that God hath giffen grace, wit and cunning to do that office. For both Prieſtes and Deacons that God hath ordeyned Deacons or Prieſts,bene holden by power geuen to them of God,to preach to the people the Goſpell:and namely,& ſouereily Popes,Biſhops,Prelates and Curates: for this is due to the people and the pariſhners,to haue it and aſke it.And hereto ſeemeth me,that Chriſt ſaid generally to his Diſciples : Ite & prædicate Euangelium omni creaturæ, Goe and preach the Goſpell to all creatures, as well as he ſayd Ite & baptizate omnes gentes, Goe and baptiſe all nations, that alſo as well longeth preaching to Prieſtes without leaue of a Biſhop as doth baptiſing:and then why may he not preach Gods word withouten a Biſhops leaue. And ſithen Chriſt bod his Prieſtes preach, who ſhould forbidden them preaching? The Apoſtles were forbidden of a biſhop at Ieruſalem to ſpeake more of the name of Ieſus, but Peter ſayd : Si iuſtum eſt in conſpectu Dei,vos potiùs audire quàm Dominum iudicate. That is. whether it be iuſt in the ſight of God to heare and obey you before the Lord: be your ſelues Iudges. A Biſhop may not let a Prieſt of geuing bodily almes in his Dioces : much more may he not let the doing of ſpiritual almes in his dioces by gods law. A Prieſt may ſay his Mattines withouten the Byſhops leaue:for the Pope that is aboue the Biſhop, hath charged Prieſtes therewith: And me thinketh that Chriſtes bidding ſhould be all ſo much of charge as the Popes. 4.Concluſion.

☞ The fourth concluſion toucheth the Sacrament of the aultar,and is this.

Declaration.

That wholy I beleue that the Sacramẽt of the aultar made by vertue of heauenly wordes, is bread and Chriſtes body,ſo as Chriſt himſelfe ſayth in the Goſpell and as S. Paule ſayth,and as Doctors in the common law haue determined:To this ſentence Iohn.6. Moſes hath not geuẽ you bread from heauen, but my father will geue you bread from heauen. He is the true bread that came downe from heauen and geueth life vnto the world. My father geueth vnto you bread in deed:the very true bread of God is that, which came downe from heauen and geueth life vnto the world. I am the bread of life:The bread which I wil geue is my fleſh. And in the Canon of the Maſſe Panem ſanctum vitæ æternæ:the holy bread of life. And Corinth.the 10.cap. and firſt Epiſtle. The bread which we breake,is it not the communicating of the body of the Lord? Let a man proue himſelfe and ſo eat of that bread.&c. And Canon De conſecratione diſtinction.2. Vnder the authority of Hilarius the Pope: Corpus Chriſti quod ſumitur de altari &c. And Auguſtine in the foreſayd diſtinctiõ. That which is ſene, is bread &c.That which fayth requireth, is bread and is the body of Chriſt. And in the foreſayd diſtinction.cap.Omnia quæcunque &c.By theſe two ſentẽces it is manifeſtly declared,that that bread & this, bee not two but one bread and one fleſh. Note the woordes for that he ſayth, the breade and fleſhe. And the author,De diuinis officijs,and alſo Auguſtine in his booke De remedijs pœnitentiæ:why prepareſt thou thy teeth &c.And Ambroſe, De Sacramentis:de conſecratione:diſtinct.2. Reuera mirabile eſt.&c. This meat which you receiue,& this bread of one which deſcended from heauen: doth miniſter the ſubſtaunce of eternall life,and whoſoeuer ſhall eate the ſame ſhall not dye euerlaſtingly,and is the body of Chriſt. Note how he ſayth and is the body of Chriſt.

5.Concluſion.

☞ The 5.article telleth of forgeueneſſe of ſinnes & is this. That very contrition withouten charity and grace, do away all ſinnes before done of that man,that is verely contrite, and all true confeſſion made by mouth outward to a wiſe Prieſt and a good, profiteth much to a man and it is needfull and helping,that men ſhew theyr life to ſuch, truſting fully to Gods mercy,that he forgeueth the ſinne.

Declaration.

And herto I ſay,that there bene 2. remiſsiõs of ſinnes: one that longeth onely to God: And that remiſſion is the clenſing of the ſoule from ſinne. And the other remiſſion,a certifying that one man certifieth an other, that his ſinnes bene forgeuen of God,if he be ſory with all his hart for thẽ: and is in full wil to leaue them for euer: and this maner of forgeuenes longeth to Prieſts. Of the firſt maner of forgiueneſſe. Dauid ſayth: And I ſayd I will confeſſe my vnrighteouſnes vnto the Lord, & thou forgaueſt me my miſdeed.And Zachary ſayth. And thou O childe ſhalt be called the Prophet of the higheſt.&c. To geue knowledge of ſaluation vnto his people for the remiſſion of theyr ſinnes, by the bowels of Gods mercy.And Iohn Baptiſt. Behold the lamb of God that taketh away the ſinnes of the world. And S.Iohn the Euangeliſt ſayth in his Epiſtle: If we confeſſe our ſinnes, he is faythfull & iuſt to forgeue vs our ſinnes and clenſe vs from al our iniquity.And it foloweth. If any man ſinne,we haue an aduocate with the father, euen Ieſus Chriſt and he it is that is the propitiatiõ for our ſinnes. And of the other remiſsiõ of ſinnes Chriſt ſpeaketh in the Goſpell, and ſayth. Whoſe ſinnes ye forgeue, they ſhalbe forgeuen.And mans forgeuenes auayleth litle, but ȝif God forgeue our ſinnes through his grace.

Remiſsiõs double.

6.Concluſion.

☞ The 6. concluſion teacheth indulgences and pardons, that the Pope graunteth in his Buls,and men callen it an abſolution A pœna & a culpa.

Declaration.

Of this maner of ſpeach I cannot finde in the Goſpel, ne in no place of holy write,ne I haue not read that Chryſt vſed this maner of remiſſion,ne none of his Apoſtles. But as me ſemeth,if the pope had ſuch a power ſithẽ the paines after a mãs death bene much greater thẽ any bodily paines of the world:me thinketh he ſhould of charity keep mẽ out of ſuch paynes, and then men needed not to finde ſo many vicious Prieſts after theyr life, to bring theyr ſoules out of Purgatory. An other thing me thinketh, that ſithe the popes power ne may not keep vs in this world fro bodely paynes as from cold,from hunger,from dread, frõ ſorow, and other ſuch paynes, how ſhould his power help vs frõ ſpirituall paynes,when we bene dead? But for that no mã commeth after his death to tell vs the ſooth in what payne they bene, men mow tell thereof what him luſt. S. Iohn ſayth in his Apocalips, that he ſawe vnder the aultar, the ſoules of them which were ſlaine for the word of God,and for the teſtimony which they had. And they did cry with a loud voice,ſaying:how long Lord holy and true,doeſt not thou reuenge our bloud of them which dwel on the earth. And white ſtoles were geuẽ to euery of thẽ,to reſt a while, till the number of theyr felow ſeruaunts & brethren ſhould be fulfilled,which alſo remayned to be ſlayne as they were. &c. Here ſemeth it,that theſe ſoules were not aſſoiled a pœna,that is from payne: for theyr deſire is not fulfillen.And they were bidden abide a while,and that is a payne.And if Martyrs were not aſſoyled from payne, it is hard for any mã to to ſay, ẏ he aſſoyleth other mẽ a pœna. Alſo good mẽs ſoules haue not but ſpirituall bliſſe, and they want bodely bliſſe,

Either there is purgatory, or els the pope is cruel and vncharitable.

The Popes power can keepe none from bodely paine, Ergo,much leſſe from ſpirituall.

If the Martyrs being dead, be not aſſured frõ grief of tarying, much leſſe cã they aſſoile other from paynes of purgatorie.

The Pope hath no power grounded vpon Scripture, to bring from pain of purgatory.

blyſſe, vntill their reſurrection in the day of dome. And after they deſiren to haue that blyſſe, and abiden it, and that is paine to them. And I cānot ſee that yͤ Pope hath power to bring him from this paine. But if any man can ſhew me, that he hath ſuch a power graunted in the troth of holy write, I will gladly leeſen it.

7. Concluſion.

The Pope maketh him ſelfe euen with Chriſt

☞The vij. point ſpeaketh of the Pope and is this: Sith it is onely due to God, as I haue ſayd before, to geue & to graunt plener remiſſiō, from paine, and from blame: that whatſoeuer he bee Pope or other that preſūptuouſly miſtaketh vpon him the power that onely is due to God, in that, in as much as in him is, he maketh him ſelfe euen wͭ Chriſt, & blaſphemeth God, as Lucifer did, when he ſayd: Aſcendam, & ero ſimilis altiſſimo, That is, I will aſcend, and be lyke the higheſt &c.

The Pope contrarie to Chriſt.

The pope agaíne prooued Antichriſt.

2. Swordes neuer giuen to the pope.

Two ſortes of annoyntinges in Scripture.

A defection in Antichriſtes time.

For that I ſay, if yͤ Pope holde men of armes in maintayning of his temporal Lordſhip, to venge him on them that gilten and offenden him, & geueth remiſſion to fight and to ſlay them, that contrarien him, as men ſayden he did by the Byſhop of Norwich, not putting his ſword in his ſheath, as God commaunded to Peter: he is Antichriſt. For he doth the contrary of the commaundement of Jeſus Chriſt, that bad Peter forgeuen to his brother. 70. ſithe. 7. ſithe. wel I finde in the Goſpel, that when Chriſt ſent his Diſciples to Samarye, the Samaritanes would not receiuen them. And ſome of them bidden Chryſt, that he ſhould make a fire come down from heauen, to deſtroy the City. And he blamed them and ſaid: Neſcitis cuius ſpiritus eſtis: Filius hominis non venit animas perdere, ſed ſaluare. That is, ye know not of what ſpirit ye are: The ſonne of man is not come downe to deſtroy, but to ſaue yͤ lyues and ſoules of mē. &c. If Chriſt then come to ſaue men, and not to ſlea them: who that doth the reuers hereof, is againſt Chriſt, and then he is Antichriſt. Chriſt bad Peter put his ſworde in his ſheath and ſayd: Omnes qui gladium acceperunt, gladio peribunt. That is: All which take the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſworde. And I cannot fynde that Peter drew out his ſword after that time, but ſuffered as Chriſt ſayd: Cum ſenueris, alius cinget te, & ducet quò tu non vis. That is, when thou ſhalt waxe old, an other ſhall gird thee and lead thee whether thou wilt not. And therefore ſayd Peter, Chriſt ſuffered for vs, leauing vs example that we ſhoulde followe his ſteps. And Paule ſayth: Not defending your ſelues, but geue place to anger: leaue reuenging to mee, and I ſhall rewarde them &c. And therfore it ſeemeth to me, that it is much againſt Chriſtes lore, that his Vicar ſhould bee a fighter, ſithen that hee mote be a ſhephearde, that ſhoulde go before his ſheepe, and let them come after him, and not with ſwordes to driue them away from him. For as Chriſt ſayth, a good ſhepheard ſhall put his lyfe for his ſheepe. And zif al that Chriſt had two ſwordes when that hee was taken of the Jewes, he ſayd himſelfe, it was for that the Scriptures moten zit be fulfilled: Quoniam cum iniquis deputatus eſt, that is: he was reputed among the wicked: and not to figure two ſwordes, that men ſayen the Pope hath to gouerne with the church. And when I ſee ſuch doinges of the Pope, & many other that accorden not with Chriſts lore, ne his liuing: And when I reade diuers Scriptures of holye writte, I am foule aſtenied whether they ſhoulden be vnderſtanded of him, or of any other. And I pray you for Gods loue tell mee the ſooth. Chryſt ſayth: Many ſhall come in my name, ſaying: I am Chriſt, and ſhall ſeduce many. &c. Chriſt (I wot well) is as muche to ſay, as he that is anointed, & two annointinges there weren in the lawe, one of Kinges, an other of Prieſtes. And Chriſt was both King and Prieſt, and ſo the Pope ſayth that he is. And if all that haue bene Emperours of Rome, and other heathen kinges haue bene Antichriſts, they come not in Chriſtes name. But who ſo commeth in Chriſtes name, and fayneth him Chriſtes frend, and he be priuely his enemy, he may lightly beguile many. S. Paul ſaith: before there commeth a defection firſt, and yͤ ſonne of perditiō ſhalbe reuealed, which is yͤ aduerſary, and is extolled aboue al that is named God, or which is worſhipped: ſo yͭ he ſhal ſit in the temple of God, ſhewing himſelf as God. And it followeth in the ſame place: And now ye knowe what holdeth till he be reuealed in his time, for he worketh already the miſtery of iniquitie. Onely he yͭ holdeth, let him holde till he come abroad, & then that wicked one ſhall be reuealed, whom yͤ Lord Jeſus ſhal ſlay with the ſpirite of his mouth. &c. And S. John ſaith in the Apocalips: I ſaw an other beaſt aſcending out of the erth, and two hornes like to the lambe. He ſpake like yͤ Dragō, & had the power of the firſt beaſt. Many ſuch authorities aſtonieth me oft ſithes: and therfore I pray you for yͤ loue of God, to tell me what they meane.

¶The ſentence.

Mention was made of this ſchedule before in the firſt dayes Acte. pag. 471.

THe which ſchedule afore mencioned, with the cōtentes thereof diligently of vs peruſed, we conſidering yͭ diſeaſes which be not eaſely cured wͭ gētle remedy, muſt haue harder playſters. Cōſidering moreouer theſe his articles with his aunſwers to yͤ ſame, & to other articles alſo laſtly againſt him produced, firſt mature deliberatiō had before vpon yͤ whole matter wͭ the foreſaid maſters & Doctors, as wel ſecular as regular, to a great number, obſeruing in the ſame al thinges to be obſerued in this behalfe, haue geuē ſentēce againſt yͤ ſaid W. in forme as foloweth.

The ſentence giuen agaynſt hym.

The name of Chriſt being inuocated, we John, by the permiſſion of God, Biſhop of Hereford, ſitting in tribunal ſeate, hauing God before our eyes, weying & cōſidering yͤ articles by the foreſaid faithfull Chriſtians put vp againſt yͤ ſaid Swinderby, pretēding himſelfe to be prieſt, with his aunſwers vpō the ſame, Actis & Actitatis before vs in the cauſe of hereticall peruerſitie, with mature deliberation had before in this behalfe, with maſters & doctours of diuinitie, and alſo of other faculties, with their counſel and cōſent: Do pronounce, decree, and declare the ſayd W. to haue bene and to be an hereticke, ſciſmaticke, and a falſe informer of the people, & ſuch as is to be auoided of faithfull Chriſtians. Wherefore we admoniſh, vnder yͤ paine of the law, all & ſingular Chriſtians, of what ſex, ſtate, condition, or preeminence ſoeuer: yͭ neither they, nor any of thē wͭin our dioces, or any other, do beleue, receaue, defend, or fauor yͤ ſaid W. til he ſhal deſerue fully to be reconciled to the boſome againe of holy Church.

¶The appeale of W. Swynderby from this ſentence of the Biſhop prefixed, vnto the king and his counſaile.

The appeale of W. Swinderby from the B. to the king and his counſayle.

* Some thyng there lacketh in the copie.

IN nomine patris, et filij, et ſpiritus ſancti, Amen. I. W. Swynderby prieſt, knowledge openly to al men, that I was before the Biſhop of Hereford, the thirde day of October, and before many other good clerkes, to aunſwer to certaine concluſions of yͤ faith that I was accuſed of. And mine aunſwere was this, that if the Biſhop or any man couthe ſhew me by Gods law, yͭ my concluſions or mine aunſweres were errour or hereſie, I would be amended, and openly reuoke them before al yͤ people. *Knowes in any of my concluſions, but ſayden ſingly with word, that there was errours in them, and bidden me ſubiect me to yͤ Biſhop, & put me into his grace & reuoke mine errour, and ſhewed me nought by Gods law ne reaſō, ne proued which they weren. And for I would not knowledge mee guiltie, ſo as I knew no errour in thē, of which I ſhould be guilty, therfore yͤ Byſhop ſate in dome in mine abſēce, and deemed me an heriticke, a ſchiſmaticke, and a teacher of errours, and denounced me accurſed, that I come not to correction of yͤ Church. And therefore for this vnrightfull iugement, I appeale to the kinges Juſtices for many other cauſes.

The kyngs court aboue the Byſhops court.

One cauſe is, for the kynges Court, in ſuch matter is aboue the Byſhops court: For after that the Byſhop has accurſed, he may no feare by his law, but thē mote he ſech ſuccour of the kinges law, and by a writ of Significauit, put a man in priſon.

The ſecond cauſe is, for in cauſe of hereſie there liggeth iudgement of death, & that dome may not be geuen without the kinges Juſtices. For the Byſhop will ſay: Nobis non licet interficere quenquam, That is: It is not lawfull for vs to kill anye man: as they ſayden to Pilate, when Chriſt ſhould be deemed. And for I thinke that no Juſtice wil geue ſodenly & vntrue dome as the Byſhop did, and therfore openly I appeale to hem and ſend my concluſiōs to the Knightes of the Parliament, to be ſhewed to the Lordes, and to be taken to the Juſtices, to be wel auiſet or that they geuen dome.

What is an heretike.

The thirde cauſe is, for it was a falſe dome: for no man is an hereticke, but he, that maiſterfully defends his error or hereſie and ſtifly maintaines it. And mine aūſwere has ben alway cōditional, as yͤ people openly knows, for euer I ſay, & yet ſay & alway will: that if they cannen ſhew me by Gods law that I haue erret, I wil gladly ben amēdet, and reuoke mine errours and ſo I am no hereticke, ne neuer more in Gods grace will ben en no wiſe.

The Byſhops law of condemnation full of hereſies and errours.

The fourth cauſe is. For the Biſhops lawe, that they deme men by, is full of errours and hereſies, contrary to yͤ truth of Chriſtes law of the Goſpell.

For there as Chriſts law biddes vs loue our enemies, the Popes law geues vs leaue to hate them & to ſley them, and graūtes men pardon to werren againe heathē men, and ſley hem. And there as Chriſtes lawe teache vs to be mercifull, the Biſhops lawe teaches to be wretchfull. For death is the greateſt wretch that mẽ mowen done on him that guilty is.

There as Chriſtes law teaches vs, to bleſſen him that diſeazen vs, and to pray for him: the popes law teacheth to curſe them, and in theyr great ſentence that they vſen, they preſume to damne hem to hell that they curſen. And this is a foule hereſy of blaſpheme, there as Chriſtes law byddes vs be patient, the Popes law iuſtifies two ſwordes, that wherwith he ſmiteth the ſheepe of the Church. And he has made Lordes and Kings to ſweare to defend him and his Church.

There as Chriſtes law forbiddeth vs lechery, yͤ popes law iuſtifies the abhominable whoredome of cõmon women, and the Biſhops in ſome place haue a great tribute or rent of whoredome.

There as Chriſtes lawe byddes to miniſter ſpirituall thynges freely to the people: the Pope with his law ſelles for mony, after the quãtity of the gift, as pardons, orders, bleſſing, and Sacraments, & prayers, & benefices, & preaching to the people, as it is knowne amongeſt them.

There as Chriſtes law teaches peace; the Pope wyth his law aſſoyles mẽ for mony to gader the people, prieſts, and other to fight for his cauſe.

The contrarietie betwene the pope & Chriſt.

There as Chriſtes law forbids ſwearing: The popes law iuſtifieth ſwearing, and compels men therto.

Wheras Chriſtes law teacheth his Prieſts to be poore, the Pope with his law, iuſtifies and mayntaynes Prieſts to be Lordes.

The cauſe why Swinderby forſooke the pope.

And yet the 5. cauſe is, for the Popes law that byſhops demen men by, is yͤ ſame vnrightfull law that Chriſt was demet by of the Byſhops, with the Scribes and with the Phariſes. For right as at that time they gauen more credens to the 2. falſe witneſſes that witneſſed agaynſt Chriſt then they deden to al yͤ people that witneſſeden to his true preaching and his miracles: ſo the Biſhops of the Popes law geuen more leuen by their law to two hereticks & Apoſtats, or two comen wymen that woulden witneſſeden agaynes a man in the cauſe of hereſy, than to thouſands of people that were trew and good. And for the Pope is thys Antechriſt and his law contrary to Chriſt his lawe, fully I forſake this law and ſo I reed all Chriſten menne. For thus by an other poynt of this law, they mighten cõquere much of this world: For whan they can by this law preſẽt a man an hereticke: his goods ſhulen be forfet from him & frõ his heyres, and ſo might they lightly haue 2. or. 3. falſe witneſſes to recorde an hereſye agayne what true man ſo hem liked. Herefore me thinkes, that whatſoeuer that I am a chriſten man I may lawfull appeale frõ a falſe dome of the law, to be righteouſlye demet by the trouth of Gods law. And if this appeale will not ſerue, I appeale opẽly to my Lord Ieſu Chriſt that ſhall deme all the world, for he I wot well, will not ſpare for no man to deeme a trouth. And therfore I pray GOD almighty with Dauid in the Sauter booke Deus iudicium tuum regi da, & iuſtitiam tuam filio regis: Iudicare populum tuum in iuſtitia & pauperes tuos in iudicio. That is. O God geue thy iudgement to the king, and thy iuſtice to the kings ſonne: to iudge thy people in iuſtice, and thy poore ones in iudgement, &c.

A fruitful letter to the Lords & Burgeſsies of the Parliament.

IEſu that art both God and man help thy people that louen thy law, and make knowne through thy grace thy teachinge to all chriſten men. Deare ſirs, ſo as we ſeen by many tokens that this world drawes to an end, & all that euer haue bene forth brought of Adams kinde into this world ſhulẽ come togeder at domeſday riche and poore, ichone to geue accompt and receiue after hys deedes, ioy or paynen for euermore: Therfore make we our werks good, ye while that God of mercy abides, and be yee ſtable and true to God, and ye ſhulen ſee hys helpe about you. Conſtantes eſtote & videbitis auxilium Domini ſuper vos. This land is full of Ghoſtly cowardes, in Ghoſtly battayle few dare ſtand. But Chriſt the comforter of all that falleth (to that his hart barſt for our loue) agaynſt the fiend the doughty Duke comforteth vs thus: Eſtote fortes in bello. &c. Be ye ſtrong in battell, he ſayes, and fight ye with the olde adder. State in fide, viriliter agite. &c. Wake ye & pray ye, ſtond ye in beleue, do ye manly and be ye comfortet, and let all your thinges be done with charity: For Saynt Paule bidds thus in his Epiſtle, that ſaw the preuetyes of God in heauen: Euigilate iuſti. &c. Awake ye that bene righteous men, bee yee ſtable and vnmoueable: Awake ye quickely and ſleepe nought, and ſtond now ſtrongly for Gods law. For Saynt Iohn in the Apocalips ſayes, bleſſet be he that awakes: for nought to ſleepers but to wakers God has behite the crowne of life. For the hower is nowe as Paule ſayth to vs, from ſleepe for to ariſe, for he that earelye awakes to me, he ſhall finde me ſayth Chriſt himſeluen. This waking goſtly is good liuing out of ſinne: this ſleepe betokens that which cowardeth a mans hart from goſtlye comfort and to ſtand in the ſame through a deceaueable ſleepe is this that lets a man of the bliſſe of heauen: the fende makes men bold in ſinne and ferd to do worſhip to God: death is a likening to a theefe that preuely ſteales vpon a man that now is riche, and full of wele, anone he makes him a needy wrech: therfore ſayd God by S. Iohn in the Apocalips in this wiſe: Be thou waking, for if thou wake nought, I ſhall come to thee as a theefe, and thou ſhalt not wit what houre. And if the huſbandman (ſayes Chriſt) wiſt what houre the theefe ſhould come, he ſhoulde wake and ſuffer him not to vndermine his houſe. Saynt Peter therefore warneth and ſayth: wake and be ye ware, ſuffer ye no man (he ſayes) as a theefe but wilfullye for Gods loue, for it is time (as Peter ſaies) that dome begin from the houſe of God: Ye bene the body of Chriſt (ſayes Poule) that needes muſt ſuffer with the head, or els your bodyes bene but deade and departed from Chriſt that is the head. And therefore curſet be he (ſayes Poule) that loues not Ieſu Chriſt. And who it is that loues him, Chriſte himſelfe telles in the Goſpell: he that has my heſtes, and keepes them, he it is that loues me. Curſed he be therfore (ſayes Poule) that doth Chriſtes workes deceiueably. Be ye not therefore (ſayes Poule) aſhamed of the true witneſſe of Ieſu Chriſt, for Chriſt our God ſayes in his Goſpell, he that ſhames me and my wordes, him ſhall mans ſonne aſhame when he ſhal come for to ſet in the ſiege of hys Maieſty. And each man he ſayes, that knowes me and my wordes before men in this ſinnefull generation and whoriſh, mans ſonne ſhall knowledge him before my father ſayes Chriſt himſelfe, when he ſhall come with hys Aungels in the glory of his Father: Sithe ye therefore bene Chriſtenmen, that is to ſay, Chriſtes men, ſhew in deede that ye bene ſuche as ye daren ſhew you the kings men: for hit had bene, as Peter ſaies, better not to haue knowen the way of trueth, then after the knowing thereof to be conuerted backeward there from. We knowen Chriſt, that is trought, we ſain all through our beliefe if we turne from him for dred, truely wee deny the troth: And therefore ſith our time is ſhort, how ſhort no man knowes but God, do we the good that we may to Gods worſhip, when we haue time: Be true (ſayes God) to the death and you ſhall haue the crowne of life: And thinke on Iudas Machabeus, that was Gods true knight, that comforted hartelye Gods true people, to be the folowers of his law. And geue ye, he ſayd, your liues for the Teſtament of your fathers. And ye ſhulen winne, he ſayd, great ioy, and a name for euermore. Was not Abraham, he ſayd, in temptation founden true, and was *arectet vnto him euermore to righteouſneſſe, Ioſeph in time of his anguiſh he kept truely Gods heſt, he was made by Gods prouidence Lord of Egypt, for his trouth. Phinees our fadure louing, he ſayth, the zeale of God tooke the teſtament of euerlaſting Prieſthoode. Ioſue for he fulfillet the worde of God was domes man in Iſraell. Caleph that witneſſed in the Church, he tooke therefore the heretage, he ſayth: Dauid in his mercy hee gat the ſiege of the kingdome in worldes. Hely for that he loued the zeale of Gods lawe, was taken vppe into heauen. Ananie, Azary, and Miſaell, he ſayes, weren deliueret thoore through true beliefe out of the hoat flame of fire. True Daniel in his ſimplenes was deliueret from the Lyons mouthe. Bethinke ye therfore, he ſayes, by generation and generation, and thou ſhalt neuer finde that he fayled that man that truely truſted in him. And therefore dread you nought, he ſayes of the wordes of a ſinnefull man: hys glory is, he ſayes, but wormes and tordes: he is to day, he ſayth, yͤ made hye, to morow he ſayes he is not foundẽ for he is turned, he ſayes, into his earth agayn, & the minde of him is periſhet. Sonnes therefore he ſayes, be ye comfortet, and dye manly in the lawe: for when ye han done that that Gods commaundes you to doe, ye ſhulen be glorious in him. And Dauid the king ſayes alſo on this wiſe in the Pſalter booke: bleſſet be they (Lord) that keepen thy law, in worldes of worldes they ſhall prayſe thee. And in Leuiticus ſayes God thus, gif that ye wenden in mine heſtes & keepen my commaundementes, and done hem, I ſhall I ſhall bring forth theyt fruit,, and trees ſhall be fulfilled with apples. And ye ſhallen eat your bread in fulnes, ye ſhoulen dwell in your lande without drede, I ſhall geue peace in your coſtes, ye ſhall ſleep and no man ſhall feare you. Euill beaſtes I ſhall done away from you, and ſword ſhall not paſſe your termes, ye ſhuln purſue your enemies, and they ſhall fall before you, fifty of yours ſhulne purſue an hundreth of heren, an hundret of yours, a thouſand of theyrs: your enemies, hee ſaieth ſhulen fal through ſword, and your iute. I ſhall he ſayes behold you and make you to waxe, and ye ſhall be multipliet: And I ſhall ſtrength with you my couenaunt, ye ſhall eat the aldeſt, and the new ſhull come in theron. And ye ſhuln caſt forth the old, I ſhall dwell in the midſt of you. And I ſhall wend amonges you, and ſhalbe your God, and ye ſhulne be my people. If that ye heare me not, ne done nought all my heſtes but diſpiſẽ my law and my domes, and that ye done not tho thinges that of me bene ordenet, and breken my commaundements and my couenant: I ſhall do theſe thinges to you, I ſhall viſite you ſurely in nede and brenning, which ſhall dimme your eghenen, and ſhall waſt your liues about nought: Ye ſhulne ſow your ſede for hit ſhalbe deuouret of enemies, I ſhall put my face agaynſt you, and ye ſhall fall before your enemies. And ye ſhulen be vnderlings to them that han hatet you, ye ſhall flee, no man purſuing. And if ye will not be buxome to me, I ſhall adde thereunto thornes and ſeuen folde blame. And I ſhall all to braſt the hardnes of you, I ſhall geue the heauen aboue you as yron, & the earth as braſſe. About nought ſhall your labour be, for the earth ſhall bring you forth no fruit, ne tree ſhall geue none apples to you. If that ye wenden agaynſt me, and will not heare me, I ſhall adde hereto, ſeuen folde woundes for your ſinnes, I ſhall ſend amongeſt you beaſtes of the field that ſhall deuour you and your beaſtes, I ſhall bring you into a field, and wayes ſhuln be deſart. And if that ye will not receiue lore, but wenden agaynſt me, I will alſo wenden agaynſte you, and I ſhall ſmite you ſeuen ſithes for your ſinnes. I ſhall leade in vpon you, ſword, venger of my couenaunt: and vpon the fleen into Cities, I ſhall ſend peſtilence in the middeſt of you. So that tenne women ſhall bake their bread in one furnace, and yeld thē agayne by wayght, and ye ſhall eat, & not be fillet. If that ye heare me not by theſe thinges, but wenden agaynſt me, I ſhall wend in agaynſt you in a contrary woodneſſe, and blame you with ſeuen plagues for your ſinnes, ſo that they ſhoulen eat the fleſh of your ſonnes and of your daughters. And in ſo much my ſoule ſhall loth you, that I ſhal bring your Cities into wilderneſſe, and your Sanctuaryes I ſhall make deſart, ne I ſhal not ouer that receiue ſweet oder of your mouth. And I ſhall diſperkle your land, and enemies ſhulen maruell thereon, when they ſhulen inhabite it, I ſhall diſperpel you among Heathen, and draw my ſword after you. Theſe vengeaunces and many moe, God ſayde ſhould fall on them that breake his bidding, and diſpiſeth his lawes, and his domes. Than ſithe Chriſt become man, and bought vs with his hart bloud, and has ſhewed vs ſo great loue, and geuen vs an eaſy law, of the beſt that euer might be made, and to bring vs to the ioy of heauen, and we deſpiſe it and louen it nought: what vengeaunce will be taken here on, ſo long as he has ſuffered vs, and ſo mercifully abidden, when he ſhall come that righteous iudge in the cloudes to deme this worlde? Therefore turne we vs to him, and leaue ſinne that he hates and ouer all thinges mayntayne his lawe that he confirmed with his death. For other lawes that men had made, ſhoulde be demed at that day by the iuſt law of Chriſt, and the maker that them made, and then we wonne that long life and that ioy that Paule ſpeaketh of, that eye ne ſee not, ne eare heard not, ne into mans hart aſcended not, the bliſſe and ioy that God hath ordeyned to them that louen him and his lawes.

The faythfull requeſt of W.Swinderby.

Deare worſhipfull ſirs in this world I beſeech you for Chriſtes loue, as ye that I trow louen Gods law & trouth (that in theſe dayes is greatly borne abacke) that they wollen vouchſafe theſe thinges that I ſend you written to Gods worſhip, to let them be ſhewed in the Parliament as your wittes can beſt conceiue, to moſt worſhip to our God, and to ſhewing of the trouth and amēding of holy Church. My concluſions and mine appeale & other true matters of Gods law (gif any man can finde therein errour, falſeneſſe, or default, prouet by the law of Chriſt clearely to chriſten mens knowledge) I ſhall reuoke my wrong conceit, and by Gods law be amendet: euer redy to hold with Gods law opēly & priuely with Gods grace, and nothing to holde, teach, or maynetayne that is contrary to his law.

Of the proces, anſweres, & condemnation of this worthy prieſt and true ſeruaunt of Chriſt, Williā Swinderby, you haue heard. What afterward became vpō him, I haue not certainly to ſay or affirme, whether he in priſō died, or whether he eſcaped theyr handes, or whether he was burned there is no certayne relation made. This remayneth out of doubt that during yͤ time of K. Richard. 2. no great harme was done vnto him. Which was to the yeare. 1401. at what time K. Richard being wrongfully depoſed, Henry the 4. inuaded the kingdome of England. About the beginning of whoſe reigne we read of a certayn Parliament holden at Londō, mentioned alſo of Thomas Walden (as is aboue ſpecified) in which parliamēt it was decreed: that whoſoeuer ſhewed themſelues to be fauorers of Wickliffe they ſhould be apprehended, who at that time were called Lollards, and if ſo be they did obſtinately perſeuere in that doctrine, they ſhould be deliuered ouer vnto the biſhop of the dioces, & from him ſhould be cōmitted to the correctiō of the ſecular magiſtrate. This law (ſayth yͤ ſtory) brought a certaine prieſt vnto puniſhmēt the ſame yeare, who was burned in Smithfielde in the preſence of a great number. This we haue drawne out of a piece of an old ſtory, & it is moſt certaine that there ſuch a Prieſt was burned for the affirmation of the true faith, but it doth not appeare by the ſtory, what the Prieſtes name was. Notwithſtanding by diuers coniectures it appeareth vnto me that his name was Swinderby that was forced to recant before by the Biſhop of Lincolne. Whereby what is to be coniectured by the premiſſes, let other men iudge what they think. I haue nothing hereof expreſſely to affirme. This is plain for al men to iudge (which haue here ſene and read his ſtory) that if he were burned, then the biſhops, Friers & prieſtes, which were the cauſes thereof, haue a great thing to anſwere to the Lord, when he ſhall come to iudge yͤ quicke and the dead, & ſeculum per ignem.

¶ The ſtory and proceſſe agaynſt Walter Brute.

The ſtory of Walter Brute a Britton.

After the ſtory of William Swinderby, I thought good and conuenient, next to adioyne the actes and doinges of Gualter Brute his ioynt fellow and companion, being a lay man, and learned: brought vpp as it ſeemeth in the Vniuerſitie of Oxforde, being there alſo graduate. The tractation of whoſe diſcourſe as it is ſomething long, ſo therein may appeare diuers thinges worthye to be read and conſidered.

Ex Regiſtro Epiſ. Herford.

Firſt, yͤ mighty operation of gods ſpirit in him, his ripe knowledge, modeſt ſimplicitie, his valiant conſtancie, hys learned tractations and manifolde conflictes ſuſteyned agaynſt Gods enemies. On the contrary part in hys aduerſaryes may appeare, might againſt right, mans authoritie agaynſt plaine veritie: againſt which they hauing nothing directly to aunſwere, procede in condemnation agaynſt whom they are able to bring forth no confutation. The chiefeſt occaſion that ſeemed to ſtirre vp the heart and zeale of this Walter agaynſt the pope: was the impudent pardons and indulgenſes of Pope Vrbane, graunted to Henry Spenſer Biſhop of Norwich to fight againſt pope Clement, mentioned before pag. 428. Secondly the wrongfull condemnation of the articles and concluſions of William Swinderby, the whole order wherof, in the proceſſe here following more playnly may appeare.

✤ The proceſſe had by Bohn Byſhop of Hereford, agaynſt Walter Brute lay man, and learned, of the dioces of Hereford, touching the cauſe of hereſie, as they called it, ſet forward by the way of the Byſhops office &c. at the inſtruction of certain faithful Chriſtians, as he termed them, but in deed cruell and falſe promoters.

Murdring harts lurking vnder louing wordes.

IN yͤ name of God, Amen. To all maner of faithful chriſtian people that ſhall ſee and heare this our preſēt proces: Iohn by yͤ ſufferance of God biſhop of Hereford ſendeth greeting & cōtinual charitie in yͤ Lord. We would yͤ you al ſhould know, that of late by many faithfull chriſtian people, & ſpecially zealous followers of the catholicke faith, it was lamētably done vs to vnderſtand by way of complaint: that a certain ſonne of ours going out of kind, named Walter Brute lay perſon, learned, of our dioces, hath vnder a cloked ſhew of holynes, dānably ſeduced the people: & ſetting behind him yͤ feare of God, doth ſeduce thē as much as he cā, frō day to day, informing & teaching openly and priuely, as well the nobles as the commōs, in certaine concluſiōs hereticall, ſchiſmatical, and erroneous & alſo heretofore condēned. And they haue alſo probably exhibited againſt yͤ ſame Walter, articles vnder writtē, in maner and forme as followeth.

¶ Articles exhibited and denounced to the biſhop, againſt Walter Brute.

Articles denounced againſt W. Brute by prieſts and Friers.

REuerend father and Lorde, we the faythfull people of Chriſt, & zelous louers of the catholicke faith, and alſo your humble and deuout children: do miniſter & exhibite to your reuerend fatherhood, the articles vnder written, touching yͤ catholicke faith, cōtrary and againſt malicious perſons, & detractours of the ſame faith, & the determinations of holy mother church, & namely agaynſt the childe of Belial, one Walter Brute, a falſe teacher and ſeducer amongſt yͤ people. Hūbly beſeeching, yͭ you would vouchſafe to haue regard to yͤ correction of the enormities vnder written, according vnto yͤ Canonicall conſtitutions, euen as to your office paſtorall doth lye and belong.

The firſt article.

In primis, we do geue and exhibite and entēd to proue, that the ſame Walter Brute being vnmindfull of his ſaluation, hath bene by many and diuers faythfull Chriſtian people ſundry times accuſed of the curſednes of hereſy: As by the ſwift report, ſlaūder, and rumour of the people, proceding before the moſt reuerend father & Lord, Lord William Archb. of Caunterbury, and alſo before the reuerend father & Lord, Lord Iohn late B. of Hereford, your prede- ceſſor, and now Biſhop of S. Aſſe, hath bene teſtified, and alſo hath bene many & diuers times cited to anſwere vnto articles by him agaynſt the Catholicke fayth auouched, & openly and publiquely taught: But he in this matter of hereticall curſednes (ſo greeuouſly and ſhamefully ſpoken of) hath neuer regarded to purge his innocency, but lurkingly and running into corners, hath many and ſundrye yeres labored to aduance things erroneous, ſchiſmaticall, and alſo hereſyes, & to emprint them in the harts of faythfull people.

2. Article. Item, the foreſayd Walter Brute hath opēly, publickly, and notoriouſly auouched, and commōly ſayd & taught and ſtubbernly affirmed: that euery Chriſten man (yea & woman) being without ſinne may make the body of Chriſt ſo well as the prieſt.

3. Article. Item, the ſame Walter hath notoriouſly, opēly & publickely auouched and taught, that in the Sacrament of the alter there is not the very body, but a ſigne and a memoriall onely.

4. Article. Item, the foreſayd Walter hath ſayd commonly and auouched, and alſo hath labored to informe mē and companyes, that no man is bound to geue tithes, nor oblations: and if any man will needes geue, he may geue his tithes, and oblations to whom he wil, excluding therby theyr curates.

5. Article. Itē, that ſuch as do preach and prefer croiſed matters, and pardons (graunted by the high biſhop to them ỹ helpe the purpoſe of the reuered father Lord Henry by the grace of God Biſhop of Norwich, when as he toke his iourny vpō him to fight for the holy father the Pope) are ſchiſmatickes and heretickes, and that the Pope cannot graunt ſuch maner of pardons.

6. Article. Item, the ſayd Walter hath oftentimes ſayd, and commonly aduouched, that the Pope is Antichriſt, and a ſeducer of the people, and vtterly agaynſt the lawe and life of Chriſt.

7. Article. Item, wheras of late your reuerence did (at the inſtāce of faithfull chriſten people) proceed in forme of law againſt William Swinderby, and that the ſayd Williā Swinderby had vnto the ſaid articles obiected againſt him, geuē vp his anſweres in writing, cōteining in thē errors, ſchiſmes & hereſies, euen as you with the mature counſel of maiſters & doctors in diuinity, & other faculties haue determined & geuen ſentence, and haue pronounced the ſame William Swinderby to be an heretick, & a ſchiſmatick, and an erroneous teacher of ỹ people: Neuertheles ỹ forenamed Walter hath openly, publickly, & notoriouſly ſaid, aduouched, & ſtubbernly affirmed, that the ſayd Williams aunſweres (whereof notice hath bene geuen before) are good, righteous, and not able to be conuinced, in that they conteyne none error, and that your ſentence beforeſayd, geuen agaynſt the ſame William, is euill, falſe & vniuſt: And that your aſſiſtants haue wickedly, naughtely, peruerſly, & vniuſtly condemned the anſweres aforeſayd.

Otherwiſe bloudie promoters. Now therupon immediately, thoſe ſame faythful chriſtian people haue inſtantly required that we would vouchſafe that other articles geuen by ỹ ſame faythfull chriſtiās againſt the ſayd William Swinderby, together wͭ the writings and anſweres of the ſame William therunto: ſhould be admitted agaynſt Walter Brute, mentioned of in this matter of curſed hereſy: of which Articles and aunſwers, the tenors do folow in theſe wordes.

Theſe concluſions and articles of W. Swinderby here repeated, & obiected to Walt. Brute are to be founde before, pag. 466. and 467.

In primis, that one William Swinderby pretending himſelf prieſt, was of certayne articles and cōcluſions erroneous, falſe, ſchiſmaticall & heretical, by him preached, at diuers places & times, before a great multitude of faithful Chriſtians, iudicially cōuinced: and the ſame articles and concluſiōs did he (inforced by neceſſity of law) reuoke and abiure, ſome as hereticall, and other as erroneous & falſe: and for ſuch did he aduouch thē euer afterward promiſing ſo to take and beleue them & that frō thenceforth he would opēly or priuily preach, teach, or affirme none of them: nor that he ſhould make ſermon or preach within your dioces without licence demaunded and obteined. And in caſe he ſhould to the cōtrary preſume, by preaching or auouching that then he ſhould be ſubiect to the ſeueritye of the Canōs euen as he iudicially ſware accordingly as the law inforced. Alſo the concluſions abiured by the ſayd William doe folow and are ſuch.

1. Concluſion. 1. In primis, that men by the rule of charity, may demaund debts, but by no meanes impriſon any man for debts: and that the party ſo impriſoning a body, is excommunicated, before. pag. 466.

2. Item, that if the pariſhioners ſhall knowe theyr Curate to be incontinent and naughty: they ought to withdraw from him theyr tythes. &c. pag. 467.

3. Item, that tithes are mere almoſies, and in caſe that the Curates ſhal be ill, that they may be lawfully beſtowed vpon others by the temporall owners. &c. pag. 467.

4. Item, that an euill Curate to excommunicate any vnder his iuriſdiction for withholding of tithes, is nought els. &c. pag. 467.

5. Item, that no mā may excōmunicate any body, except that firſt he know him excōmunicate of God: Neither doe thoſe that communicate with ſuch a one, incur the ſentence of excommunication by any maner of meanes. ibid.

6. Item, that euery Prieſt may abſolue euery ſinner being contrite, and is bound to preach the Goſpell vnto the people, notwithſtanding the prohibition of the Biſhops, pag. 467.

7. Item, that a prieſt receiuing by bargaine any thing of yearely annuity, is in ſo doing a ſchiſmaticke, and excommunicate. pag. 467.

8. Item, he doth aſſuredly beleeue (as he auoucheth) that euery prieſt being in deadly ſinne, if he diſpoſe himſelfe to make the body of Chriſt, doth rather commit idolatry thē make Chriſtes body. pag. 467.

9. Item, that no prieſt doth enter into any houſe, but to handle ill the wife, the daughter, or the mayd, and therfore &c. pag. 467.

10. Item, that the child is not rightly baptiſed, if the prieſt &c. ibid.

11. Item that no maner of perſon if he liue agaynſt Gods law. &c. ibid.

12. Item, the ſame William agaynſt the thinges premiſed, and his reuocation and abiuration (not to his hart cōnerting, but from euill to worſe peruerting) did turne aſide into our dioces: where running to and fro in diuers places, hath of his owne raſh head preſumed to preach or rather to peruert. &c. 467.

13. Item, after that we had heard diuers rumors, & ſlaunders of very many, we directed diuers monitions and cōmaundementes comminatorye, to be ſent abroade by our Commiſſaries to ſundry places of our dioces: that no perſon of what eſtate, degree or condition ſo euer he were of, ſhould preſume to preach or to teach the ſacred ſcripture to the people in places holy or prophane, within our dioces. &c. page. 466.

14. Item, that the ſame ſort of monitions, inhibitions and precepts confirmed by our ſeale, came to the true & vndouted knowledge of the ſayd William.

15. Item, the ſame William vnmindefull of his owne ſaluation hath ſithens & agaynſt thoſe monitions, inhibitiōs and preceptes, and (that which is more abhominable to be ſpoken) in contempt of the high Biſhops dignity, & to the ſlaūder & offence of many people, preſumed in diuers places of our ſayd dioces, to preach or rather to peruert & to teach the forementioned, & other heretical, erroneous and ſchiſmaticall deuiſes. Infandum facinus ſcilicet.

16. Item, the ſame William in preaching to the people: on monday, to wit, the firſt of Auguſt, in the yere of our Lord 1390. in the Church of Whitney in our dioces, held and affirmed: that no Prelate of the world, of what ſtate, preheminēce or degree ſoeuer he were of, hauing cure of ſoule & being in deadly ſinne. &c. pag. 466.

17. Item, the ſame William in many places ſayd & affirmed in the preſence of many faythfull chriſtian people, after the ſacramentall wordes vttered by the prieſt, hauing ỹ intent to conſecrate, there is not made the very bodye of Chriſt in the ſacrament of the Euchariſt. pag. 466. A perilous doore to open.

18. Item, that accidences cannot be in the ſacramēt of the aulter without theyr ſubiect: & that there remayneth materiall bread Concomitanter with the body of Chriſt in the ſacrament. Vide ſupra pag. 466.

19. Item, that a prieſt being in deadly ſinne cannot by the power of the ſacramētall words, make the body of Chriſt, &c. pag. 466.

20. Item, that all prieſts are of like power in all poynts, notwithſtanding that ſome of them are in this worlde of higher dignity, degree, or preheminence. pag. 466.

21. Item, that contrition onely putteth away ſinne, if a man ſhall be duely contrite: and that all vocall confeſſion and exerciſe, is ſuperfluous, and not requiſite of neceſſitye to ſaluation. Ibidem.

22. Item, that inferior Curates haue not theyr power of binding and looſing mediatly from the pope or biſhop, but immediately of Chriſt. &c. pag. 466.

23. Item, that the pope cannot graunt ſuch kind of annuall pardons, becauſe there ſhall not be ſo many yeares to the day of iudgement as is conteyned in the popes buls or pardons. Whereby it followeth, that pardons are not ſo much worth as they are noyſed and prayſed to be. Ibid.

24 Item that it is not in the Popes power to graunt to any penitent body forgeuenes of the paine or of the treſpaſſe. pag. 466.

25 Item that one geuing his almes to any bodye which as he iudgeth hath no neede thereof, doth ſinne in ſo geuyng it. pag. 466.

26 Item that it ſtandes not in the power of any prelate, of what priuate religion ſoeuer he bee, to geue by letters benefites of their order. Neither do ſuch kind of benefits geuen profit them to whom they be geuen for the ſaluatiō of ſoules. Vide ſupra. pag. 466.

A foule falt forſooth.

27 Item that the ſame William vnmindfull of his owne ſaluation, hath many times and often reſorted to a certain deſert wood called Derwalſwood of our dioces, and there in a certayne vnhallowed Chappell (nay a prophane cottage) hath preſumed of his owne propre raſhneſſe, to celebrate. &c. pag. 466.

28 Item the ſame William hath alſo preſumed to do the like thinges in a certayne prophane chappel, ſituate in the parke of Newton, nigh to the towne of Leyntwardyn, in the ſame our dioces. pag. 466.

Walter Pride promoters, or rather a proud promoter.

Which thinges being done, the ſame faithful Chriſten people, and ſpecially ſir Walter Pride the penitentiarie of our Cathedrall Church of Herefordе, perſonally appearing before vs, ſittyng in our iudgement ſeate in the pariſh Church of Whiteborne of our dioceſſe: brought forth and exhibited two publique inſtruments againſt the ſame Walter Brute, in yͤ caſe of curſed hereſie aforſaid, of which inſtrumentes here followeth the tenours and Articles in this ſort.

The firſt inſtrumēt exhibited by certain Chanōs of Herford, againſt Walter Brute.

In the name of God Amen. Be it euidently knowē to all perſōs by this preſēt publike inſtrumēt: yͭ in the yeare frō yͤ incarnatiō, after yͤ courſe and cōputation of yͤ church of England. 1391. the indiction xv. of yͤ pontifical office of our moſt holy father and Lord in Chriſt, Lord Boniface yͤ ix. by Gods wiſedome Pope, the ſecond yeare the xv. day of yͤ month of October, in the dwelling houſe of the worſhipful mā maiſter Iohn Godemoſton, Chanon of yͤ Cathedral Church of Hereford, in the preſence of me the publique Notary vnder written, and of witneſſes ſubſcribed: Walter Brute lay man learned, of Hereford dioces, perſonally appearing, ſayde, auouched, and ſtifly maintayned: that the ſayde Biſhop of Herefordе and his aſſiſtaunces, which were with him the third day of the foreſayde month of October, the yeare of our Lord aforeſayd, in the Church of Hereford: did naughtely, wickedly, peruerſly, and vniuſtly condemne yͤ aunſweres of ſir William Swinderby Chaplaine, geuen by the ſame ſir William to yͤ ſame Lord byſhop in wryting, and alſo the articles miniſtred by the ſame ſir William.

Infandum facinus ſcilicet.

B. of Herford vniuſtly condemned the articles of ſir W. Swinderby.

And furthermore he ſayd, held, and aduouched, that the ſame concluſions geuen by yͤ ſame ſir Williā, euen as they were geuen, are true and Catholike.

Matters obiected againſt Walter Brute.

Item, as touching the matters obiected agaynſt hym by them that ſtode by, concerning the ſacrament of yͤ aulter: he ſayd, that after the ſacramentall words: there doth remaine very bread, and the ſubſtance therof after the cōſecration of yͤ body of Chriſt, and that there do not remain accidencies without ſubſtance or ſubiect after the cōſecration of the body of Chriſt. And touching this matter, the doctors holde diuers opinions.

A perilous doore to open.

The P. Antichriſt.

Furthermore as concerning yͤ Pope, he ſaid, helde, and auouched: that he is the very Antichriſt, becauſe yͭ in lyfe and maners he is contrary to the lawes, doctrines, and deedes of Chriſt our Lord.

All and euery of theſe things were done, euen as they be aboue writtē and rehearſed in yͤ yeare of our Lord, pōtificall office, month, day, & place aforeſayd, at ſupper time of the day aforenamed, thē and there being preſent yͤ worſhipful and diſcrete men. ſir Walter Ramſbury, chiefe chāter of the ſayde Cathedrall Church of Herefordе, Roger Hoore Chanon of the ſame Church, Walter Wall, Chaplain of yͤ ſaid church of Hereford, being a vicar of yͤ Choral & certaine other worthy witneſſes of credit, that were ſpecially called and deſired to yͤ premiſſes. Ex Regiſt. Herford.

Witneſſes againſt Walter Brute.

Richard Lee Regiſter & writer hereof.

And I Richard Lee whelar, clerke of Worceſter, being a publike notarye, by yͤ authoritie Apoſtolike: was perſonally preſent at all and ſinguler the premiſſes, whileſt that (as is before reherſed) they were done and a doing, in the yere of our lord. 1391. pontifical office, month, day, place, & yͤ houre aforeſaid: & I did ſee, write, and heare all and ſinguler thoſe things thus to bee done, and haue reduced thē into this publike maner and forme: & being deſired truely to teſtifie the premiſſes, haue ſealed the ſayde inſtrument, made hereupon, with mine accuſtomed ſeale and name.

The forme of the ſecond inſtrument.

In the name of God, Amen. Be it plainly knowē to all perſons, by this preſent publike inſtrumēt: that in yͤ yere from the incarnation of the lord after yͤ courſe and computation of yͤ church of England. 1391. the indiction fifteene, in the 3. yere of the pontifical office of yͤ moſt holy father in Chriſt, and our Lord, Lord Boniface Pope by the prouydēce of God the 9. & in yͤ 19. day of the month of Ianuary. Walter Brute layman, of Hereford dioces, perſonally appearing before yͤ reuerēd father in Chriſt and Lord. Lord Iohn by gods grace B. of Herford, in yͤ preſence of me being a publike notarie, & one of yͤ witneſſes vnder written: did ſay, hold, publiſh, & affirme, yͤ cōcluſiōs hereafter written, yͭ is to ſay: yͭ chriſten people are not boūd to pay tithes neither by the law of Moſes, nor by the law of Chriſt.

Matters & concluſions miniſtred againſt Walter Brute. This concluſion ſeemeth to be falſly collected, as were before the articles of W. Swinderby. This concluſion alſo is not rightly gathered.

Item, that it is not lawful for Chriſtians for any cauſe in any caſe, to ſweare by yͤ creator neither by the creature.

Item he confeſſeth openly and of his owne accord: that within the ſame month of Ianuary, he did eate, drink, and communicate with William Swinderby, not being ignorant of the ſentence of the ſaid reuerend father: whereby yͤ ſame William Swinderby was pronounced an heretique, ſchiſmatique, and a falſe ſeducer of the common people. Which concluſions, the ſame reuerend father cauſed to bee writtē, and in writing to be deliuered to the ſame Walter. Which when he had ſeene and red, he ſayd alſo that he did maintaine and iuſtifie them according to the lawes aforeſayd. Theſe thinges were done in the chamber of the ſayd biſhop of Herford, at his manor of Whitborne of the ſayde dioces of Hereford: then being there preſent the ſame Byſhop abouеſaid. M. Reynold of Wolſten, Canon of Hereford, ſir Phillip Dileſke parſon of yͤ pariſh church of Blamunin, Thomas Guldefeld parſon of the Church of Engliſbyknore, Iohn Creſſet parſon of the church of Whytborne, and Thomas Wallewayne houſholde ſeruant, for witneſſes ſpecially called and deſired to the premiſſes of yͤ dioces of Hereford and S. Aſſe.

Witneſſes againſt W. Brute.

Benedict Come Regiſter, witnes and writer of this inſtrument againſt William Bruite.

And I Benedict Come clerke of the dioces of S. Aſſe, publike notary by yͤ Apoſtolike authoritie of the dioces of S. Aſſe, was perſonally preſent together with the witnes before named, at all and ſinguler theſe and other thinges here premiſed whileſt they were ſo done and a doing, & did ſee, heare, & write thoſe things ſo to be done, as is before mencioned: and did write the ſame and reduce them into this publike forme, & with my wonted & accuſtomed ſeale and name haue ſealed it, being deſired and required truly to teſtifie the premiſſes.

At the laſt, the aforeſaid Walter Brute, did preſent and cauſe to be preſented to vs (at diuers places and times aſſigned by vs to the ſame Walter, to aunſwere to yͤ former concluſions and articles) diuers ſcroules of paper writtē with his owne proper hand, for his aunſwers to the ſame Articles and concluſions aboue written: he partly appearing by his owne ſelfe, before vs ſitting in our iudgement ſeat, and partly by his meſſengers, ſpecially appoynted to that purpoſe: of which ſcroules, yͤ tenors do follow in order worde by worde, and be on this maner.

Certaine exhibites of Walter Brute in wryting preſented to the B. for his defence.

Walter Brute a Britone borne.

In the name of the father, and of the ſonne, and yͤ holy ghoſt, Amen: I Walter Brute, ſinner, layman, huſbādmā & a Chriſtian (hauing mine offpring of the Brittons, both by my father & mothers ſide) of the Britons, haue ben accuſed to yͤ B. of Hereford, that I did erre in many matters concerning the catholike Chriſten fayth: by whō I am required, yͭ I ſhould write an aunſwere in Latin to all thoſe matters. Whoſe deſire I wil ſatiſfie to my power, proteſting firſt of al, before God & before al the world: yͭ like as it is not my mind through Gods grace, to refuſe yͤ knowē truth, for any reward greater or ſmaller, yea be it neuer ſo bigge, nor yet for yͤ feare of any temporal puniſhment: euē ſo it is not my mind to maintain any erroneous doctrine for any cōmodities ſake. And if any mā, of what ſtate, ſect or condition ſo euer he be, wil ſhew me that I erre in my writings or ſayings by the authoritie of the ſacred ſcripture, or by probable reaſon grounded in yͤ ſacred ſcripture, I wil humbly and gladly receiue his information. But as for yͤ bare wordes of any teacher (Chriſt onely excepted) I wil not ſimply beleue, except hee ſhalbe able to ſtabliſh thē by the truth of experience, or of the Scripture: for becauſe, that in the holy Apoſtles elected by Chriſt, there hath bene foūd errour by the teſtimony of the holy ſcripture, becauſe that Paule himſelfe doth cōfeſſe that he rebuked Peter, for that he was worthy to be rebuked, Galat. the 2. chapiter. There hath ben errors foūd in the holy doctors, that haue ben before vs, as they themſelues confeſſe of them ſelues. And oftentimes it falleth out, that there is error founde in the teachers in our age: who are of contrary opinions among themſelues, and ſome of them do ſometimes determine mine one thing for truth, and others do condemne the ſelfe ſame thing to be hereſye or error. which proteſtation premiſed, I wil here place 2. ſuppoſitions or caſes for a groũd and a foundatiõ of all things that I ſhall ſay, out of which I would gather two probable concluſions ſtabliſhed vpõ the ſame, and vpon the ſacred Scripture. By which cõcluſions, when as they ſhall be declared after my maner and faſhion, it ſhal playnely appeare what my opiniõ & iudgement is concerning all matters that I am accuſed of. But becauſe I am ignoraunt & vnlearned, I wil get me vnder the mighty defences of the Lord. O Lord I will remẽber thine onely righteouſnes.

Brute modeſtly excuſeth his learning.

The firſt caſe or ſuppoſition.

God the father almighty vncreate, the maker of heauẽ and earth, hath ſent his ſonne (that was euerlaſtingly begotten) into this world: that he ſhould be incarnated, for yͤ ſaluation and redemption of mankind, who was cõceiued by the holy ghoſt, euerlaſtingly proceeding from the father and the ſonne, and was borne of Mary the virgin, to yͤ end that we might be borne a new. He ſuffered Paſſion vnder Põtius Pilate for our ſinnes, laying down his life for vs, that we ſhould lay down our life, for our brethrẽ. He was crucified, that we ſhould be crucified to the world, and the world to vs. He was dead, that he might redeeme vs from death, by purchaſing for vs forgeuenes of ſinnes. He was buried, that we being buried together with him into death by Baptiſme, and that we dead to ſins, ſhould liue to righteouſnes. He deſcẽded into hell, therby deliuering man frõ thraldom, and from the bondage of the Deuill, & reſtoring him to his inheritaunce, which he loſt by ſinne. The third day he roſe from the dead, through the glory of his father, that we alſo ſhould walke in newnes of life. He aſcended vp to the heauens, to which no body hath aſcended, ſauing he that deſcended from heauẽ, euẽ the ſonne of man which is in heauẽ. He ſitteth at the right hand of God the father almighty, vntill his enemies be made his footſtoole. He being in very deed ſo muche better then the Aungelles, as he hath obteyned by inheritaunce a more excellent name then they. From thence he ſhall come to iudge the quick and the dead, accordingly to theyr workes, becauſe the father hath geuen all iudgemẽt to the ſonne. In whoſe terrible iudgement we ſhall riſe agayne, and ſhall all of vs ſtand before his iudgement ſeat, and receiue ioy as well bodely, as ſpiritually for euer to endure, if we be of the ſheepe placed at the right hand: or els puniſhment both of bodye and ſoule if we ſhall be foũd amongſt goates, placed on the left hand. &c.

The ſecond caſe or aſſertion.

Ieſus Chriſt the ſonne of God, very God & very man a king for euer, by ſtabliſhing an euerlaſting kingdome, breaking to pouder all the kingdoms of the world: Dan. 2. a prieſt for euer after yͤ order of Melchiſedech, wherby alſo he is able euermore to ſaue ſuch as by him come vnto god & alwayes liueth to intreat for vs. Hebr. 7. He offring one ſacrifice for our ſins, hath made perfect for euer by one oblation, thoſe that be ſanctified. Heb. 10. Being yͤ wiſedome that cannot be deceiued, & the trueth that cannot be vttred: he hath in this world taught the will of the godhead of his father, which will he hath in worke fulfilled, to the intent that he might faithfully inſtruct vs, and hath geuẽ the law of charity to be of his faythfull people obſerued, whiche he hath written in the hartes and mindes of the faythful with the finger of God, wher is the ſpirit of God, ſearching the inward ſecrets of yͤ Godhead. wherfore his doctrine muſt be obſerued aboue all other doctrines, whether they be of Angels or of men, becauſe that he could not nor would not erre in his teaching. But in mens doctrins there chanceth oftentimes to be error, and therfore we muſt forſake theyr doctrines, if clokedly or expreſly they be repugnaunt to the doctrine of Chriſt. Mens doctrins being made for the peoples profit muſt be allowed and obſerued, ſo that they be grounded vpon Chriſtes doctrine, or at leaſt be not repugnant to his words.

The firſt concluſion.

The pope an idole of deſolation ſitting in the temple of God.

The pope if his lawes be contrarie to Chriſt, is the peſtiferous mountaine, infecting the whole earth.

Ierem. 31.

If the high biſhop of Rome, calling himſelf the ſeruant of the ſeruauntes of God, and the chiefe vicare of Chriſt in this world, do make & maintaine many lawes contrary to the Goſpell of Ieſu Chriſt: then is he of thoſe that haue come in Chriſtes name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, & haue ſeduced many a one, by the teſtimony of our ſauiour in Math. cap. 24. and the idoll of deſolation ſitting in the Temple of God, and taking away from him the cõtinuall ſacrifice for a time, times, and halfe a time. which idoll muſt be reueled to the chriſtian people by the teſtimony of Daniel. wherof Chriſt ſpeaketh in the Goſpell. when you ſhall ſee the abhomination of deſolation that was tolde of by Daniell the Prophet, ſtanding in the holy place: let him that readeth, vnderſtand, and he is the peſtiferous mountayn infecting the whole vniuerſall earth, as witneſſeth Ieremy. chap. 51. & not the head of Chriſtes body. For the auncient perſon in yeares, & honorable in reuerence, he is the head, & the prophet teaching lies is the tayle, as Eſay alledgeth. chap. 9. And he is that wicked and ſinnefull Captayne of Iſraell, whoſe foreappointed day of iniquity is come in time of iniquity, who ſhall take away Cidarim, and take awaye the crowne, Ezech, chap. 21. to whom it was ſayd: Foraſmuch as thy hart was exalted, and didſt ſay, I am a God, & ſitteſt in the ſeat of god, in the hart of the ſea, ſeing thou art a man and not God, and haſt geuen thine hart, as if it were the hart of God: therfore behold I will bring vpõ thee the moſt ſtrong and mighty ſtraungers of the nations, & they ſhall draw theyr ſwordes vpõ the beauty of thy wiſedom & ſhall defile the commaundementes & kill thee, and pul thee out, & thou ſhalt dye in the deſtruction of the ſlayne, and it foloweth.

The Pope, the ſinfull captaine of Iſrael, ſpoken of Ezechiel. 21.

In the multitude of thine iniquities, & of the iniquities of thy marchandiſe, thou haſt defiled thy ſanctification. I will therfore bring forth a fire, from the midſt of the whole earth, & will make thee as aſhes vpon earth. Thou art become nothing, & neuer ſhalt thou be any more. Eze. cha. 28 Furthermore he is yͤ idle ſhepheard forſaking his flock hauing a ſworde on his arme, & an other ſworde in his right eye. Zach. 11. & ſitting in the temple of God, doth aduaunce himſelfe aboue all thing that is called God, or whatſoeuer is worſhipped, by the teſtimony of Paule to Theſ. 2. epiſt. 2. chap. And in the defection or falling away ſhall the man of ſinne be reueled, whom the Lord Ieſus ſhall ſlay with the breath of his mouth. For euery kingdome deuided in it ſelfe, ſhall be brought to deſolation. He is alſo beſides, the beaſt aſcẽding vp out of the earth, hauing two hornes like vnto a lambe, but he ſpeaketh like a dragon, & as the cruell beaſt aſcending vp out of the ſea, whoſe power ſhall continue 42. monethes. He worketh the things that he hath geuen to the image of the beaſt. And he compelled ſmall and great, rich and poore, freemen and bondſlaues, to worſhyp the beaſt, and to take his marke in theyr forehead or theyr hands. Apo. 13 chap. And thus by the teſtimony of all theſe places is he the chiefe Antechriſt vpon the earth, and muſt be ſlayne with the ſword of Gods word, and caſt with the dragon, the cruell beaſt and the falſe Prophet that hath ſeduced the earth, into the lake of fire and brimſtone to be tormented world without end.

If the city of Rome do allow his traditiõs, and do diſallow Chriſtes holy commaundements, and Chriſtes doctrine, that it may confirme his traditions: then is ſhe Babilon the great, or the daughter of Babilon, and the great whore ſitting vpõ many waters with whom the kings of the earth haue committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth are become dronken with the wine of her harlotry lying opẽ to baudry. with whoſe ſpiritual whoredom enchauntments, witchcraftes, and Symon Magus marchaundiſes, the whole roũd world is infected and ſeduced: ſaying in her hart, I ſit as a Queen, and widow I am not neither ſhall I ſee ſorrowe and mourning. Yet is ſhee ignoraũt yͤ within a litle while ſhall come the day of her deſtruction & ruine by the teſtimony of the Apoc. cha. 17. Becauſe that from the time that the continuall ſacrifice was taken away, & the abhomination of deſolatiõ placed, there be paſſed 1299. dayes by the teſtimonye of Daniell, and the Chronicles added do agree to the ſame. And the holy City alſo hath bene troden vnder foot of the heathen, for 42. monethes, and the woman was nouriſhed vp in the wildernes (vnto which ſhe fled for feare of the ſpace of the ſerpẽt) during 1260. dayes, or els for a time, times, & halfe a tyme which is all one. All theſe thinges be manifeſt by the teſtimony of the Apocalips, & the Chronicles therto agreeing. And as concerning the fall of Babilon aforeſayd, it is manifeſt in the Apoc. where it is ſayd: In one day ſhall her plagues come, death, lamentation, and famine, and ſhe ſhal be burned with fire. For ſtrong is the Lord whych will iudge her. And agayn Babilon that great Citty is fallen, which hath made all nations to drinke of the wine of her Whoredome. And thirdly, one mightye Aungell tooke vp a myll ſtone that was a very great one, and did caſt it into the Sea, ſaying: with ſuche a violence as this is, ſhall that great Cittye Babylon be ouerthrowne, and ſhall no more bee founde. For her Marchauntes were the Princes of the earth, and with her Witchcraft all Nations haue gone aſtray, and in her is there founde, the bloud of the Sayntes and Prophetes. And of her deſtruction ſpeaketh Eſay in the 13. chapiter. And Babilon that glorious Cittye, being ſo noble amongeſt kingdomes in the pride of the Caldeans, it ſhall be that like as the Lorde did ouerturne Sodome and Gomorre vpſide downe, it ſhall neuer more be inhabited, nor haue the foundation layde in no age, from generation to generation. Ieremy ſayeth: Your mother that hath borne you, is brought to very great confuſion and made euẽ with the ground. And agayne: The Lord hath deuiſed and done as he hath ſpokẽ agaynſt the inhabiters of Babilõ, which dwel richly in their treaſures vppon many waters,thine ende is come. And thirdly: Drouth ſhall fall vpon her waters,and they ſhall beginne to be drye, for it is a land of grauen imagies, and boaſteth in her prodigious wonders : It ſhall neuer more be inhabited,neyther be builded vp in no age nor generation. Verely, euen as God hath ſubuerted Sodome and Gomorre with her calues.

Pardon mee (I beſeeche you) though I be not plentiful in pleaſaunt wordes: For if I ſhould runne after the courſe of this wicked world,& ſhould pleaſe mē, I ſhould not be Chriſtes ſeruant. And becauſe I am a poore man,& neyther haue nor cā haue notaries hyred to teſtifie of theſe my writings: I call vpon Chriſt to be my witnes, which knoweth the inward ſecrets of my hart, that I am redy to declare the things that I haue writtē after my faſhion, to yͤ profit of all Chriſten people, & to yͤ hurt of no mā liuing, & am ready to be reformed, if any mā will ſhew me where I haue erred: being redy alſo (miſerable ſinner though I be) to ſuffer for yͤ cōfeſſion of yͤ name of Chriſt & of his doctrine, as much as ſhal pleaſe him by his grace & loue to aſſiſt me a miſerable ſinner. In witnes of al theſe things, I haue to this writing ſet yͤ ſeale of our Lord & ſauior Ieſus Chriſt, which I beſech him to imprint vpon my forehed,& to take frō me al maner of marke of Antichriſt, Amen.

¶ Theſe two ſuppoſitions (as they are termed in the ſcholes) written by Walter Brute, and exhibited vnto the Biſhop, although they conteyned matter ſufficient eyther to ſatiſfie the biſhop if he had ben diſpoſed to learne, or els to haue prouoked him to replye agayne, if his knowledge therin had ben better thē his: yet could they worke neither of thē effect in him. But he receiuing & peruſing the ſame when he neither could confute yͭ which was ſaid, neyther would reply or aunſwere by learning to that whych was truth, finding other by cauſlations, ſaid that this his writing was too ſhort and obſcure, and therfore required him, to write vpon the ſame againe more plainely and more at large. Whereupon the ſaid Maiſter Walter (ſatiſfying the Biſhops requeſt, and ready to geue to euery one an accōpt of his faith) in a more ample tractatiō renueth hys matter agayne before declared, writing to the Byſhop in wordes and forme as followeth:

An other declaration of the ſame matter before, after a more ample tractation, exhibited by Walterbrute to the B.

Reuerend father, forſomuch as it ſeemeth to you yͭ my motion in my two ſuppoſitions or caſes, & in my two concluſions, is too ſhort and ſomwhat darke: I wil gladly now ſatiſfy your deſire, according to my ſmal learning, by declaring the ſame concluſions. In opening wherof, it ſhall plainely appeare, what I do iudge in all matters, yͭ I am accuſed of to your reuerence, deſiring you firſt of al, that your diſcretiō would not beleue that I do enterpryſe of any preſumption to handle the ſecretes of yͤ ſcriptures, which the holy and iuſt, & wiſe Doctours haue left vnexpounded. It is not vnknowen to many, that I am in all points farre inferiour to thē, whoſe holynes of life & profoundnes in knowledge, is manifold waies allowed. But as for mine ignorance, and multitude of ſinnes, are to my ſelfe and others ſufficiently knowen: wherefore, I iudge not my ſelfe worthy to vnlooſe or to cary their ſhooes after them. Do you therefore no otherwiſe deeme of me, then I do of mine owne ſelfe. But if you ſhal finde any goodneſſe in my writings, aſcribe it to God only: who according to the multitude of his mercy, doth ſometimes reueale thoſe things to Idiotes and ſinners, which are hidded from the holy and wiſe, according to this ſaying: I will prayſe and confeſſe thee O father, for that, yͧ haſt hidden theſe thinges from the wyſe and prudent, and haſt diſcloſed them to the litle ones. Euen ſo O father, becauſe it hath thus pleaſed thee. And in an other place. I am come to iudgement into this world, that they which ſee not may ſee, and that they which ſee, may be made blinde. And Paule ſaith: that God hath choſen the weake things of the world, to cōfound the mighty, that no man ſhal boaſt in him ſelfe, but that al mē ſhould geue the honour to God.

They that ſo humblye iudge of themſelues and do not ſo careleſly cōtinue, are of God.

Eſay 6.

It was commaunded to Eſay, bearinge the type of Chriſt: Go and ſay to this people : Heare ye with your hearing, and do not vnderſtand ? Beholde ye the viſion,and yet knowe ye not the thing that ye ſee ? Make blinde the hart of this people,& make dull their eares, and ſhut their eyes, leaſt that perchaunce with their eyes they ſhould ſee,and with their eares they ſhoulde heare, and with their harts they ſhould vnderſtand and bee conuerted,and I ſhould heale thē. And I ſayd,how long Lord? And he ſayd,vntill that the cities be made deſolate without inhabitants, and the houſe without any perſon within it. Alſo in Eſay thus it is written: And the multitude of all nations,which ſhall fight againſt Ariel,and all perſons that haue warred, and beſieged and preuailed agaynſt it, ſhall bee as a dreame that appeareth in the night, & as the hungry perſon dreameth that he eateth, but whē he ſhall awake out of ſleepe, hys ſoule is empty. And lyke as the hungry perſon dreameth that hee eateth, and yet after that hee ſhall awake, he is ſtill wearye and thirſtye, and hys ſoule voyde of nouriſhment : euen ſo ſhall it bee wyth the multitude of all nations that haue fought agaynſt the mount Sion. Be you amaſed,and haue great wonder : reele ye to and fro, and ſtaggre ye: be ye druncken, and not with wyne : ſtaker, but not through drunckennes: for the Lorde hath myngled for you the ſpirite of drouſines. He ſhall ſhut your eyes, he ſhall couer your Prophets and Prynces that ſee viſions. And a viſion ſhalbe to you all together, lyke the wordes of a ſealed booke, which when hee ſhall geue to one that is learned,he ſhall ſay: Reade here, and he ſhall aunſwere, I cannot,for it is ſealed. And the booke ſhalbe geuen to one,that is vnlearned and knoweth not his letters,and it ſhal be ſayd vnto him,Reade, And he ſhall aunſwere, I knowe not the letters, I am vnlearned, Wherefore the lorde ſaith: For aſmuche as this people draweth nigh me with their mouthes,and glorifyeth me with their lips, but their hart is farre from me, and they haue rather feared the commaundements of men,and haue cleaued to their doctrines: Beholde therefore I will ad beſides, and bring ſuch a muſe and maruell vpon this people which ſhal make men amaſed with marueling. For wiſedome ſhal periſh from their wiſe men,and the vnderſtanding of their prudent perſons ſhalbe hidden. And ſoone after it followeth in the ſame place, yet a litle while and Libanus ſhalbe turned into Charmell, and Charmell counted for a cops or groaue, and in the ſame day ſhall the deafe folkes heare the worde of this booke, and the eyes of the blinde (changed from darkenes and blindnes) ſhall ſee.

Daniel. 2.

Nabuchodonoſer enquiring of Danyel ſaid. Thinkeſt thou that thou canſt truely declare mee the dreame that I haue ſene, and the meaning thereof. And Danyel ſayd: As for the miſtery whereof the king doth aſke, neyther the wiſe men, magitiens, ſouthſayers, nor enchaunters can declare to the king: But there is a God in heauen, that diſcloſeth miſteries, who will declare to thee (O king Nabuchodonoſor) what things ſhal come to paſſe in the laſt times of all. To me alſo is this ſacrament or miſterie diſcloſed (not for any wiſedome that is in mee more then in all men liuing) but to that the interpretatiō might be made manyfeſt to the king,& that thou ſhouldeſt know the cogitagions of thy minde.

Daniel 12.

It was alſo ſayd to Daniel, And thou Daniel, ſhut vp the wordes, ſeale vp the booke, vntill the time appointed. Verely many people ſhall paſſe ouer, and manyfolde knowledge ſhall there be : And Daniel ſayde to the man that was clothed with lynnen garments, who ſtode vpon the waters of the floud: How lōg wil it be before the end ſhal come of theſe marueilous thinges? And I heard the man that was clothed in linnen apparel, who ſtode vpon the waters of the flouds, when he had lift vp his right hād and his left hand into heauen, and had ſworne by him that liueth for euermore: that for a time, tymes, and a halfe tyme. And when the ſcattering abroad of the hand of the holye people ſhalbe accompliſhed: then ſhal al theſe things be finiſhed. And I heard and vnderſtoode not, and I ſayd: O my Lorde, what ſhall bee after theſe things, and he ſayd: Go thy wayes Daniel, for this talke is ſhut & ſealed vp, vntil the time that is before appointed.

All theſe thinges haue I written to ſhew, that he that hath the key of Dauid, who openeth and no man ſhutteth, ſhutteth and no man openeth: doth (when and how lōg it pleaſeth him) hide the myſteries, and the hid ſecrets of the Scriptures, from the wiſe, prudent, and righteous : and other whiles at his pleſure, reuealeth the ſame to ſinners and lay perſons,& ſimple ſoules, that he may haue the honor & glory in all things. Wherefore as I haue beforeſaid, if you ſhall finde any good thing in my wrytinges, aſcribe the ſame to God alone: If you ſhal finde otherwiſe, think ye the ſame to be written of ignorance, and not of malice. And if any doubt or errour be ſhewed me in all my wrytynges, I wil humbly allow your information & fatherly correction.

☞ But why that ſuch maner of matters are moued touching the diſcloſing of Antichriſt in this kingdome, more then in other kingdomes, and in this time alſo more then in time paſt: the aunſwere, as concerning the time of the motion is, that it is the laſt coniunction of Saturne and Iupiter in the ſigne of the * Twyns, which is the houſe of Mercury, being the ſignifyer of yͤ Chriſtian people: which coniunction ſeemeth to me to betoken the ſecōd comming of Chriſt, to reforme his Church, and to call men agayne by the diſcloſing of Antichriſt, to the perfection of the Goſpell, from their Hetheniſh rytes and wayes of the Gentiles. By whom the holy citie was trampled vnder foote, for 42. monethes, euen as the coniunction of the ſayd two planets being incloſed in the ſigne of the Virgine, which is alſo the houſe of Mercury: dyd betoken the firſt comming of Chriſt, for the ſaluation of all people that were periſhed of the houſe of Iſrael, wherby to call thē through the ſame comming, to the full perfection of the Goſpell.

*In Signo Gemini.

Marke heere (good Reader) by this aſtronomicall coniunction of theſe two planets in Gemini, hee meaneth couertly the ſchiſme betweene the two Popes which laſted 39. yeares, by the which coniunction, his meaning is, that God wold haue Antichriſt to be diſcloſed and his church to be reformed.

By this perfection (I ſuppoſe) he meaneth the reformation of the church being out of the way.

Eſay 11.

The reueling of Antechriſt.

As touching this calling of the Heathen, ſpeaketh Chriſt in the Goſpell, I haue alſo other ſheepe, that are not of this folde, and thoſe muſt I bring, and they ſhall heare my voyce, and there ſhall be one ſhepefolde, & one ſhepeherd. For although the Gentiles be conuerted, from the infidelitie, of their idolatrie, to the fayth of Chriſt: yet are they not conuerted to the perfection of the law of Chriſt, And therefore did the Apoſtles in the primitiue Church, lay no burthen vpon the Gentiles, but that they ſhoulde abſtaine from haynous thinges, as from thynges offred to idols, and from bloud, and ſtrangled, and fornicatyon. As touching this ſecond comming, ſpeaketh Eſay: On that day the roote of Ieſſe which ſtandeth for a ſigne or marke to the people, to hym ſhall the heathen make theyr homage and ſupplication, and hys ſepulchre ſhall be glorious: and in that daye ſhall it come to paſſe, that the Lorde ſhall the ſecond tyme put to his hande, to poſſeſſe the remnant of hys people &c. And he ſhall lift vp a token toward the nations, and hee ſhall aſſemble the runnagate people of Iſrael that were fled, and thoſe that were diſperſed of Iuda ſhall he gather together from the fower quarters of the earth. And the zealous emulation of Ephraim ſhall be broken to peeces, and the enemyes of Iuda ſhall come to nought. Paule to the Theſſalonians ſayeth: We beſeeche you brethren, by the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chryſt, and of our gathering together before him: that you be not ſoone remooued from your vnderſtanding, neyther that you bee put in feare, as though the day of the Lorde were at hand, neyther as it were by letter ſent by vs, neither by ſpirite, nor yet by talke. Let not any bodye by any meanes bring you out of the waye, or ſeduce you: For except there ſhall firſt come a departyng, and that the man of ſinne, the ſonne of perdition ſhalbe diſcloſed, whych maketh reſiſtaunce, and is aduaunced aboue all thing that is called God, or that is worſhipped: ſo that he doth ſitte in the temple of God, ſhewing hymſelfe as if he were God. Do ye not remember that whileſt I was as yet with you, I tolde you of thys: and nowe you knowe what keepeth hym backe, that he may be vttered in hys due tyme: For euen nowe doth he worke the myſterie of iniquitie, onely that he which holdeth, may holde ſtyll vntill he be come to light: and then ſhall that wicked one be diſcloſed, whom the Lorde Ieſus ſhall ſlaye wyth the breath of hys mouth, and ſhall deſtroy with the brightneſſe of his comminge, euen hym: whoſe comming is accordyng to the workyng of Sathan, in all power, with ſignes and lying wonders, and in all deceipfull leading out of the truthe towardes thoſe that do peryſh, becauſe that they receiue not hartely the loue of truth, that they might be ſaued.

The abhomination of deſolation.

Luke 21.

Deſtruction of the Iewes temple.

1390. dayes, in Daniel expounded.

Chriſt being demaunded of the Apoſtles, what ſhould be the token of his comming, & of the end of the worlde: ſayd vnto them. There ſhall come many in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and they ſhall ſeduce many. Alſo he telleth them of many other ſignes, of battayles, famine, peſtilence, and earthquakes. But the geateſt ſigne of all he teacheth to bee this. When you ſhall ſee (ſayth he) the abhomination of deſolation ſtãdyng in the holy place, he that readeth, let him vnderſtand. But Luke 21. in his Goſpel ſpeaketh more plainely hereof. When you therefore ſhall ſee Ieruſalem to be compaſſed about with an army, then knowe ye that the deſolation thereof ſhall drawe nigh. And afterward it followeth: And they ſhall fall by the face of the ſword, and ſhalbe led away captiue to all nations, and Ieruſalem ſhalbe troden vnder foote of the heathen, vntill the tymes of the nations bee fulfilled. Now in Daniel thus it is writtẽ of this matter. And after 72. weekes, ſhal Chriſt be ſlain, neyther ſhall that be his people, that will deny him. And as for the Citye and Sanctuarie, ſhall a people (wyth his captayne that will come with them) deſtroy the ſayde Citie and ſanctuarie, and hys ende ſhalbe to be waſted vtterly, till it be brought to naught, and after the ende of the warre, ſhall come the deſolation appoynted. In one weeke ſhall he confirme the couenant to many, and wythin halfe a weeke ſhall the offering and ſacrifice ceaſe. And in the temple ſhall there bee the abhomination of deſolation, and euen vnto the end ſhall the deſolation continue. And els where in Daniel, thus it is written. From the tyme that the continuall ſacrifice ſhalbe offered, and that the abhomination ſhalbe placed in deſolation, there ſhal be 1290. dayes.

For theſe 42. monethes, looke page 397.

Why rather at this time, then any other, the matter of Antichriſt is moued: and why rather in this kingdome, then in an other.

Nowe, if any man will beholde the Chronicles, he ſhal finde, that after the deſtruction of Ieruſalem was accompliſhed, and after the ſtrong hand of the holy people was fully diſperſed, and after the placing of the abhominatyon, that is to ſaye, the Idoll of deſolation of Ieruſalem, wythin the holy place, where the temple of God was before, there had paſſed 1290. dayes taking a day for a yere, as commonly it is taken in the Prophets. And the times of the heathen people are fulfilled, after whoſe rytes and cuſtomes God ſuffered the holy Citie to be trampled vnder foote for 42. monethes. For although the Chriſtyan Church, which is the holy Citie, contynued in the fayth from the Aſcenſion of Chryſt, euen till thys time: yet hath it not obſerued and kept the perfection of the fayth all this whole ſeaſon. For ſoone after the departure of the Apoſtles, the fayth was kept wyth the obſeruatyon of yͤ rites of the Gentiles, and not of the rites of Moſes law, nor of the lawe of the Goſpell of Ieſus Chryſt, wherefore ſeing that this time of the errour of the Gentiles is fulfilled: it is likely that Chriſt ſhall call the Gentiles from the rytes of their gentilitie, to the perfection of the Goſpell, as hee called the Iewes frõ the lawe of Moyſes to the ſame perfection, in his firſt comming: that there may be one ſhepefolde of the Iewes and Gentiles, vnder one ſhepeheard Seing therefore that Antichriſt is knowen which hath ſeduced the nations: then ſhall the elect after that they haue forſaken the errours of their Gentilitie, come through the light of Gods word, to the perfection of the Goſpel, & that ſame ſeducer ſhalbe ſlayne with the ſword of gods worde. So that by theſe things it doth partly appeare vnto mee, why yͭ at this time rather then at an other time, this matter of Antichriſt is moued.

The firſt receiuing the faith in thys realme by the Britons.

Britaines by the ſpeciall election of God called to fayth.

And why that this motiõ is come to paſſe in this kingdome, rather then in other kingdomes: me thinkes there is good reaſon, becauſe that no nation of the Gẽtiles was ſo ſoone conuerted to Chryſt as were the Brytons the inhabitauntes of this kingdome. For to other places of the worlde there were ſent preachers of the fayth, who, by the workyng of miracles and continuall preaching of yͤ word of God, and by greeuous paſſion and death of the bodye, dyd conuert the people of thoſe places: But in this kingdome, in the time of Lucius kyng of the Brytons, and of Eleutherius Byſhop of the Romaines did Lucius heare of the Romaines that were Infidels (by the waye of rumors and tales) of the Chriſtian fayth, whych was preached at Rome, who beleeued ſtraightwayes, and ſent to Rome, to Eleutherius for men ſkilfull to informe hym more fully in the very fayth it ſelfe: at whoſe comming he was ioyfull, and was baptiſed with his whole kingdom. And after the receiuing of the fayth, they neuer forſooke it, neyther for any maner falſe preaching of other, neyther for any maner of tormẽts, or yet aſſaults of the Paynims, as in other kindomes it hath come to paſſe. And thus it ſeemeth to me the Britons amongſt other natiõs, haue ben, as it were by the ſpirituall election of God, called & conuerted to the fayth.

The callyng of the Gentiles to faith

Of them as me ſeemeth, did Eſay prophecy ſaying: For they did ſee to whõ there was nothing told of him, & they did behold, that had not heard of him. And againe, behold, thou ſhalt call a nation which thou kneweſt not: & natyons that haue not knowen thee, ſhall runne vnto thee: for the lord thy God, & yͤ holy one of Iſrael, ſhall glorify thee.

Apoc. 12.

The woman fed in the deſert. 1260. dayes.

Of this kingdome, did S. Iohn in the Apocalips prophecy (as me ſemeth) where he ſaid, The Dragõ ſtode before the woman, which was about to be deliuered of child, to the intent yͭ when ſhe had brought it forth into yͤ world, he might deuour vp her ſõne: & ſhe brought forth her child which was a mãchild, who ſhould gouern al natiõs with an yron rod. And the ſame ſonne was taken vp to God, & to his throne. And yͤ womã fled into the wildernes, where as ſhe had a place prepared of God, yͭ they may feede her. 1260. dayes. And agayne in the ſame chapter, after that the Dragon ſaw that he was caſt out vpõ yͤ earth, he did perſecute the womã, which brought forth the manchild. And there were geuen to the womã two wings of a great Egle, that ſhe might flee into the wilderneſſe into her place, where as ſhe is foſtred vp for a time, times, & a halfe time, from the face of the Serpent. And the Serpent did caſt as it were a floud of water after the woman, to the intẽt that he might cauſe her to be drowned by yͤ floud: and the earth opening her mouth, did heare the woman, & did ſwallow vp the floud which the Dragon did caſt out of his mouth. Let vs ſee how theſe ſayinges may bee applyed vnto this kingdom rather then to other kingdomes. It is wel knowen yͭ this kingdome is a wildernes or a deſert place, becauſe that the Philoſophers & wiſemen did not paſſe vpon it, but did leaue it for a wildernes and deſert, becauſe it is placed without the clymates.

This place of the deſert in the ſcripture ſeemeth here ſomething hardly expounded.

Faith came into Britanny frõ the Eaſt, not from Italy or Rome.

Unto this place fled yͤ woman, that is to ſay, yͤ Church (which by fayth did ſpiritually bring forth Chriſt into the world) where as ſhe was fed with the heauenly bread, the fleſh and bloud of Ieſus Chriſt, for 1260. daies, ſeing that for ſo many daies, taking a day for a yere, the Brytons cõtinued in yͤ faith of Chriſt, which thing cannot be found ſo of any Chriſten kingdome, but of this deſert: and wel is it ſaid, that ſhe flew to this place. For from yͤ Eaſt came the faith into Brytaine, not by walking in iourney, nor yet by ſayling: for then ſhould it haue come by Rome, Italy, Almaine, France, which cãnot be found: & therefore ſhe flew ouer thoſe places, & reſted not in them, euen as a birde flying ing ouer a place, reſteth not in the ſame: but reſted in thys wildernes for a time, times, and halfe a time, that is. 1260. yeres from the firſt comming of the faith into Britaine vntill this preſent.

A time, times, and halfe a time expounded.

In ſaying for a time, times, and halfe a time, there is a going forwarde from the greater to the leſſe. The greateſt time that we name, is a 1000. yeres, there is a time: and the next time that is leſſe in the ſinguler number, is one 100. yere. In the plural number, times ſignifie that there be mo hundreths then one, at leſt 200. yeres. wherefore if they be put vnder a certaine number, it muſt nedes be that they be two, but the ſame two cānot fitly be called ſome times, except they be hundreths. For in that, that there is a goyng downe from the greater to the leſſe, when as it is ſayde a time, times, and half a time, and that the number of a 1000. is likely aſſigned for a time: it muſt nedes folow that times muſt be taken for hundreths, and half a time for 60. becauſe it is the greater halfe of an hundreth yeres, though that 50. be the euen half. And when that the ſerpent ſent the water of the perſecution after the woman to cauſe her to be drowned of the floud: then did the earth, that is to wit, ẏ ſtablenes of faith helpe the woman, by ſupping vp the water of tribulation. For in the moſt cruel perſecution of Diocleſian and Maximiane againſt the Chriſtians, when as chriſtianity was almoſt euery wher roted out: yet did they in this kingdom ſtand continually in the faith, vnmoueable. And ſo, conſidering that the Britons, were conuerted to ẏ faith of Chriſt, as you would ſay, by an election and piking out amongſt all the nations of the heathen, and that after they had receiued the faith, they did neuer ſtarte backe from the faith for no maner of tribulation: It is not to be meruailed, if in their place ẏ calling of the Gentiles, be made manifeſt, to the prouing of the goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt, by the reuealing of Antichriſt.

Perſecution in Diocleſiās time ſwalowed vp, boue page. 77.

But beſides this, me ſeemeth that Ezechiel doth ſpecially ſpeake of them, whereas hee ſpeaketh of the fall of the prince of Tyre, ſaying: for aſmuch as thy heart is lifted vp as if it were the hart of God, therfore beholde: I wil bring vpon thee, ſome of the ſtrongeſt of the heathen, & they ſhall draw their naked ſwords vpon the beauty of thy wiſdom, and they ſhall defile thy comelines, and they ſhall ſlay thee, and pull thee out, and thou ſhalt die in the ſlaughter of the ſlaine perſons, in the heart of the ſea.

This prince who ſayth, that he himſelf is God, & doth ſit in Gods chaire in ẏ heart of the ſea, doth ſignify (as moſt likely it ſeemeth to me) that Antichriſt ſhalbe deſtroyed by the moſt mighty perſons of the Gentils folke, through the ſworde of the worde of God. Becauſe that amongſt the other Gentiles, there haue bene none more ſtrong then the Britones, either in their body or their faith, & in their bodely warres there haue bene none more mighty then they. For neuer in warres haue they bene vanquiſhed, but by their owne ſedition or treaſon. But how many kingdoms haue they conquered? Yea, and nother by the moſt mighty city of Rome, could they be driuen out of their kingdome, vntill that God ſent vppon them peſtilence and famine: whereby they being waſted, were compelled to leaue their countrey, which thing I haue not hard of any other people. Now, in the faith, haue they bene amongſt all the people, the ſtrongeſt, as before is ſayd, becauſe that by no tribulation, could they be compelled to forſake the faith. wherfore of them, this ſeemeth to me to be vnderſtanded. Thē I wil bring vpon thee, ſome of the moſt ſtrongeſt people, & they ſhal draw their naked ſwordes. &c. By theſe things it may plainly apeare, why at this time (rather then in time paſt) thys matter is ſtirred vp: and why in this kingdome (rather then in other kingdomes) the calling of the Gentiles is intreated of, to the verifying of the Goſpell, through the diſcloſing of Antichriſt.

Tales of Antichriſt.

But foraſmuch as many tales and fables are tolde of Antichriſt and his comming, and many things whych doe rather ſeduce then inſtruct the hearers, are applied to hym out of the ſcriptures of the prophets: we will briefly wryte thoſe things which are ſpoken of hym, and we will ſhewe that the ſame fable ſprang from the error of people imagining, & from no truth of the ſcriptures propheſying. Now then they do ſay, that Antichriſt ſhall be borne in Babylon of the tribe of Dan, & conceiued of the mixture of man and woman in ſinne, becauſe that Chriſte was borne of a virgin, and conceiued of the holy ghoſt. They ſay, that he ſhall be an ill fauoured perſonage, becauſe that it is wrytten of Chriſt: comely and beautifull is he, beyonde the ſonnes of men. They ſay that he ſhall preach three yeres and an halfe where Chriſt preached, & that he ſhall circumciſe himſelfe, and ſay that he is Chriſt, and the Meſſias ſent for the ſaluation of the Iewes. And they ſay, that he ſhal 3. maner of waies ſeduce the people by falſe miracles, giftes, and torments. So that whom he ſhall not be able to ouercome wt myracles nor with gifts, thoſe ſhall he goe about to ouercome with diuers kinds of tormēts. And thoſe that he ſhal ſeduce, will he marke with hys tokens in their forehead or hands. He ſhal ſit in the temple of God, and cauſe himſelfe to be worſhipped as God. He ſhall fight (as they ſay) with the 2. witneſſes of Chriſt, Enoch & Hely, and ſhal kill thē, and he himſelfe ſhall finally be ſlaine with lightening. To this imagined man of their own imagination, but of none of the prophets foreſhewed (at leaſt in no ſuch wyſe as this is) do they apply the Prophets, as this of Daniel: When ẏ cotinual ſacrifice ſhalbe taken away, & abhomination ſhall be placed to deſolation: That is (ſay they) when the worſhipping of God ſhalbe taken away, & deſolation (to wit, Antichriſt) ſhall abhominably ſhewe forth hymſelfe to be worſhipped, then ſhall there be 1290. dayes: that is to ſay, 3. yeres and a halfe. And this time doe they ſay is the time, times, and halfe a time. And when it is ſayde in Daniell: Bleſſed is hee that looketh for, and cōmeth to a 1335. dayes. This do they ſay, is thus to be vnderſtanded. 45. dayes of repentance to ſuch as haue worſhipped Antichriſt: whych 45. dayes added to the 1290. make 1335. daies. which dayes they that ſhall reach vnto, ſhalbe called bleſſed.

A falſe imagination of Antichriſt.

The ſcripture & Prophetes not rightly vnderſtāded, touching Antichriſt.

They apply alſo to thys Antichriſt, this ſaying of the Apocalips: I ſaw a beaſt riſing vp out of the Sea, hauing 7. heads, and 10. horns, who had power geuē him to make 42. moneths. which moneths (as they ſay) do make 3. yere & a halfe, in which Antichriſt ſhall raigne. And many other things there are told, and applied vnitly to this imagined Antichriſt, ẏ are not truly grounded vpon the ſcriptures.

Touching theſe 42. monethes, ſee aboue pag. 391.

Now, let vs ſhew the errors of this fable. Firſt of al, if there ſhall come ſuch one (ſaying expreſly that he is Chriſt) what Chriſtian would be ſeduced by him, though he ſhuld do neuer ſo many miracles: neither ſhall he come after the maner of a ſeducer, which ſhal ſhew himſelf an expreſſe aduerſary. Neither is it likely that the Iewes can be ſeduced by ſuch a one, ſeeing that Chriſt is not promiſed vnto them of the ſtocke of Dan by any of the Prophets, but of ẏ ſtocke of Iuda: nor yet is he promiſed to thē to be a king warlike, but peaceable, taking warre away, & not making warre. For of Chriſt ſayeth Eſay: And in the laſt dayes, ſhall there be prepared the mountaine of the houſe of the Lorde, in the toppe of the mountaines, and it ſhalbee exalted aboue the hilles: and to it, ſhall all the nations haue great recourſe, and manye people ſhal goe and ſay: Come, let vs go vp to the mountaine of the Lord, and to the houſe of the God of Iacob, and hee ſhall teache vs his wayes, and wee ſhall walke in his pathes. For out of Sion ſhall there goe a lawe, and the word of the Lord from Ieruſalem, and he ſhall iudge the nations, & reproue much people. And they ſhall turne their ſwordes into plowſhares, and their ſpeares into ſithes. There ſhall not a nation lift vp it ſelfe againſt an other nation, nor yet ſhall they bee any more exerciſed to warre. And againe: A litle babe is borne to vs, and a ſonne is geuen to vs, and his Imperiall kingdome vpon his ſhoulder, and his name ſhall bee called: The great counſailour: The mighty God: The father of the world to come: The Prince of peace. His Empire ſhall be multiplied, and there ſhalbe no ende of his peace. He ſhall ſit vpon the ſeat of Dauid, and vpon his kingdom: that he may make it ſtedfaſt and ſtrong in iudgement, and in iuſtice, from hencefoorth & for euermore. Zachary doeth ſay of Chriſt: Reioyce thou greatly, O thou daughter Sion, be thou exceeding merye, O daughter Ieruſalem: Beholde thy king ſhall come a righteous perſon, and a Sauior vnto thee, and yet he a poore man, and getting vp vpon an aſſe, euen vpon a yong colt of the ſhe aſſe. And I wil ſcatter abroad the chariot of Ephraim, and the horſe of Ieruſalem. And the bow of warre ſhalbe diſperſed, and he ſhall ſpeake peace to the nations, and hys power ſhall be from the ſea to the ſea, and from the floud vnto the borders of the earth.

The old imagination touching Antichriſt confuted.

Antichriſt commeth not ſo groſely as the papiſts imagine.

Eſay. cap. 2.

Eſay 2.

Eſay 9.

Zach. 9.

Antichriſt cannot come of the tribe of Dan.

By which thinges it is manifeſt, that the wiſe Iewes knewe well inough, Chriſt to be promiſed to them of the ſtocke of Iuda and not of the ſtocke of Dan: & that he was geuen, all to peace & not to warre: Therfore it is not likely, that they cā be ſeduced by ſuch a one. But if there ſhould haue beene in time to come ſome ſuch ſingular Antichriſt, then would Chriſt (ſeing he loued his) haue ſayd ſomwhat vnto thē of him. Now, of one ſingularly doth he not ſpeak: but of many, ſaying. Many ſhall come in my name, & ſay, I am Chriſt: and they ſhal ſeduce many perſons. But now let vs ſee, how the prophecies in Daniell, & the Apocalips (aforeſayd) be falſly and erroneouſly applied to the ſame imagined Antichriſt. For in Daniel the ix. chapter thus it is written. And after 72. weekes ſhall Chriſt be ſlaine, and they which will deny him ſhall not be his people. And the Citie and ſanctuary, ſhal a people, with their Captain that ſhal come with them deſtroy, whoſe end ſhalbe vtter deſolation, and after the end of the war a determined deſtruction. Now, he ſhall in one weeke confirme his couenaunt towardes many, and in the halfe weke ſhal the offring and ſacrifice ceaſe, and in the temple ſhall there be an abhomination of deſolation, and euē to the fulfilling vp of all, and to the end, ſhal the deſolation continue. It is plaine & manifeſt that this prophecy is now fulfilled. For the people of Rome with their Captaine, deſtroyed Ieruſalem euen to the grounde, and the people of the Iewes was ſlayne and ſcattered. And the abhomination, that is, the Idol of deſolation was placed of Adrian, in the laſt deſtruction in Ieruſalem in the holy place, that is to ſay, in a place of the tēple. And from that time hetherto haue paſſed neare about 1290. dayes, taking a day for a yeare, as Daniel takes it in hys prophecies, and other prophets likewiſe. For Daniel ſpeaking of 62. weekes, doeth not ſpeake of the weekes of daies but of yeares. So therfore when he ſayth: From the time that the continual ſacrifice was taken away. &c. 1290. dayes muſt be taken for ſo many yeares, from the tyme of the deſolation of Ieruſalem, euen vnto the reuealing of Antichriſt: and not for 3. yeares and an halfe, which they ſay, Antichriſt ſhall raigne. And againe, whereas Daniel ſayd, How long till the ende of theſe marueilous matters? it was aunſwered him. For a time, and times, and halfe a time. Beholde alſo, how vnfitly they did aſſigne this time, by 3. yeares and a halfe, which they ſay, Antichriſte ſhall raigne. For when as it is ſayde, a time, times, and halfe a time: there is a going downeward from the greater to the leſſe: from the whole to the part, becauſe it is from a time to halfe time. If therefore, there be a going downeward from the whole to the part, by the middeſt (which is greater then the whole it ſelfe) the going downewarde is not meete nor agreeing. And thys is done when as it is ſayd, that a time, times, and halfe a time is a yeare, two yeares, and halfe a yeare. Wherfore more fitly it is ſayd, that a time, times and halfe a time, doth ſignifie 1290. yeares, as is before ſayde in the chapter preceding. Thus therefore is the prophecie of Daniel falſly applied to that imagined Antichriſt.

Daniel. 9.

The abhomination or Idoll of deſolation ſtanding in the holy place.

Antichriſt to raigne onely 3. yeares and a halfe is falſe.

Likewiſe is the proces of the Apocalips applied to the ſame imagined Antichriſt, too much erroneouſly. Becauſe that the ſame cruell beaſt which came vp out of the ſea, hauing 7. heads, and 10. hornes, to whome there was power geuen ouer euery tribe, people, and toung, and the power geuen for the ſpace of 42. monethes: Thys beaſt doth note the Romaine Emperors, which moſt cruelly did perſecute the people of God, aſwell Chriſtians as Iewes. For whē as the condēnatiō of the great whore ſitting vpon the many waters was ſhewed to Iohn: he ſaw the ſame woman ſitting vpon the purple coulored beaſt full of the names of blaſphemy, hauing 7. heads, and 10. hornes: and he ſaw a woman being dronken with the bloud of the Saintes and Martyrs of Ieſu. And the angell expounding and telling him the miſtery of the woman and the beaſt that caried her ſayde: That 7. heades are 7. hilles, and are 7. kinges: Fiue are fallen, one is, the other is not yet come: & when he ſhall come, he muſt reigne a ſhort time. And yͤ 10. hornes whiche thou ſaweſt, are 10. kinges, who haue not yet taken theyr kingdome, but ſhall receiue theyr power as it were in one houre, vnder the beaſt. And finally he ſayth, yͤ woman whō thou ſaweſt, is the great Citty, which hath the kingdome ouer the kings of the earth. And it is manifeſt that the Citty of Rome, at the time of this prophecy, had the kingdom ouer the kings of the earth And this City was borne vp & vpholden by her cruell & beaſtly Emperors: who by theyr cruelty and beaſtlynes did ſubdue vnto thēſelues in a maner, all the kingdomes of the world, of a zeale to haue lordſhip ouer others, and not vertuouſlye to gouerne the people that were theyr ſubiectes, ſeeing that they thēſelues did lacke all vertue, and drew backe others from the fayth and from vertue.

Apoc.13.

The beaſt in the 13. of the Apoc. expounded.

The purple beaſt in the Apoc. meaneth Rome.

Wherfore what cruell beaſt comming vp out of the ſea, doth rightly note the Romain Emperors, who had power ouer euery language, people and coūtry. And the power of this beaſt was for 42. moneths: becauſe that from the firſt Emperor of Rome, that is to ſay, Iulius Ceſar, vnto the ende of Fredericke the laſt Emperour of Rome there were 42. monethes, taking a moneth for 30. dayes, as the monethes of the Hebrues and Grecians are, and taking a day alwayes for a yeare, as commonlye it is taken in the Prophetes. By whiche thinges it may playnely appeare, how vnfitly this prophecy is applied to that imagined Antechriſt, and the 42. moneths taken for three yeares and an halfe, which (they ſay) he ſhall reigne in agaynſt the ſaying of the Prophetes, becauſe that dayes are taken for yeares. As in the 1. of the Apocal. They ſhall be troubled 10. dayes. Which do note the moſt cruel perſecution of Diocleſian againſt the Chriſtians that endured 10. yeares. And in an other place of the Apocalips, it is written of the ſmoke comming vp out of the bottomles pit, Out of which pit there came forth Graſhoppers into the earth: and to them was power geuen, as ſcorpions haue power, to vexe & to trouble men 5. moneths. Now it is manifeſt, that from the beginning of the Friers minours and preachers, to the time that Armachanus, began to diſcloſe and vncouer their hypocriſie, and their falſe foundation of valiant begging vnder the pouertie of Chriſt, were 5. monethes, taking a moneth for 30. dayes, and a day for a yeare. And to Ezechiel were dayes geuen for yeares. Wherfore it is an vnfit thing to aſſigne the 42. moneths being appoynted to the power of the beaſt, vnto 3. yeares and a halfe, for the reigne of that phantaſticall and imagined Antichriſt: ſpecially ſeing that they do apply to his reigne yͤ 1290. dayes in Daniel, which make 42. moneths, and in the Apocalips they aſſigne hym 42. moneths. It is plaine that the Pſalterie and the harpe agree not. And therfore ſeing that it is ſufficiently ſhewed, that the ſame fabling tale of that imagined Antichriſt to come, is a fable and erroneous: Let vs goe forward to declare whether Antichriſt be already come, and yet is he hid from many, and muſt be opened and diſcloſed wythin a litle while, according to the truthe of the holy Scripture, for the ſaluation of the faithfull.

For theſe 42. moneths looke before pag.397.

Whether Antichriſt be already come.

And becauſe that in the firſt concluſion of mine anſwere, I haue conditionally put it, who is that Antichriſt lying priuie in the hid Scriptures of the Prophets: I will paſſe on the declaration of that cōcluſion, bringing to light thoſe things, whych lay hid in darkeneſſe, becauſe nothing is hid which ſhal not be diſcloſed, and nothing couered that ſhal not be knowen: And therfore, the thing that was ſayd in the darkeneſſe, let vs ſay in the light: and the thyng that we haue heard in the eare, let vs preache vppon the houſe toppes. I therefore as I haue before ſayd, ſo ſay, that if the high biſhop of Rome, calling himſelfe the ſeruant of God, and the chiefe Vicare of Chriſt in this world, do make and iuſtify many lawes contrary to the goſpell of Ieſu Chriſt: then is he the chiefe of many, whych comming in the name of Chriſt, haue ſaid, I am Chriſt, who haue ſeduced many. Which is the firſt part of the firſt concluſion, and is manifeſt. For Chriſt is called of Hebrues the very ſame, that we call annoynted. And amongeſt them there was a double ſort of legall annoynting by the lawe, the one of kings and the other of Prieſtes. And aſwell were the kynges, as the prieſtes, called in the lawe, Chriſtes. The kings, as in the Pſalme. The kings of the earth ſtoode vp together, and the Princes aſſembled them ſelues in one agaynſt the Lorde and againſt hys Chriſt or annoynted. And in the bookes of the kings very often are the kinges called Chriſtes. And our Sauiour was Chriſt, or annoynted king, becauſe hee was a king for euermore vpon the throne of Dauid, as the Scriptures doe very oftentimes witneſſe. The Prieſtes alſo were called annoynted, as where it is wrytten: Doe not yee touch my Chriſtes, that is, mine annoynted ones, and be not ye ſpitefull againſt my Prophetes. And ſo was our Sauiour Chriſt, a Prieſt for euer according to the order of Melchiſedech.

The Pope proued Antichriſt.

Annointing double in ſcripture.

Kinges and Prieſtes annointed.

Seyng then, that the Byſhops of Rome do ſay, that they are the high Prieſtes: they ſay alſo therein that they are kynges, becauſe they ſay that they haue the ſpirituall ſword perteinyng to their Prieſthode, and the corporall ſword which agreeth for a kynges ſtate. So is it playne, that really & in very deede, they ſay that they are Chriſts, albeit that expreſly they be not called Chriſtes. Now that, they come in the name of Chriſt, it is manifeſt, becauſe they ſay that they are his principal Vicares in this world, ordeined of Chriſt ſpecially for the gouernement of the Chriſtian Churche. Therefore, ſeyng they ſay, that really and in very deede they are Chriſtes, and the chief frendes of Chriſt: If they make and iuſtifie many lawes contrary to the Goſpell of Ieſu Chriſt, then is it playne that they themſelues in earth are the principal Antichriſtes, becauſe there is no worſe plague and peſtilence, then a familiar enemy. And if in ſecret they be agaynſt Chriſt, and yet in open appearaunce they ſay that they are his frendes: they are ſomuch the more meete to ſeduce and deceiue the Chriſtiā people, becauſe that a manifeſt enemy ſhall haue much a doe to deceaue a man, becauſe men truſt him not: but a priuey enemy pretendyng outward frendſhyp, may eaſly ſeduce, yea thoſe that be wiſe.

The Popes make themſelues prieſts and kynges.

The Pope maketh him ſelfe chriſt.

The Pope commeth in the name of Chriſt.

Popes proued principal Antichriſtes.

The pope an outward frend, and a priui enemy to Chriſt.

But that this matter may the more fully be knowē, let vs ſee what is the law & doctrine of Chriſt, that ought to be obſerued of all faithfull people: which beyng knowen, it ſhalbe an eaſy thing to ſee, if the biſhop of Rome doe make or maintaine any lawes, contrary to the law of the goſpell of Ieſu Chriſt.

Whether the Pope doth maintayne any lawes againſt the lawes of Chriſt.

I ſay then, that the lawe of Chriſt is charitie, whych is the perfect loue of God and of Chriſt. This thing is plaine and manifeſt. For Chriſt being demaunded of a certayne doctour of the law: what is the greateſt commaundement in the lawe? anſwered. Thou ſhalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoule, and with all thy minde: This is the principall & greateſt commandement. And as for the ſecond, it is like vnto this: Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbor as thine owne ſelfe. In theſe two commaundements, doth the whole law and Prophets depend. And in an other place Chriſt ſayeth: All maner of things therefore, ẏ you would that men ſhould do to you, the ſame alſo do ye vnto them. For thys is the lawe and the Prophets. And in Iohn the 13. chap. ſayth Chriſt. And now doe I ſay vnto you, I geue you a new commandement, ẏ you ſhuld loue eche other: as I loued you, in like maner that you alſo ſhuld loue one an other. In this ſhal all men know that you are my diſciples, if you ſhall haue loue one towardes an other. And Iohn 15. chapter: This is my commaundemēt that you loue together as I haue loued you. Greater loue then this, hath no body, that a man ſhuld geue his life for his frendes. The Apoſtle Peter ſayth in his firſt Epiſtle 4. chapter: Aboue all things, hauing continually charity one towards an other, for charitye couereth the multitude of ſinnes. Be yee harborers, and intertaine ye one an other without grudging: euery one as hee hath receaued grace, ſo let him beſtowe it vpon an other man, as the good ſtewards of the manifold graces of God. If any mā ſpeak, let him ſpeake as the word of God. If any man doe ought for an other, let it be don with ſinglenes and vnfained verity, miniſtred of God to vs ward, that in all thyngs God may be honoured through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. Iames in his Epiſtle the 2. chapter. If ye performe the royal lawe accordingly to the Scriptures (thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour) ye do wel: But if ye be parcial in receiuing and preferring mens perſonages, ye worke wickednes being blamed of the law as tranſgreſſors. And againe, ſo ſpeake ye, and ſo do ye, as ye ſhould nowe begin to be iudged by the law of libertie. what ſhall it auaile (my brethren) if a man ſay he haue faith, and haue no workes? Neuer ſhall ẏ faith be able to ſaue him. For if a brother or ſiſter be naked, and haue neede of daily foode, and ſome of you ſay to them, goe ye in peace, be ye made warme and ſatiſfied: and if ye ſhall not geue thoſe things that are neceſſary for the body, what ſhall it auaile? Euen ſo faith, if it haue not workes, is dead in it ſelfe.

Rom.13.

Iohn in his firſt epiſtle the 3. chap. This is the tidings whych you haue heard from the beginning, that you ſhuld loue one another. And againe, we know that we are tranſlated from death to life, if we loue the brethren: He that loueth not, abideth in death. And again, herein do we know the loue of God, becauſe that he hath laide downe hys life for vs, & we ought to lay down our liues for the brethren. He that ſhall haue the ſubſtaunce of thys world, and ſhall ſee his brother haue neede, and ſhall ſhut vp hys bowelles from him: howe abideth the loue of God in hym? My little children, let vs not loue in worde nor tounge, but in deede and truth. And againe 4. chap. Moſt dearly beloued, let vs loue together. For loue is of God, he ẏ loueth not, knoweth not God, for God is loue. In thys thing hath the loue of God apeared in vs, that God hath ſent his only begotten ſonne into the world, that we ſhuld liue by him. Herein is loue: not ẏ we haue loued God, but that he hath firſt loued vs, and hath ſent hys ſonne an attonement for oure ſinnes. Moſt dearly beloued, if God haue loued vs: we ſo ought to loue together. No mā hath ſene God at any time: if we loue together, God abideth in vs, & hys loue is perfect in vs. And againe, let vs loue God, for he hath firſt loued vs. If a man ſhall ſay, I loue God, & do hate hys brother, he is a lyar. For he that loueth not his brother whom he ſeeth, how cā he loue God whom he ſeeth not? And this commaundement haue we of God, ẏ who ſo loueth God, ſhould loue his brother alſo. Paule the Apoſtle in his epiſtle to the Rom. 13. chapter. Owe ye nothing to no body, ſauing that ye ſhould loue together, for he that loueth hys brother hath fulfilled the lawe. For thou ſhalt not commit adultery, thou ſhalt not murther, thou ſhalt not ſteal, thou ſhalt not beare falſ witnes, thou ſhalt not couet thy neighbors good: and if there be any other commaundement, it is plētifully fulfilled in this word: thou ſhalt loue thy neighbor as thy ſelfe. wherfore the fulfilling of the law is loue.

1.Cor.5.

Paule to the Corinthes 5. ſayeth: If I ſhoulde ſpeake with the tonges of men and angels, and yet haue not charitie, I am become as it were a peece of ſounding mettal or tinkling cimball. And if I ſhall haue all prophecie, & know all miſteries, and all knowledge, and ſhall haue all faith, ſo that I might remooue mountaines, and yet ſhall not haue charitie: I am nothing. And if I ſhall geue abroade all my goodes to feede the poore, and ſhall geue vp my body to be burned, and yet haue not charitie: it profites mee nothing.

Coloſ.3.

Theſ.4.

To the Galathians 5. ſayeth Paule: For you my brethren, are called into liberty: doe ye not geue your liberty for an occaſion of the fleſh, but by charity of the ſpirit, ſerue ye one an other. For all ẏ law is fulfilled in one ſaying: thou ſhalt loue thy neighbor as thine owne ſelf. To the Eph. 4. chap. he ſaith: I therfore that ſuffer bonds in the Lord, do beſeech you, that you would walke worthy of the calling wherein ye are called, with all humblenes and mildnes, with patience forbearing one another in loue, being carefull to kepe the vnitie of the ſpirit, in the bond of peace: that you be one body, and one ſpirite, euen as you be called in one hope of your calling. And againe in the 5. chap. Be ye followers of me, as moſt deare children, and walke ye in loue as Chriſt alſo hath loued vs, and hath deliuered vp hymſelfe for vs, an offring and ſacrifice to God of a ſweete ſauour. To the Phil. thus hee ſpeaketh in the 1. chap. Onely let your conuerſation be worthy of the Goſpell of Chriſt, that eyther when I ſhall come and ſee you, or els in mine abſence I may heare of you, that you ſtand ſtedfaſt in one ſpirit, laboring together with one accorde for the faith of the Goſpell. And in nothing be ye afraide of the aduerſaries, whych is to them a cauſe of damnation, but to you of ſaluation, and ẏ of God. For to you it is geuen, not onely that you ſhould beleue in him, but alſo that you ſhuld ſuffer wyth him, you hauing the lyke fight and battaile that both you haue ſeene in me, and alſo now do heare of me. If therefore there be any conſolation in Chriſt, if any comfort of charitie, if any felowſhip of the ſpirite, if any bowels of compaſſion fulfill you my ioy, that you may be of one iudgement, hauing one and the ſelfſame charitie, being of one accord, of one maner of iudgement, doing nothing of contention, nor of vaine glory, but in humblenes, accompting other amongſt you, euery one better then your ſelues, not euery body looking vppon the things that be hys owne, but thoſe that belong vnto others. And to the Coloſſ. 3. chapter thus he writeth: You therefore as the electe of God, holy, and beloued, put vpon you the bowels of mercy, gentleneſſe, humbleneſſe, lowlineſſe, modeſtie, pacience, bearing one wyth an other, & geuing place to your ſelues (if any haue a quarel againſt any body) euen as the Lord forgaue you, ſo do you alſo. Aboue all things haue ye charitie, which is the bonde of perfection, and let the peace of Chriſt triumph in your hearts, in whych peace you alſo are called in one body. And be yee kinde & thankefull. And to the Theſſalonians thus Paule writeth in the 4. chapter. As concerning brotherly charity, we haue no neede to wryte vnto you: for you your ſelues haue learned of God, that you ſhoulde loue one an other. And the ſame thing ye do towards all ẏ brethren throughout all Macedonia.

Out of all theſe & many other places of the holy ſcripture it ſufficiently appeareth, that the law of Chriſt is charitie, neither is there any vertues commaunded of Chriſt, or any of hys Apoſtles to be obſerued of the faithfull people, but that it commeth out of charitie, or els doeth nouriſh charitie.

Many thinges obſerued in the old lawe, which be not obſerued nowe.

Many thinges vnlawful in the old law, which be lawful now.

How Chriſt did looſe and not looſe the lawe.

The lawe is geuen by Moſes, and the truth by Chriſt. Chriſt came not to vnloſe the lawe and the Prophetes, but to fulfill them. But yet many things were lawful & might haue bene obſerued in the time of the law, whych in ẏ tyme of grace muſt not be obſerued. And many things wer vnlawful to them that were vnder the law, which in the time of grace are lawful inough. After what ſort then he did not looſe the lawe, but did fulfill it, it is neceſſary to declare, for thoſe thyngs which hereafter muſt be ſayd. For amongeſt Chriſtians, many things are iudged to be lawfull, becauſe in the former teſtament in the law, they were lawfull: and yet they be expreſly contrary to Chriſtes Goſpell. But the authors of ſuch thinges doe argue and reaſon thus: Chriſt came not to looſe the law of the prophets. Now after what ſort he did not vnloſe them, it is manifeſt by the holy ſcripture: that the law geuen by Moſes, was written in tables of ſtone, to declare the hardnes of ẏ peoples hart towards the loue of God, or of Chriſt. But Chriſt hath wrytten his law in the harts and in the minds of his, that is to ſay, the law of perfect loue of God & of Chriſt. which law whoſoeuer obſerueth, he doth obſerue the law of Moyſes, & doth much greater works of perfection, then were the works of ẏ law. Thus therefore were the morals of the old law fulfilled in the law of the charitie of Chriſt, and not vnlooſed: becauſe they are much more perfectly obſerued, then of the Iewes. This I ſay, if the Chriſtians doe obſerue the commandements of Chriſt in ſuch ſorte, as he commanded the ſame to be obſerued. Chriſt hath fulfilled the lawes morall of the old teſtament, becauſe that the morals and iudicials were ordained, that one perſon ſhould not do iniury to an other, & that euery man ſhould haue paid him that is hys. Now, they that are in charity, wil do no iniury to others, neither do they take other mens goodes away from them. Nay it ſeeketh not her owne things. For charitie ſeeketh not the things that be her owne. wherfore, much leſſe by a ſtronger reaſon it ought not to ſeke for other mens goods. And whē as the iudicials & morals were ordained: Chriſt did not by ỹ workes of the law iuſtifie the beleuers in him, but by grace iuſtified them frō their ſins. And ſo did Chriſt fulfill that by grace, that the lawe could not by iuſtice.

Free iuſtification, by fayth onely.

Grace, that is free fauour, mercy, & goodnes of God.

Paule to the Romaines declareth in a godly diſcourſe, and to the Galath. likewiſe: that none ſhall be iuſtified by the workes of the lawe, but by grace, in the faith of Ieſu Chriſt. As for the morals & ceremonies of the lawe, as circumcicion, ſacrifices for offence and for ſinnes, firſt fruites, tenthes, vowes, diuers ſortes of waſhings, the ſprinkling of bloud, the ſprinkling of aſhes, abſtaining from vnclean meats whych are ordeined for the ſanctifying and clenſing of the people frō ſinne, no nor yet the praiers of the prieſts, neither the preachings of the prophets, could clenſe a man from his ſin. For death raigned euen from Adam to Moiſes, and ſinne from Moiſes to Chriſt, as Paule declareth to the Romaines in the 5. chapter. But Chriſt, willing to haue mercy, and not ſacrifice, being a Prieſt for euer after the order of Melchiſedech, & an high Prieſt of good things to come: did neither by the bloud of goats or calues but by his owne bloud enter in once vnto the holy places, when as euerlaſting redemption was founde: neither did Ieſus enter into the holy places that were made wyth handes, which are the examples of true thynges, but into the very heauen, ỹ now he may appeare before the countenaunce of God for vs. Nor yet he did ſo, ỹ he ſhould offer vp himſelfe oftentimes, as the high Byſhop entred into the holy place euery yeere w ſtraunge bloud (for otherwiſe he muſt nedes haue ſuffred oftentimes ſithens ỹ beginning of the world) but now in the latter end of the world hath he once appeared by his owne ſacrifice, for the deſtruction of ſinne. And like as it is decreed for men once to die, and after that commeth iudgement: euen ſo was Chriſt once offred vp to cōſume away the ſinnes of many. The ſecond time ſhall hee appeare without ſinne, to the ſaluation of ſuch as looke for him. For the law hauing a ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image or ſubſtaunce it ſelfe of the things: can neuer, by thoſe ſacrifices which they offer (of one ſelfe ſame ſort continually yere by yere) make them perfect that come vnto her. Otherwiſe men would leaue of offring becauſe that thoſe worſhyps being once clenſed, ſhould haue no more pricke of conſcience for ſinne afterwardes. But in them is their remembraunce made of ſinnes euery yere. For it is impoſſible, that by the bloud of goats & bulles, ſinnes ſhould be taken away. wherfore, he entring into ỹ world, doth ſay, as for ſacrifice and offring thou woldſt not haue, but a body haſt thou framed vnto mee. And ſacrifices for ſinne haue not pleaſed thee, then ſaid I, behold I come. In the head or principall part of the booke it is wrytten of me, that I ſhould do thy wil, O God. wherfore he ſaid before, that ſacrifices, oblations and burnt offerings, and that for ſinne thou wouldeſt not haue: neyther were thoſe thyngs pleaſāt to thee whych are offred according to the law: then ſayd I, behold I come, that I may do thy will O God: He taketh away the firſt, that he may ſtabliſh that that folowed. In whych will, we are ſanctified and made holy by the offering vp of the body of Ieſus Chriſt, ones. And verely euery Prieſt, is ready euery day miniſtring, & oftentimes offring the ſelf ſame ſacrifices, which neuer can take away ſinnes. But this man offering one ſacrifice for ſinnes, doth for euer and euer ſit at Gods right hād, looking for the reſt to come till that hys enemies be placed to be his footeſtoole. For with one offering hath hee for euer made perfect thoſe that be ſanctified. By which thinges it plainly appeareth, ỹ Chriſt by one offring hath clenſed hys from their ſinnes: who could not be clenſed from the ſame, by all the ceremonies of the law, and ſo did fulfill that which the prieſthoode of the law could not. wherfore onely the morals and iudicials he fulfilled by the lawe of charitie, and by grace: and the ceremonials, by one offering vp of hys body in the aultar of the croſſe. And ſo it is plaine, that Chriſt fulfilled the whole lawe.

Hebrewes 7.

Where the prieſthood is remoued, there alſo the law is remoued.

wherfore ſithens that the holy things of the law, were a ſhadowe of thoſe things that were to come in the time of grace: it were meete that all thoſe thynges ſhould vtterly ceaſe amongeſt Chriſtians, which ſhould either be againſt charity, or the grace of Chriſt. Although in the time of the lawe, they were lawfull, and not vtterly contrary to it, but were figures of perfections in Chriſtes faith: yet it were meete that they ſhould ceaſe at ỹ comming of the perfection whych they did prefigurate: as circumciſion, the eating of the paſchal lambe, and other ceremonial points of the law. wherupon alſo Paul to the Hebrues the 7. chapter ſayeth thus. If therfore the making vp of ỹ perfection of all was by the Leuiticall prieſthode (for the people receiued the law vnder hym) why was it neceſſary beſides, that an other Prieſt ſhould riſe vp after the order of Melchiſedech, & not be called after the order of Aaron? For whē the Prieſthode is remoued, it muſt needes be, that the lawe alſo be remoued. For he, in whom theſe things are ſpokē, is of an other tribe, of which, none ſtoode preſent at the aulter. Becauſe it is manifeſt that our Lorde had hys offſpring of Iuda: in which tribe Moiſes ſpake nothing of the Prieſts. And beſides this, it is manifeſt: if according to the order of Melchiſedech there doo riſe vp an other Prieſt, which was not made according to the law of the carnal commaundement, but according to the power of the life that cannot be loſed. For thus he beareth witnes, that thou art a prieſt for euer, after the order of Melchiſedech: ſo that, the cōmandement, that went before, is diſalowed for the weakenes & vnprofitableneſſe thereof. For the lawe hath brought no body to perfection. By which things it appeareth that Chriſt making an end of the prieſthode of Aaron, doth alſo make vp a full end of the law belonging to that Prieſthode. wherupon I maruell ỹ your learned men doe ſay, that Chriſten folkes are bound to this ſmall ceremonie of the paiment of tithes, and care nothing at all for other as wel the great as the ſmall ceremonies of the lawe.

* Bounde as a matter of religion, or as by the neceſſitie of Gods law & not mans: but now tithes ſtand by mās law, and not by the old law.

The cauſe ceaſing, the effect alſo ceaſeth.

He meaneth that neceſſitie of tithes, which ſtandeth by the neceſſitie of the old law to ceaſe.

It is plaine, that the tithes were geuen to the ſonnes of Leui, for their ſeruing in the tabernacle & in the temple of the Lord, as the firſt fruites were geuen to the prieſtes, and alſo part of the ſacrifices, & ſo were the vowes for their miniſtery, as it appeareth in the booke of Numbers the 22. chapter. But forasmuch as the labor of thoſe ſacrifices did ceaſe at the comming of Chriſt: howe ſhould thoſe thyngs be demaunded, which were ordained for that labour? And ſeeing that the firſt fruits were not demaunded of Chriſtians, which firſt fruits were then rather and ſoner demanded then the tithes: why muſt the tithes be demanded, except it be therefore peraduenture becauſe that the tythes be more worth in value then be the firſt fruites?

If tithes be claymed by force of the olde law, by the ſame law prieſtes are bounde to haue no temporalties.

Secondly, why are the lay people boūd to the paiment of tithes, more then the Leuites and the prieſts were to the not hauing of poſſeſſions of realties & Lordſhips amongſt their brethren, ſeeing ỹ the ſelfe ſame lawe in the ſelfe ſame place (where he ſayeth that the tithes ought to be geuen to Leuites) ſayth alſo to the Leuites, You ſhall be contented with the offering of the tithes, and haue none other thyng amongſt your brethren. wherefore ſeeing that the Prieſtes be bounde, to the not hauing of temporall Lordſhippes: how are the lay people boūd, by that law (of God he meaneth, and not of man) to the paiment of tithes?

He proueth not cōtrary, but that tythes be due, by the poſitiue law of man: Although not by the ceremoniall law of Moſes.

Circumciſiō ceaſeth: Ergo, the ceremonies doe ceaſe.

Galat.4.

Chriſtiā libertie from the bondage of the lawe.

Thirdly, as touching circumciſion, which is one of the greater ceremonies of the lawe, and was geuen before the law, & was an vniuerſall ceremonie, concerning the couenant betwene God & hys people, and was ſo much regarded in the law, that thereof it was ſayde: The ſoule, whoſe fleſh ſhall not be circumciſed in the foreſkin, ſhall pearyſh from amongeſt his people: yet did thys ceremonie vtterly ceaſe at the comming of Chriſte, although that certayne of the Iewes did ſay in the primatiue Church, that the Chriſtians muſt needes kepe the commandement of circumciſion with the faith: whom Paule reproueth wryting thus to the Galathians the 4. chapter, where he ſpeaketh of the children of the bondwoman & of the freewoman, which do ſignify the two Teſtaments. But we (O brethren) are the children of the promiſe after Iſaac, but like as at that time he that was borne after the fleſh, did perſecute hym, which was after the ſpirit: euen ſo it is now alſo. But what ſaith the ſcripture? Throw out the bondwoman and her ſonne. The ſonne of the bondwoman, ſhall not be heire wyth the ſonne of the freewoman. wherefore brethrē, we are not the ſonnes of the bondwoman, but of the free. Stād ye ſtedfaſt in the liberty, wherwith Chriſt hath deliuered you, and be not ye holden againe vnder the yoke of ſlauery. Behold I Paule ſay vnto you, if you be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall nothing profite you. For I teſtifie againe to euery man that circumciſeth hymſelfe, that hee is bounde to keepe all the whole law. Ye are vtterly voide of Chriſt: whoſoeuer will be iuſtified in the law, are fallen from grace.

Bounde in one thing (hee meaneth) bound in all.

Either boūd to all, or to none.

*Here hee expreſſeth his meaning plainly.

In like maner, we may reaſon, if we be bounde to tything, we are debters, & bound to keepe al the whole law. For to ſay that men are bound to one ceremony of the law, & not to the others, is no reaſonable ſaying. Either therefore we are bound to them all, or to none. Alſo, that by the ſame * olde lawe, men are not bound to pay tithes, it may be ſhewed by many reaſons, which we nede not any more to multiply & encreaſe, becauſe the things that be ſayd, are ſufficient. whereupon ſome do ſay, that by the Goſpell we are bound to pay tithes, becauſe Chriſt ſaide to the Phariſies, ſies, Math.23.chapter: woe be you Scribes and Phariſies, whych pay your tithe of Mint, of Anets ſeede, and of comminand leaue iudgement, mercy, and trueth vndone, being the weightier things of the lawe, both ſhuld ye haue done theſe things, and alſo not haue left the other vndone. O ye blinde guides, that ſtraine out a gnat, and ſwallowe vp a camell. Thys worde ſoundeth not as a commaundement or manner of bidding, wherby Chriſt did command tithes to be geuen: but it is a worde of diſalowing the hypocriſie of the Phariſies, who of couetouſneſſe dyd rather weigh and eſteeme tithes, becauſe of their owne ſingulare commoditie, rather then other great and weighty commaundements of the lawe. And me ſeemeth that our men are in the ſame predicament of the Phariſies, which doe leaue of al ẏ ceremonies of ẏ old law, keping onely the cōmandement of tything. It is manifeſt and plaine inoughe by the premiſſes, and by other places of the ſcripture, that Chriſt was a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech, of the tribe of Iuda, not of the tribe of Leuie: who gaue no newe commaundement of tything of any thing to him and to hys prieſts whome he would place after him: but whē hys Apoſtles ſayd to him: Behold, we leaue all things & haue followed thee, what then ſhall we haue, hee did not aunſwere them thus: Tithes ſhall be paide you, neither dyd he promiſe them a temporall, but an euerlaſting rewarde in heauen. For hee, both for foode, and alſo apparell taught his diſciples not to be carefull. Be ye not carefull for your life, what ye ſhall eate, or for your body what ye ſhall put on. Is not the life of man more worth then the meate? and the body more worth then apparell? Beholde ye the birds of heauen, whych do not ſow, nor reape, neither yet lay vp in barnes, and yet your heauēly father feedeth them. And as for apparell, why ſhould you be carefull? Conſider the lillies of the field, how they grow, they labour not, neither do they ſpinne. &c. In concluſion he ſayth, be not yee carefull, ſaying, what ſhall we eate, or what ſhal we drinke, or wherwithall ſhall we be couered? For all theſe things doe the Gentiles ſeeke after. For your father knoweth, ẏ you haue neede of all theſe things. Firſt therefore ſeeke yee for the kingdome of God and the righteouſnes therof, and all theſe things ſhall be caſt vnto you. And Paule ryght well remembring this doctrine, inſtructeth Timothe and ſayth thus. But we hauing foode and wherewithall to be couered, let vs therewyth be contented. And as the Acts of the Apoſtles doe declare: In the firſt conuerſion of the Iewes at Ieruſalem, they had all thinges common, and to euery one was diuiſion made, as nede required. Neither did the prieſtes make the tithes theyr owne proper goodes. For like as it was not meete that the lay people being conuerted, ſhould haue proprietie of goods: euen ſo neither that prieſts ſhould haue proprietie of tithes. So that if ẏ prieſts ſtarted backe from feruent charitie in chalenging to themſelues the proprietie of tithes: it is no meruaile of departing backward (as do the prieſts, frō the perfection of charitie) alſo of the laitie to be willing to appropriate to themſelues the ix. partes remayning after tithes. wherfore, ſeeing that neither Chriſt, nor any of the Apoſtles, commanded to pay tithes: it is manifeſt and plaine, neither by the lawe of Moſes, nor by Chriſtes lawe, Chriſten people are bounde to pay the tithes: but by the tradition of men, they are bounde.

The one is diſalowed, the other is not commaunded.

Math.6.

1.Tim.6.

Tythes not required in the primitiue church.

By the premiſſes nowe it is plaine, that Chriſt did not vndo the law, but by grace did fulfil it. Notwithſtanding, in the lawe many thynges were lawfull, which in the time of grace are forbydden, and many thynges were then vnlawfull, which now are lawfull inough. For nothing that is contrary to charitie, is lawfull to a Chriſtian.

Tythes due to be payde by the poſitiue lawe of men.

Let vs now heare what maner of commaundements Chriſt hath geuen vs in the Goſpel, without the obſeruation of which commaundements, charitie ſhal not perfectly be kept. By which cōmandements, Chriſt did not vndo the olde lawe, but did fulfill it. By the obſeruation alſo of which commaundements, he teacheth vs to paſſe and goe beyond the righteouſnes of the Scribes & Phariſes, who moſt perfectly thought themſelues to keepe the law. This abſolute and perfect righteouſnes, which we are bound to haue beyonde the righteouſneſſe of the Phariſies and the Scribes, he teacheth in Math.5.6.and 7.chap. whych being heard, and compared to the traditiōs made and commaunded by the Romane prelates: it ſhall plainly appere, whether they be contrary or no. Chriſt therefore ſayeth, You haue heard, that it was ſayd to them of the olde time, Thou ſhalt not kill. For hee that killeth ſhall be guiltie of iudgemēt. But I ſay vnto you, that euery one that is angry with hys brother, ſhall be in danger of iudgement. In thys he doeth teach, that we ought not to be angrie wyth our brethren: not that he would vndoe this old commaundement (thou ſhalt not kil) but that the ſame ſhould be the more perfectly obſerued. Againe he ſayth. You haue heard that it was ſayd, thou ſhalt loue thy frend, and hate thyne enemy: But I ſay vnto you, Loue your enemies, doe well to them that hate you, pray for them that perſecute & ſlander you, that you may be the children of your father which is in heauen: which maketh his ſunne to ariſe vppon the good and the euill people, and raineth vppon the iuſt and vniuſt. For if you loue them which loue you, what reward ſhall you haue? Doe not the Publicanes thus? And if you ſhall ſalute your brethren onely, what great thing doe ye? Do not the heathen thus alſo? Be you therefore perfect, as alſo your heauenly father is perfect.

The doctrine of Chriſt, whether it be contrary to the traditions of the pope or not. Math.5.

Againe Chriſt ſayeth, you haue heard that it is ſaid: an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth: but I ſay vnto you, ſee that you reſiſt not euill. But if any man ſhall ſtrike you vppon the right cheeke, geue hym the other to. And to hym that will ſtriue with thee for thy coate in iudgement, let hym haue thy cloke alſo. And whoſoeuer ſhall conſtraine thee one mile, goe with him alſo two other. He ẏ asketh of thee geue him: and hee that will borrowe of thee, turne not thy ſelfe from him.

The doctrine of Chriſt and of the P.compared

By theſe thinges it may plainely appeare, howe that Chriſt the king of peace, the Sauiour of mankynde, who came to ſaue and not to deſtroy, who gaue a law of charity to be obſerued of his faithfull people: hath taught vs not to be angry, not to hate our enemies, not to render euil for euill, nor to reſiſt euill. For all theſe thinges doe foſter and nouriſh peace & charitie, and do procede and come forth of charity, & when they be not kept, charity is looſed, & peace is broken. But the biſhop of Rome approueth and alloweth warres, and ſlaughters of mē in warre, aſwell againſt our enemies, that is, the infidels, as alſo againſt the Chriſtians for temporall goodes. Nowe, theſe things are quite contrary to Chriſtes doctrine, and to charity, and to peace.

In the decrees 23 q.1.cap. Paratus, it is taught, that the precepts of pacience muſt alwayes be retained in purpoſe of the heart, ſo that pacience wͭ beneuolence muſt be kept in the minde ſecrete. But apparantly and manifeſtly, that thing ſhould be done, which ſeemeth to doe good to thoſe, whom we ought to wiſh well vnto. wherein they geue to vnderſtande, that a Chriſtian may freely defend hymſelfe. And for confirmation of thys ſaying, they doe ſay: That Chriſt whē he was ſtroken in the face of the hygh biſhops ſeruaunt, did not fulfill (if we looke vpon the wordes) hys owne commaundement: becauſe he gaue not to the ſmiter the other part, but rather did forbid him, that he ſhould not do it, to double his iniurie. For he ſayd, if I haue ſpoken euill, beare witnes of euill, but if wel, why doeſt thou ſtrike me? I do meruail of this ſaying: for firſt if thoſe commandements of pacience muſt be kept in ſecrete in the minde: and ſeing the body doth worke at the motion of the mind, and is and ought to be moued and ruled by the ſame: It muſt then nedes be, that if pacience be in the mind, it muſt appeare alſo outwardly in the body.

The gloſe of Gratianus vpon the cap. Paratus 23.q.1.diſproued.

Chriſt in aunſwering to his ſtriker, did not breake his rule of patience outwardly.

The precept of Chriſt to turne the other cheek, hath a priuy compariſon: as if ye would ſay, rather be you content to ſuffer two blows, then to reuenge one.

Secondly I meruail that it is ſaid, that Chriſt did not fulfill his owne precept of pacience. For it is manifeſt, that albeit he teaching alwayes as a good ſcholemaſter, thoſe things which were fit for the ſaluation of ſoules, ſpeaking the wholeſom word of inſtruction to the high biſhops ſeruant, ſmiting him vniuſtly: did neither by word forbid an other ſtroke to be geuen on the other cheke, neither did he defend himſelfe bodely from ſtriking on the ſame cheeke: But ſpeaking to him, it is likely ẏ hee gaue him the other check, he meaneth, ẏ he turned not the other cheeke away. For a man tourneth not away from him whome he ſpeaketh to, or whom he informeth, but layeth open before him al his face: Euen ſo do I beleue ẏ Chriſt did, that he might fulfill in very deede that, which before hee had taught in word. Neither yet did Chriſt by his word or by his deede, ſhew any thing of defence, or of bodely reſiſtance.

This article of Brute muſt haue a relation euer to the doctrine of the clergie.

Thirdly, I meruail why wiſe men leauing the plaine & manifeſt doctrine of Chriſt, wherby he teacheth pacience: do ſeeke corners of their imagining, to the intent they may approue fightings and warres. why marke they not after what manner, Chriſt ſpake to Peter ſtriking the hygh Byſhoppes ſeruaunt, ſaying: Put vp thy ſworde into the ſheath, for euery one that ſhall take the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſworde. But in an other caſe we muſt make reſiſtance: which caſe may be ſo righteous, as it is for a mans Lorde & maiſter being a moſt righteous man, and yet ſuffering iniurie of miſchieuous perſons.

The caſe here againe of Chriſt was priuate, and his doctrine is to be vnderſtanded in priuate caſes.

Fourthly, I maruel ſeing that we are bound of charity & by the law of Chriſt to geue our liues for our brethren, how they can allow ſuch maner of diſſentions & reſiſting. For when thy brother ſhall maliciouſly ſtrike thee, thou maiſt be ſure, that he is manifeſtly fallen from charity, into the the ſnare of the deuill. If thou ſhalt keepe pacience, he ſhal be aſhamed of his doing, and thou maiſt bow & bend hym to repentaunce, and take him out from the ſnare of the deuil, and cal him backe againe to charity. If thou reſiſt, and perchaunce by reſiſting doeſt ſtrike againe, his fury ſhalbe the more kindled, & hee being ſtirred vp to greater wrath, peraduenture ſhal either ſlay thee, or thou him. Touching thy ſelf, thou art vncertaine, if thou go about to make reſiſtance, whether thou ſhalt fall from charity, and then ſhalt thou goe backwarde from the perfection of Chriſtes commaundement: Neither doeſt thou knowe but that it may happen thee ſo greatly to be moued, as that by the heate & violence of wrath, thou ſhalt ſlay him. Whereas if thou wouldeſt diſpoſe thy ſelfe to pacience (as Chriſt teacheth) thou ſhouldeſt eaſily auoide all theſe miſchieues, aſwel on the behalfe of thy brother, as alſo of thyne owne parte. Wherefore, the obſeruing of charitie as the precept of pacience is to be obſerued.

Paule being ſtriken, did not breake the rule of Chriſten patience, neither made any bodely reſiſtance.

The fact either of Paul or of any other, doeth not derogate to the doctrine of our Sauiour.

Rom. 12. Rules of Chriſten patience.

Fifthly, I do maruel why that for the alowing of thys corporall reſiſtaunce, he doth ſay in the ſame Chapter: that Paule did not fulfill the precept of the pacience of Chriſt, when as he being ſtroken in the place of iudgement by the cõmandement of the high Prieſt, did ſay, God ſtrike thee, O thou painted wal: Doeſt thou ſit to iudge me according to the law, and doeſt thou cõmand me to be ſtriken againſt the lawe? It is manifeſt that Paule made reſiſtance in nothing, though he ſpake a word of inſtruction to the Prieſt, who againſt the law commanded him to be ſtriken. And if Paul had ouerpaſſed the bounds of pacience, through the grief of the ſtroke: what of that? Muſt the deede of Paules impacience for this cauſe be iuſtified, and the commandement of paciẽce taught by Chriſt, be left vndone for Pauls deede, and corporal reſiſtance be allowed? God forbid. For both Paule and Peter might erre. But in the doctrine of Chriſt there may be found no errour. Wherefore, we muſt geue more credence & beliefe to Chriſtes ſayings, then to any liuing mans doings. Wherfore, although Paule had reſiſted, which I do not perceiue in that Scripture: it followeth not therof, that corporall reſiſtance muſt be approued, which is of Chriſt expreſly forbidden. I much maruel that alwayes they ſeeke corners and ſhadowes to iuſtifie their deedes. Why doe they not marke what great thyngs Paule reciteth hymſelfe to haue ſuffered for Chriſt? And where I pray you haue they found, that hee after his conuerſion, ſtroke any man that did hurt him? Or where doe they finde that he in expreſſe word doth teach ſuch a kinde of corporal reſiſtance? But as touching pacience, he ſayth in plaine words to the Romanes: Be not wiſe in your owne conceits: Render ill for ill to no body: prouiding good things not onely before God, but alſo before all men, if it be poſsible: Be at peace with all folkes as much as in you lieth: not defending your ſelues, my moſt dearely beloued, but geue you place vnto anger. For it is wrytten, vengeance is mine, & I will recompence them, ſayth the Lorde. But if thine enemie ſhalbe an hungred, geue hym meate. If he be a thirſt, geue him drinke For thus doing, thou ſhalt heape coales of fire vpon his head. Be not ouercomen of euill, but ouercome thou euill with good.

1. Cor. 5.

He meaneth ſuch warres of Chriſtiãs, as the pope aloweth: riſing rather of priuate reuenge of princes, for worldly glory or affection, thẽ for any publike neceſſitie.

Ephe 6. Corporall wars in the old Teſtament, be figures of the ſpirituall warres in the new Teſtament, againſt ſin, and the deuill.

To the Corinthians the 5. as touching iudgement and contention, whych are matters of leſſe weyght then are fightings, thus he wryteth: Nowe verely there is great faulte in you, that you be at lawe amongſt your ſelues. Why rather take yee not wrong? why rather ſuffer yee not deceit? And generally in all his Epiſtles he teacheth, that pacience ſhuld be kept, and not corporall reſiſtance by fighting, becauſe charitie is pacient, it is curteous, it ſuffereth all things. I maruaile howe they iuſtifie and make good the warres by Chriſtians, ſauing onely the warres againſt the deuill and ſinne. For ſeeing that it is plaine, that thoſe things whych were in the olde Teſtament, were figures of things to be done in the new Teſtament: Therfore we muſt needes ſay, that the corporall warres being then done, were figures of the Chriſtian warres againſt ſinne and the deuill, for the heauenly countrey, whych is our inheritance. It is plain that it was wrytten thus of Chriſt. The mighty Lord, and of great power in battaile, hath girded himſelfe in force and manlyneſſe to the warre: and he came not to ſende peace into the earth, but warre. In thys warre ought Chriſtian people to be ſouldiours according to that manner whych Paule teacheth to the Epheſians the laſt. Put vpon you the armour of God, that you may be able to ſtande againſt the deceites of the deuill. For wee haue not to wraſtle againſt fleſh and bloude, but againſt princes & poteſtates, againſt the rulers of theſe darknes of the world, againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſe in heauenly things, whyche are the high places. Wherefore take yee the armour of God, that yee may be able to reſiſt in the euil day, and to ſtand perfectly in al things. Stande you therefore girded about in truth vpon your loynes, hauing put vppon you the breſt plate of righteouſneſſe, and your feete ſhoed in a readineſſe to the Goſpel of peace, in all things taking the ſhield of faith, wherwith you may quẽch all the firy darts of that wicked one. And take vnto you the helmet of ſaluation, and the ſworde of the ſpirite, which is the worde of God.

What be the wars moſt proper to Chriſtians.

All this taketh not away the lawfulnes of warres, in caſe of publike neceſſitie, but onely in priuate caſe for temporall goods.

* Note this word without charitie.

Such kynde of wars, that is, ſuche kinde as be for priuate reuenge of temporall goods.

How Iohn Baptiſt alowed war.

They that be leſſe in the kingdom of heuen, greater then Iohn Baptiſt, expounded.

By theſe thyngs it is plaine, what are the warres of Chriſtians, and what are the weapons of theyr warfare. And becauſe it is manifeſt, that this Teſtament is of greater perfectiõ then the former: we muſt now fight more perfectly then at that time. For nowe ſpiritually, then corporally: nowe for an heauenly euerlaſting inheritance: then for an earthly and temporall: now by pacience, then by reſiſtance. For Chriſt ſayeth, bleſſed are they that ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe, for theirs is the kingdome of heauen. He ſaith not, bleſſed are they that fight for rightcouſnes. How can a man ſay, that they may lawfully make warre, & kill theyr brethren for the temporall goodes, whych peraduenture they vniuſtly occupy, or vniuſtly intende to occupy? For he that killeth an other, to gette theſe goods whych an other body vniuſtly occupieth: doeth loue more the very goodes, then hys owne brother. And then hee falling from charitie, doth kill hymſelfe ſpiritually. If he goe forwarde without * charitie to make warre: then doeth he euill, and to hys owne damnation. Wherefore he doth not lawfully nor iuſtly in proceeding to the damnation of his own ſelfe & his brother, whome though he ſeeme vniuſtly to occupy his goods, yet he doth intend to kil. And what if ſuch kinde of warres were lawfull to the Iewes: thys argueth not, that now they are lawfull to Chriſtians, becauſe that theyr deedes were in a ſhadow of imperfection, but the dedes of Chriſtians in the light of perfection. It was not ſaid vnto them, All people that ſhal take the ſword, ſhal periſh with the ſworde. What if Iohn the Baptiſt, diſallowed corporal fightings, and corporall warfare, at ſuch time as the ſouldiours aſked him ſaying. And what ſhall we do? who ſayth to them, See that you ſtrike no man, neither picke ye quarels againſt any, and be yee contented with your wages. Thys ſaying of Iohn alloweth not corporal warfare amongeſt Chriſtians. For Iohn was of the Prieſts of the olde Teſtament, and vnder the law, neyther to hym it appertayneth to follow the lawe, but to warne the people to the perfect obſeruation of the lawe. For he being likewyſe demaunded of the publicanes what they ſhould doe, ſayde vnto them, Doe no other thyng then is appoynted vnto you. But Chriſt the author of the newe Teſtament and of greater perfection, then was the perfection of the old law, which gaue newe things, as it plainly appeareth by the Goſpel. So that, Chriſtians ought to receiue information of Chriſt, not of Iohn. For of Iohn alſo doth Chriſt ſpeak: Verely I ſay vnto you, there hath not riſen amongeſt the children of women, a greater then Iohn Baptiſt: but hee that is leſſe in the kingdome of heauen, is greater then he. In which ſaying Chriſt ſheweth that thoſe that be leaſt in the kingdome of heauen in the tyme of grace, are placed in greater perfection thẽ was Iohn, which was one of them that were the elders, & he liued alſo in ye time of the law in greater perfection. And whẽ as certain of Iohns diſciples ſayd vnto him, maiſter, he that was beyõd Iordan, to whõ thou gaueſt witneſſe, beholde hee baptiſeth, and all people come vnto him. Iohn anſwered and ſayde: A man cannot take any thing vppon him, vnleſſe it ſhall bee geuen him from aboue. You your ſelues doe beare me recorde, that I ſayde I am not Chriſt, but that I was ſent before hym. He that hath the bride, is the bridegrome, as for the bridegromes frende, who ſtandeth and heareth him: reioyceth wyth greate ioy to heare the voyce of the bridegrome. Thys therefore my ioy is fulfilled: he muſt increaſe, and I muſt bee diminiſhed. Hee that commeth from an hie is aboue all. Hee that is of the earthe is earthy, and ſpeaketh of the earthe: Hee that commeth from heauen, is aboue all folkes: that which hee hath ſeene and heard, the ſame doth he witneſſe, and yet his witneſsing doth no body receiue. But he that receiueth his witneſsing, hath put to his Seale, that God is true. For he whome God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the wordes of God.

By whych things it plainely appeareth, that credence is to be geuen neither to Iohn, nor yet to angell, if he teach any thing that is not agreeable to Chriſtes doctrine. For Chriſt is aboue the Aungels, becauſe that God infinitely paſſeth them in wiſdome. Nowe if Moſes the ſeruaunt of God a miniſter of the old teſtament was ſo much to be beleued, ye nothing could be added, nor yet any thing diminiſhed from the commaundements that were geuen by hym, (for ſo Moſes had ſayd, the thyng that I commaund thee, that do thou onely to the Lorde, neither adde thou any thing, nor diminiſh.) How much more ought we not to adde nor to take away from the commandements geuen by God himſelfe, and alſo the ſonne of God? In the primitiue Churche becauſe the Chriſtians had feruent loue and charity, they obſerued theſe precepts as they were geuẽ: but their feruent charitie

He meaneth of thoſe wars againſt infidels ſtirred vp and procured by the pope vpon blind ſuperſtition, to fight for the holy lande, and not taken by princes in the neceſſary defence of themſelues and of their countrey.

charitie afterward waxing luke warme, they inuented gloſes by drawing the commaundementes of God backe to their own deedes, whiche they purpoſed to iuſtifie and mayntayn, that is to ſay, warres againſt the infidels. But that they by warres ſhould be conuerted to the fayth, is a fact faithleſſe inough: becauſe, that by violence or vnwillingly, no body can beleue in Chriſt nor be made a chriſtian, neither did he come to deſtroy them by battaile, that beleued not in him: for he ſaid to his diſciples, you knowe not what ſpirite you are of. The ſonne of man came not to deſtroy mens liues, but to ſaue them. Then to graunt pardons and forgeuenes of ſinnes, to thoſe that kill the infidels, is to much an infidels fact, ſeducing many people For what greater ſeducing can there be, then to promiſe to a man forgeuenes of ſinnes, and afterwarde the ioye of heauen, for ſetting himſelfe againſt Chriſtes commaundementes in the killing of the Infidels, that would not be conuerted to the fayth: where as Chriſt doth ſay, not euery one that ſayth to me Lord, Lord, ſhal enter into ẏ gidgdome of heauen: but he ẏ doth the will of my father which is in heauen, this perſon ſhall enter into the kingdome of heauen. Now the will of the father is, that we ſhould beleue in his onely ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, and that we would obey him by obſeruing of thoſe thinges which he himſelfe hath commaunded. Wherefore Chriſtes preceptes of pacience muſt be fulfilled. Warres, fightinges, and contentions muſt be left, becauſe they are contrary to charitie.

Obiection.

But peraduenture ſome man wil thus reaſon againſt Chriſt: The ſaintes by whome God hath wrought myracles, do allow warres as well againſt the faithfull people, as alſo againſt the infidels. And the holy kings were warriours, for whoſe ſakes alſo miracles haue bene ſhewed, as well in theyr death as alſo in their life, yea in the very time wherin they were a warfare. Wherfore it ſemeth that their factes were good and lawfull. For otherwiſe, God would not haue done miracles for them.

Aunſwere. Legibus agendum non exemplis. True miracles here of holy men be not diſproued, but ſpeaking vniuerſally, the ſtable doctrine and worde of God, is the ſure rule for men to followe.

To this agayne I ſay, that we for no miracles muſt do contrary to the doctrine of Chriſt. For in it can there be no errour, but in myracles there oftentimes chaunceth error as it is plaine as well by the old as by the new teſtament: God forbid then, that a Chriſtian ſhould for deceiuable miracles, depart from the infallible doctrine of Chriſt. In Exodus the 7. chapter it is manifeſt, howe that the wicked wiſe men of the Egiptians, through the inchauntments of Egipt, and certayne ſecret workinges, threw theyr wands vpon the earth, which were turned into Dragons, euē as Aaron before time in ẏ preſēce of Pharao threw his wand vpon the earth: which by the power of God was turned into a ſerpent. In the third of the kinges the 22. chap. Micheas did ſee the Lord ſitting vpon his throne, and all the hoſte of heauen ſtanding about him on the right hand, and on the left. And the Lord ſayd, who ſhall deceaue Achab ẏ king of Iſrael, that he may go vp and be ſlayn in Ramoth Gilaad. And one ſayd this way, and an other otherwiſe: now, there went forth a ſpirit, and ſtood before the Lord & ſaid, I will deceiue him. To whō the Lord ſpake: by what meanes? And he ſayd, I will go forth, and be a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all his prophetes. And the Lord ſayd thou ſhall deceiue him and preuaile, go thy wayes forth, and do euen ſo. Thus alſo is it written in Deuteronomium. If there ſhall ariſe a Prophet amongeſt you, or one that ſhall ſay hee hath ſeene a dreame, and ſhall foretell a ſigne and a wonder: & if that ſhall come to paſſe that he hath ſpoken, and he ſhall ſay vnto thee: Let vs go and follow ſtraunge Goddes (whom thou knoweſt not) and let vs ſerue them: thou ſhalt not harken vnto the wordes of that Prophet or dreamer, for the Lord your God tempteth you, to make it knowen whether ye loue him or no, with all your hart, and with all your ſoule.

In the Apocalips the 13. chap. Iohn ſaw a beaſt aſcending vp out of the earth and it had two hornes like a lamb but he ſpake like the Dragon, and he did all that the firſt beaſt could do before him: and he cauſed the earth and the inhabitantes therof to worſhip the firſt beaſt, whoſe deadly wound was healed, and did great wonders ſo that he made fire come downe from heauen on the earth, in ẏ ſight of men, and deceiued thē that dwell on ẏ earth, by meanes of the ſignes which were permitted to him to do in ẏ ſight of the beaſt.

Myracles are to be tryed.

By theſe thinges it is moſt manifeſt and playne, that in miracles this manifold errour oftentimes happeneth through the working of the deuill, to deceiue the people withal. Wherfore, we ought not for the working of miracles, to depart from the commaundements of God: I woulde to God ẏ they which put confidence in miracles would geue heed vnto the word of Chriſt, in the 7. chap. of Math. thus ſpeaking: Many ſhall ſay vnto me in that day, Lord, Lord haue we not in thy name prophecied? and in thy name caſt out deuils? and in thy name done many great workes? &c. I wil profeſſe vnto them, I neuer knew you, depart from me all ye which worke iniquitie.

Math. 7.

The ſeruauntes of Chriſt diſcerned by working not of miracles, but of vertues.

By this ſaying it is moſt manifeſt, that the ſeruauntes of Chriſt are not diſcerned by the working of miracles, but by the working of vertues, departing from iniquitie, and obeying the cōmaundements of God. Wherfore it is wōderful, that any in this life dare preſume to preuent the day of the iudgement of God, to iudge by meanes of miracles, that ſome are Saints whom men ought to worſhip, whō peraduenture God will in the laſt iudgement condemne, ſaying: depart from me all ye which worke iniquitie. If any man could here on earth iudge ſinners to be condemned, then if this iudgement were certayne, Chriſt ſhoulde not iudge the 2. tyme, and what ſoeuer ſuch iudges bynde in earth: the ſame ought to be bound in heauen. But if ſuch a iudgement be vncertayne, then it is perillous and full of deceit, when as by it men on earth may in ſteede of ſaintes worſhip ſuche as are damned with the fellowſhip of the deuils, and in prayer require their ayde, who euen like as the deuils their companions are more ready and more of might to euill then to good, more to hurt then to profite. I wonder they marke not what Chriſt ſayd, when his kinſwoman came vnto him, deſiring and requiring ſomething of him, and ſaying: Commaund that theſe my two ſonnes may ſit, one vpon thy right hand and the other vpon thy left hand, in thy kingdome. But Ieſus aunſwering, ſayd: Ye know not what ye aſke, can ye drinke of the cup whiche I ſhall drink of? they ſayd vnto him, we can. He ſayd vnto them. Of my cupp in deede ye ſhall drinke, but to ſit at my right hand or at my left, it is not mine to geue, but vnto whom it is prepared for, of my father. Chriſt, being equall vnto the father according to his Godhead, exceeding all maner of men, according to his manhode, namely in goodnes and wiſdome, ſayde, to ſit my right hande, or at my left, is not mine to geue but vnto whome it is prepared of my father. If it were none of his to geue to ſit at the right hand, or at the left &c. How then is it in the power of anye ſinnefull man to geue vnto any man, a ſeate eyther on the right hand, or on the left in the kingdome of God? whiche ſinnefull man knoweth not whether ſuche haue anye ſeate prepared for thē of the father in his kingdome. They much extoll themſelues which exerciſe this iudicial power in geuing iudgement: that there are ſome ſayntes, which ought to be honoured of men, by reaſon of ẏ euidency of dreames or of deceitfull miracles, of which men they are ignoraunt whether God in hys iudgement will condemne them or not together with the deuils for euer to be tormented. Let them beware, for the vnfallible truth ſayth, that euery one that exalteth himſelfe ſhall be brought low.

Men or women are not raſhly to be iudged Saintes.

This propoſitiō of Walter Bruit, concerning the war of Chriſtians not to be lawfull, is not to bee taken vniuerſally, but in particular caſe as he meaneth, which is this: that ſuch wars alowed of the pope, not for the neceſſary defence of publike peace, libertie and ſafegard of our countries, or againſt publike iniuries offered: but onely to go & kill the infidels, becauſe they beleeue not hauing no other cauſe: thoſe warres of the pope hee lyketh not.

By theſe thinges is gathered, that the warres of Chriſtians are not lawfull, for that by the doctrine and life of Chriſt they are prohibited, by reaſon of the euidency of the deceitfull miracles of thoſe, whiche haue made warres amongeſt the Chriſtians, as well agaynſt the Chriſtians, as alſo agaynſt the infidels. Becauſe Chriſt could not erre in his doctrine for as much as he was God: And foraſmuch as heauen and earth ſhall paſſe awaye, but the wordes of Chriſt ſhall not paſſe away. He therefore: whiche eſtabliſheth his lawes, allowing warres and the ſlaughter of mē in the warre, as well of Chriſtians, as of Infidels, doth he not iuſtifie thoſe thinges which are contrary vnto the goſpell & law of Chriſt? Therefore in this he is againſt chriſt: and therfore Antichriſt: ſeducing the people, making men beleeue that to be lawfull & meritorious vnto them, which is expreſſedly prohibited by Chriſt.

❡ And thus much concerning the firſt parte, touching peace and warre, wherin he declareth Chriſt and the pope to be contrary, that is, the one to be geuen al to peace, the other all to warre, and ſo to proue in concluſion the Pope to be Antichriſt. where in the meane time thou muſt vnderſtand (gentle reader) his meaning rightly: not that hee ſo thinketh, no kind of warres among yͤ Chriſtiās in any caſe to be lawful, for he himſelf before hath opēly proteſted the contrary. But that his purpoſe is to proue, yͭ Pope in all his doings & teachings, more to be addicted to warre, thē to peace, yea in ſuch caſes, wher is no neceſſity of war. And therin proueth he yͭ Pope to be contrary to Chriſt, yͭ is to be Antichriſt. Now he proceedeth further to yͤ ſecond part which is of mercy.

Mercy and pitie commended among Chriſtians.

In the which part he ſheweth how Chriſt teacheth vs to be merciful, becauſe mercye (as he ſayth) proceedeth frō charity, and nouriſheth it. In which doctrine of mercye, he breaketh not yͤ law of righteouſnes, for he himſelf by mercy hath clenſed vs from our ſinnes, from which we coulde not by the righteouſnes of the law, be clenſed. But whom he hath made cleane by mercye, vndoubtedly it behoueth thoſe ſame to be alſo merciful. For in yͤ v. chapiter of Mathew, he ſayth: Bleſſed are the merciful, for they ſhall obtaine mercy. And againe in yͤ 6. of Mathew: If ye forgeue vnto men their ſinnes, your father will forgeue vnto you your ſinnes. And againe in the vij. chapter of Mathewe: Iudge not, & ye ſhal not be iudged, condemne not, and ye ſhal not be condemned, & with what meaſure ye meaſure, with the ſame ſhal it be meaſured vnto you againe. In the xviij. chap. of Mathew, Peter aſked the lord, ſaying: Lord how often ſhal my brother ſinne agaynſt me, and I ſhall forgeue him, ſeuen times? Ieſus ſayd vnto him: I ſay not vnto thee ſeuen times, but ſeuentie times ſeuen tymes. Therefore is the kingdome of heauen likened vnto a certaine king, which would take accōpt of his ſeruants. And when he had begun to reckē, one was brought vnto hym which ought him tenne thouſand talents: And becauſe he had nothing wherewithal to pay, his maiſter commaūded him to be ſolde, and his wife and his children, and all that he had, and the debt to be payd. The ſeruaunt therefore fell downe and beſought him, ſaying: haue pacience with me, and I wil pay thee all. And the Lord had pity on that ſeruant, and looſed him, and forgaue him the debt. But when the ſeruant was departed, he found one of his fellow ſeruaunts, which ought him an hundred pence, and he layed handes on him, and tooke him by the throte, ſaying: pay me that thou oweſt, and his fellowe fell downe, and beſought him, ſaying: Haue pacience with me, and I will pay thee all. But he would not, but went and caſt hym into priſon, till he ſhoulde pay the debt. And when his other fellowes ſaw the things that were done, they were very ſorye, and came & declared vnto their maiſter all yͭ was done: Then his maiſter called him, and ſaid vnto him: O thou vngratious ſeruant, I forgaue thee al yͤ debt when thou deſiredſt mee: Oughteſt thou not then alſo to haue ſuch pity on thy felow, euē as I had pity on thee? And his lord was wroth, and deliuered him vnto the Iaylers, till he ſhould pay all that was due vnto him. So likewiſe ſhall my heauēly father do vnto you, except ye forgeue from your hartes eche one to his brother their treſpaſſes.

Iohn.8.

By this doctrine it is moſt plaine and manifeſt that euery Chriſtiā ought to be mercifull vnto his brother, how often ſoeuer he offendeth againſt him. Becauſe we ſo often as we offend, do aſke mercy of God. wherfore, for aſmuch as our offence agaynſt God is farre more grieuous then any offence of our brother agaynſt vs: it is playne, that it behoueth vs to be mercifull vnto our brethren, if we wil haue mercy at Gods hand. But contrary to this doctrine of mercy, The Romiſh biſhop maketh & confirmeth many lawes, which puniſhe offenders, euen vnto the death. As it is plaine by yͤ proceſſe of yͤ decrees. Diſtin. 23. queſt. 5. It is declared and determined, that to kill men ex officio, that is, hauing authority and power ſo to do, is not ſinne. And againe: the ſouldiour which is obedient vnto yͤ higher power, and ſo killeth a man, is not guilty of murther. And againe, he is the miniſter of the Lord, which ſmiteth yͤ euill in that they are euill and killeth thē. And many other ſuch like thinges are throughout the whole proceſſe of yͤ queſtion determined. That for certayne kindes of ſinnes men ought by the rigour of the law, to be puniſhed euen vnto death: But the foundation of their ſaying, they tooke out of the olde law, in which for diuers tranſgreſſions were appointed diuers puniſhmentes. It is very much wōderful vnto me, why that wyſe men being the authors & makers of lawes, do alwayes for the foundation of their ſayings, looke vpon the ſhadow of the lawe, and not the light of the goſpel of Ieſus Chriſt, for they geue not heede vnto yͤ figure of perfection, nor yet vnto the perfection figured. Is it not written in yͤ 3. of Iohn: God ſent not his ſonne into the world to iudge the world, but to ſaue yͤ world by him. In Iohn the 8. chap. The ſcribes and phariſeis bring in a woman taken in adultery, and ſet her in the middeſt, and ſayd vnto Chriſt: Maiſter euen nowe this woman was taken in adultery. But in the lawe, Moiſes hath cōmaunded vs to ſtone ſuch. what ſayeſt thou therfore? This they ſayd to tempt him, that they might accuſe him. But Ieſus ſtouped downe, and with his finger wrote on the ground. And while they continued aſking him: he lift himſelfe vp, and ſayd vnto them, let him that is among you without ſinne, caſt the firſt ſtone at her. And agayne he ſtouped and wrote on the ground. And when they heard it, the went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt: ſo Ieſus was lefte alone, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt. when Ieſus had lift vp himſelfe agayne he ſaid vnto her: where be they which accuſed thee, hath no man condemned thee? She ſayd, no man Lord. And Ieſus ſayd vnto her: Neyther do I condemne thee: Goe thy way and ſinne now no more.

Heere is mēt, & to be vnderſtand, not what publike magiſtrates may doe in caſes of righteouſnes, but what eccleſiaſtical perſons according to the office of their profeſſion ſhould doe, in not reuenging by death, as they doe by offices.

Whether the iudiciall law of Moiſes, fullye (now after the cōming of Chriſt) ſtandeth in force, or not.

The law of Moſes of all lawes moſt iuſteſt.

It is manifeſt by yͤ ſcriptures, yͭ Chriſt was promiſed he ſhould be king of the Iews, & vnto yͤ kings pertained the iudgements of yͤ law: but becauſe he came not to iudge ſinners according to the rigor of the law, but came according to grace, to ſaue that which was loſt, in calling yͤ ſinner to repentaunce: it is moſt playne, that in the comming of the law of grace, he would haue the iudgement of the lawe of righteouſnes to ceaſe: for otherwiſe he had dealt vniuſtly with yͤ foreſayd woman, foraſmuch as the witneſſes of her adultery, bare witnes againſt her. wherfore ſeeing yͭ ſame king Chriſt was a iudge, if it had bene his will that the righteouſnes of the law ſhoulde be obſerued, he ought to haue adiudged the woman to death, according as the law commaunded, whiche thing foraſmuch as he did not, it is moſt euident that the iudgementes of the righteouſnes of the law are finiſhed in the cōming of the king, being kyng of the lawe of grace: euen as the ſacrifices of the prieſthoode of Aaron, are finiſhed in the comming of the prieſt, according to the order of Melchiſedech, who hath offred himſelfe vp for our ſinnes. Becauſe as it is before ſayd, neyther the righteouſnes of the law, nor ſacrifices for ſinne, brought any man to perfection. wherfore it was neceſſary that the ſame (by reaſon of their imperfection. And ſeeing amongſt all the lawes of the world, the law of Moſes was moſt iuſteſt, foraſmuch as the author thereof was God, who is the moſt iuſt iudge: and by that law alwaies looke, what maner of iniury one had done vnto an other, contrary to the cōmandement of the law, the like iniury he ſhould receaue for his tranſgreſſion, according to yͤ vpright iudgemēt of the law. As death for death, a blow for a blow, burning for burning, wound for wound, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, and moſt iuſt puniſhmentes were ordayned according co the quantitie of the ſinnes. But if this lawe of righteouſnes be cleane taken away in the comming of the lawe of grace, how then ſhall the lawe of the Gentiles remayne among Chriſtians, which was neuer ſo iuſt? Is not this true, that in them, whiche are conuerted vnto the fayth, there is no diſtinction betweene the Iewe and the Grecian? For both are vnder ſinne, & are iuſtified by grace in the fayth of Chriſt, being called vnto fayth and vnto the perfection of the Goſpell.

*His marvell is not ſo much, why theeues are put to deth: but why the Iudiciall lawe of Moſes in this point is broken, & in other points is ſtraightly kept: Mark his meaning.

If therefore yͤ gētiles cōuerted, are not boūd to play the Iewes, to follow the lawe of the Iewes: why ſhould the Iewes conuerted, follow the lawes of the Gētiles which are not ſo good? * wherfore it is to bee wondred, at, why theues are among chriſtians, for theft put to death where after yͤ lawe of Moyſes they were not put to death. Chriſtiās ſuffer adulterers to liue, Sodomits, and they which curſe father and mother, & many other horrible ſinners: And they which accordinge to the moſt iuſt lawe of God were condemned to death, are not put to death: So wee neyther keepe the law of righteouſnes geuen of God, nor the law of mercy taught by Chriſt.

*Take his meaning wiſely (gentle reader) his mind is not ſo, that no magiſtrate, being not without ſin, may puniſh a tranſgreſſour, but he ſpeaketh againſt ſuch churchmē, who profeſſing the rule of mercy, ſhew no mercy at all, but all riger, by their law, ex officio.

Wherefore the lawe makers and Iudges, do not geue heede vnto the aforeſayd ſentēce of Chriſt vnto yͤ Scribes and Phariſeis, who ſayd: * He which amōgſt you is without ſinne, let him caſt the firſt ſtone at her. what is he that dareth be ſo bolde as to ſay he is without ſinne? Yea and without a grieuous ſinne, when as the tranſgreſſion of yͤ commaundement of God is a greeuous ſinne? And who can ſay that hee neuer tranſgreſſed this commaundement of God. Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbor as thy ſelfe: Or the other cōmaūdement which is of greater force: Thou ſhalt loue the Lord thy God with al thy hart. &c. wherfore thou whatſoeuer thou art that iudgeſt thy brother vnto death, thinkeſt thou that thou ſhalt eſcape the iudgemēt of God, which peraduēture haſt offended more greuouſly thē hath he whom thou iudgeſt? How ſeeſt thou a mote in thy brothers eye, & ſeeſt not a beame in thine owne eye? Knoweſt thou not that with what meaſure thou meaſureſt, yͤ ſame ſhall be meaſured to you agayne? Doth not the ſcripture ſay: Unto me belongeth vengeance, and I will render agayne ſayth yͤ Lord? How can any man ſay that theſe men can with charitie keepe theſe iudgementes of death? who is it that offendeth God, and deſireth of God iuſt iudgement for his offence? He deſireth not iudgement, but mercy. If he deſire mercy for him ſelfe, why deſireth he vengeance for his brother offending? Howe therefore loueth he his brother as himſelfe? Or how doeſt thou ſhewe mercy vnto thy brother (as thou art bound by the commaundement of Chriſt) which ſeekeſt the greateſt vengeance vpon him that thou canſt inferr vnto him? For death is the moſt terrible thing of all, and a more grieuous vengeance then death, can no man inferre. wherefore, they which wil keep charitie, ought to obſerue the commaundements of Chriſt touching mercy: and they* which liue in the law of charitie ought to leaue the lawe of vengeance and iudgementes. Ought we to beleue, that Chriſt in his comming, by grace abrogated the moſt iuſt law whiche he himſelfe gaue vnto the Children of Iſraell by Moſes his ſeruaunt, and eſtabliſhed the lawes of the Gentiles being not ſo iuſt to be obſerued of his faythfull? Doth not Daniell expounding the dreame of Nabuchodonozer the king cōcerning the image whoſe head was of gold, the breſt and armes of ſiluer, the belly & thies of braſſe, the legges of iron, one part of yͤ feete was of iron, and the other part of clay. Nabuchodonozer ſaw that a ſtone was cut out of a mountaine wͭout hands, and ſtrake yͤ Image in his feete of iron and of clay, & brake them to peeces. Then was the iron, the clay, the braſſe, the ſiluer and gold broken altogether, and became like yͤ chaffe of the ſommer flower, which is caryed away by the winde and there was no place found for them: and the ſtone that ſmote the image became a great mountayne, and filled the whole earth. He applieth therfore 4. kingdomes vnto the 4. partes of the Image, namely: the kingdome of the Babilonians vnto the head of the gold: The kingdome of the Medes and Perſians vnto the breſt and armes of ſiluer: The kingdom of the Grecians vnto the belly and thighes of braſſe: But the fourth kingdome whiche is of the Romaynes, he applyeth vnto the feet and legges of iron. And Daniell addeth: In the dayes of their kingdomes, ſhall God rayſe vp a kingdome which ſhall neuer be deſtroyed: And hys kingdome ſhall not be deliuered vnto an other, but it ſhal breake and deſtroy thoſe kingdomes: and it ſhal ſtand for euer, according as thou ſaweſt, that the ſtone was cut out of the mountayne withont handes, and brake in peeces the clay and iron, braſſe ſiluer and golde. Seeing therfore it is certain that this ſtone ſignifieth Chriſt whoſe kingdome is for euer: it is alſo a thing moſt aſſured, that he ought to raygne euery where, and to breake in peeces the other kingdoms of yͤ world. wherfore if terreſtrial kinges and the terreſtriall kingdom of the Iewes, and their laws and iudgementes haue ceaſed by Chriſt the king, calling the Iewes vnto the perfection of his goſpel, namely, vnto Fayth and Charitie: It is not to be doubted, but that the kingdome of the Gentiles which is more imperfect & their lawes, ought to ceaſſe among the Gentiles, departing frō their Gentillitie vnto the perfection of the Goſpell of Ieſus Chriſt. For there is no diſtinction betwene the Iewes and Gentiles being conuerted vnto the faith of Chriſt, but all of them abiding in that eternall kingdome ought to be vnder one lawe of Charitie and of vertue. Therefore they ought to haue mercy, and to leaue the iudgments of death, and the deſire of vengeance. wherfore they which do make lawes marke not the parable of Chriſt, ſaying: The kingdome of heauen is like vnto a man whiche ſowed good ſeede in hys field: but when men were on ſleepe, the enemy came and ſowed Tares in the midſt of the wheate, & went his way. But when the herbe was growne and brought forth fruite, then appeareth the Tares. And the ſeruauntes came vnto the good man of the houſe and ſayd vnto him, Lorde didſt not thou ſowe good ſeede in thy field? From whence then come theſe Tares? And he ſayd vnto them: The enemy hath done this. And the ſeruauntes ſayd vnto him: wilt thou that we goe and gather them vp? And he ſayd no: leaſt peraduenture gathering vp the Tares ye plucke vp the wheate by the rootes: Suffer them both to grow vntill the harueſt, and in the time of the harueſt, I will ſaye vnto the harueſt men, gather firſt the Tares and binde them in the bundels that they may be burnt, but gather the wheate into my barne. Chriſt himſelfe onely expoundeth this parable in the ſelfe ſame chapter, ſaying: He whiche ſoweth the good ſeede is the ſonne of man, but the field is the world, and the good ſeede, thoſe are the children of the kingdome. But the Tares are the naughty children. And the enemy which ſoweth them is the Deuill, And the harueſt is the end of the world and the harueſt men are the Aungels. Euen as therfore the Tares are gathered and burnt with fire, ſo ſhall it be in the end of the world. The ſonne of man ſhall ſend hys Aungels, and they ſhal gather out of his kingdome al offendoures, and thoſe which commit iniquitie, and ſhall put them into a furnace of fire, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teethe.

*He meaneth of the pope and of the clergie.

*He ſpeketh againſt the deſire of reuenge: not againſt the execution of neceſſary law done by magiſtrates.

The dreame of Nabuchodonozor, concerning the image expounded by Daniel.

The Iudaicall neceſſitie of thoſe lawes, hee meaneth to ceaſe, notwithſtanding Chriſten princes may borrow both out of thoſe lawes, and out of al other, what they thinke good & expedient for their common weale.

By whiche playne doctrine it is manifeſt, that Chriſt will haue mercy ſhewed vnto ſinners, euen vnto the ende of the world, and will haue them to remayn mingled with the good: Leaſt peraduenture when a man thinketh that he doth right well, to take away the tares, he taketh away yͤ wheat. For how great a ſinner ſoeuer a mā be, we know not whether his end ſhalbe good, and whether in the end he ſhall obtayne mercy of God: Neither are we certayn of the time, wherein God will by grace iudge him whom we abhorre as a ſinner. And peraduenture ſuche a one ſhall more profit after his conuerſion in yͤ Church, then he who we think to be iuſt, as it came to paſſe in Paul. And if god iuſtifieth a man by grace (although at his ende) why dareſt thou be ſo bold to be his iudge, and to condemne him? Yea, rather although a man ſeeme to be obſtinate and hardened in his euill, ſo that he is not corrected by a ſecret correction (correct him before one alone) if he doe not receaue open correction being done before two or three witneſſes, neyther paſſeth vpon a manifeſt correction when his ſinne is made knowen vnto the Church: Chriſt doth not teach to puniſh ſuch a one with the puniſhment of death. Yea rather he ſayth, if he harken not vnto the churche: let him be vnto thee as an Ethnicke and Publicane. And Paule following this doctrin in the 1. Corin. 5. chapter ſaith: There goeth a common ſaying that there is fornication among you & ſuch fornication as is not once named among yͤ gentiles that one ſhold haue hys fathers wife. And ye are puffed vp, and haue not rather ſorrowed, that he whiche hath done this deed, might be put from among you. For I verily as abſent in body, but preſent in ſpirite, haue already determined, as though I were preſent: that he whiche hath done this thing, whē ye are gathered together and my ſpirit, in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt that ſuch one by the power of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, be deliuered vnto Satan for the deſtruction of the fleſh, that the ſpirite may be ſaued in the day of the Lord Ieſus. Paule teacheth not to kill this man (as ſome gather by this text) but to ſeparate him from the other faithfull, and ſo frō Chriſt, which is the head of the Church of the faithfull, and ſo is he deliuered vnto Sathan, which is ſeparated from Chriſt: that the fleſh may be killed, that is, that that carnall concupyſcence, whereby he luxuriouſly luſted after yͤ wife of his father, may be deſtroyed in him, by ſuch a ſeparation, that yͤ ſpirite may be ſaued, & not that his body ſhould be killed, as ſome ſay, as it is moſt manifeſt in the ſelfe ſame chapiter, where he ſayth: I wrote vnto you in an Epiſle, that ye ſhoulde not keepe company with fornicatours, and I ment not of all the fornicators of this world, eyther of the couetous, or extorcioners or Idolaters, for then muſt yee nedes haue gone out of the world. But now I haue written vnto you, that ye keepe not company together, if anye that is called a brother be a fonicatour, or couetous perſō, or a worſhipper of Images, eyther a curſed ſpeaker, or dronkard, or an extorcioner: with him that is ſuch, ſee that ye eate not.

His purpoſe is not that no euill doer ſhould be puniſhed in a common welth, but his relation is, to the 23.q.5. aforeſaid, noting cauſes of religion, which the Pope and his prelates are wont to puniſh with death, taking many times for Tares, that which in deed is pure wheate.

1.Cor.5.

By whych it is manyfeſt, that Paule woulde haue the foreſayd fornicatour ſeparated from the fellowſhip of the faithful: that his carnall concupiſcence might be mortifyed, for the health of the ſpirit, and not that the body ſhould be killed. wherefore, they do ill vnderſtand Paule, which by this ſaying, do cōfirme yͤ killing of mē. And foraſmuch as hereſie is one of yͤ moſt greuous ſinnes (for an heretike leadeth men in errours, wherby they are made to ſtray frō fayth, without which they cannot bee ſaued) it doth moſt great hurt in the Church.

Hereby it appeareth, that all his relation in this matter: toucheth onely the caſes of hereſie and opinions in religion.

Further as concerning ſuch a wicked man, Paul thus ſpeaketh, flye from the man yͭ is an heretike after the firſt and ſecond correction, knowing that ſuch a one is ſubuerted and ſinneth, foraſmuch as he is by his owne iudgemēt condemned. Behold Paule teacheth not to kill thys man, but with Chriſt to ſeparate him frō the fellowſhip of the faythfull. But ſome ſay, that Peter in yͤ primitiue Church ſlewe Ananias and Saphyra for their ſinnes, wherefore they ſay it is lawful for them, to condemne wicked men to death. we wil declare in ſhewing the whole proceſſe how falſly they ſpeake in alleaging of Peter, for to iuſtify their errour.

By this it appeareth againe, that his reſpect is onely to the pope and his prelates of the church and not to ciuill magiſtrates.

In the 4. chap. of the Actes it is written, that as many as were poſſeſſours of landes or houſes, they ſolde them & offred the prices of that whych they ſolde and layed it be-

The example of Peter ſlaying Ananias and Saphira falſly wraſted of the papiſts.

foꝛe the feete of the Apoſtles: & it was deuided vnto euery one as he had neede thereof. But a certaine man Ananias with Saphira his wife ſolde a piece of land, and kept back a part of the price of the field, his wife being priuy vnto it, and bringing a certaine part therof, he laid it at the feete of the Apoſtles. But Peter ſaide vnto Ananias: Ananias, why hath Satan tempted thy hart that thou ſhouldeſt lye vnto the holy ghoſt, to keepe backe a part of yͤ price of the land? Did it not whileſt it remayned, remayne vnto thee: and being ſold, was it not in thine own power? why haſt thou conceiued this thing in thine hart? Thou haſt not lyed vnto mē, but vnto God. And whē Ananias heard theſe wordes, he fell downe and gaue vp the ghoſt, & great feare came on all them that heard theſe things. And the young mē roſe vp and tooke him vp, and caried him out and buried him. And it came to paſſe about the ſpace of iij. houres after, that his wyfe came in being ignorant of that whych was done. And Peter ſayd vnto her, Tel me womā, ſold ye the land for ſo much? And ſhe ſayd, yea for ſo much. But Peter ſaye vnto her, why haue ye agreed together to tēpt the ſpirit of the Lord? Behold, the feete of them which buried thy huſbande are at the doore, and ſhall cary thee out, And ſtraight way ſhe fel downe before his feete, and gaue vp the ghoſt, and the yong men entring in, found her dead and they caried her out, and buried her by her huſbād. And great feare came on all the church, & all thoſe which heard theſe thinges. It is meruaile yͭ any man that is wiſe, wyll ſay that by this proceſſe Peter ſlue Ananias or hys wife. For it was not his act but yͤ act of God, who made a wedding to his ſonne, & ſent his ſeruant to cal them, that were bidden vnto the wedding, and they would not come. The king then ſent forth his ſeruantes, to the outcorners of the hie wayes, to gather all that they could find, both good and euill. And ſo they did. And the maryage was full furniſhed with geſtes. Then came in allſo the king to view and ſee them ſitting. Among whom he perceaued there one ſitting hauing not a wedding garment, and ſayth vnto him, frend how cameſt thou hither? And he being dumme, had not a worde to ſpeake. Then ſaid the king to the ſeruitures, take and binde him hand and foote, and caſt him into the outward darcknes, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhinge of teeth. Many there be called, but few choſen. &c.

Peter not the cauſe of the death of Ananias and Saphyra.

The wedding garment what it is.

The death of Ananias and his wife, what information it giueth to the church.

It is manifeſt, that this wedding garment is charitie, without which, becauſe Ananias entred into the maryage of Chriſt, he was geuen to death, that by one many might be informed to learne & vnderſtand: that they which haue fayth & not charitie, although they appeare to men to haue yet it can not be priuy to the ſpirite of God, that they doe fayne. Such there is no doubt, but they ſhalbe excluded frō the mariage of chriſt, as we ſee this here exemplified in the death of Ananias & his wife by the hand of God, & not by the hand of Peter. And how ſhould Peter thē haue iudged Ananias (albeit he had iudged him) worthy of death by the rigour of the old law? For why, by the law he had not bene guilty of death, for that part, which they fraudulently & diſſemblingly did reſerue to themſelues. Yea and if they had ſtolne as much from an other man, which was greater neither yet for hys lie committed, he had not therfore by yͤ law of iuſtice bene found gilty of death. wherefore if he did not condēne hym by yͤ law of iuſtice, it appeared that he codēned him by the law of grace and mercy, whiche he learned of Chriſt. And ſo conſequently it followeth much more apparent, that Peter could not put him to death: Furthermore to ſay that Peter put him to death by the meere motion of his own will, and not by authoritie of the old law, nor by the new, it were derogatory and ſlaunderous to the good fame and name of Peter. But if Peter did kill hym, why then doth the Byſhop of Rome which pretendeth to be ſucceſſor of Peter, excuſe himſelfe and his prieſtes from the iudgement of death agaynſt heretiques and other offēders, although, they themſelues be conſēting to ſuch iudgements done by lay men? For that which was done of Peter without offence, may reaſonably excuſe him and his felow Prieſtes from the ſpot of crime. Actes. 5. It is manyfeſt that there was another which did more greeuouſly offend thē Ananias, and that Peter rebuked him with more ſharpe words: but yet he commanded him not ſo to be put to death. For Simon Magus alſo remayning at Samaria, after that he beleued and was baptiſed, he ioyned himſelfe with Phillip: And when he ſawe that the holye ſpirite was geuen by yͤ Apoſtles (laying theyr handes vpon mē) he offred thē mony, ſaying geue vnto me this power, that vpon whome ſoeuer I ſhall lay my hand, he ſhall receaue the holy Ghoſt. To whom Peter anſwered: Deſtroyed be thou and thy money together: And for that thou ſuppoſeſt the gifte of G O D to be bought with money, thou ſhalt haue neyther part nor fellowſhippe in this doctrine. Thy hart is not pure before god, therfore repēt thee of thy wickedneſſe, and pray vnto God that this wicked thought of thy hart may be forgeuen thee: for I perceiue thou art euē in the bitter gall of wickednes and bande of iniquitie. Beholde here the greuous offence of Symon Peters hard & ſharp rebuking of him, and yet therupon he was not put to death. wherby it appeareth that the death of Ananias aforeſaid, proceeded of God and not of Peter. Of all theſe things it is to be gathered ſeing the iudgements of death are not grounded vpon the expreſſe and playn ſcriptures, but onely vnder the ſhadow of the olde law: that they are not to be obſerued of Chriſtians becauſe they are cōtrarye to charity. Ergo yͤ biſhop of Rome approuing ſuch iudgements, alloweth thoſe that are contrary to the law & doctrine of Chriſt, as before is ſayd of warres, where hee approueth & iuſtifieth that which is cōtrary to charity. The order of Prieſthood, albeit it doth iuſtifie the iudgemēts to death of the laity, whereby offenders are condēned to die, yet are they themſelues forbidden to put in execution the ſame iudgementes. The prieſtes of the old law being vnperfect, whē Pylate ſaid vnto thē concerning Chriſt (whō they had accuſed worthy death) take him vnto you and according to your law iudge him, anſwered: that it was not lawful for them to put to death any man.

Peter not the cauſe of Ananias death.

Actes. 3.

Ioh. 18.

Wherby it appeareth that our prieſts being much more perfect, may not lawfully geue iudgemēt of death againſt any offenders: yet notwithſtanding, they claime vnto thē the power iudicial vpon offēders: Becauſe ſay they, it belongeth vnto them to know the offences by the auricular confeſſion of the offenders, and to iudge vpō the ſame being knowne, and to ioyne diuers penances vnto yͤ parties offending, according to the quantitie of their offences cōmitted, ſo that yͤ ſinner may make ſatiſfactiō ſay they vnto God for the offences which he neuer committed. And to cōfirme vnto thē this iudicial power, they alleage yͤ ſcriptures in many places, wraſting it to ſerue their purpoſe.

Like a pulled Henne.

Firſt they ſaye that the Biſhop of Rome (who is the chief prieſt and iudge among them) hath ful power & authority to remit ſinnes. wherupon they ſay, that he is able fully & wholy to abſolue a man a poena & culpa, ſo that if a man at the time of his death had this remiſſion: he ſhould ſtraigtwaies flie vnto heauen without any paine of Purgatory. The other Biſhops (as they ſay) haue not ſo great authoritie. The prieſts conſtituted vnder euery Byſhop, haue power, ſay they, to abſolue the ſinnes of thē that are confeſſed, but not al kind of ſinnes: becauſe there are ſome grieuous ſinnes reſerued to the abſolutions of the Byſhops, and ſome againe to the abſolution onely of yͤ chiefe and high Byſhop. They ſay alſo that it behoueth the offēders, for the neceſſitie of their ſoule health, to call to remēbrance their offences, and to manifeſt the ſame with al the circumſtances therof, vnto the prieſt in auricular cōfeſſiō, ſupplying the place of God, after the maner of a Iudge: & afterwarde humbly to fulfill the penaunce enioyned vnto him by the prieſt for his ſinnes, except the ſayde penaunce ſo enioyned, or any part thereof be releaſed by the ſuperior power. All theſe things (ſay they) are manifeſtly determined, as wel in yͤ decrees, as decretals. And although theſe things haue not expreſſely their foundation in the playne and manifeſt doctrine of Chriſt, nor any of yͤ Apoſtles: yet the authors of the decrees and decretals concerning thys matter, haue groūded the ſame vpon diuers places of the ſcriptures, as in yͤ proces of Chriſt in yͤ Goſpell of Saynt Mathew yͤ xvj. chapter. wherupon they ground yͤ popes power iudicial, to ſurmount the powers of other prieſts, as where Chriſt ſayd vnto his diſciples: whō do men ſaye that I am? And they aunſwered: ſome ſaye that thou art Iohn Baptiſt, ſome Elias, & ſome Ieremy, or one of the Prophets. To whom he ſayde: but who ſaye you that I am? Symon Peter makinge aunſwere, ſayde: Thou art Chriſt, the ſonne of the liuing God. And Ieſus anſwered and ſaid vnto him: Bleſſed art thou Symon the ſonne of Ionas, for fleſh & bloud hath not opened this vnto thee: but my father which is in heauen. And I ſay vnto thee: yͭ thou art Peter, & vpon this rocke wil I buyld my church: and hel gates ſhal not preuaile againſt it. And I wil geue thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. And whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde vpon earth, ſhal alſo be bound in heauen: and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt loſe vpon earth, ſhall bee looſed alſo in heauen.

The Popes vſurped power falſly founded vpon ſcriptures.

Out of this text of Chriſt, diuers expoſitiōs haue drawen diuers errours. For when Chriſt ſayd: And I ſay vnto thee, that thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke wil I build my Church: Some therupon affirme, that Chriſte meant he would builde his Church vpon Peter by authority of that text, as it is writtē in yͤ firſt part of yͤ decrees, Diſt. 19. cap. to Pope Leo, the errour wherof is manifeſtly knowen. For the Church of Chriſt is not builded vpon Peter, but vpon the rocke of Peters confeſſion, for that he ſayd: Thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuing God, and for that Chriſt ſayd ſingularly vnto Peter: I will geue vnto thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen: and whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde. &c. By this ſaying they affirme, that Chriſt gaue vnto Peter ſpecially, as chiefe of the reſt of the Apoſtles a larger power to binde and to loſe, then he did vnto the reſt of the apoſtles, or diſciples. And becauſe Peter anſwered for him ſelf & al the Apoſtles, not only confeſſing the faith which he had chiefly aboue the reſt, but alſo yͤ faith whiche the reſt of the Apoſtles had euen as himſelfe, by the reuelation of the heauẽly father: It appeareth that as the fayth of al the Apoſtles was declared by the anſwere of one: ſo by this that Chriſt ſayd vnto Peter: whatſoeuer thou ſhalt binde. &c. is geuen vnto the reſt of the Apoſtles the ſame power & equallitie to binde & to loſe, as vnto Peter. whiche Chriſt declareth in the Goſpell of S. Mathew the 18. chapter, in theſe wordes: Verely I ſay vnto you what thinges ſo euer you ſhall binde vpon earth, ſhalbe bound in heauẽ & what ſoeuer you ſhal loſe vpon earth, ſhalbe alſo loſed in heauẽ, And further he addeth: And agayne I ſay vnto you: that if two of you ſhall conſent vpon earth, and requeſt whatſoeuer it be: it ſhall be graunted vnto you of my father which is in heauen. For when two or three be gathered together in my name, I am there in the midſt of them. And in Iohn the xx. chapter, he ſayth generally vnto them: Receaue ye my ſpirit. whoſe ſins ye ſhall remit, ſhalbe remitted vnto them: and whoſe ſinnes you ſhall retayne, ſhall be retained.

Chriſt onely the head of the church.

1. Cor. 3.

Galat. 2.

Actes 9.

By this it appeareth, that the power to bynde and to looſe is not ſpecially graunted to Peter as chiefe and head of the reſt: and that by him the reſt had their power to bind and to looſe, for that the head of the body of the Churche is one, which is Chriſt, and the head of Chriſt is God. Peter and the reſt of the Apoſtles, are the good members of the body of Chriſt, receiuing power & vertue of Chriſt: whereby they do confirme and glew together the other mẽbers (as well the ſtrong & noble as the weake and vnable) to a perfect compoſition and ſeemelines of the body of Chriſt: that all honour from all partes and members may be geuẽ vnto Chriſt as head and chiefe, by whome as head, all the members are gouerned. And therfore Paule. 1. Corinthians chap. 3. when any man ſayth, I hold of Paule, and an other ſayth I hold of Apollo, are ye not carnall men? For what is Apollo? what is Paule? The miniſter of him in whom ye haue beleued, and he as God geueth vnto euery man. I haue planted, Apollo hath watered, but God hath geuen the increaſe. Therfore neither he that plãteth is any thing neither he yͭ watereth, but God that geueth the increaſe. And Paul to the Gal. chap. 2. God hath no reſpecte of perſons. Thoſe that ſeemed to be great and to do much, auayled or profited me nothing at all: But contrariwiſe, when they ſaw that the Goſpell of the vncircumciſion was committed vnto me, as the circumciſion vnto Peter (for he that wrought with Peter in the Apoſtleſhip of the circumciſion, wrought with me alſo amõg the Gentiles) and when they knew the grace which was geuen me Peter, Iames, and Iohn ſtraightwayes ioyned themſelues with me and Barnabas: wee among the Gentiles, and they in circumciſion onely, might be mindefull of the poore, the which to do I was very carefull. Hereby it appeareth, that Paule had not his authoritie of Peter to conuert the Gentiles, to baptiſe them, and to remit their ſinnes, but of him which ſaid vnto him Saule, Saule, why perſecuteſt thou mee. It is hard for thee to kicke agaynſt the pricke. Heare is Paule the head of the Church and not Peter: By which head they ſay, that al the members are ſuſtayned and made liuely.

The thirde errour.

The thyrd errour (which the authors of the canons cõceiueth in the ſayd text of Chriſt) which was ſayd to Peter Unto thee will I geue the keyes &c. is this. They ſay that in this ſentence which was ſayd to Peter of the authoritie to binde and looſe was ment: that as Chriſt gaue vnto Peter aboue all the reſt of the Apoſtles a ſpeciall, and as it were an excellent power aboue all the Apoſtles: euen ſo ſay they, he gaue vnto the Biſhops of Rome (whome they call Peters chiefe ſucceſſors) the ſame ſpeciall power and authoritie, exceeding the power of all other Byſhoppes of the world.

Other Apoſtles had like power to bynd and to looſe, as Peter had.

Actes 2.

The firſt part of this ſimilitude and compariſon, doth appeare manifeſtly by yͤ premiſſes to be erroneous: wherin is playnly ſhewed, that the other Apoſtles, had equall power with Peter to binde and loſe. wherfore cõſequently it followeth, the 2. part of the ſimilitude, grounded vpon the ſame text, to be alſo erroneous. But and if the firſt part of the ſayd ſimilitude were truth as it is not, yet the ſecond part muſt needes be an errour, wherein is ſayd that yͤ Biſhops of Rome are Peters chiefeſt ſucceſſors. For althogh there be but one Catholicke chriſtian Church, of al yͤ faithful ſort conuerted: yet the firſt part therof and firſt conuerted was of the Iewes, the ſecond of the Greeks, & the third part was of the Romaynes or Latines: wherof, the firſt part was moſt perfectly conuerted vnto the fayth, for that they faithfully obſerued the perfectiõ of charitie, as appeareth in the Actes of the Apoſtles by the multitude of the beleuers. The were of one hart, and one ſoule neyther called they any thing that they poſſeſſed theyr owne, but all was common amongſt them.

And as Chriſt ſayd thriſe vnto Peter, feed my ſheepe, ſo Peter ruled theſe three Churches as witneſſeth the Chronicles. But firſt he reformed the Church of the Iewes in Ieruſalem and Iudea, as appeareth by the teſtimony of the Actes of yͤ Apoſtles: For Acts 1. It is manifeſt how Peter ſtonding vp amongſt his brethren ſpake vnto them concerning the election of an Apoſtle in the place of Iudas the traytor, alledging places vnto thẽ out of the ſcripture, that an other ſhould take vppon him his Apoſtleſhip. And ſo by lot was Mathias conſtituted in the 12. place of Iudas, acts. 2. After yͭ the holy Ghoſt was come vpon the Apoſtles, and that they ſpake with the tongues of al men, the heares were aſtonied at the miracle And ſome mocked them ſaying, theſe men are full of newe wine: But Peter ſtood vp & ſpake vnto thẽ, ſaying, that it was fulfilled in thẽ that was prophecied by Ioell the prophet, and he preached Chriſt vnto the people, whome they of ignoraunce had put to death. To them was Sauioure promiſed by the teſtimony of the Prophets. And whẽ they heard the wordes of Peter, they were pricked at the heart, ſaying vnto him and the reſt of the Apoſtles: what ſhal we then do? And Peter ſayd vnto them, repent: and let euerye one of you be baptiſed in the name of Ieſus Chriſt for the remiſſion of your ſinnes, and ye ſhall receaue yͤ holy ghoſt. And there were ioined vnto them the ſame day about three M. ſoules. And Actes 3.4.5. it appeareth, that Peter aboue the reſt did thoſe thinges which belonged to the miniſtery of the Apoſtleſhip, as well in preaching as in anſwering. Wherupon ſome Chronicles ſay, that Peter gouerned the church of the Iewes at Ieruſalem 4. yeares, before he gouerned Antioche. And by the teſtimony of Paule to yͤ Gal. as before is ſayd: The Goſpell of the vncircumſion is cõmitted to Paule euen as the circumciſion to Peter. And he that wrought with Peter in the Apoſtleſhip of circumciſiõ wrought with Paule amongſt the Gentils. wherby it appereth that the Churche of the Iewes was committed to the gouernment of Peter And in the proces of the Actes of the Apoſtles it appeareth, that Peter beleeued that the fayth of Chriſt was not to be preached vnto thoſe Gentiles, which alwayes liued in vncleannes of Idolatry But whẽ Peter was at Ioppe, Cornelius a Gẽtile ſent vnto him, that he wold come & ſhew him the way of life: But Peter (a little before of the comming of the meſſengers of Cornelius) being in his chãber, after he had prayed, fel in a trance and ſaw heauen open, and a certayne veſſell deſcending euen as a great ſheete, letten downe by foure corners from heauen to earth. In the which were all maner of foure footed beaſtes, ſerpentes of the earth, and foules of the ayre. And a voyce ſpake vnto hym ſaying, ariſe Peter, kill and eate, and Peter ſayd, not ſo Lorde, becauſe I haue neuer eaten any common or vncleane thing: This was done thriſe. And Peter deſcended (not knowing what the viſion did ſignifie) and found the meſſengers of Cornelius.

Abſolution.

Three things required in popiſh abſolution. Contrition. Confeſſion. Satiſfaction.

As concerning the authoritie iudicial of the clergie, many things are written thereof in the Canons of decrees, greatly to be marueiled at, and farre from the truth of the Scripture. The authors of the Canons ſay, that Chryſt gaue vnto the prieſts, power iudicial ouer ſinners yͭ confeſſed their ſinnes vnto them. And this they ground vpon the text of Chriſt: I will geue vnto thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, and what ſoeuer thou looſeſt &c. And theſe keyes of the kingdome of heauen they cal the knowledge to diſcerne, and the power to iudge, which they ſay onely belongeth to the prieſtes, except in caſe of neceſſitie, then they ſay a lay man may abſolue a man frõ ſinne. And as touching abſolution they ſay, there are three thinges to be required on the ſinners part: firſt harty cõtritiõ, whereby the ſinners ought to bewaile their offẽding of god thorough ſinnes: the ſecond is, auricular confeſſion, whereby the ſinner ought to ſhew vnto the Prieſt his ſinnes, & the circumſtances of them: The third is ſatiſfaction, thorough penaunce enioyned vnto hym by the Prieſt for his ſinnes cõmitted. And of his part that geueth abſolution, there are two thinges (ſay they) to be required that is to ſay: knowledge to diſcern one ſinne from an other, wherby he ought to make a difference of ſinnes, & appoynt a conuenient penaunce, according to the quantitie of the ſinnes: The ſecõd is authoritie to iudge, wherby he ought to ioyne penaunce to the offender. And further they ſay, that he yͭ is confeſſed, ought with al humilitie to ſubmit himſelf to this authoritie, and wholy and voluntarily to doe thoſe penaunces which are commaunded him by the prieſt, except the ſayde penaunce be releaſed by a ſuperiour power: for all prieſtes (as they ſay) haue not equall authoritie to abſolue ſinnes. The chiefe prieſt whome they call Peters ſucceſſour hath power fully and wholy to abſolue. But the inferior prieſts haue power, ſome more ſome leſſe. The more as they are neare him in dignitie: The leſſe as they are farther from the degree of his dignitie. All this is declared by proces in the decrees, but not by the expreſſe doctrine of Chriſt or any of his Apoſtles. For although Chriſt abſolued men from their ſinnes, I do not find that he did it after the maner of a iudge, but of a ſauior. For Chriſt ſayth, God ſent not his ſonne into the world to iudge ſinners, but that the worlde ſhould be ſaued by him. Iohn chap. 3. Wherupon he ſpake vnto him whom he healed of the palſie: Beholde thou art made whole, go thy wayes and ſinne no more. And to the woman taken in adultery Chriſt ſayd, woman where be thy accuſers, hath no man condemned thee? who ſayd: No man Lord. To whom then Ieſus thus ſaid: No more wil I condemne thee, go, and now ſinne no more.

Two things required on his part that geueth popiſh abſolution.

The miniſteriall power to remit ſin, belongeth as well to one prieſt as to an other.

The keyes of the kingdome of heauen.

By which wordes and deedes of Chriſt and many other places of the ſcripture, it appereth he was not as a Iudge at his firſt cõming to puniſh ſinners according to the quantitie of their offences: but yͤ day ſhal come hereafter, wherein he ſhall iudge all men according to their workes, as in Mat. 25. where he ſayth: when the ſonne of man ſhal come in his maieſty, and all his aungels with him: then ſhall he ſit vpon the ſeat of his maieſty, and all nations ſhal be gathered together before him, and he ſhall ſeperate them one from an other, as a ſhepheard ſeperateth the ſheepe from yͤ Goates. &c. Neither ſhall he iudge alone, but his Saintes alſo with him. For he ſayth, you that haue followed me in this generation, when the ſonne of man ſhall ſit in the ſeat of his maieſtie, ſhal ſit alſo vpon 12. ſeats, and iudge the 12. tribes of Iſraell. If then ſith Chriſt came not as a Iudge, why doe the Prieſtes ſay that they ſupplye the roome of Chriſt on earth, to iudge ſinners according to the quantitie of theyr offences? And yet not onely this, but it is more to be marueiled at, how the Byſhop of Rome dareth to take vpon him to be a Iudge before the day of iudgement, and to preuent the time, iudging ſome to be ſaintes in heauen, & to be honoured of men, and ſome agayn to be tormented in hel eternally wt the deuils. Would God theſe men wold wey the ſaying of S. Paule. Corin. 4. Iudge ye not before the time, vntill the comming of the Lorde, who ſhall make light the darcke and ſecret places, and diſcloſe the ſecretes of hartes, and then euery one ſhall haue his prayſe. Let the Byſhop of Rome take heede, leſt that in Ezechiell be ſpoken by him: becauſe thy hart is eleuate, and ſaydſt vnto thy ſelfe I am God, I haue ſitten in the ſeat of God, in the hart of the ſea, when thou art but man and not God. It is manifeſt, that the remiſſion of ſinnes principallye belongeth to God, who through grace waſheth awaye our ſinnes. For it is ſayd, the lamb of God taketh away the ſinnes of the world. And vnto Chriſtians it belongeth as the Miniſters of God. For in the 20. of Iohn Chriſt ſayth: Receaue vnto you yͤ holy Ghoſt, whoſe ſinnes you ſhall remit, they are remitted vnto them: and whoſe ſinnes you ſhal retain they are retained. Seing therfore, that all Chriſtians that are baptiſed in the name of the Father, and of the ſonne, & of the holy Ghoſt, receaue the holy ghoſt: it appeareth, that they haue power geuẽ vnto them of Chriſt, to remit ſinnes miniſterially. Hath not euery Chriſtian authoritie to baptiſe? and in the baptiſme all the ſinnes of the baptiſed are remitted? Ergo, they that doe baptiſe, do remit ſinnes. And thus miniſterially all ſuche haue power to remitte ſinnes. Therfore, to ſay that one man hath more authoritie to remit ſinnes then al other Chriſtians haue, is to much to extol him & to place him euen in Gods ſeat. I pray you how are the ſinnes remitted him that is baptiſed of the Prieſte (yea although he were of the pope himſelfe baptiſed) more then if he were baptiſed of an other Chriſtian? Surely I thinke no more. For ſeing that before Baptiſme he remayneth a ſinner and of the kingdome of the deuill by ſinne, after baptiſme he entreth into yͤ kingdome of heauen: It appeareth, that he yͭ doeth baptiſe, openeth the gate of yͤ kingdome of heauen to him that is baptiſed: the whiche he can not do, wtout the keyes of the kingdome of heauen. Therfore euery one that doth baptiſe: hath the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, as well the inferiour Prieſt as the Pope But theſe keyes are not the knowledge to diſcerne, & power to iudge, becauſe theſe doe nothing auayle in baptiſme Ergo, there are other keyes of the kingdome of heauen thẽ theſe: wherfore it ſeemeth, that the authors of the Canons erred in miſtaking the keyes, wherupon they ground the authoritie iudiciall of the Clergy.

2. Cor. 15.

Iohn 12.

Children departing before baptiſme not condemned.

Now a little errour in the beginning graunted, groweth to great incõuenience in yͤ end. Wherfore in my iudgement it ſeemeth, that the keyes of the kingdome of heauen are fayth and hope. For by fayth in Ieſus Chriſt, and hope in him for the remiſſion of ſinnes, we enter yͤ kingdome of heauẽ. This faith is a ſpiritual water, ſpringing from Ieſus Chriſt the fountayne of wiſedome, wherein the ſoule of the ſinner is waſhed from ſinne. With this water were the faithfull Patriarches baptiſed before the lawe, and the faythfull people of the Hebrewes, and the faythful Chriſtians after the law. Wherfore I greatly marueill of that ſaying in the decrees, which is aſcribed vnto Auguſtine: that litle children that are not baptiſed, ſhal be tormented with eternall fire, although they were born of faithfull parents that wiſhed them with all their hartes to haue bene baptiſed: as though the ſacrament of Baptiſme in water were ſimply neceſſary to ſaluation, when neuertheleſſe many Chriſtians are ſaued without this kinde of Baptiſme, as Martirs. If that kinde of Sacrament be not neceſſary, to one of elder yeres, how thẽ is it neceſſary to an infant born of the faythfull? Are not all baptiſed with the holy Ghoſt and with fire? But yet not with materiall fire, no more is the lotion of water corporally neceſſary to waſhe awaye ſinnes, but onely ſpirituall water, that is to ſay, the water of fayth. Are not the quicke baptiſed for them that are dead, as witneſſeth Paule. 2. Corin. 15. If the dead ariſe not at all why are the liuing then baptiſed for them? If the liuing be baptiſed for the dead? why then is not the infant ſaued by the baptiſme of his parentes: ſeeing the infant it ſelfe is impotent at the time of death, and not able to require baptiſme? Chriſt ſayth, he that beleueth and is baptiſed, ſhalbe ſaued. He ſayth not, he that is not baptiſed: but he that beleueth not ſhall be damned. Wherefore in the 12. chap. of Iohn, Chriſt ſayth, I am the reſurrection and lyfe, he that beleeueth in me, yea although he were dead, ſhall lyue. The faith therfore is neceſſary which the infãt hath in his faithfull parents, although he be not waſhed with corporall water. How then is the infant damned and tormẽted with eternall fire? Were not they that were before the comming of Chriſt, and dead before his death by a thouſande yeres ſaued alſo by his death and paſſion? All yͭ beleued in him, were baptiſed in his bloud, and ſo were ſaued and redemed from ſinne and the bondage of the deuill, and made partakers of the kingdome of heauen. How then in yͤ time of grace, ſhall the infãt be damned that is borne of faythfull parents, that do not deſpiſe, but rather deſire to haue theyr children baptiſed? I dare not conſent to ſo hard a ſentẽce of the decrees: but rather beleue, that he is ſaued by vertue of the paſſion of Chriſt in fayth of his faythfull parentes, and the hope which they haue in Chriſt. Which fayth and hope are the keies of the heauenly kingdome. God were not iuſt and mercifull, if he would condemne a man that beleueth not in him, except he ſhewed vnto him the fayth which hee ought to beleeue. And therefore Chriſt ſayth: If I had not come and ſpokẽ vnto them, ſinne could not haue bene layd vnto theyr charge, but nowe they haue no excuſe of ſinne. Therfore ſeing the fayth of Chriſt is not manifeſt vnto the infãt departing before baptiſme, neither hath he denyed it: how thẽ ſhal he be damned for the ſame? But if God ſpeaketh inwardly by way of illumination of the intelligẽce of the infant, as he ſpeaketh vnto Aungels: who then knoweth (ſaue God alone) whether the infant receiueth or not receiueth the fayth of Chriſt?

Auriculer confeſsion.

What is he therfore that ſo raſhly dare take vpõ him to iudge the infants begottẽ of faythfull parents, dying without baptiſme, to be tormẽted with eternal fire? Now let vs cõſider the 3. thinges which yͤ canons of decrees affirme to be requiſite for the remiſſion of yͤ ſinnes of thoſe that ſinne after baptiſme: that is to ſay, contrition of hart, auricular confeſſion, and ſatiſfaction of the deed through penance enioyned by the prieſt for the ſinnes cõmitted. I cannot finde in any place in the Goſpel, where Chriſt commaũded that this kind of confeſſion ſhould be done vnto yͤ prieſt: nor I cannot find that Chriſt aſſigned any penance vnto ſinners for theyr ſinnes, but that he willed thẽ to ſinne no more. If a ſinner confeſſe that he hath offended God through ſinne, & ſorroweth hartely for his offẽces, minding no more hereafter to ſinne: then is he truely repentaunt for his ſinne, & then is he conuerted vnto the Lord. If he ſhall then hũbly and with good hope craue mercy at God & remiſſion of his ſinnes: what is he that can let God to abſolue that ſinner from his ſinne? And as God abſolueth a ſinner from hys ſinne, ſo hath Chriſt abſolued many, although they confeſſed not theyr ſinnes vnto the prieſts, and although they receiued not due penance for their ſinnes. And if Chriſt could after ẏ maner once abſolue ſinners: how is he become now not able to abſolue? Except ſome man wil ſay, that he is aboue Chriſt, and that his power is miniſhed by ẏ ordinances of his own lawes? How were ſinners abſolued of god in the time of the Apoſtles, and alwayes heretofore, vnto ẏ time that theſe Canons were made? I ſpeake not theſe thinges as though confeſſion to prieſtes were wicked, but that it is not of neceſſity requiſite vnto ſaluation. I beleeue verily that the confeſſion of ſinnes vnto good prieſtes, and likewiſe to other faythful Chriſtiãs, is good, as witneſſeth S. Iames the Apoſtle: Cõfeſſe ye your ſelues one to another, & pray ye one for another, that ye may be ſaued: for the continuall prayer of the iuſt auayleth much. Helias was a man that ſuffered many things like vnto you, and he praid that it ſhould not rayne vpon the earth, & it rayned not in 3. yeares & 6. monethes. And agayne he prayed, and it rayned from heauen, and the earth yelded forth her fruit. This kinde of confeſſion is good, profitable and expedient: for if God peraduenture heareth not a mans own prayer, he is helped with the interceſſion of others: Yet neuertheleſſe ẏ prayers of the prieſts ſeemeth to much to be extolled in the decrees, where it treateth of penitẽce, and that ſaying is aſcribed vnto Pope Leo. Cap. multiplex miſericordia Dei. &c. And it followeth: So is it ordeyned by the prouidence of Gods diuine wil, that ẏ mercy of God cannot be obteined but by the praier of ẏ prieſts. &c. The praier of a good prieſt doth much auayle a ſinner confeſſing his faults vnto him. The counſel of a diſcreet prieſt is very profitable for a ſinner, to geue the ſinner counſell to beware herafter to ſinne, and to inſtruct him how he ſhal puniſh his body by faſting by watching, and ſuch like actes of repentance, that herafter he may be better preſerued from ſinne.

Iames 5.

De penit. diſt. 1. cap. multiplex miſericordia Dei.

After this maner I eſteme confeſſiõ to prieſts very expedient and profitable to a ſinner. But to cõfeſſe ſinnes vnto the prieſt as vnto a iudge, & to receiue of him corporall penãce for a ſatiſfaction vnto God for his ſinnes committed, I ſee not how this can be founded vpõ the truth of the ſcripture. For before the comming of Chriſt, no man was ſufficient or able to make ſatiſfactiõ vnto God for his ſins, although he ſuffred neuer ſo much penance for his ſinnes. And therefore it was needefull, that he that was without ſinne ſhould be puniſhed for ſinnes, as witneſſeth Iſayas. chap. 53. where he ſayth: he took our griefes vpon him, and our ſorrowes he bare. And again: He was woũded for our iniquities, and vexed for our wickednes. And agayn: The Lord put vpon him our iniquity. And agayne: for the wickednes of my people haue I ſtrikẽ him. If therfore, Chriſt through his paſſion hath made ſatiſfaction for our ſinnes, whereas we our ſelues were vnable to do it, then through him haue we grace & remiſſion of ſinnes. How can we ſay now, that we are ſufficient to make ſatiſfaction vnto God by any penance enioyned vnto vs by mans authority? ſeing that our ſinnes are more greuous after Baptiſme: thẽ they were before the comming of Chriſt. Therefore, as in Baptiſme the payne of Chriſt in his paſſion was a full ſatiſfaction for our ſinnes: euen ſo after Baptiſme if we confeſſe that we haue offended, & be harty ſorry for our ſinnes, and minde not to ſinne agayne afterwardes.

Eſay 53.

Hereupon Iohn writeth in his firſt epiſtle. ca. 1. If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, & the truth is not in vs. If we confeſſe our ſinnes, God is faythfull and iuſt, he will remit them, and clenſe vs from all our iniquities. If we ſay we haue not ſinned, we make him a lyar, and his word is not vs. My welbeloued children, this I write vnto you that ye ſinne not: but if any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate with the father Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, and not for our ſinnes onely, but for ẏ ſinnes of ẏ whole world. Therfore, we ought to confeſſe our ſelues chiefly vnto God euen frõ the hart, for that he chiefly doth remit ſinnes, without whoſe abſolution litle auaileth the abſolutiõ of man. This kinde of confeſſion is profitable and good. The authors of the Canons ſay, that although auricular confeſſion made vnto the Prieſt, be not expreſly taught by Chriſt, yet, ſay they, it is taught in that ſaying, which Chriſt ſaid vnto them diſeaſed of the leproſy, whom he cõmaũded: Go your wayes, & ſhewe your ſelues vnto the Prieſtes, becauſe as they ſay, the law of clenſing lepers, which was geuen by Moyſes, ſignified the confeſſion of ſinnes vnto the Prieſt. And wheras Chriſt commaũded the lepers to ſhew themſelues vnto the Prieſtes, they ſay that Chriſt ment, that thoſe ẏ were vncleane with the leper of ſinne, ſhould ſhew theyr ſinnes vnto the Prieſtes by auricular confeſſion. I maruell much at the authors of the Canons, for euen from the beginning of their decres vnto the end, they grounde theyr ſayings vpõ the old law, which was the law of ſinne and death, and not (as witneſſeth Paule) vpon the words of Chriſt, which are ſpirite & life. Chriſt ſayth, the words which I ſpeake vnto you, are ẏ ſpirit and life. They groũd theyr ſayings in the ſhadow of the law, and not in the light of Chriſt. For euery euill doer hateth the light, & commeth not into it, that his deeds be not reproued: but he that doth the truth, commeth into the light, that his workes may be openly ſene, becauſe they are done in God. Ioh. 3.

1. John 1.

Confeſſion vnto God.

Auricular confeſſion not truely grounded vpon the Scripture. Luke 17.

The autors of the Canon law reproued.

Iohn 3.

Now let vs paſſe to the words that Chriſt ſpake to the leper. Lord if thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean. And Ieſus ſtretching forth his hand, touched him, ſaying: I will, be thou cleane: and ſtraight wayes he was cleanſed of hys leper. And Ieſus ſayd vnto him: See thou tell no man, but go and ſhew thy ſelfe to the Prieſt, and offer the gyft that Moyſes cõmaunded for a witneſſe of theſe thinges. This Goſpell witneſſeth playnely that ẏ diſeaſed of lepers were clenſed onely by Chriſt, and not by the Prieſts, neither did Chriſt commaund the leper to ſhew himſelfe vnto the prieſtes, for any helpe of cleanſing that he ſhould receiue of the Prieſtes: but to fulfill the law of Moyſes, in offering a ſacrifice for his clenſing, & for a teſtimony vnto the Prieſtes, who alwayes of enuy accuſed Chriſt as a tranſgreſſour of the law. For if Chriſt after he had clenſed the leper, had licenſed him to communicate with others that were cleane, before he had ſhewed himſelfe clenſed vnto the Prieſts, thẽ might the Prieſtes haue accuſed Chriſt, as a tranſgreſſour of the law: Becauſe it was a precept of the law, that the leper after he was cleanſed, ſhoulde ſhewe himſelfe vnto the Prieſtes. And they had ſignes in the booke of law, whereby they might iudge whether he were truely clẽſed or no. And if he were clenſed, then would the Prieſtes offer a gift for his clenſing. And if he were not cleanſed, then would they ſegregate him, frõ the company of others that were cleane. Seing euery figure, ought to be aſſimuled vnto the thyng that is figured: I pray you then, what agreement is there betwene the clenſing of lepers by the law, & the confeſſion of ſinnes? By that law the Prieſt knew better whether he were leprouſe then he himſelfe that had the leper. In cõfeſſion the prieſt knew not the ſinnes of him that was confeſſed, but by his owne confeſſion. In that law the Prieſt did not clẽſe the leprouſe: How now therfore ought the prieſts to clenſe ſinners from their ſinne, & that without thẽ they cannot be clenſed? In this law ẏ Prieſt had certein ſignes, by the which he could certaynly know, whether a mã were clenſed frõ his leper or not. In confeſſion, the Prieſt is not certaine of the clenſing of ſinnes, becauſe he is ignoraunt of his contrition: He knoweth not alſo whether he will not ſinne any more, without the which contrition and graunting to ſinne no more, God hath not abſolued any ſinner. And if God hath not abſolued a man, without doubt then is he not made cleane. And how then is confeſſion figured vnder that law? Doubtleſſe ſo it ſeemeth to me (vnder the correction of them that can iudge better in the matter) that this law beareth rather a figure of excommunication, & reconciliation of him, that hath bene obſtinate in his ſinne, & is reconciled agayne. For ſo it appeareth by the proceſſe of the Goſpell, that when as the ſinner doth not amend for the priuate correction of his brother, nor for the correction of two or three, neither yet for the publick correction of the whole Church: Then is he to be counted as an Ethnike, & a Publicane & as a certayn Leper to be auoyded out of the company of all men. which ſinner notwithſtanding, if hee ſhall yet repent, is then to be reconciled, becauſe he is then clenſed from his obſtinacy.

Luke 5.

The ſtory of the leapers expounded to make nothing for auricular confeſſion.

The clenſing of the leprey, & the clenſing of the prieſt in auricular confeſſion agree not.

But he which pretendeth himſelfe to be the chiefe vicar of Chriſt, and the high Prieſt, ſayth: that he hath power to abſolue A poena & culpa: which I doe not finde how it is founded in the ſcripture, but that of his owne authority, he enioyneth to ſinners, penance for their ſinnes. And grauñt ẏ frõ their ſinnes he may well abſolue them, yet frõ the payn (which they call a poena) he doth not ſimply abſolue, as in his indulgences he promiſeth. But if he were in charitye, and had ſuch power, as he pretẽdeth, he would ſuffer none to lie in Purgatory for ſinne, forſomuch as that payn doth farre exceed all other payne which here we ſuffer. what mã is there being in charity, but if he ſee his brother to be tormẽted in this world, if he may, he will helpe him, and deliuer him? Much more ought the Pope thẽ, to deliuer out of paynes of Purgatorye, indifferently as well rich as poore. And if he ſel to the rich his indulgẽces, double wiſe, yea triple wiſe he ſeduceth them. Firſt in promiſing to deliuer thẽ out of the payne from whẽce he doth not, neither is able to deliuer thē: And ſo maketh thē falſly to beleue that, which they ought not to beleue. Secōdly, he deceiueth thē of their mony, which he taketh for his indulgence. Thirdly, he ſeduceth them in this, that he promiſing to deliuer them frō payne, doth induce thē into greuous puniſhment in deed, for yͤ hereſy of ſimony, which both of thē do cōmit, & therefore are worthy both of great payne to fall vpon thē: for ſo we read, that Ieſus caſt out buiers and ſellers out of hys temple. Alſo Peter ſayd vnto Symon yͤ firſt author of this hereſy. Thy mony, ſayd he, with thee be deſtroyed, for that thou haſt thought, the gift of God to be poſſeſſed for mony. Moreouer, whereas Chriſt ſayth, frely you haue receiued, frely geue, and whereas contrary the Pope doth ſell that thing, which he hath taken: what doubt is there, but that he doth greuouſly deſerue to be puniſhed, both he that ſelleth, & he that buyeth, for the crime of ſimonye, which they commit. Ouer and beſides, by many reaſons and authorities of the Scripture it may be proued, that he doth not abſolue a man, contrite for his ſinne, although he doe abſolue him from the guilt.

The pope promiſing pardons for ſinne induceth men to ſinne in ſimony.

Deadly ſinne and debte. The pope ſaith, he can remitte the debte to God: And yet can not remitte the debte to mā. The pope harder to pardon a prieſt leauing his mattens vnſaid, then for breaking the commaundemēt of God. Abſolution to be ſought at the handes of God onely.

But this maruellleth me, that he in his indulgēces promiſeth to abſolue men from all maner of deadly ſinnes: & yet cannot abſolue a man from debt: forasmuch as the debt which we owe to god, is of much more greater importāce, then is the debt of our brother. wherfore, if he be able to remitte the debt due to God, much more it ſhould ſeme, that he is able to forgeue the debt of our brother.

An other thing there is, that I maruell at: for that the pope ſheweth himſelfe more ſtrait in abſoluing a prieſt for not ſaying, or negligently ſaying his mattens: thē for traſgreſſing the commaundemēt of God: conſidering that the tranſgreſſion of the cōmaundement of God, is much more greuous then the breach of mans commaundement.

For theſe and many other errours concurring, and in this matter of the Popes abſolutiōs, bleſſed be God, & honor be vnto him for the remiſſion of our ſinnes And let vs firmely beleue and know, that he doth and wil abſolue vs from our ſinnes, if we be sory frō the bottome of our harts that we haue offended him hauing a good purpoſe and will to offend him no more. And let vs be bolde to reſorte vnto good and diſcreet Prieſts, who with wholeſome diſcretion and ſound counſell can inſtruct vs, how to auoad the corruption of ſinne hereafter. And which, becauſe they are better then we, may pray to God for vs: whereby we may both obtayne more ſooner the remiſſion of our ſinnes paſt, and alſo may learne better how to auoyd the daunger of ſinne to come. Notes.

¶ And thus much concerning the iudgement and doctrine of this Walter, for Chriſtian patience, charity and mercy, which as they be true and infallible notes and markes of true Chriſtianity, ſo the ſayde Walter Brute making compariſon herein betweene Chriſt and the Pope, goeth about purpoſely to declare and manifeſt, whereby all men may ſee, what contrariety there is betweene the rule of Chriſtes teaching, and the proceedinges of the Pope: betweene the examples and life of the one, and the examples of the other. Of which two as one is altogether geuen to peace: ſo is the other on the contrary ſide as much diſpoſed to wars, murder, and bloudſhed, as is eaſy to be ſene, who ſo looking not vpon the outward ſhewes and pretenſed wordes of theſe Romiſhe Popes, but aduiſing and conſidering the inward practiſes, and ſecret works of them, ſhall eaſely eſpye, vnder their viſour of peace what diſcord and debate they work. Who bearing outwardly the meek hornes of the Lambe mentioned in the Apocalippes, within doe beare the bowels of a Wolfe, full of crueltye, murder, and bloudſhed which if any doe thinke to be ſpoken of me contumeliouſly, would God that man could proue as well the ſame to be ſpoken of me not truely. But trueth it is, I ſpeake it ſincerely, without affection of blinde partiality, according to the trueth of hiſtoryes both olde and new. Thus vnder in Dei nomine. Amen, how vnmercifully doeth the Pope condemne his brother: And while he pretendeth not to be lawfull for him to kill any man, what thouſandes hath he killed of men? And likewiſe in this ſentence, pretēding, in viſceribus Ieſu Chriſti, as though he woulde be a mediatour to the magiſtrate for the party: yet in deed will he be ſure to excommunicate the Magiſtrate, if he execute not the ſentence geuen. Who be true heretiques, the Lord when he commeth ſhall iudge: but geue them to be heretiques, whom he condemneth for heretiques. Yet what bowels of mercy is here, where is nothing, but burning, faggoting, drowning priſoning, chayning, famiſhing racking, hanging, tormenting, threatning, reuiling, curſing and oppreſſing, and no inſtructing, nor yet indifferent hearing of thē, what they can ſay. The like cruelty alſo may in theyr warres appeare, if we conſider how Pope Vrbane 5. beſide the racking and murdering of 7. or 8. Cardinals, ſet vp Henry Spencer Biſhoppe of Norwich to fight agaynſt the French Pope. Innocentius 4. was in warre himſelfe agaynſt the Apulians. Likewiſe Alexander. 4. his ſuceſſour ſtirred vp the ſonne of king Henry 3. to fight agaynſt the ſonne of Fredericke. 2. Emperour, for Apulia. Boniface 8. moued Albertus (which ſtood to be Emperour) to driue Philip the frēch King out of his Realm Gregorius. 9 excited Ludouike the French king 3. ſundry times, to mortall warre agaynſt the Earle Raimundus and City of of Tholouſe, and Auinion, where Lewes the ſayd Frence king dyed. Honorius 3. by ſtrength of warre many wayes reſiſted Fredericke 2. and ſent out 35. Gallyes agaynſt the coaſtes of the Emperours dominions. The ſame Pope alſo beſieged Ferraria, to paſſe ouer the warre at Ticinum, with many other battayles and conflictes of Popes, agaynſt the Romanes, Venetians, and diuers other nations. Innocentius 3. ſet vp Philip the French king to warre agaynſt king Iohn. What ſtirre Pope Gregorye the 7. otherwiſe named Hildebrand, kept agaynſt the Emperour Henricus 4. it is not vnknowne. And who is able to recite all the warres, battayles, and fieldes fought by the ſtirring vp of the Pope? Theſe with many other like examples conſidered, did cauſe this Walter Brute to write in this matter ſo as he did, making yet thereof no vniuerſall propoſition: but that Chriſtian Magiſtrates, in caſe of neceſsity, might make reſiſtaunce, in defence of publique right. Now he procedeth further to other matter of the Sacrament.

Examples declaring what warres hath bene ſtirred vp by popes

Iohn. 6.

Touching the matter (ſayth he) of the Sacrament of the body and bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, diuers men haue diuers opinions, as the learned do know As concerning my iudgemēt vpon the ſame, I firmely beleue whatſoeuer the lord Chriſt Ieſus taught implicitely or expreſly to his Diſciples and faythfull people to be beleued: for he is (as I beleue and know) the true bread of God, whiche deſcended from heauen, and geueth life to the world. Of which bread whoſoeuer eateth, ſhall liue for euer, as it is in the 6. of S. Iohn declared. Before the comming of chriſt in the fleſh, although men did liue in body, yet in ſpirit they did not liue, becauſe all men were then vnder ſinne, whoſe ſoules therby were dead: from the which death, no man by law, nor with the law was iuſtified: for by the workes of the law ſhall no fleſh be iuſtified. Galat. 2. And agayne in the ſame epiſtle cap. 3. that by the lawe no man is iuſtified before God it is manifeſt: for the iuſt man ſhall liue by his fayth, the law is not of fayth: but whoſoeuer hath yͤ workes therof, ſhal liue in them. And agayn in yͤ ſame chap. If the law had bene geuen, which might haue iuſtified, then our righteouſneſſe had come by the law. But the ſcripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe might be ſure by the fayth of Ieſu Chriſt to all beleuers. Moreouer, before that fayth came, they were kept and concluded all vnder the law, vntill the comming of that fayth whiche was to be reuealed. For the law was our ſchoolemaiſter in Chriſt Ieſu, that we ſhould be iuſtified by fayth. Alſo the ſayd Paul Rom. 5. ſayth: that the law entred in the meane time, whereby that ſinne might more abound. where then ſinne hath more abounded there hath alſo grace ſuperabou̅ded, that like as ſinne hath raigned vnto death: ſo that grace might raigne alſo by righteouſnes vnto eternal life, through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. whereby it is manifeſt, that by the fayth which we haue in Chriſt, beleuing him to be the true ſonne of God, which came downe from heauen to redeme vs from ſinne: we are iuſtified from ſinne, and ſo do liue by him, which is the true breade and meat of the ſoule. And the bread which Chriſt gaue, is his fleſh geuen for the life of the world. Iohn. 6. For he being God, came downe from heauen, and being true carnall man, did ſuffer in the fleſh for our ſinnes, which in his diuinity he could not ſuffer. wherefore like as we beleue by our fayth that he is true God: ſo muſt we alſo beleue, that he is a true man. And then do we eate the bread of heauen, and the fleſhe of Chriſt. And if we beleue that he did voluntarily ſhed hys bloud for our redemption, then do we drinke his bloud.

Galath. 2. Iuſtification by fayth and not by the law.

Rom. 5.

Iohn. 6.

True eating of Chriſt, is true beleuing in him.

And thus, except we eate the fleſh of the ſonne of man, and ſhall drinke his bloud: we haue not eternall life in vs. Becauſe the fleſh of Chriſt verily is meate, and hys bloud is drinke in deed: and whoſoeuer eateth the fleſh of Chriſt and drinketh his bloud, abideth in Chriſt & Chriſt in him. Ioh. ca. 6. And as in this world yͤ ſoules of yͤ faythfull liue, and are refreſhed ſpiritually with this heauenly bread, and with the fleſh and bloud of chriſt: So in the world to come, the ſame ſhall liue eternally in heauen, refreſhed with the deity of Ieſus Chriſt, as touching the moſt principall part therof, that is to wit, intellectū: For as much as this bread of heauē, in that it is God, hath in it ſelfe all delectable pleaſantnes. And as touching the intelligible powers of yͤ ſame (as well exteriour as interior) they are refreſhed with the fleſh (that is to ſay) with the humanitye of Ieſus Chriſt: which is, as a queene ſtanding on the right hand of God, decked w a golden robe of diuers coulours: for this queen of heauen alone by the word of God, is exalted aboue the company of all the angels: that by her, all our corporal power intellectiue, may fully be refreſhed as is our ſpirituall intelligence, with the beholding of yͤ deity of Ieſus Chriſt, and euen as the Aungels, ſhall we be fully ſatiſfied. And in the memory of this double refectiõ, preſent in this world and in the world to come: hath Chriſt geuen vnto vs (for eternal bleſſednes) the Sacrament of his body and bloud, in the ſubſtaunce of breade and wine, as it appeareth in Mathew. chapter. 26. As the diſciples ſat at ſupper, Ieſus tooke bread and bleſſed it, brake it, & gaue it vnto his diſciples, and ſayd: Take, eate, this is my bodye. And he tooke the cup, and thanked, and gaue it them, ſaying: Drinke ye all of this, this is my bloud of the new Teſtament, which ſhall be ſhed for many, for yͤ remiſſion of ſinnes. And Luke in his Goſpell chap. 22. of this matter thus writeth. And after he had taken the bread, he gaue thankes, he brake it, and gaue it vnto them, ſaying: Thys is my body whyche ſhall be geuen for you: doe you this in my remembraunce. In like maner he tooke the cup after ſupper, ſaying: Thys is the cup of the new teſtament in my bloud, which ſhall be ſhed for you. That Chriſt ſaid, this is my body, in ſhewing to them the bread, I firmely beleue & know that it is true: That Chriſt (for ſo much as he is God) is the very trueth it ſelfe: and by conſequence, all that he ſayth is true. And I beleue that the very ſame was his body, in ſuch wiſe as he willed it to be his body: for in yͭ he is almighty, he hath done what ſo euer pleaſed him. And as in Cane of Galile, he chaunged the water into wine, really, ſo that after the tranſubſtantiation it was wine and not water: ſo when he ſayd, This is my body: If he would haue had the breade really to be tranſubſtãtiated into his very body, ſo that after this chaunging it ſhould haue bene his naturall body, & not bread as it was before: I know, that it muſt needes haue beene ſo. But I finde not in the Scripture, that hys will was to haue any ſuch reall tranſubſtantiation or mutation.

Math. 26.

Luke. 22.

This is my body, expounded.

Note well gentle Reader.

And as the Lord God omnipotent in his perfectiõ eſſential being the ſonne of God, doth exceed the moſt pureſt creature, and yet when it pleaſed him, he took vpõ him our nature, remaining really God as he was before, & was really made man: ſo yͭ after this aſſumpting of our ſubſtaũce he was really very God & very man: Euẽ ſo if he would, when he ſayd: This is my body: He could make this to be his body really, the bread ſtill really remayning as it was before. For leſſe is yͤ difference of the eſſence, betwene bread and the body of a man, then betwene the deity & humanity: becauſe that of the bread, is naturally made the body of a man. Of the bread is made bloud: of the bloud, naturall ſeede: and of naturall ſeede, the naturall ſubſtaunce of man is ingendred. But in that that God became man: This is an action ſupernatural. wherefore he that could make one man to be very God and very mã: could if he would make one thing to be really very bread, & his very body. But I do not finde it expreſly in the Scripture, that he would any ſuch Identitye or coniunction to be made. And as Chriſt ſayd, I am very bread, not chaunging his eſſence or being, into the eſſence or ſubſtaunce of bread: but was the ſayde Chriſt, which he was before really, and yet bread by a ſimilitude or figuratiue ſpeech: So if he would, it might be, yͭ when he ſayd: This is my body: That this ſhould really haue bene the bread as it was before, and Sacramentally or memorially to be his body. And this ſeemeth vnto me, moſt neareſt to agree to the meaning of Chriſt, foraſmuch as he ſaid: do this in the remembraunce of me. Then for as much as in the ſupper it is manifeſt, that Chriſt gaue vnto his Diſciples the bread of his body which he brake, to that intent to eat with theyr mouthes: in which bread, he gaue himſelfe alſo vnto them as one in whõ they ſhould beleue (as to be the food of the ſoule) and by that fayth they ſhould beleue him to be theyr ſauior which tooke his body, wherein alſo he would it to be manifeſt, that he woulde redeeme them from death: So was the bread eaten with the Diſciples mouthes, that he being the true breade of the ſoule, might be in ſpirite receiued and eaten ſpiritually, by theyr fayth, which beleued in him.

Bread by ſimilitude.

Bread ſubſtantially, and the body Sacramentally.

The bread which in the diſciples mouthes was chewed, from the mouth paſſed to the ſtomacke: For as Chriſt ſaith: whatſoeuer cõmeth to the mouth, goeth into the belly, & from thence into the priuy. Mathew. chap. 15. But that true and very bread of the ſoule, was eaten of the ſpirite of the Diſciples, and by fayth entred theyr minds, and abode in their intralles through loue. And ſo the bread broken, ſeemeth vnto me to be really yͤ meat of the body, & the bread which it was before: but Sacramentally to be the body of Chriſt, as Paule. 1. Cor. 10. The breade which we breake, is it not the participation of the body of the Lord? So, the bread which we breake, is the participation of the Lordes body. And it is manifeſt, that the heauenly bread is not broken neither yet is ſubiect to ſuch breaking: Therfore, Paul calleth the materiall bread, which is broken, the body of Chriſt which the faythfull are partakers of. The breade therfore chaungeth not his eſſence, but is bread really, and is the body of Chriſt ſacramentally. Euen as Chriſt is the very vine, abiding really and figuratiuely the vine: So, the temple of Ieruſalem was really the materiall temple: & figuratiuely it was the body of Chriſt: Becauſe he ſayde, deſtroy you this temple, and in three dayes I will repayre the ſame agayne. And this ſpake he of the temple of his body, whereas others vnderſtood it to be the materiall temple, as appeared by theyr anſwere: For ſayd they 47. yeres hath this temple bene in building, and wilt thou build it vp in three dayes?

The bread which the Lord gaue entreth not into the bodies, but the body which he gaue entreth into the mindes of the diſciples.

Paule calleth it materiall bread.

Note reader.

Euen ſo, may the conſecrated bread be really bread as it was before, and yet figuratiuely the body of Chriſt. And if therfore, Chriſt would this bread to be only ſacramentally his body and would not haue the ſame bread really to be tranſubſtantiated into his body, & ſo ordeined his Prieſtes to make this Sacrament as a memoriall of his paſſion: Thẽ do the Prieſtes greuouſly offend, which beſech Chriſt in their holy Maſſe, that the bread which lyeth vpon the aultar may be made really the body of Chriſt, if he woulde not haue the ſame to be but a Sacrament of his body. And then both be they greatly deceiued themſelues, and alſo do greatly deceiue others. But whether the bread be really tranſubſtantiated into the body of Chriſt, or is onely yͤ body of Chriſt ſacramentally: No doubt, but that the people are marueillouſly deceiued. For the people beleue that they ſee the body of Chriſt, nay rather Chriſt himſelfe betwene the handes of the Prieſtes (for ſo is the common othẽ they ſweare.) By him whõ I ſaw this day betwene the prieſtes hands. And the people beleue that they eat not the body of Chriſt but at Eaſter, or els when they lie vpon theyr death bed, and receiue with their bodely mouth the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt. But the body of Chriſt (admitte the bread be tranſubſtantiated really into the body) is in the Sacrament, indiuiſibiliter, that is, not able to be deuided, and ſo immenſurabiliter, that is, not able to be meaſured: Ergo, inuiſibiliter, that is, not able to be ſene. To beleue therfore that he may be ſene corporally in the Sacrament, is erroneous. And foraſmuch as the body of Chriſt, is the ſouls food and not the food of the body in this world, for that whoſoeuer beleueth, doth eat ſpiritually, and really, at any time when he ſo beleueth: It is manifeſt, that they doe greatlye erre which beleue that they eat not the body of Chriſt, but when they eat with theyr teeth the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt.

The vayne prayer of the prieſtes at the Maſſe.

The people greatly deceiued in the ſacramẽt.

And although it ſhould be to the great honor of prieſts that the bread really were chaũged into the body of chriſt, by the vertue of the Sacramentall words pronounced: yet if Chriſt would not haue it to be ſo, then they deſiring to do this contrary to the will of Chriſt, and informing the people, that is to be done, ſo contrary to the will of Chriſt: are in great peril, moſt daungerouſly ſeducing both themſelues and the people. And then, although that hereby they get a litle worldly and tranſitory honour for a ſhort time: It is to be feared, leaſt perpetual ſhame finally ſhall follow and inſue vpon the ſame. For Chriſt ſayth, euery one that exalteth himſelfe, ſhall be brought low. Let them therfore take heed, leaſt they extolling themſelues for this Sacrament, aboue the company of Angels which neuer ſinned, for the errour which they be in, for euermore be placed with the ſinnefull angels vnder the earth.

The prieſtes ſeeke their owne honor in their tranſubſtãtiatiõ.

Marke here yͤ good prieſtes.

Let euery man therfore think lowly of himſelf in what ſtate or degree ſoeuer he be, neither let him preſume to doe that which he is not able to do: Neither deſire to haue that thing done, which God would not haue done.

I greatlye marueill at thoſe which were the makers of the Canons, how variably & contrary one to another they write of this Sacrament of the body of Chriſt. In the laſt part of the decrees where this matter is touched: not only in the text, but alſo in the proces of the matter, diuers do diuerſly write, and one contrary to another. For in the chapter that thus beginneth Prima inquit hæreſis, it is thus written: You ſhall not eate this bodye which you ſee, nor ſhall drinke this bloud which they ſhall ſhed, which ſhall crucify me: I will commend vnto you a certayne Sacrament ſpiritually vnderſtood yͭ quickneth you, for the fleſh profiteth you nothing at all. And in the end of the ſame chapter, it is thus written: Till the world ſhall haue an end, the Lords place is in heauen: yet notwithſtanding, the verity of the Lord is here abiding with vs. For the body wherwith he roſe, ought to be in one place, but his verity is in euerye place diffuſed & ſpread abroad. And in yͤ chapter folowing which thus beginneth, Omnia quæcunq; voluit. &c. it is written: Although the figure of the bread & wine ſeeme to be nothing: yet notwithſtanding they muſt after yͤ wordes of conſecration be beleued, to be none other thing then the very fleſh of Chriſt and his bloud. wherevpon, the veritye himſelf ſaid vnto his Diſciples: This is ſayth he, my fleſh, which is geuen for the life of the world: and to ſpeake yet more maruellouſly, this is none other fleſh, thē that which was borne of the virgin Mary, & ſuffered vpon the croſſe, and roſe out of the ſepulchre.

De conſecrat. diſt. 2. cap. Ego Berengarius.

See how far this chapter differeth from the firſt. And in the chapter which beginneth Ego Berengarius. &c. This is the confeſſion which Berengarius himſelfe cōfeſſed touching this Sacrament, and his confeſſion is of the church allowed. I confeſſe (ſayth Berengarius) that the bread and wine which is layd vpon the aultar after the conſecration, is not onely a Sacrament: but alſo that it is the very body & bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: And the ſame not onely ſenſually to be a Sacrament, but alſo verely to be handled with the Prieſtes hands and to be broken, and chewed with the teeth of faythfull men. This confeſſion doubtleſſe is hereticall: for why if the body of Chriſt be in the Sacrament, as of the Church it is ſo determined: it is there then Multiplicatiuè, and ſo indiuiſibiliter, wherfore not ſenſualiter. And if it be there indiuiſibiliter, that is, in ſuch ſort as it cannot be deuided or ſeparated, then can it not be touched, felt, broken nor with the teeth of men chewed.

The recantation of Berengarius is hereticall. The Sacrament left by the prieſtes negligence to be eatē of a mouſe returneth againe from body to bread.

The writers of this time and age do affirme: that if by the negligence of the Prieſt, the Sacrament be ſo negligētly left, that a Mouſe or any other beaſt or vermine eate the ſame: then they ſay, that the Sacrament returneth agayne into the nature and ſubſtāce of bread. wherby, they muſt nedes confeſſe, that a miracle is as wel wrought by yͤ negligence of the Prieſt, as firſt there was made by the conſecration of the Prieſt in making the Sacrament. For either by the eating of the Mouſe, the body of Chriſt is tranſubſtantiated into the nature of bread, which is a tranſubſtantiatiō ſupernaturall: Or els of nothing by creation is this bread produced. And therfore, either of theſe operations is miraculous & to be maruelled at. Now cōſidering the diſagreing opinions of the Doctors, and for the abſurdities which follow, I beleue with Paule, that the bread which we break, is the participation of the body of Chriſt: and as Chriſt ſayth, that the bread is made the body of Chriſt for a memorial and remembraunce of him. And in ſuch ſort as Chriſt willed the ſame to be his body, in the ſame maner & ſort do I beleue it to be his body.

Whether externall ſignes in a prieſt, be the ſigne of Antichriſt or els be grounded vpon Chriſt.

But whether women may make the body of Chriſt, & miniſter vnto the people: or whether that Prieſts be deuided frō the lay people, for their knowledge, preeminence, & ſanctity of life, or els by externall ſignes onely: Alſo whether the ſigne of tonſure and other externall ſignes of holines in Prieſtes, be ſignes of Antichriſt and his charecters, or els introduced & taught by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: conſequently it remayneth next to ſpeake of vnto the faythfull ſort (according to the proces of the holy Scripture) firſt of the three kindes of the Prieſtes. I remember that I haue read, the firſt of them to be Aaronicall, legall, & temporall: The ſecond to be eternall and regall according to the order of Melchiſedech: The third to be a Chriſtian. The firſt of theſe ceaſed at the comming of Chriſt: for that as S. Paule to the Hebrues ſayth. The Prieſthood of Aaron was trāſlated to the Prieſthood of the order of Melchiſedech. The legall ſort of Prieſtes of Aaron, were ſeparate from the reſt of the people, by kinred, office, and inheritance. By kinred, for that the children of Aaron onely were Prieſtes. By office, for that it onely pertayned to them to offer ſacrifice, for the ſinnes of the people, and to inſtruct the people in yͤ precepts and ceremonies of the law. By inheritaunce, becauſe the Lord was their portiō of inheritāce: neither had they any other inheritaunce amongeſt theyr brethren, but thoſe thinges which were offered vnto the Lord, as the firſt fruits, parts of the ſacrifices, and vowes, except places for their manſion houſes for them and theirs, as appeareth by the proceſſe of Moyſes law. The Prieſthood of Chriſt, did much differre from this Prieſthood, as Paule doth witnes to the Hebrues chapter. 1. 8. 9. 10.

Three orders or ſortes of prieſtes.
1. Aaronicall.
2 Eternall.
3. Chriſtian.

Leuiticall prieſtes deuided from the people by kindred, office, and inheritance.

The prieſthoode of Chriſt differeth from the Leuiticall prieſthoode, how and wherein.
1. In kindrede.
2. In othe taking.
3. In durabilitie.

Firſt, in kinred, becauſe that our Lord & Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, came of the ſtocke and tribe of Iuda: of whiche tribe none had to do with the aultar and in which tribe nothing at all was ſpoken of the Prieſtes of Moſes.

The ſecond, for that other were made Prieſtes without their othe taken but he by an othe, by him which ſayd: The Lord ſwore, and it ſhall not repent him: Thou art a Prieſt for euer according to the order of Melchiſedech.

Thirdly, by durability, for that many of thē were made Prieſts but during the terme of their liues: but he for that he remaineth for euer, hath an eternall Prieſthood. wherfore he is able to ſaue vs for euer hauing by himſelf acceſſe vnto God, which euer liueth to make interceſſion for vs.

The law made alſo ſuch men Prieſtes as had infirmities, but Sermo (that is, the word which according to the law is the eternall ſonne and perfect) by an othe.

4. In matter of ſacrifice.

5. In place of ſacrificing.

The Prieſthood of Chriſt alſo did differ frō the Prieſthood of Aaron and the law, in the matter of the ſacrifice: & in the place of ſacrificing. In the matter of the ſacrifice: becauſe they did vſe in theyr ſacrifices ſtraunge bodyes of the matter of their ſacrifices, and did ſhed ſtrāge bloud for the expiation of ſinnes: But he, offering himſelf vnto God his father for vs, ſhed his owne bloud, for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. In the place of ſacrificing: becauſe that they did offer theyr ſacrifice in the tabernacle or temple: But Chriſt ſuffering death without the gates of the City, offered himſelfe vpon the aultar of the croſſe to God his father, & there ſhed his precious bloud. In his ſupping chamber alſo hee bleſſed the bread and cōſecrated the ſame for his body, & the wine which was in yͤ cup, he alſo cōſecrated for his bloud: deliuering the ſame to his Apoſtles to be done, for a commemoration and remembraunce of his incarnation & paſſion. Neither did Ieſus enter into the ſātuary made with mans hands, which be examples & figures of true things: but entred into heauē it ſelfe, that he might appeare before the maieſty of God for vs. Neither doth he offer himſelf oftētimes, as the chief prieſt in the ſanctuary did euery yeare with ſtraunge bloud (for then ſhould he often times haue ſuffered from the beginning) but now once for all, in yͤ latter end of the world, to deſtroy ſinne by his peace offering, hath he entred. And euen as it is decreed, that mā once ſhal dye and then commeth the iudgement: ſo Chriſt hath bene once offered to take away the ſinnes of many. The ſecond time he ſhall appeare without ſinne to them that looke for him, to their ſaluation. For the lawe hauing a ſhadowe of good thinges to come, can neuer by the Image it ſelfe of thinges (which euery yeare without ceaſing they offer by ſuch ſacrifices) make thoſe perfect that come therunto, for otherwiſe that offering ſhould haue ceaſed: Becauſe that ſuch worſhippers being once cleanſed from theyr ſinnes, ſhould haue no more conſcience of ſinne. But in theſe, commemoratiō is made euery yere of ſinne: for it is impoſſible that by the bloud of Goates and Calues, ſinnes ſhould be purged and taken away. Therfore comming into yͤ world he ſayd: Sacrifice and oblation thou wouldſt not haue, but a body haſt thou geuen me, peace offeringes for ſinne haue not pleaſed thee: Then ſayd I, behold I come. In the volume of the booke it is written of me, that I ſhould doe thy will O God: Saying as aboue, becauſe thou wouldeſt haue no ſacrifices, nor burnt offeringes for ſinne, neyther doeſt thou take pleaſure in thoſe things that are offered according to yͤ law. Then ſayd I, behold I come, that I may doe thy will O God. He taketh away the firſt, to ſtabliſhe that which followeth. In which will, we are ſanctified by the oblation of the body of Ieſus Chriſt, once for all. And euery prieſt is ready dayly miniſtring, and oftentimes offering like ſacrifices, which can neuer take away ſinnes. But this Ieſus offering one ſacrifice for ſinne, ſitteth for euermore on the right hand of God, expecting the time tyll his enemies be made his footſtoole. For by his owne onely oblation, hath he conſummated for euermore thoſe that are ſanctified.

The law bringeth none to perfection.

All theſe places haue I recited which Paule writeth, for the better vnderſtanding and declaration of thoſe thinges I meane to ſpeak. By all which it appeareth manifeſtly, how the Prieſthood of Chriſt, differeth from the legall prieſthood of Aaron: and by the ſame alſo appeareth, how the ſame differeth from all other prieſthood Chriſtian, that immitateth Chriſt. For the properties of the prieſthood of Chriſt aboue recited, are founde in no other Prieſt, but in Chriſt alone. Of the third prieſthood, that is, the Chriſtian prieſthood: Chriſt by expreſſe wordes ſpeaketh but litle, to make any difference betwene the prieſts and the reſt of the people, neither yet doth vſe this name of Sacerdos or præſbiter in yͤ Goſpell. But ſome he calleth diſciples, ſome apoſtels, whom he ſent to baptiſe & to preach, & in his name to do miracles. He calleth them yͤ ſalt of the earth, in which yͤ name of wiſedome is ment: and he calleth them the light of the world, by which, good liuing is ſignified. For he ſayth, So let your light ſo ſhine before mē, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorify your father which is in heauen. And Paule ſpeaking of the Prieſtes to Timothe, and Titus, ſeemeth not to mee to make any diuerſity betwixt the Prieſtes and the other people, but in that he woulde haue them to ſurmount other in knowledge and perfection of life. But the fourth prieſthood, is the Romaine prieſthood, brought in by the Church of Rome: which Churche maketh a diſtinction betwene the clergy and the lay people: &

The prieſthoode of Chriſt differeth from all other prieſthoods. The third prieſthoode. The name of Sacerdos or prieſt not vſed in the new Teſtament of Chriſt.

after that the clergy is deuided into ſundry degrees, as appeareth in the decretals.

The office of prieſtes after the popes order.

The body of Chriſt not left to be a ſacrifice for ſinne, but onely for a ſacrament.

How the memoriall of the ſacrament came to the realtie of the ſacrifice it ſelfe.

This diſtinction of the clergy from the laitye, with the tonſure of clerkes, began in the time of * Anacletus, as it doth appeare in the Chronicles. The degrees of the clergy were afterward inuented & diſtincted by their offices, and there was no aſcentiō to the degree of the prieſthood, but by inferior orders and degrees. But in the primitiue churche it was not ſo: for immediatly after the conuerſion of ſome of thē to the fayth & baptiſme receiued: they were prieſts & biſhops made, as appeareth by Ananias, whom Marcus made of a taylor or ſhomaker, to be a biſhop. And of many others it was in like caſe done, according to the traditions of the church of Rome. Prieſts are ordeined to offer ſacrifices, to make ſupplication and prayers, and to bleſſe & ſanctify. The oblation of the prieſthood, onely to Prieſtes (as they ſay) is congruent: whoſe duties are, vpon the aultar to offer for the ſinnes of the people the Lords body, which is cōſecrated of bread. Of which ſaying I haue great maruell, conſidering S. Paule his wordes to the Hebrues before recited. If Chriſt offering for our ſinnes one oblation for euermore, ſitteth on the right hand of God, and wyth that one oblation hath cōſūmated for euermore, thoſe that are ſanctified? If Chriſt euermore ſitteth on the right hand of God, to make interceſſion for vs, what neede he to leaue here any ſacrifice for our ſinnes, of the Prieſtes to be dayly offered? I do not finde in the ſcriptures of God nor of his Apoſtles, that the body of Chriſt ought to be made a ſacrifice for ſinne: but onely as a Sacrament and commemoration of the ſacrifice paſſed, whiche Chriſt offered vpon the aultar of the croſſe for our ſinnes. For it is an abſurditye to ſay, that Chriſt is now euery day really offered as a ſacrifice vpon the aultar by the Prieſtes: for then the Prieſtes ſhould really crucify him vpō the aultar, which is a thing of no Chriſtian to be beleeued. But euen as in his ſupper, his body & his bloud he deliuered to his Diſciples, in memorial of his body that ſhould be crucified on the morrow for our ſinnes: So after his aſcētion, did his Apoſtles vſe the ſame (when they brake bread in euery houſe) for a Sacramēt, and not for a ſacrifice, of the body and bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. And by this meanes were they put in remembraunce of the great loue of Chriſt, who ſo entirelye loued vs, that willinglye he ſuffered the death for vs, & for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. And thus did they offer thēſelues to God by loue, being ready to ſuffer death for the confeſſion of his name, and for the ſauing health of theyr brethren fulfilling the new commaundement of Chriſt, which ſayd vnto them: A new cōmaūdement do I geue vnto you that you loue one another, as I haue loued you. But whē loue began to waxe cold or rather to be froſen for cold, thorow the anguiſh & anxiety of perſecution for the name of Chriſt: then Prieſts did vſe the fleſh and bloud of Chriſt, in ſtead of a ſacrifice. And becauſe many of them feared death, ſome of them fled into ſolitarye places, not daring to geue themſelues a ſacrifice by death vnto God through the confeſſion of his name, & ſauing health of theyr brethrē: Some other worſhipped Idols fearing death, as did alſo yͤ chiefe Biſhop of Rome, and many other mo in diuers places of the world. And thus it came to paſſe, as that which was ordeined and inſtituted for a memoriall of the one & onely ſacrifice, was altered (for want of loue) into the realitye of the ſacrifice it ſelfe.

¶After theſe thinges thus diſcuſſed, he inferreth conſequently vpon the ſame, an other briefe tractation of women and laye men, whether in defect of the other, they may exerciſe the action of praier, and adminiſtration of Sacraments belonging to Prieſts: wherein he declareth the vſe receiued in the Popes Churche, for women to Baptiſe, which, ſayth he, cannot be without remiſsion of ſinnes, wherefore ſeeing that women haue power by the Pope to remit ſinne, and to baptiſe, why may they not aſwell be admitted to miniſter the Lordes Supper, in like caſe of neceſsity? Wherin alſo he maketh relation of Pope Iohn. 8. a woman Pope, mouing certayne Queſtions of her. Furthermore, as touching the fuction & office of praying and bleſſing, wherevnto Prieſtes ſeme to be ordeined (to omitte here the queſtion whether women may pray in Churches, in lacke of other meete perſons) it remayneth now alſo to proſecute. Chriſt being deſired of his Diſciples to teach them to pray, gaue them the common prayer both to men and women, to the which prayer in my eſtimation, no other is to be compared. For in that firſt, the whole honor due vnto the deity is comprehended. Secondly, whatſoeuer is neceſſary for vs, both for the time preſent, or paſt, or for time to come, is there deſired & praid for. He informeth vs beſides to pray ſecretly, and alſo briefly: ſecretly to enter into our cloſe chāber, and there in ſecrecy he willeth vs to pray vnto his father. And ſayth moreouer, when ye pray, vſe not much babling, or many words as doth yͤ heathen. For they thinke in their long and prolixe praying to be heard. Therfore be you not like to thē. By the which doctrine he calleth vs away frō the errors of the heathē Gentils: frō whom proceed theſe ſuperſtitious maner of artes (or rather of ignoraunces) as Necromancy, the art of diuinatiō, & other ſpiſes of coniuratiō, not vnknown to them, that be learned: for theſe Necromanſers beleue, one place to be of greater vertue then an other, there to be heard ſooner, then in an other. Like as Balaam being hyred to curſe yͤ people of God, by his arte of ſouthſaying, or cherming, when he could not accompliſh his purpoſe in one place, he remoued to an other, but he in yͤ end, was deceiued of hys deſire. For he intending firſt to curſe them, was not able to accurſe thē whom the Lord bleſſed, ſo that his curſe coulde not hurt any of all yͤ people. After like ſort the Nicromancers turne theyr face to the Eaſt, as to a place more apt for theyr prayers. Alſo yͤ Necromāſers beleue, that the vertue of yͤ words of the prayer, & the curioſity therof, cauſeth thē to bring to yͤ effect, which they ſeek after, which is alſo an other poynt of infidelity, vſed much of Charmers, Sorcerers, Inchaūters, Southſayers & ſuch like. Out of yͤ ſame arte (I feare) proceedeth the practiſe of exorciſing, wherby deuils & ſpirits be coniured to do that, wherunto they are inforced by the Exorciſt. Alſo wherby other creatures likewiſe are exorciſed or coniured, ſo that by the vertue of their exorciſme, they may haue theyr power and ſtrength exceeding all naturall operation.

Coniuring or halowing in the popiſh church.

Holy water coniured.

In the Church of Rome, many ſuch exorciſmes & coniurations be practiſed, & are called of them benedictions, or halowings. But here I aſke of theſe Exorciſers, whether they beleue the thinges and creatures ſo exorciſed and halowed, haue that operation and efficacy geuē them, which they pretēd? If they ſo beleue, euery child may ſee that they are farre beguiled. For holy water being of them exorciſed or cōiured: hath no ſuch power in it, neither cā haue which they in theyr exorciſme do cōmaund. For there they inioyn and commaund, that wherſoeuer that water is ſprinckled, all vexatiō or infeſtatiō of the vnclean ſpirit, ſhould auoid, and that no peſtilēt ſpirit there ſhould abide. &c. But moſt playn it is, that no water, be it neuer ſo holy, can haue any ſuch power ſo to do, as it is commaunded, to wit, to be an vniuerſall remedy to expell all diſeaſes.

Exorciſtæ.

The abſurditie & abhominatiō in the popiſh exorciſmes detected.

Where was the popes holy water then in the great peſtilence in the tyme of K. Edward. 3.

Iames. 4.

Romiſh coniurers.

This I woulde aſke of theſe Exorciſtes: whether in theyr commaunding, they do coniure or adiure the thinges coniured, to be of an higher vertue and operation, thē their own nature doth geue: Or els whether they in their prayers deſire of God, that he wil infude into them that vertue, which they require? If they in theyr commaunding doe ſo beleue, thē do they beleue that they haue that power in thē to the which the inferior power of the thing exorciſed muſt obey, in receiuing that which is commaunded. And ſo doing, are much more deceiued, foraſmuch as they ſee themſelues, that they which are ſo authoriſed to the office of exorciſing, ſay to the deuill being coniured: Go, & he goeth not: And to an other come, and he cōmeth not, & many thinges els they commaūd the inferior ſpirite their ſubiect, to do, & he doth not. So in like caſe, when they pray to God to make the water to be of ſuch vertue, that it may be to them health of mind and body, and that it may be able to expulſe euery vncleane ſpirit, & to chaſe away all maner of diſtemperature and peſtilence of the ayre (being an vnreaſonable petition aſked, & ſore diſpleaſing to God) it is to be feared leaſt theyr benediction, their halowing & bleſſing is chaunged into curſing, according to that ſaying that followeth. And now O you prieſts, I haue a meſſage to ſay vnto you: If you will not heare and beare well away in your mindes, to geue the glory vnto my name ſayth the Lord God of hoſtes, I will ſend ſcarcety amongeſt you, and I wyll curſe your bleſſings. What things and how many are bleſſed, or halowed in the Churche, that in halowing thereof diſpleaſe God, and are accurſed? And therfore according to the ſaying of S. Iames, they aſke & are not heard, becauſe the aſke not as they ſhould, that they in theyr owne deſires may periſh. Let a man beholde the bleſſing or halowing of their fire, water, incenſe, waxe, bread, wine, the church, the aultar. the Churchyard, aſhes, belles, copes, palmes, oile, candles, ſalt, the hallowing of the ring, the bed, the ſtaffe, & of many ſuch like things: & I beleue that a man ſhall find out many errors of the hethē Magicians, witches, ſouthſayers and charmers. And notwithſtanding the auncient and old Magicians in their bookes, commaund thoſe that be coniurers that they in any wiſe liue deuoutly (for otherwiſe as they ſay the ſpirites will not obey their cōmaūdements, and coniuratiōs) yet the Romane cōiurers do impute it to the vertue of the holy wordes, becauſe they be they, which worke, and not the holynes of the coniurers. How commeth it to paſſe that they ſay, the thinges conſecrated of a curſed and vicious Iauell, ſhould haue ſo great vertue in pronouncing (as they ſay) the holy and miſticall words: as if they were pronoūced of a Prieſt neuer ſo holy. But I maruell that they ſay ſo, reading this ſaying in the Actes of the Apoſtles: becauſe the charmers pronouncing the name of Ieſus (that is aboue all names) would haue healed thoſe that were poſſeſſed with deuils, and ſayd. In the name of Ieſus whom Paul preacheth, go ye out of the men. And the poſſeſſed with deuils aunſwered, Ieſus we know, and Paule we know, but what are ye: and they all to be beat the coniurers.

The prayer of a vitious prieſt, little auayleth before God.

Remembraunce of Chriſtes paſſion needeth not to God, but to man.

Prieſtes more bound to ſay Maſſe cōmāded by man: then to preaching commāded of God. Spirituall fornication.

Ieronymus.

And now conſidering this and many ſuch like things, I maruell wherfore the vicious Prieſts, do ſell theyr praiers and bleſſings dearer (as alſo theyr Maſſes & Trentals of Maſſes) then thoſe that be deuout lay mē, and holy women: which with all theyr hart deſire do flee from vices, & take hold of vertue. For as much as God in diuers places of the Scripture doth promiſe, that he will not heare ſinners & wicked perſons: Neither ſhould he ſeme to be iuſt, if he ſhould ſooner heare the praiers of his enemies, then of his faythfull frend. How I pray you ſhall a ſinneful prieſt deliuer an other man from ſinne by his prayers, or els frō the puniſhment of ſinne: whē he is not able to deliuer him ſelfe by his prayer frō ſinne? what then doth God ſo much accept in the Maſſe of a vicious Prieſt: that for his maſſe, his prayer or oblatiō, he might deliuer any man either frō ſinne, or from the payne due to ſinne? No, but for that that Chriſt hath once offered himſelfe for our ſinnes, & now ſitteth on the right hand of God the father, alwayes ſhewing vnto him what and how great things he hath ſuffered for vs. And euery prieſt alwayes maketh mētion in his maſſe of this oblation: Neither do we this, that we might bring the ſame oblation into the remembraunce of God: becauſe that he alwayes in his preſence ſeeth the ſame. But that we ſhould haue in remēbraunce this ſo great loue of God, that he would geue his own ſonne to death for our ſinnes, that he might clenſe & purify vs frō all our ſinnes. What doth it pleaſe God, that the remembraunce of ſo great loue is made by a preſt, which more loueth ſinne then God? Or how can any prayer of ſuch a prieſt pleaſe God, in what holy place ſoeuer he be, or what holy veſtimēts ſoeuer he put on, or what holy prayers ſoeuer he maketh? And where as Chriſt and his Apoſtles do cōmaund the preaching of the word of God: the Prieſts be now more bound to celebrate the Maſſe, and more ſtraitly bound to ſay the Canonicall houres: whereat I cannot but greatly marueil. For why, to obey the precepts of men, more then the cōmaūdements of God, is in effect to honor mā as God, and to beſtow the ſacrifice vpon man, which is due vnto God, and this is alſo ſpirituall fornication. How therfore are Prieſts bound at the commaundement of man to leaue the preaching of yͤ word of God, at whoſe cōmaundemēt they are not bound to leaue the celebration of the Maſſe, or ſinging of Matines? Therefore as it ſeemeth, Prieſtes ought not at the commaundement of any man to leaue the preaching of the word of God, vnto the which they are boūd both by diuine and Apoſtolicall preceptes. With whom agreeth the writing of Hierome vpon the Decretals, ſaying in this wiſe: Let none of the Biſhops ſwell with the enuy of deuiliſhe temptation, let none be angry, if the Prieſtes do ſometime exhort the people, if they preach in theyr Church. &c. for to him that forbiddeth me theſe thinges I will ſay, that he is vnwilling that Prieſtes ſhould do thoſe thinges, which be commaunded of God. What thing is there aboue Chriſt? or what may be preferred before his body and his bloud? &c.

Whether prieſts may bargen to ſing for ſoules departed.

Ieronymus.

Do Prieſtes therfore ſinne or not, which bargayne for mony to pray for the ſoule of any dead man? It is well knowne that Ieſus did whip thoſe that were buyers and ſellers out of the tēple, ſaying: My houſe ſhalbe called the houſe of prayer, but you haue made the ſame a denne of theeues. Truely he caſt not out ſuch Marchaunts frō out of the Church, but becauſe of theyr ſinnes. Wherupon Hierome vpon this text ſayth. Let the Prieſts be diligent and take good heede in this Churche, that they turne not the houſe of God into a den of theeues. He doubtles is a theef which ſeeketh gayne by Religion, & by a ſhew of holynes ſtudieth to finde occaſion of marchaundiſe. Hereupon, the holy Canons do make accurſed, Symoniacal hereſy, & doe commaund that theſe ſhould be depriued of the prieſthood, which for the paſſing or maruelous ſpiritual grace, do ſeek gayne or monye. Peter the Apoſtle ſayde to Symon Magus, Let thy mony and thou go both to the deuill, whiche thinkeſt that the giftes of God may be bought for money. Therefore, the ſpirituall gyftes of God ought not to bee ſolde.

Selling of prayer abhominable.

Verely prayer is the ſpirituall gift of God, as is alſo yͤ preaching of yͤ word of God, or the laying on of handes, or the adminiſtration of other Sacramentes. Chriſt ſending forth his Diſciples to preach, ſayd vnto them: Heale ye the ſicke, caſt out deuils, rayſe the dead, freely haue ye receiued freely geue ye agayne. If the Prieſtes haue power by theyr prayers to deliuer ſoules being in Purgatory, from greeuous paynes: without doubt, he hath receiued that power freely from God. How therefore can he ſell his act, vnleſſe he reſiſt the commaundementes of God, of whom he hath receiued that authoritye? This truly cannot be done without ſinne, which is agaynſt the commaundement of God.

Religious men and women, deuourers of wydowes houſes.

Praying for ſoules in Purgatory.

Euil gotten lādes as euil beſtowed, for praying for ſoules in Purgatory,

How playnly ſpake Chriſt to the Phariſies, & Prieſts ſaying, wo be vnto you Scribes & Phariſies hypocrites, becauſe ye haue eaten the whole houſes, of ſuch as be wydowes, by making long praiers, and therfore haue you receiued greater dānation. Wherin I pray you do our Phariſies and Prieſtes differ from them? Do not our Prieſtes deuour widowes houſes and poſſeſſions, that by their lōg prayers they might deliuer the ſoules of their huſbāds frō the greuous paynes of purgatory? How many Lordſhips I pray you, haue bene beſtowed vpon the religious mē & womē to pray for the dead, that they by their prayer might deliuer thoſe dead men from the payne (as they ſayd) that they ſuffer in purgatory, greuouſly tormented and vexed? If theyr prayers and ſpeaking of holy words, ſhall not be able to deliuer themſelues frō payn, vnleſſe they haue good works: How ſhall other men be deliuered from payne, by their praiers, which whileſt they liued here, they gaue ouer themſelues to ſinne? Yea peraduētnre thoſe Lordſhips or landes which they gaue vnto the prieſtes to pray for them, they themſelues haue gotten by might from other faythful men, vniuſt, and violently. And the Canous doe ſay, that ſinne is not forgeuē, till yͤ thing taken away wrōgfully, be reſtored. How thē ſhal they be able (which do vniuſtly poſſeſſe ſuch Lordſhippes or landes) to deliuer them by theyr prayers from payne, which haue geuen to them theſe lordſhips or landes, ſeing God from the beginning hath hated all extortion in his burnt ſacrifices? Not euerye one that ſayth vnto me Lord, Lord, ſhal enter into the kingdome of heauen: but he which doth the will of my father which is in heauē. And agayne, not the hearers of the law, but the doers of the law ſhall be iuſtified.

Bying and ſellyng of prayers in the Popes Church. Bying and ſelling of pardons. Parſō, place, apparell, curioſitie or eloquence of prayer not regarded of God.

The prayer of the phariſie and of the Publicāe cōpared.

Prayer that doth more for money then for charitie diſproued.

If therefore the words of him that prayth, do not deliuer himſelfe from ſinne, nor frō the payne of ſinne: how do they deliuer other men from ſinne or frō the payne of ſinne when no man prayth more earneſtly for an other man thē for himſelfe? Therefore many are deceiued in buying or ſelling of prayers, as in yͤ buying of pardons that they might be deliuered from payne: whē as commonly they pay dearer for the prayers of the proud & vicious prelates, thē for the prayers of deuout women and deuout men of the laye people. But out of doubt, God doth not regard the perſon of him that prayth, neither the place in which he praith, nor his apparell, nor the curiouſnes of his prayer, but yͤ humility and godlye affection of him that prayeth. Did not the Phariſy and the Publican goe vp into the temple to pray? The Publicans prayer for his humility and godly affection is heard. But the Phariſies prayer for his pride & arrogancy is contempned. Cōſider that neither the perſon, nor the place, nor yͤ ſtate, nor the curiouſnes of his prayer doth helpe the Phariſye: Becauſe the Publicane not thinking himſelfe worthy to lift vp his eies vnto heauen, for yͤ multitude of his ſinnes, ſaying (O God be mercifull vnto me a ſinner) is iuſtified by his humility, and his praier is heard. But the Phariſy boaſting in his righteouſnes is deſpiſed, becauſe God thruſteth downe the proud, and exalteth the humble and thoſe that be meek. The rich glotton alſo, that was clothed with purple and ſilke, & fared euery day daintely, prayd vnto Abraham, and is not heard, but is buryed in paynes and torments of hell fire. But Lazarus whiche lay begging at his gate (being full of ſores) is placed in the boſome of Abraham. Behold yͭ neither the riches of his apparell, nor the deliciouſneſſe of his banquets, or the gorgiouſnes of his eſtate, neither the aboundance of his riches, doth helpe any thing to prefer the prayers or petitiōs of the rich glotten, nor yet diminiſhe his tormentes, becauſe that mighty men in their mightines ſhal ſuffer torments mightely. How dare any man by cōpoſition demaund or receiue any thing of an other man for his prayers? If he beleue yͭ he can by his praier deliuer his brother frō greuous paine, he is boūd by charity to relieue his brother with his prayers although he be not hired thereunto, but and if he will not pray vnles he be hyred, thē hath he no loue at al. What therfore helpeth his prayer, which abideth not in charitie? Therfore let him firſt take compaſſion of himſelfe by praier, that he may come into charitie, and then he ſhalbee the better able to helpe others. If he beleeue not, or yͭ he ſtandeth in doubt to be able to deliuer his brother by his praier: wherfore doth he make with him an aſſured bargayn, & taketh his mony, and yet knoweth not whether he ſhall relieue him euer a whit the more or not, from his paine? I feare leaſt the wordes of the Prophet are fulfilled, ſaying: From the leaſt to the moſt al mē applye themſelues to couetouſnes, and from the Prophet to the Prieſt all worke deceitfully. For the poore prieſts excuſe themſelues, of ſuch bargaining and ſelling of their praiers, ſaying: The yong cock learneth to crow of the olde cocke. For ſayeth he, thou maiſt ſee that the Pope himſelfe in ſtalling of Biſhops & Abbots, taketh the firſt frutes: In yͤ placing or beſtowing of benefices, he alwaies taketh ſomwhat, & ſpecially if the benefices be great. Alſo he ſelleth pardōs or bulles, and to ſpeake more plaine, he taketh mony for them. Biſhops in geuing orders, in hallowing churches & churchyards, do take mony: In eccleſiaſtical correction they take mony for the mitigation of penance: In the greuous offences of cōuict perſons, mony is required, & cauſed to be payed, Abbots, Monkes, & other religious men that haue poſſeſſiō, wil receiue no mā into their fraternitie, or make thē partakers of their ſpiritual ſuffrages, vnles he beſtow ſomewhat vpon them, or promiſe them ſomewhat. Curates & vicars hauing ſufficient liuings, by the tithes of their paryſhioners, yet in dirges and yeares myndes, in hearing confeſſions, in weddinges & buryings, do require & haue money. The Fryers alſo of the fower orders of beggers, which think thēſelues to be the moſt perfiteſt men of the Church, do take mony for their praiers, confeſſions, & buryings of the dead: and when they preach, they beleue that they ſhal haue eyther money or ſome other thyng worthy money. Wherfore then be the poore prieſts blamed? ought not they to bee held excuſed, although they take money for their praiers by cōpoſitiō? Truly (me thinketh) that this excuſe by other mens ſins, doth not excuſe thē: foraſmuch, as to heap one miſchief vpon anothers head, is no ſufficiēt diſcharge. I would to God that al the buyers & ſellers of ſpiritual ſuffrages, would with the eyes of their harte beholde the ruine of the great Citie, and the fall of Babylon, and that which they ſhall ſaye after that fall. Doth not the Prophet ſay: And the merchaunts of the earth ſhall weepe and mourne for her, becauſe no man ſhall buy anye more their marchandiſe, that is, their marchandiſe of gold and ſiluer, and of precious ſtone and of pearle, and of ſilke and purple: And again he ſayth. And the marchaunts which were made riche by her, ſhall ſtand alouſe for feare of her tormentes, weeping, mourning, and ſaying, Alas, Alas, that Citie Babylon, that great Citie whych was woont to weare purple, whiteſilke, crimſin, gold, pearle, and precious ſtone, becauſe that in one hour al thoſe ryches are come to nought: And agayne: And they caſt duſt vppon their heads and cryed out weping and mourning and ſaying, Alas, Alas, that great and mightie Citie Babilon, by whom al ſuch as had ſhippes vpon the ſea were made riche by her rewards: Becauſe that in one houre ſhe is become deſolate.

Example to be taken by the fall of Babylon.

This Babilon, this great Citie, is the Citie of Rome, as it appeareth by the proceſſe of the Apoſtle. Becauſe the aungel which ſhewed vnto Saint Iohn the deſtructiō of the mightie harlot ſitting vpon many waters, with whō the kinges of the earth haue committed fornication, and al they which dwell vpon the earth are made dronke with yͤ wyne of her whoredome, ſayd vnto him: And the woman which thou ſaweſt, is the great citie which hath dominion aboue kings &c. And in dede in yͤ daies of Saint Iohn the whole world was ſubiect to the temporall Empire of the Citie of Rome, and afterwardes it was ſubiect to the ſpiritual Empire or dominion of the ſame. But touching the temporal gouernment of the City of Rome, it is fallen already: and ſo that the other alſo, for the multitude of her ſpiritual fornicatiōs ſhal fall. The Emperours of this city gaue themſelues to Idolatry, and would haue that mē ſhould honour them as Gods, & put al thoſe to death that refuſed ſuch idolatry, & by the cruelty of their torments, al infidels gate the vpper hand.

The citie of Rome, Babilon Apoc. 18

The temporall dominiō of the citie of Rome.

The ſpirituall dominiō of the citie of Rome.

Hereupon, by the image of Nabuchodonoſor, yͤ empire of the Romaines is likened to yron, which beateth together, and hath the maſtery of all mettals. And in the viſiō of Daniel, wherein he ſaw the foure windes of heauen to fight in the mayne ſea, and fower great beaſtes comming out of the ſea: The kingdom of the Romaynes is lykened to the fourth terrible and maruelous beaſt, the which had great yron teeth: eating & deſtroying, and treading the reſt vnder his feete: & this beaſt had ten hornes, & as Danyell ſayth, he ſhall ſpeake wordes agaynſt the moſt higheſt, and ſhall teare with his teeth the Saynts of the moſt higheſt: and he ſhall thinke, that he may be able to chaunge times and lawes, and they ſhall be delyuered into hys power, vntill a tyme, tymes, and halfe a time. In the Apocalips, Saine Iohn ſawe a beaſt comming out of the ſea, hauyng 7. heads and 10. hornes, and power was geuen to hym to make monthes 42. So long time endured the Empire of the Romaynes, that is to ſay, from the beginning of Iulius Ceſar, which was the firſt Emperor of yͤ Romains, vnto the ende of Fridericus, whych was the laſt Emperour of the Romaines. Vnder this empire Chriſt ſuffred, & other Martirs alſo ſuffred for his name ſake. And here is fallen Rome as Babylon (which is all one) accordyng to the maner of ſpeakyng in the Apocalips as touchynge the temporal and corporal power of gouerning. And thus ſhall ſhe fall, alſo touchynge the ſpirituall power of gouerning, for the multitude of the iniquities and ſpirituall fornication and merchaundiſe that are committed by her in the Church.

The fourth beaſt in the propheſie of Daniel meaneth Rome.

The beaſt with 7. heades in the Apoc. ſignifieth Rome.

The feete of yͤ image which Nabuchodonezor ſaw, dyd betoken the Empire of Rome, & part of them were of yron, and part of clay & earth. The part that was of yron fell, and yͤ power therof vaniſhed away, becauſe yͤ power therof was at an end after certaine monthes. That part of clay and earth yet endureth, but it ſhal vaniſh away by the teſtimony of the Prophets: whereupon ſaint Iohn in the Apocalips: After that, he ſawe the part made of yron riſing out of the ſea, to which eche people, tribe, and tong ſubmitted themſelues. And he ſaw an other beaſt cōmyng out of the earth, which had two hornes, like to the hornes of a Lambe, and he ſpake like a Dragon, and he vanquyſhed the firſt beaſt in his ſight.

The feete of the Image in the dreame of Nabuchodonozar ſignifieth Rome

This beaſt as ſeemeth me, doth betoken the claye and earthē part of the feete of yͤ image, becauſe hee came out of yͤ earth. For yͭ by terrene helpe he is made the high & chief prieſt of the Romaines, in the church of Chriſt, & ſo from alow he aſcended on hygh. But Chriſt from heauen deſcended, becauſe that he which was God & author of euery creature became man: and he that was Lord of Lords, was made in the ſhape of a ſeruant. And although that in the heauens the company of angels miniſter vnto him, he himſelfe miniſtred or ſerued in earth, that he might teache vs humilitie, by which a man aſcendeth into heauen, euen as by pride a man goeth downe into the bottomleſſe pyt. This beaſt hath two hornes moſt like a Lambe, becauſe yͭ he chalengeth to himſelfe both yͤ prieſtlye & kingly power, aboue al other here in earth. The Lambe that is Chryſt which is a king for euer vpō yͤ kingly ſeat of Dauid, & he is a Prieſt for euer after yͤ order of Melchiſedech: but hys kingdome is not of this world, but the kingdome of thys beaſt is of this world, becauſe thoſe yͭ be vnder him, fyght for him. And as Ieſus is Chriſt two maner of waies, becauſe that Chriſtus is as much to ſay as Vnctus. He verelye was annoynted king, & annointed prieſt: ſo this beaſt ſaieth that he is chiefe king & prieſt. Wherefore doth he call himſelfe Chriſt? becauſe that Chryſt knowing that afore, ſayd: Many ſhal come in my name, ſaying, I am Chryſt, and ſhall deceyue many. And thus becauſe that he is both king & prieſt, he chalengeth to himſelfe the double ſworde, that is the corporall ſword and the ſpirituall ſworde. The corporal ſword is in his right hand, and yͤ ſpiritual ſword is in his right eye, by the teſtimony of Zachary. But hee ſpeaketh ſubtilly like a Dragon, becauſe that by the teſtymony of Chriſt he ſhal deceiue many, as the Apoc. witneſſeth. He did great wonders, that alſo he might make more fire to come from heauen into the earth in the ſight of mē, that he might deceiue thoſe that dwel vpon the earth, becauſe of the wonders that are permitted hym to do in the ſight of the beaſt, & hee ouercame the firſt beaſt which aſcended out of the ſea. For that beaſt challenged vnto himſelf authoritie of gouernment of yͤ whole worlde. He hath put to death & tormented thoſe that reſiſt his commaundements, and would be honored as a God vpon the earth. The byſhop of Rome ſayth, that yͤ whole world ought to be in ſubiectiō vnto him, thoſe that be diſobediēt vnto his commaundements, he putteth in priſon, and to death if he can: If he cannot, he excommunicateth them, and commaundeth them to be caſt into the deuils dūgeon. But hee that hath no power ouer yͤ body, much leſſe hath he power ouer yͤ ſoule. And truely his excommunicatiō, nor the excommunication of any prieſt vnder him, ſhall at that time little hurt him that is excommunicat, ſo that the perſon of him that is excommunicate, be not firſt excommunicat of God through ſinne.

The beaſt with two hornes lyke the Lambe, ſignifieth the ſpirituall dominion of Rome.

Ieſus is Chriſt two maner of wayes, as King and prieſt.

The double ſword of the Pope.

And thus it ſeemeth a trouth vnto me, that God thus turneth their bleſſinges into curſinges, becauſe they geue not due glory vnto his name. So when yͭ they vniuſtly excommunicate & curſe, he turneth their curſings into bleſſings. Alſo the biſhop of Rome doth make mē to worſhyp him as God, becauſe that yͤ ſpecial ſacrifice that God doth require of vs, is to be obedient vnto him in keping of hys commaundements. But now yͤ Popes commaundemēts be commaunded to be kept, and be kept in very deede, but the commaundements of Chriſt are contemned and reiected. Thus ſitteth the Byſhop of Rome in the Temple of God, ſhewing himſelfe as God, and extolleth himſelfe aboue al that which is called God, or worſhipped as God. But in his fall he ſhalbe reuealed, becauſe that euery kingdome deuided in it ſelf, ſhalbe made deſolate. He teaching a truthe, is the head of the Churche, but the Prophet teaching a lye, is the tayle of the Dragon. Hee ſeducyng the worlde, ſhalbe acknowledged to be the veritie of the doctrine of Chriſt, but after he is knowne, he ſhalbee reiected and naught eſteemed. He geueth to ſmall and great, riche and poore, free and bonde, markes in their right hands, & in their foreheades: that no man ſhoulde buy or ſell, but thoſe that ſhall haue the marks of the name of the beaſt, or that looketh to haue of him ſome recompence, ſmall, mean, or great, or els the number of his name, which number is 300. The Pope ſayth that in yͤ adminiſtration of euery ſacrament, he doth imprint a certaine character or mark into the ſoul of him that receiueth. In baptiſme he ſaith that he doth imprint into the ſoule of hym that is baptiſed, a marke that cannot be wiped out, and ſo likewiſe in other ſacraments. And I knowe that in a Sacrament are two things, that is, the ſacramental ſigne, & ſpiritual grace repreſented by the ſame ſigne: the ſacramental ſigne is geuē to man of man, but the ſpirituall grace is geuen of Chriſt.

The Biſh. of Rome ſeeketh to be worſhipped as God.

The commaundementes of the pope more regarded then Chriſtes.

In euery Sacrament 2. thinges conteyned.

Wherefore, although a vicious or naughty Prieſt doth baptiſe any man, if he that is baptiſed or his parents (if he be a childe) do aſke with faithful meaning baptiſme, & do meane faithfully hereafter to obſerue the wordes of baptiſme: is as well baptiſed, as if hee were baptiſed of neuer ſo vertuous a prieſt. So alſo the ſinner which with al hys hart is ſory for his ſinnes, and doth aſke faithfully mercye of God, is as wel abſolued of a vicious prieſt, as of a vertuous. Becauſe the Lambe of god whych taketh away the ſinnes of the world, wipeth away inwardly our ſinnes by his grace, becauſe that he is yͤ biſhop & paſtor of our ſouls. All other prieſtes do outwardly worke abſolution, which knowe not for a certaintye whether they haue abſolued or not. So alſo is it in yͤ other, becauſe yͭ the grace of yͤ ſacrament is geuen of God, and the ſacramental ſigne, of man. In geuing of orders, the chiefe biſhop doth imprint yͤ corporall markes, but of the ſpiritual markes, I know none: vnleſſe a man will ſay, that by receiuing the order he hath ſome beliefe that he may worke ſome thinges pertayning to that order, the which before the receiuing of the order he could not. But this one thing is, that none in the churche ought to ſell ſpiritual marchandiſe (of which thinges wee haue ſpoken before) vnles he haue the marke of the beaſt. My counſell is, let the buyer beware of thoſe markes: becauſe that after the fall of Babylon, if any man hath worſhipped the beaſt and her image, & hath receiued the marke vpon his forehead, & vpon his hand, he ſhall drinke of the wine of gods wrath, which is mixed with the wyne in the cup of his anger, and he ſhalbe tormented in fire & brymſtone in the ſight of the holy angels, and in the ſight of the Lambe: and the ſmoke of their tormentes ſhall euer more aſcend, although he looke for a recompence, ſmall, mean, or great, of the beaſt, or els the nūber of his name. The beaſt doubtles doth recompence his friends, with his ſmall rewarde, that is, with great gifts and benefices corporall: with a meane reward, that is, with great ſpirituall gifts, in authority of bleſſing, loſing, binding, praying, & exerciſing other ſpiritual workes: & with his greateſt rewarde, which after that they be dead, maketh them to be honored in earth amōg the ſaints. The number of his name according to yͤ opinion of ſome men, is Dux Cleri, the captayne of the clergie, becauſe by that name he is named, & maketh his name knowne, and that name is 666.

The number of the name of the beaſt. Dux cleri.

This is my opinion of the beaſt aſcending out of the earth, and ſhall vntill ſuche time as I ſhalbee of the ſame beaſt better inſtructed. And although that this beaſt doth ſignifie the Romaine biſhops: yet the other cruel beaſt aſcending out of the ſea, doth ſignifye the Romayne Emperours. And although that the Dragon being a cruel beaſt, and the falſe Prophet geuing the marke, muſt be throwen into the lake of fire and brimſtone to be tormēted for euer: I woulde haue no man to iudge, but I leaue ſuch things altogether to the finall iudgement of Chryſt to bee determined. But Martine the Popes confeſſour which maketh the Chronicle of the Emperours and Popes, recyteth many errours of the Popes, more horrible and abhomynabl then of the Emperours. For he ſpeaketh of the idolatrous Popes, hereticall, ſimoniacal, and Popes yͭ were murderers, that vſed nigromancie, and wytchcraft, that were fornicatours, and defyled with al kinde of vice. But I haue partly declared how that the Popes lawe is contrary to Chriſtes lawe, and howe that he ſayeth, that he is the chiefe vicar of Chriſt in earth: and in his deedes is cōtrary to Chriſt, and doth forſake both hys doctrine & lyfe. I can not ſee who els may be ſo well Antichriſt, and a ſeducer of the people. For there is not a greater peſtilence, then a familiar enemy.

Martinus pænitentiarius.

Mo wicked popes then Emperours.

As concerning idols, and the worſhipping of them, I think of them as Moſes, Salomon, Iſayas, Ieremy, and the reſt of the Prophetes, which all ſpake agaynſt the making of Images, as alſo yͤ worſhipping of Images. And faithful Dauid full of the ſpirit of God, ſayth: Let all thoſe be confounded yͭ worſhip Images, and that reioyce in Idols: And againe he ſayth: Let thē be made like vnto them yͭ make them, & al ſuch as put their truſt in them. Wherefore I pray god that this euil come not vpon me, which is the curſe of God pronounced by Dauid the prophet. Nor I wil be by Gods grace, neither a maker, nor els a worſhipper of Images.

As cōcerning othes, I beleue and obey the doctrine of the almighty God, & my maiſter Ieſus Chriſt, which teacheth: that Chriſtian men in affirmation of a truth, ſhould paſſe the righteouſnes of the Scribes and Phariſes of the olde Teſtament, or els he excludeth thē from the kingdom of heauen. For he ſaith: Unles your righteouſnes exceede the righteouſnes of the Scribes and Phariſes, ye cannot enter into yͤ kingdome of heauē. And as concerning othes he ſayth. It hath bene ſayd to them of old time, thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe, but ſhalt performe vnto the Lorde thoſe thinges which yͧ voweſt. But I ſaye vnto you thou ſhalt not ſweare at all, neyther by the heauē nor yet by the earth. &c. But let your cōmunication be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatſoeuer ſhalbe more then this, proceedeth of euill. Therefore, as the perfection of the auncient men of the old Teſtament was, not to forſweare themſelues: ſo the perfection of Chriſtian men is not to ſweare at all, becauſe they are ſo cōmaunded of Chriſt, whoſe commaundement muſt in no caſe be broken: although that yͤ Citie of Rome is contrarye to thys doctryne of Chryſt euen as in manye things ſhe is found contray to her ſelfe.

Othes how far they are tollerable.

As touching the taking away of temporal goods from thoſe that are eccleſiaſtical perſons offendyng habitualiter: by ſuch as are temporall Lordes, I will not affirme anye thing to be lawful in this matter (as in other matters before) that is not agreable to charitie: And that for becauſe it is a hard matter for a man to take another mans goods from him without breaking of charity, becauſe peraduenture he that taketh away, is the more moued to ſuche maner of taking away be reaſon of the deſire he hath to thoſe goods, which he indeuoureth to take away: or els, becauſe of ſome diſpleaſure or hatred to the perſon, from whom he goeth about to take away thoſe goods, then that hee from whom thoſe goodes be taken, ſhould be amended. Therefore, vnleſſe he that taketh away, be onely moued of charity to the taking away of ſuch goodes, I dare not affirme that ſuch taking is lawfull. And if ſuch takyng away procede of charitie, I dare not iudge it vnlawfull: becauſe that the Byſhop of Rome which receyued hys temporall dominion of the Emperour, when the Emperour rebelled and was not obedient vnto hym, he depriued him frō hys temporall iuriſdictions: Howe much more then may temporal Lordes do the ſame which haue beſtowed vpon them many temporall dominions and lordſhips, onely to the intent that they might the better intende to ſerue God and keepe his commaundementes. Nowe if they perceiue that they be againſt the lawes of God, and that they be ouer buſily occupied about worldly matters: I cannot ſee but yͭ they may wel inough take frō them thoſe temporall goodes, which to a good purpoſe they gaue them. But if in time to come after this, thoſe that be temporal lordes ſhall take from eccleſiaſtical perſons ſuch temporalties: let him that deſireth to vnderſtand this, read the prophet Ezechiel in the chapiter of the ſhepeherds of Iſrael, which fedde themſelues in ſtead of their flocke: and alſo let hym reade the Apocalips of the fall of Babylon. Let hym alſo reade the Popes decretalles agaynſt heretikes, and in thoſe hee ſhall fynde, that the takynge awaye of the temporaltyes from the Cleargy, ſhall come to paſſe for the multitude of their ſinnes.

Whether temporall goods may be taken away from eccleſiaſticall perſons offending.

Popes take from Emperours their benefactors, temporall dominion when they offend: Ergo, much more may Emperours take from popes temporall dominion whē they offend.

A prophecie of Walter Brute, that temporall goods ſhall be taken away frō the clergie for the multitude of their ſinnes.

Thus reuerend father, haue I made mine aunſwere of the matter wherof I am accuſed: beſeching you, that as I haue bene obedient to your deſire, and that euen as a ſōne declaring vnto you the ſecrets of my hart in plain wordes (although rudely) ſo I deſire to know your opinion, and craue your fatherly beneuolẽce: that now your labor may be for my inſtruction and amendment, & not to accuſation and condemnation. For like as in the beginninge I haue promiſed you, yͤ if any man of what ſtate, ſect, or condition ſoeuer he be, can ſhew me any errour in anye of my wrytings by the authoritie of holy ſcripture, or by any probable reaſon grounded in the ſcriptures: I will receiue hys information willingly and humbly.

Walter Brute againe commaunded to appeare.

After that all the foreſaid thinges were exhibited & geuen by the foreſayd Walter Brute, vnto the foreſayd B. of Herford: he further appointed to the ſame Walter, yͤ third day of the month of October, at Herforde, with yͤ cõtinuance of the dayes followyng to heare hys opinion. Which third day now at hande, beinge Friday in the yeare of our Lord God 1393. the ſayde Walter Brute, appeared before hym, ſitting in Commiſſion in the Cathedrall Churche of Herford, at ſixe a clocke or thereabout: hauing for his aſſiſtentes in the ſame place, diuers Prelates and Abbotes, and xx. Bachelers of Diuinitie, whereof xij. were Monks, and two Doctors of the law. Amongſt theſe was Nicholas Hereford, accõpanied with many other Prelates and worſhypfull men & wyſe Graduates in ſundry faculties. Now was the foreſayde Walter apposed of his wrytings aforeſaid, & the cõtents therin. Earneſt were they in pycking out of thoſe writings, his hereſies, & in ſhewing his ſchiſmes, ſundry errours, and diuers other things. Now, after that they had cõtinued al that day and the two dayes following (that is Fryday, Saterday, & Sunday) in their informations & examinations agaynſt the ſame Walter Brute. The ſame Walter Brute ſubmitted him ſelfe to the determination of the church, & to the correction of the ſayd John Biſhop, as it appeareth word for word in a ſcroule written in the Engliſh tong: The tenour of which ſcroul, is as followeth.

Byſhops & Abbots, with 20. Bachelors of diuinitie, 12 monkes 2 Doctors of law ſitting vppon Walter Brute. Nicholas Herford here alſo preſent.

The Writinges of Walter Brute examined.

¶ I Walter Brute ſubmit my ſelfe principally to the Euangely of Ieſus Chriſt, and to the determination of holy kirke, and to the general Counſels of holye kirke. And to the ſentence and determination of the foure Doctours of holye write, that is Auſten, Ambroſe, Ierome, and Gregory. And I meekely ſubmit mee to your correction, as a ſubiect ought to his Byſhop.

The tenor of the ſubmiſſion of Walter Brute.

Which ſcroule as afore is recited in yͤ Engliſh tong, the foreſayd Walter Brute read, with a lowde and intelligible voice, at the Croſſe in the churchyard on Monday, that is to ſay, the 6. day of the ſayd month of October, before the ſermon made vnto the people in preſence of yͤ ſayd byſhop of Herford & other aboue written, as alſo other Barons, knights and noble men & cleargy, and alſo a great multytude of people. After which reading of the ſcroule, the foreſaid Tho. Crawlay bachelor of diuinitie, made yͤ Sermon vnto the people, & toke for hys theame the wordes of yͤ Apoſtle to the Rom. the xj. chap. that is as foloweth. Be not ouer wiſe in your owne conceites but ſtand in feare &c.

The ſubmiſſion of Walter Brute openly read at Herford.

☞ Out of theſe declarations and wrytinges of Walter Brute, the Biſhop with the Monkes and doctours aboue reherſed, did gather and draw out certaine articles, to the number of 37. which they ſent to the Uniuerſitie of Cambridge to be cõfuted, vnto two learned men, M. Colwill, & M. Newton, Bachelers of diuinitie. Which M. Colwil, & Newton did both labor in the matter, to the vttermoſt of their cunning, in replying and aunſwering to the ſaid 37. articles.

*Beſides them alſo W. Woodforde a Frier (who wrote likewiſe againſt the articles of Wickliff) labouring in the ſame cauſe, made a ſolemne & a long tractation, compiling the articles of the ſaid Brute, to the nũber of 29. All which treatiſes, as I wiſh to come to the readers hande, that the ſlendernes of them myght be knowen: ſo it maye happen percaſe, yͤ the ſame being in my handes may hereafter bee further publiſhed, with other like tractations moe, as cõuenient time for the prolixitie therof may hereafter, better ſerue then now.

What after this became to this Walter Brute, or what end he had, I find it not regiſtred: but like it is, that he for this time eſcaped. Certain other writings I finde moreouer, which albeit they beare no name of this Walter, nor of any certaine author: yet becauſe they are in yͤ ſame regiſter adioined to yͤ hiſtory of him, I thought therfore moſt fit here to be inſerted. Of yͤ which yͤ one was a letter ſet to Nicholas Hereford a little aboue ſpecified: who beinge at yͤ firſt a great folower of John Wicklif, as appereth before pag. 438. was now in the number of thẽ which ſate vpon thys Walter, as is in yͤ next page aboue recorded. The copy of this letter, bering no name of any ſpecial author, but only as ſet by a certain Lollard (as yͤ regiſter doth terme him) is written in maner and forme as followeth.

¶ Here followeth the Copy of a letter ſent to maiſter Nicholas Hereford, by a Lollard, as in the Regiſter it is ſayd.

A letter ſent to Nicho Herford.

FOr as much as no man that putteth hys hande to the plough and looketh backe, is meete for the kyngdome of God, as our Sauiour Chriſt ſayth: What maruel is it, although maiſter Nicholas Herford, which at the firſt (by the viſitatiõ of the ſpirit of god peraduenture) put his hand, that is, gaue his diligence, vnto the plough, that is, to the ſowing of the word of God and holy ſcripture, as well in preaching as in doyng good workes: is nowe ſo blynde and vnſkilfull to expound the ſcripture, that he knoweth not what is vnderſtoode by the kyngdome of heauen. Truely it is no maruayle, O thou that arte maiſter of the Nicholitanes, which like Nicholas the moſte falſe deacon, haſt left or forſaken the infallible knowledge of the holy ſcripture. For the true knowledge of the Theologicall veritie is ſhutte vp as well from thee as from all the other Nicholitanes following thy conditions, for as much as thou goeſt not in by the dore to expound the ſame Euãgelical veritie. Therfore whẽ thou didſt recite this other day, firſt, the phariſaycal and hypocritical woe (nothing at all to any purpoſe) thou ſhouldeſt haue ſayd iuſtly in this ſort, both of thy ſelf, and other thy followers and religious Antichriſtes: Wo be vnto vs Scribes and Phariſes, which ſhut vp the kyngdome of heauen, that is to ſay, the true knowledge of the holy Scripture, before men by our falſe gloſes and crooked ſimilitudes: and neyther we our ſelues enter into the ſame kyngdome or knowledge, nor ſuffer other to enter into it. Wherefore, it ſeemeth vnto the faythfull ſort, that wrongfully, falſly, & without any reuerence, yee haue expounded that text of Gregorye. 1. q. 1. that is to ſaye. Quicunque ſtudet, &c. For this is the true vnderſtandinge of the ſame. Knowing firſt that there be ſome prieſts after the thing, and name onely, and doth ſhew that this is true: that whoſoeuer ſtudieth to receiue the holy order by geuing of money: He is not a prieſt, ſecundum rem, & nomẽ. But to ſay the truth, he deſireth to be called a prieſt, that is to be a prieſt Secundum nomen tantũ. And ſuch a prieſt which is a prieſt in name onely, is no prieſt. No more then S. Mary paynted is S. Mary: Nor a falſe doctour a doctour, but no doctour: And a man painted is not a man, but no mã. And thus ſuch a prieſt in name onely, is not a prieſt. Becauſe that all faythfull men do firmely beleue with S. Gregory that no man buying the holy orders, may then be called a prieſt as he ſayth. 1. q. 1. They that buy or ſell holy orders can be no prieſtes. Whereupon is written, Anathema dandi, & Anathema accipiendi. That is Simoniacall hereſie. And it followeth, how therefore, if they be accurſed and not bleſſed, can they make others bleſſed? And whẽ that they be not in the body of Chriſt, howe can they eyther receiue or deliuer the body of Chriſt? He that is accurſed, how can he bleſſe? as though he would ſay. It is vnpoſſible. As Pope Vrbanus ſaith. 1. q. 1. Si qui a Simoniacis. &c. Where he ſaith thus. They that willingly know & ſuffer thẽſelues to be cõſecrated, nay rather execrated of thoſe that are infected with Simony: wee iudge that their conſecration is altogether voyde. Alſo Pope Leo in 2. q. 1. ſayth in this wiſe. Grace, if it be not freely geuen or receyued, is not grace. Spiritual vſurers do not receiue freely: Therfore, they receiue not the ſpirituall grace, whych ſpecially worketh in the eccleſiaſtical orders. If they receyue it not, they haue it not: if they haue it not freely, they cannot geue it freely. And by this it is more clearer then the light that they which know ſo much and receyue orders by ſpirituall vſury or ſimonye, are neither prieſts nor deacõs, neither after the maner nor charecter. For if ſuch carecter or marke were otherwiſe geuen in geuing orders, it were requiſite alwayes that there ſhoulde bee a certayne grace imprinted in the man, but there is no ſuche grace geuen or imprinted as afore is manifeſt: Therefore there is no ſuch Character to be fayned. Therefore, ſuch Character or marke abydeth not in him, for as much as he neuer had nor hath the ſame. And yet furthermore in the ſame place. What then do the ſimonycall prelates geue? And he maketh aunſwer truely euen that which they haue, as the ſpirit of lying. How proue we this? Becauſe that if it be the ſpirite of veritie, as the ſame veritie doth teſtifie, from whõ it commeth, it is freely receaued. And it followeth for the whole purpoſe no doubt: It is conuicted to be the ſpirite of lying, which is not freely receyued.

Nicolaitans.

1. q 1. ca Quicunque ſtudet.

1. q. 1. Si quis a Simoniacis.

Ex Leone Papa, 2. q. 1.

By this it appeareth manifeſtly to the faythfull ſort, that thoſe which weetingly and ſimonically are made prieſtes, for as much as they receyue not the Character of the Lorde but only the ſpirite of lying and the marke of Symon Magus, and of Iudas the traytor, that they be not prieſtes neyther according to the marke nor manners. Nor ſuch do no more make the ſacramentes of the Church, then other lay men may in the time of neceſſitie, nor yet ſo truely, during their hereticall naughtyneſſe. And yet in deede (brother myne,) vniuocè natura, but yet æquiuocè in moribus. I doe not wryte thus ſharpely vnto you, through anger, or anye vnperfect hate: but through the perfect hate of your horrible hereſie,and denying the fayth of Chriſt, that I may ſay with Dauid in the Pſalme.Perfecto odio oderam &c. And I am very ſorye for you,that you which in times paſt haue excellẽtly well,and fruitfully preached the Goſpell in the pulpit,do nowe as wel fayle in the congruitie of the Latine toung, as in the other ſcience naturall. For as it was heard thriſe in one lecture you ſayde appetitis, that is to ſaye, pronouncyng the myddle ſyllable longe, whych thyng not onely the maiſters, but alſo the yong ſcholers vnderſtoode. And many other faultes there in your Grammer, which for ſhame I dare not recite.I ſend vnto you theſe fiue cõcluſions.

5.Concluſions ſent.

The firſt concluſion. It is an infallible veritie that the wordes of the foure chiefe doctours,expounding the holy ſcripture according to the veritie which the words do pretend,are to be holden and kept.

The ſecond: He which importeth any equiuocatiõ out of any of the Doctours expounding,for the colouring of his text, his equiuocation is alwayes to be left.

The thirde: No peruerſion of any reprobate is able to turne the congregation of the elect from the faith,becauſe al things ẏ ſhal come to paſſe,are eternally in God deuyſed & ordayned for the beſt, vnto the elect Chriſtians.

The fourth: Like as the myſtical body of Chriſt is the congregation of al the Elect: ſo Antichriſt miſtically is the church of the wicked & of al the reprobates.

The fift: The concluſions of Swinderby,be agreable to the fayth in euery part.

¶ This letter was thus ſubſcribed.

By the ſpirite of God,ſometime viſityng you.

☞ Beſides this epiſtle aboue prefixed,there is alſo foũd annexed with the ſame,a deuiſe of an other certayne letter cõterfeited vnder the name of Lucifer prince of darknes: writing to the Pope and al popiſhe Prelates,perſecuting the true and right Church (with all might and mayne) to maintayn their pride and domination in this earth,vnder a coulourable pretence & viſor of the catholique church, & ſucceſſion Apoſtolical. which letter although it ſeemeth in ſome authors to be aſcribed to Ockam,aboue mencioned: yet becauſe I find it in the ſame Regiſter of the church of Herford cõteyned, & inſerted amõg ẏ tractations of walter Brute,and deuiſed(as ẏ Regiſter ſaid) by ẏ Lollards: I thought no meeter place,then here to annexe the ſame, the tenour wherof thus proceedeth in words as follow.

¶ The deuiſe or counterfayt of a certayne letter fayned vnder the name of Lucifer Prince of darkneſſe, wryting to the perſecuting prelates of the popiſh clergy.

The epiſtle of Lucifer to the proud prelates of the popes clergie.

I Lucifer prince of darknes and profound heauineſſe, Emperour of the high myſteries of the Kyng of Acharont, Captaine of the dungeon, Erebus kyng of hell, and comptroller of the infernall fire: To all our children of pryde, and companions of our kyngdome,and eſpecially to our Prynces of the Church of this latter age and tyme(of which our aduerſary Ieſus Chriſt, accordyng to the Prophet,ſaieth:I hate the church or congregation of the wicked)ſend greeting, & wiſh proſperitie to all that obey our commaundementes,as alſo to thoſe that be obedient to the lawes of Sathan already enacted,& that are diligent obſeruers of our beheſtes,and the precepts of our decree. Know ye that in times paſt certaine vicars or vicegerents of Chriſt,following hys ſteppes in miracles and vertues, liuing and continuyng in a beggerly lyfe, conuerted (in a maner)the whole world from the yoke of our tiranny vnto their doctrine & maner of lyfe: To the great deriſion and contempte of our priſon houſe and kyngdome: and alſo to the no little preiudice and hurt of our iuriſdiction and authorytie,nor fearing to hurt our fortified power ond to offend the maieſtie of our eſtate. For then receiued we no tribute of the world, neyther dyd the myſerable ſort of common people, ruſhe at the gates of our deepe dungeon as they were wont to do with continuall pealyng and rappyng,but then the eaſie, pleaſant,& broad way,which leadeth to death, lay ſtill without great noyce of trãpelyng trauaylers, neyther yet was trode with the feete of myſerable men. And when all our courtes were without ſutets, Hell then began to houle: And thus continuyng in great heauines & anguiſh, was robbed and ſpoyled. Which thing conſidered, the impacient rage of our ſtomacke coulde no longer ſuffer,neyther the ougle retchelous neglygence of our great Captayne generall could any longer indure it. But we,ſeeking remedy for the time that ſhould come after, haue prouyded vs of a verye trimme ſhift: For in ſtead of theſe Apoſtles and other their adherentes whyche draw by the ſame lyne of theirs,as wel in maners as doctrine, & are odious enemis vnto vs: We haue cauſed you to be their ſucceſſors, & put you in their place,which be Prelates of the church in theſe latter times, by our great might and ſubtletie,as Chryſt hath ſayd of you they haue raigned but not by me.Once we promiſed vnto him al the kingdom of the world if he would fal down and worſhip vs, but he would not, ſaying: my kingdome is not of this would,and went his way,when the multitude would haue made him a temporall kinge. But to you truely which are fallen from the ſtate of grace, and that ſerue vs in the earth: is that my promiſe fulfilled, and all terrene thyngs be our meanes which we haue beſtowed vpon you,are vnder gouernment.For he hath ſaid of vs as ye know: The prince of the world cõmeth &c. and hath made vs to raigne ouer al children of vnbeliefe Therfore our aduerſaryes before recited,dyd pacientlye ſubmit themſelues vnto the Princes of the worlde,and did teache that men ſhoulde do ſo, ſaying·Be ye ſubiect to euery creature for Gods cauſe, whether it be to the Kyng as moſte chiefeſt. And agayne: Obey ye them that are made rulers ouer you &c. For ſo their maiſter commaũded them ſaying: The kinges of the heathen haue dominion ouer them &c.But I think it long til we haue powred our poyſon vpõ the earth, and therefore fill your ſelues full. And now bee yee not onely vnlyke thoſe fathers,but alſo contrary vnto them in your lyfe and conditions, and extoll your ſelues aboue all other men. Neyther do ye geue to God that which belongeth to him,nor yet to Cæſar that which is his:But exerciſe you the power of both the ſwordes,according to our decrees,makinge your ſelues doers in worldlye matters, fighting in our quarell,intangled with ſecular labours and buſines. And clyme ye by litle & little from the myſerable ſtate of pouerty, vnto the higheſt ſeates of all honours,& the moſt princely places of dignitie by your deuiſed practiſes, & falſe and deceitfull wyles and ſubtlety: that is,by hypocriſy, flattery,lying,periurie, treaſons, deceits,ſimonye, and other greater wickednes then which our infernal furies may deuiſe. For after that ye haue by vs bene aduaunced thither where ye would be: yet that doth not ſuffice you, but as gready ſtaruelings more hũgry then ye were before,ye ſuppreſſe the poore, ſcratch and rack together all that comes to hand,peruerting and turninge euerie thing topſie toruey: ſo ſwollen,that redy ye are to burſt for pride liuing like Lechers in all corporal delicatenes, and by fraude dyrecting all your doinges. You challenge to your ſelues names of honour in the earth, callyng your ſelues Lordes, holye, yea and moſt holy perſons.

Thus,eyther by violence ye rauen, or els by ambition, ſubtilly ye pilfer away,and wrongfully wraſt, and by falſe title poſſeſſe thoſe goodes whych for the ſuſtentation of the poore members of Chriſt(whom frõ our firſt fall we haue hated) were beſtowed and geuen: conſuming them as ye your ſelues lyſt,& therewith ye cheriſh and maintaine an innumerable ſort of whoores, ſtrumpets,and bawdes,with whom ye ride pompouſly like mightie Prynces, farre otherwiſe goinge, then thoſe poore beggerly prieſtes of the primatiue Church.For I would ye ſhoulde buylde your ſelues ryche and gorgeous palacies, yee fare lyke Prynces, eating and drinking the moſt daintieſt meates, and pleaſaunteſt wines that may be gotten: ye hoord and heepe together an infynite deale of treaſure,not like to him that ſayd,golde and ſiluer I haue none,ye ſerue and fight for vs according to your wages O moſt acceptable ſocietie or fellowſhip, promiſed vnto vs by the Prophet,and of thoſe fathers long ago reprooued: Whileſt that Chriſt called thee the Sinagogue of Sathan, and lykened thee to the mighty whoore which committed fornicatiõ with the kings of the earth,the adulterous ſpouſe of Chriſt, and of a chaſte perſon made a ſtrompet.Thou haſt left thy firſt loue and haſt cleaued vnto vs, O our beloued Babilon,O our citizens,which from the tranſmigration of Ieruſalem,come hether: we loue you for your deſertes,we reioyce ouer you, which contemne the lawes of Simon Peter,and imbrace the lawes of Symon Magus our friend, and haue them at your fingers endes, and exerciſe the ſame publiquely, buying and ſelling ſpirituall thynges in the Churche of God, and againſt the commaundement of God Ye geue benefices and honors by petition, or els for money, for fauor,or els for filthy ſeruice.And refuſing to admit thoſe that bee worthy to eccleſiaſtical dignities, & perferring thoſe that are vnworthye,you call vnto the inheritance of gods ſanctuarie,baudes,lyers,flatterers,your nephues,and your owne children, & to a childiſh boy, ye geue many prebends:the leaſt whereof ye deny to beſtow vpõ a poore good man: ye eſteeme the perſon of a man and receyue giftes,ye regarde money and haue no regarde of ſoules. Ye haue made the houſe of God a denne of theeues. Al abuſe,all extortiõ, is more exerciſed, a hundreth fold in your iudgement ſeats,then with any ſecular tyrant. Ye make laws & kepe not the ſame,& ye diſpence with your diſpenſations as it pleaſeth you, you iuſtifye the wicked for rewardes,and ye take away the iuſt mãs deſart frõ him. And briefly ye perpetrate or cõmit all kind of miſchief,euen as it is our wil ye ſhould. And ye take much paine for lucres ſake in our ſeruice, and eſpecially to deſtroy the Chriſtian fayth. For now the lay people are almoſt in doubt what they may beleue,becauſe if ye preach any thing to them at ſometimes(although it be but ſeldome ſeene,& that negligently inough,euen as we would haue it)yet notwithſtanding they beleue you not, becauſe they ſe manifeſtly that ye do cleane contrary,to that ye ſay. the common people, doing as ye do, which haue the gouernemẽt of them, & ſhould be an example to them of wel doing: now many of them leaning to your rules, do rũne hedlong into a whole ſea of vices: And ſo continually a very great multitude flocketh at the ſtrong and wel fenced gates of our dungeon. And doubtles, ye ſend vs ſo many day by day of euery ſort and kinde of people, that we ſhould not be able to entertaine them, but that oure inſatiable Chaos with her thouſande rauening iawes is ſufficient to deuoure an infinite number of ſoules. And thus the ſouerayntie of our Empire, by you hath bene reformed, and our intollerable loſſe reſtored. Leaſt perhaps in ſo great trãquilitie (all deſire of peace ſet aſide) they dyſpoſe themſelues to vew and conſider your moſt wicked workes, ſuppreſsing on euery ſide your eſtate: and from your treaſures take away ſuch ſubſtance, as we haue cauſed to be reſerued and kept in your hands, vntil the cõming of our welbeloued ſonne Antichriſt. We would ye ſhuld do our cõmẽdations to our entierly beloued daughters, pride, deceit, wrath, auarice, bellichere, and lechery, & to al other my daughters: and eſpecially to Lady Symony, which hath made you men, and enryched you, and hath geuen you ſucke wyth her own breſts, & weaned you, and therefore in no wiſe ſee that you cal her ſin. And be ye lofty and proud, becauſe that the moſt high dignitie of your eſtate doth require ſuch magnificence. And alſo be ye couetous, for whatſoeuer ye get and gather into your fardell, it is for Saint Peter, for the peace of the church, and for the defence of your patrimony and the Crucifixe, and therefore yee may lawfully do it. Ye may promote your Cardinals to the higheſt ſeat of dignities without any let in all the world, in ſtopping the mouth of our aduerſarye Ieſus Chriſt, and alledging againe: that he preferred his kinſfolkes (beinge but of poore and baſe degree) vnto the Apoſtleſhip, but do not you ſo, but rather call, as ye do, thoſe that liue in arrogancy, in hawtines of mynde, and filthy lechery, vnto the ſtate of welthy riches and pride, and thoſe rewardes & promotions, which the followers of Chriſt forſooke, do ye diſtribute vnto your frinds. Therefore as ye ſhall haue better vnderſtanding, prepare yee vyces cloked vnder the ſimilitude of vertues. Alleadge for your ſelues the gloſes of the holy ſcripture, and wreſt them, directly to ſerue for your purpoſe. And if any man preach or teache otherwiſe then ye wil, oppreſſe ye them violently with the ſentence of excommunication, & by your cẽſures heaped one vpon another, by the conſent of your brethren. Let him bee condemned, as an hereticke, and let him be kept in moſt ſtraight priſon, and there tormented till he die, for a terryble example to all ſuch as confeſſe Chriſt. And ſetting all fauour apart, caſt him out of your temple: leaſt peraduenture the ingrafſed word may ſaue your ſoules, which word I abhorre, as I do the ſoules of other faithful mẽ. And do your indeuor, that ye may deſerue to haue the place which we haue prepared for you, vnder the moſt wicked foundatiõ of our dwelling place. Fare ye well, with ſuch felicitie as wee deſire and intende finally to reward and recompence you with.

¶Geuen at the centure of the earth, in that our darke place, where all the rablement of Deuils were preſent, ſpecially for this purpoſe called vnto our moſt dolorous Conſiſtory, vnder the Charecter of our terrible ſeale, for the confirmation of the premiſſes.

Ex Regiſtro Herfordenſi ad verbum.

Ex Regiſtro Hereford.

Who was the true author of this poeſie or epiſtle aboue writtẽ it is not euidẽtly knowẽ: neither yet doth it greatly ſkill. The matter beynge well conſidered of their part, which here be noted: may miniſter vnto them ſufficiẽt occaſion of holeſome admonition, either to remember themſelues what is amiſſe, or to bethinke with thẽſelues what is to be amended. Diuers other writings of like argumẽt both before & ſince, haue bene deuiſed: as one bearinge the title Luciferi ad malos principes Eccleſiaſticos, imprinted firſt at Paris in Latin. And vnder the writing therof, bearing this date. Anno a palatij noſtri fractione, conſortiumq; noſtrorum ſubtractione. 1351. Which if ye count from the Paſſion of the Lord: reacheth wel to ÿ time of Wickliffe 1385, which was aboue vi. yeres before ÿ examination of this Walter Brute.

Epiſt Lucif. ad pralatos.

There is alſo an other epiſtle of Lucifer, prince of darknes, ad prælatos, mentioned in the Epiſtle of the ſchoole of Prage, to the vniuerſitie of Oxford, ſet forth by Huldericus Huttenus, about the yeare of our Lorde (as is there dated) 1370. which ſeemeth to be written before this epiſtle.

Vincent. ſpec. hiſt. lib. 25. cap. 89.

Alſo Vincẽtius in Speculo hiſto. lib. 25. cap. 89. inferreth like mention of a letter of the fiendes infernal, vnto the clergy men as in a viſion repreſẽted before 400. yeres. In which the deuils geue thankes to the ſpirituall men, for that by their ſilence and not preaching the Goſpel, they ſend infynite ſoules to hell. &c.

Ex prophetia Hildegardis.

Diuers other letters alſo of like deuiſe, haue ben written, & alſo recorded in authors. Wherunto may be added, that one Iacobus Cartuſienſis, wrytinge to the Byſhop of Wormace, alleageth out of the prophecie of Hildegardis in theſe wordes: Ideo et diabolus in ſemetipſo de vobis ſacerdotibus ait: Eſcas epulantium, conuiuia et omnes voluptates in iſtis inuenio, ſed et oculi, et aures, et venter meus, et venæ meæ, de ſpumis illorum plenæ ſunt, et vbera mea plena ſunt diuicijs illorum &c. r. Therefore ſaith he, ÿ deuil may ſay of you prieſts in himſelfe: The meates of banketting diſhes, and feaſtes of al kind of pleaſure, I find in theſe men: Yea alſo, mine eyes, mine eares, my belly, & all my vaines be full of their froathing, and my breſts be full ſtuffed with their ryches. &c. Furthermore, ſaith he, they labour euery day to riſe vp higher with Lucifer, but euery daye they fall wͭ him more deepely.

The deuill geueth thankes to clergie men. The ſilence of prieſtes for not preaching the Goſpell damneth many a ſoule.

Hereunto alſo appertayneth a ſtory written, & cõmonly found in many olde written bookes. In the yeare of our Lord. 1228. at Paris in a Synode of the clergie, there was one appointed to make a Sermõ. Who being much carefull in hys minde, & ſolicitous what to ſay, the deuil came to him, and aſking why he was ſo careful for his matter, what he ſhould preach to ÿ clergy, ſay thus, quod he: The princes of hell ſalute you (Oh you princes of the Church) & gladly geue you thankes, becauſe through your default and negligence, it cõmeth to paſſe, that al ſoules go downe to hel. Adding moreouer, that he was alſo enforced by the commaundement of God to declare the ſame, yea and that a certayne token moreouer was geuen to the ſayde clerke for a ſigne, wherby the ſinode might euidently ſee, that he did not lye. Ex catall. Illyr. Fol. 546.

The popes letter to the B. of Hereford.

Bonifacius Biſhop, ſeruaunt of the ſeuants of God: To the reuerend brother Iohn Biſhop of Hereford, ſendeth greeting & Apoſtolicall benediction. We meane to write vnto our welbeloued ſonne in Chriſt (Richard the renowmed king of England) in forme encloſed within theſe preſents. Therfore we will and commaund your brotherhood, that as much as ye maye, ye ſtudy and endeuour your ſelfe to exhorte and induce the ſame king, to doe thoſe thinges which we haue wrytten vnto him, as it is ſayde before. And notwithſtanding, that now many a day you ought to haue done it of your ſelf, & not to loke that wee ſhould perſwade you to that effect by vs written: you may proceed as well by our authoritie, as by your owne, for as much as it was geuen you before: that hereafter we may know effectually by your diligence, what zeale your deuotion beareth vnto the Catholike fayth, and to the conſeruing of the eccleſiaſticall honour, and alſo to the execution of your paſtorall office.

¶The tenour of the Bull, to the renowmed prince Richard by the grace of God king of England & of Fraunce: whereof mention is made aboue, as followeth, and is thus much in effect.

The popes wilde Bull let looſe againſt the ſeruauntes of Chriſt.

A lack good hart what ſorow the pope taketh.

To our welbeloued ſonne in Chriſt, Rycharde the noble king of Englande, wee ſend greetinge &c. It greeueth vs from the bottome of our hartes, and our holy mother the Church in all places through Chriſtendome lamenteth. Wee vnderſtande that there bee certayne hereſies ſprong, and do without any condign reſtraynt raunge at their owne libertie, to the ſeducynge of the faithful people, and do euery day with ouermuch liberty enlarge their vndiſcreete boundes. But howe much the more carefullye we labour for the preſeruation both of you & your famous kingdome, and alſo the ſinceritie of the faith: and doe with muche more ardent deſire couet, that the proſperous ſtate of the ſame ſhould be preſerued and ẽlarged: the ſting of greater ſorow doth ſo much the more penetrate and moleſt vs, for as muche as wee ſee (alas the while) in our tyme, and vnder the regall preſidence of your moſte Chriſtyan gouernmēt : a certayne craftye and hairebraine ſect of falſe Chriſtians, in the ſame your kingdom,to grow and increaſe: which call themſelues the poore men of the treaſury of Chriſt and his diſciples,and whom the common people by a more ſounder name call Lollardes(as a man would ſaye withered darnell) according as their ſins require: and perceyue, that they waxe ſtrong,& as it were preuayle agaynſt the dioceſās of ſome places, and other gouernors as they meete together not courageouſly addreſsing themſelues agaynſt them as they ought to do(whereof chiefly and not vndeſeruedly I geue them admonition) for that they take thereby the more bolder preſumption and ſtomacke among the vnlearned people. And for as muche as thoſe whom we cannot call men,but the damnable ſhadowes or ghoſts of men,do riſe vp againſt the ſound fayth,& holy vnyuerſall church of Rome : and that very many of them beinge indifferently learned,which (to the confuſion & eternall damnation of ſome of them)they got ſitting vppon their mothers lap the ſayde Church of Rome, doe riſe vp or inueye agaynſt the determination of the holy fathers, with too much preſumptuous boldnes,to the ſubuerſion of the whole eccleſiaſticall order and eſtate: Haue not bene afrayd,nor are not yet afrayd,publikely to preach,very many erroneous deteſtable,and hereticall articles, for that they are not put to ſilence,reproued,driuen out,rooted out or otherwiſe puniſhed,by any that hath authoritie and the feare and loue of God. And alſo they are not afrayd,openlye to write the ſame articles,and ſo being written to deliuer thē to your kinglye parliament,and obſtinately to affirme the ſame. The venemous and diſdainfull recitall of which articles, vpon good aduiſement at this preſent we paſſe ouer:leſt the ſufferaunce of ſuch ſenſualitie, might fortune to renue the woūd that reaſon may heale. Yet notwithſtanding,leaſt ſo great and contagious an euil ſhould eſcape vnpuniſhed,and that without deſerued vexation, and alſo that it might not get more hart and waxe ſtronger:we therefore(according to that our office and duetie is,where ſuch neglygence and ſluggiſhnes of our prelates being preſent,where this thing is)do commit and geue in commaundemēt to our reuerend brethren, Canterbury,and Yorke,Archbiſhops by other oure letters : that they ſtand vp in the power of God agaynſt this peſtilent and cōtagious ſect, and that they liuely perſecute the ſame in forme of lawe:roote out and deſtroy thoſe,that aduiſedly and obſtinately refuſe to withdraw their foote frō the ſame ſtumbling block,any reſtraint to the contrary notwithſtanding. But becauſe the aſsiſtance,counſaile,fauour, and ayde of your kingly eſtate & highnes are requiſite to the execution of the premiſſes:we require,exhort,and beſeech the ſame your princely highnes, by the bowels of the mercy of Ieſus Chriſt,by his holy fayth,by your owne ſaluation,by the benefit that to all men is common,and by the proſperitie aſſured to euery man and woman , that not onelye your kingly ſeueritie may readily ſhewe and cauſe to bee ſhewed vnto our Archbiſhops and their Commiſſaries (in this behalfe requyring the foreſayd due execution) conuenient ayd and fauour , as otherwiſe alſo to cauſe them to be aſsiſted:But that alſo you wil enioyne your Magiſtrates and Iuſtices of aſsiſe , and peace more ſtraightly,that of their owne good wils,they execute the authoritie committed vnto thē,with al ſeueritie againſt ſuch damned men,according as they are boūd by the office which they are put in truſt with: Againſt thoſe I mene, which haue determyned obſtinatly to defile thēſelues in their malice and ſinnes, thoſe to expell,baniſh,and impriſon,and there ſo long to keepe them, til cōdigne ſentence ſhall pronounce them worthye to ſuffer punyſhment. For your kingly wiſedome ſeeth,that ſuch as they be , do not only deceiue poore ſimple ſouls (or at the leaſt do what they can to deceiue thē)but alſo bring their bodies to deſtructiō,and further prepare confuſion and ruinous fall vnto their temporall Lordes. Go to therefore my ſweete ſonne,and indeuour your ſelf to worke ſo in this matter,as vndoubtedly we truſt you will:that as this firebrand(burning and flaming ouer ſore)beganne vnder your preſident or gouernment : ſo vnder your ſeuere iudgement and vertuous diligence, might, fauour, and ayde:not one ſparke remaine hid vnder the aſhes, but that it be vtterlye extinguyſhed and ſpedely put out.

As though no learninge were but in the church of Rome.

The dragō here ſpouteth out his floudes of water to drowne the Chriſtians.

Behold the ſpirit of the popes meke holynes.

The bowels of Ieſus Chriſt be full of mercy: the bowels of the pope full of tyranny.

Helpe the pope at a pinche:or els he is like to take a fall.

¶The Kynges Commiſſion.

RIchard by the grace of God,kyng of Englande,& of Fraunce, and Lorde of Irelande. To all thoſe vnto whom theſe preſent letters ſhall come, greeting. Know ye, that where as lately at the inſtance of the reuerend father, William Archbiſhop of Caunterbury,Metropolitane of all England, and Legate of the Apoſtolycal ſeate:we for the redreſſe and amendement of all thoſe whych would obſtinately preach or maintaine,publiquely,or priuely,any concluſions of the holy ſcripture,repugnant to the determynatiō of our holy mother the church, & notoriouſly redounding to the ſubuerſion of the Catholique faith, or cōtaining any hereſie or errour,within the prouince or biſhopricke of Cāterburie: Haue by our ſpecial letters patents,in the zeale of the fayth,geuē authoritie and licence vnto the foreſayd Archbiſhop & to all and ſingular his ſuffraganes , to areſt all and euerye of them that will preach or maintaine any ſuch cōcluſions, whereſoeuer they may be found,and to cōmit them either to their owne priſons or any others at their owne pleaſure:and to kepe thē in the ſame, vntill they repēt them of the errours & prauities of thoſe hereſies:or til that,of ſuch maner of areſts,by vs or by our counſayle it ſhoulde be otherwiſe determined, that is to ſay,to euery one of them and their miniſters throughout their cities and dioces. And nowe the reuerēd father in god Iohn B.of Herford,hath for a certaintie informed vs: that although the ſame B. hath accordinge to iuſtyce cōuinced a certain felow named W.Swinderby,pretending himſelf to be a chaplaine,& one Stephē Bell a learned man,and hath pronounced thē heretikes and excōmunicate, & falſe informers among the cōmon people,and hath declared the ſame by the definitiue ſentence of the aforeſaid biſhop for that they haue preſumed to affirme and preach openly in diuers places within the dioces of Herford,many concluſions or naughty opinions notoriouſly redounding to the ſubuerſion of the Catholike ſound faith, and tranquilitie of our kingdome. The ſame Biſhop notwithſtandinge, neyther by the eccleſiaſticall cenſures,neyther yet by the force and ſtrength of our cōmiſsion was able to reuoke the foreſaid William and Stephen,nor yet to bridle the malice and indurate contumacie of them:For that they,after that they were vpon ſuch heretical prauitie conuict by the ſame biſhop(to the intent they might delude his iudgement and iuſtice)conueyed thēſelues by and by,vnto the borders of Wales, with ſuche as were their factours and accomplices, in keping themſelues cloſe, vnto whō the force of our ſaid letters doth in no wiſe extende. Whereupon, the ſayde Biſhop hath made ſupplycation vnto vs,that wee will vouchſafe to prouide a ſufficient remedye in that behalfe. Wee therfore which alwayes(by the helpe of almightie God)are defēdours of the fayth,willing to withſtand ſuche preſumptuous and peruerſe enterpriſes by the moſt ſafeſt way and meanes we maye geue and cōmit full power and authoritie to the foreſayd biſhop and to his miniſters, by the tenour of theſe preſents,to arreſt or take,or cauſe to be arreſted or taken, the foreſayde William and Sthephen,in any place within the citie & dioces of Hereford and our dominiō of Wales,with al the ſpeede that may be,and to cōmit thē either to our priſon or els to the priſon of the ſame biſhop or any other priſon at their pleaſure, if ſuch neede bee,and there to keepe thē ſafe. And afterwards, vnles they will obey the commaundements of the Church,with dilygence to bring them before vs and our cōūſel,or els cauſe them to be brought. That we may determine for their further puniſhment, as we ſhall thinke it requiſite conuenient to be done by the aduiſe of our cōūſell , for the defence and preſeruation of the Catholike faith. And that the foreſayde William and Stephen,beinge ſuccoured by the aide of their factours or fauourers, ſhould not bee able to flye or eſcape to their accuſtomed ſtarting holes: and that the ſharpnes of their paines ſo aggrauated,may geue them ſufficient cauſe to returne to the lap againe of their holy mother the church:we ſtrayghtlye charge and commaunde all and ſingular our Shrifes,Bailifes,Barones,and al other our officers,in the Citie and Dioces of Hereford,& in any other place being within our dominion of wales, by the tenour of theſe preſentes: that from time to time (where they thinke it moſt meete)they cauſe it openly to be proclaimed in our name,that none,of what ſtate,degree, preeminence,kind, or other cōdition he ſhalbe of,do cheriſh opēly or ſecretlye, the foreſayd William and Steuen,vntil the time that they repent thē of their hereſies and errours, and ſhalbe recōciled vnto the holy Church of God: Neither that any perſon or perſons:be beleuers, fauorers,or receiuers, defendours , or in any caſe wittinglye inſtructours, of the ſaid William or Stephen,or any other of the reſidue of the heretikes that are to be cōuinced:vpon the forfaiture of all that euer they haue. And that alſo they geuing their attendance,be obedient & aunſwerable to the foreſayd biſhop and his deputies in this behalfe,for the execution of the premiſſes : and that they certify vs and our counſel diſtinctly, and plainly, from time to time,of the names of all and ſingular perſons,which ſhall fortune to be found culpable in this behalfe,vnder their ſeales. In witnes whereof,we haue cauſed theſe out letters patentes to be made. Witneſſe our ſelfe at Weſtminſter the ix.day of Marche, in the xv.yeare of our reigne.

RIchard by the grace of God kyng of England and of Fraunce and Lorde of Irelande : To hys beloued and faythfull Iohn Chāūdos knight,Iohn Eynſore knight, Renold de la Bere knight Walter Deueros knight, Thomas de la Bare knight, William Lucie knight, Leonard Hakelute knight , and to the Maior of the

An other letter of K. Richard againſt W. Brute.

Citie of Hereford, to Thomas Oldcaſtle, Rich. Naſh, Roger Wygmore, Thomas Waylwayne, Iohn Skydmore, Iohn VpHarry, Henry Motton, and to the Shiriffe of Hereford, ſendeth ſalutations.

Walter Brute.

For aſmuche as it is aduertiſed vs, that one Walter Brute, and other ſuch children of iniquitie, haue damnably holden, affirmed, and preached, certaine articles and concluſions being notoriouſly repugnaunt againſt the holy Scripture (of the which, ſome of them as hereſies, and the reſt as errours, are finally by the Church condemned) and that in diuers places within the dioces of Hereford and partes neare adioyning, both priuely, openly, and obſtinately: which thing wee perceiue not onely to redounde to the ſubuerſion (in a maner) of the Catholicke faith, which as well we, as other catholicke Princes ought of duety to maintaine, but alſo to forewarne vs of the ſubuerſion of our faithfull Dioceſans. And that the ſayd Biſhop, vpon the good deliberation and aduiſement of a great number of Doctours in Diuinitie, and other learned & skilfull men in the Scriptures, of ſpeciall deuotion, according to his bounden duetie, purpoſed to begin and make diuers and ſundry proceſſes by law to be ſent vnto the foreſayd Walter and hys accomplices, to appere perſonally before him and other the Doctours aforeſaid, in the cathedrall church of Hereford, the morow after the tranſlation of S. Thomas of Hereforde next enſuing, and to procede in the ſame place againſt the ſame Walter, in the foreſaide articles and concluſions, for the amendement of his ſoule. Now a freſh (becauſe that the ſayd Walter and others of their retinue, cleauing and confederating with him, might not ſuffer condigne paines according to their demerites) indeuour themſelues to make voide and fruſtrate the ſayde godly purpoſe of the ſame Biſhop, in ſuch correction & execution as ſhould haue bene done: and with force doe reſiſt and let the ſame with all the power they may, to the great contempt of vs and of our crowne, and to the breaking and hurting of our peace, and pernicious example of others: Doe appoynt you and euery of you, immediatly as ſoone as this our commiſsion ſhall be deliuered vnto you, in our behalfe and name, to make open proclamation in the dioceſſe and partes aforeſayde, where ye ſhall thinke it moſt meete and conuenyent: That no man be ſo hardy hencefoorth, of what ſtate or condition ſoeuer he ſhall be, within the Dioces and partes aforeſayde, vpon paine of forfaiture of all that euer hee hath, to make or leauie any conuenticles, aſſemblies, or confederacies, by any colour: or that they preſume to attempt or procure any other thing, wherby our peace may be hurt or broken, or that the ſame Biſhops and Doctors aforeſaid, may be by any meanes moleſted or let in the execution of ſuche correction as is to be done, according to the Canonical ſanctions, and to areſt all thoſe which ye ſhal finde or take offending in this behalfe, or that keepe themſelues in any ſuche conuenticles. And that they being committed to priſon, be there kept, till you ſhall haue other commaundement from vs and our counſel for their deliueraunce: And that ye diſtinctly and plainly certifie vs and our ſayd counſell, of all your doing in thys behalfe vnder your ſeales, or elſe the ſeales of ſome of you. And therefore we ſtraightly charge and commaunde you, and euery of you: that ye diligently attende vpon the premiſſes, and that in your deedes yee execute the ſame with all diligence and carefull indeuour, in the forme and maner aforeſaide. And further, wee geue ſtraight charge and commaundement to all and ſingular Shriffes, Maiors, Bailiffes, Conſtables, and other our faithfull ſubiectes, by the tenour of theſe preſents: that they be attending vpon you, counſelling and aiding you and euery of you, as is meete and conuenient in the doing and execution of the premiſſes. In witneſſe whereof, we haue cauſed theſe our letters patents to be made. Witneſſe my ſelfe at Weſtminſter, the 22. day of September, in the 17. yeare of our raigne:

Whether the doctrine of Brute was euer againſt reſiſtance, howe is this lyke to be true.

¶By the ſame King and Counſell.

K. Richard ſet agaynſt the Goſpellers by the Archb. and the prelates. Ex Regiſt. W. Courtney Archb. Cant.

Thus king Richard by the ſetting on of W. Courtney Archb. of Canterb. and his fellowes, taking part wyth the Pope, and Romiſh Prelates: waxed ſomething ſtrait and harde to the poore Chriſtians of the contrary ſide of Wycklieffe, as by theſe letters aboue prefixed may appeare. Albeit, during all the life of the ſaide king, I finde of none expreſly by name that ſuffered burning. Notwythſtanding, ſome there were which by the foreſaide Archbiſh. William Courtney, and other Biſhops, had bene condemned and diuers alſo abiured, and did penance as well in other places, as chiefly about the towne of Leyceſter as followeth here to be declared, out of the Archbyſhoppes regiſter and recordes.

Roger Dexter, Nicholas Taylor, Rich. Wagſtaffe, Mich. Scriuener, W. Smith, Ioh. Henry, W. Parchmener, Roger Goldſmith accuſed.

At what time the ſaide Archbiſhop W. Courtney was in his viſitation at the towne of Leyceſter, certaine there were accuſed and detected to him, by the monks and other Prieſtes in the ſayd towne. The names of which perſons there detected, were one Roger Dexter, Nicholas Taylor Richard Wagſtaffe, Michael Scriuener, William Smith, Iohn Henry, Wil. Parchmeanar, and Roger Goldſmith, inhabitantes of the ſame towne of Leyceſter: Theſe wyth other moe, were denounced to the Archbyſhop for holding the opinion of the Sacrament of the aultare, of auriculare confeſſion, and other Sacraments, contrary to that which the Church of Rome doth preach and obſerue. All whych parties aboue named, & many other mo whoſe names are not knowen, did hold theſe hereſies and errors here vnder wrytten, and are of the Romiſh church condemned.

1. That in the Sacrament of the aultar, after the wordes of conſecration, there remaineth the body of Chriſt wyth the materiall bread.
2. That images ought not to be worſhipped in any caſe, nor that no man ought to ſet any candles before them.
3. That no croſſe ought to be worſhipped.
4. That Maſſes, and Mattens, ought not wyth an high and loud voice to be ſayd in the Church.
5. Item, that no Curate or Prieſt taken in any crime can conſecrate, heare confeſſions, nor miniſter any of the Sacraments of the church.
6. That the Pope and all prelates of the Churche, can not binde any man to the ſentence of excommunication, vnles they know him to be firſt excommunicated of God.
7. That no Prelate of the church, can graunt any pardons.
8. That euery lay man may in euery place, preach & teach the Goſpell.
9. That it is ſinne to geue any almes or charitie, to the friers preachers, Minorites, Auguſtines, or Carmelites.
10. That no oblation ought to be vſed at the funeralles of the dead.
11. That it is not neceſſary to make confeſſyon of oure ſinnes to the Prieſt.
12. That euery good man although hee be vnlearned, is a Prieſt.

Roger, Nicholas, Richard, Michell, William, and Roger, accurſed with booke, bell, and candle.

These Articles they taught, preached, & affirmed manifeſtly in the towne of Leceiter & other places adioyning: wherupon, the ſaide Archb. moniſhed the ſaide Roger, and Nicholas with the reſt, on the next day to make anſwer vnto him in the ſayd monaſtery to the foreſayd articles. But the foreſaide Roger and Nicholas with the reſt, hid theſelues out of the way, and appeared not. Whereupon, the Archb. vpon All hallow day, being the 1. day of Nouember, celebrating the high maſſe at the high aulter in the ſayd monaſterie, being attired in hys Pontificalibus: denounced the ſaide parties with all their adherents, fautors, fauourers, and counſellers, excommunicate and accurſed, whych eyther helde, taught, or maintained the foreſaide concluſions heretical & erroneous, and that in ſolemn wiſe, by ringing the bels, lighting the candels, and putting out the ſame againe, and throwing them downe to the grounde with other circumſtances thereunto belonging. Upon the morow after (being all Soulne day) he ſent for al the curates & other lay men of the towne of Leiceſter, to inquire more diligently of the verity of ſuch matter as they knewe, & were able to ſay againſt any perſons whatſoeuer, concerning ye foreſayd articles, as alſo againſt the parties before named and ſpecified vpon their othes: denouncing euery one of them, ſeuerally by their names to be excomunicated and accurſed, & cauſed them alſo in diuers pariſh churches in Leiceſter, alſo to be excommunicate. And further the ſaid Archb. interdicted the whole Towne of Leyceſter, & all the churches in the ſame, ſo long as any of the foreſayde excommunicate perſons ſhould remaine or be wythin the ſame, and till that all the lollardes of the towne, ſhould returne and amend from ſuch hereſies & errors, obtaining at the ſayde Archb. hys handes the benefite of abſolution.

The whole towne of Leiceſter interdicted.

Matild an Anchores, cited to appeare.

At length it was declared & ſhewed to the ſayd Archb. that there was a certain anchoreſſe whoſe name was Matilde, incloſed wythin the Churchyard of S. Peters church of the ſayd towne of Leyceſter, to be infected (as they ſayd) with the peſtiferous contagion of the foreſaid heretikes & lollardes: wherupon, after that the ſayd Archb. had examined the foreſayd Matilde, touching the foreſayde concluſions, hereſies, and errours, and founde her not to anſwere plainly and directly to the ſame, but ſophiſtically and ſubtelly: gaue and aſſigned vnto her a day peremptorie, perſonally to appeare before hym in the Monaſterie of S. Iames at Northampton, more fully to aunſwer to the ſayde articles, hereſies, and errours, which was the 6. day of the ſayd moneth of Nouember: commanding the abbot of the monaſterie of Pratis aforeſayd, that the dore of the recluſe in which the ſayd Matild was, ſhould be opened, and that til his returne he ſhuld cauſe her to be put in ſafe cuſtody. That done, he ſent forth his mandate, againſt the lolardes vnder this forme.

The kings proces ſent by the B. to areſt the 8. aforenamed.

¶William by the permiſſion of God. &c. To his welbeloued ſonnes, the Maior & bailiffes, of the towne of Leiceſter Dioces, greeting. Wee haue lately receiued, the kings letters graciouſly graunted vs for ye defence of the catholike faith, in theſe wordes folowing. Richarde by the grace of God, King of England and of Fraunce. &c. Wee on the behalfe of our holy mother the Church, by the kings authoritie aforeſaid, do require you: that you cauſe the ſame Richard, William, Roger, and the reſt, to be areſted, and ſent vnto vs, that they wyth their pernicious doctrine doe not infect the people of God. &c. Geuen vnder our ſeale. &c.

Margaret Caily a Nun conſtrained agaynſt her will to take againe her habite.

By an other inſtrument alſo in the ſame Regiſter, is mention made of one Margaret Caily Nonne, whych forſaking her order, was by the ſayde Archb. conſtrayned againſt her wil, againe to enter the ſame, as by thys inſtrument here vnder inſuing may appeare.

¶ William by the grace of God. &c. To our reuerend brother in God, Iohn by the grace of God, Byſhop of Ely greting. &c. In the viſitation of our dioces of Lincolne according to our office, amōgſt other enormities worthy reformation, we found, one ſhepe out of our fold ſtrayed and amongeſt the briers tangled, to witte, Margarete Caily, Nunne profeſſed, of the monaſterie of S. Radegonde wͭin your Dioceſſe: who caſting the habite of her Relygion, was founde in ſecular attire, many yeares being an Apoſtata, & leading a diſſolute life. And leaſt her bloud ſhoulde be required at our hands, we haue cauſed her to be taken, and brought vnto you being her paſtor: and ſtraitly inioyning you by theſe preſents do commaund, that you admit the ſame Margarete againe into her foreſayd Monaſterie (although returned againſt her wil) or els into ſome other place, where for her ſoules health you ſhall thincke moſte conuenient: and that from henceforth ſhe be ſafely kept, as in the ſtraight examination of the ſame you wil yeld an accompt. Geuen vnder our ſeale. &c.

Matild recāteth.

By ſundry other inſtrumentes alſo in the ſame regiſter recorded I finde, that the foreſaide Matilde the anchoreſſe, vpon the ſtraight examination and handeling of the foreſaid Archbiſhop, before whome peremptorily ſhe was enioyned to appeare, and till that day of apparance taken out of the recluſe and committed to ſafe cuſtodie as you heard: retracted and recanted her foreſayd articles and opinions. For the which ſhe being enioyned 40. dayes penance, was againe admitted into her foreſaid recluſe in Leyceſter. The Byſhops letter to the Magiſtrates of the towne thus beginneth. Willielmus permiſſione diuina. &c. dilectis filijs. &c.

William Smith Roger Dexter, & Alice his wife abiure.

Alſo, by an other letter of the foreſayde Archbiſh. to the Deane of the Cathedrall church of our Ladye of Leyceſter being regiſtred, I finde: that of the number of thoſe 8. perſons before recited, whom the Archbiſhop himſelfe at high Maſſe, did in hys Pontificalibus ſo ſolemnely curſe wyth booke, bell, and candle: After certeine proces being ſent out againſt them, or els in the meane time being apprehended & taken: two of them recanted their opinions, to wit, William Smith, and Roger Dexter. But in the meane tyme Alyce the wife of the ſayde Roger Dexter, takyng holde of the foreſaid articles with her huſband alſo, together wyth the ſaid William Smith, abiured the ſame. For theſe be the wordes of the inſtrument. Subſequenter verò, præfati Willielmus, Rogerus, & Alicia reatus ſuos reſpicientes, ſe noſtro conſpectui præſentarunt. &c. Notwythſtanding, whether they preſented thēſelues willingly, or els were brought againſt their wils (as moſt like it was) hard penance was enioyned them before they were abſolued. Theſe be the wordes of the inſtrument.

Sancta mater eccleſia. &c. i. Seeing our holy mother the church, denieth not her lap to any penitēt childe returning to the vnitie of her, but rather profereth to them the ſame: we therefore do receiue againe the ſayd William, Roger, & Alice to grace. And further haue cauſed them to abiure all and ſingular the aforeſaide articles & opinions before they receiued of vs the benefit of abſolution, & were looſed from the ſentence of excōmunication wherin they were ſnarled: inioyning vnto them penance, according to the quantitie of the crime, in forme as foloweth, that is to ſay.

The maner of their penance inioyned.

That euery one of them ẏ ſonday next after their returning to their proper goodes: they the ſayd William, Roger, & Alice, holding euery one an image of ẏ crucifix in their right hands, and in their left handes euery one of them a taper of waxe, waying half a pound waight, in their ſhirts (hauing none other apparel vppon them) doe goe before the Croſſe three times, during the proceſſion of the Cathedrall Churche of our Lady of Leceſter: that is to ſay, in the beginning of the proceſſion, in the middle of the proceſſion, and in the latter end of the proceſſion: to the honor of hym that was crucified in the memoriall of his paſſion, and to the honor of the virgin his mother: who alſo deuoutly bowing their knees and kneeling, ſhall kiſſe the ſame crucifixe ſo helde in their handes. And ſo with the ſame proceſſion, they entring againe into the church: ſhall ſtand during all the time of the holy Maſſe, before the image of the Croſſe with their Tapers and croſſes in their handes. And when the Maſſe is ended, the ſayde William, Roger, & Alice, ſhall offer to him that celebrated that day the Maſſe. Then vpon the Saterday next inſuing: the ſayd William, Roger, and Alice, ſhal in the full and publique market, within the towne of Leiceſter, ſtande in like manner in their ſhirtes, without any more clothes vpon their bodies, holding the foreſayd croſſes in their right hāds, which croſſes, three times they ſhal (during the market) deuoutly kiſſe reuerently kneelyng vppon their knees: that is, in the beginning of the market, in the middle of the market, and in the ende of the market. And the ſayde William (for that hee ſomewhat vnderſtandeth the Latine tounge) ſhall ſay this Antheame wyth the collect Sancta Katharina: and the foreſayde Roger and Alice, being vnlearned, ſhall ſay deuoutly a Pater noſter, and an Aue Maria. And thirdly, the Sonday next immediatly after the ſame, the ſayde William, Roger, and Alice, in their pariſh Church of the ſayd towne of Leiceſter, ſhall ſtand and do as vppon the Sonday before, they ſtoode and dyd in the cathedrall Church of our Ladie aforeſayde, in all thynges. Which done, the foreſayd William, Roger, and Alice, after Maſſe, ſhall offer to the Prieſt or chaplaine that celebrated the ſame, with all humiliti and reuerence the waxe tapers, which they ſhall carie in their handes. And becauſe of the colde weather ẏ now is, leaſt the foreſaid penitents myght peraduenture take ſome bodely hurt ſtanding ſo long naked (being mindful to moderate partly the ſayd our rigor) we geue leaue: That after their entrance into the churches aboue ſayde, whileſt they ſhall be in hearing the foreſayde maſſes: that they may put on neceſſary garments to keepe them from cold, ſo that their heads and feete notwithſtanding, be bare and vncouered. Wee therefore will and commaund you together and a part, that you denounce the ſaid William, Roger, and Alice, to be abſolued and reſtored againe to the vnitie of our holy mother the church, and that you call them forth to do their penance in maner and forme aforeſayde. Peter Pateſhul againſt the friers.

Unto the narration of theſe aboue ſayd, we wil adioyne the ſtory of one Peter Pateſhul an Auſten Frier, who obtaining by the Popes priuiledge (through the meanes of Walter Dis, confeſſour to the Duke of Lancaſter) libertie to chaunge his coat and religion, and hearing the doctrine of Iohn Wickleffe & other of the ſame ſort: began at length to preach opēly and to detect the vices of his order, in ſuch ſorte as all men wondered to heare the horrible recyting thereof. This being brought to the eares of hys order, they to the number of 12. (cōming out of their houſe to the place where he was preaching) thought to haue withſtode hym perforce. Among whome one eſpecially for the zeale of hys religion, ſtoode vp openly in his preaching, and contraried ẏ which he ſaid, who then was preaching in the Church of S. Chriſtopher in London.

Londiners againſt the friers.

This when the faithfull Londoners did ſee, taking griefe hereat, were moued wͭ great ire againſt the ſaide Frier, thruſting him with hys other brethren out of the church, whome they not onely had beaten and ſore woūded, but alſo followed them home to their houſe, mineding to haue deſtroied their manſion wͭ fire alſo, and ſo would haue done, had not one of the ſheriffes of London, wyth two of the Friers of the ſayde houſe well knowen & reported amongſt the Londiners, wyth gentle wordes mitigated their rage and violence.

Peter Pateſhull.

After thys, Peter Pateſhull thus diſturbed as is aforeſayd, was deſired by the Londiners (for ſo much as he could not well preach amongeſt them) to put in writing that, which he had ſayde before, and other things more that he knew by the Friers: who then at their requeſt wryting the ſame, accuſed the friers of murther, cōmitted againſt diuers of their brethren.

The Fryers accuſed with horrible crimes.

And to make the matter more apparant & credible, he declared the names of them that were murthered, wyth the names alſo of their tormentours. And named moreouer, time and place where and when they were murthered, and where they were buryed. Hee affirmed further, that they were Sodomites and traitours both to the kyng and the realme with many other crimes, which mine authour for tedionſnes, leaueth of to recite. And for the more confutation of the ſaid friers, the Londiners cauſed the ſayd Bill, to be openly ſet vp at S. Paules Churche doore in London, which was there red and copied out of very many. Thys was done in the yeare of our Lord 1387. and in the 10. yere of King Richarde ſeconde. Ex Chron. Monachi Albanenſis.

Anno 1387.

Ex Chron. D. Albani.

Cuius eſt exordium. Anno gratiæ milleſimo. &c.

Thus it may appeare by this and other aboue recited, how the Goſpel of Chriſt preached by Iohn Wickleffe and others, began to ſpread & fructifie abroad in London, and other places of the realme: and more would haue done no doubt, had not William Courtney, the Archbiſhop & other Prelates with the king, ſet them ſo forceably with myght & maine, to gainſtand the courſe therof. Albeit as is ſayde before, I finde none which yet were put to death therfore, during the raigne of this king Richard the ſecond. Wherby it is to be thought of this king, that although he cānot be vtterly excuſed for moleſting the godly & innocent preachers of that time, (as by his brieues & letters afore mentioned may appeare) yet neither was hee ſo cruell againſt them, as other that came after him: And that which he dyd ſeemed to procede by the inſtigation of the Pope and other Byſhops, rather then either by the conſent of his Parliament, or aduiſe of his coūſail about him, or els by his own nature. For as the decrees of ẏ parliament in all his tyme, were conſtant in ſtopping out the Popes prouiſions, & in bridling his authority as we ſhall ſee (Chriſt willing) anone: ſo ẏ nature of the king was not altogether ſo fierſly ſet, if that he following the guiding thereof, had not ſtand ſo much in feare of the Biſhop of Rome and his Prelates, by whoſe importune letters & calling on, he was cōtinually vrged, to do contrary to that, which both right required, & wil perhaps in him deſired. But howſoeuer the doings of this king are to be excuſed, or not, vndouted it is ẏ Queene Anne hys wife moſt rightly deſerueth ſingulare commendation: who at the ſame time liuing with ẏ kyng had the goſpels of Chriſt in Engliſh, wͭ 4. doctours vpon the ſame. This Anne was a Bohemian borne, and ſiſter to Wincelaus K. of Boheme before: who was maryed to king Richarde about the 5. (ſome ſay, the 6.) yeare of hys reigne, and continued wͭ hym the ſpace of 11. yeres. By the occaſion whereof it may ſeeme not vnprobable, ẏ the Bohemians comming in wyth her, or reſorting into thys realme after her, peruſed and receiued heere the bookes of Iohn Wickleffe, which afterward they conueied into Bohemia, wherof partly mention is made before, pag. 464.

Commēdation of Queene Anne wife to king Richard.

Anno. 1394.

The mariage of Queene Anne to K. Richard. The occasiō how the doctrine of Wickliffe came to Bohemia.

The ſaid vertuous Queene Anne, after ſhee had liued with king Richarde about 11. yeares, in the 17. yeare of hys reigne changed this mortall life, and was buried at Weſtminſter. At whoſe funeral, Thomas Arundel then Archb. of Yorke, and Lorde Chauncelour, made the Sermon. In which Sermon (as remaineth in the library of Worceter recorded) he entreating of the commendation of her, ſayde theſe wordes: that it was more ioy of her, then of any woman that euer hee knewe. For notwithſtanding that ſhee was an alien borne, ſhe had in Engliſh all the 4. goſpels, wͭ the Doctours vpon them: affirming moreouer and teſtifying, ẏ ſhe had ſent the ſame vnto him to examine. And he ſayde they were good and true. And further wyth many wordes of praiſe did greatly commend her, in that ſhe being ſo great a Lady, & alſo an alien, would ſtudy ſo lowly ſo vertuous bookes. And he blamed in that ſermon ſharply the negligence of the Prelates, & other men. In ſo much that ſome ſayd, he would on the morow, leaue vp the office of Chauncelour, and forſake the world; & geue him to fulfil his paſtoral office, for that he had ſeene and read in thoſe bookes. And then it had bene the beſt Sermon that euer they heard. Hæc ex libro Wygo. In the whiche Sermon of Thomas Arundell, three poynts are to be conſidered, firſt the laudable vſe of thoſe olde times receaued to haue the Scripture and Doctours in our vulgare Engliſh toung. Secondly, the vertuous exerciſe and alſo example of thys godly Lady, who had theſe bookes not for a ſhew hanging at her girdle: but alſo ſeemeth by this Sermon to be a ſtudious occupier of the ſame. The third thing to be noted is, what fruit the ſayde Thomas Archbyſhoppe declared alſo himſelfe to receiue at the hearing and reading of the ſame bookes of hers in the Engliſh toung. Notwythſtanding, the ſame Thomas Arundel, after this Sermone and promiſe made, became the moſt cruell enemy that might be againſt Engliſh bookes, and the authors therof as foloweth after in his ſtory to be ſeene.

Tho. Arundell, Arch. breaketh his owne promiſe.

For ſhortly after the death of Queene Anne, the ſame yere (the king being then in Irelād) this Thomas Arundel Archb. of Yorke, and Byſhop of London, Rob. Braybrocke (whether ſent by the Archb. of Cant. and the clergy, or whether going of their owne accorde) croſſed the ſeas to Ireland, to deſire the king in all ſpedy wiſe to returne and help the faith and church of Chriſt, againſt ſuch as holding of Wickleffes teaching, went about (as they ſayde) to ſubuert al their procedings, and to deſtroy the canonical ſanctions of their holy mother church. At whoſe complaint the king hearing the one part ſpeake, and not aduiſing the other, was in ſuch ſorte incenſed: that incontinent leauing all his affaires incomplete, he ſpedde his returne towarde England. Where he kept his Chriſtmas at Dublin, in the which meane time, in the beginning of the next yere following, which was Anno 1395. a Parliament was called at Weſtminſter, by the commaundement of the Kyng. In which parliament, certaine Articles or Concluſions were put vp by them of the Goſpell ſide, to the number of 12. Which Concluſions moreouer were faſtened vp vpon the church doore of S. Paule in London, and alſo at Weſtminſter: The copie of which Concluſions with the wordes and contents thereof, here vnder enſueth.

Concluſiōs offred vp in the parliament houſe.

¶ The booke of Concluſions, or Reformations, exhibited to the Parliament holden at London, and ſet vp at Paules doore and other places, in the 18. yeare of the raigne of king Richard the 2. & in the yere of our Lord. 1395.

The firſt concluſion, when as the Church of Englande began firſt to dote in tēporalities after her ſtepmother the great church of Rome, & the churches were authorized by appropriations: faith, hope, and charitie began in diuers places to vaniſh and flie away from our Churche, for ſo much as pride with her moſt lamentable and dolerous genealogie of mortall and deadly ſinnes, did chalenge that place by title of heritage, and this concluſion is generall and approued by experiēce, cuſtome and maner, as ye ſhall after heare.

Concluſions exhibited in the parliament.

The ſecond concluſion, ẏ our vſuall Prieſthode which tooke his originall at Rome, & fained to be a power higher then aungels, is not that Prieſthode which Chriſt ordeyned vnto his diſciples. This cōcluſion is thus proued, forſo much as the Romiſh prieſthod is done with ſignes and pontificall rites and ceremonies, and benedictions, of no force & effect, neither hauing any ground in ſcripture, for ſo much as the Biſhops ordinall and the new Teſtament do nothing at all agree, neither do we ſee that the holy Ghoſt doth geue any good gift through any ſuch ſigns or ceremonies: becauſe that he together with all noble & good giftes, cannot cōſiſt and be in any perſon wyth deadly ſinne. The corolary or effect of this concluſion is, that it is a lamentable and dolorous mockerye vnto wiſe men, to ſee the Byſhops mocke & play with the holy Ghoſt in the geuing of their orders: becauſe they geue crowns for their characters and markes, in ſtede of white hartes, & this caracter is the marke of Antichriſt, brought into the holy Church to cloke and colour their idleneſſe.

Papiſticall prieſthood.

The third concluſion, that the law of chaſtity enioyned vnto prieſthode, the which was firſt ordeined to the preiudice of women, induceth Sodomy into the church: but we doe excuſe vs by the Bible, becauſe the ſuſpect decree doeth ſay, that we ſhould not name it. Both reaſon & experience proueth this cōcluſion. Reaſon thus, forſomuch as the delicate feeding and fare of the Clergy, will haue either a naturall purgation, or ſome worſe. Experience thus, for ſomuch as the ſecrete triall and proofe of ſuche men is, ẏ they do delite in women. And whenſoeuer thou doeſt proue or ſee ſuch a man, marke him well, for he is one of ẏ number. The corolarie of this concluſion is, that theſe priuate religions with the beginners therof, ought moſt chiefly to be diſanulled as the original of ẏ ſinne and offence: But God of hys might, doth of priuie ſinnes ſend open vengeance.

The ſingle life of prieſtes.

He doth very excellently paint out the lecherous clergie.

He prophecieth agaynſt mōkery.

The fourth concluſion, that moſt harmeth the innocent people is this: that the fained miracle of the Sacrament of bread, induceth al men, except it be a very few, vnto idolatry: For ſomuch as they thinke that the body whych ſhall neuer bee oute of heauen, is by the vertue of the Prieſtes wordes eſſentially included in the little breade, the which they doe ſhewe vnto the people. But woulde to God they would beleeue that which the Euangelicall Doctour teacheth vs in his Trialoge, Quòd panis altaris eſt accidentaliter Corpus Chriſti. i. that the breade of the aulter is the body of Chriſt accidentally: for ſo muche as wee ſuppoſe that by that meanes, euery faithful man and woman in the law of God, may make the Sacrament of that bread without any ſuch miracle. The corolarie of this concluſion is, that albeit the body of Chriſt, be endowed wͭ the eternal ioy, the ſeruice of Corpus Chriſti made by Frier Thomas, is not true, but painted ful of falſe miracles, neither is it any marueil: for ſo much as frier Thomas at that time taking part with the Pope, would haue made a myracle of a hens egge, and we knowe it very well that euery lie openly preached and taught, doth turne to the rebuke & opprobry of him whych is alwayes true without any lacke.

The fayned myracle of tranſubſtantiation.

He meaneth here Wickliffe.

The feaſt of Corpus Chriſti inuented by Tho. Aquinas.

The 5. concluſion is this, that the exorciſme & halowings, conſecrations, and bleſſings ouer the Wine, Bread, The exorciſmes and bleſſinges of Prieſtes.

ware, water, Oyle, Salte, Incence, the Aulter ſtone, and about the Churche walles, ouer the Veſtiment, Chalice, Miter, Croſſe, and Pilgrimſtaues, are the very practiſes of Nigromancy, rather then of ſacred diuinity. This concluſion is thus proued, becauſe yͭ by ſuche exorciſmes, the creatures are honored to be of more force & power then by their own proper nature, for we do not ſee any alteration, or chaunge in any creature ſo exorciſed, except it be by falſe faith which is the principall poynt of deuiliſh art. The corolarie of this is, that if the booke of exorciſation or coniuring of holy water which is ſprinkled in the Church, were altogether faithfull and true: we thinke certainly that holy water vſed in the Churche, were the beſt medicine for all kinde of ſickneſſe and ſores, Cuius contrarium experimur. i. the contrary wherof daily experience doth teach vs.

The difference betwene the eccleſiaſtical & politike eſtate.

The ſixt concluſion which mainteineth much pride, is, that a king and Biſhop both in one perſon, a Prelate and iuſtice in temporall cauſes, a Curate an Officer in worldly office, doth make euery kingdome out of good order. This concluſion is manifeſt, becauſe the temporalty and the ſpirituality, are two parts of the holy vniuerſal Church, and therfore he which addicteth himſelf to the one part, let hym not intermeddle wyth the other, Quia nemo poteſt duobus Dominis ſeruire, wherfore to be called Amphroditæ, whyche are men of both kindes or Ambidextri, which is ſuch as can play with both handes, were good names for ſuche men of double eſtates. The Corolary of thys concluſion is, that therupon we the procuratours of God in this caſe, doe ſue vnto the Parliament: that it may be enacted, that all ſuche as be of the clergie (as well of the higheſt degree as of the loweſt) ſhuld be fully excuſed, and occupy themſelues with their owne cure and charge, and not wyth others.

The foundation of Maſſes for the dead.

The ſeuenth concluſion that wee mightely affirme is, that ſpirituall prayers made in the church for the ſoules of the deade (preferring any one man by name, more then an other) is a falſe foundation of almes, whereuppon all the houſes of almes in England are falſly founded. This concluſion is proued by two reaſons: The one is, that a meritorious praier (of any force or effect) ought to be a worke proceeding from meere charity: and perfect charity accepteth no perſon, becauſe thou ſhalt loue thy neighbor as thy ſelf. wherby it appeareth, that the benefit of any temporall gift beſtowed & geuen vnto prieſtes and houſes of almes, is the principall cauſe of any ſpeciall prayers, the which is not farre different from ſimonie. The other reaſon is, that euery ſpeciall prayer made for men condemned to eternall puniſhment, is very diſpleaſant before God. And albeit it be doubtful, yet is it very likely vnto the faithfull Chriſtian people, that the founders of euery ſuche houſe of almes for their wicked endowing of the ſame, are for yͤ moſt part paſſed by the broad way. The corolary is, that euery praier of force and effect proceeding of perfect charitie, woulde comprehend generally all ſuch, whom God wold haue ſaued, and to liue. The marchaundiſe of ſpecial praiers now vſed for the dead, maketh mendicant poſſeſſioners & other hierling prieſtes, which otherwiſe were ſtrong enough to worke & to ſerue the whole realme: And maintaineth the ſame in idleneſſe, to the great charge of the realme, becauſe it was proued in a certaine booke which yͤ king hath, that a hundreth houſes of almes, are ſufficient for the whole realme. And thereby might peraduenture greater increaſe and profite come vnto the temporalitie.

A hundred thouſes of almes ſufficient for England.

Pilgrimages & oblations.

The Image of the Trinitie an abhominable thing.

A poore man the perfect Image of God.

Latria. Dulia.

Iudas lippes.

The 8. concluſion needefull to tel to the people beguiled, is, that pilgrimages, praiers, and oblations made vnto blinde croſſes or roodes, or to deafe images made eyther of woode or ſtone: are very neare of kinde vnto Idolatry, and farre different frõ almes. And albeit that theſe thynges which are forbidden and imagined, are the booke of errour vnto the common people: notwithſtanding, the vſual and common image of the Trinity is moſt eſpecially abhominable. This concluſion God himſelfe doeth openly manyfeſt, commaunding almes to be geuen to the poore & needy man, for he is the image of God in more perfite ſimilitude and likeneſſe then any blocke or ſtone. For God did not ſay, let vs make a blocke or ſtone vnto our likenes and image, but let vs make man, for ſo muche as the ſupreme & higheſt honor which yͤ clergy calleth Latria, pertaineth only to the Godhead, & the inferior honour which clergy call Dulia, pertaineth vnto men and angels, and to none other inferior creature. The corolarie is, yͭ the ſeruice of yͤ croſſe celebrate twiſe euery yere in our church, is ful of idolatry: For if roode, tree, nailes, and ſpeare, ought ſo profoundly to be honoured and worſhipped, then were Iudas lippes (if any man could get them) a marueilous goodly relique. But thou Pilgrime, we pray thee tell vs, when thou doeſt offer to the bones of the Saintes and holy men whych are layd vp in any place: whether doſt thou relieue therby the holy man which is already in ioy, or that almes houſe that is ſo well endowed, whereas they are canoniſed (the Lord knoweth howe) and to ſpeake more plaine, euery faithfull Chriſtian may well iudge and ſuppoſe, that the ſtrokes of that ſame man, whom they call ſ. Thomas, were no cauſe of Martyrdome, nor yet be.

The death of Tho. Becket of Caunt, is not to be counted for martyrdõe.

Auricular confeſſion.

Confeſſion the miniſter of luſt.

The 9. concluſion that keepeth the people low, is, that auricular confeſſion which is ſaid to be ſo neceſſary for ſaluation, & the fained power of abſolution: exalteth and ſetteth vp the pride of prieſts, and geueth them oportunity of other ſecrete talkes, which we will not at thys time talke of, for ſo much as both Lordes and Ladies doe witnes that for feare of their confeſſors, they dare not ſpeake the truth: and in time of confeſſion is good oportunitie miniſtred, of wooing, or to play the baudes, or to make other ſecret conuentions to deadly ſinne. They affirme and ſay, that they are commiſſaries ſent of God to iudge & diſcerne of al maner ſinne, to pardone and clenſe what ſo euer pleaſe them. They ſay alſo, that they haue the keyes of heauen and hell, & that they can excommunicate, curſe and bleſſe, binde and looſe, at theyr owne will and pleaſure: in ſo muche, that for a ſmall rewarde, or for 12. d. they will ſell the bleſſyng of heauen by charter and clauſe of warrantes ſealed by theyr commõ ſeale. This concluſion is ſo common in vſe, that it nedeth not any probation. The corolarie hereof is, that the Pope of Rome whych fained himſelfe to be the profounde treaſurer of the whole Church, hauing that ſame worthy iewell which is the treaſure of the paſſion of Chriſt in hys owne keping and cuſtody, together with the merites of all the ſaintes in heauen, wherby he geueth fained indulgences and pardons a pœna & culpa: Hee is a treaſurer almoſt baniſhed out of chariti, wherby he may deliuer al captiues being in purgatory at hys pleaſure, and make them not to come there. But heere euery faithfull Chriſtian may eaſily perceiue that there is much falſhode hid in our church.

The impudent boldnes of Prieſtes.

The pope treaſurer of the Church, in ſteede of treaſure layeth vp coales.

How war is lawfull, the proofe by experience.

The 10. that manſlaughter (either by warre or by any pretenſed law of iuſtice, for any temporall cauſe, or ſpirituall reuelation) is expreſly contrary vnto the newe Teſtamẽt, which is the law of grace, full of mercy. This concluſion is euidently proued by the examples of the preachyng of Chriſt heere in earth, who chiefly teacheth euery man to loue his enemies, and haue compaſſiõ vpon them, and not to kill and murther them. The reaſon is this, that for the moſt part when as men do fight, after the firſt ſtroke, charity is broken: and whoſoeuer dieth without charity, goth the right way to hell. And beſide that, we doe well vnderſtand & know that none of the clergy, neither by any other lawfull reaſon, can deliuer any man from the puniſhment of death, for one deadly ſinne, and not for an other: but the law of mercy which is the new Teſtament, forbiddeth all maner of murther. For in the Goſpell it is ſpoken vnto our forefathers, thou ſhalt not kil. The corolary is: It is a very robbing of the people, when Lordes purchaſe indulgences and pardons a pœna & culpa, vnto ſuch as do helpe their armies to kil and murther the chriſtian people in foreine countreys for temporall gaine, as we do ſee certaine ſouldiors which do runne amongſt the Heathen people to get themſelues fame & renowme by the murther & ſlaughter of men. Much more doe they deſerue euil thanks at the hands of the king of peace, for ſo much as by humility and peace, our faith is multiplied & increaſed: for murtherers and manquellers, Chriſt doeth hate and manaſeth: he that ſtriketh with the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſword.

The 11. concluſion is, whyche is ſhame to tell: that the vow of chaſtity made in our church by women whych are fraile and vnperfite in nature, is the cauſe of bryngyng in many great and horrible offences and vices, incident vnto the nature of man. For albeit, the murther of their children borne before their time, and before they are chriſtened, and yͤ deſtruction of their nature by medicine, are filthy & foule ſinnes: yet they accompanying amongeſt themſelues, or with vnreaſonable beaſtes, or with any creature not hauing life, doe paſſe to ſuch an vnſeemelineſſe, that they are puniſhed by infernal torments. The corolarie is, that widowes & ſuch as take the mantell and the ring delitiouſly fed, we would that they were maried, becauſe that we can not excuſe them from priuate offence of ſinne.

Nunnes & wydowes which vow ſingle lyfe.

The 12. that the multitude of artes not neceſſary (vſed in this our Church) cauſeth much ſinne & offence in waſte, curioſity, and diſguiſing in curious apparell: experience & reaſon partly doth ſhewe the ſame, for ſo muche as nature with a few artes, is ſufficient for mans vſe and neceſſity.

This is the whole tenor of our ambaſſade which Chriſt hath commanded vs to proſecute at this time, moſt fit and conuenient for many cauſes. And albeit that theſe matters be heere briefly noted and touched: yet notwithſtandyng, they are more at large declared in another boke with many other more in our owne proper tounge, which we would ſhould be common to all Chriſtian people. wherefore, we earneſtly deſire and beſeeche God for his great goodneſſe ſake, that he will wholy reforme our Church (now altogether out of frame) vnto the perfection of his firſt beginning and original. After theſe concluſions were thus propoſed in the Parliament, the king not long after returned home from Dubline into England, toward the latter ende of the Parliament. who at his return, called certaine of his nobles vnto him, Richard Stury, Lewes Clifforde, Thomas Latimer, Iohn Mountacute, &c. whom he did ſharply rebuke, and did terribly threaten for that hee heard them to be fauourers of ẏ ſide: charging them ſtraightly, neuer to hold, maintaine, nor fauour any more thoſe opinyons and concluſions. And namely of Richarde Stury, he tooke an othe that he ſhould neuer from that day, fauoure or defende any ſuch opinions: which othe being taken, the king then anſwered. And I ſweare (ſayth he) againe to thee, that if thou doeſt euer breake thine oth, thou ſhalt die for it a ſhameful death. &c. Ex Chron. D. Albani.

All this while W. Courtney Archbyſhop of Caunterbury was yet aliue, who was a great ſtirrer in theſe matters. But yet Pope Vrbane the great maiſter of the Catholicke ſecte was deade and buried 6. yeare before. After whom ſucceeded in the ſchiſmatical ſea of Rome pope Boniface 9. who nothing inferiour to hys predeceſſour in all kinde of cruelties, left no diligence vnattempted to ſet forward that which Vrbane had begon, in ſuppreſſing them that were the ſetters forth of the light of the Goſpell: and had wrytten ſundry times to king Richard as well for the repealing of the Actes of Parliament againſt his prouiſions, Quare impedit, and premunire facias: as alſo that hee ſhould aſſiſt the Prelates of Englande in the cauſe of God (as he pretended) againſt ſuch, whom he falſly ſuggeſted to be Lollardes and traytors to the Church, to the king, and the Realme. &c. Thus the curteous pope, whom he coulde not reach with his ſword, at leaſt with cruel ſlander of hys malitious toung, would worke his poyſon agaynſt them, which letter he wrote to the king in the yeare of our Lord. 1396. which was the yeare before the death of W. Courtney Archbiſhop of Caunterbury. After whom ſucceded in that ſee, Thomas Arundel brother to the Earle of Arundel, being firſt Byſhop of Ely, afterwarde Archbyſhop of Yorke, and Lord Chancelor of England, and at laſt made Archbyſhop of Caunterbury about the yeare of our Lorde 1397. The next yeare following, which was the yeare of our Lord 1398. and the 9. yeare of the Pope, I finde in certaine recordes of the Biſhop of Dureſme, a certaine letter of K. ¶ To the moſte holy father in Chriſt and Lorde, Lorde Boniface the 9. by the grace of God high Pope of the moſt holy Romiſh and vniuerſall Churche, hys humble and deuout ſonne Richard by the grace of God king of England, and Fraunce, Lord of Irelande, greeting, and deſiring to help the miſeries of the afflicted Church, and kiſsing of that his bleſſed feete.

A letter of K. Richard 2. to Pope Boniface. 9.

WHo wil giue my head water, & mine eyes ſtreaming teares, that I may bewaile the decay and manifold troubles of our mother, which haue chaunced to her by her owne children in the diſtreſſe of this preſent ſchiſme and diuiſion. For the ſheepe haue forgotten the proper voyce of their ſhepherds, and hirelings haue thruſt in themſelues to feede the Lordes flocke, who are clothed with the apparell of the true ſhepehearde, chalenging the name of honour & dignity, reſembling ſo the true ſhepheard, that the pore ſheepe can ſcarſe know whome they ought to folow, or what paſtour as a ſtraunger they ought to flee, and whom they ſhuld ſhun as an hireling: Wherefore we are afraid, leaſt the holy ſtandard of the Lord be forſaken of his hoſt, and ſo that Citye being full of riches become ſolitary and deſolate, and the land or people whych was ſoat to ſay (flouriſhing in her proſperities) I ſate as a Quene, and am not a widowe, leaſt it be deſtitute of the preſence of her husband, and as it were ſo bewitched that ſhee ſhall not be able to diſcerne his face, and ſo wrapped in maſes, that ſhe ſhal not know where to turne her, that ſhe might more eaſily finde him, and that ſhe ſhall with weeping ſpeake that ſaying of the ſpouſe: I ſought him whom my ſoule loueth, I ſought him and found him not: For now we are compelled ſo to wander, that if any man ſay, beholde here is Chriſt, or there, we may not beleeue him ſo ſaying: and ſo many ſhepheards haue deſtroyed the Lordes vineyarde, and made his amiable portion a waſte wilderneſſe.

This multitude of ſhepherdes is become very burdenous to the Lords flocke. For when two ſtriue to be chief, the ſtate of both their dignities ſtandes in doubt, and in ſo doing they geue occaſion to all the faithfull of Chriſt, of a ſchiſme and diuiſion of the Churche. And although both parties goe about to ſubdue vnto their power the whole Church militant, yet cōtrary to both their purpoſe, by working this way, there beginneth to riſe nowe a diuiſion in the body of the Church. Like as when the diuiſion of the quicke innocent body was asked, when the two harlots did ſtriue afore Salomon: like as the ten tribes of Iſrael folowed Ieroboham the intruder, and were withdrawne from the kingdome for Salomons ſinne: euen ſo of olde time the deſire of ruling hath drawne the great power of the world from the vnitie of the Churche. Let your ſelues remember, we beſeeche you, how that all Greece did fall from the obedience of the Romiſh Churche in the time of the faction of the primarche of Conſtantinople, and howe Mahomet with his felowes by occaſion of the ſupremacie in Eccleſiaſticall dignitie, deceiued a great part of Chriſtians, and withdrewe them from the Empire and ruling of Chriſt. And nowe in theſe dayes, where as the ſame ſupremacie hathe wythdrawen it ſelfe from the obedience of it, in ſo muche that nowe in very fewe realmes the candle that burnes afore the Lord remaineth, and that for Dauids ſake his ſeruaunt: And although nowe remaine fewe countreys profeſsing the obedience of Chriſts true vicare: yet peraduenture if euery man were left to his owne libertie, he would doubt of the preferring of your dignity, or that is worſe, woulde vtterly refuſe it by ſuch doubtfull euidence alleaged on both ſides: and thys is the ſubtil craft of the croked Serpent, that is to ſay, vnder the pretenſe of vnitie, to procure ſchiſmes: as the ſpider of a wholeſome flower gathers poyſon: and Iudas lerned of peace to make warre. Wherefore, it is liuely beleeued of wiſe men, that except this peſtilent ſchiſme be withſtand by and by, the keyes of the Churche will be deſpiſed, and they ſhall binde the conſciences but of a few? and when either none dare be bolde to correct this fault or to reforme things contrary to Gods lawe, ſo by this meanes at length temporall Lordes will take away the liberties of the Church, and peraduenture the Romanes will come and take away their place, people and landes: they wil ſpoile their poſſeſsions and bring the men of the Churche into bondage, and they ſhall be contemned, reuiled and deſpiſed: becauſe the obedience of the people and deuotions towardes them will almoſte bee taken away, when the greater part of the Church left to their owne libertye ſhall waxe prouder than they be wont, leauing a wicked example to them that doe ſee it. For when they ſee the Prelates ſtudie more for couetouſneſſe than they were wont, to purſſe vp money, to oppreſſe the ſubiectes, in their puniſhings to ſeeke for gaine, to confounde lawes, to ſtirre vp ſtrife, to ſuppreſſe truth, to vexe poore ſubiects with wrong corrections, in meat and drinke intemperate, in feaſtings paſt ſhame: what maruell is it if the people deſpiſe them as the fouleſt forſakers of Gods lawe? but all theſe things doe folowe if the Church ſhoulde be left long in this doubtfulneſſe of a ſchiſme, and than ſhoulde that olde ſaying be verified: in thoſe dayes there was no king in Iſrael, but euery one did that that ſeemed right and ſtraighte to himſelfe. Micheas did ſee the people of the Lord ſcattered in the mountaines as they had bene ſhepe without a ſhepehearde: for when the ſhepheard is ſmitten, the ſheepe of the flocke ſhalbe ſcattered, the great ſtroke of the ſhepheard is the miniſhing of his iuriſdiction, by which the ſubiects are drawen from his obedience. When Iaſon had the office of the higheſt Prieſt, hee chāged the ordinance of God, and brought in the cuſtomes of the heathen, the prieſts leauing the ſeruice of the holy altar & applying themſelues to wraſting other exerciſes of the Grecians, & deſpiſing thoſe things that belōged to the prieſts, did labor with all their might to learne ſuche thinges of the Grecians, and by that meanes the place, people, and holy oynting of Prieſtes whych in time paſt were hadde in greate reuerence of kynges, were troden vnder foote of all men, and robbed by the kinges power, and was prophaned by thruſting in for money. Therefore, let the hygheſt vicare of Chriſte looke vnto this with a diligent eye, and let hym be the follower of him by whom he hath gotten authoritie aboue others. If you mark well moſt holy father, you ſhal find that Chriſt rebuked ſharpely two brethren, coueting the ſeate of honour: hee taught them not to play the Lordes ouer the people, but the more grace they were preuēted with, to be ſo much more humble then other, and more lowly to ſerue their brethren. To hym that asked hys coate, to geue the cloake: to him that ſmote him on the one cheeke, to tourne the other to him. For the ſheepe that are geuen to hys keeping, hee muſt forſake all earthly thyngs, and to ſhedde his owne bloud, yea and if neede required to die. Theſe things I ſay be thoſe that adorne the higheſt Byſhop if they be in him, not purple, not hys white horſe, nor his Imperiall crowne, becauſe hee among all men is moſt bounde to all the ſheepe of Chriſt. For the feare of GOD therefore, and for the loue of the flocke which yee guide, conſider theſe things diligently, and doe them wiſely, and ſuffer vs no longer to wauer betwixte two: although not for your owne cauſe, to whom peraduenture the fulnes of your owne power is knowen: yet in pitying our weakenes, if thou be he, tell vs openly, and ſhew thy ſelf to the world, that al we may follow one. Be not to vs a bloudy biſhop, leaſt by your occaſion mans bloud be ſhed, leaſt hel ſwalow ſuch a nomber of ſoules, & leaſt the name of Chriſt be euill ſpoken of by Infidels, thorough ſuche a worthy perſonage. But peraduenture yee will ſay, for our righteouſnes it is manifeſt inough, and we will not put it to other mens diſputations. If this bald aunſwer ſhould be admitted, the ſchiſme ſhould continue ſtill, ſeeing neither part is willing to agree to the other: and where the world is as it were equally deuided betwixt them; neither part can be compelled to geue place to the other without much bloudſhed. The incarnation of Chriſt and his reſurrection was well inough knowen to himſelfe and his diſciples, yet hee asked of his father to be made knowen to the world. Hee made alſo the Goſpel to be wrytten, and the doctrine of the Apoſtles, & ſent his Apoſtles into all the world, to do the office of preaching, that the ſame thing might be knowen to all men. The foreſayde reaſon is the ſubtelty of Mahomet, the which knowing himſelfe guilty of his ſect, vtterly forbad diſputations. If ye haue ſo ful truſt of your righteouſneſſe, put it to the examination of worthy perſones in a generall councel, to the which it belōgeth by right to define ſuch doubts, or els commit it vnto able perſons, and geue them ful power to determine all things concerning that matter, or at the leſt by forſaking the office on both parties, leaue the Churche of God free, ſpeedily to prouide for a new ſhepheard.

Byſhops taught by Chriſt not to play the Lordes.

The right ornament of a true Byſhop.

A bald anſwere.

We finde, kings haue forſaken their temporal kingdomes, vpon onely reſpect of deuotion, and haue taken the apparel of Monkes profeſsion. Therefore let Chriſtes Vicar (being a profeſſour of moſt high holineſſe) be aſhamed to continue in his ſeat of honor, to the offence of all people, and the preiudice and hurt of the Romiſh church, and the deuotion of it, and cutting away kingdomes from it. But if you ſay, it is not requiſite that the cauſe of Goddes church ſhould be called in controuerſie, and therefore we cannot ſo eaſily goe from it, ſeeing our conſcience gaineſayeth it. To the which we anſwer, if it be the cauſe of God and the church, let the general councel iudge of it: but if it be a perſonal cauſe (as almoſt all the world probably thinketh) if ye were the follower of Chriſt, ye would rather choſe a temporall death, then to ſuffer ſuch a wauering, I ſay not, to the hurt of ſo many, but the endles deſtruction of ſoules, to the offence of the whole world, and to an euerlaſting ſhame of the Apoſtolical dignitie. Did not Clemente named (or that I may more truely ſpeake) ordeined of S. Peter to the Apoſtolike dignitie and to be biſhop, reſigne his right, that his dede might be taken of his ſucceſſours for an example? Alſo Pope Siricius gaue ouer his Popedome to be a comfort of the 11000. Virgins. Therfore much more ought you (if neede require) geue ouer your Popedome, that you might gather together the children of God which be ſcattered abroade. For as it is thought a gloryous thing to defend the common right, euen to bludſhed: ſo is it ſomtimes neceſſary for a man to wincke at his owne cauſe, and to forſake it for a greater profite, and by that meanes better to procure peace. Shoulde not he be thought a deuill and Chriſtes enemie of all men, that woulde agree to an election made of him for the Apoſtolicall dignitie and Popedome, if it ſhould be to the deſtruction of Chriſtians, diuiſion of the church, the offence and loſſe of al faithfull people? If ſuch miſchiefs ſhould be known to al the world by Goddes reuelation, to come to paſſe by ſuch receiuing of the Popedome and Apoſtolicall dignitie: then by the like reaſon, why ſhall he not be iudged of all men an Apoſtata and forſaker of hys faith, which chuſeth dignitie, or rather worldly honour, then the vnitie of the Churche? Chriſt died that he might gather together the children of God which are ſcattered abroad: but ſuch an enemie of God and the Church, wiſheth his ſubiectes bodily to die in battaile, and the more part of the worlde to peariſh in ſoule, rather then forſaking to be Pope to liue in a lower ſtate, although it were honourable. If the feare of God the deſire of the heauenly kingdō, & the earneſt loue of the vnitie of the church do moue your hart, ſhew in dede that your workes may beare recorde to the truth.

Publike reſpect to be preferred before priuate.

Hard counſell for the pope.

Vnitie of the church to be preferred before worldly dignitie.

Clement and Siricius moſt holy Popes, not only are not reprooued, but rather are reuerenced of all men, becauſe they gaue ouer their right for profitable cauſes, & for the ſame cauſe all the church of holy men ſhewe forth their praiſe. Likewiſe, your name ſhould liue for euer and euer if ye would do the like for a neceſſary cauſe, that is to ſay, for the vnitie of Gods Churche. Geue no heede to vnmeaſurable cryings of them that ſay, that the ryghte chuſing of Popes is loſt, except ye defend your part manfully: but be afraid, leaſt ſuch ſtirrers vp of miſchiefe looke for theyr owne commoditie or honour, that is to ſay, that vnder your wing they might be promoted to richeſſe and honour. After this ſort Achitophel was ioyned and Abſolon in perſecuting his owne father, and falſe vſurping of hys kingdome.

The Pope will not looſe his dignitie for any publike tranquilitie.

Wicked flaterers about the pope.

Furthermore, there ſhoulde be no ieopardie to that election, becauſe both parties ſticke ſtifly to the old faſhion of election, and either of them couet the preheminence of the Romiſh Churche, counſailing all Chriſtians to obey them. And although throughe their geuing ouer the faſhion of chuſing the Pope ſhould be chāged for a time: it were to be borne, rather then to ſuffer any longer this diuiſion in Gods church. For that faſhion in chuſing is not ſo neceſſary required to the ſtate of a Pope, but the ſucceſſour of the Apoſtle as neceſſary cauſe required, might come in at the doore by an other faſhion of chuſing, and that Canonicall inough. And this we are taught manifeſtly by examples of the fathers: for Peter the Apoſtle appoynted after him Clement, and that not by falſe vſurping of power, as we ſuppoſe. And it was thought, that that faſhion of apoynting of Popes, was lawfull vnto the time of Pope Hillary. Which decreed that no Pope ſhuld apoynt hys ſucceſſor.

Better that the order of the pope election ſhuld ceaſe then the church ſhould ſuffer any diuiſion.

Afterward, the election of the Pope went by the cleargy and people of Rome, and the Emperors counſaile agreeing therto, as it appeareth in the election of the bleſſed Gregory. But Martinus Pope with the conſent of the holy Synode graunted Charles the power to chuſe the Pope. But of late Nycholas the 2 was the firſt whome Martine makes mention of in his councels, to be choſen by the Cardinals. But all the Biſhops of Lumbardie (for the moſt part) wythſtode this election, and choſe Cadulus to be Pope, ſaying that the Pope ought not to be choſen, but of the precincte of Italie. Wherefore, we thinke it not a ſafe way ſo earneſtly to ſtick to the traditions of men, in the faſhion of chuſing the Pope, & ſo oft to chaunge, leaſt we be thought to breake Goddes traditions concerning the vnitie of the church. Yea rather it were better yet to ordaine a newe faſhion of his election, and meeter for hym as it hath beene afore. But all things concerning the ſame election myght be kept ſafe, if Gods honour were looked for afore youre owne, and the peace of the Church were vprightly ſoughte: for ſuch a diſhonouring ſhoulde be moſt honour vnto you, and that geuing place ſhall be the getting of a greater dignitie, & the willing depoſing of your honour, ſhoulde obtaine you the entrie of euerlaſting honour, and ſhoulde procure the loue of the whole worlde toward you, and you ſhoulde deſerue to be exalted continually, as Dauid was in humbling himſelfe. O howe monſtrous a ſight and how foule a monſter is a mannes body disfigured wyth two heades? So if it were poſsible, the ſpouſe of Chriſt ſhoulde be made ſo monſtrous, if ſhee were ruled wyth two ſuch heades: but that is not poſsible, ſhe is euer altogether faire, in whome no ſpot is found, therfore we muſt caſt away that rotten member, & thruſter in of hys ſecond head: We cannot ſuffer any longer ſo great a wickedneſſe in Gods houſe, that we ſhoulde ſuffer Gods cote that wantes a ſeame, by any meanes to be torne by the handes of two, that violently draw it in ſonder. For if theſe two ſhould be ſuffred to raigne together, they woulde ſo betwixte them teare in pieces that litle coate of the Lord, that ſcarſe one piece woulde hange to another. They paſſe the wickedneſſe of the ſouldiours that curſed Chriſt. For they willing to haue the coate remaine whole, ſaid: Let vs not cut it, but let vs caſt lots for it, whoſe it ſhalbe. But theſe 2. Popes ſuffring their right and title to be tried by no lot nor way (although not in wordes yet in deedes) they pronounce this ſentence: It ſhall neither be thine nor mine, but let it be deuided, for they choſe rather as it apeareth to be Lords (though it be but in a litle part, and that to the cōfuſion of vnitie of the Church) then in leuing that lording to ſeke for the peace of the church. We do not affirme this, but we ſhew almoſt the whole iudgemēt of the world of them being moued ſo thinke by likely coniectures. We looked for amendement of thys intollerable confuſion, by the ſpace that theſe two inuentours of this miſchi[illegible] liued. But wee looked for peace and beholde trouble: for neither in their lyues nor in their deaths, they procured any cōfort, but rather dying as it were in a doubt betwixt two wayes, left to theyr ſucceſſoures matters of contention continuall. But nowe for the ſpace of 7. yeres of their ſucceſſors, that which we deſired and loked for afore (that is, they ſhoulde beare good grapes and they bryng foorth wild grapes) in thys matter we fall into a deepe deſpaire. But in as much that we heare the comfort of the Lorde, which promiſed that miſerably he wold deſtroy thoſe wicked men, & let his vineyarde to other huſbandmen which will bring him fruit at their times appoynted, he hath promiſed faithfully that he wil help his ſpouſe in her nede, to thend of the world: & we leaning on the ſure hope of this promiſe and in hope contrary to hope beleuing, by Gods grace will put our helping handes to eaſing of this miſery, when a conuenient time ſhall ſerue, as much as our kingly power is able, although our wit doth not perceaue how theſe thinges afore rehearſed may be amended: yet we being encouraged to this by the hope of gods promiſe, will do our endeuour: lik as Abraham beleued his ſonne being ſlaine by ſacrifice, that the multitude of his ſeede ſhould encreaſe to the number of the ſtarres, according to Gods promiſe. Now therfore the time drawes near to make an end of this ſchiſm leaſt a third election of a ſchiſmaticke agaynſt the Apoſtles ſucceſſour make a cuſtome of the doyng, and ſo the Pope of Auinion ſhalbe double Romiſhe pope, and he ſhall ſay with hys partakers, as the Patriarch of Conſtantinople ſayd vnto Chriſtes vicar when he forſooke hym: The Lorde be with thee, for the Lorde is with vs. And is much to be feared of all Chriſten men. For that Phariſie begins now to be called the pope of Auinion among the people. But peraduenture it would be thought of ſome men, that it belongeth not to ſecular princes to bridle outragies of the Pope: to whome we aunſwere, that naturally the members put them ſelues in ieopardy for to ſaue the head, and the partes labour to ſaue the whole. Chriſt ſo decked his ſpouſe, that her ſides ſhold cleaue together, and ſhould vphold themſelues, by courſe of time and occaſion of thinges, they ſhould correcte one an other and cleaue together tunably. Did not Moſes put down Aaron, becauſe he was vnfaythfull? Salomon put downe Abiathar, who came by lineall diſſent from Anatoth, and remoued hys prieſthoode from his kindred to the ſtock of Eliazar in the perſon of Sadock which had his beginning from Ely the prieſt? 3.2. Otho Emperour, depoſed Pope Iohn the 12. becauſe he was lecherous. Henry the Emperour put downe Gratianus, becauſe he vſed Simony in buying & ſelling ſpirituall liuinges. And Otho depoſed Pope Benner the firſt, becauſe he thruſt in himſelfe. Therefore by like reaſon, why may not kings and Princes bridle the Romiſhe Pope in default of the Church: if the quallitie of his fault require it, or the neceſsitie of the Church by this compell to helpe the Churche oppreſſed by tyranny. In old time ſchiſmes which roſe about making the Pope, were determined by the power of ſecular Princes: as the ſchiſme betwixt Symachus and Laurence was ended in a Counſaile afore Theodoricus king of Italy. Henry the Emperour when two dyd ſtriue to be Pope, he depoſed them both, and receaued the thyrd being choſen at Rome to be Pope, that is to ſay, Clement the ſecond, which crowned him with the Imperiall crowne. And the Romaynes promiſed him that from thenceforth, they would promote none to be Pope without his conſent. Alexander alſo ouercame 4. Popes ſchiſmatickes, all which Fredericke the Emperour corrected.

A godly purpoſe if it had bene put in execution.

Secular princes are to bridle the outragies of the pope.

Popes put downe by princes.

Thus looke on the regiſter of Popes and theyr deedes, and ye ſhall finde that ſchiſmes moſt commonly haue bene deciſed by the powers of ſecular princes, the ſchiſmatickes caſt out, and ſometimes new popes made, and ſometime the olde ones caſt out of their dignities, and reſtored to theyr old dignities again. If it were not lawfull for ſecular princes to bridle the outragies of ſuch a Pope lawfully made, and afterward becōming a tyraunt: In ſuch a caſe he might oppreſſe ouermuch the Church, he might chaunge Chriſtendome into Heathens, and make the labour of Chriſt crucified to be in vayne, or els truely God ſhould not haue prouided for his ſpouſe in earth by all meanes as much as is poſsible by ſeruice of men to withſtand daungers. Therefore we counſell you with ſuch a louing affection as becomes Children, that ye conſider in your hart well, leaſt in working by this meanes ye prepare a way of Antichriſt, through your deſire to beare rule, and ſo by this meanes as we feare the one of theſe two ſhall chaunce: Either ye ſhall cauſe all the princes of the worlde to riſe agaynſt you to bring in a true follower of Chriſt to haue the ſtate of the Apoſtolicall dignitie, or that is worſe, the whole world deſpiſing the ruling of one ſhepheard ſhall leaue the Romiſh Church deſolate. But God keepe this from the worlde, that the deſire of honour of two men ſhould bring ſuch a deſolation into the Church of God: for then that departing away which the Apoſtle prophecied, ſhoulde come afore the comming of Antichriſt, were at hand: which ſhold be the laſt diſpoſition of the worlde, peaceably to receaue Antichriſt with honour. Conſider therefore the ſtate of your moſt excellent holines, how ye receaued the power from God to the building of the Church and not to the deſtruction, that Chriſt hath geuen you wine and oyle to heale the wounded, and hath appoynted you his vicar in theſe thinges as pertayne to gentlenes, and hath geuen vs theſe thinges whiche ſerue to rigour. For we beare not the ſword without a cauſe to the puniſhement of euill doers, the which power ordayned of God we haue receaued, our ſelues being witnes: beſeeching you to receaue our counſel effectually, that in doing thus, the waters may returne to the places from whence they came, and ſo the waters may begin to be made ſweete with ſalt: leaſt the axe ſwimme on the water and the wood ſincke, and leaſt the fruitfull Oliue degender into a wilde Oliue, and the leproſie of Naaman that Noble man, cleaue continually to the houſe of Giezy, and leaſt the pope and the Phariſeis crucify Chriſt agayne, Chriſt the ſpouſe of the Churche whiche was wont to bring the chiefe Byſhop into the holyeſt place, encreaſe your holines, or rather to reſtore it being loſt. Written, &c. Ex Fragmento libri cuiuſdam Dunelm.

Lawful that Princes ſhould withſtand the tyranny of the Pope.

The kyng ſeemeth here to propheſie of the deſolation of the Romaine pope.

The pope and Phariſes, newe crucifiers of Chriſt.

¶ This Epiſtle of king Richard 2. written to Pope Boniface the 9. in the time of the ſchiſme, about the yeare as appeareth 1397. As it contayned muche good matter of wholſome counſel to be followed: ſo how litle he wrought with the Pope, the ſequell afterwarde declared. For the ſchiſme notwithſtanding continued long after, in whiche neyther of the popes would geue ouer theyr holde, or yelde any thing to good counſayle geuen them, for any reſpect of publique wealth. Such a ſtroke beareth ambition in thys Apoſtolicall ſee, whiche we are wont ſo greatly to magnifie. But of this inough, whiche I leaue and referre to the conſideration of the Lorde, ſeeing men will not looke vpon it.

Drawing now toward the latter end of king Richards raigne, it remaineth, that as we did before in the time of k. Edward the third, ſo here alſo we ſhewe forth a ſummary recapitulation of ſuch parliamentall notes & proceedinges as then were practiſed by publique parliament in this kings time, againſt the iuriſdiction of the Byſh. of Rome: to the intent, that ſuch (if any ſuch be) that thinke, or haue thought the receauing of the popes double authoritie to be ſuch an auncient thing within this realme, may diminiſhe theyr opinion: As euidently may appeare by diuers argumentes heretofore touched, concerning the election and inueſting of byſhops by the king. As where king Oſwin commaunded Cedde to be ordayned Archbiſh. of Yorke. Alſo where king Egfride cauſed Cuthbert, was brought to K. Canute and at his commaundement was inſtituted Byſhop of the ſame ſee. Ex lib. Malmeſb. de geſtis pontif. Anglorum. And likewiſe Math. Pariſienſis teſtifieth, that king Henry the 3. gaue the Archbiſhopricke of Caunterbury, to Radulphus then Biſhop of London, and inueſted him wyth ſtaffe and ring. And the ſame king gaue the Biſhopricke of Wint. to W. Gifford: and moreouer, following the ſteppes both of his father and brother before him, endued him with the poſſeſſions pertaining to the ſayd Biſhoprick (the contrary ſtatute of pope Vrbane, forbidding that Clerkes ſhould receaue any Eccleſiaſticall dignitie at the hand of Princes, or of any lay perſon to the contrary notwithſtanding &c.) Innumerable examples of like ſort are to be ſeen in auncient hiſtoryes of this our realme. As alſo out of the parliament rolles in the time of king Edward hath ſufficiently bene touched a little before. Whereunto alſo may be added the notes of ſuch parliamentes, as haue bene holdē in the raygne of this preſent king Richard the ſecond, the collation whereof in part here followeth.

The Popes vſurped iuriſdiction neuer receiued in England, before a late yeres.

❀ Notes of certayne Parliamentes holden in the the raigne of king Richard 2. making agaynſt the Pope.

In the firſt yeare of King Richard 2. in the parliament holden at Weſtminſter, it was requeſted and graunted: that the popes collector be willed no longer to gather the firſt fruites of benefices within this realme, being a verye noueltie, and that no perſon doe any longer pay them.

Ex Archiuis parlamentarijs. An. 1. Reg. Rich. 2. tit. 66.

Item, that no man doe procure any benefice by prouiſion from Rome, on payne to be out of the kinges protection.

Tit. 67.

Item, that no Engliſhman do take to farme of any Alien, anye Eccleſiaſticall benefice or Prebende, on the lyke payne. In which byll was rehearſed, that the French men had 6. thouſand poundes yearely of ſuch liuinges in England.

Tit. 68.

Item, that remedy might be had againſt the popes reſeruations to dignities electiue, ẏ ſame being done againſt the treaty of the pope, taken with king Edward 3.

Tit. 77.

In the ſecond yeare of the ſayd king Richard the ſecōd, it was by petitiō requeſted: that ſome order might be takē touchyng Aliens, hauyng the greateſt part of the Church dignities in their handes. Whereunto the kyng anſwered, that by aduiſe of the Lordes, he will prouide therfore.

Ex Anno. 2. Tit. 70.

Item, it was enacted, that all the benefices of Cardinals and others rebels, to pope Vrbane that now is, ſhal be ſeaſed into the kynges handes.

Tit. 71.

An Acte that Pope Vrbane was true & lawfull Pope, and that the liuynges of all Cardinals and other rebels to the ſayd Pope, ſhould be ſeaſed into the kinges handes, and the kyng bee aunſwered of the profites thereof: And that whoſoeuer within this Realme, ſhall procure or obtayne any prouiſion or other inſtrument from any other Pope then the ſame Vrbane, ſhall be out of the kynges protection.

Tit. 78.

Ex 3. Anno. Reg. Rich, 2.

Here note well a ſtraunge proceeding.

But marke the ſtraunge euent.

Moreouer, in the thyrd yeare of kyng Richard the ſecond, the Prelates and Clergie made their proteſtation in this Parliament, expreſſely agaynſt a certaine new graſit, to wit, their extortions: That the ſame neuer ſhould paſſe with their aſſent and good will, to the blemiſhyng of the liberties of the Churche, if by that worde extortion, they ment any thyng largely to proceede againſt Ordinaries & others of the Church. But if they ment none otherwiſe to deale hereafter therin, thẽ before that ẏ time had bene done then would they conſent. Wherunto it was replied for the king, that neither for the ſame their ſayd proteſtation, or other wordes in that behalfe, the king woulde not ſtay to graunt to his Iuſtices in that caſe and all other caſes, as was vſed to be done in times paſt, and was bound to doe by vertue of his othe done at his coronation.

Tit.44.

Furthermore, in the fourth yeare of the ſayd king Richard 2. it was requeſted, that prouiſion might be had agaynſt the popes collectors, for leuying of the firſt fruits of eccleſiaſticall dignities within the realme.

Tit.46.

Item, that all Priors Aliens might be remoued out of their houſes, and licenſed to depart, & neuer to reuert. And that Engliſh men may be placed in their liuinges, anſwering the king as they did.

Ex 9. Anno eiuſdem Regis.
Tit.4.

And in the 9. yeare of the foreſayd king, touching matter of the Staple: the ſpeaker of the Parliament pronounced, that he thought beſt the ſame were planted within the realme, conſidering that Calis, Bruges, and other towns beyond the ſeas, grew very rich therby, and good townes here very much decayed, and ſo much for the common profite. Touching the king, he affirmed that the ſubſidie & cuſtome of wool more yelded to the king whẽ the ſtaple was kept in England by one thouſand markes yearely, then it did now being holden beyond the ſeas.

Tit.36.

Item: that inquiſition and redreſſe might be had againſt ſuch religious perſons, as vnder the licence to purchaſe 10. li. yearly, do purchaſe 80. li. or 100. li.

Tit.44.

Item, that all Clarkes aduaunced to any eccleſiaſticall dignitie or liuing by the king, will graunt to the king the firſt fruites of their liuinges, none otherwiſe then they would haue done to the Pope being aduaunced by him.

Tit.26.

In the 11. yeare of K. Richard. 2. it was put vp by the petitions of the commons, that ſuche impoſitions as are gathered by the popes bulles of Volumus and imponimus of the tranſlations of B.B. and ſuch like might be imployed on the kinges warres agaynſt the ſchiſmatickes of Scotland. And that ſuch as bring into the realme the like bulles and nouelries may be reputed for traytors.

An 13. Regis Rich. 2.
Tit.24.

In the 13. yeare of his raigne, followed an other parliamẽt, in which although the archbiſh. of Canterbury and Yorke, for them and the whole Clergie of their prouinces, made their ſolemne proteſtations in opẽ Parliament, that they in no wiſe ment or would aſſent to any ſtatute or law made in reſtraynt of the popes authoritie, but vtterly withſtood the ſame, willing this proteſtation of theirs to be enrolled: yet the ſayd proteſtation of theirs at that time took no great effect.

Tit.34.

Item, in the ſame Parliament was put vp by publike petion, that the popes collector ſhould be commaunded to auoyd the Realme within 40. dayes, or els to be taken as the kinges enemy, and that euery ſuch collector from hence forth, may be an Engliſhman and ſworn to execute the ſtatutes made in this Parliament.

Ex titu. 9.

Moreouer in the ſayd Parliament, the yere aboueſayd of the king: the 26. of Ianuary, M. Iohn Mandour Clark was charged openly in the parliament, that he ſhould not paſſe, ne ſend ouer to Rome, ne attempt or doe any thinge there touching the Archdeaconry of Durham in preiudice of the king or of hys lawes, or of the party preſented thereto by the king, on perill that might enſue.

Ex an. 14. Regis Richardi ſecundi. tit. 6.

The next yeare following whiche was the 14. of thys kinges raigne, it was enacted firſt touching the ſtaplers, that after the feaſt of the Epiphany next enſuing, that ẏ ſtaple ſhould be remoued from Calice into England, in ſuche places as are contayned in the ſtatute made in 27. Edw. 3. the which ſtatute ſhould be fully executed: and further, that euery Alien that bringeth merchaundiſe into the Realme, ſhould finde ſufficient ſurety to buy and cary awaye commodities of the Realme, to halfe the value of his ſayd merchaundiſe.

Tit.24.
Againſt vſury.

Item, in the ſame parliament petition was made, that agaynſt the horrible vice of vſury then termed ſhifts, practiſed as well by the clergie as laitie, ẏ order made by Iohn Notte, late Mayor of Londõ, might be executed throughout the Realme.

Ex, tit. 29.

Moreouer in the 15. yeare of the raigne of the foreſayde king it was accorded: for ẏ ſyr W. Brian knight, had purchaſed from Rome a Bull directed from the Archbſhop of Cant, and Yorke, to excommunicate ſuche as had broken vp his houſe, and had taken away diuers letters, priuileges, and charters. The ſame Bull being red in the parliament houſe, was adiudged preiudicial to the kings crown and in derogation of the lawes, for the whiche hee was by the king and aſſent of the Lordes committed to the Tower, there to remayne at the kinges will and pleaſure.

Vide articulum. Tit.29.

In the ſayd Parliament alſo, W. Archb. of Canterbury maketh his proteſtation in the open parliament, ſaying, that the pope ought not to excommunicate any biſhop, or to entermeddle, for, or touching anye preſentment to anye eccleſiaſticall dignitie recorded in any the kinges courtes. He further proteſted, that the pope ought to make no tranſlation, to any Byſhopricke, within the realme againſt the kinges will: for that the ſame was to the deſtruction of the realme and crowne of England whiche hath alway bene ſo free, as the ſame hath had none earthly ſoueraigne, but onely ſubiecte to God in all thinges touching regalties, and to none other. The which proteſtation he prayd might be entred.

Ex An. 17. Reg. Rich. 2. Titul. 33.

In the 17. yeare of the raygne of the king aforeſayd, it was deſired that remedy might be had, agaynſt ſuche religious perſons as cauſed their villains or vnderlinges to mary free women inheritable, wherby the lands came to thoſe religious mens handes by colluſion.

43.

Item, that ſufficient perſons might be preſented to benefices who may dwell on the ſame ſo as theyr ſtocke for want therof do not periſh.

46.

Item, that remedy might be had agaynſt the Abbotes of Colcheſter and Abinton, who in the townes of Colcheſter and Colnham clayme to haue ſanctuary.

Ex an. 20. Reg. Rich. 2. tit. 22.

To come to the parliament holden in the 20. yeare of this kinges raigne, we finde moreouer in the ſayd rolles: how that the Archb, of Cant. and York, for themſelues and the clergy of their prouinces, declared to the king in open parliamẽt, ẏ foraſmuch as they were ſworn to ẏ pope and ſee of Rome, if any thing were in the parliament attempted in reſtraynt of the ſame, they woulde in no wiſe aſſent therto, but verily withſtand the ſame, the which theyr proteſtation they require to be enrolled.

Here the Archb. of Cant. goeth contrary to himſelfe.

Titul. 32.

Vpon the petition of the begging Friers there at large it was enacted: that none of that order ſhoulde paſſe ouer the ſeas, without licence of his ſoueraigne, nor that he ſhoulde take vppon him no order of M. of Diuinitie, vnleſſe he were firſt apposed in his Chapter prouinciall, on payne to be put out of the kinges protection.

Tit.36.

Item, that the kings officers for making areſts or attachementes in Churchyardes, are therefore excommunicated, wherof remedy was required.

Ex 21. an. Reg. Rich. 2. titul. 15.

In the yeare of the ſame kinges raygne. 21. the Parliment being holden at Weſtminſter, we find how the commons in full Parliament, accuſed Thomas Arundell archbiſhop of Caunterbury, for that he as Chauncellor procured, and as chiefe doer executed the ſame commiſſion, made trayterouſly in the tenth yeare of the king. And alſo that he the ſayd Archbiſhop procured the Duke of Glouceſter and the Earles of Arundell and Warwicke, to encroch to themſelues royall power, and to iudge to death Simon de Burley, and ſir Iohn Berners without the kings aſſent. Wheron, the Commons required that the ſame archbiſh. might reſt vnder ſafe keeping: wherunto, for that the ſame impeachementes touched ſo great a perſon, they would be aduiſed.

Ex tit. 16.

Item, the 25. day of September, the Commons prayed the king to geue iudgement agaynſt the ſayd Archbiſhop, according to his deſertes. The king aunſwered, that priuately the ſayd Archbiſhop had confeſſed to him, howe he miſtooke himſelfe in the ſayd Commiſſion, and therefore ſubmitted himſelfe to the kings mercy. Wherfore, the king Lordes and ſir Thomas Percy, proctor for the clergie: adiudged the facte of the ſayd Archbiſhop to be treaſon, and hymſelfe a traytour, and therfore it was ordered: that the ſayd Archbiſhoppe ſhoulde be baniſhed, his temporalties ſeaſed, his landes and goodes forfeyted, as well in vſe as in poſſeſſion.

Tho. Arundell Archb. of Cant. proued a traitour by parliament.

Ex tit. 17.

The king further preſcribed, that the ſayd Archbiſhop ſhoulde take hys paſſing on Friday within 6. weekes of Michaelmas, at Douer, towardes the parts of Fraunce.

Thus hauing hitherto ſufficiently touched and comprehended ſuch thinges as haue happened in the raygne of this king, neceſſary for the Church to knowe, by courſe of ſtory: we come nowe to the 22. yeare of King Richardes raygne, which is the yeare of our Lord, 1399. In the which yeare happened the ſtrange and alſo lamentable depoſing of this king Richard the ſecond aforeſayd, from hys kingly ſcepter. Straunge, for that the like example hathe not often bene ſeene in ſeates royall. Lamentable, for that it cannot be but grieuous to any good mans hart, to ſee him eyther ſo to deſerue, if he were iuſtly depoſed: or if he were vniuſtly depriued, to ſee the kingly title there not able to hold his right, wher by force, it is compelled to geue place to might.

Vices and vertues mixt in K.Rich.

What it is to forſake the maintenance of the Goſpell.

Articles 33. laid againſt K.Richard.

As concerning the order and proceſſe of whoſe depoſing for that it neither is greatly pertinent to my argument, and is ſufficiently contayned in Robert Fabian and in the kinges recordes, in the Chronicle of S. Albons, and in other hiſtories at large, it were here tedious and ſuperfluous to entermedle with repeting therof. what were the conditions and properties of this king, partly before hath bene touched. In whome as ſome good vertues may be noted: ſo alſo ſome vices may ſeeme to be mixed withall. But eſpecially this, that he ſtarting out of the ſteps of hys progenitors, ceaſed to take part with them, whiche tooke part with the goſpell. wherupon, it ſo fell, not by the blind wheele of fortune, but by the ſecret hand of him, which directeth all eſtates: that as he firſt began to forſake ẏ mayntayning of the Goſpell of God, ſo the Lord began to forſake him. And where the protection of God beginneth to fayle there can lack no cauſes to be charged withall, whom God once giueth ouer to mans puniſhmēt. So that to me conſidering the whole life and trade of this prince, among all other cauſes alledged in ſtoryes agaynſt him: none ſeemeth ſo much to be wayed of vs, or more hurtfull to hym, then this forſaking of the Lord and his word, Although to ſuch as liſt more to be certified in other cauſes concurring withall, many and ſondry defectes in that king may appeare in ſtoryes to the number of 33. articles alledged or forced rather agaynſt him.

Gods ſpeciall fauour neceſſary for princes. Pſal. 2.

In whiche as I cannot deny, but that he was worthy of much blame: ſo to be diſplaced therefore from his regall ſeate, and rightfull ſtate of the crowne, it may be thought perhaps the cauſes not to be ſo rare ſo material in a prince which either could or els would haue ſerued: had not he geuen ouer before to ſerue the Lord and hys word, chuſing rather to ſerue the humour of the Pope and bloudy Prelates, thē to further the Lords proceedings in preaching of hys word. And thē as I ſayd, how can enemies lack wher God ſtandeth not to friend? or what cauſe can be ſo little whiche is not able inough to caſt downe, where the Lords arme is ſhortned to ſuſtayne? wherefore, it is a poynt of principall wiſedome in a Prince not to forget, that as he ſtandeth alwayes in neede of God hys helping hand: ſo alwayes he haue the diſcipline and feare of him before hys eyes, according to the counſayle of the godly King Dauid Pſal. 2.

The king ledde with lewde counſayle.

And thus much touching the time and race of this K. Richard, with the tragical ſtory of his depoſing. The order and maner whereof purpoſely I pretermit, onely contented briefly to lay together, a fewe ſpeciall thinges done before his fall, ſuche as may be ſufficient in a briefe ſomme, both to ſatiſfie the Reader inquiſitiue of ſuche ſtoryes, and alſo to forwarne other Princes to beware the lyke daungers. In ſuche as wryte the life and Actes of this Prince, thus I read of him reported, that he was much inclined to the fauouring and aduauncing of certayne perſons about him, & ruled all by theyr counſell, whiche were thē greatly abhorred and hated in the realme: The names of whome were Rob. Veer Erle of Oxford, whō the king had made Duke of Ireland. Alexander Neuile Archbiſhop of York, Michiel Delapoole Earle of Suffolke, Robert Triſilian Lord chiefe Iuſtice, Nicholas Brembre with other.

The nobles vp in armes againſt certaine of the kings counſailours.

These men, being hated and diſdayned of diuers of the nobles, and of the commons, the king alſo by fauouring them, was leſſe fauoured hymſelfe. In ſo much, that the Duke of Glouceſter, named Thomas woodſtock ẏ kings Vncle, with the Erle of warwicke, and Earle of Darby: ſtode vp in armes againſt thoſe counſaylors and abuſers (as they named them) of the king. In ſo much that ẏ king for feare was conſtrayned agaynſt hys minde to remoue out of his court, Alexander Neuile Archb. of Yorke, Iohn Forde Byſhop of Dureſme, Fryer Thomas Ruſhoke Biſhop of Chicheſter the kinges confeſſor, with the Lord Haringworth, Lord Burnell, and Bemond, Lord Veer, and diuers other.

Ex Chron. D. Albani.

The ſecond preparatiue to the kings depoſing.

And furthermore, in the Parliament the ſame yeare following, Robert Triſilian the Iuſtice was hanged and drawne. Alſo Nicholas Brembre Knight, Iames Saliſbury alſo, and Iames Barneſe both Knights, Ioh. Bewchampe the kinges Steward, and Iohn Blake Eſquire in like maner. All theſe by the counſayle of the Lordes beyng caſt in the parliament agaynſt the kyngs mind, did ſuffer; which was in ẏ 11. of his raign, he being yet vnder gouernours: but conſequently after the ſame, the king clayming his own liberty, being come to the age of 20. began to take more vpon him. And this was one thinge that ſtirred vp the kinges ſtomacke agaynſt the Nobles. Ex Chron. Alban.

Londiners fauourers of Wickliffes doctrine.

Ex hiſtor. D. Albani cuius ſic habet initium. An. gratia. &c.

2. An other thing that ſtyrred hym vp as much againſt the Londiners was this: for that he would haue borowed of them a M. pound, and they denied him to their double & triple diſauantage, as after enſued vpon it. Ibidem. An other occaſion beſides this, betwene the king and the Londoners happened thus, by reaſon of one of the Byſhop of Saliſburies ſeruauntes, named Roman, and a Bakers man: who then carying a baſket of horſebread in Fletſtreet the foreſayd Roman tooke a horſeloſe out of ẏ baſket. The Baker aſking why he did ſo, the Byſhops luſty yeomen turned backe agayne and brake his head: wherevpon the neighbors came out, and would haue areſted this Roman but he eſcaped away vnto the Byſhops houſe. Then the Conſtable would haue had him out, but the Biſhops men ſhut faſt the gates, that they ſhoulde not approche. Thus, much people gathered together, threatning to bruſt open ẏ gates and fire the houſe, vnleſſe they had the foreſayd party to them brought out. wherby much adoe there was, till at length the Mayor and Sheriffes came and quieted ẏ rage of the commons, & ſent euery man home to his houſe, charging thē to keepe peace. Here as yet was no great harme done, but if the biſhoppe for his part had beene quyet, and had not ſtyrred the coles of debate, which were well ſlaked already all had bene ended without further perturbation. But the ſtomacke of the Byſhop not yet digeſted (although hys man had done the wrong) hauing no great cauſe ſo to do, whoſe name was Iohn waltam being then Treaſourer of England, went to Thomas Arundell archbiſh. the ſame time of Yorke, and Lord Chauncellour of England to complayne of the Londoners. where is to be noted, or rather reueled by the way a priuy miſtery, which although be not in this ſtory touched of the writers: yet it touched the hartes of the biſhops not a little. For the Londoners at that time were notoriouſly knowne to be fauourers of wickliffes ſide, as partly before this is to be ſeene, and in the ſtory of S. Albones more playnly doth appeare: where the author of the ſayd hiſtory writing vpon the 15. yeare of King Richardes raygne, reporteth in theſe wordes of the Londoners, that they were Male creduli in deum & traditiones auitas, Lollardorum ſuſtentatores, religioſorū detractores, decimarū detētores, & cōmunis vulgi depauperatores &c. ẏ is not right beleuers in God, nor in the traditions of their forefathers: ſuſteyners of the Lollardes: depráuers of religious men: withholders of tythes: and impoueriſhers of the common people, &c.

Londiners complayned of to the king, by the Byſhops.

Beati pacifici.

The court remoued frō London to Yorke.

Thus the Londoners being noted and ſuſpected of the byſhops, were the more maliced (no doubt therefore) of the ſayd byſhops, whiche were the more ready to finde & take all occaſions to worke agaynſt them, as by theyr doyng herein may wel appeare. For the biſhop of Saliſbury, and archb. of Yorke, hauing no greater matter agaynſt them, then was declared: with a grieuous complaynt went to the king, complayning of the Mayor and Sheriffes of Lōdon. what treſpaſſe the Mayor and Sheriffes had done, as ye haue heard before, ſo may you iudge. Now what followed after let vs heare. The king incenſed not a little by the complaynt of the Biſhops, conceiued eftſones againſt the Mayor and Sheriffes, and agaynſt the whole Citie of London, a great ſtomache. In ſo muche that the Mayor & both the Sheriffes were ſent for, and remoued from theyr office. Syr Edward Darlyngton then was made warden & Gouernor of the citie, who alſo for hys gentleneſſe ſhewed to the Citizens, was alſo depoſed, and an other named ſyr Baldwyn Radington, placed in that roome. Moreouer, ſo much grew the kinges diſpleaſure agaynſt the City that he alſo remoued from London the courtes, & termes to be kept at Yorke, that is to ſay, the Chauncery, the Eſchequer, the kinges benche, the hamper, and the common place: where the ſame continued from Midſommer, tyll Chriſtenmas, to the great decay of the Citye of London: which was An. 1393.

The 3. preparatiue to the kings depoſing.

The king areſting his owne Vncle, cauſed him to be put wrongfully to death.

Thirdly, an other great cauſe whiche purchaſed the K. much euill will among hys ſubiectes, was the ſecret murthering of his owne Vncle named T. woodſtocke, Duke of Glouceſter, of whom mention was made before, where was declared how the ſaid Duke, with the Earle of Arundell, the Erle of warwicke, and the Earle of Darby, with other, were vp in armour agaynſt certaine wicked Counſaylours about the king. wherevpon, the king watching afterward hys time, came into Chelſford, & ſo to the place neare by, where the Duke lay: wherwith hys own hands he areſted the ſayd Duke his Vncle, and ſent him downe by water immediatly to Calice. And there though the kinges commaundement, by ſecret meanes was put to death, being ſtrangled vnder a fetherbed, the Earle Marſhall being then the keeper of Calis. Wherby great indignation roſe in many mens hartes agaynſt the king.

With the ſame Duke of Glouceſter, alſo about ẏ ſame time, was areſted and impriſoned the Erle of Warwicke, and the Earle of Arundel: who being condemned by parliament, were then executed, whereby great grudge and great indignation roſe in the heartes of many agaynſt the king. an. 1397.

Fourthly to omit here the blanke chartes ſent ouer all the land by the king: and how the king was ſayd to let out his realme to ferme: Ouer and beſide all theſe aboue premiſed, fell an other matter, whiche was the principall occaſion of this miſchiefe: The baniſhment I meane of Hēry Erle of Darby, and made Duke of Herford a little before, being ſonne of Iohn of Gaunt the Duke of Lācaſter (who dyed ſhortly after the baniſhment of hys ſonne, and lieth buryed in the Church of S. Paule in London) and the Duke of Northfolke: who was before Erle of Notingham, and after by this king, made Duke of Northfolke the yeare before. At which time the king made 5. Dukes, a Marques and foure Earles, to wit: Duke of Herforde, whiche was before Earle of Darby: Duke of Awmerle, which was before Earle of Rutland: Duke of Southrey, who was before Earle of Kent: Duke of Exeſter, whiche was before Erle of Huntington, and this Duke of Northfolke, being before Earle of Notinghame, as is aforeſayd &c. The occaſion of baniſhing theſe foreſayd Dukes was this.

Erle of Notingham made duke of Northfolke.

About this preſent time, the Duke of Herforde did appeach the Duke of Northfolke vppon certayne wordes to be ſpoken againſt ẏ king. Wherupon, caſting theyr gloues one agaynſt the other, they appoynted to fight out ẏ quarrell; a day being for the ſame appoynted at Couentry. But the king tooke vp the matter in hys owne handes, baniſhing the Duke of Northfolke for euer, whiche after dyed at Venice: and ẏ other Duke which was the Duke of Herford, for 10. yeares. Beſide theſe, alſo was exiled in Fraunce Thomas Arunder archbiſhop of Caunterbury, by Acte of Parliament, in the ſame yere, for poynts of treaſon, as ye haue heard before expreſſed, page. 512. col. 2. All which turned to ẏ great inconueniēce of this king, as in the euent following may appeare.

The duke of Northfolke, and duke of Hereford baniſhed.

Tho. Arundell baniſhed as a traytor, by parliament.

{ Ann. 1399. }

Theſe cauſes and preparatiues thus premiſed, it followed the yeare after, which was an. 1399. and laſt yeare of this king, that the king vpon certaine affayres to be done, tooke hys viage into Ireland. In which meane time: Hēry of Bollingbroke, Earle of Darby, and Duke of Herford and with him the foreſayd archbiſhop Thomas Arundel, (which before were both exiled) returning out of Fraunce to Calice, came into England challenging the Dukedome of Lancaſter, after the death of hys father. With them alſo came the ſonne and heyre of the Earle of Arundell, beyng yet but yong. Theſe together ſetting out of Calice, arriued at Rauenſpur in the North. At the knowledge whereof, much people gathered vnto them.

In this meane time, as the Duke was houering on ẏ ſea to enter the land: L. Edmund Duke of York the kings Vncle to whome the king committed the cuſtodye of thys realm (hauing intelligence thereof) called to him the Byſhop of Chicheſter named Edmund Stafford Chauncellor of the Realme, and W. Scroupe Earle of Wiltſhyre Lorde Treaſurer, alſo I. Buſhey W. Bagot, Henry Grene, and Iohn Ruſchell, with diuers other, conſulting with them what was beſt in that caſe to be done. Who then gaue their aduiſe (whether wilful or vnſkilfull, it is not knowne, but very vnfruitfull) that he ſhold leaue london, and go to S. Albons, there to wayt for more ſtrength able to encounter with the Duke. But as the people out of diuers quarters reſorted thether, many of them proteſted that they woulde do nothing to the harme and preiudice of the Duke of Lācaſter, who they ſayd was vniuſtly expulſed. The reſt then of the counſayle, I. Buſhey, W. Bagot, Henry Grene, W. Scroupe Treaſurer, hearing and vnderſtanding how the commons were minded to ioyne with the Duke of Hereford, left the Duke of York, and the lord Chauncellor, and fled to the Caſtell of Briſtow. Where is to be vnderſtand that theſe foure were they to whome the common fame ran that the king had let out hys realme to farme: and were ſo hated of the people, that it is to be thought, that for the hatred of them more then for the king, this commotion was among the people.

What euil company doth about a kyng.

K. Richard returneth from Irelande to Milford hauen.

As this broyle was in England, the noyſe thereof ſounding to the kinges eares, being then in Ireland, for haſtye ſpeed of returning into England, left in Ireland both his buſines, and moſt of hys ordinaunce alſo behinde hym. And ſo paſſing the ſeas, landed at Milforde hauen, not daryng as it ſeemed to come to London.

On the contrary ſide, vnto Henry Duke of Herforde, being landed as is ſayde, in the North, came the Earle of Northumberland: Lord Henry Percy, and Henry his ſon the Earle of Weſtmerland, Lord Radulph Neuile, and other Lordes moe to a great number, ſo that the multitude roſe to 60000. able ſouldiours. Who firſt making towarde the Caſtle of Briſtow, tooke the foreſayd Buſhey, Grene Scroupe, and Bagot: of whom three incontinent were beheaded, Bagot eſcaped away and fled away to Ireland.

K. Richard forſaken of his ſubiectes.

The king in this meane while, lying about Wales, deſtitute and deſolate without comfort or counſayle, who neither durſt come to London, neyther would any man come to him, and perceauing moreouer, the commons that were vp in ſuch a great power agaynſt hym, would rather dye, then geue ouer that they had begunne, for feare of themſelues; Seing therfore no other remedy, called to him L. T. Percye Earle of Worceſter, and ſtewarde of hys houſehold, willing him with other of hys family, to prouide for themſelues in tyme. Who then openly in the hall brake his white rod before them all, commaunding euerye man to ſhift for himſelfe. Although Fabian and ſome other ſay, that he did this of hys owne accord, contrary to his allegeance.

What it is for a prince to be beloued of his ſubiectes.

The king compaſſed on euery ſide with miſeryes, ſhifted from place to place, the Duke ſtill following him, tyll at length being at the Caſtle of Conewey, the king deſired to talk with Tho. Arundell archb. and the Earle of Northūberland: To whom he declared, that he woulde reſigne vp hys crowne, in condition that an honourable liuing might be for hym prouided, and life promiſed to 8. perſons, ſuch as he would name. Which being graunted and ratified, but not performed, he came to the Caſtle of Flint, where (after talke had with ẏ Duke of Lācaſter) he was brought the ſame night by the Duke and his armye to Cheſter: And from thence was conueyed ſecretly into the Tower, there to be kept till the next parliament. By the way as he came neare to London, diuers euil deſpoſed men of the city being warned thereof, gathered themſelues, thinking to haue ſlayne hym, for the great cruelty he had vſed before toward the Citty. But by the pollicies of the Mayor and rulers of the Cittie, the madnes of the people was ſtayd. Not long after followed the Duke, and alſo began ẏ parliament. In which Parliament, the Earle of Northumberland with many other Earles and Lords were ſent to the king in the Tower, to take of him a full reſignation according to hys former promiſe, and ſo they did. This done diuers accuſations and articles were layd and engroſſed agaynſt the ſayd King, to the number of 33. ſome ſay 38. which for the matter not greatly materiall in them contayned, I ouerpaſſe. And ẏ next yeare after was had to Pomfret Caſtle, and there famiſhed to death.

K. Richard agreed to reſigne his crowne.

The kyng committed to the Tower.

King Henry the fourth.

AND thus King Richard by common aſſent being depoſed from his rightfull crowne: The Duke of Lancaſter was led by Thomas Arundell the Archbiſhop, to the ſeat royall: who there ſtanding vp, and croſſed himſelfe on the forehead and the breſt, ſpake in wordes as followeth.

The wordes of Henry Duke, clayming the crowne.

¶ In the name of God, Amen. I Henry of Lancaſter, clayme the Realme of England and the crowne, with all the appurtenaunces as I that am deſcended by right lyne of the bloud comming from that good Lord King Henry the 3. And thorough the right that God of his grace hath ſent to me with the helpe of my kinne and of my frendes to recouer the ſame, which was in poynt to be vndone for default of good gouernance and due iuſtice, &c.

¶ After which wordes, the Archbiſhop aſking the aſſent of the people, being ioyfull of theyr new king: took the Duke by the hād, & placed him in the kingly throne, which was an. 1399, and ſhortly after by the foreſayd Archbiſhop he was crowned alſo for king of England. Ex Chron. De Alban.

K. Henry 4. inthroned and crowned.

{ Anno. 1400. }

The next yeare after, followed a Parliament holden at Weſtminſter, in which Parliament, one Will. Sautre, a good man and a faythfull prieſt, inflamed with zeale of true Religion, required he might be heard for the commoditie of the whole realme. But the matter being ſmelt before by the Byſhops, they obtayned that the matter ſhould be referred to the conuocation: where the ſayd William Sautre being brought before the Byſhops and Notaries thereunto appointed, the conuocation was differred to the Saterday next enſuing.

W. Sautre Martyr.

W. Sautre brought before the byſhops in the conuocation.

When Saterday was come, that is to ſay, the 12. day of February, Thomas Arundell Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, in the preſence of his Counſayle prouinciall being aſſembled in the ſayd Chapter houſe, agaynſt one ſyr William Sautre, otherwiſe called Chatris, Chaplayne perſonally then and there appearing by the commaundement of the foreſayd archbiſhop of Caunterbury, obiected: that the ſayd ſir William before the Byſhop of Norwiche, had once renounced and abiured diuers and ſondry concluſions heretical and erroneous: and that after ſuch abiuration made, he publiquely and priuily, helde taught & preached, the ſame concluſions or els ſuch like, diſagreeing to yͤ catholique fayth, and to the great perill and pernitious example of others. And after this, he cauſed ſuch like concluſions holden and preached as is ſayd, by the ſayd Syr William without renunciation, then and there to be read vnto the ſayd Archbiſhop, by maiſter Robert Haull, Chācellor vnto the ſayd byſhop in a certayne ſcrole written, in tenour of wordes as followeth.

Syr William Chatris otherwiſe called Sautre, pariſh Prieſt of the Churche S. Scithe the Virgine in London, publiquely and priuily doth holde theſe concluſions vnder written.

The articles of W.Sautre.

¶ In Primis, he ſayth, that he will not worſhip the croſſe on which Chriſt ſuffered, but onely Chriſt that ſuffred vpon the Croſſe.

2. Item, that he would ſooner worſhip a temporal king, then the foreſayd wodden croſſe.

3. Item, that he would rather worſhip the bodyes of the Saintes, then the very croſſe of Chriſt, on which he hong, if it were before him.

4. Item, that he woulde rather worſhip a man truely contrite, then the croſſe of Chriſt.

5. Item, that he is bound rather to worſhip a man that is predeſtinate, then an aungell of God.

6. Item, that if any man would viſite the monumentes of Peter and Paule, or go on Pilgrimage to the Toumbe of S. Thomas, or els any whether els, for the obtayning of any temporall benefite: he is not bounde to keepe hys vowe, but that he may diſtribute the expences of his vowe vpon the almes of the poore.

7. Item, that euery prieſt and Deacon is more bound to preach the word of God, then to ſay the canonical houres.

8. Item, that after the pronouncing of the Sacramental wordes of the body of Chriſt, the bread remayneth of the ſame nature that it was before, neyther doth it ceaſe to be bread.

To which concluſions or articles being thus read, the Archbiſh. of Caunterb. required the ſame Syr William to aunſwere. And then the ſayd William aſked a copy of ſuch articles or concluſions, and a competent ſpace to anſwere vnto the ſame. Whereupon the ſayd Archb. commaunded a copy of ſuch articles or concluſions to be deliuered then and thereunto the ſayd ſyr William, aſſigning the Thurſday then next enſuing to him to deliberate and make aunſwere in. When Thurſday the ſayd day of apparance was come, Maiſter Nicholas Riſhton, auditour of the cauſes and buſines belonging to the ſayd archbiſhop (then beyng in the Parliament houſe at Weſtminſter otherwiſe let) cōtinued the ſayd conuocation with all matters riſing, depending and appartinent thereunto, by commaundement of the ſayd Byſhop, vntill the next morrow at eight of the clocke. When the morow came, being Friday. The foreſaid ſir William Sautre, in the chapter houſe before the ſayd biſhop and hys counſayle prouinciall then and there aſſembled, making his perſonall appearaunce, exhibited a certayne ſcrole contayning the aunſweres vnto certayne articles or concluſions geuen vnto him as is aforeſaid by the ſaid Biſhop: and ſayd, that vnto the foreſayd Archbyſhop, he deliuered the ſame as his anſwere in that behalfe, vnder the tenour of ſuch wordes as follow.

The anſwer of W.Sautre geuen vp in writing.

I William Sautre prieſt vnworthy, ſay and aunſwere that I will not, nor intend not to worſhip the croſſe whereon Chriſt was crucified, but onely Chriſt that ſuffered vpon the croſſe: ſo vnderſtanding me that I will not worſhip the materiall croſſe, for the groſſe corporall matter: yet notwithſtanding I will worſhip the ſame as a ſigne, token, and memoriall of the paſſion of Chriſt Adoratione vicaria. And that I will rather worſhip a temporall Kyng, then the foreſayd wooden croſſe, as the materiall ſubſtance of the ſame. And that I will rather worſhip the bodyes of Saintes, then the very croſſe of Chriſt whereon he hong: with this addition, that if the very ſame Croſſe were afore me, as touching the materiall ſubſtaunce. And alſo that I will rather worſhip a man truely confeſſed and penitent, then the croſſe on which Chriſt hong, as touching the materiall ſubſtaunce.

The croſſe materially not to bee worſhipped

And that alſo I am bound, and will rather worſhip him whom I know to be predeſtinate, truly confeſſed and contrite, then an angell of God: for that the one is a man of the ſame nature with the humanitie of Chriſt, and ſo is not a bleſſed aungell. Notwithſtanding I will worſhip both of them, according as the will of God is I ſhould.

A man predeſtinate rather to be worſhipped than an Angell: that is to ſay, neither can be worſhipped without Idolatrie.

Alſo, that if any man hath made a vow to viſite the ſhrines of the Apoſtles Peter and Paule, or to goe on pilgrimage vnto S. Thomas tombe, or anye whither els to obtayne any temporall benefite or commoditie: he is not bound ſimply to keepe his vow, vpon the neceſſitye of ſaluation. But that he may geue the expences of his vowe in almes amongſt the poore, by the prudent counſayle of his ſuperiour as I ſuppoſe.

And alſo I ſay, that euery Deacon and Prieſt is more bound to preach the word of God, then to ſay the canonicall houres, according to the primitiue order of the church.

Alſo touching the interrogation of the ſacrament of the aulter: I ſay that after the pronouncing of the ſacramentall wordes of the body of Chriſt, there ceaſeth to be very bread ſimply, but remaineth bread, holy true, and the bread of life: and I beleue the ſayd ſacrament to be the very body of Chriſt, after the pronouncing of the ſacramentall wordes.

How bread remaineth in the Sacrament.

When all theſe aunſweres were throughly by Maiſter Robert Hall, directly and publikely there read: the foreſaid Archb. of Cant. inquired of the ſayd ſir William, whither he had abiured the foreſayd hereſies and errors obiected agaynſt him, as before is ſayd, before the Byſhop of Norwich or not, or els had reuoked and renounced the ſayd or ſuch like concluſions or articles, or not? To which he aunſwered and affirmed, that he had not. And then conſequētly (all other articles, concluſions and aunſweres aboue writen, immediately omitted) the ſayd Archbiſhop examined the ſame ſir W. Sautre, eſpecially vpon the ſacrament of the aulter.

Firſt, whether in the ſacrament of the aulter after the pronouncing of the ſacramentall wordes, remayneth very materiall bread or not. Unto which interrogation yͤ ſame ſir W. ſomewhat waueringly, ſayd, and anſwered, that he knew not that. Notwithſtanding he ſayd, that there was very bread, becauſe it was the bread of life whiche came downe from heauen.

After that the ſayd Archbiſhop demaunded of hym, whither in the ſacrament after the ſacramentall woordes, rightly pronounced of the Prieſt, the ſame bread remayneth, which did before the wordes pronounced or not? And to this queſtion the foreſayde William aunſwered in like maner as before, ſaying that there was bread holy, true, and the bread of life. &c.

After that, the foreſayd Archb. aſked him, whether the ſame naturall bread before conſecration, by the ſacramentall woordes of the prieſt rightly pronounced, be tranſubſtantiated from the nature of bread, into the very bodye of Chriſt, or not? Whereunto ſir William ſayd, that he knewe not what that matter ment.

And then the ſayde Archbiſh. aſſigned vnto the ſaid ſir William, tyme to deliberate, and more fully to make hys aunſwere till the next day: and continued this conuocation then and there till the morow. Which morow to wit, the 19. day of February being come: the foreſayd Archbiſh. of Cant. in the ſayd chapter houſe of S. Paule in London, before hys counſayle prouincial, then and there aſſembled, ſpecially aſked and examined the ſame ſir William Sautre there perſonally preſent, vpon the ſacramēt of the aulter, as before. And the ſame Sir William agayne in like maner as before, aunſwered.

W.Sautre agayn examined.

After this, amongſt other thinges the ſayd Byſhop demaunded of the ſame William if the ſame materiall bread beyng vpon the aulter after the ſacramentall words being of the prieſt rightly pronounced, is tranſubſtantiated into the very body of Chriſt, or not? And the ſayd ſir William ſayd he vnderſtoode not what he ment.

Then the ſayd archbiſhop demaunded, whether that materiall bread being round and white, prepared and diſpoſed for the ſacrament of the body of Chriſt vpon the aulter, wanting nothing that is meete and requiſite thereunto, by the vertue of the ſacramentall wordes being of the prieſt rightly pronounced, be altered and chaunged into the very body of Chriſt, and ceaſeth any more to be materiall and very bread or not? Then the ſayd ſyr William deredingly aunſwering, ſayd he could not tell.

When conſequently the ſayd Archbiſhop demaunded, whether he would ſtand to the determination of the holye Church or not, which affirmeth: that in the Sacrament of Determination of the Church ſo to be folowed as it is ioyned to the will of God.

the aulter, after the wordes of conſecration, being rightly pronounced of the Prieſt, the ſame bread whiche before in nature was bread, ceaſeth any more to be bread. To this interrogation, the ſayd ſir William ſayd: that he woulde ſtand to the determination of the church, where ſuch determination was not contrary to the will of God.

This done: he demaunded of him agayne, what hys iudgement was concerning the Sacrament of the aulter: Who ſayd and affirmed, that after the wordes of conſecration by the prieſt duely pronounced, remayned very bread and the ſame bread which was before the wordes ſpoken. And this examination about the ſacrament, laſted from 8. of the clocke of the ſame day, vntill a 11. of the clock or there aboutes: in ſo much, that during all this time, the foreſaid W. would no otherwiſe aunſwere: neyther yet touching the ſame ſacrament, receaue catholicke information, according to the inſtitution of the popes Church and his Chriſten fayth wherefore, the ſayd Cant. by the counſayle and aſſent of his whole couent then and there preſent: did promulgate and geue ſentence by the mouth of Robert Hall, agaynſt the ſame Syr William Sautre (being perſonally preſent, and refuſing to reuoke hys hereſies, that is to ſay his true doctrine, but conſtantly defending the ſame) vnder the tenour of wordes as followeth.

The ſentence againſt W. Sautre.

IN the name of God amen. We Thomas by the grace of GOD Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, primate of England and Legate of the ſea Apoſtolicall, by the authoritie of God almighty and bleſſed ſainct Peter and Paule, and of holy Churche, and by our owne authoritie ſitting for tribunal or chiefe iudge, hauing God alone before your eyes: by the counſel and conſent of the whole clergy our fellow brethren, and ſuffraganes aſsiſtantes vnto vs in this preſent counſell prouincial, by this our ſentence diffinitiue, do pronounce, decree and declare by theſe preſents, thee William Sautre otherwiſe called Chawtrey pariſh Prieſt pretenſed, perſonally appearing before vs, in and vpon the cryme of hereſie iudicially and lawfully conuicte as an hereticke, and as an hereticke to be puniſhed.

Which ſentence diffinitiue being thus read: the foreſaid Archb. of Cant. continued in the ſame prouinciall cõſaile till Wedneſday next, and immediately enſuing, to wit the 24. day of the ſame month of February: whiche being expired, the biſhop of Norwich, according to the cõmaundement of the ſaid archb. of Cant. preſented vnto the foreſaid William Sawtre by a certayne friend of hys, beyng preſent at the ſame councell, a certayn proceſſe incloſed and ſealed with his ſeal, geuing ẏ names of credible witneſſes ſealed with their ſeales: The tenour whereof followeth in this wiſe.

A certaine proceſſe againſt W. Sautre preſented by the Biſh. of Norwiche.

Memorandum, that vpon the laſt day of Aprill, in the yeare of our Lord. 1399. in the 7. indiction and 10. yeare of the papacie of Pope Boniface the 2. In a certayne chamber within the maner houſe of the ſayd Biſh. of Norwich, at South Helingham (where the regiſter of the ſayd Biſhop is kept) before the houre of 9. in a certayne chappell within the ſayd manour ſituate, and the 1. day of May, then next and immediately enſuing in the foreſayd chamber, ſyr Wil. Chawtris, pariſh prieſt of the church of S. Margaret in the town of Linne, appeared before the Biſhop of Norwich, in the preſence of Iohn de Derlington, Archdeacon of Norwich, doctor of the decrees, Frier Walter Diſſe, and Iohn Rikinghall profeſſors in diuinitie, William Carlton, doctor of both lawes, and W. Friſeby, w huge Bhridham, publike Notaryes: and there publikely affirmed and held, the concluſions, as before is ſpecified.

All and ſinguler the premiſſes the foreſayde William affirmed vpon mature deliberation. And afterwardes to wit the 19. day of May in the yeare, Indiction, and Papacy aforeſayd, in the chappell within the mannour houſe of the ſaid Henry Biſhop of Norwich, ſituate at South Helingham: The foreſayd ſir William, reuoked and renounced all and ſinguler the foreſayd hys concluſions: abiuring and correcting all ſuch hereſies and errours, taking hys oath vpon a booke before the foreſayd Henry the Byſhop of Norwiche, that from that time forward he would neuer preach, affirme, nor holde, priuily nor apertly the foreſayd concluſions. And that he woulde pronounce according to the appointment of the ſayd Biſhop, the foreſayd concluſions to be erroneous and hereſies, in the pariſh Churches of Linne and Tilney and in other places & at the aſſignement of the ſayd Byſhop, and farther ſware, that he would ſtand to the ordinaunce of the ſayd Byſhop, touching the premiſſes, in the preſence of the diſcrete and worſhipfull men afore recited with diuers others moe.

As concerning the firſt concluſion that he ſayd he wold not worſhip the Croſſe &c. he confeſſed himſelfe to haue erred and that the article was erroneous and ſubmitted himſelfe. Alſo as touching the ſecond article, that he ſayde he would rather worſhip a king &c. he confeſſed himſelfe to haue erred and the article to be erroneous and ſubmitted himſelfe, and ſo forth of all the reſt.

Then next after this, vppon the 25. day of May in the yeare of our Lord aforeſayd, in the Churchyard of the chappell of S. Iames within the towne of Linne The foreſayd William, in preſence of the foreſayd Byſhop and clergy and the people of the ſayd Towne of Linne ſtanding round about: publikely declared in Engliſh tongue, the foreſayd concluſiõs to be erroneous and hereſies, as was contayned in a certayne ſcrole. And after this, the 26. day of May in the yeare aboueſayd, in the Churche of the Hoſpitall of S. Iohns in the towne of Linne: The ſayd Syr William, before the ſayd Byſhop ſitting as iudge, ſware & tooke his othe vpon the holy Euangeliſtes that he would neuer after that time preach openly & publiquely the foreſayd concluſions, nor would heare the confeſſions of anye of the ſubiectes of his Dioces of Norwiche, without the ſpeciall licence of the ſayd Biſhop. &c. In ẏ preſence of Frier Iohn Smetmen, M. Iohn Rikinghale, Doctor of Diuinitie, W. Carlton Doctor of both lawes, and Thomas Bulton officer of the libertie of Linne aforeſayd with dyuers others.

¶The tenour of the ſcrole and recantation.

IN primis, touching the firſt and ſecond, where I ſayd, 1. that I woulde adore rather a temporall Prince, and the liuely bodyes of the ſayntes then the wooden croſſe, wher 2.
upon the Lord did hang, I do reuoke and recant the ſame as being therein deceaued.

3. To this I ſay, that the article is falſe and erroneous, and by falſe information, I held it, the whiche I renounce and aſke forgeuenes thereof, and ſay that it is a precious relique, and that I ſhall holde it while I liue, and that I ſweare here.

4. I know wel that I erred wrõgfully, by falſe information: for I wot well, that a deacon or a prieſt is more bõd to ſay his Mattins and Houres, then to preach, for thereto he is bounden by right, wherfore I ſubmit me &c.

5. Touching that article, I know right well that I erred by falſe information. Wherfore I aſke forgeuenes.

6. As concerning vowes, I ſay, that opinion is falſe and erroneous, and by falſe information I held it, for a man is holden to hold his vowe &c.

7. To the 7. article I ſay, that I did it, by authoritie of Prieſthoode, where through I knowledge well that I haue gilt and treſpaſſed, wherfore I ſubmit me to god and to holy Church, and to you father, ſwearing that I ſhall neuer hold it more.

8. The 8. I ſay, that I held it by falſe and wronge information. But now I know well that it is hereſie, and that bread anone as the word of the ſacrament is ſayde, is no longer bread materiall, but that it is turned into verye Chriſtes body and that I ſweare here.

9. I ſay that this is falſe and erroneous. &c.

10. I ſay as I ſayd. &c.

Proces againſt W. Sautre.

This being done, the 22. day of February aforeſayd in the yeare of our Lord. 1400. in the chapter houſe of Saint Paule in London aforeſayd: The foreſayd Archbiſhop of Caunterbury, in the conuocation of hys prelates & Clergy and ſuch lyke men there beeing preſent, cauſed the forerecited proces of the biſhop of Norwich to be read openly & publikely to Syr Wil. Sautre otherwiſe called Chatris. And afterward, he aſked the ſayd ſyr William, whether he playnely vnderſtood and knew ſuch proces & the contents within the ſame, and he ſayd yea. And further he demaunded of him, if he would or could ſay or obiect any thing agaynſt the proces, and he ſayd no. And after that incontinent, the foreſayd archbiſhop of Canterbury demaunded and obiected againſt the ſaid ſyr William as diuers others more did: That after he had before the Byſh. of Norwiche reuoked and abiured Iudicially diuers errors & hereſies, that among other erroures, and hereſies by him taught, holden, and preached he affirmed: That in the ſame ſacrament of the aulter after the conſecration made by ẏ Prieſt as he taught, there remayned materiall bread: which hereſie amongſt others as erroures alſo he abiured before the foreſayd Biſhop of Norwich. Hereunto the foreſayd William aunſwered ſmiling or in mocking wiſe, ſaying, and denying that he knew of the premiſſes. Notwithſtanding he publikely affirmed that he held and taught the foreſayd thinges after the date of the ſayd proceſſe made by the ſayd Biſhop of Norwich, and that in the ſame councell alſo he held held the ſame. Then finally, it was demaunded of the ſaid ſir William, why he ought not to be pronounced as a man fallen into hereſie, and further to procede vnto his degradation, according to the canonicall ſanctions: whereunto he anſwered nothing, neither could he alledge any cauſe to the contrary.

Whereupon, the foreſayd Archb. of Cant. by the counſaile and conſent of the whole councel, and eſpecially by the counſail and aſſent of the reuerēd fathers and Biſhops, as alſo, Priours, Deanes, Archdeacons, and other worſhipfull Doctours and Clerkes then and there preſent in the councel: Fully determined to procede to the degradation, and actuall depoſing of the ſayde William Sautre, as refallen into hereſy, and as incorrigible, according to the ſentence definitiue put in wryting, the tenoure whereof is in wordes as foloweth.

Sentence of relapſe.

In the name of God Amen: Wee Thomas by the grace of God Archb. of Cant. Legate of the ſea Apoſtolicall and Metropolitane of all England: doe finde and declare, that thou William Sawtrie, otherwiſe called Chatris Prieſt, by vs with the counſaile & aſſent of all and ſingular our felowe brethren and whole Clergy, by this our ſentence diffinitiue declared in wryting, haſt bene for hereſie conuict and condemned, and art (being againe fallen into hereſy) to be depoſed and degraded, by theſe preſents.

And from that day being Wedenſday, there was in the ſayde councell prouinciall nothing further proſecuted, but was continued with all dependentes, till the Friday next inſuing. Whych Friday approching, M. Nicholas Riſhton, by the commandement of the ſayd Archb. of Canterb. being then buſied as he ſaid in the Parliament houſe: continued this councel and conuocation with al incidents, dependents, and occaſions, growing and annexed therunto, to the next day, to wit ſaterday next and immediatly after inſuing. Vpon Saterday being the 26. of the ſayd moneth of February, the foreſayde Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſate in the Byſhops ſeate of the foreſayde Church of S. Paule in London, and ſolemnly apparelled in his Pontifical attire, ſitting wᵗ hym as his aſſiſtents theſe reuerend fathers and Biſhops, of London, Lyncolne, Harford, Exeter, Meneuenſis & Roffenſis Epiſcopi, aboue mentioned: commaunded and cauſed the ſayd ſir W. Sautry apparelled in prieſtly veſtiments, to be brought & appeare before hym. That done, he declared and expounded in Engliſh to al the clergy and people there, in a great multitude aſſembled: that al proceſſe was finiſhed and ended againſt the ſaid ſyr William Sautry. Whych thing finiſhed, before the pronouncing of the ſayd ſentence of the Relapſe againſt the ſayd ſir William as is premiſed, he often then and there recited & read. And for that he ſawe the ſayde William in that behalfe, nothyng abaſhed: He proceded to his degradation and actuall depoſition in forme as foloweth.

Sentence of degradation.

IN nomine patris & filij & ſpiritus ſancti. Amen. We Thomas by Gods permiſſion Archb. of Cant. Primate of al England, and Legate of the Apoſtolique ſea: doe denounce thee William Sawtre otherwiſe called Chautris, Chapleine fained, in the habite and apparell of a Prieſt, as an hereticke and one refallen into hereſy by thys our ſentēce definitiue, by counſaile, aſſent, and authoritye, to be condemned: And by concluſion of all our fellowe brethren, fellow byſhops, Prelates, councell prouinciall, and of the whole clergy: do degrade and depriue thee of thy prieſtly order. And in ſigne of degradation and actuall depoſitiō from thy prieſtly dignity, for thine incorrigibility and want of amendment: we take from thee the patent and chalice, and doe depriue thee of all power & authority of celebrating maſſe: and alſo wee pull from thy backe, the Caſule, and take from thee the veſtiment, and depriue thee of all maner of Prieſtly honour.

The pattē and chalice takē frō him.

Alſo, wee Thomas the aforeſayde Archb. by authority, counſell, and aſſent, which vpon the foreſayd William wee haue, being Deacon pretenſed, in the habite and apparel of a Deacon, hauing the new Teſtament in thy hands, being an heretique and twiſe fallen, condemned by ſentence as is aforeſayde: doe degrade and put thee from the order of a Deacon. And in token of this thy degradation and actuall depoſition we take frō thee the boke of the new teſtament, & the ſtole, and doe depriue thee of all authority in reading the goſpel, and of all and all maner of dignity of a Deacon.

The booke of a new Teſtamēt taken frō him.

Item, we Thomas Archbiſh. aforeſayd, by authoritie, counſell, and aſſent, which ouer thee the foreſayde William wee haue, being a ſubdeacon pretenſed: in the habite & veſtiment of a ſubdeacon, an hereticke, and twiſe fallen, condemned by ſentence as is aforeſayd: do degrade & put thee from the order of a ſubdeacon. And in token of this thy degradation & actuall depoſition, we take from thee the albe and maniple, and doe depriue thee of all and all manner of ſubdiaconall dignitie.

The Albe taken from him.

Alſo, wee Thomas, Archb. aforeſayd, by counſaile, aſſent and authority whych wee haue ouer thee the foreſayde William, an Accolite pretenſed, wearing the habite of an Accolite, and heretike, twiſe fallen, by our ſentence as is aforeſaid condemned: do degrade and put from thee al order of an Accolite: And in ſigne and tokē of thys thy degradation, and actuall depoſition, we take from thee the candleſticke and taper, and alſo Vrceolum, and doe depriue thee of all and all maner dignity of an Accolite.

The candleſticke & taper taken from hym.

Alſo, we Thomas, Archb. aforeſayd by aſſent, counſel, and authority whych vppon thee the foreſayd William we haue, an Exorciſt pretenſed, in the habite of an Exorciſt or holy water clarke, being an hereticke, twiſe fallen, and by our ſentence as is aforeſayd condemned, we doe degrade & depoſe thee from the order of an Exorciſt: and in token of thys thy degradation and actuall depoſition, we take from thee the booke of coniurations, and doe depriue thee of all and ſingular dignity of an Exorciſt.

The holy water bucke con[illegible] from him.

Alſo, we Thomas Archbiſh. aforeſayd, by aſſent, counſaile, and authority, as is aboue ſayd, doe degrade & depoſe thee the foreſayde William, reader pretenſed, clothed in the habit of a reader, an hereticke, twiſe fallen, and by our ſentence as is aforeſayd, condēned: from the order of a reader. And in token of this thy degradation and actuall depoſition, we take from thee the booke of the deuine lections (that is the booke of the Church legende) and doe depriue thee of all and ſingular maner of dignity of ſuch a reader.

He meaneth the legend booke, as ſaith the Regiſter.

Item, we Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury aforeſayd, by authority, counſaile, and aſſent, the which we haue as is aforeſaid, do degrade and put thee the foreſayd William Sawtre, ſexten pretenſed, in the habite of a ſexten, and wearing a ſurplice, being an hereticke, twiſe fallen, by our ſentence difinitiue condemned, as aforeſaid: from the order of a Sexten. And in token of thys thy degradation and actuall depoſition, for the cauſes aforeſayd, we take from thee the keyes of the Church doore, and thy ſurplice, and doe depriue thee of all and ſingular maner of commodityes of a doore keeper.

The Surplice taken from him.

The church dore keyes taken from him.

And alſo, by the authority of omnipotent God the father, the ſonne, and holy ghoſt, and by our authority, counſaile, & aſſent of our whole councel prouinciall aboue written, we do degrade thee and depoſe thee being heere perſonally preſent before vs, from orders, benefices, priuilegies and habite in the church, and for thy pertinacie incorrigible we doe diſgrade thee, before the ſecular Court of the hygh Conſtable and marſhal of England, here being perſonally preſent, and do depoſe thee from all and ſingular clerkely honours and dignities whatſoeuer, by theſe wrytings. Alſo in token of thy degradation and depoſition, here actually wee haue cauſed thy crowne and eccleſiaſticall tonſure in our preſence to be raſed away, & vtterly to be aboliſhed, lyke vnto the forme of a ſeculare lay man: and here doe put vpon the head, of thee the foreſayd William, the cap of a lay ſecular perſon: beſeeching the court aforeſaid, that they wil receaue fauourably the ſayde William vnto them thus recommitted.

Priuilege of the clergie taken from him.

The prieſtes cap taken from his head, maketh vp all in all.

Thus William Sawtre the ſeruaunt of Chriſt, being vtterly thruſt out of the Popes kingdome, and metamorphoſed from a clerke to a ſecular lay man, was committed (as ye haue heard) vnto the ſecular power. Which ſo done, the Byſhops yet not heerewith contented, ceaſe not to call vpō the king, to cauſe him to be brought forth to ſpedy execution. Whereupon the king, ready inough and to much to gratify the cleargy, and to retaine their fauours, directeth out a terrible decree againſt the ſaid William Sawtre, and ſent it to the Maior and Sheriffes of London to be put in execution, the tenour wherof here vnder enſueth.

¶ The decree of the king againſt William Sawtre.

The cruell decree of the king agaynſt Sawtre.

THe decree of our ſoueraigne Lord the king & his counſel in the Parliament, againſt a certaine new ſprong vp hereticke. To the Maior & Sheriffs of London. &c. Where as the reuerend father Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, primate of all England, and Legate of the Apoſtolicke ſea, by the aſſent, conſent, & counſell of other byſhops, and his brethren Suffraganes, and alſo of all the whole Clergy within his prouince or dioces, gathered together in his prouincial counſel, the due order of the law being obſerued in al poynts in this behalfe: hath pronounced and declared by his definitiue ſentence, W. Sautre ſomtime chaplain, to be fallen again into his moſt dānable hereſy, the which before time the ſayde W. had abiured, thereupon to be a moſt manifeſt heretike, and therfore hath decreed, that he ſhould be diſgraded, & hath for the ſame cauſe really diſgraded him frō al prerogatiue & priuilege of ẏ clergie, decreing to leaue him vnto the ſecular power: and hath really ſo left him, according to ẏ lawes & canonicall ſanctions ſet forth in this behalfe, and alſo that our holy mother the Church hath no further to do in the premiſſes. We therfore being zelous in religion, and reuerent louers of ẏ catholike fayth, willing and minding to mainteine & defend the holy church, & the lawes & liberties of the ſame, to roote al ſuch errours & heresies out of our kingdome of Englād, & with cōdigne puniſhmēt to correct & puniſh all heretiques or ſuch as be cōuict: Prouided alwaies, that both according to the lawe of God & mā, and ẏ canonical inſtitutions in this behalfe, accuſtomed, that ſuch hereticks conuict & condēned in forme aforeſaid, ought to be burned with fire. We command you as ſtraigtly as we may or can, firmely enioyning you, that you do cauſe the ſaid Williā being in your cuſtody, in ſome publike or opē place within ẏ liberties of your citie aforeſaid (the cauſe aforeſaid being publiſhed vnto the people) to be put into the fire, and there in the ſame fire really to be burned, to the great horrour of his offence, and the manifeſt example of other Chriſtians. Faile not in the execution hereof, vpon the perill that will fall thereupon, Teſte rege, apud Weſtmonaſt. 26. Februar. an. regni ſui.

Admonition to Princes.

Thus it may appeare how kinges and princes haue bin blinded and abuſed by the falſe Prelates of the Church, in ſo much that they haue bene their ſlaues and butchers, to ſlay Chriſtes poore innocent members. See therefore what danger it is for Princes, not to haue knowledge and vnderſtanding themſelues, but to be led by other mens eies, & ſpecially truſting to ſuch guides, who through hipocriſie both deceiue them, & through crueltie deuour the people.

K Henry the firſt of Engliſh kinges that tormented the Chriſtians with fire.

As king Henry the fourth who was the depoſer of king Richard, was the firſt of all Engliſh kings that began the vnmercifull burning of Chriſtes ſaints, for ſtanding againſt the Pope: ſo was this William Sawtre the true and faithfull martyr of Chriſt, the firſt of all them in Wickliffes time, which I find to be burned in ẏ raigne of the foreſaid king, which was in the yeare of our Lord. 1400.

Much murder & beheading in K. Henryes time the 4.

After the martyrdome of this godly man, the reſt of the ſame company began to keepe themſelues more cloſely, for feare of the king, who was altogether bent to hold with the Popes prelacy. Such was the raigne of this Prince, that to the godly he was euer terrible, in his actions immeſurable, to few men hartely beloued, but Princes neuer lacke flatterers about them. Neither was the time of his raigne very quiet, but full of trouble, of bloud, and miſery. Such was their deſire of K. Richard againe, in the raigne of this king, that many yeares after he was rumored to be aliue (of them which deſired belike that to be true, which they knew to be falſe) for the which, diuers were executed. For the ſpace of ſixe or vij. yeares together, almoſt no yeare paſſed without ſome conſpiracy againſt the king. Long it were here to recite the bloud of all ſuch Nobles and other, which was ſpilt in the raigne of this king, as the Earle of *Kent, Earle of Saliſbury, Earle of Huntington, named Iohn Holland. &c. as writeth the ſtory of S. Albans. But the Engliſh writers differ ſomething in their names, and make mention of 4. Earles of Surrey, of Exceſter, of Saliſbury, and Lord Spenſer Earle of Glouceſter. Ex Lib. cui tit. Calendarium Bruti.

Anno 1403.

And the next yeare following, Syr Ihon Clarendon knight, with two of his ſeruauntes, the Priour of Laund, with 8. friers, were hanged and quartered. And after theſe Henry Percy the younger, the Earle of Worceſter, named Thomas Percy his vncle, Lord of Kinderton, and L. Richard de Vernona. The Earle of Northumberland ſcarce eſcaped with his pardon. an. 1403. In the which yeare, the priſon in Cornhill called the tonne, was turned into the conduit, there now ſtanding.

To let paſſe other moe hanged and quartered the ſame time, as Blount knight, & Benet Kely knight, and Thomas Winterſel Eſquier. Alſo the ſame yeare was taken and executed ſir Bernard Brokes knight, ſir Iohn Shilley knight, Syr Iohn Mandelyn, and William Frierby. After all theſe L. Henry Earle of Northumberland, and L. Bardolfe conſpiring the kings death, were taken in the North and beheaded, which was in the 8. yere of this king Henry.

L. Bardolfe, Henry Percy, Earle of Northumberland agaynſt the king.

Ex hiſtor. Scala mundi.

This ciuil rebellion of ſo many nobles & other againſt the king, declared what grudging heartes the people then bare towarde this king Henry. Among whome I cannot pretermit heere alſo the Archb. of Yorke named Richarde Scrope, who with the L. Moubrey Marſhal of England, gathered a great company in the North countrey, againſt the foreſaid king, to whom alſo was adioyned the helpe of L. Bardolfe, & Henry Percy Earle of Northumberland. Ex Chron. D. Albani. And to ſtirre vp the people more willingly to take their partes, they collected certaine Articles againſt the ſaid king, to the number of 10. and faſtned them vpon the doores of Churches and Monaſteries, to be read of all men in Engliſh. Which articles if any be diſpoſed to vnderſtand, & for ſomuch as the ſame alſo containe a great part of the doings betweene king Henry & king Richard aforeſayde, I thought for the better opening of the matter heere vnder to inſerte the ſame, in ſuch forme as I founde them in the hiſtorie of Scala mundi expreſſed.

¶ Articles ſet vp on Church doores againſt king Henry the fourth.

Ann. 1405.

IN the name of God. Amen. Before the Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, iudge of the quicke and dead, &c. We A.B.C.D. &c. not long ſithens became bounde by othe vppon the ſacred Euangelicall booke, vnto our ſoueraigne Lorde Richarde late king of England and France, in the preſente of many prelates, potentates, and nobilitie of the realme: that wee ſo long as we liued, ſhould beare true allegeance and fidelity towardes hym and his heires ſucceding hym in the kingdom by iuſt title, right, and line, accordyng to the ſtatutes and cuſtome of this realme of England: By vertue wherof, we are bound to foreſee ẏ no vices or hainous offences ariſe in the common weale, do take effect or wyſhed ende, but that we ought to geue our ſelues and our goodes to w̄ſtand the ſame, without feare of ſword or death whatſoeuer, vpon paine of periurie, which paine is euerlaſting damnation. Wherfore, we ſeing & perceiuing diuers horrible crimes, and great enormities daily without ceaſſing to be committed, by the children of the deuill and ſathans ſoldiours againſt the ſupremacie of the Church of Rome, the libertie of the church of England, and the lawes of the realme, againſt ẏ perſon of king Rich. and his heires againſt the prelates, noble men, religion, and comminaltie, and finally againſt the whole weale publike of ẏ realme of England, to the great offence of the maieſty of almighty God, and to the prouocation of his iuſt wrath and vēgeance towards the realme and people of the ſame. And fearing alſo the deſtruction both of the Churche of Rome and England, & the ruine of our coūtry to be at hand, hauing before our eyes the iuſtice & the kingdom of God, calling alwaies on the name of Ieſus, hauing an aſſured confidence in his clemency, mercy and power: haue here taken vnto vs certain articles ſubſcribed in forme folowing, to be proponed, tried, and heard before the iuſt iudge Ieſus Chriſt, and the whole world, to his honour, the deliuery of the church, the cleargy and comminalty, and to the vtility & profite of the weale publick. But if (which God forbid) by force, feare or violence of wicked perſons we ſhalbe caſt in priſon, or by violent death preuented, ſo as in this worlde we ſhall not be able to proue the ſaide articles as we would wiſh, then do we apeale to the high celeſtiall iudge, that he may iudge & diſcerne the ſame, in the day of his ſupreme iudgement.

1. ¶ Firſt,

A bill of articles ſet vp againſt king Henry 4.

1. ¶ Firſt, we depoſe, ſay, except, and entend to proue againſt the Lord Henry Derby, ſonne of the Lord Iohn of Gaunt late Duke of Lancaſter, and commonly called king of England (himſelfe pretending the ſame, although without all right and title thereunto) and againſt his adherents, fautours, and complices: that euer they haue bene, are, and will be, traytors, inuaders, and deſtroyers of Gods Church in Rome, England, Wales, and Ireland, and of our ſoueraigne Lord Richard late King of England, his heires, his kingdom, and common wealth, as ſhall hereafter manifeſtly appeare.

2. Secondarely we depoſe &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Hẽry, for that he had conceaued, deuiſed, & conſpired certaine hainous crimes and traiterous offences againſt his ſayd ſoueraigne Lord Richard his ſtate and dignitie, as manifeſtly did appeare in the contention betwene the ſaid Lord Henry, and yͤ Lord Thomas Duke of Northfolke begon at Couentry, but not finiſhed throughly. Afterwards he was ſent in exile, by ſentence of the ſaid king Richard, by the agreement of his father the Lord Iohn Duke of Lancaſter, by the voice of diuers of the Lords temporall, & nobilitie of the realme, and alſo by his owne conſent: there to remaine for a certaine time appointed vnto him by yͤ ſaid Lords, and withall he was bound by othe not to returne into Englãd before he had obteined fauour & grace of the kyng. Not long after, when the king was departed into Ireland, for reformation of that countrey apperteining to the crowne of England, but as then rebelling agaynſt the ſame: the ſayd Lord Henry in the meane time contrary to his oth and fidelitie, and long before the time limited vnto him was expired: with all his fautours and inuaders, ſecretly entred into the Realme, ſwearing and proteſting before the face of the people, that his comming into the Realme in the abſence of the king, was for none other cauſe, but that he might in humble ſort with the loue and fauour of the king, and all the Lords ſpirituall and temporall, haue and enioy his lawfull inheritance deſcending vnto him of right after the death of his father: which thing as it pleaſed all men, ſo cried they: Bleſſed is he that commeth in the name of the Lord: But how this bleſſing afterwards turned into curſing, ſhall appeare in that which followeth: and alſo ye ſhall vnderſtand his horrible and wicked conſpiracie againſt his ſoueraigne Lord king Richard, and diuers other Lords as well ſpirituall as temporall, beſides yͭ his manifeſt periurie ſhal wel be knowen, and that he remaineth not only forſworne and periured, but alſo excommunicate, for that he conſpired againſt his ſoueraigne Lord our king. Wherefore we pronounce him by theſe preſents, as well periured as excommunicate.

K.Henry periured.

K.Henry charged with vntruthe.

3. Thirdly we depoſe &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Henry, that he the ſaid Lord Hẽry, immediatly after his entry into England, by crafty and ſubtile policie, cauſed to be proclaimed openly throughout the Realme, that no tenths of the Clergy, fiftenes of the people, ſealing vp of cloth, diminution of wooll, impoſt of wine, nor other extortiõs or exactions whatſoeuer, ſhould hereafter be required or exacted: hoping by this meanes to purchaſe vnto him yͤ voice and fauour of the prelates ſpiritual, the Lords temporall, the Marchants, & comminaltie of the whole Realme. After this, he tooke by force the kings Caſtels and fortreſſes, ſpoiled and deuoured his goodes whereſoeuer he found it, crieng hauocke, hauocke. The kings maieſtie ſubiects as well ſpirituall as temporal he ſpoiled and robbed, ſome he tooke captiue and impriſoned them, and ſome he ſlew & put to miſerable death, whereof many were Biſhops, prelates, Prieſts, and religious men. Whereby it is manifeſt, that the ſaid Lord Henry is not only periured, in promiſing & ſwearing that there ſhould be hereafter no more exactiõs, paiments, or extortions within the realme, but alſo excommunicate for the violence and iniurie done to Prelats and Prieſts. Wherefore by theſe preſents we pronounce him as afore, as well periured as excommunicate.

K.Henry charged with treaſon agaynſt his ſoueraigne.

4. Fourthly we depoſe &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Henry, that he hearing of the Kings returne from Ireland into Wales, roſe vp againſt his ſoueraigne Lord the king with many thouſands of armed men, marching forward with al his power towards the Caſtle of Flint in Wales, where he tooke the king & held him priſoner, and ſo led him captiue as a traitor vnto Leiceſter: from whence he tooke his iourney towards London, miſuſing the king by the way both he and his, with many iniuries and opprobrious cõtumelies and ſcoffes. And in the end committed him to the Tower of London, and held a Parliament, the king being abſent & in priſon, wherein for feare of death he compelled the king to yeeld and reſigne vnto him all his right & title of the kingdome and crowne of England. After which reſignation being made, the ſaid Lord Henry ſtanding vp in the Parliament houſe, ſtoutly and proudly before them al, ſaid & affirmed: that the kingdome of Englãd and crowne of the ſame with al thereunto belonging, did pertaine vnto him at that preſent as of very right, and to none other: for that the ſaid king Richard by his owne deede was depriued for euer of all the right, title, & intereſt that euer he had, hath, or may haue in the ſame. And thus at length by right and wrong, he exalted himſelfe vnto yͤ throne of the kingdome: ſince which time, our commõ weale neuer floriſhed nor proſpered, but altogether hath bene void of vertue, for that the ſpiritualtie was ſo oppreſſed, exerciſe and warlike practiſes hath not bin mainteined, charitie is waxed cold, & couetouſnes and miſerie hath takẽ place, & finally mercy is taken away & vengeance ſupplieth the roome. Whereby it doth appeare (as before is ſaid) that yͤ ſaid Lord Hẽry is not only periured & falſe by vſurping the kingdome and dominion belonging to another, but alſo excommunicate for the apprehending, vniuſt impriſoning, and depriuing his ſoueraigne Lord the king of his roiall crowne and dignitie. Wherefore, as in the articles before, we pronounce the ſaid Lord Henry to be excommunicate.

5. Fiftly we depoſe, &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Henry, that he the ſame Lord Henry with the reſt of his fauourers & complices, heaping miſchief vpon miſchief, haue cõmitted and brought to paſſe a moſt wicked and miſchieuous fact, yea, ſuch as hath not bene heard of at any time before. For after that they had taken and impriſoned the king, and depoſed him by open iniurie againſt all humane nature, yet not cõtẽt with this: they brought him to Pomfret Caſtle, and there impriſoned him, where xv. daies & nights they vexed him with continuall hunger, thirſt, and cold, and finally bereft him of life, with ſuch a kind of death as neuer before that time was knowen in England, but by Gods prouidence it is come to light. Who euer heard of ſuch a deed, or who euer ſaw the like of him? Wherefore O England ariſe, ſtand vp, auenge the cauſe, the death, and iniurie of thy king and prince: which if thou do not, take this for certaintie, that the righteous God will deſtroy thee by ſtrange inuaſions and foreigne power, and auenge himſelfe on thee for this ſo horrible an act. Whereby doth appeare, not only his periurie, but alſo his excommunication moſt execrable: ſo that as before we pronounce, the ſaid Henry not only periured, but alſo excommunicate.

K. Henry charged with murdering of his prince.

6. Sixtly we depoſe, &c. againſt the ſayd Lord Henry, that after he had attained to the crowne and ſcepter of the kingdome, he cauſed forthwith to be apprehended diuers Lords ſpirituall, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, and religious men of all orders, whom he areſted, impriſoned, & bound, and againſt all order brought them before the ſecular iudges to be examined: not ſparing the Biſhops whoſe bodies were annointed with ſacred oyle, nor prieſts, nor religious men, but commanded them to be cõdemned, hanged, and beheaded by the temporall law and iudgement, notwithſtanding the priuiledge of the Church, and holie orders, which he ought to haue reuerenced and worſhipped if he had bin a true and lawfull king: for the firſt and chiefeſt othe in the coronation of a lawfull king is, to defend and keepe inuiolate the liberties and rights of the Church, and not to deliuer anie Prieſt or religious man into the hands of the ſecular power, except for hereſie onely, and that after his degradation according to the order of the Church. Contrary vnto all this hath he done, ſo that it is manifeſt by this article as afore in the reſt, that he is both periured and excommunicate.

K.Henry charged with the orders of the church.

7. Seuenthly we depoſe, &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Henry that not onely he cauſed to be put to death the Lords ſpirituall and other Religious men, but alſo diuers of the Lords temporall and nobilitie of the Realme, and cheifly thoſe that ſtudied for the preſeruatiõ of the commonweale, not ceaſing as yet, to cõtinue his miſcheuous enterpriſe, if by Gods prouidẽce it be not preuented & that with ſpeed. Amongſt all other of the Nobilitie, theſe firſt he put to death: the Earle of Saliſbury, the Earle of Huntington, the Earle of Glouceſter, the Lord Roger Clarendon the kyngs brother, with diuers other knights and Eſquiers: and afterwards, the Lord Thomas Percy Earle of Worceſter, and the Lord Henry Percy ſonne and heyre to the Earle of Northumberland, the which Lord Henry he not onely ſlew, but to the vttermoſt of his power againe and againe he cauſed hym to be ſlayne. For after that he was once put to death, and deliuered to the Lord of Furniuale to be buryed (who committed his body to holy ſepulture, with as much honour as might be, commending his ſoule to almighty God, with the ſuffrages of the bleſſed maſſe & other praiers) the ſaid Lord Henry moſt like a cruel beaſt ſtill thirſting hys bloud, cauſed his body to be exhumate & brought forth againe, and to be repoſed betwene two mil-

Wherfore for ſo deteſtable a fact neuer heard of in any age before, we pronounce him as in the former articles excommunicate.

The K charged with euill gouernement.

8. Eightly, we depoſe, &c. agaynſt yͤ ſaid Lord Henry, for that after his atteining to the crowne, he willingly ratified, allowed, and approued a moſt wicked ſtatute ſet forth & renued in yͤ parliament holden at Wincheſter. The which ſtatute is directly againſt yͤ Church of Rome, the power, & principalitie therof giuen by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt and vnto bleſſed S. Peter & his ſucceſſors Biſhops of Rome: vnto whom belongeth by full authoritie the free diſpoſing of all ſpirituall promotions as wel ſuperior as inferiour: which wicked ſtatute, is the cauſe of many miſchiefes vid. of ſimonie, periurie, adultery, inceſt, miſorder, & diſobedience, for that many Biſhops, Abbots, priors, and prelats (we will not ſay by vertue, but rather by errour of this ſtatute) haue beſtowed yͤ benefices vacant vpō yong men, rude and vnworthy perſons, which haue compacted with them for the ſame, ſo that ſcarce no one prelate is found that hath not couenanted with the partie promoted for the halfe yearely, or at the leaſt the third part of the ſaid benefice ſo beſtowed. And by this meanes, the ſaid ſtatute is the deſtruction of the right of S. Peter, the Church of Rome, and England, the Cleargie and vniuerſities, the mainteuance of wars, and the whole common wealth, &c.

9. Ninthly, we ſay and depoſe, &c. againſt the ſaid Lord Henry, that after he had tyrannouſly taken vpon him the gouernement of the Realme: England neuer floriſhed ſince, nor proſpered, by reaſon of his continuall exactions of money and oppreſſions, yearely of the cleargie and cōminaltie: neither is it knowen how this money ſo extorted is beſtowed, when as neither his ſouldiours, nor his gentlemen are payed as yet their wages and fees for their charges and wonderfull toile and labour, neither yet the poore countrey people are ſatiſfied for the victuall taken of them: And neuertheles, the miſerable clergie, and more miſerable comminaltie, are forced ſtill to pay, by menaces and ſharp threatnings. Notwithſtanding he ſware when he firſt vſurped the crowne, that hereafter there ſhould be no ſuch exactions nor vexations, neither of the clergie nor laitie. Wherfore, as afore, we pronounce him periured, &c.

K. Hen. charged with oppreſsion and periury.

10. In the tenth and laſt article, we depoſe, ſay, and openly proteſt by theſe preſents, for our ſelues & all our aſſiſtents in the cauſe of the Church of Rome and England, and in the cauſe of king Richard his heires, the clergie, and comminaltie of the whole Realme: that neither our entention is, was, nor ſhall be, in word nor deed to offend any ſtate, either of the prelats ſpirituall, Lords temporall, nor commons of the realme: but rather foreſeeing the perdition and deſtruction of this Realme to approch, we haue here brought before you certeine articles concerning the deſtruction of the ſame, to be circumſpectlie conſidered of the whole aſſembly, as well of the Lords ſpirituall as temporall, and the faithfull commons of England: beſeeching you all in yͤ bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, the righteous iudge, and for the merits of our bleſſed Lady the mother of God, and of S. George our defender, vnder whoſe diſplayed banner we wiſh to liue and die, and vnder paine of damnation, that ye will be fauourable to vs and our cauſes which are three in number. Wherof the firſt is, that we exalt vnto the kingdome the true & lawfull heire, and him to crowne in kinglie throne with the diademe of England. And ſecondly, that we renoke the Weſhmen, the Iriſhmen, and all other our enimies vnto perpetuall peace and amitie. Thirdly and finally, that we deliuer and make free our natiue countrey from al exactions, extortiōs, & vniuſt paiments: Beſeeching our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to graunt his bleſſing, the remiſſion of their ſinnes, & life euerlaſting to all that aſſiſt vs to their power in this godly and meritorious worke: and vnto all thoſe that are againſt vs, we threaten the curſe of almighty God by the authority committed vnto vs by Chriſt and his holy Church, and by theſe preſents we pronounce them excommunicate.

Three cauſes declared.

Earle of Weſtmerland againſt the Archb.

These Articles being ſeene and read, much concourſe of people daily reſorted more and more to yͤ archbiſhop. The Earle of Weſtmerland being then not far off, with John the kings ſonne (hearing of this) muſtered his ſouldiours with all the power he was able to make, & bent toward the Archbiſhop: but ſeeing his part too weake to encounter with him, vſeth practiſe of policie, where ſtrength would not ſerue. And firſt comming to him vnder colour of frendſhip diſſembled, laboureth to ſeeke out the cauſes of that great ſtirre: To whome the Archbyſhop againe anſwering, no hurt to be entended thereby, but profit rather to the kyng and common wealth, and mainteuance of publicke peace: but for ſo much as he ſtood in great feare, and danger of the king, he was therefore compelled ſo to doo: And withall ſhewed vnto him the contents of the Articles aforeſaid, which when the Earle had read, ſetting a faire face vpon it, ſeemed highly to commend the purpoſe and doyngs of the Biſhop: promiſing moreouer that he would helpe alſo forward in that quarell, to the vttermoſt of his power. And required vpon the ſame, a day to be ſet, when they with equall number of men, might meete together, in ſome place appointed to haue farther talke of the matter. The Archbiſhop eaſilie perſwaded, was content, although much againſt the counſaile of the Earle Marſhall, and came. Where the Articles being openly publiſhed and read, the Earle of Weſtmerland with his companie, pretended well to like vpon the ſame, and to ioyne their aſſents together. Which done, he exhorted the Archbiſhop, that for ſo much as his garriſon had bene now long in armour, and from home, he would therefore diſcharge the needles multitude of his ſouldiers, and diſmiſſe them home to their worke and buſines, and they would together drinke and ioyne hands in the ſight of the whole company. Thus they ſhaking hands together, the Archbiſhop ſendeth away his ſouldyers in peace, not knowing himſelfe to be circumuented, before he was immediately areſted by the handes of the foreſayde Earle of Weſtmerland, and ſhortly after the king comming with his power to Yorke, was there beheaded the monday in Whitſonweeke, and with him alſo Lord Thomas Moubray Marſhall, with diuers other moreouer of yͤ citie of Yorke, which had taken their parts. After whoſe ſlaughter, the King proceedeth farther to perſecute the Earle of Northumberland, & Lord Thomas Bardolph, who then did flie to Barwicke. From thence they remoued to Wales. At length within two yeares after, fighting againſt the kyngs part, were ſlayne in the field. an. 1408. In the which yeare, diuers other alſo in the Northparts, for fauouring the foreſaid Lords, were likewiſe condemned by the kyng and put to death. Among whome, the Abbot of Hales, for the like treaſon was hanged.

The kyng after the ſheddyng of ſo much bloud, ſeeyng himſelfe ſo hardly beloued of his ſubiects, thought to kepe in yet with the Clergy, & with the Biſhop of Rome, ſeeking alwaies his chiefeſt ſtay at their hands. And therfore was compelled in all things, to ſerue their humour, as did appeare as well in condemning William Sawtre before, as alſo in other, which cōſequētly we haue now to intreat of. In the number of whom commeth now by yͤ courſe of time to write of one John Badby a Tailor and a lay man, who by the crueltie of Thomas Arundel Archbiſhop, and other Prelates, was brought to his condemnation in this kings reigne, an. 1409. according as by their owne regiſters appeareth, & followeth by this narration to be ſeene.

Anno. 1409.

¶ Iohn Badby Artificer.

Iohn Badby martyr. Ex Regiſt. Tho. Arundel.

In the yeare of our Lord. 1409. on Sonday beyng the firſt day of March, in the after noone: The excommunication following of one John Badby Taylour, beyng a lay man, was made in a certaine houſe or haull within the precinct of the preaching friers in Londō, in an vtter cloiſter: vpon the crime of hereſie & other articles, repugnant to the determinatiō of the erroneous church of Rome, before Thomas Arundel Archbiſhop of Canterbury and other his aſſiſtants, as yͤ Archbiſhop of Yorke, of London, of Wincheſter, of Oxford, of Norwich, of Saliſbury, of Bath, of Bangor, Et meneuenſis Epiſcopi, and alſo Edmond Duke of Yorke, Thomas Beworde, the Chauncelour of England, Lord de Roos, the clerke of the rolles, & a great number of other Lords, both ſpirituall and temporall being then at the ſelfeſame time preſent: Maiſter Morgan read the articles of his opinions to the hearers, according as it is conteined in the inſtrument read by the foreſayd M. Morgan, the tenour whereof followeth and in effect is ſuch.

The articles read.

In the name of God, Amen: Be it manifeſt to all men by this preſent publike inſtrument, that in the yeare after the incarnation of our Lord, according to yͤ courſe and computation of the Church of England, otherwiſe in the yere 1409. in the ſecond indictiō, in the third yeare of the Popedome of the moſt holy father in Chriſt & Lord, Lord Gregory xi. by yͤ diuine permiſſion Pope, the ſecōd day of January, in the Chappell Caruariæ of S. Thomas Martyr, nigh vnto the Cathedrall Church of Worceſter, being ſituate in the ſaid Dioces, in the preſence of me the publicke Notary, and of the witneſſes vnder written: the foreſayd John

Iohn Badby a lay man, of the ſayd Dioces of Worceſter, appearing perſonally, before the reuerend father in Chriſt and Lord, Lord Thomas, by the grace of God Byſhop of Worceſter, ſitting in yͤ ſaid Chappell for chiefe Iudge, was detected of and vpon the crime of hereſie, being heretically taught, & openly maintayned by the foreſayd Iohn Badby. That is, that the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, conſecrated by the Prieſt vpon the aulter, is not the true body of Chriſt, by the vertue of the wordes of the Sacrament. But that after the Sacramentall words ſpoken by the Prieſt to make the body of Chriſt: the materiall bread doth remaine vpon the aulter as in the beginning, neither is it turned into the very body of Chriſt after the Sacramental words ſpoken of the Prieſt. Which Iohn Badby, being examined and diligently demanded by the foreſaid reuered father cõcerning the premiſſes, in the end did anſwere that it was impoſſible that any Prieſt ſhould make the body of Chriſt, & that he beleued firmely that no Prieſt could make the body of Chriſt by ſuch words Sacramentally ſpoken in ſuch ſort. And alſo he ſaid expreſſely, that he would neuer while he liued beleue, that any Prieſt could make the body of Chriſt ſacramentally, vnleſſe that firſt he ſaw manifeſtlie the like body of Chriſt to be handled in the hands of the prieſt vpon the aulter, in his corporall forme. And furthermore he ſayd, that Iohn Rakier of Briſtoll had ſo much power & authoritie to make the like body of Chriſt, as any prieſt had. Moreouer he ſaid, that whē Chriſt ſat at ſupper with his diſciples: he had not his body in his hand, to the intent to diſtribute it to his diſciples; and he ſaid expreſly, that he did not this thing. And alſo he ſpake many other words teaching & fortifieng the hereſie in the ſame place, both greeuous, and alſo out of order, and horrible to the eares of the hearers, ſounding againſt the Catholike faith.

The Sacrament of Chriſtes body.

Upon which occaſion, the ſame reuerend father admoniſhed and requeſted the ſaid Iohn Badby oftentimes, and very inſtantlie to charity: for ſomuch as he would willinglie that he ſhould haue forſaken ſuch hereſie and opinion, holden, taught, and mainteined by him, in ſuch ſort againſt the Sacrament, to renounce and vtterly abiure them, and to beleeue other things which the holy mother the Church doth beleeue. And he informed the ſaid Iohn on that behalfe both gentlie, and alſo laudably. Yet the ſaid Iohn Badby, although he were admoniſhed and requeſted both often and inſtantlie by the ſaid reuerend father: ſaid and anſwered expreſſelie, that he would neuer beleeue otherwiſe then before he had ſaid, taught, and anſwered. Whervpon, the foreſaid reuerend father Biſhop of Worceſter, ſeeing, vnderſtanding, and perceiuing the foreſaid Iohn Badby to maintaine and fortifie the ſaid hereſie, being ſtubborne, and proceeding in the ſame ſtubbornes: pronounced the ſaid Iohn to be before this time conuicted of ſuch an hereſie, and that he hath bin, and is an hereticke, and in the end declared it in theſe words.

I can not blame ye that ye are ſo angry, for it was not for your profite.

In the name of God, Amen. We Thomas Biſhop of Worceſter, do accuſe thee Iohn Badby being a lay man of our Dioces, of and vpon the crime of hereſie before vs, ſitting for cheeſe iudge, being oftentimes confeſſed and conuicted of and vpon that, that thou haſt taught and openly affirmed, as hetherto thou doeſt teach, boldly affirme, and defend: that the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, conſecrated vpon the aulter by the Prieſt, is not the true body of Chriſt: But after the Sacramental words to make the body of Chriſt by vertue of the ſaid Sacramentall words pronounced, to haue bin in the crime of hereſie: and we do pronounce thee, both to haue bene, and to be an heretike, and do declare it finallie by theſe writings.

The ſentẽce of the B. of Worceſter againſt Iohn Badby.

Theſe things were done accordingly as is aboue written and are recited in the yeare, indiction, popedome, moneth, day and place aforeſaid, being preſent the ſame time, Iohn Malune Prior of the Cathedrall Church of Worceſter, Iohn Dudle Mõke, and Iohn Haule the ſupprior of the ſaid Church, Thomas Penings of the order of the Carmelites, Thomas Fekenham of the order of the preaching Friers, William Pomfret of the order of the Minorites, being profeſſors and maiſters in diuinitie, William Hailes, Gualter of London, Iohn Swippedew beeing publique Notaries, and William Beuchampe and Thomas Gerbris being Knights, Richard Wiſh of Tredington, Thomas Wilbe of Hembury, Iohn Weſton of Yewley, being parſons of Churches, and Thomas Baleinges, the maiſter of Saint Wolſtone in Worceſter, and alſo Henry Haggely, Iohn Penerell, Thomas Trogmorton and William Waſſeborne Eſquiers of the Dioces of Worceſter and Norwich, and many other worſhipfull and honeſt men being witneſſes and called ſpeciallye to the things aforeſaid.

A rable of monkes and friers about the condemnation of Iohn Badby

Quare fremuerunt gentes. Pſal. 2.

Scribes with Phariſes.

And I Iohn Chew Clerke, of the Dioces of Bath and Welles, and by the authoritie apoſtolicall, publique Notarie of the ſaid Biſhop: haue in teſtimonie of the premiſſes, put my hand & ſeale to the examination, interrogatiõ, monition, and aunſwere of the ſame Iohn Badby, and to his obſtinacie: & alſo to the procedings of al and ſingular other doings as is aforeſaid, which againſt him before the ſayd biſhop were handled & done, in the yeare, indiction, popedome, moneth, day, and place aforeſaid, which with the forenamed witneſſes was perſonally preſent: and yͤ ſame, euen as I heard them and ſaw them to be done (being occupied with other matters) cauſed them to be written and publiſhed, and into this publique forme haue compiled the ſame. I the foreſayd Notary am alſo priuie, vnto the words and examinations interlined betweene ſeauen or eight lines of yͤ beginning of this inſtrument, which lines I alſo the foreſaide Notary doe approue and make good.

And I Walter London Clerke, of the Dioces of Worceſter, and by the authoritie Apoſtolicall, publique Notarie: to all and ſingular the foreſaid things as afore by the foreſaid Notary is recited, & in the yeare, indiction, popedome, moneth, day, and place aforeſaid were handled and done, being with other the fore recited witneſſes perſonally preſent; and to all & euery of the ſame (as I ſaw & heard them to be done, being thereunto faithfully deſired and required.) In teſtimony of the premiſſes, haue ſigned & ſubſcribed according to yͤ accuſtomed maner. Hæc ex Reg. Cant.

And when the articles, in the foreſaid inſtrument contained, were by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury publiquely and vulgarly read and approued: he publiquely cõfeſſed & affirmed, that he had both ſaid and mainteined the ſame. And then the Archbiſhop to conuince the cõſtant purpoſe of the ſaid Iohn Badby, commanded the ſame articles againe to be read, often inſtructing him both by words and examples, informing and exhorting him that thereby he might be brought the ſooner to the Religion that he was of. And furthermore, the ſaid Archbyſhop ſayd and affirmed there openly to the ſame Iohn: that he would (if he would liue according to the doctrine of Chriſt) gage his ſoule for him at the iudgement day. And after that againe he cauſed thoſe articles in the ſaid inſtrument expreſſed, to be read by the foreſaid Phillip Morgan, & the ſaid Archbyſhop himſelfe expounded the ſame in Engliſh as before: wherunto Iohn Badby aunſwered. As touching the firſt article concerning the body of Chriſt, he expreſly ſayd, that after yͤ conſecration at the aulter, there remaineth materiall bread, & the ſame bread which was before: notwithſtãding (ſaid he) it is a ſigne or ſacrament of the liuing God.

The aunſwere of Iohn Badby to the articles.

Alſo, wen the ſecond article was expounded vnto him, that it is impoſſible for anie Prieſt &c. To this article he anſwered and ſaid, that it could not ſinke into his minde that the words are to be taken as they litterallie lie, vnles he ſhould denie the incarnation of Chriſt.

Alſo, being examined of the third Article concerning Iacke Raker, he ſaid: That if Iacke Raker were a man of good liuing, and did loue and feare God, that he hath as much power ſo to do, as hath the Prieſt: and ſaid further, that he hath heard it ſpoken of ſome doctors of diuinitie, that if he ſhould receiue any ſuch conſecrated bread, he were worthy to be damned, & were damned in ſo doing.

Furthermore he ſayd that he would beleue the omnipotent God in trinitie, and ſaid moreouer that if euery hoſte being conſecrated at the aulter were the Lords body, that then there be 20000. gods in England. But he beleeued (he ſaid) in one God omnipotent, which thing the foreſaid Archb. of Cant. denied not.

The ſubſtance of bread not chaunged in the Sacrament.

And when the other concluſion was expounded. That Chriſt ſitting with his Diſciples at ſupper, &c. To this he anſwered and ſaid that he would greatly maruell: that if anie man had a loafe of bread, and ſhould breake the ſame and giue to euery man a mouthfull, that the ſame loafe ſhould afterwards be whole.

When all theſe things were thus finiſhed, and that all the ſaid concluſions were often red in the vulgar tong: the foreſaid Archb. demaunded of him, whether he would renounce and forſake his opiniõs and ſuch like concluſions or not, and adhere to the doctrine of Chriſt and Catholike faith? He anſwered, that according to that he had ſayd before, he would adhere and ſtand to thoſe words, which before he had made anſwere vnto. Then the Archb. oftentimes required the ſaid Iohn in the bowels of Ieſu Chriſt that he would forſake thoſe opinions and concluſions, and that henceforth he would cleaue to the chriſtian faith: which thing to do in the audience of all the lords and others that were preſent, he expreſly denied and refuſed.

The cõſtancy of Iohn Badby before the Archb.

After all this, when the foreſayd Archbiſhop of Cant. & the Biſhop of London had conſulted together, to what ſafe keping the ſaid Iohn Badby (vntill the Wedneſdaie next) might be committed: It was cõcluded, that he ſhold be put in a certaine chamber or ſafe houſe within the Manſion of the Frier preachers, and ſo he was: and then the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury ſayd, that he himſelfe would kepe the key therof, in the meane time. And when the foreſayd wedneſday was expired, being the 15. day of March, and that the foreſayd Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with hys fellow brethren and Suffragances were aſſembled in the Church of S. Paule in London: The Archbiſh. of Canterbury taking the Epiſcopall ſeate, called vnto him the Archbiſhop of Yorke, Richard London, Henry wincheſter, Robert Chicheſter, Alexander Norwich, & the noble prince Edmond the Duke of Yorke, Rafe Earle of weſtmerland, Thomas Beaufort Knight Lord Chancellour of England, and the Lord Beamond with other noble men as well ſpirituall as temporall, that ſtood and ſate by, whome to name it would be long: Before whome the ſaid John Badby was called perſonallie to anſwere vnto the Articles premiſed in the foreſaid inſtrument. Who when he came perſonallie before them, the articles were read by the Officiall of the court of Cant. and by the Archb. (in the vulgare tong) expounded, publikely and expreſly: and the ſame Articles, as he before had ſpoken and depoſed, he ſtill held and defended, and ſaid, that whileſt he liued, he would neuer retract the ſame. And furthermore he ſaid ſpecially to to be noted, that the Lord duke of Yorke perſonallie there preſent as is aforeſaid, and euery man els for the time beeing: is of more eſtimation and reputation, then the Sacrament of the aulter, by the prieſt in due forme conſecrated. And whileſt they were thus in his examination, the Archbiſhop conſidering and waying that he would in no wiſe be altered, and ſeing moreouer his countenance ſtout and hart confirmed, ſo that he began to perſuade other as it appeared in the ſame: Theſe things conſidered, the Archprelate whē he ſaw that by his allurements it was not in his power, neither by exhortations, reaſons, nor arguments, to bring the ſaid John Badbye from his conſtant truth to his Catholique faith (executing and doing the office of his great maiſter) proceeded to confirme and ratifie the former ſentence giuen before by the Biſhop of Worceſter againſt the ſaid John Badby, pronouncing him for an open and publique hereticke. And thus ſhifting their hands of him, they deliuered him to the ſecular power: and deſired the ſayd temporall Lords, then and there preſent verie inſtantlie, that they would not put the ſame John Badby to death for that his offence, nor deliuer him to be puniſhed or put to death, in ẏ preſence of all the Lords aboue recited.

Note here murdring wolues in ſheepes cloathing.

Theſe things thus done and concluded by the Biſhops in the forenoone: on the afternoone, the Kings writte was not far behind. By the force wherof, I. Badby ſtill perſeuering in his conſtancie vnto the death, was brought into Smithfield, and there being put in an emptie barrell, was bound with iron chaines faſtened to a ſtake, hauing drie wood put about him.

And as he was thus ſtanding in the pipe or tonne (for as yet Cherillus Bull was not in vre among the biſhops) it happened that the Prince the Kings eldeſt ſonne, was there preſent. Who ſhewing ſome part of the good Samaritane, began to endeuour and aſſay how to ſaue the life of him, whome the hypocriticall Leuites and Phariſeis ſought to put to death. He admoniſhed and counſailed him, that hauing reſpect vnto himſelfe, he ſhould ſpedelie withdraw himſelfe out of theſe dangerous Laberinths of opinions, adding oftentimes threatnings, the which might haue daunted anie mans ſtomacke. Alſo Courtney at that time Chancellor of Oxford, preached vnto him, and enformed him of the faith of holie Church.

The prince laboureth to turne Badby.

In this meane ſeaſon, the Prior of S. Bartlemewes in Smithfield, brought with all ſolemnitie the Sacrament of Gods body, with twelue torches borne before, and ſo ſhewed the Sacrament to the poore man being at the ſtake. And then they demanded of him how he beleeued in it, he anſwering: that he knew well it was halowed bread, and not gods body. And then was the tunne put ouer him, and fire put vnto him. And when he felt fire, he cried, mercie (calling belike vpon the Lord) and ſo the Prince immediatelie commanded to take awaie the tunne, and quench the fire. The Prince his commandement being done, aſked him if he would forſake hereſie to take him to the faith of holie Church: which thing if he would doo, he ſhould haue goods inough, promiſing alſo vnto him a yearelie ſtipend out of the kings treaſurie, ſo much as ſhould ſuffice his contentation.

The ſacrament ſolemnely brought to Smithfield at the burning of Badbye.

Ioh.Badby conſtant to the end.

But this valiant champion of Chriſt, neglecting the princes faire words, as alſo contemning all mens deuiſes: refuſed the offer of worldly promiſes, no doubt, but being more vehemently inflamed with ẏ ſpirit of God then with anie earthly deſire. Wherfore, whē as yet he continued vnmoueable in his former mind, the prince commanded him ſtraight to be put again into the pipe or tunne, and that he ſhould not afterward looke for any grace or fauour. But as he could be allured by no rewards, euē ſo was he nothing at all abaſhed at their torments, but as a valiant champion of Chriſt, he perſeuered inuincible to ẏ end. Not without a great and moſt cruell battayle, but with much more greater triumph of victorie: the ſpirit of Chriſt hauing alwaies the vpper hand in his members, maugre the furie, rage, and power of the whole world. For the manifeſtation of which torment, wee haue here ſet forth the picture of his burning, in ſuch maner as it was done.

All the power of man ſet againſt the Goſpel.

This godly Martyr John Badby hauing thus conſummate his teſtimony and martyrdome in fire, the perſecuting Biſhops yet not herewith contented, and thinking themſelues as yet eyther not ſtrong inough, or els not ſharpe enough agaynſt the poore innocent flock of Chriſt: to make all thinges ſure and ſubſtantiall on theyr ſide, in ſuch ſorte, as this doctrine of the Goſpell nowe ſpringing ſhould be ſuppreſſed for euer: layd theyr conſpiring heads together, & hauing now a king for theyr own purpoſe, ready to ſerue theyr turn in all poynts (during the time of the ſame Parliamēt aboue recited yet cōtinuing) the foreſayd biſhops and clergy of the realme, exhibited a Bul vnto the kings maieſtie: ſubtily declaring, what quietnes hath ben mayntayned within this realme by his moſt noble progenitours, who alwayes defended the auncient rites and cuſtomes of the Church, and enriched the ſame with large gifts, to the honor of God and the realme: and contrariwiſe, what trouble and diſquietnes was now riſen by diuers (as they termed them) wicked and peruerſe men teachinge and preachinge openlye and priuilye, a certayne new, wicked and hereticall kinde of doctrine, contrary to the Catholicke fayth and determination of holye Church: wherupon ẏ king alwayes oppreſſed with blynd ignoraunce by the crafty meanes and ſubtile pretences of the clergie, graunted in the ſayd Parliament (by conſent of the nobilitie aſſembled) a ſtatute to be obſerued called Ex officio as followeth.

The Goſpel of Chriſt counted as wicked and hereticall.

The Statute Ex officio.

The cruell ſtatute, ex officio.

That is to ſay, that no man within this Realme or other the kinges maieſties dominions, preſume or take vpon him to preach priuily or apertly, without ſpeciall licence firſt obteyned of the ordinary of the ſame place (Curates in theyr owne pariſhe Churches, and perſons heretofore priuiledged, and others admitted by the Canon law, onely excepted) Nor that any hereafter do preach mayntayne, teach, informe openly or in ſecret, or make or write any booke contrary to the catholique ſayth, and determination of the holy Church. Nor that any hereafter, make anye conuenticles or aſſemblies, or keepe and exerciſe anye maner of ſchooles touching this ſect, wicked doctrin and opinion. And further that no man hereafter ſhall by any meanes, fauour anye ſuch preacher, any ſuch maker of vnlawfull aſſemblies, or any ſuch booke maker or writer, and finally any ſuch teacher, informer, or ſtirrer vp of the people. And that all and ſinguler perſons hauing anye the ſayd bookes, writinges, or ſchedules contayning the ſayd wicked doctrines and opinions, ſhall within forty dayes after this preſent proclamation and ſtatute, really and effectually deliuer or cauſe to be deliuered all and ſinguler the ſayd bookes and writinges, vnto the ordinary of the ſame place. And if it ſhall happen anye perſon or perſons of what kinde, ſtate, or condition ſoeuer he or they be, to doe or attempt anye manner of thing contrarye to this preſent proclamation & ſtatute, or not to deliuer the ſame books in forme aforeſayd: That then the ordinary of the ſame place in his owne dioceſſe by authoritie of the ſayd proclamation and ſtatute ſhall cauſe to be areſted and deteined vnder ſafe cuſtody, the ſayd perſon or perſōs in this caſe diffamed, and euidently ſuſpected or any of them, vntill he or they ſo offending haue by order of lawe purged him or themſelues as touching the articles layd to hys or theyr charge in this behalfe: or vntill he or they haue denyed and recanted (according to the lawes eccleſiaſticall) the ſayd wicked ſect, preachinges, teachinges: and hereticall and erroneous opinions And that the ſayd ordinary by himſelfe or his Comiſſaries proceede openly and iudicially to all the effect of law agaynſt the ſayd perſons ſo areſted and remayning vnder ſafe cuſtody, & that he end and determine the matter within three monethes after the ſayd areſt, (all delayes and excuſes ſet apart) according to the order and cuſtom of the Canon law. And if any perſon, in any cauſe aboue mentioned, ſhalbe lawfully conuicted before the ordinary of the dioceſſe or hys Comiſſaries: that then the ſayd Ordinary, may lawfully cauſe the ſayd perſon ſo conuicted (according to the maner and quallitie of hys fact) to be layd in any of his owne priſons, and there to be kept ſo long as to hys diſcretion ſhall be thought expedient.

A bloudie law of king Henry.4.

And further the ſayd Ordinary (except in caſes by the which according to the Canon law, the party offending ought to be deliuered to the ſeculer power) ſhall charge the ſayd perſon wyth ſuch a fine of mony to be payd vnto the kinges maieſtye, as he ſhall thinke competent for the maner and quallitie of his offence, And the ſayd dioceſan ſhalbe bound to geue notice of the ſayd fine, into the kinges maieſties Eſchequer, by hys letters patent vnder his ſeale: to the intent that the ſayd fine may be leuied to the kinges maieſties vſe of the goodes of the perſon ſo conuict.

And further if any perſon within this realme and other the kinges maieſties dominion, ſhalbe conuicted before the Ordinary of the place, or hys Comiſſaryes, of the ſayd wicked preachinges, doctrines, opinions ſchooles, and hereticall and erroneous informations or any of them: and will refuſe to abiure and recant the ſayd wicked ſect, preachings teachings, opinions, ſchols and informations: Or if after hys abiuration once made, the relapſe be pronounced agaynſt hym by the dioceſan of the place, or hys Commiſſaryes (for ſo by the Canon law he ought to be lefte to the ſecular power, vpon credite geuen to the ordinary or hys Commiſſaries) That then, the Sheriffe of the ſame Countie, the Mayor, Sheriffes, or Sheriffe, or the Mayor or Baliffes of the ſame Cittie, village or Borough of the ſame County, and neereſt inhabiting to the ſayd Ordinary or hys ſayd Commiſſaryes: ſhall perſonally be preſent, as oft as they ſhalbe required, to conferre with the ſayd Ordinary or his commiſſaries in geuing ſentence againſt the ſayd perſons offending or any of them. And after the ſayd ſentence ſo pronounced, ſhall take vnto them the ſayd perſons ſo offending, and any of them, and cauſe them openly to be burned in the ſight of all the people: To the intent that this kinde of puniſhment may be a terror vnto others, that the like wicked doctrines and heretical opinions, or the authours and fauourers thereof be no more mayntayned within this Realme, and dominions, to the great hurt (which God forbid) of Chriſtian religion, and decrees of holy Church. In which all and ſinguler the premiſſes, concerning the ſtatute aforeſayd: Let the Sheriffes, Mayors, and Bayliffes of the ſayd Counties, Cities: Villages, and Boroughes, be attendant, ayding, and fauoring, the ſayd Ordinaryes and theyr Commiſſaries.

A bloudy ſtatute.

By this bloudy ſtatute ſo ſeuerely and ſharply enacted agaynſt theſe ſimple men, here haſt thou (gentle Reader a little to ſtay with thy ſelfe: and to conſider the nature and condition of this preſent world, howe it hath bene ſet and bent euer from the beginning, by all might, counſayle, and wayes poſſible, to ſtriue agaynſt the wayes of God, and to ouerthrow that which he will haue ſet vp. And althogh the world may ſee by infinite ſtoryes and examples, that it is but in vaine to ſtriue againſt him: yet ſuch is the nature of this world (all ſet in malignitie) that it will not ceaſe ſtill to be like it ſelfe.

The like law and ſtatute in the time of Diocleſian and Maximinus was attempted, as before appeareth, pag. 83. & for the more ſtrength were writtē alſo in tables of braſſe, to the entent that the name of Chriſt ſhould vtterly be extincted for euer. And yet, the name of Chriſt remayneth, where that braſen lawe remayned not three yeres. The which law writtē thē in braſſe, although it differ in maner & form, from this our ſtatute Ex officio, yet to the ſame ende & cruelty, to ſpill the bloud of ſaintes, there is no difference betweene the one and the other. Neither is there anye diuerſitie touching the firſt originall doer and worker of thē both. For the ſame Sathan, which then wrought his vttermoſt agaynſt Chriſt, before he was bound vp: the ſame alſo now after his looſing out, doth what he can, though not after the ſame way, yet to the ſame intent. For then in outward violence as an open enemy, he did what he could Now by a more couert way, vnder the title of the Church he impugneth the Church of Chriſt, vſing a more ſubtile way to deceaue, vnder gay pretēſed titles: but no leſſe pernicious in the end, wherto he ſhouteth, as well appeareth by this bloudy ſtatute Ex officio, the ſequell wherof coſt afterward, many a Chriſten mans life. As in proceſſe of ſtory remayneth more hereafter (Chriſt willing) to be declared.

The lawe of Maximinus and the ſtatute ex officio compared.

Furthermore for the more fortification of this ſtatute of the king aforeſayd, concurreth alſo an other conſtitution made much about the ſame tyme by the Archb. of Canterb. Thomas Arundell. So that no induſtrye nor pollicy of man here did lack to ſet the matter forward, but ſpecially on the biſhops partes, who left no meanes vnattempted, how to ſubuert the right wayes of the Lord.

First, in moſt dilligent and exquiſite execution of the kinges ſtatute ſet foorth: the execution whereof they did ſo exactly apply, that maruell it is to conſider, all other laws of kinges (commonly,) be they neuer ſo good) to be ſo coldly kept, and this onely among all the reſt ſo neerely followed. But herein is to be ſeene the dilligence of the romiſhe Prelates, which neuer let any thing to fal, that maketh for the dignity of their eſtate.

Secondly, beſide theyr vigilant care, in ſeeing ẏ kinges ſtatute to be executed: No leſſe induſtrious alſo were they in adding thereunto moe conſtitutions of theyr owne, as from time to time appeareth as wel by other Archbiſhops hereafter, and by Pope Martine, as alſo by this conſtitution here preſent made by Thomas Arundell the Archb.

But before we enter to the relation of theſe foreſayd cōſtitutions of yͤ clergy mē, here cōmeth in more to be ſaid and noted touching yͤ foreſayd Statute ex Officio to proue the ſame not onely to be cruell and impious but alſo to be of it ſelfe of no force and validitie for the burning of anye perſon for cauſe of Religion, for the diſprofe of whiche ſtatute we haue ſufficient authoritie remayning as yet in the parliament Rolles to be ſeene in her maieſties Courte of Recordes: which here were to be debated at large but that vpon ſpeciall occaſiō we haue differred the ample diſcourſe therof to the cruell perſecution of the Lord Cobhame hereafter enſuing as may appeare in the defence of the ſayd lord Cobham agaynſt Nicholas Happeſfield vnder the title and name of Alanus Copus And thus referring them for the examination of this ſtatute to the place aforeſaid, let vs now returne to Thomas Arundel, and his bloudy conſtitutions aboue mentioned. The ſtile and tenour wherof, to the intent the rigour of the ſame may appeare to all men I thought hereunder to adioyne, in wordes as followeth.

✻ The conſtitution of Thomas Arundell, agaynſt the followers of Gods truth.

A cruell conſtitution by the Archb. agaynſt the Goſpellers with 13. articles.

THomas by the permiſſion of God, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Primate of all Englande, and Legate of the ſee Apoſtolicke: To all and ſinguler our reuerend brethren fellow Biſhops, and our Suffraganes. And to Abbots, Priours, Deanes of Cathedrall Churches, Archdeacons, Prouoſtes and Canons: alſo to all perſons, vicares, chaplaynes, & Clerkes in Pariſh Churches, and to all lay mē whome and where ſo euer, dwelling wtin our prouince of Canterbury, greeting: & grace to ſtand firmely in the doctrine of the holy mother Church. It is a manifeſt & playne caſe: that he doth wrong and iniury to the moſt reuerend councell, who ſo reuolteth from the thinges, being in the ſayd Councell once diſcuſſed and decided. And whoſoeuer dare preſume to diſpute of the ſupreme or principall iudgment here in earth, in ſo doing incurreth the payne of ſacrilege, according to the authoritie of ciuill wiſedome and and manifeſt tradition of humayne law. Much more then they who truſting to theyr own wittes, are ſo bold to violate and with contrary doctrine to reſiſt, and in word and deede to contemne the preceptes of lawes and Canons, rightly made and proceeding from the kaybearer and porter of eternall life and death: bearing the rowme and perſon, not of pure man, but of true God here in earth: which alſo haue bene abſerued hitherto, and of yͤ holy fathers our predeceſſoures, vnto the glorious effuſion of theyr bloud, & voluntary ſprinkling out of theyr braynes: Are worthy of greater puniſhmēt, deſeruing quickly to be cut off, as rotten members, from the body of the Church militent. For ſuch ought to conſider, what is in the old teſtament written: Moſes and Aaron among hys Prieſtes, that is, were chiefe heads amongſt them. And in the new Teſtament among the Apoſtles there was a certayne difference: And though they were all Apoſtles yet was it graunted of the Lord to Peter, that he ſhould beare preeminence aboue the other Apoſtles: And alſo the Apoſtles themſelues woulde the ſame, that he ſhoulde be the chiefetayn ouer all the reſt. And being called Cephas, that is, head: ſhold be as Prince ouer the Apoſtles. Unto whome it was ſayd: Thou beyng once conuerted, confirme thy brethren: as though he wold ſay, If there happen any doubt among them, or if anye of them chaunce to erre and ſtray out of the way of fayth, of iuſt liuing, or right conuerſation: Doe thou confirme and reduce him in the right way againe. which thing no doubt the Lord would neuer haue ſayd vnto him, if he had not ſo minded, yͭ the reſt ſhould be obedient vnto him. And yet al this notwithſtanding, we know and dayly proue, that we are ſory to ſpeake, howe the olde Sophiſter, the enemy of mankinde, (foreſeeing and fearing leſt yͤ ſound doctrine of the church determined from ancient times by the holy forefathers: ſhould withſtand his malices, if it might keep the people of god in vnitie of faith vnder one head of yͤ church) doth therfore endeuour by al meanes poſſible, to extirp the ſayd doctrine, feyning vices to be vertues. And ſo vnder falſe pretences of veritie diſſimuled, ſoweth diſcorde in catholike people, to the intent, yͭ ſome goyng one way, ſome an other: He in the meane time may gather to himſelfe a Church of the malignant, differing wickedly from the vniuerſall mother holy church. In the which Satan transforming hymſelfe into an Angell of light, bearing a lying and deceitfull ballaunce in hys hād, pretendeth great righteouſnes, in contrarying the ancient doctrine of the holye mother church, and refuſing the traditions of the ſame determined and appoynted by holy fathers: perſwading mē (by fayned forgeries) the ſame to be nought: and ſo inducing other new kindes of doctrine, leading to more goodnes, as he by his lying perſwaſions pretendeth, although he in very truth neither willeth nor mindeth any goodnes but rather that he may ſow ſchiſmes, wherby diuers opinions & contrary to themſelues being rayſed in yͤ Church fayth thereby may be diminiſhed, and alſo the reuerend holy miſteries through the ſame contention of words may be prophaned with Paganes, Iewes, and other infidels, and wicked miſcreantes. And ſo that figure in the Apoc. 6. is well verified, ſpeaking of him that ſate on the blacke horſe, bearing a payre of balaunce in hys hand, by yͤ which heretiques are vnderſtand. Who at the firſt appearaunce lyke to weightes or ballance, make as though they would ſet forth right and iuſt thinges, to allure the hartes of the hearers. But afterward, appeareth the blacke horſe, that is to ſay, their intention, full of curſed ſpeaking. For they vnder a diuers ſhew and colour of a iuſt ballance, with the tayle of a blacke horſe ſprinkling abroad hereſies and errours, do ſtrike. And beyng poyſoned themſelues, vnder colour of good, rayſe vp infinite ſlaunders, and by certayn perſons fitte to doe miſchiefe, do publiſh abroad as it were the ſugred taſt of hony mixt with poyſon, therby the ſooner to be taken: working and cauſing through their ſlight and ſubtiltyes, that errour ſhoulde be taken for veritye, wickednes for holines, and for the true will of Chriſt. Yea and moreouer the foreſayd perſons thus picked out, do preach before they be ſent, and preſume to ſow the ſeede, before the ſeede diſcreetely be ſeperate from the chaffe. Who not pondering the conſtitutions and decrees of the Canons, prouided for the ſame purpoſe agaynſt ſuche peſtilent ſowers, do preferre ſacrifice Diabolicall (ſo to terme it) before obedience be geuen to the holy Church militant

Apoc. 6.

The figure of the black horſe in the Apoc. doctorly expounded.

Behold the true image of Wolues vnder ſheepes clothing.

We therfore conſidering and weying, that error which is not reſiſted, ſeemeth to be allowed, and hee that openeth hys boſome to wyde, whiche reſiſteth not the viper thinking there to thruſt out her venome: And willing moreouer to ſhake off the duſt from our feete, and to ſee to the honor of our holy mother Church, whereby one vniforme holye doctrine may be ſowne and planted in the churche of God, (namely in thys our prouince of Caunterbury) ſo much as is vs doth lye, to the encreaſe of fayth and ſeruice of God, firſt rooting the euill weedes and offendicles which by the meanes of peruerſe preaching, mad doctrine, haue ſprong vp hitherto, and are lyke more hereafter to grow: purpoſing by ſome conuenient way with all dilligence poſſible to withſtand them in tyme, and to prouide for the perill of ſoules, whiche we ſee to ryſe vnder pretence of the premiſſes: alſo to remoue al ſuch obſtacles, by which the ſayd our purpoſe may be ſtopped, by the aduiſe and aſſent of all our Suffragans and other Prelates, being preſent in this our conuocation of the Clergie, as alſo of the procuratours of them that be abſent: and at the inſtaunt petition of the procurators of the whole Clergie within this our prouince of Canterbury, for the more fortification of the common law in this part, adding thereunto puniſhment and penalties condigne as be here vnder written, we will and command ordayne and decree.

The firſt conſtitution.

That no maner of perſon ſeculer or reguler, being authoriſed to preach by the lawes now preſcribed, or licenced by ſpecial priuiledge: ſhal take vpon him the office of preaching the word of God, or by any meanes preach vnto the clergy or Laitie, either within the Churche or without, in Engliſh, except he firſt preſent himſelfe, and be examined of the Ordinary of the place where he preacheth. And ſo being found a fitte perſon, as well in maners as knowledge he ſhall be ſent by the ſayd Ordinary, to ſome one Church or more as ſhalbe thought expedient by the ſayd Ordinary according to the quallitie of the perſon. Nor any perſon aforeſayd ſhall preſume to preach, except firſt he geue faythfull ſignification in due forme of his ſending and authoritie, that is: That he that is authoriſed, doe come in forme appoynted him in that behalfe: and thoſe that affirme they come by ſpeciall priuiledge, do ſhew their priuiledge vnto the Parſon or Vicare of the place where they preach. And thoſe that pretend themſelues to be ſent by the ordinary of the place, ſhall likewiſe ſhew the Ordinaries letters made vnto hym for that purpoſe, vnder hys great ſeale. Let vs alwayes vnderſtand, the Curate (hauing the perpetuitie) to be ſent of right vnto the people of his owne cure. But if any perſon aforeſayd, ſhalbe bidden by the ordinary of the place, or any other ſuperiour to preach, by reaſon of his errors and hereſies whiche before peraduenture he hath preached and taught: that then and from thēceforth, he abſtayne from preaching within our prouince: vntill he haue purged hymſelfe, & be lawfully admitted agayne to preach by the iuſt arbitrement of him that ſuſpended and forbad him. And ſhall alwaies after that, cary with hym to al places whereſoeuer he ſhall preach, the letters teſtimoniall of him that reſtored him.

No prieſtes to preach, but by limitation of the prealates.

Moreouer

A ioly mene to bring the world into ſuch darknes.

Moreouer, the Pariſh Prieſtes or Vicares temporall, not hauing perpetuities, nor being ſent in forme aforeſayd ſhall ſimply preach in yͤ Churches where they haue charge onely thoſe thinges whiche are expreſſely contayned in the prouinciall conſtitution ſet forth by Iohn our predeceſſour of good memory, to helpe yͤ ignorance of the prieſts, which beginneth: Ignorantia Sacerdotum. Which book of conſtitutions, we would ſhould be had in euery pariſh Church in our prouince of Caunterbury, within three monthes next after the publication of theſe preſentes, and (as therein is required) that it be effectually declared by yͤ prieſtes themſelues yearely, and at the tymes appoynted. And leaſt thys wholeſome ſtatute might be thought hurtfull of ſome, by reaſon of payment of money, or ſome other difficultie: we therfore will & ordayne, that yͤ examinations of the perſõs aforeſayd, and the making of theyr letters by the Ordinary be done gratis and freely without any exaction of money at all, by thoſe to whome it ſhall appertayne. And if any man ſhall willingly preſume to violate this our ſtatute grounded vpon the old lawe, after the publication of the ſame: he ſhall incurre the ſentence of greater excommunication ipſo facto: whoſe abſolution we ſpecially reſerue by tenoure of theſe preſentes, to vs and our ſucceſſours. But if anye ſuch Preacher deſpiſing this wholſome Statute, and not weying the ſentence of greater excommunication doe the ſecõd time take vpon hym to preach: ſaying and alledging, and ſtoutly affirming that the ſentence of greater excommunication aforeſaid, cannot be appoynted by the Church in the perſons of the Prelates of the ſame: That then, the Superiours of the place, doe worthely rebuke him, and forbid him from the Communion of all faythfull Chriſtians.

And that the ſayde perſon hereupon lawfully conuicted (except he recant and abiure after the maner of yͤ Church) be pronounced an hereticke by the Ordinary of the place. And that from thenceforth he be reputed and taken for an hereticke and ſchiſmaticke, and that he incurre (ipſo facto) the penalties of hereſie and ſchiſmacie, expreſſed in the law: And chiefly that his goodes be adiudged confiſcate by the law, and apprehended and kept by them, to whome it ſhal appertayne. And that hys fautours, receiuers, & defenders being conuicted, in all caſes be likewiſe puniſhed, if they ceaſe not of within one month, being lawfully warned therof by theyr ſuperiours.

Conſtit. 2.

Furthermore, no clergy man, or parochians of any pariſh or place within our prouince of Cant. ſhall admit any man to preach wͭin their Churches, churchyardes or other places whatſoeuer, except firſt there be manifeſt knowledge had of his authoritie, priuiledge, or ſending thither, according to the order aforeſayd: Otherwiſe the Churche, churchyarde, or what place whatſoeuer, in whiche it was ſo preached, ſhal ipſo facto, receiue yͤ Eccleſiaſticall interdict & ſo ſhall remayne interdicted, vntill they that ſo admitted and ſuffered him to preach, haue reformed themſelues, and obtayned yͤ place ſo interdicted, to be releaſed in due forme of law, either frõ the Ordinary of yͤ place, or his ſuperiour.

Conſtit. 3.

what tyrãny is this to bynde the preachers mouth what to ſay.

Moreouer, like as a good houſholder caſteth wheat into the ground (well ordered for that purpoſe) therby to get the more encreaſe: euen ſo we wil and commaund, that the preacher of Gods word, comming in form aforeſayd, preaching eyther vnto the Clergy or Laity, according to hys matter proponed: ſhalbe of good behauiour, ſowing ſuch ſeed as ſhalbe cõuenient for his auditory. And chiefly preaching to the Clergie, he ſhall touche the vices commonly vſed amongſt them, and to the Laitie he ſhall declare the vices commonly vſed among them, and not otherwiſe: But if he preach contrary to this order, then ſhall he be ſharpely puniſhed by the ordenary of that place, according to the quallitie of that offence.

Conſtit. 4.

A barre for the preachers.

Item, foraſmuch as the part is vile, that agreeth not with the whole: we do decree and ordayn, yͭ no preacher aforeſayd, or any other perſon whatſoeuer, ſhall otherwiſe teach or preach concerning the ſacramẽt of the aulter, matrimony, confeſſion of ſinnes, or any other ſacrament of the Church, or article of the fayth, then that already is diſcuſſed by the holy mother Churche, nor ſhall bring anye thing in doubt yͭ is determined by the church: nor ſhal to his knowledge priuily or apertly pronounce blaſphemous wordes concerning the ſame, nor ſhall teach, preach, or obſerue any ſect, or kinde of hereſie whatſoeuer, contrary to the wholeſome doctrine of the Church. He that ſhall wittingly & obſtinatly attempt the contrary, after the publication of theſe preſentes, ſhall incurre the ſentence of excommunication ipſo facto: From the which (except in poynt of death) he ſhal not be abſolued, vntill he hath reformed himſelfe by abiuration of his hereſie, at the diſcretion of the Ordinary, in whoſe territory he ſo offẽded, and hath receiued wholſome penitence for his offences. But if the ſecond tyme he ſhall ſo offend, being lawfully conuicted, he ſhalbe pronounced an hereticke, & his goods confiſcate and apprehended, and kept by them to whome it ſhall appertayne. The penance before mentioned, ſhalbe after this manner: If anye man contrary to the determination of the Church, that is, in yͤ decrees, decretals, or our conſtitutions prouinciall, doe openly or priuily teach or preach any kinde of hereſie or ſecte he ſhall in the pariſh Church of the ſame place, where he ſo preached, vpon one ſonday, or other ſolemne day, or more, at the diſcretion of the ordinary, and as hys offence is more or leſſe, expreſſely reuoke that he ſo preached, taught or affirmed, euen at the time of the ſolemnitie of the maſſe, whẽ the people are moſt aſſembled, and there ſhall effectually and without fraud preach, and teach the very truth determined by the church: and further ſhalbe puniſhed after the quallitie of hys offence, as ſhalbe thought expedient to the diſcretion of the Ordinary.

Conſt. 5.

A caueat for ſchoolemaſters.

Item, foraſmuch as a new veſſell being long vſed, ſauoreth after the head, we decree and ordayn, that no ſcholemaiſters and teachers whatſoeuer, that inſtruct childrẽ in grammer, or others whõ ſo euer, in primitiue ſciences ſhal in teaching them, intermingle any thing concerning yͤ catholicke fayth, the ſacrament of the aulter, or other Sacramentes of the Church, contrary to the determinations of yͤ church. Nor ſhall ſuffer theyr ſchollers to expound the holy Scriptures, (except the text as hath bene vſed of auncient time,) nor ſhal permit them to diſpute openly or priuily concerning the catholicke fayth, or Sacramentes of the Churche. Contrariwiſe, the offender herein ſhalbe greeuouſly puniſhed by the Ordinary of the place, as a fauourer of errours and ſchiſmes.

Conſt. 6.

Books of Iohn Wickliffe forbidden.

Item, for that a new way doth more frequently leade a ſtray, then an old way: we will and commaunde that no booke or treatiſe made by Iohn wickliffe, or other whom ſoeuer, about that time or ſithence, or hereafter to be made: be from henceforth read in ſchooles, halles, hoſpitalles, or other places whatſoeuer, within our prouince of Canterbury aforeſayd, except the ſame be firſt examined by the vniuerſitie of Oxford or Cambridge, or at the leaſt by twelue perſons, whom the ſayd vniuerſities or one of thẽ ſhal appoynt to be choſen at our diſcretion, or the laudable diſcretion of our predeceſſoures: and the ſame being examined as aforeſayd, to be expreſly approued and allowed by vs or our ſucceſſours, and in the name and authoritie of the vniuerſitie, to be deliuered vnto the Stationers to be copyed out, and the ſame to be ſold at a reaſonable price, the originall therof alwaies after, to remayn in ſome cheſt of yͤ vniuerſitie. But if any man ſhall read any ſuch kynd of booke in ſchooles or otherwiſe, as aforeſayd: he ſhalbe puniſhed as a ſower of ſchiſme, and a fauourer of hereſie, as the qualitie of the fault ſhall require.

Conſtit. 7.

He confeſſeth that S. Ierome erred in his tranſlation. And yet the ſaid Archb. cõmẽded Qneene Anne, for hauing the ſcripture in Engliſhe.

Item, it is a daungerous thinge (as witneſſeth bleſſed S. Hierome) to tranſlate the text of the holy ſcripture out of one tongue into an other: for in the tranſlation the ſame ſenſe is not alwayes eaſily kept, as the ſame S. Ierome confeſſeth, that although he were inſpired, yet oftentimes in this he erred. We therefore decree and ordayne, that no man hereafter by his owne authoritie, tranſlate any text of the Scripture into Engliſh, or any other tongue, by way of a booke, libell, or treatiſe, and if no man read anye ſuche booke libell or treatiſe, nowe lately ſet foorth in the time of Iohn wickliffe, or ſithence, or hereafter to be ſet forth, in part or in whole, priuily, or apertly: vpon paine of greater excommunication, vntill the ſaid tranſlation be allowed by the Ordinary of the place, or (if the caſe ſo require) by the Councell prouinciall: He that ſhall do contrary to this ſhal likewiſe be puniſhed as a fauourer of error & hereſie.

Conſtit. 8.

Termes and propoſitions in diſputing to be obſerued.

Item, for that almighty God cannot be expreſſed with any Philoſophicall termes, or otherwiſe inuented of man: And S. Auguſtine ſaith, That he hath oftentimes reuoked ſuch concluſions as hath bene moſt true, becauſe they haue bene offenſiue to the eares of the religious: we doe ordeine and ſpecially forbid, that no maner of perſon, of what ſtate degree, or condition, ſo euer he be, doe allege or propone any concluſions or propoſitions in yͤ catholicke fayth, or repugnant to good manners, (except neceſſary doctrine pertayning to theyr facultie of teaching or diſputing in theyr ſchooles or otherwiſe) although they defend the ſame with neuer ſo curious termes and wordes. For as ſayth bleſſed S. Hugh of the Sacramentes, that whiche oftentimes is well ſpoken, is not well vnderſtood. If any man therefore after the publication of theſe preſents, ſhalbe conuict wittingly to haue proponed ſuch concluſions or propoſitions, except (being moniſhed) he reforme himſelfe in one month by vertue of this preſent conſtitution: He ſhall incurre the ſentence of greater excommunication ipſo facto, and ſhalbe openly pronounced an excommunicate, vntill he hath confeſſed his fault openly in the ſame place where he offended, and hath preached the true meaning of the ſayd concluſion or propoſition in one church or more, as ſhalbe thought expedient to the Ordinary.

Conſtit. 6.

Item, no manner of perſon ſhall preſume to diſpute vpon yͤ articles determined by yͤ church, as is cõtayned in the decrees, decretals, our conſtitutions prouinciall, or in the general Councels. But onely to ſeek out the true meaning therof, & that expreſſely, whether it be openly or in ſecret: nor none ſhal cal in doubt the authoritie of the ſaid decretals or conſtitutions, or the authoritie of him that made thẽ, nor teach any thing contrary to yͤ determination thereof: And chiefly concerning the adoration of the holy croſſe the worſhipping of Images, of ſayntes, going on pilgrimage to certayne places, or to the reliques of ſaintes, or agaynſt yͤ othes in caſes accuſtomed to be geuen in both cõmon places, that is to ſay, ſpirituall & temporall: But of al it ſhalbe commonly taught and preached, that the croſſe & Image of the Crucifixe, and other Images of Saynts in the honour of them whom they preſent, are to be worſhipped with proceſſion, bowing of knees, offring of frankincenſe, kiſſinges, oblations, lighting of candels, and pilgrimages, *and with all other kind of ceremonyes and maners that hath bene vſed in the time of our predeceſſoures: And that geuing of othes in caſes expreſſed in the law, and vſed of all men to whome it belongeth in both common places, ought to be done vpon the booke of the Goſpell of Chriſt. Contrarye vnto this who ſo euer doth preache, teache, or obſtinately affirme (except he recant in manner and forme aforeſayd) ſhall forthwith incurre the penaltie of hereſie, and ſhalbe pronounced an heretique, in all effect of law.

Authoritie of the popes decretals not to be doubted vnder paine of hereſie.

Adoration of the croſſe.

Inquiſition to be made through Colledges and halles of Oxforde.

Finally, becauſe thoſe things which newly and vnaccuſtomably creepeth vp, ſtandeth need of new and ſpeedy helpe: and where more daunger is, there ought to be more wary circumſpection and ſtronger reſiſtance, & and not without good cauſe: yͤ leſſe noble ought diſcretly to be cut away that the more noble may the more perfectly be nouriſhed. Conſidering therefore, and in lamentable wiſe ſhewing vnto you, how the auncient Vniuerſitie of Oxford, which as a fruitful vine was wont to extẽd forth her fruitful brãches to the honour of God, the great perfection, and defẽce of the Church: now partly being become wilde, bringeth forth bitter grapes, which being vndiſcreetly eaten of auncient fathers that thought themſelues ſkilfull in the law of God: hath ſet on edge yͤ teeth of their childrẽ: and our prouince is infected with diuers and vnfruitfull doctrines, and defiled with a new & damnable name of Lollardie, to the great reproofe and offence of the ſayd Vniuerſitie being known in forren countryes: & to the great irkeſomnes of the ſtudentes there, and to the great dammage and loſſe of the Church of England, which in times paſt by her vertue as with a ſtrong wall, was wont to be defended, and now like to runne in ruine not to be recouered. At the ſupplication therfore of yͤ whole clergie of our prouince of Cãterbury: and by the conſent and aſſent of all our brethren & ſuffragans: and other the prelates in this conuocation aſſembled, and the proctors of them that are abſent: leaſt the riuer being clenſed: the fountayne ſhould remayne corrupt and ſo the water comming from thence ſhould not be pure entending moſt holeſomly to prouide for the honour and vtilitie of our holy mother the Church and the vniuerſitie aforeſayd. we do ordeine and decree: that euery warden, Prouoſt: or maiſter of euery College, or principall of euery hall wͭin the vniuerſitie aforeſayd: ſhall once euery moneth at yͤ leaſt, diligently enquire in the ſayd College, hall, or other place where he hath authoritie, whether anye ſcholler or inhabitant in ſuch colledge, or hall. &c. haue holdẽ, alleaged, or defended, or by any meanes proponed, any concluſion propoſition or opinion concerning the catholick faith or ſounding cõtrary to good maners, or contrary to the determination of the Church, otherwiſe then appertayneth to neceſſary doctrine. And if hee ſhall finde anye ſuſpected or diffamed herein, he ſhall according to his office admoniſh him to deſiſte. And if after ſuch monition geuen, the ſayde partye offende agayne in the ſame or ſuche like, hee ſhall incurre ipſo facto (beſides the penalties aforeſayd) the ſentence of greater excommunication. And neuertheleſſe, if it be a ſcholler that ſo offendeth the ſecond tyme, whatſoeuer he ſhall afterward doe in the ſayd vniuerſitie, ſhall not ſtand in effect. And if he be a doctour, a maiſter, or bacheler, he ſhall forthwith be ſuſpended frõ euery ſchollers act, and in both caſes ſhal loſe the right that he hath in the ſaid College or hall, wherof he is, Ipſo facto: and by the wardẽ: Prouoſt, Maiſter, principall, or other to whõ it appertayneth, he ſhalbe expelled, & a Catholique, by lawful meanes forthwith placed in his place. And if the ſayd wardens, Prouoſtes or Maiſters of Colledges or principalles of halles, ſhalbe negligent concerning the inquiſition and execution of ſuch perſons ſuſpected and diffamed by yͤ ſpace of x. dayes, frõ the time of the true or ſuppoſed knowledge of yͤ publication of theſe preſentes: yͭ then they ſhal incurre yͤ ſentence of greater excommunication: and neuertheleſſe ſhalbe depriued ipſo facto, of all the right which they pretẽd to haue in yͤ colledges, halles &c. and the ſayd Colledges & halles &c. to be effectually vacant: And after lawfull declaration hereof made by them to whom it ſhall appertayne, new wardens, Prouoſtes, Maiſters, or principals, ſhalbe placed in they, places, as hath ben accuſtomed in colledges and halles, being vacant in the ſayd vniuerſitie. But if the wardens themſelues, Prouoſtes, Maiſters or principals aforeſayd, be ſuſpected and diffamed of and concerning the ſayd concluſions or propoſitions, or be fauourers & defenders of ſuch as doe therein offend: and doe not ceaſe, beyng therof warned by vs, or by our authoritie: or by yͤ ordinary of the place: that then by law they be depriued, aſwell of all priuiledge ſcholaſticall within the vniuerſitie aforeſayd, as alſo of their right and authoritie in ſuch Colledge, hall. &c. Beſides other penalties afore mentioned, and that they incurre the ſayd ſentence of greater excommunication.

I would the like were vſed nowe for the baniſhing of papiſtry.

Conſtit. 12.

But if any man in any caſe of this preſent cõſtitution or any other aboue expreſſed: do raſhly and wilfully preſume to violate theſe our ſtatues in any part thereof (although there be an other penalty expreſſely there limitted) yet ſhal he be made altogether vnable and vnworthy by the ſpace of three yeares after, without hope of pardon to obtayn any eccleſiaſticall benefice within our prouince of Caunterbury: and neuertheles according to all hys demerites and the quallitie of hys exceſſe, at the diſcretion of his ſuperiour he ſhalbe lawfully puniſhed.

Conſtit. 13.

And further, that yͤ maner of proceeding herein be not thought vncertayne: conſidering with our ſelues, that although there be a kinde of equallitie in the crime of hereſie and offending the prince, as is auouched in diuers lawes: yet the fault is much vnlike, and to offend the deuine maieſtie requireth greater puniſhment, then to offend yͤ Princes maieſty: And where it is ſufficient (for feare of daunger that might enſue by delayes) to conuince by iudgement the offender of the Princes maieſties proceeding agaynſt hym fully & wholy, with a citation ſent by meſſenger, by letters, or edict not admitting proofe by witneſſes, and ſentẽce definitiue to be: we do ordeine, will, and declare, for the eaſier puniſhment of the offẽders in the premiſſes, and for the better reformation of the church deuided and hurt, that all ſuch as are diffamed, openly knowne, or vehemẽtly ſuſpected in any of the caſes aforeſayd, or in anye article of the catholicke fayth ſounding contrary to good manners: by authoritie of the ordinary of the place or other ſuperior, be cited perſonally to appeare, eyther by letters, publique meſſenger being ſworne: or by edicte openly ſet at that place where the ſayd offender commonly remayneth, or in hys pariſh Church, if he hath any certayne dwelling houſe. Otherwiſe, in yͤ Cathedrall church of the place where he was borne, and in the pariſh churche of the ſame place where he ſo preached and taught: And afterwardes certificate beyng geuen, that the citation was formally executed agaynſt the party cited being abſent and neglecting hys appearaunce it ſhalbe proceeded agaynſt him fully and playnly without ſound or ſhew of iudgement, and without admitting proofe by witneſſes and other canonicall probations. And alſo after lawful informatiõ had, the ſayd ordinary (al delayes ſet apert) ſhall ſignifie declare, and puniſhe the ſayd offender, according to the quallitie of his offence, and in forme aforeſayd: and further, ſhall doe according to iuſtice, the abſence of the offender notwithſtanding.

Eaſier to offend againſt the princes law then againſt the byſhops.

Geuen at Oxford.

¶ who would haue thought by theſe lawes and conſtitutions ſo ſubſtantially founded, ſo circumſpectly prouided, ſo dilligently executed: but that the name and memory of this perſecuted ſort, ſhould vtterly haue bene rooted vp,

& neuer could haue ſtand. And yet ſuch be the workes of the lord, paſſing all mẽs admiratiõ, all this notwiſtanding ſo far was it of, that the number and courage of theſe good men was vanquiſhed, that rather they multiplied dayly & encreaſed. For ſo I finde in Regiſters recorded, that theſe foreſayd perſons, whome the king and the Catholique fathers, did ſo greatly deteſte for herretickes, were in diuers countries of this realme diſperſed and increaſed: eſpecially at London, in Lincolnſhire in Northfolk, in Herefordſhyre, in Shrewſbury, in Callice, and diuers other quarters mo, with whom the Archb. of Caunterbury Thomas Arundell, the ſame time had much ado, as by hys own regiſters doth appeare. Albeit ſome there were, that dyd ſhrinke, many did reuolt and renounce, for daunger of the law. Among whom was Iohn Puruey, whiche recanted at Paules Croſſe, of whom more foloweth (the Lord willing) to be ſaid in the yeare 1421. Alſo Iohn Edward prieſt of the dioces of Lincolne, who reuoked in the greene yard at Norwich, Richard Herbert, and Emmot willy of Lõdon, alſo Iohn Becket, who recanted at London. Item, Iohn Seynons of Lincolneſhyre, who was cauſed to reuoke at Caunterbury. The articles of whom which commonly they did hold, and which they were conſtrayned to abiure, moſt ſpecially were theſe as follow.

John Puruey. John Edward. John Becket. John Seynons abiured.

Their Articles.

The articles.

First, that the office of the holy Croſſe (ordayned by the whole Church) celebrated, doth contayne idolatry.

Item, they ſayd and affirmed, that all they which doe reuerence and worſhip the ſigne of the croſſe, do commit idolatry, and are reputed as Idolaters.

Item, they ſayd and affirmed, that the true fleſhe and bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, is not in the ſacrament of the aulter, after the wordes ſpoken by the prieſt truely pronounced.

Item, they ſayd and affirmed, the ſacrament of the aultar to be ſacramentall bread, not hauing life, but onely inſtituted for a memoriall of Chriſtes paſſion.

Item, they ſayd and affirmed, that the body of Chriſte which is taken on the aulter, is a figure of yͤ body of chriſt as long as we ſee the bread and wyne.

Item: they ſayd and affirmed, that the decree of the prelates and clergie in the prouince of Caunterbury, in theyr laſt conuocation, with the conſent of the king and the nobles in the laſt Parliament agaynſt him that was brent lately in the city of London: was not ſufficient to chaunge the purpoſe of the ſayd Iohn, when the ſubſtance of materiall bread is euen as before in the ſacrament of the aultar, it was no change being made in the nature of bread.

* Item, that any lay man may preach the Goſpel in euery place, and may teach it by his owne authoritie, without the licence of his Ordinary.

*Their article cõmonly was thus, that who ſo taketh vpon him the office of a Prieſte though he haue no cure of ſoules, nor licence of his ordinary, is bounde to preach the Goſpel.

Itẽ, that it is ſinne: to geue any thing to the preaching friers: to the Minorites, to the Auguſtines, to the Carmelites.

Item, that we ought not to offer at the funerals of the dead.

Item, that the confeſſion of ſins to the people, is vnneedefull.

Item, that euery good man (though he be vnlearned) is a prieſt.

Item, that the infant (though he dye vnbaptiſed) ſhalbe ſaued.

Item, that neither the pope, nor the prelate, neither any ordinary can compell any man to ſweare by anye creature of God, or by the bible booke.

Item, that aſwell the Biſhop, the ſimple man, the prieſt, and the lay man, be of like authoritie (as lõg as they liue well.)

Item, that no man is bound to geue bodily reuerence to any prelate.

¶ William Thorpe.

The examination of the conſtant ſeruaunt of God Williã Thorpe.

Thus much briefly being ſignified by the way, touching theſe which haue bene forced in time of this king, to open abiuration: Next commeth to our handes the worthy hiſtory of maiſter william Thorpe, a warriour valiaunt, vnder the triumphant banner of Chriſt, with the proceſſe of his examinations, before the foreſayd Thomas Arundell Archbiſhop of Caunterb. written by the ſayd Thorpe and ſtoryed by his owne pen, at the requeſt of hys frendes as by hys own wordes in the proceſſe hereof may appeare. In whoſe examination (whiche ſeemeth firſt to begin. an. 1407.) thou ſhalt haue, good reader, both to learne and to meruaile. To learne, in that thou ſhalt heare truth diſcourſed and diſcuſſed, with the contrary reaſons of the aduerſary diſſolued. To marueile, for that thou ſhalt beholde here in this man, the meruelous force and ſtrength of the Lordes might, ſpirite and grace, working and fighting in his ſouldiors, & alſo ſpeaking in theyr mouthes, according to the word of hys promiſe. Luke xxi. To the text of the ſtory we haue neither added nor diminiſhed: but as we haue receiued it, copied out, & corrected by maiſter williã Tindall (who had his own handwriting) ſo we haue here ſent it, and ſet it out abroad. Althoughe for the more credite of the matter, I rather wiſhed it in his own naturall ſpeach wherein it was firſt written. Notwithſtanding, to put away all doubt and ſcrouple herein, this I thought before to premoniſhe and teſtifie to the Reader, touching the certaintie hereof, that they be yet aliue whiche haue ſeene the ſelfe ſame copy in his own old Engliſh, reſembling yͤ true antiquitie both of the ſpeach, and of the time: The name of whom as for recorde of the ſame to auouche, is M. whithead, who as he hath ſeene the true ancient copy in the hãdes of George Conſtantine, ſo hath he geuen credible relation of yͤ ſame, both to the printer, & to me. Furthermore the ſayd maiſter Tindall (albeit he did ſomewhat alter & amend the Engliſh therof, and frame it after our manner) yet not fully in al wordes: but that ſomething doth remain, ſauouring of the old ſpeach of that time. what the cauſes were why this good man & ſeruaunt of Chriſt, w. Thorp did write it and pen it out himſelfe, it is ſufficiently declared in hys owne preface, ſet before his booke, whiche here is prefixed in maner as followeth.

This hiſtory firſt ſet forth & corrected by M. W. Tyndall.

¶ The preface of William Thorpe.

The preface.

The Lord God that knoweth all thinges, woteth well that I am right ſorrowful for to write to make known this ſentence beneath written: whereby of mine euenchriſten ſet in high ſtate & dignitie, ſo great blindnes & malice may be knowne: that they which doe preſume of themſelues to deſtroy vices, and to plant in men vertues, neither dreade to offend God, nor luſt to pleaſe him as their workes doe ſhew. For certes the bidding of God and hys law, whiche in the prayſing of his moſt holy name he commaundeth to be known & kept of all men and women, yong and old, after the cunning & power that he hath geuen to them: The Prelates of this lande and their miniſters, wᵗ the couent of prieſts chiefly conſenting to them, enforce them moſt buſily to withſtand and deſtroy the holy ordinaunce of God. And there through, God is greatly wroth and moued to take hard vengeance, not onely vpon them that do the euil but alſo on them that conſent to theſe Antichriſtes limmes: which know or might know, their malice and falſhoode, & dreſſe them not to withſtand their mallice and theyr great pride. Neuertheles, 4. things moueth me to write this ſẽtence beneath.

Gods lawes muſt be knowen and folowed.

Foure cauſes of ſetting forth his examination.

The firſt thing that moueth me hereto is this, yͭ where as it was knowne to certayn frendes, that I came from yͤ priſon of Shrewſbury, and as it befell in deed that I ſhold to the priſon of Caunterbury: thẽ diuers friends in diuers places, ſpake to me full hartily and full tenderly: and commaunded me then, if it ſo were that I ſhould be examined before the Archb. of Cant. that if I might in any wiſe, I ſhould write mine appoſing, and mine aunſwering. And I promiſed to my ſpecial frendes, that if I might, I wold gladly doe their bidding as I might.

The ſecond thing that moueth me to write this ſentẽce is this: diuers frendes which haue heard that I haue bene examined before the Archbyſhop, haue come to me in priſon, and counſayled mee buſily, and coueted greatly that I ſhould doe the ſame thing. And other brethren haue ſent to me, and required on Gods behalfe, that I ſhould write out and make knowne, both mine appoſing & mine aunſwering, for the profite that (as they ſay) vppon my knowledging, may come thereof. But this they bad me, that I ſhould be buſie in all my wits, to go as neare the ſentence and the wordes as I could, both that were ſpoken to me & that I ſpake: Upauẽture this writing may come an other time, before the archbiſhop and hys counſaile. And of thys counſelling I was right glad: for in my conſcience I was moued to doe this thing, & to aſke hitherto the ſpeciall help of God. And ſo then I conſidering the great deſire of dyuers frendes of ſondry places, according all in one: I occupyed all my minde & my wits ſo buſily, that through gods grace I perceaued by theyr meaning and their charitable deſire, ſome profite might come there through. For ſoothfaſtnes and trueth hath theſe conditions: where euer it is impugned, it hath a ſweete ſmell, and thereof commeth a ſweet ſauour. And the more violently the enemies dreſſe themſelues to oppreſſe and to withſtand the trueth, the greater and the ſweeter ſmell commeth therof. And therefore, this heauenly ſmel of Gods word, wil not as a ſmoke paſſe away with the winde: but it will deſcende and reſt in ſome cleane ſoule, that thirſteth thereafter. And thus ſome deale by this writing may be perceaued thorough Gods grace, how that the enemies of the trueth (ſtanding boldly in their malice) inforce them to withſtand the fredome of Chriſtes Goſpell, for which freedome Chriſt became man & ſhed his hart bloud. And therefore it is great pitty & ſorrow: yͭ many men & women do their own weyward will nor buſy thē not to know nor to do yͤ pleaſant wil of God.

The 2. cauſe.

Truth leaueth alwayes a ſweet ſmel behinde it.

Godly counſell geuen if it may be followed.

The men & women that heare the truth and ſouthfaſtnes, and heare or know of this (perceauing what is nowe in yͤ churche) ought here through, to be the more moued in all their wits, to able them to grace, & to ſet leſſer price by themſelues, that they without tarieng: forſake wilfully & bodely all the wretchednes of this life, ſince they know not how ſoon, nor whē, nor where, nor by whō God wil teach them, & aſſay their pacience.

Perſecution followeth the true Church.

For no doubt, who that euer will liue pittiouſly, that is charitably in Chriſt Ieſu, ſhall ſuffer now here in this life perſecution, in one wiſe or an other. That is, if we ſhalbe ſaued, it behoueth vs to imagin ful buſily: the vility and foulnes of ſinne, and how yͤ Lord God is diſpleaſed therfore: & ſo of this vility of hidiouſnes of ſinne, it behoueth vs to buſy vs in al our wits, for to abhorre and hold in our mind a great ſhame of ſinne euer, & ſo then we owe to ſorrow hartely therfore, and euer fleing all occaſion therof. And then behoueth vs to take vpon vs ſharpe penāce, continuing therin, for to obtayne of yͤ Lord forgeuenes of our foredone ſinnes, and grace to abſtain vs hereafter from ſinne. And but if we enforce vs to do thys wilfully: and in conueniēt time, the Lord (if he will not vtterly deſtroy and caſt vs awaye) will in diuers manners moue tyrantes agaynſt vs: for to conſtrayne vs violentlye to do penaunce, which we would not do wilfully.

The cauſe why perſecution is ſuffered to come

And truſt that this doing is a ſpecial grace of the Lord, & a great token of life & mercy. And no doubt, who euer will not apply him ſelfe (as is ſayd before) to puniſh himſelf wilfully, neither wil ſuffer paciently, meekely, and gladly the rod of the Lord, howſoeuer that he will puniſh him: their wayward willes and their impacience, are vnto them earneſt of euelaſting damnation. But becauſe there are but few in number that do able them thus faythfully to grace, for to liue here ſo ſimply and purely, and without gall of malice and of grudging: herefore the louers of this worlde hate & purſue them that they knowe patient, meek, chaſte, & wilfully poore, hating and fleing all worldly vanities & fleſhly luſts. For ſurely, their vertuous conditions are euen cōtrary to the manners of this world.

The third cauſe.

The third thing that moueth me to wryte this ſentēce is this, I thought I ſhall buſie me in my ſelfe to do faythfully, that all men and women (occupying all their buſines in knowing and in keeping of Gods commaundements) able them ſo to grace, that they might vnderſtād truely the truth, and haue and vſe vertue and prudēce, and ſo deſerue to be lightned from aboue with heauenly wiſedom: ſo that all their words & their workes may be hereby made pleaſant ſacrifice vnto the Lord God: and not onely for helpe of their own ſoules, but alſo for edification of holy Church

Edification of other, neceſſary to be conſidered.

For I doubt not: but all they that will apply them to haue this foreſayd buſines, ſhall profite ful mekill both to frēds & foes. For ſome enemies of the truth, through the grace of God, ſhall through charitable folkes be made aſtonied in their conſcience, and peraduenture conuerted from vices to vertues: and alſo, they that labour to know and to keep faythfully the biddinges of God, and to ſuffer paciently all aduerſities, ſhall hereby comfort many frendes.

The 4. cauſe.

And the fourth thing that moueth me to write this ſētēce is this: I knowe by my ſodein & vnwarned appoſing and aunſwering, that all they that will of good hart wͭout faining, able themſelues wilfully & gladly after theyr cunning and their power, to follow chriſt paciently, traueling buſily, priuily, and apertly in worke and in word, to withdraw whom ſoeuer that they may from vices, planting in them (if the may) vertues, comforting them & furtheryng them that ſtand in grace: ſo that therwith they be not born vp in vaine glory, through preſumption of theyr wiſdome nor inflamed with any worldly proſperitie: but euer meek and pacient: purpoſing to abide ſtedfaſtly in yͤ wil of God, ſuffering wilfully and gladly without any grutching whatſoeuer rod the Lord wil chaſtiſe them with: that then, thys good Lord will not forget to comfort al ſuch men and women in all their tribulations, & at euery poynt of temptation that any enemy purpoſed for to doe agaynſt them. To ſuch faithfull louers ſpecially, & pacient followers of chriſt the Lord ſendeth by his wiſedome frō aboue, them which the aduerſaries of the truth, may not know nor vnderſtād. But through their old and new vnſhamefaſt ſinnes, thoſe tyrantes and enemies of ſouthfaſtnes, ſhalbe ſo blinded & obſtinate in euill, that they ſhall weene themſelues to doe pleaſant ſacrifices vnto the Lorde God in their malicious and wrongfull purſuing and deſtroying of innocent mens and womens bodyes: which men & women, for theyr vertuous liuing, and for their true knowledging of the truth and theyr pacient wilfull and glad ſuffering of perſecution for righteouſnes, deſerue through the grace of God, to be heyres of the endleſſe bleſſe of heauen.

The aſſiſtance of God neuer fayleth thē that are perſecuted.

And for the feruent deſire and the great loue that theſe men haue, as to ſtand in ſouthfaſtnes and witnes of it: though they be ſodeinly & vnwarnedly brought foorth to be apoſed of their aduerſaries: the holy Ghoſt yet that moueth and ruleth them thorough his charitie, will in that houre of theyr aunſwering ſpeake in them and ſhewe hys wiſedome: that all theyr enemies ſhall not agayn ſay, nor agaynſt ſtand, lawfully.

And therfore, al they that are ſtedfaſt in yͤ fayth of God yea, which through diligent keeping of his commaundementes, & for theyr pacient ſuffering of whatſoeuer aduerſitie that commeth to them, hope ſurely in his mercy, purpoſing to ſtand cōtinually in perfect charitie. For thoſe mē and womē, dred not ſo the aduerſities of this life, that they wil feare (after their cunning and their power) to knowledge prudently the truth of gods word, when, where, and to whom they thinke their knowledging may profite. Yea and though therfore perſecution come to them in one wiſe or an other, certes they paciently take it, knowing theyr conuerſation to be in heauen. It is an high rewarde and a ſpeciall grace of God: for to haue and enioy the euerlaſting inheritance of heauen, for the ſuffering of one perſecution in ſo ſhort time as is the terme of this life. For loe, this heuenly heritage & endles reward: is the Lord God hymſelfe which is the beſt thing that may be. This ſētence witneſſeth the Lord God himſelfe where as he ſayd to Abrahā I am thy meede: And as the Lord ſayd: he was and is the meede of Abraham: ſo he is of all his other ſaynts. This moſt bleſſed and beſt meede, he graunt to vs all for his holy name, that made vs of naught, and ſent his onely moſt deare worthy ſonne, our Lorde Ieſu Chriſt for to redeeme vs with his moſt precious hart bloud. Amen.

✤ The examination of William Thorpe, penned with hys owne hand.

Examinatiō of William Thorpe before Tho. Arundell Archb.

Knowne be it to al men, that read or heare this writing that on the ſonday next after the feaſt of S. Peter: that we call Lammeſſe: in the yeare of our Lord. 1407. I William Thorpe being in priſon in the Caſtle of Saltwoode, was brought before Tho. Arundel Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Chauncellor then of Englande. And when that I came to him: he ſtode in a great chamber and much people about him: and when that he ſaw me, he went faſt into a cloſit bidding all ſeculer men yͭ followed hym to go forth from him ſoone, ſo that no man was left than in that cloſet but the Archbiſhop himſelfe and a Phiſitian yͭ was called Malueren, perſon of S. Dunſtanes in London, & other two perſons vnknowne to me which were miniſters of yͤ law. And I ſtanding before them, by and by the Archbiſh. ſayd to me: william, I know well that thou haſt this xx. winters & more, traueiled about buſily in the north cōtry and in other diuers countryes of England, ſowing about falſe doctrine, hauing great buſineſſe if thou might with thine vntrue teaching and ſhrewd will, for to infect & poyſō all this land.

Loyteryng prelates, cānot abyde trauellyng preachers.

But through the grace of God thou art now withſtanded & brought into my ward, ſo that I ſhall now ſequeſter thee from thine euill purpoſe, and let thee to enuenime the ſheep of my prouince. Neuertheles S. Paul ſayth: If it may be, as much as in vs is, we ought to haue peace wͭ all men.

The grace of God and of my Lord of Cant. be 2. thinges.

Therfore william, if yͧ wilt now meekly and of good hart, without any feyning, kneele downe and lay thy hand vpō a booke and kiſſe it, promiſing faythfully as I ſhall here charge thee, yͭ thou wilt ſubmit thee to my correction, & ſtād to myne ordinaunce, & fulfill it duely by all thy cūning and power, thou ſhalt yet find me gracious vnto thee.

Your ordinaunce, and why not to Gods ordinance if it pleaſe your grace?

Then ſayd I to the archbiſhop. Syr, ſince ye deme me an hereticke & out of beleue, will ye geue me here audience to tell my beleue. And he ſayd, yea tell on. And I ſayde. I beleue that there is not but one God almighty, and in this Godhead, and of this Godhead, are three perſons, that is, the father, the ſonne, and the ſothfaſt holye Ghoſt. And I beleue, that all theſe three perſons are euen in power and in cunning, and in might, full of grace and of all goodnes. For what ſoeuer that the father doth or can or will, that thing alſo the ſonne doth and can and will: and in all theyr power, cunning and will, the holy Ghoſt is equall to the father and to the ſonne.

Ouer this I beleue, that through counſell of this moſt bleſſed Trinity, in moſt cōuenient time before ordeined for the ſaluation of mankinde, the ſecond perſon of this Trinity, was ordeined to take the forme of mā, that is, the kinde of mā. And I beleue, that this ſecōd perſon our Lord Jeſu Chriſt, was conceiued through the holy ghoſt, in ẏ wombe of the moſt bleſſed virgin Mary, without mans ſeed. And I beleue, that after 9. monethes Chriſt was borne of this moſt bleſſed virgine, without any payne or breaking of the cloſter of her wombe, and without filth of her virginity.

And I beleue, that Chriſt our Sauiour was Circumciſed in the eight day after his birth, in fulfilling of the law, and his name was called Jeſus, which was ſo called of ẏ Angel, before that he was conceiued in the wombe of Mary his mother.

And I beleue, that Chriſt, as he was about xxx. yeare olde, was Baptiſed in the floud of Jordane of John Baptiſt: and in the likenes of a Doue the holy Ghoſt deſcēded there vpon him, & a voyce was heard from heauen, ſaying: Thou art my welbeloued ſonne, in thee I am full pleaſed.

And I beleue, that Chriſt, was moued then by the holy ghoſt, for to go into deſert, and there he faſted 40 dayes & 40. nightes without bodely meat and drink. And I beleue that by and by after his faſting, when the manhood of Chriſt hūgred, the fiend came to him, and tempted him in glottony, in vayne glory, and in couetiſe: but in all thoſe temptations, Chriſt concluded the fiend, and withſtood him. And then without tarying, Jeſu began to preach and to ſay vnto the people: do ye penaunce, for the Realme of heauen is now at hand.

I beleue that Chriſt in all his time here liued moſt holily, and taught the will of his father moſt truly: and I beleue that he ſuffered therfore, moſt wrongfully, greateſt repriefes and deſpiſinges.

And after this, when Chriſt woulde make an end here of this tēporal life, I beleue that in the day next before that he would ſuffer paſſiō in the morne: In forme of bread and of wine, he ordeined the Sacrament of his fleſh and hys bloud, that is, his owne precious body, & gaue it to his Apoſtles for to eat: cōmaunding them, and by them all their after commers, that they ſhould do it in this forme that he ſhewed to them, vſe themſelues, and teach and comō forth to other men and womē this moſt worſhipfull holyeſt ſacrament, in mindfulnes of his holyeſt liuing, & of his moſt true preaching, & of his wilfull and patient ſuffering of the moſt paynefull paſſion.

And I beleue, that thys Chriſt our Sauiour, after that he had ordeined this moſt worthy Sacrament of his own precious body: he wēt forth wilfully agaynſt his enemies, and he ſuffered them moſt paciently to lay their hands moſt violently vpō him, and to binde him, and to lead him forth as a theefe, & to ſcorne him, and buffet him, and all to blow or file him with their ſpittinges. Ouer this, I beleue, that Chriſt ſuffered moſt meekly and paciently his enemies, for to ding out with ſharp ſcourges the bloud ẏ was betwene his ſkinne and his fleſh: yea without grudging Chriſt ſuffered the cruell Jewes to crowne him with moſt ſharpe thornes, and to ſtrike him with a reede. And after, Chriſt ſuffered wicked Jewes to draw him out vpon the croſſe, & for to nayle him thereupon hand and foote. And ſo through his pitifull nayling, Chriſt ſhed out wilfully for mans life, the bloud that was in his vaynes. And then Chriſt gaue wilfully his ſpirit into ẏ hāds or power of his father, & ſo, as he would, & whē he would, chriſt died wilfully for mās ſake vpon the croſſe. And notwithſtāding that Chriſt was wilfully, paynefully, & moſt ſhamefully put to death, as to the world: there was left bloud and water in his hart as before ordeined, that he would ſhedd out this bloud & this water for mās ſaluation. And therefore he ſuffred ẏ Jewes to make a blinde knight to thruſt him into the hart with a ſpeare, and this the bloud and water that was in his hart, Chriſt would ſhed out for mans loue, And after this, I beleue that Chriſt was taken downe from the croſſe and buried. And I beleue that on the third day by power of hys Godhead, Chriſt roſe againe from death to life. And the xl. day therafter, I beleue that Chriſt aſcēded vp into heauen and that he there ſitteth on the right hand of the father almighty. And the fifty day after this vp going, he ſēt to hys Apoſtles the holy ghoſt, that he had promiſed them before. And I beleue that Chriſt ſhall come & iudge all mankind, ſome to euerlaſting peace, and ſome to euerlaſting paines.

And as I beleue in the father & in the ſonne, that they are one God almighty, ſo I beleue in the holy Ghoſt that he is alſo with them the ſame God almighty.

What is the holy church

And I beleue an holy church, that is, all they that haue bene, and that now are, & alwayes to the end of the worlde ſhalbe, a people the which ſhall endeuour them to know & to keepe the commaundements of God, dreading ouer all thing to offēd God, and louing and ſeeking moſt to pleaſe him. And I beleeue, that all they that haue had & yet haue, and all they that yet ſhall haue the foreſayd vertues, ſurely ſtanding in the belief of God, hoping ſtedfaſtly in his mercyfull doinges, continuing to theyr end in perfect charitye, wilfully, paciently and gladly ſuffering perſecutiōs, by the example of Chriſt chiefly and his Apoſtles, all theſe haue theyr names written in the booke of life.

The true notes of the true church.

Therfore I beleue, that the gathering together of this people, liuing now here in this life, is the holy Church of God, fighting here on earth agaynſt the fiend, the proſperity of the world, and theyr fleſhly luſts. Wherfore, ſeing that all the gathering together of this Church before ſayd, and euery part therof, neither coueteth, nor willeth, nor loueth, nor ſeeketh any thing but to eſchew ẏ offēce of God, & to do his pleaſing will: meekly, gladly, and wilfully, wͭ all mine hart, I ſubmit my ſelfe vnto this holy Church of Chriſt, to be euer buxome & obedient to ẏ ordinaūce of it, & of euery member therof, after my knowledge and power by ẏ help of God. Therfore I knowledge now and euermore ſhal, if God will, that with all my hart and with all my might, I wil ſubmit me onely to the rule and gouernaunce of them, whō after my knowledge, I may perceiue by the hauing and vſing of the beforeſayd vertues, to be members of the holy Church. Wherfore theſe articles of belief and al other (both of the olde law and of the new, which after the commaundement of God any man ought to beleue) I beleeue verely in my ſoule, as a ſinful deadly wretch of my cunning and power, ought to beleue: praying the Lord God for his holy name, for to encreaſe my beliefe, and to helpe my vnbeliefe.

What hereſie in this beliefe, I pray you my Lord?

And for becauſe to the prayſing of Gods name, I deſire aboue all things to be a faithfull mēber of holy church, I make this proteſtatiō before you all foure that are now here preſent, couetting that all men & women that now be abſent, knew the ſame: that is, what thing ſo euer before this time I haue ſayde or done, or what thing here I ſhall doe or ſay, at any time hereafter. I beleeue, that all the olde law and the new law geuen and ordeined by the coūſell of the three perſons of the Trinity, were geuen and written to the ſaluatiō of mankind. And I beleue, that theſe lawes are ſufficient for mans ſaluation. And I beleue euery article of theſe lawes, to the intent, that theſe articles ordeined and commaunded of theſe 3. perſons of the moſt bleſſed trinity, are to be beleued.

The old Teſtament and new.

And therfore to ẏ rule & the ordinaunce of theſe, Gods lawes, meekely, gladly and wilfully, I ſubmit me with all mine hart: that whoſoeuer can or will by authority of gods lawe, or by open reaſon, tell me that I haue erred or nowe erre, or any time hereafter ſhall erre in any article of beliefe (from which inconuenience God keepe me, for hys goodneſſe) I ſubmit me to be reconciled and to be buxum & obedient vnto thoſe lawes of God, and to euery article of thē. For by authority, ſpecially of theſe lawes, I will, thorow the grace of God, be vnited charitably vnto theſe lawes. Yea ſir, & ouer this, I beleeue & admit all the ſentēces, authorities and reaſōs of the ſaynts & doctors, according vnto holy ſcripture, and declaring it truely.

Doctors ſo to be folowed as they folow the word.

I ſubmit me wilfully and meekely to be euer obedient after my cunning and power, to all theſe ſaynts and Doctors, as they are obedient in worke and in word to God & to his law, and further not (to my knowledge) not for any earthly power, dignitye or ſtate, thorow the helpe of God. But ſir I pray you tell me, if after your bidding, I ſhal lay my hand vpon the booke, to what entent: to ſweare thereby? And the Archby. ſayd to me, yea, wherefore els? And I ſaid to him. Syr a booke is nothing els but a thing coupled together of diuers creatures, and to ſweare by any creature both Gods law and mans law is agaynſt it.

To ſweare by a booke whether it be lawfull.

How, where, and when to ſweare.

But Syr, this thing I ſay here to you before theſe your clerkes, with my foreſayd proteſtation, that how, where when, and to whom, men are boūd to ſweare or to obey in any wiſe after Gods law, and ſaints, and true Doctours, according vnto Gods law: I will thorow Gods grace be euer ready thereto, with all my cunning and power. But I pray you ſir for the charitye of God, that ye will before ẏ I ſweare (as I haue here rehearſed to you) tell me how or whereto, that I ſhal ſubmit me: and ſhew me wherof that ye will correct me, and what is the ordinaunce that ye will thus oblige me to fulfill.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd vnto me: I will ſhortly that now thou ſweare here to me, that thou ſhalt forſake al the opinions which the ſect of Lollordes holde, and is ſlaundered with: ſo that after this time, neither priuilye nor apertly, thou hold any opinion which I ſhal (after thou haſt ſworne) rehearſe to thee here. Nor thou ſhalt fauor no mā nor woman, young nor olde, that holdeth any theſe foreſayd opinions: but after thy knowledge and power, thou ſhalt force thee to wͭſtād al ſuch diſtroublers of holy church in euery dioces, that thou commeſt in: and them that wyll not leaue their falſe and damnable opiniōs, thou ſhalt put them vp, publiſhing them and theyr names, and make thē knowne to the biſhop of the dioces that they are in, or to ỷ biſhops miniſters. And ouer this I will, that thou preach no more vnto the time ỷ I know by good witneſſe & true, that thy conuerſation be ſuch, that thy hart and thy mouth accord truely in one, contraryng all the leud learning that thou haſt taught here before.

☞ And I hearing theſe wordes, thought in my hart, that this was an vnlefull aſking: and demed my ſelfe curſed of God, if I conſented hereto, & I thought how Suſan ſayd: Anguiſh is to me on euery ſide. And in that I ſtode ſtill and ſpake not, the Archbiſhop ſayd to me: Aunſwere one wiſe or other. And I ſayd: Syr, if I conſented to you thus as ye haue here before reherſed to me, I ſhould becom an appealer, or euery biſhops eſpy, ſomoner of al Englād, For and I ſhould thus put vp, and publiſh the names of men and women, I ſhould herein deceiue full many perſons: Yea ſir, as it is likely by the dome of my conſcience, I ſhould herein be cauſe of the death both of men and womē, yea both bodely and ghoſtly. For many men & women that ſtand now in the way of ſaluation: if I ſhould for the learning and reading of theyr beleue, publiſh them therfore vp to Biſhops or to their vnpiteous miniſters, I know ſome deale by experience, that they ſhould be ſo diſtroubled & diſeaſed with perſecution or otherwiſe, that many of thē (I thinke) would rather chuſe to forſake the way of truth thē to be trauailed, ſcorned, ſlādered, or puniſhed, as biſhops and their miniſters now vſe for to conſtrayne men & women to conſent to them.

Behold the popiſh proceedings whereto they tende.

But I finde in no place in holy ſcripture, that this office that ye would now enfeaffe me with, accordeth to any Prieſt of Chriſtes ſect, nor to any other chriſten man. And therefore to do this, were to me a full noyous bond to bee boūdē with, & ouer greuous charge. For I ſuppoſe, that if I thus did, many men and women would, yea Syr, might iuſtly vnto my confuſion ſay to me, that I were a traytor to God and to them: ſince (as I thinke in mine hart) many men & women truſt ſo mikle in this caſe, that I would not for ſauing of my life, doe thus to them. For if I thus ſhould do, full many men & women would (as they might full truely) ſay, that I had falſly and cowardly forſaken the truth, and ſlaundered ſhamefully the word of God. For if I conſented to you to do here, after your will, for bonchefe or miſchief that may befall to me in this life: I deme in my cōſcience, that I were worthy herefore to be curſed of god and alſo of all his Saynts: fro which inconuenience, keep me and all chriſtē people, almighty God now and euer for his holy name. And then ỷ Archbiſhop ſayd vnto me. Oh, thine hart is ful hard indurate as was the hart of Pharao, and the deuill hath ouercomen thee and peruerted thee, & he hath ſo blinded thee in all thy wittes, that thou haſt no grace to know the trueth nor the meaſure of mercye that I haue proferred to thee. Therfore, as I perceiue now by ỷ fooliſh aūſwere, thou haſt no wil to leaue thine old errors.

No maruell why: for Chriſt and Antichriſt how can they agree.

It is prety when Pharao iudgeth Moſes harde hearted. Where learned you my Lord to call your brother Racha.

But I ſay to thee leud loſell, other quickly cōſent thou to mine ordinance and ſubmit thee to ſtand to my decrees: or by S. Thomas, thou ſhalt be diſgraded, and follow thy felow in Smithfield. And at this ſaying, I ſtode ſtill and ſpake not, but I thought in mine hart that God did to me great grace, if he would of his great mercy bring me to ſuch an end. And in mine hart I was nothing afrayd with this manaſſing of the Archbiſhop. And I conſidered there two things in him. One, that he was not yet ſorowfull for that he had made william Sawtre wrongfully to be burnt: & as I conſidered, that ỷ Archbiſhop thirſted yet after more ſheding out of innocēt bloud. And faſt therfore I was moued in al my wittes, for to hold the Archbiſhop neither for Prelate nor for Prieſt of God. And for that mine inward man was thus altogether departed from the Archbiſhop, me thought I ſhoulde not haue any dread of him. But I was right heauy and ſorowfull, for that there was no audience of ſecular men by: but in my hart I prayd the Lorde God, for to comfort me and ſtrength me agaynſt them that there were agaynſt the ſothfaſtneſſe. And I purpoſed to ſpeake no more to the Archbiſhop and his clerkes then me need behoued: and all thus I prayde God for his goodneſſe to geue me then and alway grace to ſpeake, with a meke & an eaſy ſpirit: and whatſoeuer thing that I ſhould ſpeake, that I might thereto haue true authorities of Scriptures or open reaſon. And for that I ſtood thus ſtill and nothing ſpake, one of the Archbiſhops Clerks ſayd vnto me. what thing muſeſt thou? Doe thou as my Lord hath now commaunded to thee here.

He meaneth Gods Martyr Williā Sautrey.

And yet I ſtood ſtill and aunſwered him not: And then ſoone after the Archbiſhop ſayd to me: Art thou not yet bethought, whether thou wilt doe as I haue ſayde to thee? And I ſaid then to him: Syr, my father and my mother, on whoſe ſoules god haue mercy (if it be his will) ſpent mikle mony in diuers places about my learning, for the intēt to haue made me a Prieſt to God. But whē I came to yeres of diſcretion, I had no will to be Prieſt, and therefore my frends were right heauy to me, and then me thought theyr grudging agaynſt me was ſo paynefull to me, that I purpoſed therfore to haue left theyr company. And when they perceiued this in me, they ſpake ſometime full fayre & pleaſaunt wordes to me: But for that they might not make me to conſent of good hart to be a Prieſt, they ſpake to me full oftentimes very greuous wordes, and manaſſed me in diuers maners, ſhewing to me full heauy cheare. And thus one while in fayre maner, an other while in greuous, they were long time (as me thought) full buſye about me, or I conſented to them to be a Prieſt.

The order and maner of his bringing vp.

But at the laſt, when in this matter they would no longer ſuffer mine excuſations, but either I ſhould conſent to them, or I ſhoulde euer beare their indignation, yea, theyr curſe (as they ſayde.) Then I ſeeing this, prayd them that they would geue me licence for to go to them that were named wiſe Prieſtes, and of vertuous conuerſation to haue theyr counſell, and to know of them the office & the charge of Prieſthood. And hereto, my father and my mother cōſented full gladly, & gaue me their bleſſing & good leaue to go, and alſo mony to ſpend in this iourny. And ſo that I wēt to thoſe Prieſtes whom I heard to be of beſt name, and of moſt holy liuing, and beſt learned, & moſt wiſe of heauenly wiſedome: and ſo I communed with them vnto the time that I perceiued by their vertuous and cōtinuall occupations, that their honeſt and charitable workes paſſed theyr fame which I heard before of them.

Wherfore Syr, by the example of the doctrine of them: and ſpecially for the godly and innocent workes whiche I perceiued then of them, and in them: After my cunning and power, I haue exerciſed me then and in this time, to know perfectly gods law, hauing a will and deſire to liue therafter, which willeth that all men and women ſhould exerciſe themſelues faythfully there about. If than Syr, either for pleaſure of thē that are neither ſo wiſe nor of ſo vertuous conuerſation to my knowledge, nor by cōmon fame to any other mens knowledge in this land, as theſe men were of whom I tooke my counſell & information: I ſhould now forſake thus ſodenly and ſhortly, and vnwarned, all ỷ learning that I haue exerciſed my ſelfe in this xxx. winter and more, my cōſcience ſhould euer be herewith out of meaſure vnquieted: and as Syr I know wel, that many mē & women ſhould be there through greatly troubled & ſclaundered: And as I ſayd ſir, to you before, for mine vntruth and falſe cowardnes, many a one ſhould be put into full great reproofe, yea ſir, I dread that many one (as they might thē iuſtly) would curſe me full bitterly: and ſir I feare not, but the curſe of God, which I ſhoulde deſerue herein, woulde bring me to a full euil end, if I continued thus. And if thorow remorſe of conſcience I repented me any time, returning into the way, which you do your diligēce to cōſtraine me now to forſake: yea ſir, all the biſhops of this lād, with full many other Prieſts, would defame, me, and purſue me as a relapſe: & they ỷ nowe haue (though I be vnworthy) ſome confidence in me, hereafter woulde neuer truſt to me, though I could teach & liue neuer ſo vertuouſly, more then I can or may. For if after your coūſell I left vtterly all my learning, I ſhould hereby firſt wound & defile mine owne ſoule, and alſo I ſhould here through, geue occaſiō to many men and womē of full ſore hurting, yea ſir as it is likely to me, if I cōſented to your will: I ſhould herin by mine euill example in it, as farre as in me were, ſlea many folke ghoſtly, ỷ I ſhould neuer deſerue for to haue grace of god, to the edifying of his church, neither of my ſelf, nor of none other mans life, and vndone both before God and man.

But ſir, by exāple chiefly of ſome whoſe names I will not now rehearſe, of H. of I. P. and B. and alſo by the preſent doing of Philip Rampingtō, ỷ is now become B. of Lincolne: I am now learned (as many moe hereafter through Gods grace ſhalbe learned) to hate & to flee all ſuch ſclaunder that theſe foreſayd men chiefly haue defiled, principally themſelues with. And in it that in them is, they haue enuenimed all the church of God, for the ſclaūderous reuoking at the croſſe of Paules, of H. P. and of B. and how now Philip Rampingtō purſueth Chriſtes people. And the faining that theſe men diſſemble by worldly prudence, keeping thē cowardly in theyr preaching and communing within the bondes and termes (which without blame may be ſpoken and ſhewed out to the moſt worldly liuers) wil not be vnpuniſhed of God. For to yͤ poynt of truth yͤ theſe mē ſhewed out ſometime, they will not now ſtretch forth their liues. But by example, each one of them as theyr wordes and their workes ſhew, buſy them through their fayning, for to ſclaunder and to purſue Chriſt in his members, rather thē they will be purſued.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd to me: Theſe men the which thou ſpeakeſt of now, were fooles and herretickes, whē they were counted wiſe men of thee and other ſuch loſels. But now they are wiſe men, though thou and ſuch other deme them vnwiſe. Neuertheleſſe I wiſt neuer none that right ſayd, that any while were enuenimed with your contagiouſnes, that is, contaminated and ſpotted doctrine.

Happy be they that continue to the ende.

☞ And I ſayd to the Archbiſhop: Syr, I thinke well that theſe mē & ſuch other are now wiſe as to this world: But as theyr wordes ſounded ſometime, and their workes ſhewed outwardly, it was like to moue me that they had earneſt of the wiſedome of God, & that they ſhould haue deſerued mikle grace of God, to haue ſaued their owne ſoules & many other mens, if they had continued faythfully in wilfull pouerty, & in other ſimple vertuous liuing: and ſpecially if they had with theſe foreſaid vertues continued in their buſie fruitful ſowing of Gods word: as to many mēs knowledge they occupyed them a ſeaſon in all their wits, ful buſily to know the pleaſaunt will of God, trauelling all their members full buſily for to do thereafter, purely and chiefly to the prayſing of the moſt holy name of god, and for grace of edification and ſaluation of Chriſten people. But woe worth falſe couetiſe, and euill counſell and tyranny, by which they and many men and womē are led blindly into an euill end.

Wo worth falſe couetiſe.

¶ Then the Archbiſhop ſayde to me: Thou and ſuch other Loſels of thy ſect, would ſhaue your beardes full neare for to haue a benefice. For by Ieſu, I know none more couetous ſhrewes then ye are, whē that ye haue a benefice. For loe, I gaue to Iohn Puruay a benefice but a mile out of this Caſtle, and I heard more complaints about his couetouſnes for tithes and other miſdoinges, then I did of all men that were aduaunced within my dioces.

pitie of these prelates cannot weare: Couetouſnes ioyned with popiſh

☞ And I ſayde to the Archbiſhop: Sir, Puruay is neither with you now for the benefice that ye gaue him, nor he holdeth faythfully with the learning that he taught and writ before time: and thus he ſheweth himſelfe neither to be hot nor colde, and therfore he and his felowes, may ſore dread, that if they turne not haſtily to the way that they haue forſaken: peraduēture they be put out of the number of Chriſtes choſen people.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayde: Though Puruay be now a falſe harlot, I quite me to him: But come he more for ſuche cauſe before me (or we part) I ſhall know with whom he holdeth. But I ſay to thee: which are theſe holy men and wiſe, of whom thou haſt taken thine information?

A worthy commendation of M. Iohn Wickliffe.

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, Maiſter Iohn Wickliffe was holden of full many men, the greateſt clearke that they knew then liuing, and therwith he was named a paſſing ruely man & an innocent in his liuing: and herefore, great men communed oft with him, and they loued ſo his learning, that they writ it, & buſily inforced them to rule themſelues thereafter. Therfore ſir, this foreſayd learning of M. Iohn Wickliffe, is yet holden of full many men and women, the moſt agreable learning vnto the liuing and teaching of Chriſt & of his Apoſtles, and moſt opēly ſhewing & declaring how the church of Chriſt hath bene and yet ſhould be ruled and gouerned. Therfore, ſo many men and women couet thys learning and purpoſe, through Gods grace, to cōforme their liuing like to this learning of Wickliff. M. Iohn Aſton taught & writ accordingly, and full buſily, where and when, and to whom that he might, and he vſed it himſelfe right perfectly vnto his liues end. And alſo Philip of Rāpington while he was a Canō of Leceſter. Nicholas Hereford, Dauy Gotray of Pakring Monke of Byland and a Maiſter of Diuinitye, and Iohn Puruay and many other which were holden right wiſe men & prudent, taught and writ buſily this foreſayd learning, & cōformed them thereto. And with all theſe men, I was oft right homely & communed with them long time and oft: and ſo before al other men I choſe willingly to be informed of them and by thē, and ſpecially of Wickliffe himſelfe, as of the moſt vertuous and godly wiſe man that I heard of or knew. And therfore of him ſpecially and of theſe men I toke the learning that I haue taught: and purpoſe to liue thereafter (if God wil) to my liues end. For though ſome of thoſe mē be contrary to the learning that they taught before, I wote well that their learning was true which they taught: and therefore with the helpe of God I purpoſe to hold and to vſe yͤ learnyng which I heard of them, while they ſate on Moyſes chayre, & ſpecially while that they ſat on yͤ chayre of Chriſt. But after yͤ workes that they now do, I will not doe with Gods helpe. For they feyne, and hide, & contrary yͤ trueth, which before they taught out playnely and truly. For as I know well, when ſome of thoſe men haue bene blamed for their ſlaunderous doyng: they graunt not that they haue taught amiſſe or erred before time, but that they were conſtrayned by payne to leaue to tell out the ſoth, & thus they chuſe now rather to blaſpheme God, then to ſuffer a while here perſecution bodely, for ſothfaſtneſſe that Chriſt ſhedde out his hart bloud for.

M. Iohn Aſton. Phil. Ramington, Nic. Herford, Dauy Gotray, I. Puruay.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd: That learning that thou calleſt truth and ſothfaſtnes, is open ſlaunder to holy church, as it is proued of holy Church. For albeit, that Wickleffe your author was a great clerke, and though that many mē held him a perfect liuer: yet his doctrine is not approued of holy church, but many ſentences of his learning are damned as they well worthy are. But as touching Philip of Rampington, that was firſt Chanon, and after Abbot of Leiceſter, which is now Biſhop of Lincolne: I tell thee, that the day is commē, for which he faſt the euen. For neither he holdeth nowe, nor will holde, the learning that hee taught, when he was a Canon of Leiceſter. For no byſhop of this land purſueth nowe more ſharpely them that holde thy way, then he doth.

The teſtimony for Wickliffe, out of the mouth of his own aduerſary.

Many ſuch vigils haue our popiſh kalenders.

☞ And I ſayd: Sir full many men and women wondereth vpō him, and ſpeaketh him mikle ſhame, and holdeth him for a curſed enemy of the truth.

Repington became a perſecuter, after he was made byſhop.

¶ And the Archbiſh. ſayd to me: wherfore taryeſt thou me thus here with ſuche fables, wilt thou ſhortly (as I haue ſayd to thee) ſubmit thee to me or no?

☞ And I ſayd: Sir I tell you at one word, I dare not for the dread of God ſubmit me to you, after the tenour & ſentence that ye haue aboue rehearſed to me.

And thus as if he had bene wroth, he ſayd to one of his clerkes. Fetch hether quickly, the certification that came to me frō Shrewſbury vnder the Bailiefes ſeale witneſſing the errors and hereſyes, which this Loſel hath venimouſly ſowne there.

Then haſtely the clarke toke out and layde forth on a cupbord, diuers rolles and writinges, among which there was a litle one, which the clarke deliuered to the Archbyſhop. And by and by the Archbiſhop read this roll conteyning this ſentence.

The third ſonday after Eaſter, the yeare of our Lorde 1407. William Thorpe came vnto the towne of Shrewſbury, and thorow leaue graunted vnto him to preache: He ſayd openly in S. Chaddes church in his ſermon, that the ſacrament of the aulter, after the conſecration, was materiall bread. And that images, ſhould in no wiſe be worſhipped. And that mē ſhould not go on pilgrimages. And that prieſtes haue no title to tithes. And that it is not lawful for to ſweare in any wiſe.

The ſacrament after conſecration materiall bread.

Articles obiected againſt William Thorpe,

¶ And when the Archbiſhop had red thus this roll, he rolled it vp agayne, and ſayd to me. Is this wholeſome learning to be among the people?

Holeſome enough for mans ſoule though not for your kitchyn.

☞ And I ſayd to him: Sir I am both aſhamed on theyr behalf, and right ſorowful for them that haue certified you theſe thinges thus vntruelye: for I preached neuer, nor taught thus priuily nor apertly.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd to me, I will geue credence to theſe worſhipfull men which haue written to me, and witneſſed vnder theyr ſeales there amōg them. Though now thou denyeſt this, weeneſt thou that I will geue credence to thee? Thou Loſell, haſt troubled the worſhipfull communalty of Shrewſbury, ſo that the Baliffes and communalty of that towne haue writtē to me, praying me that am Archbiſhop of Cant. primate and Chancellor of England, that I will vouchſafe to graunt them: that if thou ſhalt be made (as thou art worthy) to ſuffer open iourneſſe for thine hereſies, that thou may haue thy iourneſſe openlye there among them: So that all they whome thou and ſuche other Loſels haue there peruerted, may thorow feare of thy deed be reconciled agayne to the vnity of holy Church. And alſo they that ſtand in true fayth of holy Church, may thorow thy deed be more eſtabliſhed therein. And as if this aſking well pleaſed yͤ Archbiſhop, he ſayd. By my thrift, this harty prayer, and feruent requeſt, ſhall be thought on.

O Shreueſbury, thou haſt a cauſe to repēt thee, in that thou wouldeſt not receiue the truth whē it was offered thee

The Romiſh church muſt be ſtabliſhed, by perſecuting of true preachers.

But certaynely, nother yͤ prayer of the men of Shrewſbury, nor the manaſſing of the Archbiſhoppe made me any thing afrayd. But in rehearſing of this malice, and in the hearing of it, my hart greatly reioyſed, & yet doth. I thank God for the grace, that I then thought, and yet think ſhall come to all the Church of God here thorow, by the ſpeciall mercifull doing of the Lord. And as hauing no dread of the malice of tyrantes, by truſting ſtedfaſtly in the helpe of the Lord, with full purpoſe for to knowledge the ſothfaſtnes, and to ſtand therby after my cunning and power: I ſaid to the Archbiſhop, Sir if the truth of Gods word might now be accepted as it ſhould be, I doubt not to proue by likely euidence, that they that are famed to be out of the fayth of holy Church in Shrewſbury, & in other places alſo, are in the true fayth of holy Church. For as theyr wordes ſound, and theyr workes ſhew to mans iudgement (dreading and louing faythfully God) theyr will, their deſire, ther loue & theyr buſines are moſt ſet to dread, to offend God, & to loue for to pleaſe him in true & faythfull keeping of his cõmaũdementes. And agayne, they that are ſayd to be in the faith of holy Church in Shrewſbury & in other places, by open euidence of their proud, enuious, malicious, couetous, lecherous, and other foule wordes & workes: neither know, nor haue wil to know, nor to occupy their wits truely and effectuouſly in the right fayth of holy Church. Wherefore all theſe, nor none that folow theyr maners, ſhall any time come verely in the fayth of holy church, except they inforce them more truely to come in the way which now they deſpiſe. For theſe men and women that are now called faithfull and holden iuſt, nother know, nor will exerciſe thẽſelfe to know (of faythfulnes) one commaundement of God.

A ſure truſt in Gods truth, cōfoundeth the malice of tyrantes.

Shreusbury, except thou turne frõ thy wicked wayes, thou canſtnot receiue the trueth.

And thus full many men and womẽ now, and ſpecially mẽ that are named to be principall lims of holy church, ſtyrre God to great wrath, & deſerue his curſe for that they call or hold them iuſt mẽ, which are full vniuſt, as their vicious wordes, their great cuſtomable ſwearing, and theyr ſlaunderous and ſhamefull works ſhew openly and witnes. And therfore, ſuch vicious men & vniuſt in theyr own confuſion, call them vniuſt men & womẽ, which after their power and cunning buſy themſelues to liue iuſtly after the cõmaundement of God. And where ſir ye ſay, that I haue diſtroubled the cõminalty of Shrewſbury, & many other men and women with my teaching: If it this be, it is not to be wondred of wiſe men, ſince all the communalty of ẏ City of Ieruſalem was diſtroubled of Chriſtes own perſon, that was very God and man, and moſt prudent preacher that euer was or ſhalbe. And alſo all the Sinagoge of Nazareth was moued agaynſt Chriſt, & ſo fulfilled with ire towards him for his preaching, that the men of the Sinagoge roſe vp and caſt Chriſt out of theyr City, & led him vp to the top of a moũtayn for to caſt him down there headling. Alſo accordingly hereto, the Lord witneſſeth by Moiſes, that he ſhall put diſſention betwixt his people, and the people that cõtrarieth and purſueth his people. Who ſir is he, that ſhall preach the truth of Gods word to the vnfaithfull people, and ſhall let the ſothfaſtnes of the Goſpell, and the prophecy of God almighty to be fulfilled?

Ieruſalem troubled by the preaching of Chriſt.

¶And the Archbiſhop ſayd to me. It foloweth of theſe thy wordes, that thou and ſuch other thinkeſt: that ye do right well for to preach and teach as ye do, without authority of any Biſhop. For ye preſume, that the Lord hath choſẽ you onely for to preach, as faythful diſciples and ſpeciall folowers of Chriſt.

The worde of God ought truly to be preached.

☞And I ſayd: Syr by authority of Gods law and alſo of Payntes and Doctors I am learned to deme, that it is euery Prieſtes office and duty for to preach buſilye, freely & truely the word of God. For no doubt euery Prieſt ſhould purpoſe firſt in his ſoule, & couet to take the order of prieſthood chiefly for to make knowne to the people the word of God, after his cunning and power: approuing his words euer to be true by his vertuous works, and for this intent we ſuppoſe that Biſhops & other Prelates of holy church, ſhould chiefly take and vſe their prelacye, and for the ſame cauſe Biſhops ſhould geue to Prieſtes their orders. For Biſhops ſhould accept no man to Prieſthood, except that he had good wil and ful purpoſe, & were wel diſpoſed, and wel learned to preach. Wherfore ſir, by ẏ bidding of Chriſt, & by the example of his moſt holy liuing, & alſo by the witneſſing of his holy Apoſtles and Prophets, we are bounde vnder full great payn, to exerciſe vs after our cunning and power (as euery Prieſt is likewiſe charged of God) to fulfil duely the office of prieſthood. We preſume not here of our ſelues for to be eſtemed (neither in our owne reputatiõ nor in none other mãs) faythful diſciples, & ſpecial folowers of Chriſt. But ſir, as I ſayde to you before, we deeme this by authority chiefly of Gods word, that it is the chief duety of euery prieſt, to buſy thẽ faythfully to make the law of God knowne to his people, & ſo to commune the cõmaũdement of God charitably, how that we may beſt, where, whẽ, and to whom that euer we may, is our very duety. And for the will & buſines that we owe of due debt to do iuſtly our office through the ſtyrring and ſpeciall helpe (as we truſt) of God, hoping ſtedfaſtly in his mercy: we deſire to be ẏ faythfull diſciples of Chriſt, and we pray this gracious Lord for his holy name, that he make vs able to pleaſe him with deuout prayers, & charitably Prieſtly works, that we may obtaine of him to folow him thankefully.

If this leſſon had bene well folowed, the world had not bene brought to ſuch darknes by blind & dumme prieſtes.

An effectuous prayer, God graunt in all miniſters.

Why hee preached without the byſhops licence.

¶And the Archbiſhop ſayd to me: Lewd loſell, whereto makeſt thou ſuch vayne reaſons to me? Asketh not Saynt Paule, how ſhoulde Prieſtes preache, except they be ſent? But I ſent thee neuer to preache. For thy venemous doctrine is ſo knowne throughout England, that no Biſhop will admitte thee to preache by witneſſing of theyr letters. Why thẽ lewd Idiot, willeſt thou preſume to preach, ſince thou art not ſent nor licenſed of thy ſoueraigne to preache. Sayth not S. Paul, that ſubiects ough to obey theyr ſoueraignes, and not onely good & vertuous: but alſo tiraunts that are vicious?

He anſwereth to the queſtion cõcerning the letter of licence.

☞And I ſayd to the Archbiſhop: Sir, as touching your letter of licence or other Biſhops, which ye ſay we ſhoulde haue to witnes that we were able to be ſent for to preache: we know wel that neither you ſir, nor any other biſhop of this land, wil graũt to vs any ſuch letters of licence, but if we ſhould oblige vs to you, and to other biſhops by vnlefull othes, for to paſſe not the bondes and termes which ye ſir, or other biſhops will limit to vs. And ſince in this matter your termes be ſome to large, & ſome to ſtrait: we dare not oblige vs thus to bee bounden to you for to keepe the termes, which you will limit to vs, as you do to Friers, & ſuch other Preachers. And therefore, though we haue not your letter ſir, nor letters of any other biſhops writtẽ with inke vpon parchmẽt: we dare not therfore leaue ẏ office of preaching (to which preaching, all Prieſts after their cunning and power are boũd: by diuers teſtimonies of Gods law, and great Doctors) without any mention making of Biſhops letters. For as mikle as we haue taken vpon vs the office of Prieſthood (though we are vnworthy thereto) we come and purpoſe to fulfill it with the helpe of God, by authority of his own law, and by witneſſe of great doctors and Sayntes, accordingly hereto truſting ſtedfaſtly in the mercy of God. For that he commaũdeth vs to do the office of Prieſthood, he will be our ſufficient letters and witnes, if we by example of his holy liuing and teaching, ſpecially occupy vs faythfully to do our office iuſtly: yea ẏ people to whom we preach (be they faythfull or vnfaythfull) ſhall be our letters, that is our witneſſe bearers: for ẏ truth where it is ſowne, may not be vnwitneſſed. For all ẏ are conuerted & ſaued by learning of Gods word, & by working there after: are witnes bearers: that the trueth and ſothfaſtneſſe which they heard and did after, is cauſe of theyr ſaluation. And agayne, all vnfaythfull men and women which heard the truth told out to them, and would not do therafter: alſo all they that might haue heard the truth, & would not hear it, becauſe that they would not do therafter.

The inconueniences of ſeeking of the biſhops letter or lycence.

The witnes of the preachers, is the good life of the folowers.

All theſe ſhall beare witnes agaynſt themſelues, & the truth which they woulde not heare, or els heard it & deſpiſed to do therafter, through theyr vnfaythfulnes, is & ſhalbe cauſe of theyr damnation. Therfore ſir, ſince this aforeſayd witneſſing of God, and of diuers Saynts and Doctors, & of al the people good & euill, ſuffiſeth to al true preachers: we thinke that we doe not the office of Prieſthood, if that we leaue our preaching, becauſe that we haue not, or may not haue duely Biſhops letters, to witneſſe that we are ſent of them to preach. This ſentence approueth Saint Paul, where he ſpeaketh of himſelfe, & of faithfull Apoſtles and diſciples ſaying thus. We need no letters of commendatiõ as ſome preachers do, which preach for couetouſneſſe of temporall goods, and for mens prayſing. And where ye ſay Syr, that Paule biddeth ſubiectes obey theyr ſoueraignes, that is ſoth, and may not be denied. But there is two maner of ſoueraignes, vertuous ſoueraignes and vicious tyraunts. Therfore, to theſe laſt ſoueraignes, neither mẽ nor womẽ that be ſubiect, owe to obey in two maners. To vertuous ſoueraignes & charitable, ſubiectes owe to obey wilfully and gladly, in hearing of their good counſel, in cõſenting to their charitable biddinges, and in working after their fruitfull workes.

Two maner of ſoueraignes.

He meaneth prelates that be vnuertuous.

This ſentence Paul approueth where he ſayth to ſubiectes. Be ye mindefull of your ſoueraignes, that ſpeake to you the word of God, & follow you the fayth of thẽ, whoſe cõuerſation you know to be vertuous. For as Paul ſayth, after theſe ſoueraignes, to whom ſubiectes owe to obey in following of the maners: worke beſely in holy ſtudying, how they may withſtand and deſtroy vices, firſt in thẽſelues, and after in all their ſubiectes, and how they may beſt plãt in them vertues. Alſo theſe ſoueraignes, make deuout and feruẽt prayers for to purchaſe grace of God, that they and their ſubiects may ouer all thing, dread to offend hym, and to loue for to pleaſe him. Alſo theſe ſoueraigns to whõ Paul biddeth vs obey, as it is ſaid before, liue ſo vertuouſly: that all they that will liue well, may take of them good example, to know & to keep the cõmaundements of God. But in this foreſayd wiſe, ſubiectes ought not to obey nor to

Two maner of obeying: 1. In folowing their doinges and examples. 2. In ſuffering their wronges.

to be obedient to tyrantes, while they are vitious tyrants, ſince their will, their counſell, their biddinges, and theyr workes are ſo vitious, that they ought to be hated & lefte. And though ſuch tyrantes be maiſterfull and cruel in boaſting and manaſing, in oppreſſions & diuers puniſhinges: S. Peter biddeth the ſeruauntes of ſuch tyrauntes, to obey meekely ſuch tyrantes, ſufferinges paciently their malitious cruelnes. But Peter counſelleth not any ſeruaunt or ſubiect, to obey to any Lord or Prince, or ſoueraign in any thing that is not pleaſing to God.

Wicked rulers are not to be folowed in euill.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd vnto me. If a ſoueraigne byd his ſubiect do that thing that is vitious, this ſouerayne herein is to blame: but the ſubiect for his obedience, deſerueth meede of God. For obedience pleaſeth more to God, than any ſacrifice.

Well reaſoned my lord and lyke a Clarke.

☞ And I ſayd. Samuell the Prophet ſayd to Saule the wicked king, that God was more pleaſed with ẏ obediẽce of his commaundement, then with any ſacrifice of beaſtes. But Dauid ſaith, and S. Paule, and S. Gregory accordingly together, that not onely they that do euill, are worthy of death and damnation: but alſo they that cõſent to euill doers. And ſir, the law of holy Church teacheth in the decrees, that no ſeruant to his Lord, nor childe to the father or mother, nor wife to her huſband, nor monke to his Abbot, ought to obey, except in lefull things, and lawfull.

Obedience not to be geuen, but in things lefull and lawfull.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſaid to me. All theſe alledgings that thou bringeſt forth, are not els but proude preſumptuouſneſſe. For hereby thou inforceſt thee to proue, that thou and ſuch other are ſo iuſt, that ye ought not to obey to Prelats. And thus againſt the learnyng of S. Paule that teacheth you not to preach, but if ye were ſent: of your owne authoritie, ye will go forth and preach, and do what ye liſt.

All is preſumption that ſtãdeth againſt your maiſterfull ambition.

☞ And I ſaide. Syr, preſenteth not euery Prieſt the office of the Apoſtles, or the office of the diſciples of Chriſt? And the Archbiſhop ſayd, yea.

Prieſtes in that they take prieſthood, they are ſent to preach.

Math. 10. Marke vlt. Luke 10.

And I ſayde. Syr, as the x. chapt. of Mathew, and the laſt chapter of Marke witneſſeth: Chriſt ſent his Apoſtles for to preach. And the x. chapter of Luke witneſſeth, that Chriſt ſent his two and ſeuẽty diſciples for to preach, in euery place that Chriſt was to come to. And S. Gregorie in the cõmon law ſaith, that euery man that goeth to prieſthoode, taketh vpon him the office of preaching: For as hee ſayth, that Prieſt ſtirreth God to great wrath, of whoſe mouth is not heard the voyce of preaching. And as other more gloſes vpon Ezechiell, witneſſe: that the Prieſte that preacheth not buſilye to the people, ſhall be partaker of their damnation that periſh through his default. And though the people be ſaued by other ſpeciall grace of God then by the Prieſtes preaching, yet the Prieſts, in that they are ordeined to preach, and preach not, as before God, they are manſlears. For as farre as in them is, ſuch Prieſts as preach not buſily and truely, ſleyeth all the people ghoſtly: in that they withholde from them the word of God, that is life and ſuſtenaunce of mens ſoules. And Saynt Iſydore ſayd, Prieſtes ſhall be damned, for wickedneſſe of the people, if they teach not them that are ignoraunt, or blame not them that are ſinners. For all the worke or buſineſſe of Prieſtes, ſtandeth in preaching and teaching, that they edify all men, as well by cunning of fayth, as by diſcipline of workes, that is vertuous teaching. And as the Goſpell witneſſeth: Chriſt ſayd in his teaching. I am borne & comẽ into this world, to beare witneſſe to the truth, and he that is of the truth, heareth my voyce.

The office of prieſthood, is the office of preaching.

Prieſts that preach not, be ſlayers of the people. Iſidorus.

Doctrine of fayth. Diſcipline of workes.

Then Sir, ſince by the word of Chriſt ſpecially, that is his voyce, Prieſtes are commaunded to preache: whatſoeuer prieſt that it be, that hath not good wil and full purpoſe to doe thus, and ableth not himſelfe after his cunning and power to doe his office by the example of Chriſt and of hys Apoſtles: whatſoeuer other thing that he doth diſpleaſeth God. For loe, S. Gregory ſayth, that thing left, that a man is bound chiefly to do, whatſoeuer other thing that a man doth: it is vnthankfull to the holy ghoſt: and therfore ſayth Lincolne. The Prieſt that preacheth not the word of God, though he be ſeene to haue none other defaulte, he is Antichriſt and Sathanas, a night theefe, and a day theefe, a ſleyer of ſoules, and an aungel of light turned into darckenes. Wherefore Syr, theſe authoritye and other well conſidered, I deme my ſelfe damnable, if I either for pleaſure or diſpleaſure of any creature, apply me not diligẽtly to prech the word of God. And in the ſame damnation I deeme all thoſe Prieſtes, which of good purpoſe and will, enforce thẽ not buſily to do thus, & alſo all them that haue purpoſe or will to let any Prieſt of this buſines.

Prieſts not onely ſent to preach, but cõmanded to preach.

Gregorius. Lincolnienſis.

Whatſoeuer a man doth leauing that vndone which hee is chiefly bound to do, is ſinne.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayde to thoſe 3. Clerkes that ſtoode before him. Lo Syrs, this is the maner and buſines of this Loſell and ſuch other, to picke out ſuch ſharpe ſentences of holy Scripture and Doctours, to mayntayne theyr ſect & lore agaynſt the ordinaunce of holy Church. And therefore Loſell, it is thou that coueteſt to haue agayne the Pſalter that I made to be taken frõ thee at Caunterbury, to record ſharpe verſes agaynſt vs. But thou ſhalt neuer haue that Pſalter, nor none other booke, till that I know ẏ thy hart & thy mouth accord fully, to be gouerned by holy Church.

Yet this byſhop plucketh him not by the beard, nor burneth not of his hand, as Boner did.

Holychurch

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, all my will and power is, & euer ſhal be (I truſt to God) to be gouerned by holy Church.

2. Partes of the Church.

¶ And the Archbiſhop aſked me, what was holy Church.

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, I tolde you before, what was holye Church. But ſince ye aſke me this demaund: I call Chriſt and his Saintes holy Church.

¶ And the Archbiſhoppe ſayd vnto me. I wote well that Chriſt and his Saintes are holy Churche in heauen, but what is holy Church in earth?

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, though holy Churche be euery one in charity, yet it hath two partes. The firſt and pricipall part, hath ouercomen perfectly all the wretchedneſſe of this life, and raigneth ioyfully in heauen with Chriſt. And the other part is here yet in earth, buſily & continually fighting day and night agaynſt temptations of the fiend: forſaking and hating the proſperity of this world, diſpiſing and withſtãding theyr fleſhly luſtes, which onely are the pilgrimes of Chriſt, wandring toward heauen by ſtedfaſt fayth & groũded hope, and by perfect charity. For theſe heauenly pilgrimes, may not, nor will not, be letted of their good purpoſe, by the reaſõ of any doctors diſcording from holy ſcripture, nor by the floudes of any tribulation temporall, nor by the wind of any pride, of boaſt, or of manaſing of any creature: For they are all faſt grounded vpon the ſure ſtone Chriſt, hearing his word and louing it, exerciſing them faithfully and continually in all their wittes to do therafter.

And the Archbiſhop ſayd to his Clerkes. See ye not how his hart is indurate, and how he is trauelled with the deuill occupying him thus buſily to alledge ſuch ſentences to mayntaine his errours and hereſies? Certayne, thus he would occupy vs here all day, if we would ſuffer him.

One of the clerkes aunſwered, Sir, he ſayd right now that this certification that came to you from Shrewſbury, is vntruely forged agaynſt him. Therefore ſir, appoſe you him now, we heare in all ẏ points which are certified againſt him, & ſo we ſhall heare of his own mouth his anſweres, and witneſſe them.

Well helpt forward M. Clark.

And the Archb. took the certification in his hand, & looked theron a while, and then he ſayd to me.

Loe here it is certified againſt thee by worthy men and faithfull of Shrewſbury, that thou preachedſt there openly in S. Chads church: that the Sacramẽt of the aultar was material bread after the conſecratiõ, what ſayſt thou? was this truely preached?

The foreſayd articles renued againſt Thorpe.

☞ And I ſayd: Sir, I tell you truly ẏ I touched nothing therof the ſacrament of ẏ aultar, but in this wiſe, as I will with Gods grace tel you here. As I ſtood there in the pulpit, buſiyng me to teach the commaundemẽt of God: there knilled a ſacring bel, & therfore mickle people turned away haſtily, and with noyſe ran fro towardes me. And I ſeing this, ſayd to them thus: Good men ye were better to ſtand here ſtill and to heare Gods word. For certes the vertue & the mede of the moſt holy Sacrament of the aultar ſtãdeth mikle more in the beliefe therof ẏ ye ought to haue in your ſoule, thẽ it doth in the outward ſight therof. And therfore, ye were better to ſtand ſtill quietly to heare gods word, becauſe that through ẏ hearing therof, mẽ come to very true belief. And otherwiſe ſir, I am certaine I ſpake not there, of the worthy ſacrament of the aultar.

The vertue of the ſacrament ſtandeth in the beliefe, more then in the outward ſigne.

¶ And the Archb. ſayd to me: I beleeue thee not whatſoeuer thou ſayſt, ſince ſo worſhipful mẽ haue witneſſed thus agaynſt thee. But ſince thou denieſt that thou ſayedſt thus there, what ſayſt thou now? Reſteth there after the conſecration in the hoſt, materiall bread or no?

Material bread.

☞ And I ſayd: ſir I know in no place in holy Scripture where this terme materiall bread is written: and therfore ſir, whẽ I ſpeak of this matter, I vſe not to ſpeake of materiall bread.

¶ Then the Archb. ſayd to me: How teacheſt thou men to beleue in this ſacrament?

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, as I beleeue my ſelfe, ſo I teach other men.

¶ He ſayd, tell out playnely thy beliefe thereof.

☞ And I ſayd with my proteſtation: Sir, I beleeue that the night before that Chriſt Ieſu woulde ſuffer (wilfully) paſſiõ for mankind on the morne after: he took bread in his holy and moſt worſhipfull hands, lifting vp his eyes, and giuyng thankes to God his father, bleſſed this bread and brake it, and gaue it to his diſciples, ſaying to them: Take and eate of this all you, this is my body. And that this is & ought to be all mens beliefe, Mathew, Marke, Luke and Paule witneſſeth. Other beliefe Sir I haue none, nor wil haue, nor teach: for I beleue, that this ſuffiſeth in this matter. For in this beliefe with Gods grace I purpoſe to liue and dye, knowledging as I beleue and teach other men to beleue that the worſhipfull Sacrament of the aultar, is the Sacrament of Chriſtes fleſh and his bloud, in forme of bread and of wine.

¶ And the Archb. ſayd to me. It is ſooth that this Sacrament is very Chriſtes body in forme of bread. But thou & thy ſect teacheſt it to be ſubſtance of bread. Thinke you this true teaching?

☞ And I ſayd: Neither I, nor any other of the ſect that ye damne, teach any otherwiſe then I haue tolde you, nor beleue otherwiſe to my knowing. Neuertheles ſir, I aſke of you for charity, that ye will tell me here playnly, how ye ſhall vnderſtand the text of Saint Paule, where he ſayth thus: This thing fele you in your ſelf that is in Chriſt Ieſu, while he was in the forme of god. Sir, calleth not Paul here the forme of God, the ſubſtance or kinde of God? Alſo ſir, ſayth not the church in the houres of ẏ moſt bleſſed virgin accordingly hereto, where it is writtē thus: Thou author of health remember, that ſometime thou tooke of ẏ vndefiled virgine, the forme of our body. Tell me for charitye therefore, whether the forme of our body, be called here the kinde of our body or no?

The papiſtes haue none other defence for thē but onely the Church.

¶ And the Archb. ſayde to me: wouldeſt thou make me to declare this text after thy purpoſe, ſince the Church nowe hath determined: that there abideth no ſubſtaunce of bread after the conſecration, in the ſacrament of the aultar? Beleueſt thou not this ordinaunce of the church?

Euery ordinance of Churchmen byndeth not our fayth.

☞ And I ſayd: Sir, whatſoeuer Prelates haue ordeyned in the Church, our beliefe ſtandeth euer whole. I haue not heard, that the ordinaunce of men vnder beliefe, ſhould bee put into beliefe.

¶ And the Archb. ſayd to me: If thou haſt not learned this before, learne now to know that thou art out of beliefe. If in this matter and other, thou beleaueſt not as the holye Church beleueth. What ſay Doctors treating of this Sacrament?

The greateſt Doctors of the church be Apoſtles.

S. Paule calleth it bread.

The Canō of the maſſe calleth it bread.

☞ And I ſayd: Sir, S. Paule that was a great Doctor of holy Church, ſpeaking to the people, and teaching thē in ẏ right belief of this moſt holy Sacrament: calleth it bread ẏ we breake. And alſo in the Canon of the maſſe after the cōſecratiō: this moſt worthy Sacramēt is called holy bread. And euery prieſt in this lād, after that he hath receiued this ſacrament, ſayth in this wiſe: That thing that we haue taken with our mouth, we pray God that we may take it wt a pure and clean mind. That is as I vnderſtand, we pray God that we may receiue throw very beliefe, this holy ſacrament worthely. And Sir, Saint Auguſtine ſayth: that thing that is ſeene, is bread: but that mens fayth aſketh to be informed of, is very Chriſtes body. And alſo, Fulgence an ententife Doctour, ſayth: As it were an errour to ſay that Chriſt was but a ſubſtaunce, that is very man, and not very GOD: or to ſay that Chriſt was very God, and not very man: ſo is it (this Doctour ſayth) an errour to ſay, that the Sacrament of the aultar is but a ſubſtaunce: And alſo Sir, accordingly hereto, in the ſecret of the midde Maſſe on Chriſtmas day, it is written thus: Idem refulſit Deus, ſic terrena ſubſtantia nobis conferat quod diuinum eſt: which ſentence ſir, with the ſecret of the fourth fery, quatuor temporum Septembris: I pray you ſir declare here openly in Engliſh.

S. Auſtē calleth it bread.

The ſecreat of the maſſe on Chriſtmas day, nameth it a terrene ſubſtaunce.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd to me, I perceiue well enough where about thou art, and how the deuil blindeth thee, that thou may not vnderſtand the ordinaunce of holy Church, nor conſent therto. But I commaund thee now, aunſwere me ſhortly: Beleueſt thou that after the conſecratiō of this foreſayd Sacrament: there abideth ſubſtaunce of breade, or not?

My Lord can reuile apace he can declare but a little.

Choke him vp my Lord.

☞ And I ſayd: Sir, as I vnderſtand it is all one to graūt or beleue, that there dwelleth ſubſtance of bread, & to graūt and to beleue that this moſt worthy ſacrament of Chriſtes owne body is accidēt without ſubiect. But Sir, for as mikle as your aſking paſſeth my vnderſtanding, I dare neither deny it nor graūt it, for it is ſchole matter, about whiche I buſied me neuer for to know: & therfore I committe this terme accidens ſine ſubiecto, to thoſe Clerkes which delight them ſo in curious and ſubtle ſophiſtry, becauſe they determine oft ſo difficult and ſtraūge matters, & wade and wander ſo in them from argument to argument, wt pro & contra, till that they wot not where they are, & vnderſtand not thēſelues. But the ſhame that theſe proude Sophiſters haue to yelde them to men, and before men, maketh thē oft fooles and to be concluded ſhamefully before God.

To graunt the reall being of the body without bread, is as much as to graūt the accident to be without the ſubiect.

Againſt proud Sophiſters.

Templum domini.

Templum domini.

¶ And the archb. ſaid to me: I purpoſe not to oblige thee to the ſubtle arguments of clerks, ſince thou art vnable thereto: but I purpoſe to make thee obey to the determination of holy Church.

☞ And I ſayd: ſir, by open euidence and great witneſſe, a M. yeare after the incarnation of Chriſt, the determination which I haue here before you reherſed, was accept of holy Church as ſufficient to the ſaluation of all them that would beleue it faythfully, and worke thereafter charitably. But Sir, the determination of this matter whiche was brought in ſince the fiend was looſed by Frier Thomas agayne, ſpecially calling the moſt worſhipfull Sacramēt of Chriſtes owne body an accident without ſubiect: whiche terme, ſince I know not that Gods lawe approueth it in this matter, I dare not graūt, but vtterly I deny to make this Friers ſentence, or any ſuch other, my beliefe, do with me God what thou wilt.

The church ſtood ſound till the fiend broke loſe.

Tranſubſtantiation brought in by Fryer Tho. Aquin.

¶ And the Archb. ſayd to me: wel, wel, thou ſhalt ſay otherwiſe or that I leaue thee. But what ſayeſt thou to this ſecond point that is recorded agaynſt thee by worthy men of Shrewſbury, ſaying that thou preacheſt there, that Images ought not to be worſhipped in any wiſe.

It is happy he did not flye in his face as Bonner did.

The 2. point touching Images. Thorpe charged with an vntrueth.

☞ And I ſayd: Syr, I preached neuer thus, nor through gods grace I wil not any time conſent to think nor to ſay thus, neyther priuily nor apertly. For lo, the Lord witneſſeth by Moſes, that the thinges which he made were right good, and ſo then they were, and yet they are & ſhalbe good and worſhipfull in theyr kind. And therfore, to the end that God made them to, they are al praiſable and worſhipful, & ſpecially man that was made after the image & likeneſſe of God, is full worſhipfull in hys kinde, yea this holy image that is man, God worſhippeth. And herefore euery man ſhould worſhip other, in kinde, and alſo for heauenly vertues that mē vſe charitably. And alſo I ſay, wood, tin, gold ſiluer, or any other matter that images are made of: al theſe creatures are worſhipful in their kinde, and to the end that God made them for. But the caruing, caſting, & payntyng of an imagery, made within mans hād, albeit that this doyng be accept of man of higheſt ſtate and dignitie, & ordayned of them to be a Calender to leud men, that neyther can nor will be learned to know God in hys word, neyther by his creatures, nor by hys wonderfull & diuers workings: Yet this imagery ought not to be worſhipped in fourme, nor in the likenes of mans craft. Neuertheleſſe, that euery matter the paynters paynt with ſince it is Gods creature, ought to be worſhipped in the kinde, and to the ende that God made and ordayned it to ſerue man.

Man a worſhipfull image of God.

Though mē accept the painting of or caruing of images, yet is it not the right way to learn to ſerue God.

¶ Then the Archbiſhop ſayd to me, I graunt well that no body ought to doe worſhip to any ſuche images for themſelues. But a crucifixe ought to be worſhipped for the paſſion of Chriſt that is paynted therein, and ſo brought there through to mans mind: and thus the images of the bleſſed Trinitie, and of the Virgine Mary Chriſtes mother, and other images of ſayntes, ought to be worſhipped. For loe, earthly kinges and Lordes which vſe to ſend theyr letters enſealed with their armes, or with theyr priuy ſignet to them that are with them, are worſhipped of theſe men. For when theſe men receiue theyr Lordes letters, in whiche they ſee and know the willes and biddinges of the Lords in worſhip of theyr Lordes they doe off theyr caps to theſe letters. Why not then, ſince in Images made wyth mans hande, we may read and knowe many diuers thinges of GOD, and of hys Sayntes, ſhall we not worſhip their images?

The image of the Trinitie.

A ſimilitude of the kings ſeale or letters, to proue the worſhip of image.

☞ And I ſayd, within my foreſaid proteſtation I ſay, that theſe worldly vſages of temporal lawes that ye ſpeak now of, may be done in caſe without ſinne. But this is no ſimilitude to worſhippe Images made by mans hande, ſince that Moyſes, Dauid, Solomon, Baruch, and other ſaints in the Bible, forbid ſo playnely the worſhipping of ſuche Images.

No ſimilitude to be made betwene erthly thinges & ſpirituall, namely, when Gods word doth expreſſe to the contrary.

¶ Then the archbiſhop ſayd to me: Leud loſell: in the olde law before that Chriſt tooke mankinde, was no likenes of any perſon of ẏ trinitie, neither ſhewed to man nor known of man: But nowe ſince Chriſt became man, it is lefull to haue Images to ſhew hys manhoode. Yea though many men which are right great Clerkes & other alſo, held it an errour to paynt the Trinitie: I ſay it is well done to make and to paynt the Trinitie in images. For it is great mouing of deuotion to men, to haue and to behold the Trinitie and other images of ſaints, carued, caſt, & paynted. For beyond the ſea, are the beſt paynters that euer I ſaw. And ſirs I tell you, this is their maner, and it is a good maner. Whē ẏ an Image maker ſhall carue, caſt in molde, or paint any Images, he ſhall go to a Prieſt, & ſhriue him as clean, as if he ſhould then dye: and take penance, and make ſome certayne vowe of faſting or of praying or pilgrimages doing, praying ẏ Prieſt ſpecially to pray for him, that he may haue grace to make a fayre and a deuout Image.

So you ſay my Lorde, but God ſaith cōtrary in his commandemēts.

Painters deuotion & the Popes diuinitie do well agree.

Preparation of the painters to make a faire and a deuout Image.

☞And I ſayd: Sir, I doubt not if theſe paynters that ye ſpeake of, or any other painters vnderſtode truly the text of Moyſes, of Dauid, of yͤ wiſe man, of Baruch, and of other ſaints and doctors: Theſe painters ſhould be moued to ſhriue thē to God wt ful inward ſorowe of hart, taking vpon them to do right ſharpe penāce for the ſinful & vaine craft of painting, caruing, or caſting they had vſed: Promiſing God faithfully, neuer to do ſo after: knowledging openly before al men their reprouable learning. And alſo ſir, theſe prieſts that ſhriue (as you do ſay) painters, & enioine thē to do penance, & pray for their ſpeede, promiſyng to thē helpe of their prayers for to be curious in their ſinful crafts: ſinne herein more greuouſly, then the painters. For theſe prieſts do comfort and geue them counſail to do that thing, which of great pain, yea vnder yͤ pain of gods curſe, they ſhould vtterly forbid them. For certes ſir, if the wonderful working of God, & the holy liuing & teachyng of Chriſt, and of his Apoſtles and Prophetes, were made knowen to the people by holy liuing & true, and buſy teaching of prieſts: theſe thinges (ſir) were ſufficient bookes and Kalenders to know God by, & his Saynts, without any images made with mans hand. But certes, yͤ vicious liuing of prieſts and their couetouſnes, are chiefe cauſe of this errour, and all other viciouſnes that raygneth amōg the people.

The true bookes and Kalenders to know God.

¶Then the Archbiſh. ſayd vnto me, I hold thee a vicious Prieſt and a curſt, and all them that are of thy ſect, for all prieſts of holy church, & all images that moue men to deuotion, thou & ſuch other go about to deſtroy. Loſel, were it a faire thing to come into the church and ſee therin none Image?

A better ſight my Lord, than to ſee blind ſtocks there to be worſhipped.

☞And I ſayd: ſir, they that come to yͤ church for to praye deuoutly to the lord God, may in their inward wittes be the more feruent, that al their outwarde wits be cloſed frō al outward ſeing & hearing, and frō all diſturbance, & lettings. And ſince Chriſt bleſſed thē that ſaw him not bodely, and haue beleued faithfully in him: it ſuffiſeth then to al mē (through hearing and knowing of gods word, and to do thereafter) for to beleue in God, though they ſee neuer images made with mans hand after any perſon of yͤ Trinitie, or of any other ſaint.

The right ſeruice of a Chriſtian.

¶And the Archb. ſaid to me, with a feruent ſpirit: I ſay to thee loſell that it is right wel done to make and to haue an image of the Trinitie, Yea, what ſaiſt thou? is it not a ſtirring thing to behold ſuch an image?

My Lord, your yea, will not anſwere Gods nay.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, ye ſaid right now that in the old lawe or Chriſt toke mākind, no likenes of any perſon of yͤ Trinity was ſhewed to men: wherfore ſir, ye ſaid it was not thē leful to haue images, but nowe ye ſaye, ſince Chriſt is becomen mā, it is leful to make & to haue an image of the Trinitie, & alſo of other ſaints. But ſir, this thing would I learne of you: ſince yͤ father of heauen, yea & euery perſō of yͤ Trinitie was without beginning God almightye, & many holy prophets that were deadly mē, were martired violētly in the old law, and alſo many men & women thē died Confeſſors: why was it not then as leful & neceſſary as nowe to haue made an Image of the father of heauen, and to haue made and had other images of Martirs, prophets, and holy Confeſſors, to haue ben Kalenders to aduiſe men and moue thē to deuotion, as ye ſay that images now do?

Note this ye worſhippers and mainteiners of Images.

¶And the Archb. ſayd: The ſinagogue of the Iewes had not authoritie to approue thoſe thinges as the Church of Chriſt hath now.

The Synagogue of Antichriſt will haue authoritie.

☞And I ſayd: Sir: S. Gregory was a great man in the new lawe, & of great dignity, and as the cōmon law witneſſeth, he commended greatly a Biſhop, in that he forbad vtterly the Images made with mās hand ſhould be worſhipped.

¶And the Archb. ſayd: Ungracious loſell, yͧ ſauoureſt no more truth then an hound. Since at the roode at yͤ Northdore at Londō, at our Lady at walſingam, & many other diuers places in Englād, are many great & prayſable miracles done: ſhould not yͤ images of ſuch holy ſaynts and places, at the reuerence of God & our lady & other ſaintes be more worſhipped then other places and images, wher no miracles are done?

Great miracles done by images, but my Lorde doth not tel by whoſe power.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, there is no ſuch vertue in any imagery, that any images ſhould herefore be worſhipped, wherfore I am certaine that there is no miracle done of god in any place in earth, becauſe that any images made wt mans hād ſhould be worſhipped. And herfore ſir, as I preached openly at Shrewſbury & other places, I ſay now here before you: That no body ſhould truſt that there were anye vertue in imagery made with mans hand, and therfore no body ſhould vow to thē nor ſeeke them, nor kneele to thē, nor bow to them, nor pray to them, nor offer any thing to them, nor kiſſe them, nor enſence thē. For lo the moſt worthy of ſuch images, the braſen Serpent (by Moiſes made, at Gods bidding) the good K. Ezechie deſtroied worthely & thankfully, & al becauſe it was enſenced. Therfore ſir, if men take good heede to the writing and to the learning of S. Auguſtine, of S. Gregory, and of Saint Iohn Chriſoſtome, and of other Saints and doctors, howe they ſpake & write of miracles, that ſhalbe done now in the laſt ende of the world: It is to dreyd, that for the vnfaythfulneſſe of men & women, the Fiende hath great power, for to work many of the miracles that nowe are done in ſuch places. For both men and women delight now more for to heare and know miracles, then they do know Gods worde, or to heare it effectuouſly. wherefore, to the great cōfuſion of all them that thus do Chriſt ſayth: The generation of adulterers requireth tokens, miracles, and wonders. Neuertheles as diuers ſaints ſay, now when the faith of god is publiſhed in Chriſtendome, the word of God ſuffyſeth to mans ſaluation, without ſuch miracles: and thus alſo the worde of God ſuffiſeth to all faythfull men & women, without any ſuch images. But good ſir, ſince the father of heauen that is God in his godhead, is yͤ moſt vnknowen thing that may be, and the moſt wonderful ſpirit, hauing in it no ſhape or likeneſſe, and members of anye deadlye creature: in what likenes or what image may God the father be ſhewed or painted?

Myracles importing worſhip to be done to Images may well be ſuſpected not to come of God.

A Chriſtian man ought not to vow, ſeeke, nor bow, nor pray, nor offer nor kiſſe an Image.

For the vnfaithfulnes of men, the deuill may worke myracles.

The worde of God ſuffiſeth vs to ſaluation, without myracles.

That which is of nature vnknowne, cannot be reſembled by any viſible creature knowne.

¶And the Archb. ſaid: as holy church hath ſuffered the Images of the Trinitie, & al other images to be paynted & ſhewed: it ſufficeth to them yͭ are mēbers of holye church. But ſince thou art a rotten member, cut away from holye church: thou fauoreſt not the ordinaunce therof. But ſince the day paſſeth, leaue we this matter

Holy church of your owne building.

AND then he ſayd to me: what ſayeſt thou to the third point that is certified againſt thee, preaching opēly in Shrewſbury, that pilgrimage is not lefull: and ouer this, thou ſaideſt that thoſe men and women that go on pilgrimages to Canterbury, to Beuerley, to Karlington, to walſingam, and to any ſuch other places, are accurſed and made fooliſh, ſpending their goods in waſte.

The 3. article.

Pilgrimage.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, by this certification I am accuſed to you that I ſhould teach, that no pilgrimage is lefull. But I ſaid neuer thus. For I know that there be true pilgrimages and lefull, and full pleaſant to God: and therfore ſir, howſoeuer mine enimies haue certified you of me, I told at Shrewſbury of two maner of pilgrimages.

Two maner of Pilgrimages.

¶And the Archbiſhop ſaid to me, whom calleſt thou true pilgrimes?

☞And I ſaid: Sir, with my proteſtation, I call them true pilgrimes traueling toward yͤ bliſſe of heauen, which in the ſtate, degree, or order that God calleth them to, do buſie them faithfullie for to occupie all their wits bodelie and ghoſtlie, to knowe truelie, and to keepe faithfullie the biddings of God, hating and fleeing all the ſeauen deadlie ſins, and euerie branch of them: Ruling them vertuouſlie (as it is ſaid before) with all their wits, doing diſcretlie, wilfully, and gladly, all the workes of mercy, bodelie and ghoſtly, after their cunning and power, abling them to the gifts of the holy ghoſt, diſpoſing them to receiue them in their ſoules, and to hold therein, the right bleſſings of Chriſt: Buſieng them to knowe and to keepe, the ſeauen principall vertues, and ſo then they ſhall obteine heere through grace, for to vſe thankefully to God, all the conditions of charitie. And then, they ſhall be moued with the good ſpirit of God, for to examine oft and diligentlie their conſcience, that neither wilfullie nor wittinglie they erre in anie article of beleefe, hauing continually (as frailtie will ſuffer) all their buſines, to dread and to flee the offence of God, and to loue ouer all, and to ſeeke euer to do his pleaſant will. Of theſe pilgrimes I ſaid, what ſoeuer good thought that they any time thinke, what vertuous word that they ſpake, and what fruitfull worke that they worke: Euery ſuch thought, word and worke is a ſtep numbred of God, toward him into heauen. Theſe foreſaid pilgrimes of God, delight ſore when they heare of Saints or of vertuous men and women, how they forſooke wilfully the proſperitie of this life, how they withſtood the ſuggeſtion of the fiend, how they reſtrained their fleſhly luſts, how diſcret they were in their penance doing, how pacient they were in all their aduerſities, how prudent they were in counſeling of men and women, mouing them to hate all ſinne, and to flie them, and to ſhame euer greatly thereof, and to loue all vertues, and to drawe to them, imagining how Chriſt and his followers by example of him, ſuffered ſcornes and ſclaunders, and howe paciently they abode and tooke the wrongful manaſing of tyrantes: How homely they were and ſeruiſable to poore men, to relieue and comfort them bodely and ghoſtly, after

The true pilgrimage is to trauell in heauenly thinges.

Euery good worke, is a good ſteppe to heauen.

The maner and examples of ſaintes.

their power and cunning, and how deuout they were in prayers, how feruent they were in heauenly deſires, and how they abſented them from ſpectacles of vaine ſayings and hearings, and how ſtable they were to let and to deſtroy al vices, and how laborious and ioyfull they were, to ſowe and to plant vertues. Theſe heauenly conditions and ſuch other, haue pilgrimes, or endeuour them for to haue: whoſe pilgrimage God accepteth.

Pilgrimage diſpleaſaunt to God.

Goods euill beſtowed in pilgrimage.

And agayne, I ſayde, as their workes ſhewe, the moſte part of men and women that goe nowe on pilgrimages, haue not theſe foreſaid conditions, nor loueth to buſie thẽ faythfully for to haue. For as I well knowe, ſince I haue full oft aſſayde, examine whoſoeuer will xx. of theſe pylgrimes, and he ſhall not finde three men or women that know ſurely a commaundement of God, nor can ſay their Pater noſter, & Aue Maria, nor their Creede readely in anye maner of language. And as I haue learned & alſo knowe ſomewhat by experience of theſe ſame pilgrimes, tellynge the cauſe, why that many men and women go hether and thether now on pilgrimage: It is more for the health of their bodies, then of their ſoules: more for to haue ryches and proſperitie of this world, then for to be enriched with vertues in their ſoules: more to haue here worldly & fleſhly frendſhip, then for to haue frindſhip of God, and of his ſaints in heauen. For whatſoeuer thinge man or woman doth, the frendſhip of God, nor of any other Saint cãnot be had, wythout keeping of Gods commaundementes. Further, with my proteſtation, I ſay nowe as I ſayde in Shrewſbury, though they that haue fleſhly willes, trauel farre their bodies and ſpend mekel money, to ſeeke and to viſite the bones or Images (as they ſaye they doe) of thys Saint or of that: ſuch pilgrimage going is neither praiſable nor thankful to God nor to any ſaint of God, ſynce in effect, al ſuch pilgrimes diſpiſe God and al his cõmaundements & Saints. For ẏ cõmaundemẽts of God they will nother know nor keepe, nor cõforme thẽ to liue vertuouſly by example of Chriſt and of his Saints. Wherefore ſir, I haue preached and taught openly, and ſo I purpoſe al my life time to do with Gods help, ſaying that ſuch fond people waſte blamefully Gods goods in their vain pilgrimages, ſpending their goods vpon vitious hoſtelars, which are oft vncleane womẽ of their bodies: & at the leaſt, thoſe goods with the which they ſhould do works of mercy after Gods bidding, to poore needy men and women.

The incõueniẽce that commeth by pilgrimage.

Theſe poore mens goods and their liuelode, theſe runners about, offer to riche prieſtes which haue mekill more liuelode then they neede. And thus thoſe goods they waſt wilfully, & ſpend them vniuſtly againſt gods bidding vpon ſtraungers, with which, they ſhould helpe and relieue, after Gods wil, their poore nedy neighbors at home: ye & ouer this folly, oft times diuers men and women, of theſe runners thus madly hether and thither into pilgrimage: borow hereto, other mens goodes, ye and ſometime they ſteale mens goods hereto, and they pay them neuer again. Alſo ſir, I know wel that when diuers men and women wil go thus after their owne wills, and fyndinge out one pilgrimage: they will ordeyne wyth them before, to haue with them both men and women, that can wel ſing wanton ſongs, and ſome other pilgrimes, wil haue with them bagge pipes: ſo that euery town that they come through, what with the noyſe of their ſinging, and with the ſoũd of their piping, and with the iangling of their Caunterbury bels, and with the barkyng out of dogges after them, that they make more noyce, thẽ if the king came there away, wͭ all his clarions, & many other minſtrels. And if theſe men and women be a month out in their pilgrimage, many of them ſhall be an halfe yeare after, great ianglers, tale tellers, and lyers.

Well ſpoken my Lord for Lincolnſhire bagpipes.
And why then blamed Boner Philpot for ſinging in the ſtockes?

¶ And ẏ Archb. ſaid to me: Leud loſel, thou ſeeſt not farre inough in this matter, for thou conſidereſt not ẏ great trauaile of pilgrims: therfore, thou blameſt that thing that is prayſable. I ſay to thee, that it is right wel done, that pilgrimes haue with them both ſingers and alſo pipers: that when one of them that goeth barefoote, ſtriketh his to vpon a ſtone, and hurteth him ſore, & maketh him to blede: it is well done that he or his felow begin thẽ a ſong, or els take out of his boſom a bagpipe, for to driue away wͭ ſuche mirth, the hurt of his fellow. For with ſuch ſolace, the trauayle and wearynes of pilgrymes, is lightly, and merily borne out.

☞ And I ſayd: ſir, S. Paule teacheth men to weepe with them that weepe.

A new found way to grace of the biſhops making.

¶ And the Archb. ſaid, what iangleſt thou againſt mẽs deuotion? Whatſoeuer thou or ſuch other ſay, I ſay that ẏ pilgrimage that now is vſed, is to thẽ that do it, a prayſable and a good meane to come the rather to grace. But I hold thee vnable to know this grace, for thou enforceſt thee to let the deuotion of the people: ſince by authoritie of holye ſcripture, men may lefully haue & vſe ſuch ſolace as ẏ reproueſt. For Dauid in his laſt Pſalme, techeth mẽ to haue diuers inſtruments of muſike for to praiſe therwith God.

Inſtrumẽtes & muſike of the old teſtament, how they are to be applyed and vſed in the new teſtament.

☞ And I ſaide: ſir, by the ſentence of diuers Doctours expoũding the pſalmes of Dauid: that muſike and minſtrelſie ẏ Dauid & other ſaints of the olde lawe ſpake of, ought now nother to be taken nor vſed by the letter, but theſe inſtrumẽts with their muſike ought to be interpreted ghoſtly: For al thoſe figures are called vertues and grace, with which vertues men ſhould pleaſe god, & praiſe hys name. For S. Paul ſayth: al ſuch things befell to them in figure. Therfore ſir, I vnderſtãd, that the letter of this pſalme of Dauid and of ſuch other Pſalmes and ſentences doth ſlay them that take thẽ now litterally. This ſentence as I vnderſtand ſir, Chriſt approueth himſelf, putting out ẏ minſtrels, or that he would quicken the dead damſell.

Orgaynes in the Church.
A fitt compariſon my Lord, & like your ſelfe.

¶ And ẏ Archb. ſaid to me. Leud loſel, is it not lefull to vs to haue Organes, in ẏ church for to worſhip therewithall God? And I ſayd, ye ſir, by mans ordinance: But by ẏ ordinance of God, a good ſermon to ẏ peoples vnderſtãding were mekil more pleaſant to God.

☞ And the Archb. ſaid, that Organes and good delectable ſongs, quickned & ſharpened more mẽs wits then ſhould any ſermon.

The ſaying of Ierome.

¶ But I ſaide: ſir, luſty men & worldly louers, delite and couet & trauail to haue al their wittes quickned & ſharpened wͭ diuers ſenſible ſolace: But al the the faythful louers and followers of Chriſt, haue al their delite to heare gods word, and to vnderſtand it truely, and to worke therafter faithfully and continually. For no doubt, to dread to offẽd God, and to loue to pleaſe him in all things quickneth and ſharpeneth all the wittes of Chriſts choſen people: and ableth them ſo to grace, that they ioy greatly to withdrawe their eares and al their wits and members, frõ al worldly delite and from all fleſhly ſolace. For S. Ierome (as I thinke) ſayth, No body may ioy with this world & raigne with Chriſt.

You ſweare my Lord.

☞ And ẏ Archb. (as if he had ben diſpleaſed wͭ mine aunſwer) ſaid to his clerks. What geſſe ye that this Idiot wyll ſpeak there, wher he hath no dread: ſince he ſpeaketh thus now here in my preſence? Wel, wel, by God thou ſhalt bee ordayned for. And then he ſpake to me al angerly.

The 4. article concerning prieſtes tithes.

WHat ſaieſt thou to this fourth point, that is certified againſt thee, preaching openly & boldly in Shrewſbury, that prieſts haue no title to tithes.

A paradox without Gods word.

A difference to be put betwixt the old law and the new. Prieſtes had the x. part of the tithes geuen to the Leuites.

And I ſayd. Sir, I named there no worde of tythes in my preaching. But more then a month after that I was areſted: there in priſon, a man came to mee into the pryſon, aſking me what I ſayd of tythes. And I ſayd to him. Sir, in this towne are many clerkes and prieſts, of which ſome are called religious mẽ, though many of them be ſeculars. Therefore, aſke ye of them this queſtion. And thys man ſayd to me. Syr, our Prelates ſay, that we alſo are obliged to pay our tithes of all thinges that renue to vs: and that they are accurſed, that withdraw anye part wittingly fro them of their tythes. And I ſayd (ſir) to that man, as wͭ my proteſtation I ſay now before you: that I wonder that any prieſt dare ſay, men to be accurſed, without the ground of Gods word, And the man ſaid, Syr our prieſts ſay, that they curſe men thus by authoritie of Gods law. And I ſaid Sir I know not where this ſentence of curſing is authoriſed now in the Bible. And therefore ſyr, I pray you that ye will aſke the moſt cunning clerke of this town, that yee may know wher this ſentẽce of curſing thẽ ẏ tithe not, is now writtẽ in gods law: for if it were writtẽ there, I wold right gladly be learned wher. But ſhortly this mã would not go fro me, to aſke this queſtiõ, of an other body: But required me there, as I would aunſwer before God, if in this caſe, that curſing of prieſts were lawfull & approued of God? And ſhortly herewith came to my mind the learning of S. Peter, teaching prieſts ſpecially to halowe the Lord Chriſt in their harts: being euermore redy (as farre as in them is) to aunſwer thorough faith and hope to thẽ that aſke of them a reaſon. And this leſſon Peter teacheth men to vſe with a meeke ſpirit & with dread of the Lord. Wherefore ſir, I ſaid to this man in this wiſe. In the old law, which ended not fully, till the time that Chriſt roſe vp againe from death to life: God cõmanded tithes to be giuen to the Leuits, for the great buſines and daily trauaile that perteined to their office. But prieſts, becauſe their trauel was mekil more eaſy & light, then was the office of the Leuits: God ordeined ẏ prieſts ſhould take for their liuelode to do their office, the tenth part of thoſe tithes ẏ were giuen to ẏ Leuits. But now (I ſaid) in the new law, neither Chriſt nor any of his apoſtles tooke tithes of ẏ people

Christ commaundeth almes, not tithes, except tithes be almes.

Tithes by whom and when they were first commaūded in the new law.

Paule hauing power to take, yet vsed it not.

Paule wold not be chargeous, if priestes were couetous than, what be they now?

This rule, with the rule of begging Friers, can not stand togeather nor cõmanded the people to pay tithes, neither to Prieſts nor to deacons. But Chriſt taught the people to do almes, that is, workes of mercy, to poore needie men (of ſurplus, that is ſuperfluous of their temporall goods) which they had, more then thẽm needed reaſonably to their neceſſarie liuelode. And thus (I ſayde) not of tithes, but of pure almes of the people, Chriſt liued and his Apoſtles: when they were ſo buſy in preaching of the word of God to the people, yͭ they might not trauell otherwiſe for to get their liuelode. But after Chriſtes aſcenſion, and when the Apoſtles had receiued the holy Ghoſt: they trauayled wyth their hands, for to get their liuelode, whẽ that they might thus do for buſy preaching. Therefore, by example of himſelfe, S. Paule teacheth al the prieſtes of Chryſt for to trauaile with their hand, when for buſy teaching of the people they might thus do. And thus, all theſe Prieſts whoſe prieſthode God accepteth now, or will accept, or did in the Apoſtles time, and after their diſceaſe: wil do to yͤ worlds end. But (as Ciſtercienſis telleth) in the thouſand yeare of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. 211. yeare, one Pope the x. Gregory ordeined new tithes firſt to be geuen to prieſtes now in the new law. But Saint Paule in his tyme, whoſe trace or example all Prieſtes of God enforce them to follow, ſeing the couetouſnes that was among the people, deſiring to deſtroy the foule ſinne through the grace of God & true vertuous liuing and example of himſelfe: wrote & taught all prieſtes for to follow him as he followed Chriſt, pacyently, willingly, and gladly in hygh pouerty: wherefore, Paule ſayth thus. The Lord hath ordeyned that they that preach the Goſpell, ſhall lyue of the Goſpel. But we (ſaith Paul) that couet and buſye vs to be faythfull followers of Chriſt, vſe not this power. For lo (as Paul witneſſeth afterward) when he was full poore and needy, preaching among the people: he was not chargeous vnto them, but wyth hys handes he trauayled not onely to get his owne lyuing, but alſo the lyuing of other poore and needye creatures. And ſince the people was neuer ſo couetous, nor ſo auarous (I geſſe) as they are nowe: It were good counſell that al prieſts toke hede to this heauenly learning of Paul following him herein wilful pouerty, nothyng chargyng yͤ people for their bodily liuelode. But becauſe that many Prieſts do contrary to Paule in this foreſayde doctrine: Paul biddeth the people take hede to thoſe prieſts that follow him as he had geuẽ them example. As if Paul would ſay thus to the people: Accept ye none other Prieſts then they, that liue after the forme that I haue taught you. For certain, in whatſoeuer dignity or order yͭ any Prieſt is in, if he conforme him not to follow Chriſt & his Apoſtles in wilful pouerty, & in other heauenly vertues, and ſpecially in true preaching of Gods word: though ſuch a one be named a Prieſt, yet he is no more but a prieſt in name, for the worke of a very Prieſt, in ſuch a one wanteth. This ſentence approueth Auguſtine, Gregory, Chriſoſtom, & Lincolne plainly.

Holeſome inough my Lord if your liſt were to fauour it.

But it contarieth not the ordināce neyther of God nor of his worde,

¶ And the Archb. ſaide to me. Thinkeſt thou this wholeſome learning for to ſow openly, or yet priuily among the people? Certein, this doctrine contrarieth plainly yͤ ordynance of holy fathers which haue ordeined, graunted, & licenced prieſts to be in diuers degrees, & to liue by tithes & offrings of the people, and by other dueties.

If prieſtes would not ſlacke in their duetie, they ſhould not lacke in hauing ſufficient.

☞ And I ſaid, ſir, if prieſts were now in meaſurable meaſure & number, and liued vertuouſly, & taught buſilye and truly the word of God, by example of Chriſt & of his apoſtles, without tithes, offrings, & other dueties that prieſts now chalenge & take: the people would geue them freely, ſufficient liuelode.

Fallax argumentum ſecundum, non cauſam vt cauſam.

¶ And a clerke ſaid to me. How wilt thou make this good, that the people will geue freely to prieſtes their liuelode: ſince that now by the law euery prieſt cã ſcarcely cõſtraine the people to geue them their liuelode.

The euill demeanor of the prieſtes, is the cauſe why the people be ſo ſlacke in their tithes.

Prieſtes being content with ſufficiency, and a bare liuing, ought to part the reſidue to the poore.

Prieſtes did ſo than, but our prieſtes doe not ſo now.

☞ And I ſaid. Sir it is now no wonder though the people grudge to geue prieſts the liuelode that they aſke: Mekil people know now, how yͭ prieſts ſhould liue, & howe that they liue contrarye to Chriſt & to his Apoſtles. And therfore, the people is ful heauy to pay (as they doe) their temporal goods to parſons and to other vicares & prieſts, which ſhould be faythfull diſpenſatours of the pariſhes goodes: taking to thẽſelues no more, but a ſcarce liuing of tithes, nor of offrings, by the ordinance of the cõmon law. For whatſoeuer prieſts take of the people (be it tithe or offering, or any other duety or ſeruice) the prieſts ought not to haue thereof no more, but a bare liuing: & to depart the reſidue to the poore men & womẽ ſpecially of the pariſh of whom they take this temporal liuing. But yͤ moſt dele of prieſts nowe waſteth their pariſhes goodes, and ſpendeth them at their owne wil after the world, in ther vain luſts: So that in few places poore mẽ haue duly (as they ſhould haue) their own ſuſtenãce, nother of tithes nor of offrings nor of other large wages & foundations that prieſts take of the people in diuers maners aboue yͭ they nede for nedefull ſuſtenance of meat & clothing. But the poore nedy people are forſaken and left of Prieſts to be ſuſtayned of yͤ pariſhens, as if the prieſts toke nothing of the pariſhens for to helpe the people with.

Whether tithes are to be paid to prieſtes doing not their duetie.

And thus ſir, into ouer great charges of the pariſhens they pay their tẽporal goods twice where once myght ſuffice, if prieſts were true diſpenſatours. Alſo ſir, the pariſhners that pay their temporal goods (be they tithes or offerings) to prieſts that do not their office amõg them iuſtly are parteners of euery ſinne of thoſe Prieſts: becauſe that they ſuſtaine thoſe prieſtes folly in their ſinne, with their temporal goods. If theſe things be well conſidered, what wonder is it thẽ ſir, if the pariſhners grudge againſt theſe diſpenſators?

Goſtly mother? nay, an vngoſtly ſtepdam, to all Gods children.

¶ Then the Archb. ſaid to me, Thou that ſhouldſt be iudged & ruled by holy church, preſumptuouſly thou deemeſt holy church to haue erred in the ordinance of tithes & other dueties to be paid to prieſts. It ſhal be long or thou thriue Loſel, that thou deſpiſeſt thy ghoſtly mother. How dareſt thou ſpeake this (Loſel) among the people? Are not tithes geuen to prieſts for to liue by?

By the law none could chaleng tithes, but onely the ſeed of Leuy Our prieſtes be not of the ſeede of Leuy. Ergo by the law our prieſtes cannot chalenge tithes.

As the prieſthood is chãged, ſo is the law chaunged.

☞ And I ſaid: Sir S. Paule ſaith, that tithes were geuen in the old law to Leuites and to Prieſts, that came of the linage of Leuy. But our prieſts he ſayth, came not of the linage of Leuy, but of the linage of Iuda, to whych Iuda no tithes were promiſed to be geuen. And therfore Paule ſaith, ſince the prieſthode is chaũged from yͤ generation of Leuy to the generation of Iuda: It is neceſſary that chãging alſo be made of the law. So that prieſts liue now, wᵗout tithes & other duety that they now claime, following Chriſt & his Apoſtles in wilfull pouerty, as they haue geuẽ thẽ example. For ſince Chriſt liued (all the tyme of hys preaching) by pure almes of the people. And by example of him, his Apoſtles liued in the ſame wiſe, or els by yͤ trauaile of their hãds as it is ſayd aboue. Euery prieſt, whoſe prieſthode Chriſt approueth, knoweth wel, & confeſſeth in worde and in worke, that a diſciple ought not to be aboue his maiſter, but it ſufficeth to a diſciple to bee as hys maiſter, ſimple, and pure, meke and pacient: and by example ſpecially of his maiſter Chriſt, euerye Prieſt ſhoulde rule him in al his liuing, & ſo after his cũning & power, a prieſt ſhould buſy him to enforme and to rule, whom ſo euer hee might charitably.

Bleſſe but curſe not ſaith S. Paule.

He goeth neare you my Lord, when he toucheth your tithes.

¶ And the Archbiſh. ſaid to me with a great ſpirite, Gods curſe haue thou & mine for this teachinge: for thou wouldeſt hereby, make the olde law more free and perfect thẽ yͤ new law. For thou ſaieſt, that it is leful to Leuites and to prieſts to take tithes in the old law, and ſo to enioy their priuilegies: but to vs prieſts in the new law, thou ſayeſt it is not lawfull to take tithes. And thus thou geueſt Leuites of the old law, more freedome than to prieſts of the new law.

The difference of the freedoms betwene the old and new lawes.

For what cauſe tithes were geuẽ in the olde law,

☞ And I ſaid. Sir, I maruell, that ye vnderſtand thys plaine text of Paule thus. Ye wot well, that the Leuites and prieſts in the old lawe that toke tithes, were not ſo free nor ſo perfect, as Chriſt and his Apoſtles that toke no tithes. And ſir, there is a Doctor (I thinke that it is Saint Ierome) that ſaith thus. The prieſts that chalenge now in the new law, tithes: Say in effect, that Chriſt is not become man, nor that he hath yet ſuffered death for mans loue. wherefore, this Doctor ſaith this ſentence. Since tythes were the hires and wages limitted to Leuites and to prieſts of the old law for bearing about of the tabernacle, and for ſlayeng and fleing of beaſts, and for burning of ſacrifice, and for keeping of the temple, and for tromping of battell before the hoſte of Iſraell, and other diuers obſeruances that perteined to their office: Thoſe prieſts that will chalenge or take tithes, deny that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, and do the prieſts office of the old law, for whome tithes were granted: for els (as this Doctor ſaith) prieſts take now tithes wrongfully.

¶ And the archb. ſaid to his clarkes. Heard ye euer Loſell ſpeake thus? Certaine, this is the learning of them all, that whereſoeuer they come, and they may be ſuffered: they enforce them to expugne the freedome of holy Church.

If you take away tithes, you vndoe the church.

☞ And I ſaid. Sir, why call you the taking of tithes, and of ſuch other duties that prieſts chalenge now (wrongfullie) the freedome of holy church: Since neither Chriſt nor his apoſtles, chalenge nor toke ſuch duties. Herefore theſe takings of prieſts now are not called iuſtly the freedome of holy church, but all ſuch geuing and taking ought to be called and holden, the ſlanderous couetouſnes of men of the holy church.

¶ And the archb. ſaid to me. why Loſell, wilt not thou and other that are confedered with thee, ſeeke out of holy ſcripture, & of the ſence of doctors, al ſharpe authorities againſt lords, knights, and ſquiers, & againſt other ſecular men, as thou doeſt againſt prieſts.

Thorpe, preach agaynſt whom thou wilt, ſo thou touch not this ſcabbe.

The viciouſnes and pride of prieſtes infecteth all the world.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, whatſoeuer men or women, lords of ladies, or any other that are preſent in our preaching ſpecially, or in our cõmoning after our cũning, we tell out to thẽ their office & their charges: But ſir, ſince Chriſoſtome ſayth, that prieſts are the ſtomack of yͤ people, it is nedeful in preaching, & alſo in commoning, to be moſt buſy about this prieſthode: Since by the viciouſnes of prieſtes both Lordes & cõmons are moſt ſinfully infected & led into the worſt. And becauſe yͭ the couetouſnes of prieſts & pride, & the boaſt that they haue & make of their dignity and power: deſtroyeth not onely the vertues of prieſthod in prieſts thẽſelues, but alſo ouer this, it ſtirreth God to take great vengeance both vpon the Lords, & vpon cõmons, whych ſuffer theſe prieſts charitably.

A ſpitefull meeknes that is in ſkarlet gownes.

¶And the Archb. ſaid to me. Thou iudgeſt euery prieſt proud yͭ wil not go arayed as thou doeſt. By god I deme him to be more meke yͭ goeth euery day in a ſcarlet gown, thã thou in thy thred bare blew gown. wherby knoweſt thou a proud man?

The ſignes and markes of proud prieſtes.

☞And I ſaid. Sir a proud prieſt may be known, when he denieth to follow Chriſt & his Apoſtles, in wylfull pouerty and other vertues: & coueteth worldly worſhip, and taketh it gladly, & gathereth together with pleding, manaſing, or with flattering, or wͭ ſimony any worldly goodes: And moſt, if a prieſt buſy him not chiefly in himſelfe, & after in all other men and women after his cunning & power, to withſtand ſinne.

Paule ſaith, god ſhall iudge all fornicators, what ſay you my Lord?

¶And the Archb. ſayd to mee. Though thou kneweſt a prieſt to haue al theſe vices, & though thou ſaweſt a pryeſt louely lye now by a womã, knowing her fleſhly: wouldſt thou therfore deme this prieſt dãnable? I ſay to thee yͭ in the turning about of thy hand, ſuch a ſinner may be verily repented.

Prieſtes ought to be examples of good liuing.

☞And I ſayd. Sir I wil not damne any man for any ſinne that I know done or may be done, ſo that the ſinner leaueth his ſinne. But by authoritie of holy Scripture, he that ſinneth thus openly as ye ſhew here, is damnable for doing of ſuch a ſinne: and moſt ſpecially, a prieſt yͭ ſhoulde be example to al other for to hate & flye ſinne. And in how ſhort time that euer ye ſay yͭ ſuch a ſinner may be repẽted: he ought not of him yͭ knoweth his ſinning, to bee iudged verily repentant, without open euidence of great ſhame & harty ſorow for his ſinne. For whoſoeuer (and ſpecially a prieſt) that vſeth pride, enuy, couetouſnes, lechery, ſimony or any other vices: ſheweth not as open euidẽce of repentance as he hath geuen euil exãple & occaſion of ſinning, if he cõtinue in any ſuch ſinne as long as he may: it is likely that ſinne leaueth him, & he not ſinne. And as I vnderſtãd ſuch a one ſinneth vnto death, for whõ no bodye oweth to pray, as S. Iohn ſayth.

Clarkly ſpoken and like a Paraſite.

¶And a Clerke ſaide then to the Archb. Sir, the lenger that ye appoſe him, the worſe he is: and the more ye buſye you to amend him, the waywarder he is. For he is of ſo ſhrewd a kinde, that he ſhameth not onely to be himſelfe a foule neſt, but without ſhame he buſyeth him to make his neſt fouler.

Forget nothing I pray you my Lord.

☞And the Archbiſhop ſaide to hys Clerke. Suffer a while, for I am at an ende with him, for there is an other poynt certyfyed agaynſt hym, and I will heare what hee ſayth thereto.

¶And ſo thã he ſaid to me. Lo it is here certified againſt thee, yͭ thou preachedſt opẽly at Shrewſbury, that it is not lawful to ſweare in any caſe.

Not lawfull to ſweare by any creature.

Men ought not to ſweare when without an othe he may excuſe himſelfe that is compelled to ſweare.

☞And I ſaid, Sir I preached neuer ſo openlye, nor I haue taught in this wiſe in any place. But ſir, as I preached in Shrewſbury, wͭ my proteſtation I ſay to you now here: that by the authoritie of the Goſpell of S. Iames, & by witnes of diuers Saints & doctours: I haue preached opẽly in one place or other, that it is not leful in any cauſe to ſweare by any creature. And ouer this Sir, I haue alſo preached and taught by the foreſaid authorities: yͭ no body ſhould ſweare in any caſe, if that without othe in any wiſe he that is charged to ſweare might excuſe him to them that haue power to compel him to ſweare, in leful thing & lawful. But if a man may not excuſe him without oth, to them that haue power to cõpel him to ſweare, than he ought to ſweare onely by God, taking him onely that is ſouthfaſtneſſe, for to witnes the ſouthfaſtnes.

Well ſaid Sir Iohn of you, your holy mother ſtroke your head.

And then a Clarke aſked me if it were not leful to a ſubiect at the bidding of his Prelate, for to kneele downe and touch the holy Goſpel booke, and kiſſe it, ſaying: So helpe me God and this holydome, for he ſhould after hys cunninge and power, doe all thynges that hys Prelate commaundeth hym.

☞And I ſaid to them: Sirs, ye ſpeake here full generally or largely. what if a prelate commaũded hys ſubiect to do an vnlawful thing, ſhould he obey therto?

Theſe prelates would be thought to be good, be they neuer ſo bad.

¶And the Archb. ſaid to me: A ſubiect ought not to ſuppoſe, that his prelate wil bid him do an vnlawfull thinge. For a ſubiect ought to thinke that his prelate wil bid him do nothing but that he wil aunſwer for before God, that it is leful: And then, though yͤ bidding of the prelate bee vnleful, the ſubiect hath no peril to fulfil it, ſince that he thinketh & iudgeth, that whatſoeuer thing his prelate byddeth him do, that it is leful to him for to do it.

A communication betwixt a lawier and a diuine.

To ſweare by a booke is to ſweare by creatures.

Chriſoſtom blameth booke oath.

☞And I ſayd, ſir I truſt not thereto. But to our purpoſe: Sir I tel you, yͭ I was once in a gentlemãs houſe, and there were then two Clarkes there, a maiſter of diuinity, and a man of law, which man of law was alſo communing in diuinitie. And among other things, theſe men ſoake of othes, & the man of law ſayd: at the bidding of his ſoueraigne, which had power to charge him to ſweare, he would lay his hand vpon a booke, and heare hys charge: anb if his charge to his vnderſtanding were vnlefull, he would haſtely withdraw his hand vpõ the booke, taking there onely God to witnes, that he would fulfil that lefull charge, after his power. And the maiſter of diuinitie ſayde then to him thus. Certaine, he that layeth his hand vpõ a booke in this wiſe, and maketh there a promiſe to do that thing that he is commaunded: Is obliged therby by boke othe, then to fulfil his charge. For no doubt, hee that chargeth him to lay his hand thus vpon a booke (touching the booke, & ſwearing by it, and kiſſing it, promiſinge in this forme to do this thing or that) wil ſay and witnes, that he that toucheth thus a booke, and kiſſeth it, hath ſworne vpon that booke. And al other mẽ that ſee that man thus do, and alſo all thoſe that heare hereof, in the ſame wiſe wyll ſay and witnes, that this man hath ſworne vpon a booke. Wherefore, the maiſter of diuinitie ſayde, it was not lefull neyther to geue nor to take any ſuch charge vpon a booke: for euery booke is nothing els, but diuers creatures, of which it is made of. Therefore to ſweare vpon a booke, is to ſweare by creatures, and this ſwearinge is euer vnlefull. This ſentence witneſſeth Chriſoſtome playnely, blaming them greatly that bring forth a booke for to ſweare vpon, charging Clarkes, that in no wiſe they conſtrayne any body to ſweare, whether they thinke a man to ſweare true or falſe.

Here now lacked Boner, to ſcratch hym by the face.

¶And the Archbiſhop and his Clarkes, ſcorned mee, and blamed me greatly for this ſaying. And the Archb. manaſſed me with great puniſhment & ſharpe, except I left thys opinion of ſwearing.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, this is not myne opinion, but it is the opinion of Chriſt our ſauiour, & of S. Iames, & of Chryſoſtome, & other diuers ſaints and doctours.

¶Than the Archb. bad a clarke read this homely of Chriſoſtom: which homely, this clerke held in his hand writtẽ in a roule: which roule the Archb. cauſed to be taken from my fellow at Cãterbury. And ſo then this clark read this role, til he came to a clauſe where Chriſoſtome ſayth, that it is ſinne to ſweare well.

Fither Malueren, or els Syr Bryan Blowcole.

And then a clark Malueren (as I geſſe) ſaid to yͤ Archb. Sir, I pray you wete of him, how he vnderſtãdeth Chryſoſtome here, ſaying it to be ſin to ſweare well.

And ſo the Archbiſh. aſked me, how I vnderſtode here Chriſoſtome.

Chriſt promiſeth & geueth mouth & vtterance.

The place of Chriſoſtome expounded, how it is ſin to ſweare well.

What it is to ſweare well.

And certaine, I was ſomwhat afraid to aunſwer hereto: For I had not buſied me to ſtudy about the ſenſe thereof, but lifting vp my minde to God, I praied him of grace, And as faſt as I thought how Chriſt ſaid to his apoſtles: when for my name ye ſhall be brought before Iudges, I ſhall geue into your mouth, wiſedome yͭ your aduerſaries ſhal not againſt ſay. And truſting faithfully in the word of God, I ſaid: Sir, I know wel that many men & women, haue nowe ſwearing ſo in cuſtome, that they knowe not, nor wil not know, yͭ they do euil for to ſweare as they do: But they thinke and ſay, that they do wel for to ſweare as they do, though they know wel that they ſweare vntruely. For they ſay, they may by their ſwearing (though it be falſe) voide blame or temporal harme, which they ſhoulde haue, if they ſweare not thus. And ſir, many men and women maintaine ſtrongly that they ſweare well, when that thing is ſooth that they ſweare for. Alſo, full many men & women ſay nowe, that it is well done to ſweare by creatures, when they may not (as the ſay) otherwiſe be beleeued. And alſo, ful many men and women now ſay, that it is wel done to ſweare by God, and by our Ladye, and by other ſaints, for to haue them in minde. But ſince al theſe ſayings are but excuſations, and ſinne: mee thinketh ſir, that this ſenſe of Chriſoſtom may be alleaged wel againſt all ſuch ſwearers: witneſſing that al theſe ſinne greuouſly though they thinke themſelues for to ſweare in thys foreſayd wiſe, well. For it is euil done and great ſinne, for to ſweare truth, when in any maner, a man may excuſe himſelfe without othe.

¶And the Archbiſhop ſayd, that Chryſoſtome might bee thus vnderſtand.

Pope holy Church.

And then a clerke ſayd to me: wilt thou tarye my Lorde no lenger, but ſubmit thee here mekely to the ordinance of holy Church, and lay thy hand vpon a booke touching the holy Goſpell of GOD, promiſing not onelye wyth thy mouth, but alſo with thine hart to ſtand to my Lords ordinaunce?

To touch a booke is to ſweare by a booke.

☞And I ſayd: Sir haue I not told you here, how that I heard a maiſter of diuinity ſay: that in ſuch caſe it is al one to touch a booke, and to ſweare by a booke?

¶And the Archb. ſayd: There is no maiſter of diuinitie in England ſo great, yͭ if he hold this opinion before me, but I ſhall puniſh him as I ſhal do thee, except thou ſweare as I ſhall charge thee.

It is happy that he called not for a candle, and made a Scenola of him, as Boner did of Tomkins.

☞And I ſayd: Sir, is not Chriſoſtome an extentiſe Doctour?

¶And the Archb. ſayd, yea.

☞And I ſayd: if Chriſoſtome proueth him worthye great blame, that bringeth forth a booke to ſweare vpon: it muſt nedes followe, that he is more to blame that ſweareth on that booke.

It is happy that Chriſoſtome was not here, or els he would haue had him by the backe. But that word cannot be touched. Thorpe refuſeth not to ſweare.

¶And the Archb. ſaid: if Chriſoſtome ment accordingly to the ordinance of holy church, we wil accept him.

☞And then ſaid a clerke to me. Is not yͤ word of God & God himſelfe equipollent, that is, of one authoritie?

¶And I ſayd, yea.

☞Then he ſaid to me, why wilt thou not ſweare then by the Goſpell of God, that is gods word, ſince it is al one to ſweare by the word of God, & by God himſelfe.

¶And I ſaid: Sir, ſince I may not now otherwiſe be beleued, but by ſwearing: I perceiue (as Auſten ſaith) that it is not ſpedeful that ye yͭ ſhould be my brethren ſhould not beleue me: therfore I am redy by the word of God (as the lord commaunded me by his word) to ſweare.

☞Then the Clarke ſayd to me. Lay then thine hand vpon the booke, touchinge the holy Goſpell of God and take thy charge.

¶And I ſaid: Sir I vnderſtand that the holy Goſpell of God may not be touched with mans hand.

☞And the Clearke ſayde I fonded, and that I ſayde not truth.

¶And I aſked this clerk whether it were more to reade yͤ Goſpel to touch the Goſpell.

☞And he ſaid it was more to read the Goſpell.

Whether the booke be the Goſpell. Ierom ſaith the Goſpel is not the Goſpel for reading, but for beleuing. The Goſpel is not the leaues of the booke, but the roote of reaſon.

¶Then I ſaid: Sir, by authority of S. Hierome, the goſpel is not the goſpel for reading of the letter, but for the belief that men haue in the word of God. That it is the goſpel that we beleue, and not the letter that we read: for becauſe the letter that is touched with mans hand, is not the Goſpel, but yͤ ſentence that is verily beleued in mãs hart, is the Goſpel. For ſo Hierome ſaith. The Goſpel, yͭ is the vertue of Gods word, is not in yͤ leaues of the boke, but it is in the roote of reaſon. Neyther the Goſpel (he ſayeth) is in the writing aboue of the letters, but the Goſpell is in yͤ marking of the ſentence of ſcriptures. This ſentence approueth S. Paule, ſaying thus. The kingdome of God is not in word but in vertue. And Dauid ſaith: The voice of the Lord that is his word, is in vertue. And after Dauid ſayth: Through the word of God yͤ heauẽs were formed, and in the ſpirite of his mouth is all the vertue of thẽ. And I pray you ſir, vnderſtand ye wel how Dauid ſayth, then in the ſpirit of the mouth of yͤ Lord, is all the vertue of angels and of men.

S. Paule.

Dauid.

This clarke was well ſeene in the Maſſe booke.

And the clarke ſayd to me. Thou wouldeſt make vs to fond with thee. Say we not that the Goſpels are written in the Maſſe booke?

☞And I ſayd. Sir, though men vſe to ſaye thus, yet it is vnperfect ſpeech. For the principal part of a thinge is properly the whole thing. For lo, mans ſoule yͭ may not now be ſene here, nor touched wͭ any ſenſible thing, is properly man. And al the vertue of a tree is in the roote thereof that may not be ſene, for do away the roote, & yͤ tree is deſtroied. And ſir, as ye ſayd to me right now, God & hys word are of one authoritie: And ſir, S. Hierome witneſſeth, yͭ Chriſt (very God & very mã) is hid in the letter of the law: thus alſo ſir, yͤ goſpel is hid in the letter. For ſir, as it is ful likely many diuers men and womẽ here in the earth, touched Chriſt & ſaw him, & knew his bodely perſõ, which neither touched, nor ſaw, nor knewe ghoſtly his godhead. Right thus ſir, many men now touch & ſee, & write, & read yͤ ſcriptures of gods law, which neither ſee, touch, nor read effectually the goſpel. For as the godhead of Chriſt (that is the vertue of God) is knowen by the vertue of beliefe, ſo is yͤ Goſpel, that is, Chriſtes word.

The Goſpel is not the letter but hid in the letter.

Miſty matters for your blind eyes.

¶And a clerke ſaid to me. Theſe be full miſty matters and vnſauery that thou ſheweſt here to vs.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, if ye, yͭ are maiſters, know not plainly this ſentence, ye may ſore dread that yͤ kingdome of heauen be taken from you, as it was frõ the princes of prieſts and from the elders of the Iewes.

¶And then a Clerke (as I geſſe) Malueren, ſayde to me. Thou knoweſt not thine equiuocations: for the kingdom of heauen hath diuers vnderſtandings. What calleſt thou the kingdom of heauen in thys ſentence, that thou ſheweſt here?

The kingdome of God taken for the vnderſtanding of Gods word.

☞And I ſaid: Sir, by good reaſon and ſentence of doctors the Realme of heauen is called here, the vnderſtanding of Gods word.

¶And a clerke ſaid to me. From whom thinkeſt thou that this vnderſtanding is taken away?

This ſalte was ſomewhat two ſharpe for their rotten fleſhe to abide.

☞And I ſayde: Sir (by authoritie of Chriſt himſelfe) the effectuall vnderſtanding of Chriſtes word is taken away from al them chiefly, which are great lettered men, & preſume to vnderſtand high things, & wil be holden wiſe men & deſire maiſterſhip & high ſtate & dignitie: but they wyll not conforme them to the liuing and teaching of Chriſt & of his Apoſtles.

¶Then yͤ Archb. ſaid. wel, wel, thou wilt iudge thy ſoueraignes. By God, yͤ king doth not his duety, but he ſuffer thee to be condemned.

Helpe downe with him ſir Iohn.

☞And then an other Clerke ſayd to me. Why (on Fryday that laſt was) counſailedſt thou a man of my Lordes that he ſhould not ſhriue him to no man but onely to god?

Note here the crafty practiſe of this holy church.

¶And with this aſking I was abaſhed: And then by and by I knew that I was ſubtilly betraied of a mã that came to me in priſon on the Friday before, cõmoning with mee in this matter of confeſſion. And certaine, by his words I thought, that this man came then to me, of ful feruent and charitable will: But now I know he came to tempt me & to accuſe me, God forgeue him if it be his wil. And withal mine hart when I had thought thus, I ſaid to this clerk, Sir, I pray you that ye would fetch this man hether: and all the wordes as nere as I cã repete them, which that I ſpake to him, on Friday in the priſon, I wil rehearſe now here before you all, and before him.

☞And (as I geſſe) the Archbiſhop ſaid then to me. They that are now here, ſuffice to repete them. How ſaidſt thou to hym?

A falſe brother.

¶And I ſayd: Syr, that man came and aſked me in diuers thinges, and after hys aſking, I aunſwered him (as I vnderſtoode) that good was: And as he ſhewed to me by his wordes, he was ſory of hys liuing in court, and right heauy for his owne vicious liuing, and alſo for the viciouſnes of other men, and ſpecially of prieſts euil liuing: & herefore he ſayd to me with a ſorrowfull hart (as I geſſed) that he purpoſed fully within ſhort time for to leaue the court, and to buſie him to know Gods lawe, and to confirme all hys life thereafter. And when he had ſayd to me theſe wordes & moe other whiche I would rehearſe and he were preſent, he prayed me to heare hys confeſſion. And I ſayd to him, ſir, wherefore come ye to me, to be confeſſed of me, ye wote wel yͭ the Archb. putteth & holdeth me here, as one vnworthy either to geue or to take any ſacrament of holy Church.

☞And he ſayd to me. Brother I wote well, and ſo wote many other moe, that you and ſuch other are wrongfully vexed, and therefore I common with you the more gladly. And I ſayd to him, Certayne I wote well that many men of this court, and ſpecially the prieſtes of this houſholde would be full euill apayd both you & with me, if they wiſt that ye were confeſſed of me. And he ſayd, that he cared not therfore, for he had full little affection in them: And as me thought, he ſpake theſe wordes and many other, of ſo good will and of ſo high deſire, for to haue knowne and done the pleaſant will of God. And I ſayd to hym, as with my foreſayd proteſtation I ſay to you now here: Syr, I counſayle you, for to abſent you from all euill company, and to draw you to them that loue and buſie them to knowe and to keepe the preceptes of God: And then the good ſpirite of God will moue you for to occupy buſily all your wittes in gathering together of all your ſinnes, as farre as ye can bethinke you, ſhaming greatly of them and ſorrowing hartely for them: Yea ſyr, the holy Ghoſt will thẽ put in your hart a good will and a feruent deſire for to take and to hold a good purpoſe, to hate euer and to flie, (after your cũning and power) al occaſion of ſinne: and ſo then, wiſedome ſhal come to you from aboue, lightening (with diuers beames of grace and of heauenly deſire) all your wittes, enforming you how ye ſhall truſt ſtedfaſtly in the mercy of the Lorde: knowledging knowledging to him onely all your vicious liuing, praying to him euer deuoutly of charitable counſel and continuance. Hoping without doute, that if ye cõtinue thus, buſying you faythfully to know & to kepe his biddings, that he wil (for he onely, may) forgeue you al your ſinnes. And this man ſaid to me. Though God forgeue men their ſins yet it behoueth men to be aſſoyled of prieſts, & to do yͤ penance that they enioyne them.

God onely forgeueth ſinne, man onely can coũſell to leaue ſinne.

And I ſayde to him, Sir, it is all one to aſſoyle men of their ſinnes, & to forgeue mẽ their ſinnes. Wherefore, ſince it pertayneth only to God to forgeue ſinne: It ſufficeth in this caſe, to counſel men & women for to leaue their ſinne, and to comfort them that buſy them thus to do, for to hope ſtedfaſtly in the mercy of God. And agayneward, Prieſtes ought to tel ſharply to cuſtomable ſinners, that if they wil not make an ende of their ſinne, but cõtinue in diuers ſins while that they may ſinne, all ſuch deſerue payne without any end. And herefore, Prieſts ſhould euer buſye them to liue wel and holyly, and to teach the people buſily & truly the worde of God, ſhewyng to all folke in open preaching and in priuy counſeling, that the lord God only forgeueth ſinne. And therefore, thoſe prieſts yͭ take vpõ thẽ to aſſoyle mẽ of their ſinnes, blaſpheme God: ſince that it pertaineth onely to the Lord, to aſſoile men of all their ſinnes. For no doubt, a thouſand yeare after yͤ Chriſt was man, no Prieſt of Chriſt durſt take vpon him to teach the people, neither priuily nor apertly, that they behoued nedes to come to be aſſoyled of them, as Prieſts now do. But by authoritie of Chriſtes word: Prieſts bounde indurate cuſtomable ſynners, to euerlaſting paines, which in no time of their lyuing, would buſy thẽ faithfully to knowe the biddinges of God, nor to kepe thẽ. And again, al they that would occupy al their wits to hate & to flye al occaſion of ſinne, dreading ouer al thing, to offend God, and louing for to pleaſe him continually: to theſe men & women Prieſts ſhewed, how the Lord aſſoyleth them of all their ſinnes. And thus Chriſt promiſed to confirme in heauen, al the binding and looſing that prieſts by authoritie of his word, binde men in ſinne that are indurate therin, or looſe thẽ out of ſinne here vpon earth, that are verely repentaunt.

Shrift & cõfeſſiõ to prieſtes.

And this mã hearing theſe words ſaid, that he might well in conſcience cõſent to this ſentence. But he ſayd. Is it not nedefull to the lay people yͭ can not thus do, to go ſhriue them to prieſts? And I ſaid, If a man feele himſelfe ſo diſtroubled with any ſinne, yͭ he can not by his own witte auoide this ſynne without counſel of them that are herein wiſer than he. In ſuch a caſe, the counſell of a good Prieſt is full neceſſarye. And if a good prieſt fayle as they do now cõmonly, in ſuch a caſe S. Auguſtine ſayth, that a man may lawfully common and take counſel, of a vertuous ſecular mã.

A good ſecular man may be counſeller, where a prieſt faileth by S. Auguſtine.

But certain, that mã or womã is ouerladen and to beaſtly, which cannot bring their owne ſinnes into their minde, buſying them night and day for to hate & to forſake al their ſinnes, doing a ſigh for them after their cunning and power. And ſir, full accordingly to this ſentence vpõ Midlentõ Sũday (two yeare as I geſſe now agone) I hard a Monk of Feuerſam that men called Morden, preache at Caunterbury at the croſſe within Chriſt Church Abbey, ſaying thus of cõfeſſion.

Morden Monke of Feuerſam preaching of cõfeſſion.

That as through the ſuggeſtiõ of the feend without counſell of any other body, of themſelues many men & women, can imagine and find meanes & ways inough to come to pride, to theft, to lechery, and other diuers vices: In contrary wiſe this Monke ſaid. Since the Lord God is more ready to forgiue ſinne than the feend is or may be of power, to moue any body to ſinne: than whoſoeuer wil ſhame and ſorow hartely for their ſinnes, knowledging them faithfully to God, amending them after their power and cunning, without counſell of any other body than of God and himſelfe (through the grace of God) all ſuch men and women may find, ſufficient meanes to come to Gods mercy, and ſo to be cleane aſſoiled of all their ſinnes. This ſentence I ſayd ſir to this man of yours, and the ſelfe words as neere as I can geſſe.

Harty repẽtãce to God, needeth no confeſſion to a prieſt.

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſaid. Holy Church approueth not this learning.

No nor nothing els that is good.

☞ And I ſaid. Sir, holy Church of which Chriſt is head in heauen and in earth, muſt needs approue this ſentence. For loe, hereby all men & women may, if they will, be ſufficiently taught to know & to keepe the commandements of God, & to hate & to flie continually all occaſion of ſinne, and to loue and to ſeeke vertues buſily, & to beleue in God ſtably, and to truſt in his mercy ſtedfaſtly, & ſo to come to perfect charitie & continue therin perſeuerantly. And more the Lord aſketh not of any man here now in this life. And certaine, ſince Ieſu Chriſt died vpon the croſſe, wilfully to make men free: Men of the Church are to bold and to buſie, to make men thrall, binding thẽ vnder yͤ paine of endles curſe (as they ſay) to do many obſeruaunces and ordynaunces, which neither the liuing nor teachyng of Chryſt nor of his Apoſtles approueth.

Chriſt geueth freedome, the pope geueth thraldome.

And a Clerke ſaid thẽ to me: Thou ſheweſt plainly here thy deceit, which thou haſt learned of them that trauell to ſow popple amõg yͤ wheat. But I cõuſel thee to go away cleane frõ this learning, & ſubmit thee lowly to my lorde, and thou ſhalt finde him yet to be gracious to thee.

¶ And as faſt then, an other Clerke ſaid to me: How waſt thou ſo bold at Paules Croſſe in London, to ſtande there hard with thy tipper bounde about thine head, and to reproue in his Sermon the worthy clerke Alkerton, drawing away al that thou mighteſt: yea, & the ſame day at afternone, thou meeting the worthy Doctour in Watlyng ſtreete, calledſt him falſe flatterer and hipocrite.

☞ And I ſaid: Sir, I thinke certainely that there was no man nor womã that hated verelye ſinne, & loued vertues (hearing yͤ Sermõ of the clerk at Oxford, and alſo Alkertons Sermon) but they ſayd, or might iuſtly ſay, that Alkerton reproued that clerke vntruely, and ſlaundered him wrongfully and vncharitably. For no doubt, If the liuing & teaching of Chriſt chiefly and of his Apoſtles be true, no body that loueth God and his law, wil blame any ſentẽce that the clerke then preached there: ſince by authoritie of Gods word, & by approued Saints & Doctours, & by opẽ reaſon, this Clerke approued all thinges clearely that hee preached there.

¶ And a Clerke of the Archbiſhops ſaide to me, his Sermon was falſe, and that he ſheweth openlye, ſince he dare not ſtand forth and defend his preaching that he thẽ preached there.

☞ And I ſaide: Sir, I thinke that he purpoſeth to ſtande ſtedfaſtly thereby, or els he ſclaundereth fouly himſelf, and alſo many other that haue great truſt that he will ſtand by the truth of the Goſpel. For I wote wel, this Sermon is writen both in Latin and Engliſh, and many men haue it & they ſet great price thereby. And ſir, If ye were preſent with yͤ Archbiſhop at Lambeth when this Clarke appeared and was at his aunſwere before the Archbiſhoppe, ye wote wel that this Clerke denied not there his Sermon, but two daies he maintained it before the Archbiſhop and his Clerkes.

And then the Archbiſhop or one of his Clerkes ſaid (I wote not which of them) that harlot ſhalbe met wyth, for that Sermon. For no man but he and thou, and ſuch other falſe harlots, prayſeth any ſuch preaching.

¶ And then the Archb. ſaid. Your curſed ſect is buſie, and it ioyeth right greatly to contrary & to deſtroy yͤ priuilege and fredome of holy Church.

☞ And I ſaid: Sir, I know no men that trauell ſo buſily as this ſect doth (which you reproue) to make reſt and peace in holy church. For pride, couetouſnes, and ſimony, which diſtrouble moſt holy Church: this ſect hateth & fleeth, and trauayleth buſilye to moue all other men in like maner, vnto meekenes and wilfull pouerty, and charitie, and free miniſtring of the Sacraments: this ſect loueth & vſeth, and is full buſie to moue all other folkes thus to do. For theſe vertues, owe all mẽbers of holy church, to their head Chriſt.

The true freedome of holy church not deſtroyed but increaſed by true preachers.

Then a Clerke ſaid to the Archbiſhop: Sir, it is farre dayes, and ye haue farre to ride to night: therfore make an end with him, for he wil none make. But the more ſir, that ye buſy you for to draw him toward you, yͤ more cõtumax he is made, and the farther frõ you.

¶ And then Malueren ſaid to me: William, kneele down, and pray my Lord of grace, & leaue al thy phantaſies, and become a child of holy church.

Take my Lords bleſſing & ſtand vp.

☞ And I ſaid: Sir, I haue prayed the Archbiſhop oft, and yet I pray him for the loue of Chriſt, that he wil leaue hys indignation that he hath againſt me: and that he wil ſuffer me after my cũning & power, for to do mine office of prieſthode, as I am charged of god to do it. For I couet nought els, but to ſerue my God to hys pleaſing in yͤ ſtate that I ſtand in, and haue taken me to.

¶ And yͤ Archbiſhop ſaid to mee: If of good hart thou wilt ſubmit thee now here meekely, to be ruled from this time forth by my counſel, obeying mekely and wilfully to mine ordinance, thou ſhalt finde it moſt profitable & beſt to thee for to doe thus. Therefore tary thou me no lenger, graunt to do this yͭ I haue ſayd to thee now here ſhortly, or denie it vtterly.

My Lord hath haſt, for being benighted.

☞ And I ſaid to the Archbiſhop: Sir, owe we to beleeue that Ieſu Chriſt was and is, very God and very man?

¶ And the Archbiſhop ſayd Yea.

☞ And I ſaid: Sir, owe we to beleue that al Chriſtes lyuing and his teaching is true in euery point?

¶ And he ſayd, yea.

☞And I ſayd: Syr, owe we to beleue, that the liuinge of the Apoſtles, and the teaching of Chriſt, and all the Prophetes, are true whiche are written in the Bible, for the health and ſaluation of good people?

¶And he ſayd yea.

☞And I ſayd: Syr, owe all Chriſten men & women after their cunning and power, for to conforme all their liuing, to the teaching ſpecially of Chriſt, and alſo to the teaching and liuing of his Apoſtles and of Prophets, in all thinges that are pleaſaunt to God, and edification of his Church?

¶And he ſayd, yea.

☞And I ſayd: Syr ought the doctrine, the bidding, or the counſell of any body, to be accepted or obeyed vnto: except this doctrine, theſe biddings, or this counſel, may be graūted and affirmed by Chriſts liuing and his teaching ſpecially, or by the liuing and teaching of his Apoſtles & Prophetes?

¶And ẏ Archbiſhop ſaid to me: Other doctrine ought not to be accepted, nor we owe not to obey to any mans bidding or counſell, except we can perceiue that his bidding or counſell, accordeth with the life and teaching of Chriſt, and of his Apoſtles and Prophets.

And why compel you this man to the contrary

☞And I ſayd: Syr, is not all the learning, and biddings and counſels of holy Church, meanes and healefull remedies, to know and to withſtand the priuy ſuggeſtions, and the aperte temptations of the fiende? and alſo wayes and healeful remedies, to ſlea pride and all other deadly ſinnes, and the braunches of them, and ſoueraign meanes to purchaſe grace, for to withſtand and ouercome all the fleſhlye luſtes and mouinges?

Thorpe cō- ent to sub- it himſelf o the ordi- aunce of ouncels.

¶And the Archbiſhop ſayd yea.

☞And I ſayd: Syr, whatſoeuer thing ye or any other body bid or counſel me to do, accordingly to this forſayd learning, after my cunning & power, through the helpe of god, I will meekly with all my hart obey therto.

¶And the archbiſhop ſayd to me: Submit thee than now here meekly and wilfully, to the ordinance of holy church, which I ſhall ſhew to thee.

☞And I ſayd: ſir, accordingly as I haue here now before you rehearſed, I will nowe be ready to obey full gladly to Chriſt the head of the holy Church, & to the learning and biddinges, and counſelles of euerye pleaſing member of him.

¶Thē the archbiſhop ſtriking with his hand fiercely vpō a cupborde, ſpake to me with a great ſpirit ſaying: By Ieſu, but if thou leaue ſuch additions, obliging thee now here without any exceptiō to mine ordinance (or that I go out of this place) I ſhall make thee as ſure, as any theefe that is in the priſon of Lanterne. Aduiſe thee now what thou wilt do. And then as if he had bene angred, he went fro the cupborde where he ſtood, to a window.

If Boner had bene ere, hee would not aue ſtrokē e cupbord

¶And then Malueren and an other Clerke came nearer me, and they ſpake to me many words full pleaſantly: and an othe while they manaſſed me, and counſelled full buſily to ſubmitte me, or els they ſayd I ſhoulde not eſcape puniſhing ouer meaſure: For they ſayd, I ſhould be degraded, curſed, and burned, & ſo then damned. But now they ſayd, thou mayſt eſchew all theſe miſchiefes, if thou wilt ſubmit thee wilfully & meekely to this worthye prelate, that hath cure of thy ſoule. And for the pitty of Chriſt (ſayde they) bethinke thee, howe great Clerkes the Biſhop of Lincolne, Hereford, and Purney were, and yet are, and alſo B. that is a well vnderſtanding man. which alſo haue forſaken & reuoked, all the learning and opinions, that thou and ſuch other hold. wherfore, ſince each of them is mikle wiſer thē thou art, we counſell thee for the beſt: that by the example of theſe foure Clerkes, thou follow them ſubmitting thee as they did.

he multi- e is not be folo- d in euil.

e what an is, God ing him o him- e,

And one of the Biſhops Clerkes ſayd then there, that he heard Nicoll Hereford ſay: that ſince he forſook & reuoked all the learning & Lolards opiniōs, he hath had mikle greater fauour and more delite to hold agaynſt them, then euer he had to hold with them, while he held with them.

And therefore Malueren ſaid to me: I vnderſtand and thou wilt take thee to a Prieſt, and ſhriue thee cleane, forſake all ſuch opinions, & take the penance of my Lord here, for the holding & teaching of them: within ſhort time, thou ſhalt be greatly comforted in this doing.

cleane n thrift om ſin,

☞And I ſayd to the Clerkes, that thus buſily counſelled me to folow theſe foreſayd men: Sirs, if theſe mē of whom ye counſell me to take example, had forſakē benefices of tēporall profite, & of worldly worſhip, ſo that they had abſēted them, and eſchewed from al occaſions of couetouſnes & of fleſhly luſtes, and had taken vpon them ſimple liuing, & wilfull pouerty: they had herein geuen good example to me and to many other, to haue folowed thē. But now, ſince all theſe foure men, haue ſlaunderouſly and ſhamefully done the contrary, conſenting to receiue and to haue and to hold tēporall benefices, liuing now more worldly & more fleſhly then they did before, conforming them to the maners of this world: I forſake them herein, and in all their foreſayd ſlaunderous doing. For I purpoſe with the helpe of God (into remiſſiō of my ſinnes, and of my foule curſed liuing) to hate and to flee priuily and apertly, to follow theſe men, teaching and counſelling whome ſo euer that I may, for to flee & eſchew the way that they haue choſen to go in, which will lead them to the worſt end, (if in conuenient time they repent them not) verely forſaking and reuoking opēly the ſlaunder that they haue put, and euery day yet put, to Chriſtes Church. For certayne, ſo open blaſphemy and ſlaunder as they haue ſpoken and done, in their reuoking & forſaking of the truth, ought not nor may not priuily be amēded, duely. wherfore ſirs, I pray you that you buſy not for to moue me to follow theſe mē, in reuoking and forſaking the trueth, and ſothfaſtnes as they haue done, and yet doe: wherein, by open euidence they ſtirre God to great wroth, and not onely agaynſt themſelues, but alſo agaynſt all thē that fauor them, or conſent to them herein, or that communeth with them, except it be for their amendement. For where as theſe mē firſt were purſued of enemies, now they haue obliged them by othe for to ſlaūder and purſue Chriſt in his members. wherfore (as I truſt ſtedfaſtly in ẏ goodnes of God) the worldly couetouſnes, and the luſty liuing and the ſliding from the truth of theſe runnagates: ſhall be to me and to many other men and women, an example & an euidence, to ſtand more ſtifly by the truth of Chriſt.

Other mens examples are ſo to be folowed, as they be the folowers of Chriſt

For certayne, right many men and women, doe marke and abhorre the ruines and cowardnes of theſe foreſayd vntrue men, how that they are ouercome & ſtopped wyth benefices, and withdrawen from the truth of Gods word, forſaking vtterly to ſuffer therfore bodely perſecution. For by this vnfaythfull doing and apoſtaſye of them (ſpecially that are great lettered men) and haue knowledged openly the truth: and now, either for pleaſure or diſpleaſure of tyrauntes, haue taken hire and temporall wages to forſake the truth and to hold agaynſt it, ſlaundering and purſuing them that couet to followe Chriſt in the way of righteouſnes, many men and womē therefore are now moued. But many mo thorow the grace of God, ſhall be moued hereby for to learne the truth of God, and to doe thereafter, and to ſtand boldly thereby.

Promotions commonly and great liuinges, choke truth.

Men folowing the wayes of Balaam.

¶Then the Archbiſhop ſayd to his clerkes. Buſye you no lenger about him, for he and other ſuch as he is, are cōfedered together, that they will not ſweare to be obedient, & to ſubmit them to prelates of holy church. For now ſince I ſtode here, his fellow alſo ſent me word that he will not ſweare, and that this fellow counſelled hym that he ſhould not ſweare to me. And loſell, in that thing that in thee is, thou haſt buſied thee to loſe this young man, but bleſſed be God, thou ſhalt not haue thy purpoſe of him. For he hath forſaken all thy learning, ſubmitting him to be buxum & obedient to the ordinaunce of holy church, and weepeth full bitterly, and curſeth thee full hartily for the venemous teaching which thou haſt ſhewed to him, counſelling hym to do thereafter.

Thorpes felow refuſeth to ſweare to the prelates.

And for thy falſe counſelling of many other & him, thou haſt great cauſe to be right ſory. For long time thou haſt buſied thee to peruert whomſoeuer thou mighteſt. Therfore, as many deathes thou art worthye of, as thou haſt geuen euill counſelles. And therefore by Ieſu, thou ſhalt go thether, where Nicoll Harford & Thom. Puruay were harbered. And I vndertake, or this day viij. dayes, thou ſhalt be right glad for to doe what thing that euer I bid thee to do. And Loſell, I ſhal aſſay, if I can make thee there as ſorowfull (as it was tolde me) thou waſt glad of my laſt goyng out of England. By S. Thomas, I ſhall turne thy ioy into ſorow.

Vide ſupra. pag. 497.

☞And I ſayd: Syr there can no body proue lawfully that I ioyed euer, of the maner of your going out of this land.

But Syr, to ſay the ſoth, I was ioyfull when ye were gone: for the biſhop of London in whoſe priſon ye left me, found in me no cauſe for to hold me lenger in his priſō, but at the requeſt of my frēdes, he deliuered me to them, aſking of me no maner of ſubmitting.

¶Then the archbiſhop ſayd to me. wherefore that I yede out of England, is vnknowne to thee: But be this thinge well knowne to thee, that God (as I wote well) hath called me agayn, and brought me into this land, for to deſtroy thee and the falſe ſect that thou art of: as by God, I ſhall purſue you ſo narowly, that I ſhall not leaue a ſlip of you in this land.

☞And I ſayd to the archbiſhop: Syr, the holy Prophette Ieremy ſayd to the falſe Prophet Anany. when the word that is the prophecy of a Prophet, is knowne or fulfilled:

then it ſhalbe knowne, that the Lorde ſent the Prophet in trueth.

¶And the Archbiſhop (as if he had not bene pleaſed with my ſaying) turned him awayward hether and thether, and ſayd. By GOD, I ſhall ſet vpon thy ſhinnes a payre of pearles, that thou ſhalt be glad to chaunge thy voyce.

Such pearles would better beſeeme my Lord your golden ſhooes.

These and many moe wonderous and conuicious wordes, were ſpoken to me, manaſſing me and al other of the ſame ſect, for to be puniſhed and deſtroyed vnto the vttermoſt.

At illi clamabāt dicentes tolle, tolle, crucifige eum. Luke 23.

And the Archbiſhop called then to him a Clerke, and rowned with him: and that Clerk went forth, and ſone he brought in the Conſtable of Saltwode Caſtle, and the Archbiſhop rowned a good while with him: And then the Conſtable went forth, and then came in diuers ſeculars, & they ſcorned me on euery ſide, & manaſſed me greatly. And ſome counſelled the Archbiſhop to burne me by and by, & ſome other counſelled him to drowne me in the Sea, for it is neare hand there.

And a Clerke ſtanding beſide me, there kneeled downe to yͤ Archbiſhop, praying him that he would deliuer me to him, for to ſay Mattins with him: & he would vndertake: that within three dayes I ſhoulde not reſiſt any thing that were commaunded me to do of my Prelate.

And the archbiſhop ſayd, that he would ordayn for me himſelfe.

And then after, came agayne the Conſtable and ſpake priuily to the Archbiſhop: And the archbiſhop cōmaunded the Conſtable to lead me forth thence with him, & ſo he did. And when we were gone forth thence, we were ſent after againe. And whē I came in agayne before the archbiſhop: a Clerke bad me kneele downe and aſke grace, and ſubmit me lowly, and I ſhould finde it for the beſt.

Obedience to God and to hys lawe woulde not ſerue.

☞And I ſayd thē to the archbiſhop. Syr, as I haue ſayd to you diuers times to day, I will wilfully & lowlye obey and ſubmit me to be ordeined euer after the cunning and power, to God & to his law, and to euery member of holy Church, as farre forth as I can perceiue that theſe members accord with their head Chriſt, and will teach me, rule me, or chaſtiſe me by authority, ſpecially of Gods law.

¶And the archbiſhop ſayd. I wiſt wel he would not with out ſuch additions ſubmit him.

In patience and ſilence poſſeſſe your ſoules.

And then I was rebuked, ſcorned & manaſſed on euery ſide: and yet after this, diuers perſons cried vpon me to kneele downe and ſubmit me, but I ſtood ſtill and ſpake no word. And then there was ſpoken of me and to me many great words, & I ſtood and heard them manaſſe curſe and ſcorne me: but I ſayd nothing.

Then a while after, yͤ archbiſhop ſayd to me. Wilt thou not ſubmit thee to the ordinaunce of holy Church?

☞And I ſayd: Syr, I will full gladly ſubmitte me, as I haue ſhewed you before.

¶And then the Archbiſhop bad the Conſtable, to haue me forth thence in haſte.

Thorp caſt in priſon.

And ſo then I was led forth, and brought into a foule vnhoneſt priſon, where I came neuer before. But thanked be God, when all mē were gone forth then from me, & had ſparred faſt the priſon dore after them: By and by after, I therin by my ſelfe, buſied me to thinke on God, & to thanke him of his goodneſſe. And I was then greatlye comforted in all my wits, not onely for that I was then deliuered for a time from the ſight, from the hearing, from the preſence, from the ſcorning, and from the manaſſing of mine enemies: but much more I reioyſed in the Lord, becauſe that through his grace he kept me ſo, both among the flattering ſpecially, and among the manaſſing of mine aduerſaryes, that without heauineſſe and anguiſh of my conſcience, I paſſed away from them. For as a tree layd vpon an other tree, ouerwharte or Croſſe wiſe, ſo was the Archbiſhoppe and hys three Clerkes alwayes contrarye to me, and I to them.

MAthew an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and his Goſpeller, witneſſeth truly in the holy Goſpell, the moſt holy liuing and the moſt wholeſome teachyng of Chriſt. He rehearſeth how that Chriſt likeneth thē that heare his wordes and keepe thē, to a wiſe mā that buildeth his houſe vpon a ſtone, that is a ſtable and a ſad ground. This houſe is mans ſoule in whome Chriſt delighteth to dwell, if it be grounded, that is ſtabliſhed faythfully in his liuing & in his true teaching, adourned or made faire with diuers vertues, which Chriſt vſed and taught without any medling of any error, as are chiefly the conditions of charity.

Chriſt is the ſtone wheron we muſt builde.

This foreſaid ſtone is Chriſt, vpon which euery faythful ſoule muſt be builded, ſince vpon none other ground then vpon Chriſtes liuing and his teaching, no bodye may make any building or houſing, wherein Chriſt will come and dwell. This ſentence wytneſſeth S. Paule to the Corinthians, ſhewing to them that no body may ſet any other ground then is ſet, that is, Chriſtes liuing and teaching. And becauſe that all men and women ſhoulde geue all their buſineſſe here in this life, to build them vertuouſly vpon this ſure foundation: S. Paule knowledging the feruent deſire, and the good will of the people of Epheſye, wrote to them comfortablye ſaying: Now ye are not ſtraungers, gueſtes, nor yet comelinges, but ye are the Citizens and of the houſeholde of God, builded aboue vpon the foundement of the Apoſtles and Prophetes. In which foundement, euery building that is builded or made thorough the grace of God, it encreaſeth or groweth into an holy tēple, that is: Euery body that is grounded or builded faythfully in the teaching and liuing of Chriſt, is there through, made the holy temple of God.

Howe we are made the temple of God.

This is the ſtable groūd and ſtedfaſt ſtone Chriſt, which is the ſure corner ſtone, faſt ioyning & holding mightely together, two walles. For through Chriſt Ieſu, meane or middle perſon of the Trinitye: the Father of heauen is pitious or mercifully ioyned and made one together to mankinde. And through dread to offēd God, and feruent loue to pleaſe him, mē be vnſeparably made one to God and defended ſurely vnder his protection. Alſo, this foreſayd ſtone Chriſt, was figured by the ſquare ſtones of whiche the temple of God, was made. For as a ſquare ſtone, whereſoeuer it is caſt or layd, it abideth and lyeth ſtably: ſo Chriſt and euery faythfull member of his Church by example of him, abideth and dwelleth ſtably in true fayth, and in all other heauēly vertues in all aduerſityes that they ſuffer in this valley of teares.

Marke what we haue by Chriſt.

The propertie of a ſquare ſtone

For loe, when theſe foreſayd ſquare ſtones were hewen and wrought for to be layde in the walles or pillers of Gods temple, none noyſe or ſtroke of the workeman was heard. Certaine this ſilēce in working of this ſtone, figureth Chriſt chiefly and his faithfull members, which by example of him, haue bene and yet are, and euer to the worldes end ſhall be ſo meeke and pacient in euery aduerſity, that no ſound nor yet any grudging ſhall any time be perceiued in them.

Neuertheleſſe, this chiefe and moſt worſhipfull corner ſtone which onely is ground of all vertues, proude beggers repriued: but this deſpight and reproofe, Chriſt ſuffered moſt meekely in his owne perſon, for to geue example of all meekeneſſe and pacience to all his faythfull folowers. Certayne, this world is now ſo full of proud beggers which are named Prieſtes: but the very office of working of Prieſthood which Chriſt approueth true, and accepteth, is farre from the multitude of Prieſts that now reigne in this world.

Chriſt is an example of all perfect meekenes.

For from the higheſt Prieſt to the loweſt all (as who ſay) ſtudy, that is, they imagine and trauell buſilye, how they may pleaſe this world and theyr fleſh. This ſentence and many ſuch other dependeth vpon them, if it be well conſidered, other God the father of heauen hath deceiued all mankinde by the liuing ſpeacially and teaching of Ieſu Chriſt, and by the liuing and teaching of his Apoſtles and Prophetes: or els all the Popes that haue bene, ſince I had any knowledge or diſcretion, with all the Colledge of Cardinals, Archbiſhops, and Biſhops, Monks, Canons, and Friers, with all the contagious flock of the communalty of Prieſthood, which haue (all my life time and mikle lenger) reigned and yet reigne, & increaſe damnably from ſinne into ſinne: haue bene and yet bee proud, obſtinate heretickes, couetous ſimoners, and defouled adulterers in the miniſtering of the Sacramentes, and ſpecially in the miniſtring of the Sacrament of the aultar. For as their workes ſheweth whereto Chriſt biddeth vs take heed: the higheſt Prieſtes and Prelates of this Prieſthood, chalenge and occupy vnlefull, tēporall Lordſhips. And for temporall fauour and meed, they ſell & geue benefices to vnworthy and vnable perſons, yea theſe ſimoners ſell ſinne, ſuffering men and women in euery degree and eſtate, to lye, and continue, from yeare to yere, in diuers vices ſlaūderouſly. And thus by euil example of high prieſts in the church, lower Prieſtes vnder them are not onely ſuffered, but they are mayntayned to ſell full deare (to the people for temporall meed) all the Sacraments.

preaching Gods word truely, freely and continually, taking theyr liuelihood at the free will of the people of their pure almes, where and when they ſuffice not for theyr true and buſy preaching to get their ſuſtenaunce with their handes. To this true ſentence grounded on Chriſtes owne liuing and teaching of his Apoſtles, theſe foreſaid worldly & fleſhly Prieſts wil not conſent effectually. But as theyr workes and alſo their wordes ſhew: boldly and vnſhamefaſtly theſe forenamed Prieſtes and Prelates, couet, and enforce them mightely and buſily, that all holy ſcripture were expounded and drawne accordingly to their maners, and to theyr vngrounded vſages and findinges. For they will not (ſince they hold it but folly and madneſſe) conforme their maners to the pure and ſimple liuing of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, nor they will not followe freely their learning. Wherefore, all the Emperours and Kinges, and all other Lordes and Ladyes, and all the common people in euery degree and ſtate, which haue before time knowne or might haue knowne, and alſo all they that now yet know or might know this foreſayde witnes of Prieſthood, and would not nor yet will, enforce them after theyr cunning and power, to withſtand charitably the foreſayd enemies and traytors of Chriſt, and of his churche: all theſe ſtriue with Antichriſt agaynſt Ieſu. And they ſhall heare the indignation of God almighty without end, if in conuenient time they amend them not, and repent them verelye, doing therefore due mourning and ſorow, after their cunning & power. For through preſumtuouſneſſe and negligence of Prieſtes & Prelates (not of the Churche of Chriſt, but occupying theyr prelacye vnduely in the Church) and alſo flattering and falſe couetouſnes of other diuers named Prieſtes: Louſengers and lounderers, are wrõgfully made and named Heremites, and haue leaue to defraud poore and needy creatures of their liuelode, and to liue by theyr falſe winning and begging, in ſlouth and in other diuers vices. And alſo of theſe Prelates, theſe coker noſes, are ſuffered to liue in pride and hipocriſy, and to defoule themſelues both bodelye and ghoſtly. Alſo by the ſuffering and counſell of theſe foreſayde Prelates and of other Prieſtes, are made both vayne brotherhoodes and ſiſterhoodes, full of pride and enuye, which are full contrary to the brotherhood of Chriſt, ſince they are cauſe of mickle diſſetion, and they multiply and ſuſteyne it vncharitably: for in luſtye eating and drinking, vnmeaſurably and out of time, they exerciſe themſelues. Alſo this vaine confederacy of brotherhoodes, is permitted to be of one clothing, and to hold together.

They hunt after this with tooth and nayle.

An exhortation to all degrees, to ſee prieſthood amended.

Prelates & prieſtes negligent in their duties.

And in all theſe vngrounded and vnlefull doinges, prieſts are parteners and great medlers and counſellers. And ouer this viciouſneſſe, Heremites and Pardoners, Ankers, and ſtrãge beggers, are licenſed and admitted of Prelates and Prieſtes, for to beguile the people with flatteringes and leaſinges ſlaunderouſly agaynſt all good reaſon and true beleue, and ſo to encreaſe diuers vyces in themſelues, and alſo among all them that accept them or conſent to them.

And thus, the viciouſneſſe of theſe foreſayd named Prieſtes & Prelates, haue bene long time, and yet is, and ſhal be cauſe of wars both within the Realme and without. And in the ſame wiſe, theſe vnable Prieſtes haue bene, and yet are, and ſhalbe chiefe cauſe of peſtilence of men, and morein of beaſtes, and of barrenneſſe of the earth, and of all other miſchiefes, to the tyme that Lordes and cõmons able them through grace, for to know and to keepe the cõmaundements of God, inforcing them than faythfully and charitably by one aſſent, for to redreſſe and make one this foreſayde Prieſthood, to the wilfull, poore, meeke, and innocent liuing and teaching, ſpecially of Chriſt and his Apoſtles.

Therefore, all they that know or might know, the viciouſnes that raigneth now curſedly in theſe Prieſts and in theyr learning, if they ſuffice not to vnderſtand this contagious viciouſneſſe: let them pray to the Lord hartily for the health of his Church, abſteining them prudently from theſe indurate enemyes of Chriſt and of his people, and from all their Sacraments, ſince to them all that know them or may know, they are but fleſhly deedes and falſe: as S. Cyprian witneſſeth in the firſt queſtion of decrees, and in the firſt cauſe. Ca. Si quis inquit. For as this Saynt and great Doctour witneſſeth there, that not onely vicious Prieſtes, but alſo all they that fauour them or conſent to them in their viciouſneſſe: ſhall together periſh with them, if they amend them not duely, as all they periſhed that cõſented to Dathan and Abiron. For nothing were more confuſion to theſe foreſayd vicious Prieſtes, than to eſchew them prudently in all theyr vnlefull Sacramentes, while they cõtinue in their ſinnefull liuing ſlaunderouſly, as they haue lõg time done and yet do. And no body need to be afrayde (though death did folow by one wiſe or other) for to dye out of this world without taking of any Sacrament of theſe foreſayd Chriſtes enemyes: ſince Chriſt will not fayle, for to miniſter himſelfe all lefull & healfull Sacramentes and neceſſary at all time (and ſpecially at end) to all them that are in true fayth, in ſtedfaſt hope, and in perfect charity.

Cipr. 1. q. 1. cap. Si quis inquit.

But yet ſome mad fooles ſay (for to eſchew ſlaunder) they wil be ſhriuen once in the yeare, and communed of theyr proper Prieſtes, though they knowe them defouled with ſlaunderous vyces. No doubt, but all they that thus do or conſent priuely or apertly to ſuch doing, are culpable of great ſinne: ſince S. Paul witneſſeth, that not onely they that do euill, are worthy of death and damnation, but alſo they that conſent to euill doers. Alſo (as their ſlaũderous workes witneſſe) theſe aforeſayd vicious Prieſtes, deſpiſe and caſt from them heauenly cunning, that is geuen of the holye ghoſt Wherefore, the Lord throweth all ſuch deſpiſers from him, that they vſe nor do any Prieſthood to him.

No doubt than, all they that wittingly or wilfully, take or cõſent that any other body ſhould take any Sacrament of any ſuche named Prieſt, ſinneth openly and damnably agaynſt all the Trinity, and are vnable to any Sacrament of health.

And that this foreſayd ſentẽce is altogether true, into remiſſion of all my ſinnefull liuing, truſting ſtedfaſtly in the mercye of God, I offer to him my ſoule.

And to proue alſo the foreſayde ſentence true with the helpe of God, I purpoſe fully for to ſuffer meekely and gladly my moſt wretched bodye to bee tormented, where God will, of whom he will, and when he will, and as long as he will, and what temporall payne he will and death, to the prayſing of his name, and to the edification of his Church.

And I that am moſt vnworthy and wretched caytiſe, ſhall now through the ſpeciall grace of God, make to him pleaſaunt ſacrifice with my moſt ſinnefull and vnworthy body. Beſeechyng hartely all folke that read or heare this end of my purpoſed Teſtament, that through the grace of GOD, they diſpoſe verely and vertuouſly all their wittes, and able in lyke maner all their members for to vnderſtand truely, and to keepe faythfully, charitably, and continually all the commaundementes of God, and ſo than to pray deuoutly to all the bleſſed Trinitie, that I may haue grace with wiſedome and prudence from aboue, to end my lyfe here in this foreſayd truth and for this cauſe, in true fayth and ſtedfaſt hope, and perfect charitie. Amen.

What was the ende of this good man and bleſſed ſeruant of God Williã Thorpe, I finde as yet in no ſtory ſpecified. By all coniectures it is to be thought, that the archbiſhop Thomas Arundull being ſo hard an aduerſarye agaynſt thoſe men, would not let him goe. Much leſſe it is to be ſuppoſed, that he would euer retract his ſentence and opinion, which he ſo valiantly mayntayned before the byſhop, neither doth it ſeeme that he had any ſuch recanting ſpirite. Agayne, neyther is it founde, that he was burned. Wherfore it remayneth moſt like to be true, that he beyng committed to ſome ſtraight priſon (according as the Archbyſhop in his examination before, dyd threaten him) there (as Thorpe confeſſeth himſelfe) was ſo ſtraightly kept, that eyther he was ſecretly made away, or els there he dyed by ſickneſſe.

The ende of W. Thorpe vncertayne.

The like end alſo I finde to happen to Iohn Aſton, an other good folower of Wickliffe, who for the ſame doctrine of the ſacrament was condemned by the Biſhops, And becauſe he would not recant, he was committed to perpetuall priſon, wherein the good man continued till his death. An. 1382.

¶ Iohn Puruey.

Furthermore, in the ſayd examinatiõ of Williã Thorpe, mention was made (as ye heard) of Iohn Puruey, of whom alſo ſomething we touched before: promiſing of the ſayd Iohn Puruey, more particularly to entreate in order and proceſſe of time. Of this Puruey, Tho. Walden writeth thus in his ſecond tome, Iohn Puruey ſayth he, was the Library of Lollordes, and gloſer vpon Wickliffe. He ſayde, that the worſhipping of Abrahã was but a ſalutatiõ. And in his third Tome, he ſayth: this Iohn Puruey with Harford a doctour of diuinity, were greuouſly tormented, and puniſhed in the priſon of Saltwood, and at ÿ length recanted at Paules croſſe at London (Tho. Arundel being then Archb. of Canterbury.) Afterward agayne, he was empriſoned vnder Henry Chicheley Archb. of Canterbury, in the yeare of our Lord 1421. Thus muche writeth Walden. The workes of this man which he wrote, were gathered by Richard Lauingame his aduerſarye, whiche I thinke worthy to be remẽbred. Firſt, as touching the Sacrament of the laſt ſupper, the Sacrament of penaunce, the Sacrament of orders, the power of the keyes, the preaching of ÿ Goſpell, of Mariages, of Vowes, of poſſeſſiõs, of the puniſhing and correcting of the Clergy, of the lawes and decrees of the Church, of the ſtate and condition of the Pope and the clergy: Of all theſe generally, he left diuers monuments grauely and exactly written, part whereof, here in the end of his ſtory we thought to exhibite, being tranſlated out of Latine into Engliſh.

Iohn Puruey.

Iohn Puruey priſoned after his recantation.

The articles which he taught, and afterward was forced to recant at Paules croſſe, were theſe hereafter folowing.

Articles of Iohn Puruey recãted,

1. That in the Sacrament of the aultar after the conſecration, there is not, neither can be, any accident without the ſubiect: But there verely remaineth the ſame ſubſtaũce and the very viſible and incorruptible bread, & likewiſe yͤ very ſame wine the which before the conſecration were ſet vpon the aultar to be conſecrate of the Prieſt: likewiſe as when a Pagan or infidell is baptiſed, he is ſpiritually conuerted into a member of Chriſt through grace, and yet remayneth the very ſame man whiche he before was in his proper nature and ſubſtaunce.

2. Auricular confeſſion or priuate penaunce, is a certeyne whiſpering, deſtroying the libertye of the Goſpell & newly brought in by the Pope and the Clergye, to intangle the conſciences of mē in ſinne, & to draw their ſoules into hel.

He ſpeaketh of prieſtes here, & not of publique miniſters appointed in the Church.

3. Euery lay man being holy, and predeſtinate vnto euerlaſting life (albeit he be a lay man) yet is he a true Prieſt before God.

4. That diuers Prelates and other of the Clergy, do liue wickedly contrary to the doctrine and example of Chriſt & his Apoſtles. Therefore they whiche ſo liue, haue not the keyes neyther of yͤ kingdome of heauen, neither yet of hell: neither ought any chriſtian to eſteme his cēſure any more, then as a thing of no force. Yea albeit the pope ſhould peraduenture interdite the realme, yet could he not hurt, but rather profite vs, for ſo much as thereby we ſhould be diſmiſſed from the obſeruation of his lawes, and from ſaying of ſeruice according to the cuſtome of the Church.

Vowes.

5. If any man do make an othe or vow, to keepe perpetuall chaſtity, or do any thing els whereunto God hath not appoynted him, geuing him grace to perform his purpoſe: the ſame vow or othe, is vnreaſonable and vndiſcreet, neither can any Prelate compell him to keep the ſame, except he will do contrary vnto Gods ordinaunce. But he ought to commit him, vnto the gouernance of the holy ghoſt & of his owne conſcience: for ſo much as euery man which will not fulfill his vow or othe, can not do it for that cauſe.

The charge of prieſts.

6. Whoſoeuer taketh vpon him the office of prieſthood, although he haue not the charge of ſoules cōmitted vnto him according to the cuſtome of the Churche: Not onely they may, but ought to preach the Goſpel freely vnto the people otherwiſe he is a thief, excommunicated of God, and of the holy Church.

Againſt tranſubſtantiation.

7. That Innocentius the third Pope, and 600. biſhops, and a thouſand other Prelates, with all the reſt of the clergy, which together with the ſame Pope agreed and determined: that in the ſacrament of the aultar, after the conuerſion of the bread and wine into the body & bloud of Chriſt, that the accidentes of the ſayd bread and wine do remayne there, without any proper ſubiect of the ſame: the whiche alſo ordeyned, that all Chriſtians ought to confeſſe theyr ſinnes once a yeare vnto a proper prieſt, & to receiue the reuerent Sacrament at Eaſter, & made certaine other lawes at the ſame time: All they ſayth he, in ſo doing were fooles and Blockheades, Heretickes, Blaſphemers and Seducers of Chriſtian people. Wherfore, we ought not to beleue their determinations, or of their ſucceſſours, neither ought we to obey theyr lawes or ordinances, except they be plainly grounded vpon the holy Scripture, or vpon ſome reaſō which can not be impugned.

¶ Other Articles drawne out of Purueyes bookes more at large by Ry. Lauingham.

Articles out of Purueys bookes collected by R. Lauingham.

AS touching the Sacramēt of thanks geuing, he ſayth: That that chap. of repentance and remiſſion: Omnis vtriuſque ſexus, wherin it is ordeined that euery faithfull mā ought once euery yeare at the leaſt, that is to ſay, at Eaſter to receiue the Sacrament of Euchariſt: is a beaſtly thing, hereticall and blaſphemous.

The Sacrament of the popiſh aultar.

Item, that Innocentius the 3. Pope, was the head of Antichriſt, who after the letting looſe of Sathan, inuented a new article of our fayth, and a certayn fayned verity touching the Sacrament of the aultar: That is to ſay, that the Sacramēt of the aultar is an accidēt without a ſubſtance, or els an heape of accidentes without a ſubſtaunce. But Chriſt and his Apoſtles doe teach manifeſtly, that the Sacrament of the aultar is bread, and the body of Chriſt together after the maner that he ſpake: And in that he calleth it bread, he woulde haue the people to vnderſtande as they ought with reaſon, that it is very and ſubſtaunciall bread, and no falſe nor fayned bread.

Pope Innocentius head of Antichriſt.

And although Innocētius that Antichriſt doth allege, that in the councell at Lions where this matter was decided were 600. Biſhops with him, and 1000. Prelates, which were in one opiniō of this determination: Al thoſe notwithſtanding he calleth fooles according to that ſaying of Eccl. 1. Of fooles there are an infinite number. And ſo in like maner he calleth them falſe Chriſtes & falſe prophets, of whom Chriſt ſpeaketh the 24. of Mathew. Many falſe Chriſtes and falſe Prophets ſhall ariſe and deceiue many: And therfore, euery Chriſtian man ought to beleue firmly that the ſacrament of the aultar is very bread in deed, and no falſe nor fayned bread, And although it be very bread in deed, yet notwithſtāding, it is the very body of Chriſt in yͤ ſort he ſpake and called it his body: and ſo it is very bread, and the very body of Chriſt. And as Chriſt concerning hys humanity, was both viſible and paſſible, and by his Diuinity was inuiſible and vnpaſſible: So likewiſe, this ſacrament in that it is very bread, may be ſene with the corporal eie, and may alſo abide corruption. But although a man may ſee that Sacrament, yet notwithſtanding, cannot the body of Chriſt in that Sacrament be ſeene with the corporall eye, although it be the body of Chriſt in that maner he ſpake it: For that notwithſtanding, the body of Chriſt is now incorruptible in heauē. So the Sacrament of the cup is very wine, & the very bloud of Chriſt, according as hys maner of ſpeaking was. Alſo Innocentius 3, with a great multitude of his ſecular Clerkes, made a certayne new determination: that the Sacrament of the aultar is an accidence without a ſubſtance, whereas, neither Ieſus Chriſt nor any of his Apoſtles, taught this fayth (but openly and manifeſtly to the contrary) neither yet the holy Doctours, for the ſpace of a thouſand yeares & more, taught this faith openly.

The ſacrament in ſubſtāce bread: in ſignification the body of Chriſt

Tranſubſtantiation not openlye taught 1000 yeares after Chriſt.

Therefore, when Antichriſt or any of his ſhauelinges doth aſke of thee that art a ſimple Chriſtian, whether that this Sacrament be the very body of Chriſt or not: affirme thou it manifeſtly ſo to be. And if he aſke of thee whether it be materiall bread, or what other bread els: ſay thou, that it is ſuch bread as Chriſt vnderſtood and ment by his proper word: and ſuch bread, as the holy ghoſt ment in S. Paule when he called that to be very breade whiche he brake, and wade thou no further herin. If he aſke thee, how this bread is the body of Chriſt: Say thou, as Chriſt vnderſtode the ſame to be his body which is both omnipotent and true, & in whom is no vntrueth. Say thou alſo, as the holy Doctors do ſay, that the terreſtriall matter or ſubſtaunce, may be conuerted into Chriſt, as the Pagan or infidell may bee Baptiſed: and herby ſpiritually to be conuerted and to be a member of Chriſt, and ſo after a certayne maner to become Chriſt, and yet the ſame man to remayne ſtill in his proper nature. For ſo doth S. Auguſtine graunt, that a ſinner forſaking his ſinne and being made one ſpirite with God by fayth, grace, and charity: may be cōuerted into God, and to be after a maner, God: as both Dauid, and S. Iohn do teſtifye, and yet to be the ſame perſon in ſubſtaunce and nature, and in ſoule and vertue to be altered & chāged. But yet, men of more knowledge and reaſō, may more plainely conuince the falſity of Antichriſt both in this matter and in others, by the gift of the holy Ghoſt working in thē. Notwithſtanding, if thoſe that be ſimple men will hūbly holde and keepe the manifeſt and apparaunt wordes of the holy ſcripture, & the playn ſenſe and meaning of the holy ghoſt, and proceed no farther, but humbly to commit that vnto yͤ ſpirite of God which paſſeth theyr vnderſtanding: Then may they ſafely offer themſelues to death, as true Martyrs of Ieſus Chriſt.

The Sacrament both bread, and the body in diuers reſpectes.

Auricular confeſſion and penance

As touching the Sacrament of penaunce: That chapter Omnis vtriuſque ſexus, by which a certayne newe founde auricular confeſſion was ordeined: is full of hipocriſye, hereſy: couetouſnes, pride, & blaſphemy he ſayth, and reproueth the ſame chapter verbatim, and that by the ſentences of the ſame proces. Alſo, that the penaunce and paynes limited by the Canons, be vnreaſonable and vniuſt, for the auſterity and rigorouſnes which they conteine, more then are taxed by Gods law. He alſo doth exemplify, of the ſolemne and publicke deniall of penitentes to be receiued into orders, according to the decree of the generall Councell Diſtinctione 50. cap Ex pœnitentibus. Alſo of the ſeuenfold penitence of a prieſt committing fornication, according to the chapter. Præſbiter Diſtinct. 82. And farther ſheweth, an other example of the penitence of Prieſtes according to that chater. Qui præſbiterum &c. Whereas the decretall of the generall Counſell ſayth, that ſuch a one ought to remayne continuing his life, in the warres, and not to mary. And how Innocentius 3. brought in a new founde confeſſion: whereby, the Prieſtes do oppreſſe the ſimple lay men. And that many other things they do, compelling them to confeſſe themſelues to blind and ignoraunt Prieſts, in whom is nothing els then pride and couetouſnes, hauing ſuche in contempt as are learned and wiſe. Alſo, that the Decretall of Innocentius 3. touching the foreſayd auricular or vocal confeſſion: was brought in and inuented, to intricate & intangle mens conſciences with ſinne, & to draw thē downe to hell. And furthermore, that ſuch maner of confeſſion, deſtroyeth the Euangelicall libertye, and doth let men to inquire after, & to retayn, the wiſe counſell & doctrine of ſuch as be gods prieſts: which know faithfully how to obſerue his precepts and commaundements, & which would willingly teach the people, the right way to heauē. For which abuſe, all Chriſten men and ſpicially all Engliſhmē, ought to exclayme agaynſt ſuch wicked lawes.

The order of Prieſthood.

As touching the Sacrament of order he ſayth: That al good chriſtians, are predeſtinate and be ordeined of God, & made true Prieſtes to offer Chriſt in themſelues, and to Chriſt, themſelues: as alſo to teach and preach the Goſpell to their neighbors, as well in word as in exāple of liuing. But the worldly ſhauelings do more magnify the naked & bare ſignes of prieſthood (inuented by ſinfull men) then the true & perfect prieſthood of God, grounded by a true & liuely fayth, annexed with good works. Alſo, if it were needfull to haue ſuch ſhauelinges, God knoweth how, & can make when it pleaſeth him, prieſtes (without mans working & ſinfull ſignes, that is to ſay, without either ſacramentes or characters) to be known & diſcerned of the people, by their vertuous life and example, and by their true preaching of yͤ law of God. For ſo made he the firſt made prieſtes & elders before the law of Moyſes: and ſo made he Moyſes a prieſt before Aaron, & before the ceremonies of the law, without mans operation at all: And euen ſo hath God made al ſuch as are predeſtinate, to be his prieſtes. But ſuch as be true Chriſtians, receiue none ſuch as Prieſtes, but vnleſſe they follow Chriſt and his apoſtles, neither do they beleue that they make the ſacrament of the aultar (which they affirme to be Gods body) when it pleaſeth thē: leaſt happely God be not with them, foraſmuch as that they do this thing for couetouſnes ſake, or els to brag of their owne power. And therfore ſuch as be ſimple men, will worſhip that Sacrament in this doubtfulnes, with a ſilent conditiō, that is, if it be made by Gods authority, and to haue their deuotiō to the body of Chriſt in heauen. Alſo, that as ſuch be elders, if they be Gods prieſtes, be Biſhops, Prelates, and Curats of their Chriſtian brethren, whom they may lead to heauē by the example of their holy conuerſatiō, and by preaching of the goſpell although they make no ſacrifice to that Antichriſt of Rome for their confirmation: neither be they dedicated to the world by ſecular diuine thinges, and by conſuming the liuinges of the poore: as be thoſe ſecular biſhops, prelates & curates. Alſo, that although there were no pope according as the cuſtome of the church is: yet Chriſt which is the hed of his church, doth ordeyne ſuch a Pope as pleaſeth him: and that is, whomſoeuer is moſt humble & lowly and beſt doth the office of a true Prieſt, although he be vnknown to yͤ world. And although ther were no ſuch proud biſhop aboue all the reſt, as the church doth vſe: yet all the prieſtes might well gouern the church by common aſſent, as once they did, before ſuch worldly pride crept in amongſt the Biſhops. &c. And admit that no ſuch Prieſtes were according to the accuſtomed vſe now of receiuing of order & tonſure, by ſuch a mytred Byſhoppe and his tonſure: yet: Chriſt knoweth both how to make and chuſe ſuch as ſhall well pleaſe him, both in conuerſation of life, & ſincere preaching of the Goſpell, in miniſtring to his people all neceſſary ſacraments. And euery holy man which is a miniſter of Chriſt, although he be not ſhauen, is a true Prieſt ordeined of God, although no mitred Biſhoppe euer lay his character vpon him: So, that the Pope and Prelates, doe make more eſtimation of their Characters (as tonſures & crownes by them inuented) then of the true and perfect prieſthood ordeined of God: whereas, all thoſe that are predeſtinate, are true Prieſtes made of him.

He meaneth of priuate preaching to theyr neighbours.

True miniſters may be made without ſhauing.

Prieſts here haue a priuate not a publique vnderſtanding.

What if there were no Pope knowen, yet the Church could ſtand.

Tonſure maketh not a Prieſt.

The Popes cēſures, like the blaſt of Lucifer.

As touching the authoritye of the keyes and cenſures, no Chriſtian man ought to eſteeme Sathan (whom men call the pope) and his vniuſt cēſures: more then the hiſſing of a ſerpēt, or the blaſt of Lucifer. Alſo, that no man ought to truſt or put confidence in the falſe indulgences of couetous Prieſtes, which indulgences do draw away the hope which men ought to repoſe in God, to a ſort of ſinful men, and do robbe the poore of ſuch almes as is geuen to them: Such Prieſtes be manifeſt betrayers of Chriſt and of the whole Church, and be Sathans own ſtuardes to beguyle chriſten ſoules by theyr hipocriſy and fayned pardons. Alſo, foraſmuch as thoſe prelates and clergy men liue ſo execrable a life, contrary to the goſpel of Chriſt, and examples of his Apoſtles, & teach not truly the goſpell, but only lies and the traditions of ſinfull wicked men: It appereth moſt manifeſtly that they haue not the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, but rather the keyes of hell. And they may be right well aſſured, that God neuer gaue vnto them authority to make & eſtabliſh ſo many ceremonies & traditions, which be contrary to the liberty of the Goſpell, and are blocks in chriſten mens wayes, that they can neither know nor obſerue the ſame his Goſpel, in liberty of cōſcience, and ſo attayne a ready way to heauen.

Popiſhe prieſts haue not the keies of heauen, but rather of hell.

Alſo, that al maner of religious men, notwithſtanding the chapter Religioſi, touching the priuiledges in the Clementines: may lawfully miniſter all ſacramēts to thē that are worthy the ſame. Foraſmuch as the ſame is a worke of charity, which onely the will and ordinance of the pope and his fautors in this caſe is to hinder and let. Item, if the Pope ſhall interdict this our realme: that cannot hurt vs, but much profite vs: Becauſe that therby he ſhould ſeperate vs from all his wicked lawes, and frō the charges of ſuſtaining of ſo many thouſand ſhauelings, which with ſmal deuotiō or none at all, patter and chatter a new foūd ſong ſecundum vſum Sarum. So that not whatſoeuer yͤ pope in his generall counſell bindeth in earth, is bound of God in heauen: either for that he bindeth vnreaſonably, and contradictorily doth agaynſt himſelf, or els for that he hath forſaken the iudgement of God.

The popes curſe hurteth not, but profiteth.

As touching the preaching of the Goſpell: whoſoeuer receiueth or taketh vpō him yͤ office of a prieſt or of a biſhop and diſchargeth not the ſame by the example of his good cōuerſation and faythfull preaching of the Goſpel: is a theef, excommunicate of God, and of holy church. And further if the curates preach not the word of God, they ſhalbe damned, and if they know not how to preach, they ought to reſigne their benefices: So that thoſe prelates which preach not the Goſpel of Chriſt (although they could excuſe themſelues from the doing of any other euill) are dead in themſelues, are Antichriſtes, and Sathans trāſfigured into angels of light, night theues, manquellers by day light, & betrayers of Chriſt his people.

Goſſopry not ſufficient cauſe to reſtraine matrimony.

Concerning the ſacrament of Matrimony: Notwithſtanding any ſpirituall kinred or goſſopry, a man and woman may lawfully mary together by the law of god, without any diſpenſatiō papiſtical. And in yͤ ſame place he ſayth that if our realm do admit one not borne in matrimony or illegitimate to the imperiall crowne, ſo that he doth well diſcharge the office of a king: God maketh him a king, and by cōſequence doth reiect an other king or heyre of yͤ kingdome, being borne in matrimony and legitimate: So, for ſuch ſpirituall kindred there ought no diuorſe to be made. Alſo notwithſtanding the Cap. Si inter de ſponſalibus: If any man ſhall make any contract with any woman by yͤ wordes of the future tence, by an oth taken: & afterwards ſhall with an other woman make the like contract by the wordes of the preſent tence: that then the ſecond contract ſtandeth. Alſo, if a man make any cōtract with a womā by the wordes of the future tence, vpō his oth taken: & maketh afterwardes the like contract with another not altering the words and hath carnal copulation vpon the ſame: the firſt contract maketh the matrimony good, and not the ſecond. Alſo, if a man before witnes aſſure himſelſe to a woman by a contract made in the preſent tence, & hath children by the ſame woman: & afterward the ſame man marieth another woman, with the like wordes in the preſent tence, before witneſſe: Although the firſt witneſſes be deade, or els by bribes corrupt, and yͤ ſecond bring his witneſſes before the iudge to proue the ſecond contract: the firſt cōtract yet ſtandeth in force, although the Pope (allowing the ſecōd contract) doth compell them to liue in adultery agaynſt yͤ commaundement of God. Alſo, he condemneth the decretall of the reſtitution of things ſtollen Cap. Literas tuas: which willeth, that a man and woman hauing carnall copulation in the degree of conſanguinity forbiddē, and hath no witnes hereof: If the woman will depart from the man ſhe ſhall be compelled by the cenſures, to remayne with him, and to yelde her debt. Alſo, in caſe where a man hath made cōtract with two women, with one ſecretly hauing no witneſſe, and with the other openly hauing witneſſe: Then were it better to acknowledge the inſufficiency of the law, and to ſuffer men to be ruled by their owne conſciences, then by the cenſures to compell them, to committe and lyue in adultery.

The firſt mariage lawfully before witnes made, ſtandeth.

Keeping & making vowes.

As touching the keping and making of vowes: That vow or othe is beaſtly, and is without al diſcretion made: which to performe and keep, a man hath no power but by grace geuen him of God. Becauſe that ſome ſuch there be, whom god doth not accept to perſeuere in the ſtate of chaſtity and perpetuall virginity: and ſuch a one cannot keep his vow, although he make the ſame. Alſo that euery one making a vow of continencye or chaſtitye, when making the ſame he ſhall not be accepted of God: doth very vndiſcretly, and as one without al reaſon maketh the ſame, whē he is not able of himſelf without yͤ gift of God to fulfil his promiſe: according to that ſaying of the wiſe mā. cap. 8. No man hath the gift of cōtinency, vnles that God geue it vnto him. For otherwiſe, if god help not ſuch a one to perform the vow or othe which he hath made and takē: No prelate can compell him, vnles he do cōtrary to Gods ordinance:

but he ought to cōmit himſelf to the gouernment of Gods holy ſpirit,and his owne conſcience.

Poſſeſſions of the Church.

For the poſſeſſions of the Church:In another treatiſe it is declared,how the king,the Lordes and cōmōs may without any charge at all,kepe 15.garriſons,& finde 15000. ſouldiours,(hauing ſufficient landes and reuenues to liue vpon) out of the temporalties gotten into the hands of the clergy & fained religious men:which neuer do that,which pertayneth to the office of curates to doe,nor yet to ſecular lords. And moreouer, the king may haue euery yere 20000 pound to come freely into his cofers and aboue. Alſo,may find or ſuſtaine 15. Colledges more:and 15000. prieſtes and clerkes,with ſufficient liuing: and a 100. hoſpitals for the ſicke & euery houſe to haue one hundreth marks in lands. And all this may they take of the foreſayde temporaltyes, without any charge to the realme:wherunto,the king,the Lords,and the commons are to be inuited. For otherwiſe there ſeemeth to hang ouer our heads,a great and marueilous alteratiō of this realme,vnleſſe the ſame be put in execution. Alſo,if the ſecular Prieſtes and fayned religious, which be ſimoniackes and heretiques, which fayne themſelues to ſay maſſe,and yet ſay none at all, according to the Canons,which to their purpoſe the bring and alledge. 1.q 3.Audiuimus.& cap.Pudenda. & cap.Schiſma: By which chap. ſuch prieſtes and religious do not make the Sacrament of the aultar: That then all Chriſtians,eſpecially all the founders of ſuch Abbeyes and indowers of biſhoprickes,priories,and chaunteries:ought to amend this fault and treaſon committed agaynſt their predeceſſors, by taking from them ſuch ſecular dominiōs which are the mayntenance of all their ſinnes. And alſo,that Chriſtian Lords & princes are bound to take away from the clergy, ſuch ſecular dominion as noſeleth & nouriſheth them in hereſies:& ought to reduce them vnto the ſimple and poore life of Chriſt Ieſus, and his Apoſtles.

1.q.3.24.q.1. Cap pudenda.

Belly cheare of yl diſpoſed prelats,and of Monaſteries not to be nouriſhed with temporalties and appropriations.

And further, that all Chriſtian Princes (if they will amend the maledictiō and blaſphemy of the name of God) ought to take away their temporalties frō that ſhauen generation,which moſt of all doth nouriſh them in ſuch malediction:And ſo in likewiſe, the fat tithes from Churches appropriat to rich monks & other religions fained by manifeſt lying,& other vnlawfull meanes, likewiſe ought to debar their golde to the proud Prieſt of Rome,which doth poyſon all Chriſtendome with Simony and hereſy. Further,that it is a great abhomination that Biſhops,mōks, and other prelates,be ſo great Lords in this world,where as Chriſt with his Apoſtles, and diſciples, neuer took vpon thē ſecular dominion, neither did they appropriat vnto them churches as theſe men do:but led a poore life, & gaue a good teſtimony of theyr prieſthood.And therfore,all Chriſtians ought to the vttermoſt of theyr power and ſtrength to ſweare that they will reduce ſuch ſhauelings,to the humility and pouerty of Chriſt and his Apoſtles:And whoſoeuer thus doth not,conſenteth to theyr hereſy.Alſo,that theſe two chapiters of the immunitye of Churches, are to be condemned, that is, cap. Non minus, and cap.Aduerſus. Becauſe they doe decree, that temporall Lordes may neyther require tallages nor tenthes,of any Eccleſiaſticall perſons.

Correction of the clergie.

2 q.5.Præſul. Ibid Nullam.

Now to the correction of the clergy:By the law of god and by reaſon,the king and all other Chriſtians may take reuenge of Italye,and of all the falſe Prieſts and Clerkes within the ſame,and to reduce them vnto the humble ordinannce of Ieſus Chriſt. Alſo,that the law of Silueſter the Pope,which is declared in 2.q.5.cap.Præſul,and cap.Nullam, is cōtrary to the law of Chriſt & either teſtament.And that proud and ambitious Silueſter by this lawe, ſo defended two Cardinals which were not to be defended by the law of Chriſt: that by no meanes they might be conuinced, although they were both vicious & euil. And although chriſt ſuſteined and ſuffered the iudgemēt of vniuſt temporal iudges:Our mitred prelates in theſe dayes,ſo magnify them ſelues beyond chriſt and his Apoſtles,that they refuſe and will none of ſuch iudgements. Alſo,that thoſe decretals of accuſations cap.Quādo & Qualiter. which do prohibite that any clerkes ſhould be brought before a ſecular iudge to receiue iudgement:do contayne both hereſy,blaſphemy,and error, and bringeth great gayne and commodity to Antechriſtes cofers.

Puniſhing of adultery belongeth to ſecular magiſtrates rather then to prelates.

Furthermore, that all Chriſtian kinges and Lordes, ought to exclayme agaynſt the Pope and thoſe that be hys fautors,and baniſh them out of theyr landes,till ſuch time as they will obey God,and his Goſpell, Kings and other miniſters of Gods iuſtice. Alſo,that biſhops and theyr fauourers,that ſay it appertayneth not to kings and ſecular Lordes(but vnto them and theyr Officials)to puniſh adultery and fornicatiō:do fall into manifeſt treaſon agaynſt the king,and hereſy agaynſt the ſcripture. Alſo,that it appertayneth to the king, to haue the order both of prieſts & biſhops,as theſe kings Salomon and Ioſaphat had.

Good kings ought to depoſe wicked Popes.

Furthermore,that chapter Nullus iudicium de foro competenti, by the which ſecular iudges are forbidden without the Biſhops commaundement to condemne any Clerk to death:Is manifeſtly agaynſt the holy ſcripture,declaryng that kinges haue power ouer clerkes & prieſtes to puniſh thē for their deſerued crimes. Alſo that the decree of Boniface de pœnis in 6.cap.fœlicis,made agaynſt the perſecutors, ſtrikers,and impriſoners of Cardinals, as contrary both to the holy ſcripture & to all reaſon. Alſo,that by the law of God and reaſon a ſecular Lord may lawfully take a Cardinal & put him in priſon for committing the crime of open ſimony,adultery,& manifeſt blaſphemy. Alſo ẏ the chapter Si Papa diſt.40. which ſayth that the Pope ought to be iudged of none,vnles he be deuius a fide,is cōtrary to ẏ goſpell which ſayth: If thy brother ſinne agaynſt thee correct him. Alſo where as S.Gregory and S.Auguſtine called themſelues the ſeruaunts of Gods ſeruants: this proud biſhop of Rome which will not be iudged by his ſubiects (which be in very deed his Lordes,if they be iuſt & good men) doth deſtroy the order of Gods law, and all humility,and doth extoll himſelf aboue God and his Apoſtles. Alſo,that chriſtian kings ought, not onely to iudge this proud biſhop of Rome,but alſo to depoſe him,by the example that Ceſtrenſis lib.6.cap.8.declareth, of Otho the Emperour, which depoſed Iohn the xij.and did inſtitute Leo in his place. And further, he maketh an exhortation to the Princes to iudge the Church of Rome, which he calleth the great and curſed ſtrompet,of whom S.Iohn writeth in the Apocalips, chap.17.

De conſecratione, id eſt.2.cap. Seculares.

The Popes lawes contrarye to themſelues.

The pope & his Cardinals no part of the true Church.

The Canon lawe full of hereſie.

Laſtly, touching the lawes and determinations of the church: Chriſtians haue reaſonable excuſes and cauſes to repell the ſtatutes of the pope and of his ſhauelings,which be not expreſly grounded in the holy ſcriptures, or els vpon reaſon ineuitable. Alſo he ſayth that that law whiche is ſet forth of conſecration diſtinctione.2. cap.Seculares & cap. Omnis homo,& cap.Et ſi non frequentius,& cap.In cœna domini: That ſuch ſecular men as do not receiue the ſacrament of the aultar at Chriſtmas, Eaſter,and Whitſontide, are not to be counted amongeſt the number of Chriſtians,nor are to be eſtemed as chriſtiās:wherby it followeth,that all Clerkes and lay men that obſerue not the ſame, it ſeemeth they go ſtrait to hell. But if this law be of no force,for that the cuſtome and vſe in receiuing is contrary to the ſame: then may we bleſſe ſuch rebellion & diſobediēce to the pope and his law,for otherwiſe we ſhould flee to hel without any ſtay or let. wherby we may conclude,that all Chriſtiās ought well to practiſe this ſchoole of diſobedience againſt ẏ Pope and all his lawes (not founded vpon the holy ſcripture) which do let men to clime to heauen by the keping of charity,and the liberty of the Goſpell. Alſo,that Chriſtian men haue great cauſe to refuſe the lawes and ſtatutes of theſe worldly clerkes,which ẏ people call the papal lawes and biſhoplike ſtatutes, for the couetouſneſſe and voluptuouſneſſe of them:without the which,the church & congregation of God might ſafely run towards heauē by ẏ ſweet yoke of the Lord, as it did 1000.yeres before the ſaid lawes were preſcribed and ſēt to the Vniuerſities,and withdrew mē from ſtudiyng of ẏ holy ſcripture,for the deſire of benefices and worldly goods. Alſo that ſimple men do reuerētly receiue the ſentences of the Doctors and other lawes,ſo farre forth as they be expreſly groūded vpon the holy ſcripture or good reaſon.Alſo,that where as the Popes lawes, & lawes of his miniſters & clerks be both cōtrary to them ſelues,and haue not theyr foūdation neither vpon ẏ ſcripture,nor yet vpon reaſon:ſimple mē ought to bid thē farewell. Alſo,that when all the apoſtles faith fayled thē in the time of the Lords paſſiō, fayth thē reſted in the bleſſed virgin:much more might that proud prieſt of Rome with all his rabble eaſily erre in the fayth, and yet is the Chriſtian fayth preſerued whole and ſafe,in the faythful members of Chriſt,which are his true Church: But the Pope and all his rablement, cannot proue that they be any part of thys Church. Alſo,that the Pope with all his fautours,may as well be deceiued by a lying ſpirite, as was Achab and all his prophetes: and that one true prophet,as was Micheas may haue the verity ſhewed vnto him contra concilium, Alſo, that all good Chriſtians ought to caſt from them the Popes lawes,ſaying: Let vs breake their bandes in ſonder,and let vs caſt from our neckes thoſe heauy yoakes of theyrs. Alſo,that where theſe prelates doe burne one good booke,for one errour perhaps conteyned in the ſame: they ought to burne all the books of the Canon law,for the manifold hereſies contayned in them.

¶And thus muche out of a certaine olde written booke in parchment borowed once of I.B. which booke conteining diuers auncient records of the vniuerſitie: ſeemeth to belong ſometimes to the library of the Vniuerſitie, bearing the yeare of the compiling thereof. 1396. Which computation if it be true, then was it written of him or that he recanted before Thomas Arundell Archbiſhop at Saltwood, where he was impriſoned. Whereunto I thought alſo to annexe, a certayne godly and moſt frutefull Sermon, of like antiquitie, preached at Paules croſſe much about the ſame time, which was in the yeare of our Lord. 1388. by a certaine learned clerke, as I find in one old monument, named R. Wimbeldon. Albeit, among the auncient regiſters and records belonging to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: I haue an old worne copy of the ſaid Sermon, written in very old Engliſh, and almoſt halfe conſumed with age: purporting the ſaid autor hereof bearing alſo the foreſayd name. The true copy of which Serman, in his owne ſpeech wherein it was firſt ſpoken and preached at the croſſe, on the Sonday of Quinquageſima, and after exhibited to the Archbiſhop of Canterburie (being then as it ſeemeth, William Courtney) here foloweth.

A Sermon no leſſe godly then learned, preached at Paules Croſſe on the Sonday of Quinquageſima. ann. 1389. by R.Wimbeldon.

Redde rationem villicationis tuæ. Luce. xvi.

Math.20. The ſermon of R. Wimbeldon.

My dere frends, ye ſhullen vnderſtond: that Chriſt autor and doctour of trueth, in his booke of the Goſpell (likening the kingdome of heauen to an houſholder) ſaith on this maner. Like is the kingdome of heuen to an houſholding man, that went out firſt on the morow to hire workemen into his vine. Alſo, about the third, ſixt, nieuth and enleuente houres he went out, and found men ſtonding idel. And ſayd to them. Go ye into min vineyerde, and that right is, I wille geue you. Whan the day was agoo, he clepid his ſtuward and high to geue eche man a peny.

The calling of God is diuers.

The ſpirituall vnderſtonding of this houſholder, is our Lord Ieſu Chriſt that is head of the houſhold of holy Church. And thus clepith men in diuerce houres of the day, that is in diuerce agees of the werld. As in time of law of kinde, he cleped by enſpiryng, Abel, Ennok, Noe, and Abraham. In time of the old law, Moſes, Dauid, Iſay, and Ieremy. And in time of grace, Apoſtles Martyrs, and Confeſſours and Virgines. Alſo he cleped men in diuers agees, ſome on childhode, as Iohn Baptiſt: ſome on ſtate of wexing, as Iohn the Euangeliſt: ſome in ſtate of manhoode, as Peter and Andrew: and ſome in old agee as Gamaliel, and Ioſeph of Arimathie. And all theſe he clepeth to trauaile in his vine, that is the Church, and that in diuers maner. For right as yee ſeeth, that in tilling of the materiall vine there ben diuers labours, for ſome kutten awey the voyde braunches, ſome maken forkis and railes to beren vp the vine, and ſome diggen away the olde earth fro the rote, and leyn there fatter. And all this offices ben ſo neceſſary to the vine, that if any of them faile, it ſhall harme greatly, other deſtroy the vine: For but if the vine be kutte, ſhe ſhall waxe wilde, but if ſhe be rayled ſhe ſhall be ouergo with netles and wedis. And but if the rote be fatted with donge, ſhee for feblenes ſhuld waxe baraine.

Right ſo in the Church beth nedefull thes three offices, prieſthood, knythode, and laborers. To prieſts it falleth, to kut away the void braunches of ſinnes with the ſwerd of her tong. To knighthode it falleth to letten wronges, and thefftes to ben done, and to maintaine Goddis law, and them that ben teachers therof, and alſo to kepe the londe from enemies of other londes. And to labourers it falleth, to trauail bodelich, and with ther ſore ſwete, geten out of the earth bodillech liſelode for hem, and other parties. And theſe ſtates beth alſo nedefull to the Church, that none may well ben without other, for if prieſthod lacked, the people for default of knowing of Gods lawe, ſhould waxe wilde in vices, and deyen goſtely. And if the knithod laked, and men to rulin the puple by law and hardineſſe, theeues and enemies ſhulden ſo encres that no man ſhuld liue in peace. And if the laborers were nought, both knightes and prieſtes muſt bicome acre men and herdis: and els, they ſhuld for defaute of bodily ſuſtenaunce deye. And therfore ſaith clerk Auicenne, that euery vnreaſonable beſt if he haue that that kind hath ordeined for him: as kinde hath ordeined it: he is ſuffiſaunce to liue by himſelfe without any helpe of other of the ſame kind. As if there were but one horſe other one ſhepe in the world, yet if he had graſſe and corne as kind hath ordeined for ſuch beaſtes, he ſhuld liue well I now. But if there ne were but O man in the world, though he had all that good that is therein, yet for defaut he ſhuld deie, or his life ſhuld be wors thā if he were naught, & the cauſe is this for that thing that kind ordeineth for a mans ſuſtenaunce, without other arraieng than it hath of kind, accordeth nought to him. As though a man haue corne as it commeth from the earth, yet it is no meate according to him, vnto it be by mans craft, chaunged into bread: and though he haue fleſh other fiſh, yet while it is rawe as kinde ordeined it, till it be by mans trauaile ſodden, roſted, or baken, it cordit not to mans liſelode. And right ſo, wolle that the ſheepe beareth mot by mannis diuers craftis and trauailes be chaunged or it be able to cloth any man: and certis O man by himſelfe, ſhuld neuer doo all theſe laboures. And therefore ſaith this clerke, it is neede that ſome be acre men, ſome bakers, ſome makers of cloth, and ſome marchaunts to ſetch that, that on londe ſetteth from an other there it is plentie.

And certis this ſhuld be a cauſe why, euery ſtate ſhuld loue other. And men of o craft ſhuld not deſpiſe ne hate men of none other craft, ſith they be ſo nedefull euerich to other. And oft thelke craftes that ben moſt vnhoneſt, might worſt ben forbore: and o thing I dare well ſay that he that is neither trauailing in this world, on ſtudieng, on praiers, on preaching, for helpe of the people as it falleth to priſts, neither ruling the people, mainteining ne defending fro enemies as it falleth to knights, neither traueling on the earth, in diuerſe craftes, as it falleth to labourers: Whan the day of rekening commeth that is, the end of this life, right as he liued here withouten trauaile, ſo he ſhall there lack the reward of the penie, that is, the endles ioie of heauen. And as he was here liuing after none ſtate ne order, ſo he ſhall be put than in that place that no order is in, but euerlaſting horror and ſorow, that is in hell. Herfore, eueriche man ſe to what ſtate God hath cleped him, and dwell he therin by trauaile according to his degree. Thou that art a laborer or a crafty man, do this truelly. If thou art a ſeruaunt or a bond man, be ſuget and lowe in drede of diſpleaſing of thy Lord. If thou art a marchaunt, diſceiue nought thy brother in chaffering. If thou art a knight or a Lord, defend the poore man and needy fro handes that will harme them. If thou art a Iuſtice or a Iudge, go not on the right hand by fauour, neyther on the left hand, to puniſh any man for hate. If thou art a prieſt, vndernime, praye, and repreue, in all maner patience and doctrine. Vndernime thilke that ben negligent, pray for thilke that bene obedient, reproue tho that ben vnobedient to God. So euery man trauaile in his degree. For whan the euen is come, that is, the end of this worlde: than euerye man ſhall take reward, good or euill, after that he hath trauailed here.

2.Tim.4.

The wordes that I haue taken to make of my ſermon, be thus muche to ſay: Yelde reconing of thy bayly. Chriſt autour of pitye and louer of the ſaluation of his people, in the proces of this goſpell enfourmeth euery man what is his baylye, by maner of a parable of a bayly that he ſpeaketh of, to aray him to anſwer of the goodes that God hath taken him, when the day of ſtraight reconing ſhall be come, that is the day of dome. And ſo I at this tyme thorowe the helpe of God, folowing him that is ſo great a maiſter of autoritie, becauſe that I know nothing that ſhould more drawe away mans vnreaſonable loue fro the paſſing ioy of thys world, then the minde of the dreadfull reconing. As much as ſuffice, I ſhall ſhewe you how ye ſhall diſpoſe you to auoide the vengeaunce of God, when ther ſhalbe time of ſo ſtraight doome, that we ſhall geue reconing of euery idle word that we haue iſpoken. For than it ſhal be ſaid to vs, and we ſhall not flee it: Yelde reconing of thy bayly.

Nota.

But for forther proces of this firſt party of this ſermon, yee ſhall wete: that there ſhall be three bayliſes that ſhall be cleped to this ſtraight reconing. Twaine to anſwer for them ſelfe and for other, that bene prieſts that haue cure of mens ſoules, & temporal mē that haue gouernayle of people: and the thirde baylyf ſhall acount onely for himſelfe, and that is euerye Chriſten man, of that he hath receiued of God. And euery of theſe ſhall aunſwer to three queſtions: To the firſt queſtion, how haſt thou entred? The ſecond, how haſt thou ruled: And to the third, how haſt thou liued? And if thou canſt well aſſoile theſe three queſtions, was there neuer none earthly Lord that euer ſo well rewarded his ſeruant without compariſon, as thy Lord God ſhal reward thee, that is with bliſſe, and ioye, and life that euer ſhall laſt. But on that other ſide, and thou wilt now be recheles of thine owne welfare, and take none heede of this reconing: If that day take thee ſodainly, ſo that thou paſſe hence in deadly ſinne (as thou wotſt neuer what ſhall fall thee) all the toungs that euer were, or euer ſhall be, mow not tell the ſorrowe and wo that thou ſhalt euer be in, and ſuffer. Therefore, the deſire of ſo great ioy, and the dread of ſo great paine, thoughe loue ne dread of God were not in thine hart: yet ſhould that make thee afeard to ſinne, for to thinke that thou ſhalt giue reconing of thy bayly. Therefore as I ſay to thee, the firſt queſtion that ſhall be propoſed to the firſt bayly, that is a prelat other a Curat of mens ſoules, is this: How haſt thou entred? Math.xxij. Friend, how entredſt thou hether? Who brought thee in to this office? Truth or Symony? God or the Deuill? Grace or mony? The fleſh or the ſpirit? Giue thou thy reconing if thou canſt. If thou canſt not, I rede that thou tary for to learne. For vp hap ere night thou ſhalt be cleped. And if thou ſtande dombe for vn-kunning,or els for confuſion of thy conſcience:thou fall into the ſentence that anon followeth:Binde his handes and his feete,and caſt him in to the vtter warde of darknes, there ſhall be weeping and grenning of teethe.Therfore I rede thee,that thou aduiſe thee how thou ſhalt anſwer to this queſtion. How haſt thou entred? whether by cleeping, or by thine owne procuring: for that thou wouldeſt trauaile in Gods goſpell, other for thou wouldeſt be richly arayed? Anſwere now to thy owne conſcience as thou ſhalt anſwer to God,thou that haſt take now the order of prieſte, whether thou be curate or none: who ſtirred thee to take vpon thee ſo high an eſtate?Whether for thou wouldeſt liue as a prieſt ought to do,ſtudying of Gods law to preach, and moſt hartely to pray for the people:or for to liue a delicious life,vpon other mens trauayle,and thy ſelfe trauaile nought.

Queſtio.

Why alſo ſetten men theyr ſonnes either their couſins to ſchole? Whereto, but for to get them great aduancements, or to make them the better to knowe howe they ſhoulden ſerue God?

Solutio.

This men may ſee openly, by the ſciences that they ſet them to.

Queſtio.

Why I pray you, put men their ſonnes to the law ciuill,or to the kings court to write letters & writs:rather thã toPhiloſophy or Diuinity,but for the hope that theſe occupations ſhoulde be euer means, to make them great in the world. I hope that ther wil no man ſay, that they ne ſhoulde better learne the rule of good liuing in the booke of Gods law, than in any bookes of mans worldly wiſedome?

Solutio.
Iohannes Chriſoſtomus Homelia.27.

But certes now it is ſothe,that Iohn Chriſoſtom ſaith Mothers be louing to the bodies of their children,but the ſoule they deſpiſe, they deſire them to wel fare in this world, but they take none hede what they ſhall ſuffer in the tother: Some ordeinen fees for their children, but none ordeine them to godward: The luſt of their bodies they wol deere by,but the health of their ſoule the reke nought of. If they ſee them poore or ſicke,they ſorrow and ſigheth,but though they ſee them ſinne, they ſorrowe not.

Note.

And in this they ſhew that they brought forth the bodies but not the ſoules. And if we take heede truly, what abhominations be ſcattered and ſpread abrode in holy church now adayes among prieſtes: we ſhul wel wit,that they come not all to the folde of Chriſt by Chriſtes clepping for to profite:but by other wayes to get them worldly welth,and this is the cauſe of leſing of ſoules, that Chriſt bought ſo deare, and of many errours among the people: and therefore, it is iwrit in the booke of mourning, where the prophet ſpeaketh thus to God.

The raſhe making of miniſters.

Tre 1. The enemy hath put his hand to all things deſyrable to him: for he hath let lawles folke enter into the ſanctuary, of the which thou hadſt commaunded, that they ſhould not enter into the church: This enemy is Sathanas, as his name ſowneth, that hath put his hande to all that him liketh. What ſinne I pray you will the fiend haue ſow on men,that nis now yvſed?In what plentie is now pride, enuy, wrath and couetiſe? Whan were they ſo great as they be now,and ſo of all other ſinnes. And why troweſt thou?But for there be a lawles people entred into thy ſanctuarie, that neither keepe in themſelfe the law of God,ne konne teachen other:

Oſe.4.

And to euery ſuch, ſaith God by the prophet, Oſe 4. For that thou haſt put away cunning: I ſhall put thee away that thou ſhal vſe no prieſthoode to me.Lo that God expreſly heere in holy writte, forbiddeth men to take the ſtate of priſthoode on them, but they haue cunning, that needeth them. Thou than that canſt neither rule thy ſelfe ne other,after the lawe of God,beware how thou wilt anſwer to God,at his dreadfull dome,when he ſhall ſay to thee,that which I tooke to my theame.

Yeld the reckening of thy baily, how thou haſt entred.

The ſecond queſtion, that euery curate and prelate of holye Chirch ſhall aunſwer to,is this.How haſt thou ruled? That is to ſay,the ſoules of thy ſuggets,and the goods of poore men: Geue now thine acounte. Firſt, how thou haſt gouerned gods folke that were take thee to keepe: Whether art thou an herde or an hiredman?that dooſt all for loue of bodelich hire?As a father,or as a Wolfe, that eaten his ſheepe and keepeth them nought? Say whome thou haſt turned from his curſed liuing, by thy deuout preaching, Bernardus.

Whome haſt thou taught the law of God that was earſt vncunning: Ther ſhal ben heard a greuous accuſing of fatherles children,and a hard aledging,that prieſts haue liueden by their wages, and not done away their ſins. Yelde alſo rekoning how thou haſt ruled and ſpended the goodes of poore men.Harke what S.Bernard ſaith.Dreade clarkes, dreade the miniſters of the Church,the which ben in the place of ſaintes,that they do ſo wickedly, nought holding them apayd with ſuch wages that were ſufficient to them: That ouerplus that needy men ſhuld be ſuſtained by, they be not aſhamed to waſt in the houſe of their pride and leachery, and withholden to themſelfe wickedly and curſedly that which ſhould be the lifeloode of poore men. With double wickednes truly they ſinne. Firſt, for they reeuen other mens goods, and ſaith they miſuſe holy things in their vanities and in their filthes.Euery ſuch Bayly therefore beware,for anone,to the laſt farthing he ſhall recken with Chriſt. Troweſt thou not then, that thou ne ſhalt be diſalowed of God of that thou haſt miſpended in in feeding of fat Palfreys,of hounds,of Haukes, and if it ſo be that is worſt of all, on lecherous women?Heare what is ſayd of ſuche. They had led their dayes in wealths. And in a poynt they bene gone down into hell: Think therefore I rede thee, that thou ſhalt yelde reckening of thy bayly.

The third queſtion that this baily ſhal aunſwer to,is this:How haſt thou lyued? What light of holynes haſt thou ſhewed in thy liuing to the people,or what mirrour haſt thou ben of holynes to them? Geue now thy reconing,how thou haſt liued,as a prieſt,or as a leude man,as a man or as a beaſt. That is to wonder truelye how the lyfe of prieſtes is chaunged They be clothen as knights, they ſpeaken as vnhoneſtly as carels, other of wynnyng as Marchaunts: They riden as princes, and al that is thus ſpended, is of the goodes of poore men, and of Chriſts heretage.Therfore ſaith an holy doctor: The clay of Egypt was tough and ſtinking, and medled with bloud.The ſlates were harde to bee vndoe,for they were baked with fire of couetiſe,and with the light of luſt.In this trauayleth riche men, in this they wake,a wayting poore men. In theſe trauaileth prelates,that ben to much blent with to much ſhining of riches, that make them houſes lyke churches in greatnes,that with diuers pointries,coloren their chambers,that with diuers clothinges of colours,make images gay: but the poore mã for default of clothes beggeth,and with an empty wombe cryeth at the doore: And if I ſhall the ſoth ſay,ſaith this doctor, oft tyme poore men be robbed for to clothe the trees and ſtones: Of ſuch ſpeaketh the Prophet.

Eſa.22. quis tu hic aut quaſi quid hic,

Howe art thou here? or as who art thou? Here thou art occupying the place of Peter and of Poule, or of Thomas or of Martine:But how,as Iudas among the Apoſtles,as Symon Magus among the diſciples,as a candle new queinte that ſtincheth all the houſe in ſteede of a light lanterne, as a ſmoke that blindeth mens eyen,in place of cleane fire.If thou contrarye thus the forme of liuing that Chriſt and his diſciples left to prieſts:

Iere.31.

Lo what ſaith the prophet Ieremye. They haue entred, and they haue had and nought ben obedient. They hauen with falſe title or with their falſe and corrupt intention, had poore mens goodes to their miſuſing, and they haue not bee obedient to the lawe of God in their owen liuing.

Sap.6.

Therefore it is writ, that the hardeſt dome ſhall fall on ſuch. An hard dome, for they haue miſentred. An harder dome,for they haue miſruled. And the hardeſt dome, for they haue ſo curſedlie liued. Thinke therefore I rede,how thou wilte giue reckning of thy bayly.

Kinges,Princes and magiſtrates admoniſhed.
How thou haſt entred.

The ſecond Bayliff, that accounteth at this dome for himſelfe and alſo for other, is he: that keping hath of any communite, as kings,princes,Maiers,and Shireues,and iuſtices. And theſe ſhull alſo anſwer to the ſame three queſtions. The firſt queſtion, how haſt thou hentred,that is to ſay, into thine office: Other for help of the people to deſtroy falſhed and forthren treuth? other for deſire of winning or worldly worſhip? If thou take ſuch an office, more for thine owne worldly profite,than for helpe of the comunite, thou art a tirant as the pholoſopher ſeith. For it is to feare leaſt there bene too many that deſiren ſuche ſtates,that they may the rather oppreſſe thilke that they hateth, and take giftes to ſpare to puniſh thilke, that hauen treſpaſſed, and ſo maketh them parteners of their ſinnes. And many ſuch,when they ben ſo high, they reck nought that they beeth poore mens brethren: but they wene to paſſe them in kind, as they paſſeth in worldly worſhip, that is but winde: of which God ſaith by the prophet, they hauen raigned, but nought of me, they haue bene princes but I knowe nought.

Oſe.8.
2.Para.10.

So we reade of Roboam, that was the ſon of king Salomon,what time he was firſt king, the people of Iſraell comen to him, and ſayd: Thy father in his laſt dayes, put on vs great charge. We pray thee ſome deale make it lighter, and we willen ſerue thee. And the king tooke counſayle of the olde wiſe men, and they counſailden to anſwer them faire, and that ſhould be for the beſt. But he left theſe old wiſe mennis counſayle, and did after the counſayle of children that were his playferen, and ſayd to the people, when they came agayne: My left finger, is greater then my fathers riegge. My father greeued you ſomewhat, but I will echen more thereto. And the people heard this, and rebeleden to him, and tooke them another king· and ſithe, the kingdome came neuer whole againe. And therefore it is good, that euery ruler of cominalties, that they be not lad by follies, ne by none other eare rowner, that he ne haue an eygh of loue to the comontie that he hath to rule. For wete ye well, be he neuer ſo high, that he ſhall come afore his higher, to yelde reconing of his bayly.

How haſt thou ruled.

The ſecond queſtion is: How haſt thou ruled the people, and the office that thou haddeſt to gouerne? Thou that haſt bene a Iudge in cauſes of poore men, how haſt thou kept this heſt of God?

Deut.9.

Thou ſhalt not take heede to the perſon of a poore man, to bee to him the harder for his pouertie, ne thou ſhalt not behold a rich mans ſemblance, to ſpare or to fauour him in his wrong for his riches. O Lorde, what abuſion is there among officers of both lawes, now adayes: If a great man pleadeth with a poore man, to haue ought that he holdeth, euery officer ſhall be readie to hye all that he may, that the rich man might haue ſuch an end as he deſired. But if a poore man pleade with a ritch man, than there ſhall be ſo manye delayes, that though the poore mans right be open to all the Countrie, for pure faute of ſpending, he ſhall be glad to ceaſe. poore mens writs, with tarde venit, but gif they feelen meede in their hands. And yet I heare ſaie, men that hauen ſeyen both lawes, that ilke court that is cleeped Chriſtes court, is much more curſed. Therefore it is writ: giftes they taken out of mens boſoms, to ouerturne the right way of dome. But it is to dread the word of Chriſt: In what dome ye deeme, ye ſhould be demed when ye comen to yelde a reconing of your bayly.

How haſt thou liued.
Rom.5.

The third queſtion is: Howe haſt thou lyued, thou that deemeſt and puniſheſt other men for their treſpas. A great doctor ſaith: thee behoueth to flee the wickednes of other men, that thou chaſtieeſt them for their treſpas. For if thy ſelfe do vnlawfullich in deeming other men, thou damneſt thy ſelfe, ſythe thou doeſt that thou damneſt. And Poul ſaith: why teacheſt thou nought thy ſelfe, that thou teacheſt other? Why ſtealeſt thou, that teacheſt nought other men to ſteale? Saint Gregorie ſaith: He ſhall not take gouernaile of other, that can not go before them in good liuing. And when anye man ſtand before him in dome, he muſt take heede to fore what Iudge he ſhall ſtand him ſelfe, to take his dome after his deedes. But it is to dread, that manie fareth as the twe falſe prieſts that woulden haue damned to death holie Suſan, for ſhe would not aſſent to their leacherie.

Of the which it is writ: they turned awaie their eyen, for they would not ſee heauen, ne haue mynde of rightfull domes. So it happeth ofte, they that were more woorthie to bee hanged, damneth them that be leſſe woorthye, as a clarcke telleth of Socrates the Philoſopher, ſayth hee, vpon a day a man asked of hym why hee laughed. And hee ſayd: for I ſee great theeues leaden a little theefe to hanging. I pray thee, whether is hee a greater theefe that bynimeth a man hys houſe and hys land from hym and from his heyres for euermore, other hee that for making of great neede, ſtealeth a ſheepe or a calfe. Whether trow wee nought, that it happeth ſuch extortioners to be other whyle Iudges, and demeth men thus: But I read thee that thus deemeſt other, thinke on that dome thou ſhalt come to, to yelde the rekening of thine bayly.

Zacha.6.

The third Baylife that ſhall be cleped to this dreadfull a count ſhall bee euerie Chriſtian man, that ſhall geue rekening to his Lord God, for goods that he hath had of hys. And heere I wyll ſpeake but of the firſt queſtion, that is this: How entreſt thou. And heere by the waie, yee that haue goten anie worldly good, other take by extortion, by rauayne, by vſurie, other by diſceit: Wo ſhall be to him at this dreadfull daie as Sainct Auſten ſayth. If he be caſt into the fire that hath nought giuen of his owne good: where troweſt thou ſhall he be caſtin, that hath reued other mens from them. And if he ſhulle brenne with the fend that hath nought clothed the naked, where troweſt ſhall he brenne that hath made him naked that was earſt clothed. But as Sainct Gregorie ſayth, two thinges maketh men to liue thus by rauaine of other neighbours, that they deſire heynes and drede pouertie, and what vengeaunce falleth of this ſinne of couetiſe, I may ſee by figure in holy writ, whan the Angell ſayd to Prophet Zacharie. Rere vp thine eyen, and ſee what is that goeth out. And the Prophet ſayd what is it? Then the Angell ſayd, this is the pot going out, this is the eize of hem on all the earth, And there was a weihgt of lede I bore, and there was a woman ſitting in the middle of this potte. And the Angell ſayd, this is impietie: And he tooke her, and caſt her into the middle of this pot, and he tooke the gobette of leed and caſte it into the pots mouth.

Expoſitio.

And the Prophet lift vp his eye, and he ſaw twoo women comming out, and ſpirites in her wingis like two kytes other gledes: and they arerid vp this pot betweene heauen and the earth, and than the Prophete ſpake to the Aungell, whider wol theſe beare this pot? And he ſayd, into the lond of Sennaar: This pot is couetiſe. For right as a pot hathe a wide open mouth, ſo couetiſe gapeth after worldly good: and right as the licour in the pot, profiteth nought to the pot, but to men that draweth and drinketh thereof; ſo worldlie good ofte, profiteth not to churlles, but to other that commeth after, as it is written. He that hath money, ſhall haue no frute of it.

Eccl.5.

And this couetiſe is the eye of couetous men: for they ben blinde to ſee how they ſhuld ſee to go to heauen, but to winning of worldly things they ſee manie wayes, lyke to owles, and nightcrowes, that ſeene better by night than by day. The gobbet of lead, is the ſyn of obſtination. The woman that ſat in the pot, is vnpittie, as the Angell ſayd, that foloweth vnrighteouſnes and auarice. For through auarice, a man leeſeth the pitie that he ſhuld haue of the miſchiefe of his ſoule. For oft tyme, men leeſe the lyfe of theyr ſoule, by deadlie ſinne that they doo to haue worldly winning: and alſo they leeſe the pitie that they ſhould haue of their bodie, putting them ſelfes to manie great bodelye trauayls and perils both by ſea, and land, and all maketh couetiſe. This pot is ſtopped with the gobbet of leade, when vnpitie is thus by ſynne of obſtination cloſed in couetiſe, that he may not goe out of the chinches harte by penaunce.

Iob.22.

For as Iob ſayth: when he is fulfylled, he ſhall bee ſtopped. The two women that bare vp this pot, are pride and luſt of fleſh, that be cleped in holie writ the twey daughtren of the water Lethe, crying: bring, bring. And they had wings: the fyrſt wing is grace ſpirituall, as cunning, wiſedome, and counſell, with ſuch other manie For which gifts manie men wexe proud.

Againſt couetiſe.

The ſecond wing is bodely grace, as ſtrength, fairehood, gentrie, and manie other ſuch, whereof men wexe proud. The winges of the ſecond woman that is fleſhlie deſire, beth glotony and ſlouth.

Of glotonie ſpeaketh S. Gregorie: when the wombe is fulfilled, the prickes of leacherie beth meued. And of ſlouth S. Auſtine ſayth: Lot the whyle he dwelled in buſines among ſhrewes in Sodome, he was a good man But when he was in the hyll ſlowe, for ſykkernes, he in his dronkennes lay by hys daughtren. And theſe women had wynges lyke Kytes, that with a crieng voyce ſeecheth theyr meate, as Bartholomeus ſayth. And thus fareth couetiſe of men. Witneſſing Sainct Auſtine, what is the greedynes of fleſhlye deſire. In as much as the rauenous fyſhes haue ſometime meaſure, yet when they hunger, they rapin, and when they fulfill, they ſpare: But onely couetiſe of men may not bee fulfilled. For euer he taketh, and neuer hath inough. Neither hee dreadeth God, neither ſhame of men. He ne ſpareth hys father, ne knoweth his mother, ne accordeth with his brethren, neythet keepeth truth with hys frende. He ouerpreſſeth widowes and fatherles children. Freemen he maketh bond, and bringeth foorth falſe witnes, and occupieth dead mens things, as he ſhoulden neuer dye.

What manhoode is this, ſayth this doctour, thus to leeſe lyfe and grace, and get death of ſoule? Win gold, and leeſe heauen? And herefore ſayth the Prophet, haue trauaile in the midſt, and leaue vnrighteouſnes. Alſo Innocent ſpeaking of the harmes that come of couetoiſe, ſayth thus: O how manie men hath couetiſe deceiued and ſpilt? When couetiſe Balaam would for giftes that the kinge profered him, haue curſed Gods people, his owne Aſſe reproued hym, and hurt his foote agaynſt a wall.

Acts.5.

Achor was ſtoned to death, for couetiſe made him ſteale gold and clothes, againſt the commaundement of God. Gieſy was ſmit with meſilrie, for he ſold Naamans heale, that came of Gods grace. Iudas for couetiſe ſold Chriſt, and afterward hoong himſelfe. Anany and Zaphira his wife were dead ſodainlie, for they forſoken to giue Peter theyr money that they had. And couetiſe maketh alſo that rich men eate the poore, as beaſtes done their leſous holding them lowe. This may we ſee all daye, in deede I dread. For if a ritche man haue a field, and a poore man haue in the middeſt or in the ſide thereof one acre, and a riche man haue all a ſtreete ſaueth O houſe, that ſome poore brother of hys oweth, he ceaſeth neuer till he get it out of the poore mans hand, eyther by prayer, or by bying, or by purſuing of diſceit. Thus fared it by kyng Achab, that throughe his falſe Queenes ginne ſlowe the poore man Naboth, for that he woulde not ſell hym hys vyneyard that was nye to the Kings palace.

Ambroſius de ſuo libello de Naboth.

Vpon which proces, thus ſayth Sainct Ambroſe: How far wyll yee ritche men ſtretche your couetiſe? Wyll yee dwell alone vppon the earth, and haue no poore man wyth you? Why put yee out your felow by kynde, and chalenge to your ſelfe the poſſeſſion comen by kynde? In commune to all ritch and poore the earth was made, Why will yee ritche chalenge proper right heerein? Kynde knoweth no riches, that bringeth foorth all men poore. For wee bee not got with rich clothes, ne borne wyth golde ne wyth ſyluer. Naked hee bringeth them to this world, needie of meate and of drinke and clothing. Naked the earth taketh vs, as ſhe naked brought vs hyther. She can not cloſe with vs our poſſeſſion in ſepulchre, for kynde maketh no difference betweene poore and rich, in comming hyther, ne in goyng hence. All in o manner hee bringeth foorth, all in o manner he cloſeth in graue. Who ſo wyll make difference of poore and rytch, abyde tyll they haue a little whyle leyne in the graue. Than open and looke among dead bones who was rych, and who was poore, but if it be thus that mo clothes rotteth with the ritche, then wyth the poore: and that harmeth to them that beth on lyue, and profytte not to them that beene deade: Thus ſayth the Doctour of ſuche extortion as it is writ.

Iohn.24.

Other mens fields they repeth, and fro the vyne of hym that the harme oppreſſed, they plucke awaye the grapes: they leueth men naked, and taketh awaye her clothis that hath nought wherewith to helle them in cold, and liften vp this pot bytwene heauen and earth. For couetous men nother haueth charite to ther brethren vpon earth, neyther to God in heauen: and they bare this pot into the lond of Sennaar, that is to ſay, into the lond of Stenche, that is hell, for there ſhall be ſtench, in ſtede of ſweete ſmelling as Iſay ſayth. Beware I rede, that yee nonght haue to do with this pot, ne with the woman therein: and on all maner that ye be nought weddid to her, for than yee muſt be both one. This is thilke foule lecherous woman: the kynges and marchauntis of the earth haue done leachery, and of her vertue they haueth bee made riche, whoſe dampnation is writen in the booke of priuities in theſe wordes. In o day, ſhall come all this vengeaunces of her death, weping and hunger and fire ſhall brenne her, for ſtronge is God that ſhall venge hym on her, and than ſhulleth weepe and howle vp on her the kynges of the earth, that haueth done lechery with her, and haueth liued in delices when they ſhull ſee the ſmoke of her brenning, ſtonding aferre weping and weyling and ſaying.

Alas alas, thilke great citie that was clothed with bis and purpre, and braſile, and ouergilte with gold and precious ſtones and pearle. For in one houre all theſe great riches ſhall be deſtroyed, than ſhall they ſey that ſhall bee damned with her. We haue erred fro the waye of trouth and rightwiſnes, light haue not ſhined to vs, and the ſonne of vnderſtonding haue not reſen to vs: we haue be made weery in euerich way of wickednes and of luſt, and haue gone hard wayes, but the wayes of God we knew nought: what hath pride profited to vs, or the boaſt of riches what hath it brought to vs? All this is as a ſhadow of death, and we mow now ſhew no token of holynes: in our wickednes we be waſted away. Thinke therefore I read, that thou ſhalt yelde rekening of thy bayly. Here endeth the firſt part of this Sermon, and beginneth the ſecond part.

IN which ſecōd part with the helpe of God I will ſhew firſt, who ſhall clepe vs to this recKenyng. Afterward, to fore what iudge we ſhall reckyn: and laſt what puniſhyng ſhall be do to them that ben found falſe ſeruauntes and wicked, and what reward ſhall be gyue to them that be founde good and true. For the firſt ye ſhall wetoen that there ſhall be twey domes. The firſt doome anone after the departyng of body and of ſoule, an this ſhall be ſpeciall. And of this rekenyng or doome ſpeaketh the Goſpell of Luke. The ſecond reckenyng or dome ſhalbe anone after the generall reſurrection, & ſhalbe vniuerſal. And of this is to ſpekē in the Goſpel. To the firſt euery man ſhalbe cleped after other, as the wolrde paſſeth. To the ſecunde ſhall comeo togedre in the ſtroke of an eye all mankynde. To the firſt, men ſhalbe cleped with three ſumners other Sergeauntes: the firſt is ſickneſſe, the ſecond is age, and the third is death: the firſt warneth, the ſecond thretneth, and the third taketh. This is a kyndly order, but otherwiſe it fayleth, for ſume we ſeeth dyeth that neuer wiſt what was ſicknes ne age, as children that ben ſodenly ſlayne. And ſume, ye the moſt part that deyeth now a dayes deyeth, byfore her kynde agee of deeth: therefore I ſay, that the firſt that clepeth to this ſpeciall reckning is ſicknes, that followeth all mankind, ſo that euery man hath it: and ſum is ſickneſſe that ſume men haueth but nought all. Yet the firſt ſickeneſſe is double, for ſume is withinne in the mightes of the ſoule, and ſume is without in feblenes of the bodie that needis mo be ſtroyed, whan time by hem ſelfe is cauſe of corruption as Philoſophie ſayth, that thereby feblenes and ſicknes. And ſo may we ſee hereby, though that a man ſhut out of the houſe of hys hart all maner of worldlie and fleſhlie thoughtes, yet vnneth ſhall a man for ought that he can doo, thinke on God onelie, the ſpace of o Pater noſter, but that ſome other thing that is paſſing, entreth into the ſoule, and draweth her from contemplation. But O Lorde God, what ſeekenes is this, an heuie burden on the ſonnes of Adam, that on fowle moock and fen of the world we may thinke long ynow. But on that the ſoule ſhould moſt delectation haue by kinde, mow we nought thinke ſo little a ſpace, but if the cokle enter among the whete. Of this ſeekenes ſpeaketh Poule, where he ſayth. I ſee a lawe in my limmes fighting agenes the lawe of my ſprite, and taking me into the law of ſinne. So that it fares by vs, as by a man that would looke ageyns the ſun, and may nought do it long for nothing. And forſoth that is for no default that is in the ſunne, for ſhe is moſt cleere in her ſelfe, and ſo by reaſon beſt ſhould be ſeyn, but it is for feblenes of mans eye. Ryght ſo, ſyth Adam our firſt fader was put out of Paradyſe, all hys offſpring haue ben thus ſicke, as the Prophet ſeyth. Our fadres haue eat a bitter grape, and the teeth of the children be wexe an edge. The ſecond ſicknes, that is commune to all mankind, commyth of feblenes of the body: as hunger and thorſt, cold and heate, ſorow & werines, and many other as Iob.18. ſayth. A man that is ibore of a woman, liuing a little whyle, is fulfilled with many miſeaſes. Yet there is other ſicknes that commeth to ſome men, but not to all, as Lepyr, Palſey, Feuer, Dropſie, Blindnes, and many other, as it was ſeyden to the people of Iſraell, in holy writ. But thou keepe the commaundements that be writ in this booke, God ſhal echen the ſicknes of thee and of thy ſeede, great ſickenes and long abiding. Yet yee ſhall vnderſtond, that God ſendeth other while, ſuch ſicknes to good men, and other while to ſhrewes. To good men God doth it for two cauſes, and that is ſooth. Of ſicknes I wol to be vnderſtond alſo, of all maner of tribulations. The firſt cauſe, for they ſhold alway euer know, that they haue none perfection of them ſelfe, but of God onely, and to echen theyr meekenes. And thus ſayth Poule, leaſt the greatnes of reuelations rere me vp into pride, is giuen a pricke of my fleſhe, the Aungell of Sathanas to ſmite me on the necke, wherefore I haue thriſe prayed God, that he ſhuld go fro me, and he anſwered me: My grace is ſuffiſant to thee for vertue is fulfilled in ſicknes, where on thus ſayn the gloſe. The fend axing Iob to be tempted, was herd of God, and nought the Apoſtle axing his temptation to be remoued. God herd him that ſhuld be damned, and he herd nought him, that he ſhuld ſaue. For oft the ſick mā axit many things of the leche, that he wol not geue him, & that is for to make him whole of ſicknes. Alſo God ſendeth Saincts oft ſicknes & perſecution, to giue vs ſinfull wretches example of patience: For if he ſuffer his Saincts to haue ſuch tribulation in this world, and they thankin him thereof, much more wretchis that God ſendeth not the hundred aparty of their ſorowe, ſhulden beare it meekely ſith we haue diſerued a thouſand ſo much as they haueth. Whereof, Tobie that one day whan he was wery of byrying of poore men, the which ſhulden haue ley vnburyed, and haue be etene of houndis, and foules, as caraynes, of other vnreaſonable beſtes, whan for weryneſſe he had leide him to reſte, through Goddis ſufferaunce the ſwallowes that bredden aboue on his hous, maden ordure into his eyen, and he wexet blind. Thus it is writ of this temptation for ſoth: Therefore God ſuffered to come to him, that to them that comen after, ſhuld be geuen enſample of pacience, as by the temptation of holie Iob. For ſith from his childhod, euermore he drede God, and euer kept his heſtes: He was not agreeued ayenſt God that the miſthiefe of blindneſſe fell to him: but vnmoueable dwelled in the dread of God, thanking him all the dayes of his life. Lo that holy writ ſayth expreſly, that God ſuffered this holie man to haue that ſicknes, to geue them that ſhould come after him enſample of pacience. Alſo other whyle, God ſendeth ſyckenes and tribulation to wicked men, and for two cauſes. Firſt for that they ſhould the rather dreade God, and leaue their ſinne. As it is writ: their ſickenes hath bene multiplied, and after they haue hyed to Godward. For we ſee oft men in ſicknes know their God, that neuer would haue turned to him whyle they had beene whole. Alſo God ſendeth them ſicknes oft to agaſt other men, leſt they follow their ſin. As the ſickenes of kyng Antioche, whome God ſmote with ſuch a ſickenes, that wormes fell out of hys body whyle he lyued, in ſo farforth, that he ſtanke ſo foule, that his frends were ſo wearye of it, that they might not ſuffer it. And at the laſt, when he himſelfe might not ſuffer his owne ſtinch, then he began to know himſelfe, and ſayd: It is rightfull, to be ſubiect to God, and a deadly man not to hold himſelfe onely euen with God, and the ſtory ſaith he asked mercie of God, and made a vowe to God, that he would make the Citie of Ieruſalem free, and the Iewes to make them as free as the men of Athens: and that hee would honour Gods temple wyth pretious ary, and multiply the holy veſſels, and finde of his owne rent and ſpenſes perteining to the ſacrifice. And he would become a Iew, and go ouer all the lond to preach Goddes might. And yet God gafe him not ſuch mercy as he deſired. And I trow certein that it was for good. In as much as God knew he would not afterward hold his couenaunt, or els for he axket it too late. What mede was it for him to forſake his wickednes, whan hee was vnmightie to doo good or euill. Neuertheles, I trow he was not dampned, in as much as he had ſuch repentaunce, for repentaunce in this life come neuer too late if it be trew. But by thys vengeaunce that God tooke on thys king, ſhould men ſee, what it is to be vnobedient to God. And alſo it is to take heede, that whan euer ſickenes commeth, euer it ſheweth, that hee that ſuffreth this deadly, ſhall nedes dye. For though he may ſkape of his ſicknes, yet hee may not ſkape death. And ſo thou muſt needs come giue rekening of thy bayly. The ſecond ſomnour that ſhall clepe thee to this particuler doome, is elde or age. And the condition of him is this, though that he tarie with thee, he will not leue thee, till he bring thee to the thirde, that is death. But there be many that though they haue this ſomnour with them, they take none hede, though they ſee ther heare hore, her back crook, her breth ſtynke, her teeth fayle, her yen derk, her viſage riuely, her crene wexit heuy to her. What meneth all this, but that age ſummeth to the dome.

Antioche,

The ſecond ſomner, Properties of death,

But what more madhead may be than a man to be cleped, and drawe to ſo dreadfull a reckenyng there, where but he aunſwere well he forfeteth both body and ſoule to damnation for euer. If ſeing a litle wordly merth on the way, he thinketh ſo mekill theron, that he forgetteth who draweth him, or whether he draweth. So doth he that is ſmiten with age and liketh ſo on the falſe world is wealth, that he forgetteth whether he is away: Herefore ſayth an holy Doctour, that among all abuſions of the world moſt is of an old man that is obſtinate: for he thinketh not on his out going of this world, ne of paſſing into the lyfe that is to come: he heareth meſſengers of death, and he leueth hem not, and the cauſe is this, for the threfold cord that ſuch an old mā is bounden with, is hard to breke. This cord is cuſtome, that is of three plightes, that is, of idel thought, vnhoneſt ſpeach, and wicked deede: the whiche if they groweth in a man from the childhood into mans age, they maketh a treble cord to bynde the old man on cuſtome of ſinne. Herefore ſayth Eſay breake the bondes of ſinne. Thinke herefore whoſoeuer that thou be that art thus ſumned, that thou might not ſcape that thou ne ſhalt yeld the rekenyng of thy baily.

Eſaye.

The third ſomner to this reckenyng, is death. And the condition of him is, that whan euer he come, firſt, other the ſecōd, other the laſt houre he ne ſpareth, neither power, ne yougth, ne he dreadeth no thretning, ne he ne taketh hede of no prayer, ne of no gift, ne he graunteth no reſpit, but withouten delay he bringeth forth to the dome. Herefore ſeyth Sainct Auſten. Well ought euerie man drede the day of his death. For in what ſtate a mans laſt day findeth hym, whan he dyeth out of this worlde, in the ſame ſtate he he bringeth hym to hys dome. Herfore ſeyth the wiſe man. Sonne, thinke on thy laſt day, and thou ſhalt neuer ſinne. Therfore I rede that thou thinke, that thou ſhalt geue reconing of thy bayly. I ſayd alſo, that there ſhall be another doome, to the which all men ſhall come together, and this ſhall be vniuerſall. And right as to the other dome, euery man ſhall be cleped with theſe three ſumnours: ſo to this dome all this world ſhall be cleped with three generall clepers. And right as the other three meſſengers tell a mans end, ſo theſe tell the end of the world. The firſt cleper is the worldly ſicknes, the ſecond cleper is feblenes, and the third is the ende. The ſicknes of the world thou ſhalt know by charitie a cooling. His elde and febles thou ſhalt knowe by tokens fulfilling, and hys end thou ſhalt know by Antichriſtes purſuing. Firſt I ſayd, thou ſhalt knowe the worldes ſicknes by charitie a cooling. Clerkes that treate of kynde ſayne: that a bodie is ſicke, when his bodely heate is to lite, or when his vnkindely heate is too muche. Sythe then all mankynde is one bodye, whoſe kindly heate is charity (that is loue to God and to our neighbors) vnkindly heate is luſtfull loue to other creatures. When therefore thou ſeeſt that the loue of men to Godwarde and to their neigbour is litle and faynt, and the loue of worldlye thynges and luſtes of the fleſh is great and feruent: then wit thou well, that vnkindly heate is too great, and kindly heate is too little. That this be acknowlich of this ſicknes, I may proue by autoritie of Chriſt. For he himſelfe gaue them as a ſigne of the drawing to the ende of the world: For that wickednes ſhall be in plente, charitie ſhall acoole. Therfore whan thou ſeeſt charitie this little in the worlde and wickednes encreaſe, know well, that this world paſſeth and hys welth, and that this ſomner is come. And thus ſeyth Seint Poule, Wit ye well, that in the laſte dayes ſhall come perilous times, and there ſhall be men louing them ſelfe, that is to ſay, their bodyes, couetous by pride, vnobedient to father and mother, vnkynd fellons, withouten affection, withouten peace, blamers, incontinent, vnmylde, withonten benignitie, traytours, rebels, ſwelling, louers of luſtes more then of God, hauing a lykenes of pietie, and denying the vertue thereof. And theſe flee thou. If thou ſeeſt the people buſied wyth ſuch conditions, wyt thou well that the firſte ſumnour, warneth all the world, that the day of reconing draweth towarde.

Tim.3.

The ſecond Sumnour, that warneth all the world, is elde or age of the world and hys feblenes, and ſheweth tokens fulfillyng. But I know wel, that we be nought ſuffiſaunt to know the times other the whyles that the fader in trinitie hath put on hys owne power, to ſhew certeinly the day, yeere, other houre of this dome, ſith this knowleche was hid fro the priuey Apoſtles of Chriſt, and fro Chriſts manhode as to ſhew it to vs. Natheles, we inough by authoritie of holy writ, wyth reaſons, and expoſitions of Saints, well and openly ſhew, that thys day of wrath is nygh: But yet leaſt any man ſey in hys hert as it is writen of folie baylies, that they ſhall ſeien, my Lord, that is, tarrieth to come to the dome, and vppon hope hereof he taketh to ſmite ſeruauntes and hynen of God, eate and drinke and make him dronk: I ſhall ſhewe that this day is at the hond, howe ny neuertheles, can I not ſeie ne wole For if Poule ſayd now for a thouſand and three hundred yeer, and paſſed moe: we ben thilke, into whome the endis of the worlde ben come, much rather may we ſeie the ſame that been ſo much neere the end than he was. Alſo S. Chryſoſtome ſayth: thou ſeeſt ouer all darkeneſſe, and thou douteſt that the day is go, firſt on the valeyes is darkneſſe whan the day draweth downeward: whan thereſore thou ſeeſt the valeies I derked, why douteſt thou whether it be nigh euen, but if thou ſee the ſunne ſo lowe that derkneſſe is vpon the hilles, thou wolt ſeie doutles, that it is night. Right ſo, if thou ſee firſt in the ſeculers and the lewd chriſten men begynneth derkneſſes of ſinnes and to haue the maiſtrie, it is token that this world endeth. But whan thou ſeeſt prieſts that ben put on the high toppe of ſpirituall dignities, that ſhulden be as hilles abouen the commune people in perfit liuing, that derkneſſe of ſinnes hath taken them, who douteth that the world nis at the end. And alſo Abbot Ioachim in expoſition of Ieremye, ſeyeth: Fro the yeare of our Lord 1200. all times beth ſuſpect to me, and we ben paſſed on thys ſuſpecte time nigh 200. yeare. Alſo mayden Hyldegare in the booke of her prophecie the third partie, the xj. viſion, the vij. chapter, meueth thys reaſon. Ryght as on ſeauen dayes God made the world, ſo in 7000. yeare the world ſhall paſſe. And right as in the ſixt day man was made and fourmed: ſo in 6000. yeares he was brought ageine and reformed. And as in the ſeauenth daye the world was full made, and God left off hys working, right ſo in the 7000. yeare, the number of them that ſhullen be ſaued ſhall be fulfilled, and reſt ſhall be to Seintes full in bodye and ſoule. If that it be ſo as it ſeemeth to followe of this maydens words, that 7000. in paſsing of the world accordeth to ſeauen dayes in hys making it, ſee what lacketh that theſe 7000. yeares ne beth fulfilled. For if wee reken the number of yeeres fro the natiuitie of Chriſt, to the yeares fro the beginning of the world, to Chriſt, and thou wolt folowe Auſtyne, Bede, and Oroſie, and moſt probable doctors treating of this matter, are paſſed now almoſt, ſixe thouſand and ſixe hundred as it is open in a booke that is cleped Speculum iudiciale So it ſuweth, that this laſt day is more than a halfe a go, if we ſhulden geue credence to thys maydens reaſun: But if we ſhull lene to the Goſpell, than we ſhall finde in the Goſpell of Mathew, that the Diſciples axiden of Chriſt three queſtions Firſt, what time the Citie of Ieruſalem ſhould be deſtroyed. The ſecond, what token of hys comming to the doome. And the third, what ſigne of the endyng of the world. And Chriſt gaue them no certayne tyme of theſe thinges when they ſhoulden fall, but he gaue them tokens, by which they myght know when they drew nighe, and ſo as to the firſt queſtion of the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, he ſayd: when the Romaines come to beſeege that Citie, then ſoone after ſhe ſhall bee deſtroyed.

And as to the ſecond and the thirde, hee gaue manye tokens, that is to ſay: that Realme ſhall riſe againſt Realme, and people agaynſt people, and peſtilences and earthquakinges, the which we haue ſeene in our dayes. But the laſt token that hee gaue, was thys: when yee ſeene the abhomination of elengneſſe ſayd of Daniel the Prophet, ſtandyng on the Sanctuary: then who ſo readeth, vnderſtand. Vpon which text, thus argueth a Doctour in a booke that he maketh of the end of the world. If the wordes of Daniel hauen autoritie (as God ſayth that they hauen) it ſufficeth of the number of the yeares of the ende of the world, that Daniell hath written. Now Daniell in the twelfth chapter, ſpeakyng of thys abhomination, putteth betweene the ceaſing of the buſie ſacrifice of the Iewes, the whych fell, when by Titus and Veſpaſianus, Ieruſalem was deſtroyed, and the people of Iewes were diſparkled into all the world. And thys abhomination that Doctors ſayne, ſhall be in the great Antichriſtes dayes. 1290. Nowe proueth thys Doctour, that a daye muſt be taken for a yeare, both by autoritie of holy writ in the ſame place, and in other, and alſo by reaſon: So it ſeemeth to this clerke, that the great Antichriſt ſhoulde come in the 1400. yeare fro the birth of Chriſt, the which nomber of yeares is now fulfilled, not fully twelue yeares and a halfe lacking. And this reaſon put not I as to ſhewe anie certayne tyme of hys commyng, ſithe I haue not that knowledge: but to ſhewe that he is nye, but how nygh I wot neuer. But take we heede to the fourth part of the ſecond viſion of Saint Iohn, put in the booke of Reuelations, in the which vnder the opening of the ſeauen ſeales, is declared the ſtate of the Churche, from the time of Chriſt into the end of the world. The opening of the foure firſt ſeales, ſhew the ſtate of the Church, fro the tyme of Chriſt, to the tyme of Antichriſt and his foregoers, the whych is ſhewed in the opening of the other three ſeales. The opening of the fyrſt ſeale, telleth the ſtate of the Church in the tyme of the preaching of Chriſt and of hys Apoſtles. For the firſt, that is, the Lyon, gaue hys voyce, that betokeneth the preachers of Chriſtes reſurrection and hys aſcenſion. For then yede out a whyte horſe, and he that ſat vppon hym, had a bow in hys hand, and he yede out ouercomming to ouercome. By thys whyte hors we vnderſtand, the cleane life and conuerſation that theſe preachers haden: and by the bowe, their true teaching, pricking ſorow in mens hartes for their ſinnes withouten flatteryng. And they wenten out of Iewry that they comen of, ouercommyng ſome of the Iewes, and maken them to leaue the truſt that they hadden in the olde law, and to beleeue in Ieſus Chriſte, and ſhewen hys teachynge. And they wenten out to ouercome the Paynemes, ſhewyng to them that theyr Images were no Gods, but mens woorkes, vnmighty to ſaue them ſelfe, or any other, drawyng them to the beliefe of Ieſus Chryſt God and man. In the opening of the ſecond ſeale, there cryed the ſecond beaſt, that is, a calfe, that was a beaſt wonted to be ſlayne, and offered to God in the old law. Thys ſheweth the ſtate of the Churche in the time of Martyrs, that for their ſtedfaſt preachyng of Gods true law, ſhed theyr bloud, that is ſignifyed by the red hors that went out at thys ſeale opening: and thys eſtate began at Nero the curſed Emperour, and dured into the time of Conſtantine the great, that endowed the Church. For in thys tyme, many of Chriſtes ſeruaunts, and namely the leaders of Gods flocke were ſlayne. For of xxij. Byſhops of Rome that were betwene Peter and Silueſter the firſt, I reade but of foure, but that they weren Martys for the lawe of Chriſt. And alſo in the tyme of Diocleſian the Emperour, the perſecution of the Chriſten men was ſo great, that in xxx. dayes weren ſlayne xxij. thouſand men and women in diuers countries, for the law of God.

The opening of the third ſeale, telleth the ſtate of the Church in time of Heretikis that beth figured by the blacke hors, for falſe vnderſtonding of holy write: for than cryed the third beeſt that is a man, for at that time was it neede to preache the miſtery of Chriſtes incarnation, and his paſsion ayenſt theſe erretikis that feliden mis of theſe pointis: how Chriſt tooke verreyly mans kynde of our Lady, hym beyng God as hee was bifore, and hys moder beeyng mayden byfore and after. that beth ſignified by the pale hors, that beth ſignes of penaunce with outfoorth to blinde the people. And he that ſate vpon thys hors his name was death, for they ſhulle ſlee goſtly them that they leden, and teacheth to truſt vpon other thing than God: and helle foloweth him, for helle receiueth thilke that theſe diſteineth. At that time ſhall it neede, that the fourth beaſt that is the Egle make hys cry, that flyeth higheſt of foules to reare vp Gods Goſpell: and to preiſe that law aboue other, leaſt mens wit, and their traditions ouergone and treden downe the law of God, by enforming of theſe ypocritis, and this is the laſt ſtate, that is, other ſhall be in the Church, biſore the comming of the great Antichriſt. The opening of the fift ſeale, telleth the ſtate of the Church that than ſhall folow, and the deſire that louers of Goddis law ſhulleth haue after the end of this world to be deliuered of thys wo. The opening of the ſixt ſeale telleth the ſtate of the Church, in time of Antichriſtis times, the which ſtate yee may know to be in the Church whan ye ſeth fulfilled, that Saint Iohn Prophecieth to fall on the opening of thys, where hee ſayth thus: After thys I ſaw foure Angels ſtonding vpon foure corners of the earth, holdyng the foure windes of the earth that they blowen nought vpon the earth, ne vpon the ſea, ne vpon eny tree. Theſe foure Angels beth the number of all the Deuils miniſters, that on that tyme ſhulleth in the pleaſance of their Lord Antichrſt, ſtoppe the four windis that beth the foure Goſpels to be preached, and ſo let the breath of the grace of the holie Ghoſt to fall vpon men morning for ſinne, and calling them to amendement, and to other that wolden encreaſe in vertues, other vpon perfit men. What is there after thys to fall, but that the myſtery of the ſeauenth ſeale be ſhewed, that he come in hys owne perſon. That Ieſu Chrſt ſhall ſlee with the ſpirite of hys mouth, whan the fiend ſhall ſhew the vtmoſt perſecution, that he and hys ſeruauntis may doo to Chriſtis limmes, and that ſhall be the third warning that the world ſhall haue to come to thys dreadfull dome.

The5. ſeale.

The 6. ſeale.

In all thys matter haue I nought ſeid of my ſelfe, but of other Doctours that beth proued. I ſeyd alſo in my ſecond principall part, that it were to wete tofore what Iudge we ſhull reken. Wherefore we ſhulleth wite, that God him ſelfe ſhall heere thys rekening, he that ſeeth all our dedis, and all our thoughtes fro the beginning of our lyſe to the end, and he ſhall ſhew there the hid thingis of our hert opening to all the world the rightfulnes of hys dome. So that with the myght of God, euery mans dedis to all the world ſhall be ſhewed, and ſo it ſemeth by the wordes of Seint Iohn, in the booke of preuites, there he ſeith thus. I ſaw dede men litel and great, ſtondyng in the ſight of the throne, and bookes weren opened: and an other booke was opened that was of lyſe, and dede men weren iudged after the thyngs that weren written in the bokes after their worchings. Theſe bokes beth mens conſciences that now beth cloſed. But than they ſhulleth be opened to all the world to reden therein both dedis and thoughtes. But the booke of liſe, is Chriſts liuing and doctrine, that is now hid to men that ſhulleth be damned thrugh theyr owne malice, that demeth men to ſerue the world, rather than God: In the firſt booke ſhall be writ all that we haueth doo, in that other booke, ſhall be write that we ſhulden haue doo, and than ſhulle dede men, be demyd of thilke thingis that ben written in the bokis: For if the dedis that we hauen do, the which ben written in the bookis of our conſcience, bee accordyng to the booke of Chriſtes teachyng and hys liuing, the whych is the booke of lyſe, we ſhulle be ſaued, and els we ſhulle be damned, for the dome ſhall be geuen after our workis. Looke therefore now what thing is written in the booke of thy conſcience, while thou art here: and if thou findeſt ought contrary to Chriſtis life, other to hys teaching, with the knite of penaunce and repentaunce, ſcrape it awaie and write it better, euermore hertly thynkyng that thou ſhalt yelde rekening of thy bayly.

Apoca.

Alſo I ſaid principally that it were to witen, what reward ſhal be geue on that doome, to wiſe ſeruauntes and good, and what to falſe ſeruauntes and wicked. For the which it is to wite, that our Lord Ieſu Chriſt, ſhall come to the dome here into this world, in the ſame body that he tooke of our Lady, hauyng thereon the wound is that he ſuffred for our agayne bieng. And all that euer ſhullen be ſaued, taking agayne their bodies clyuing to their head Chriſt, ſhull be rauiſhed metyng him in the ayre as Paul ſayth: They that ſhall be damned lyen vpon the earth, as in a tonne of wyne the dreggis dwellen byneth and the cliere wyne houeth aboue. Than ſhall Chriſt axe rekenyng of the deedes of mercy, reprouyng falſe Chriſten men for the leuyng of them, rehearſing the deedes of the ſame, and other truth is by the which his trewe ſeruauntes than folowed hym: than ſhulle thike falſe ſeruauntes goe with the deuill, whom they haue ſerued in the earth, then ſwallowyng into the endleſſe fire. And rightfull men ſhullen goe into euerlaſtyng lyſe, than ſhall be fulfilled that is written, in the booke of priuitees. Woe, woe, woe, to hem that dwellen in the earth. Woe to the paynyme that gaſe that worſhyp to dead Images wrought of mans handes, and to other creatures that hee ſhuld haue gone to GOD that him wrought: Woe to the Iewe that truſteth ſo muchil in the ould law, than ſhall he ſee Maries ſonne deemyng the world whō he deſpiſed and ſet on the Croſſe: Woe to the falſe Chriſten man that knew the will of his Lord, and fulfilled it nought.

Alſo woe for ſinne of thinkyng to thee, that thou haſt ſhyt out the meine of God, that is mynde of his Paſsion, holy contemplation, of his goodneſſe and memorie of his benefites, fro the chaumber of thine herte: and haſt made it an houſe of ſwyn and a den of theeues, by vncleane thoughtes and delites. As thou here haſt ſperd God out of thine hert, ſo he ſhall ſpere thee out of heauen: Thou haſt herberwid the meine of the fiend, and with them in hell thou ſhall thou ſhalt euer abide: woe alſo for ſinne of ſpeach, for thou might nought open they foule and ſtynkyng mouth with the whiche thou haſt ſpoken vnhoneſty, curſyng, fraude, deceite, leaſinges, forſwearyng, ſcornyng, and backebityng, to prayſe God in the felowſhyp of Saintes. For louyng is nought comynlych, in mouthes of ſinners. For in the whiche gif thou haddeſt kept thy mouth cleane, thou ſhouldeſt haue ſongen in felowſhyp of Aungels this bleſſed ſong: Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Domonus Deus omnipotens. Holy, holy, holy, Lord God almighty. Than yellyng and weepyng thou ſhalt cry in company of deuils. Ve, ve, ve, quante ſunt tenebra. Woe, woe, wo, how great beth theſe darkenes, wo alſo for ſinne of deede. Thou haſt bene proud, thy pryde ſhall be drawen to hell, as Eſay ſayth, or thou haſt bene brent wyth enuye of the deuill. Enuy entred into the world, and they ſhoulden folowen him that ben on hys ſyde, as Salomon ſayth. Or thou haſt be ſtirred with wrath, and euerich man that beareth wrath to hys brethren, is gilty in dome, as Chriſt in the Goſpell ſayth of Mathew. Or thou haſt be ſlowe to good deedes, myſſawe ſhall come to thee as a wayfaring man, and thy pouert as a man iarmed, as the booke of Prouerbes ſayth. Or thou haſt haunted lechery, glotonye, or couetiſe. That forſoth wete ye, that euerych auouterer, or vncleane man, that is a gloton, other chynch, ſhall neuer haue heritage in the Realme of Chriſt and of God, as Poule ſayth. But fire, brimſtone, and the ſpirit of tempeſts, that is, the fiend of hell, ſhulen be a partie of their payne, as it is written in the Pſaulter, when theſe damned men bee in this woe, they ſhulen ſyng thys reufull ſong that is ywritten in the booke of mourning. The ioye of our hart is a go, our quier is turned into wo, the crowne of our heade is fallen vs fro. Alas for ſynne that we haue do. But ioye and ioye, and ioye to them that be ſaued. Ioy in God, ioy in them ſelfe, ioy in other that ben ſaued. Alſo ioy for theyr trauayle is brought to ſo gracious an end. Ioy, for they ſcaped the payne of hell, ioy fore theyr bliſſe that they han in the ſight of God, Cui ſit honor & gloria, in ſecula ſeculorum, Amen.

Note,

Concluſion.

And thus much concerning this worthie and fruitfull Sermon, whych as by the auncientnes of the phraſe ſeemeth to be preached much about the time of Iohn wickleffe: ſo I thought heere, by the occaſion of william Thorpes examination, beſt to place the ſame: for the apt coherence both of the ſpirit, and of the matter. Eſpecially hauing before our eyes, the publique vtilitie of the Reader, to whome by the ſtudious reading thereof, might riſe plentifull matter of true Chriſtian information, both of the wholeſome fearing of God, and of the right guiding of euery Chriſtian mans life.

whereunto I thought good to anexe further in our ſtory, after the examination of william Thorpe, and the martyrdome of william Sawtrey, and of Iohn Badby thus deſcribed (as ye haue heard) which was about the yeare 1409. By the way here is to be conſidered, at leaſt to be admoniſhed, that al this while the ſchiſme in the church of Rome did yet continue, and ſo endured till the councell of Conſtance, which was in whole, the ſpace of xxix. yeres. The origine whereof (as was ſayd page. 000.) firſt began at Urbanus. 5. which Urbanus being dead, an. 1389. next folowed Pope Boniface the 9. who ſate 14. yeares. He in ſelling his pardons was ſo impudent and ſo paſt ſhame, that he brought the keyes of Peter (as ſayth Platina) in contempt. After hym ſucceeded Innocentius. 7. and ſate 2. yeares: who being dead, the Cardinals conſulting together, and ſeeing the foule enormitie and inconuenience growing vpon this contentious ſchiſme in their Church of Rome (minding to prouide ſome remedie for the ſame, after the beſt deuiſe they could) in their conclaue where they were aſſembled for a new election of the Pope, toke this order, promiſing among themſelues with ſolemne vow made to God, to Mary the bleſſed virgine, to Peter and Paule, and to all the bleſſed company of ſaints: That if any of them within the colledge or without the colledge, ſhould be called to that high place of Apoſtolicall preeminence: he ſhould effectuouſly renounce the iuriſdiction and title of his Popedome, if or whenſoeuer the cōtrary Pope for the time being, would in like maner renounce his place and

So that both theſe two colledges of Cardinals agreeing together: one chiefe byſhop might be choſen and takē out of them both, to be made the true Pope. Prouided moreouer, that none ſhould ſeeke any releaſement or abſolution from the ſayd promiſe, vow, and bond, once paſſed among them: Unto al which things furthermore, euery one ſubſcribed with his hande. Theſe things thus prefixed and ratified vpon the ſame, they proceeded to ẏ election. In whych was choſen Gregorius the xij. who the ſame day of hys election, in the preſence of all the cardinals: confirmed the vow, ſacrament and promiſe made, ſubſcribing the ſame with his hand in forme as foloweth.

Thys being done, ſhortly after he was crowned, being of the age of 80. yeares. As the time thus paſſed, the people and Cardinals were in great expectation, waiting when the Pope according to his othe would geue ouer, wyth the other pope alſo. And not long after, the matter began in deede betwene the two Popes to be attempted, by letters from one to another: aſſigning both day and place, where and whē they ſhould meete together: but yet no effect did folow.

Ex Chron. D. Albani.

The pope falſely periured. Cardinals leaue the periured pope.

This ſo paſſing on, great murmuring was among the Cardinals, to ſee their holy periured father, ſo to neglecte his othe, and vow aforenamed. In ſo much, that at length, diuers of them did forſake the Pope, as being periured (as no leſſe he was) ſending moreouer to kings and princes of other lands, for their counſell and aſſiſtance therein, to appeaſe the ſchiſme. Amongeſt the reſt, Cardinall Bituricenſis was ſent to the king of Englande: who publiſhing diuers propoſitions and cōcluſions (remaining in the regiſters of Thomas Arundell) diſputeth, that the pope ought to be ſubiect to lawes and councels. Then K. Henry (moued to write to Gregory the pope) directeth his letter here vnder enſuing, which was the yeare of our Lorde, 1409. The contents of the letter be theſe.

King Henry 4. to pope Gregory. 12.

Moſt bleſſed father, if the diſcrete prouidence of the Apoſtolike ſea, would call to mind, with what great pearils the vniuerſall world hath ben damnified hetherto, vnder pretēce of thys preſent ſchiſme: and eſpecially would conſider, what ſlaughter of Chriſten people to the number of two hūdreth thouſand (as they ſay) hath bene throughe the occaſion of warre raiſed vp in diuers quarters of the world, and now of late, to the number of thirty M. ſouldiours which haue bene ſlaine through the diſſention moued about the Biſhopricke of Leodium, betwene two ſet vp, one by the authoritie of one Pope, the other by the authoritie of the other Pope, fighting in campe for the title of that Biſhoprike: Certes yee would lament in ſpirite, & be ſore greeued in minde for the ſame. So that, with good conſcience you wold relinquiſh rather the honour of the ſea Apoſtolike, then to ſuffer ſuch horrible bloudſhed heereafter to enſue, vnder the cloake of diſsimulation, followinge herein the example of the true mother in the booke of kings: who pleading before Salomon for the right of her childe, rather would depart from the childe, then the childe ſhoulde bee parted by the ſword. And although it may be vehemently ſuſpected by the new creation of 9. Cardinals, by you laſt made contrary to your othe (as other men do ſay) that you do but little heede or care for ceaſing the ſchiſme: Yet farre be it from the hearing and noting of the world, that your circumſpect ſeat ſhoulde euer be noted & diſtained with ſuch an inconſtancie of minde: whereby the laſt errour may be worſe, then the firſt. To the which aſſembly, a great multitude of Prelates and biſhops being conuented, a newe Pope was choſen, named Alexander 5. But to thys election, neither Gregorius, nor Benedictus did fully agree. whereby there were 3. Pope Alexander dead.

Pope Iohn 23.

In the time of this Alexander, great ſtirre began in the country of Bohemia, by the occaſion of the bokes of John Wickliffe, which then comming to the hands of J. Huſſe, and of other both men & women, eſpecially of the lay ſort, and artificers, began there to doe much good. In ſo much, that diuers of them not onely men, but women alſo, partly by reading of thoſe bookes tranſlated into their tounge, partly, by the ſetting forwarde of John Huſſe, a notable learned man, and a ſingulare preacher at that time in the vniuerſitye of Prage: were in ſhort time ſo ripe in iudgement, and prompt in the ſcriptures, ẏ they began to moue queſtions, yea and to reaſon wyth the Prieſtes, touchyng matters of the Scriptures.

Ex Ioā. Chocle. De hiſtoria Huſſiarū. lib. 1.

The Goſpell beginneth to take roote in Bohemia.

By reaſon wherof, complaint was brought to the ſayd Pope Alexander the fifte, who cauſed eftſoones the forenamed John Huſſe to bee cyted vp to Rome. But when hee came not at the Popes citation, then the ſayde Pope Alexander addreſſed hys letters to the Archbyſhop of Suinco. wherein he ſtraightly charged him to prohibit and forbid, by the authority Apoſtolicall, all manner of preachings or ſermons to be made to the people, but onely in Cathedrall Churches or Colledges, or Pariſh churches, or in Monaſteries, or els in theyr Churchyardes. And that the articles of Wickliffe, ſhoulde in no caſe of any perſon of what ſtate, condition or degree ſo euer, be ſuffered to be holdē, taught, or defended, eyther priuily or apertlye. Commaunding moreouer and charging the ſayde Archbyſhop, that wyth foure Bachelers of Diuinitie, and two Doctours of the Canon lawe ioyned vnto hym: would procede vpon the ſame, and ſo prouide that no perſon in churches, ſchooles, or any other place, ſhould teach, defend, or approue any of the foreſayd Articles. So that who ſo euer ſhould attempt the contrary, ſhould be accounted an hereticke. And vnles he ſhall reuoke ſolemnly and publikely the ſayde articles, and ſhall for euer abiure the bookes wherein the foreſayde articles be contained, ſo that they may be vtterly aboliſhed out from the eyes of the faithfull: the ſame to be apprehended and impriſoned, all appellation ſet apart, the help alſo of the ſecular arme being called thereunto, if nede ſhall require. &c. Theſe were the contentes of this mighty & fierce bull of Pope Alexander.

The letter of pope Alexāder, 5. to the Archbiſh. Swinco of Bohemia.

The Popes cruell bull againſt Iohn Huſſe.

Againſt the whych bull on the other ſide John Huſſe iuſtly complaining, excepteth againe and obiecteth manye things, as appeareth in his boke intituled De Eccleſia. cap. 18. where he declareth thys mandate of the pope to ſtande directly againſt the doings and ſayings both of Chriſt and of his Apoſtles: Conſidering, how Chriſt himſelf preached to the people, both in the ſea, in the deſert, in fields, in houſes, in ſynagoges, in villages: and the Apoſtles alſo in all places did the ſame, the Lord mightely working in them. He declared moreouer, the ſaid mandate or bul of the pope to redound vnto the great detriment of the church, in binding the word of God, that it might not haue his free paſſage. Alſo, the ſame to be preiudicial vnto chappels newly erected for the word of God to be preached in them, wherfore (ſayeth he) from thys commaundement or mandate of Pope Alexander, I did appeale vnto the ſayd Alexander, being better informed and aduiſed. And as I was perſecuting my appeale, the Lord Pope (ſayth John Huſſe) immediately died.

Ihon Huſſe obiecteth againſt the popes cruell Bull.

The popes Bull cōtrary to chriſt.

The notable iudgement of God in ſtriking the aduerſaries of the Goſpell.

Then the Archbiſhop of Suinco aforeſayde, to whome this preſent bul was directed, whē he ſaw the proces, buls and mandates of the biſhop of Rome, to be thus cōtemned of John Huſſe, and hys fellows, neyther hauing any hope of redreſſe in Winceſlaus the king: which ſemed to neglect the matter, went out of hys countrey into Hungarie, to complaine vnto Sigiſmonde kyng of Hungarie, and bꝛother to the ſayd Winceſlaus. But this quarelling Archbyſhop, whether befoꝛe (as the Bohemians ſay) oꝛ after (as Syluius ſayeth) that he had ſpoken with Sigiſmond: immediatly there (by the iuſt iudgement of God) died in Hungary, as the ſtoꝛy ſaith foꝛ ſoꝛrow. Wherby a little moꝛe liberty and quiet was geuen by the Loꝛd vnto hys Goſpel, newly beginning to take rote among the Bohemians. Albeit, this tranquility there, did not long continue without trouble and perſecution, neither coulde it in thoſe furious daies and raigne of Antichꝛiſt. Foꝛ after this Alexander afoꝛeſayde ſucceeded Pope Iohn 23. who likewiſe playing hys parte in this tragedy, bent all his might and maine to diſturbe the Bohemians, as moꝛe heereafter (Chꝛiſt willing) ſhalbe declared in further pꝛoceſſe of our hiſtoꝛy, comming to the yere of our Loꝛd. 1413.

The Goſpel ſeldom times long quiet.

Pope Iohn 23.

Thus the pooꝛe Chꝛiſtians (as ye ſee) like to the ſeely Iſraelites vnder the tyꝛãny of Pharao, were infeſted and oppꝛeſſed in euery place, but eſpecially heere in England: and yͤ ſo much the moꝛe here, becauſe that the king not like to Winceſlaus, went ful and whole wyth the pope and his pꝛelates againſt the Goſpellers.

The pride and glory of the clergie of England in thoſe dayes.

By reaſon wherof, the kingdome of the Pope and hys members here in this realme began to be ſo ſtrong, yͭ none durſt ſtirre oꝛ once mute agaynſt them. The Byſhops hauing the king ſo full on their ſide, armed moꝛeouer wyth lawes, ſtatutes, puniſhments, impꝛiſonments, ſwoꝛd, fire and fagot: raigned and ruled as they liſted, as kings and pꝛinces wythin thẽſelues. So ſtrong were they of power, that no humaine foꝛce was able to ſtande againſt them: ſo exalted in pꝛide and puft vp in gloꝛy, that they thought all things to be ſubiect to their reuerent maieſties. What ſo euer they ſet foꝛth oꝛ decreed, it muſt of all men be receyued and obeyed.

And ſuch was their ſuperſtitious blindneſſe and curious vanitie, that whatſoeuer toy came once in their fantaſye: it was ſtraightwayes determined and ſtabliſhed foꝛ a lawe of all men to be obſerued, were it neuer ſo friuolous oꝛ ſuperſtitious. As wel appeareth by Thomas Arundell Archb. of Cant. and other, who hauing now a litle laiſure from ſlaying and killing the innocẽt people, Martyꝛs and Confeſſoꝛs of the Loꝛd, & hauing nowe bꝛought their enemies (as they thought) vnder fecte: began to ſet vp themſelues, and to inuent newe cuſtomes, as the guiſe is of the Popes church, euer to intrude into yͤ church of God, ſome ceremony oꝛ cuſtome of their owne making, whereby the Churche of Chꝛiſt hath bene hitherto exceedingly peſtred. So likewiſe this Thom. Arundel, thinking the church yet not ſufficiently ſtuffed with ceremonies and vaine traditions of men: bꝛingeth in a new found gaud, commonly called the tolling of Aues, in honour of our Ladye, wyth certaine Aues to be ſaide, and daies of pardon to be geuen foꝛ the ſame. Foꝛ the ratification wherof, vnder the pꝛetence of the kings requeſt, he directed his mandate to the Byſhop of London, well ſtuffed wyth woꝛdes of Idolatry, as by the reading thereof may appeare, in foꝛme of termes as followeth.

THomas, &c. To the right reuerend our brother, the Lorde Robert by the grace of God biſhoppe of London, greeting. &c. While we lift our eyes rounde about vs, and beholde attentiuely with circumſpect conſideration, how the moſt high woorde that was in the beginning with God, choſe to him an holy and immaculate virgin of the kingly ſtocke: in whoſe wombe he tooke true fleſh by inſpirall inſpiration, that the mercifull goodneſſe of the ſonne of God that was vncreate, might aboliſh the ſentence of condemnation, which all the poſterity of mankind that was created, had by ſinne incurred. Amongſt other labours in the vine of the Lorde of Sabaoth, we ſong to God our ſauiour with great ioy in him: carefully thinking, that though all the people of the Chriſtian religion did extol with voices of praiſes ſo worthy a virgin, by whõ we receiued the beginnings of our redemptiõ, by whom the holy day firſt ſhined to vs, which gaue vs hope of ſaluation. And although all the ſame people were drawen to reuerẽce her, which being a happy virgin, cõceiued the ſonne of God, the king of heauen, the redemer and ſauiour of all nations, miniſtring light to the people that were miſerably drowned in the darkeneſſe of death: We truely as the ſeruaunts of her owne *inheritance, and ſuch as are wrytten of, to be of her peculiar dower, as we are by euery mans confeſſion acknowledged to be: we I ſay, ought more watchfully then any others, to ſhewe the endeuours of our deuotion in praiſing her. Who being hetherto mercifull to vs, yea being euen cowardes, would that our power being, as it were ſpred abroad euery where through all the coaſtes of the world, ſhoulde with a victorious arme, feare all foreine nations. That our power being on all ſides ſo defended with the buckler of her protection, did ſubdue vnto our victorious ſtandards, and made ſubiect vnto vs, nations both neare at hand and farre off.

*If this be not blaſphemous & derogatory to Chriſt: let the reader iudge.

Likewiſe our happy eſtate (all the time that wee haue paſſed ſince the beginning of our liues) may be well attributed onely to the helpe of her medicine: to whom alſo we may worthely aſcribe nowe of late in theſe our times vnder the mighty gouernment of our moſt Chriſtian king, our deliuerãce from the rauening wolues, and the mouthes of cruell beaſts: which had prepared againſt our bankets, a meſſe of meat mingled full of gall, and hated vs vniuſtly, ſecretly lying in wait for vs, in recompence of the good wil that we ſhewed to them. Wherfore, that ſhee being on high ſitting before the throne of the heauenly maieſtie, the defendreſſe & patroneſſe of vs all, being magnified with al mens praiſes: may more plentifully exhibite to vs the ſonnes of adoption the teates of her *grace, in all thoſe things that we ſhall haue to do. At the requeſt of the ſpeciall deuotion of our Lord the king himſelf, we commãd your brotherhode, ſtraightly enioyning you: that you commaund the ſubiects of your citie and dioceſſe, and of al other ſuffraganes, to worſhip our Lady Mary the mother of God, and our *patroneſſe and protectreſſe, euermore in all aduerſity: with ſuch like kinde of prayer and accuſtomed maner of ringing, as the deuotiõ of Chriſtes faithful people is wont to worſhip her at the ringing of coure le feu. And when before day in the morning ye ſhall cauſe them to ring, that with like maner of praier & ringing, ſhe be euery where honored deuoutly by the aforeſaid our and your ſuffraganes and their ſubiects as wel religious as ſecular, in your and their monaſteries and collegiate churches: That wee ſo humbly calling vpon the mercy of the heauenly father, the right hande of the heauenly piety, may mercifully come to the helpe the protection & defence of the ſame our Lord the king, who for the happy remedy of quietneſſe, and for our ſuccour from tempeſtuous floudes, is ready to apply his hands to worke, and his eyes with all his whole deſire to watching. We therefore coueting more earneſtly to ſtirre vp the mindes of all faithfull people to ſo deuout an exerciſe of God. &c. Wee graunt by theſe preſents, to all and euery man. &c. that ſhall ſay the Lordes prayer and the ſalutation of the Angell fiue times at the morning peale with a deuout mind, totiens quotiens, (how oft ſo euer) 40 dayes of pardon by theſe preſents. Xl. dayes pardon, for 5. Aues.

By this friuolous and barbarous conſtitution wͭ many other of like ſoꝛt heaped into the church by the papiſts: appeareth the pꝛoper nature and cõdition of this catholick generation. Who being thẽſelues not greatly exerciſed noꝛ experienced in any ſerious cogitation of ſpirituall matter (as ſemeth) take vpon them to gouern the ſpiritual church of Chꝛiſt, wherof in deede they haue no ſkill oꝛ very little. And therefoꝛe accoꝛding to their vnſkilfull handling, they lead and rule the church after ſuch outward ſights and ceremonies, ſeemely perhaps to their owne groſſe affection: but not agreeing (nay rather cleane contrary) to the ryght nature & condition, of the ſpiritual houſe and kingdome of the Loꝛd. And like as in their inuentions they ſwarue vtterly from the right handling of all ſpiritual gouernment: ſo in their maners & foꝛme of life likewiſe, they do reſemble little oꝛ no part almoſt, of ſuch as are and ought to be, true paſtoꝛs and miniſters of the myſticall body of Chꝛiſt.

Heaping vp ceremonies in the church.

Examples heereof are plenty and plaine, in theſe Romaine Pꝛelates to be noted: who ſo well conſidering the humble ſtate and lowly ſpirite which ought to be in paſtorall leaders of the church, will compare the ſame wyth the vſuall pompe of theſe gloꝛious poteſtates.

As foꝛ example, what can be moꝛe conuenient foꝛ a true paſtoꝛ eccleſiaſticall, then humility of hart and ſpirit, accoꝛding to the example of the head biſhop himſelfe? So, what greater ſhew of arrogãcy and pꝛide could there be, then in this: whom I haue oft named befoꝛe. Th. Arundel, archb. of Cant. who paſſing by the high ſtreat of London, did not only looke and waite foꝛ the ringing of the belles, foꝛ a triumph of his comming, but tooke great ſnuffe and did ſuſpende all ſuche Churches in London (not onely wyth the ſteeple and bels, but alſo with the oꝛganes) ſo many as did not receiue his comming with the noyſe of bels: accoꝛding as out of his own regiſters may appeare, yͤ woꝛdes wherof wꝛitten to his owne Somner, I haue hereto annexed in his owne foꝛme as followeth.

The pompe of the popes Church noted.

¶A Commiſsion directed to the Somner, to ſuſpende certaine churches of London, becauſe they rong not their bels, at the preſence of my Lord the Archb. of Canterbury.

THomas by the permiſsion of God, &c. To oure well beloued Thom. Wilton our Somner ſworn, health, grace, and bleſsing. The Churches of London ſuſpended for not ringing at the comming of the Archb.

The comelineſſe of our holy Church of Canterb. ouer whych wee beare rule: deſerueth and requireth, that while wee paſſe throughe the prouince, of the ſame our Churche (hauing our croſſe caryed before vs) euery pariſh church in their turnes, ought & are bounden in token of ſpeciall reuerence that they beare to vs, to rynge theyr bels. Which notwithſtanding, ye on Tueſday laſt paſt, when wee betwixt 8. and 9. of the clocke before dinner, paſſed openly on foote as it were, through the middeſt of the citie of London, with our croſſe caried before vs: Diuers churches whoſe names are heere beneath noted, ſhewed towardes vs willingly (though they certainly knewe of our comming) vnreuerence rather then reuerence, and the duety that they owe to our church of Canterb. ringing not at all at our comming. Wherefore, wee being willing to reuenge this iniurie, *for the honor of our ſpouſe as we are boūden: commaunde you, that by our authoritie, you put all thoſe churches vnder our interditement, ſuſpēding Gods holy organes and inſtruments in the ſame Which we alſo ſuſpend by the tenor of theſe preſentes, till the miniſters of the aforeſayde Churches be able hereafter to attaine of vs the benefit of more plentifull grace. Geuen. &c.

* Oh iniurious enemies to Chriſt his humilitie.

What great reaſon was in this, why this Archb. either ſhould thus looke for the ringing of the belles, or why hee ſhould be ſo diſpleaſed with not ringing, I do not ſee. Belike his minde in the meane time was greatly occupied wt ſome great muſe, as feling of Gods feare, with repentance and remembrance of hys ſinnes, with zelous care and ſolicitude for his flocke, wyth the earneſt meditation of the paſſion & life of our ſauiour, who in this world was ſo deſpiſed: or els was ſet vppon ſome graue ſtudie, while hee ſo waited for the ringing of the bels, which are wont to be ſo noiſome to all ſtudents. And why were not the trūpetters alſo ſhent as well, becauſe they did not ſoūd before his perſon? But and though the bels did not clatter in the ſteples, and therefore his thunderbolt ſhould haue fallen vpon the ſteples which had deſerued: why ſhoulde the bodye of the churche therefore be ſuſpended? At leaſt, the poore Organes (me thinketh) had ſome part of wrong to be put to ſilence in the quier, becauſe the bels rang not in the tower.

Organs ſuſpended in the Church becauſe the belles dyd not ryng.

Of the like matter alſo we read in the ſayde regiſters, falling betweene the B. of Worceſter, and the priorie of the ſame towne, for not ringing at the biſhops comming into the church. Wherupon much ſute and contention was betweene them, till at length the Archb. of Cant. toke vp the matter, moderating it, as in the ſaid regiſters, fol. 441. appeareth to be ſeene as followeth.

Ex Regiſt. Tho. Arundeli. Variance betweene the B. and Prior of Worceſter for not ringing at the Biſhoppes comming.

VNiuerſis. &c. Thomas &c. where as there happened variance lately betwene our reuerend brother the Lorde B. of Worceſter on the one partye, and the religious and diſcrete men the Prior and couent of the ſame churche on the one partye, for not ringing of bels at the comming of our ſaide brother to his foreſayde church, at length the parties (conſidering the great incōuenience that might come therof) at our inſtance and requeſt did agree on this maner: that as often as it ſhall happen our reuerende brother to go to his aforeſaide church, either to celebrate orders, or to viſite his church in the head or in the inferiours, or to make creame and oyle in the ſame church: alſo in the feaſt of the Aſſumption of the bleſſed virgin Mary, which is the chiefeſt feaſt in the Abbey aforeſayde: then the Prior and the couent, and their ſucceſſours for the time being, ſhall ring ſolemnly againſt his comming, or ſhall cauſe to be ronge ſolemnly without all contradiction, or any reclaiming hereafter to be made againſt the ſame. Which agrement that it may be more firmely kept, we let you all vnderſtād by theſe preſents, ſealed with our ſeale. Geuen at our palace of Canterb. 12. Iuly, the 10. yeare of our gouernment.

The like ſtirre for belringing and for proceſſyons had almoſt hapned betwene the Archb. of Can. ſucceſſor to this Tho. Arundel, named Hen. Chichly on the one party, and the abbey of S. Albons on the other party, had not the abbot in time ſubmitting hymſelfe to the Archb. ſo prouided, that the ringing of their bels at hys comming, myght not redounde to any derogation of their liberties. Wherunto the Archb. graunted by theſe his letters as followeth.

HEnry &c. to the religious men, the Abbot and Couent of the Monaſtery of S. Albons in the dioceſſe of Lincoln, health. &c. When as of late there happened a matter of variance betwene vs, and you the Abbot & Couent, by reaſon of not geuing reuerence to vs, being due to our prouince of Cant. that is, for not ringing the bels and meeting vs with proceſsions when wee paſſed by diuers places of our prouince as well due of common cuſtome as of olde vſe, and for the prerogatiue of the Churche of Canterb. as alſo being due of euery one being within the compaſſe of this our ſayd prouince, when and as often as we ſhal paſſe by their places: at length your Lord Abbot (comming perſonally to vs) did grant both for you and the Couent aforeſaye, to do and to geue of your gentleneſſe all reuerence and honour, wyth ſuch reuerence bothe to vs and our church of Cant. as often as wee paſſe by your monaſterie, or the places nigh or adioyning therto, or ſhall hereafter go by: So that it might not be preiudicial to your exemption and nothing be attempted to the violating of your priuiledge: and that it might not be chalenged for duety hereafter. Wherefore, wee deſiring to kepe you from damage, let you vnderſtande by theſe preſents, that it is not our entent to derogate your exemptions or priuiledge whatſoeuer herein: nor by any meanes to be preiudiciall to you by theſe your reuerences or other dueties, whatſoeuer you haue or ſhall graunt to vs of your deuotion and liberalitie, both by you, and in places vnder your dominion. In wytneſſe whereof. &c. Dated the 28. day of Ianuary 1425. at S. Albons, the 12. yere of our gouernment.

Ex Regiſt. W. Courtney.

To expreſſe moreouer and deſcribe the glorious pompe of theſe princelike prelates in theſe blinde dayes of popiſh religion raigning then in the church: I thought to adioyn hereunto an other example not much vnlike, neither differing muche in time, concerning certaine poore men cited vp, and enioyned ſtraight penance by W. Courtney predeceſſour of the ſayd Tho. Arundel, for bringing litter to hys horſe, not in waines as they ſhould do, but in priuy ſacks, in a ſecrete maner vnder their clokes or cotes. For ye which ſo hainous and horrible treſpaſſe, the ſayd Archbiſhop ſitting in hys tribunall ſeate, did call and cite before hym the ſayde perſons (pro litera. i. for litter, after his owne Latine) and after theyr ſubmiſſion enioyned them penance. Whych penance, what it was, & what were the names of the foreſaid parties, here followeth out of the ſayd Arch. regiſters, both by his owne words, & by picture of the perſons in the ſame regiſters annexed and painted, in all reſemblance, as there ſtandeth, and heere is alſo to be ſeene.

A deſcription of the poore men doing their penaunce, with their ſtrawe on their backe.

This bagge full of ſtrawe I beare on my backe,
Becauſe my Lordes horſe his Litter did lacke.
If ye be not good to my Lordes graces horſſe,
You are like to goe barefoote before the croſſe.

IGnorance the mother of error ſo much hath blinded and deceiued certaine perſons, to witte, Hugh Penny, Iohn Forſtall, Iohn Boy, Ihon Wanderton, Will. Haywarde, and Iohn White, tenaunts of the Lord of Wengham: that againſt the comming of the aforeſayde Archbiſhop to hys palace of Canterbury on Palmes Sonday euen, the yeare of our Lord 1390. where they being warned by the bailiffe, to conuey and cary hay, ſtrawe, and other littour to the aforeſayd palace, as they were bounde by the tenor of theyr landes, which they hold of the ſea of Canterbury: refuſing and diſdaining to doe their due ſeruice, as they were accuſtomed, brought their ſtraw and other littor, not in cartes and waines openly & ſufficiently, but by peece meale, and cloſely in bagges or ſackes, in contempt of their Lord, and derogation of the right and title of the ſea of Canterbury. Wherupon they being aſcited & preſented before the archb. ſitting in iudgement at hys manour of Statewood, yelded and ſubmitted themſelues to hys Lordſhyppes pleaſure, humbly crauing pardon of their treſpaſſe. Then the aforeſayd archbiſhop abſolued the aboue named Hugh Penny, &c. they ſwearing to obey the lawes and ordinance of holy church, and to do the puniſhment that ſhuld be appoynted them for their deſertes, that is: that they going layſurely before the proceſſion, euery one of them ſhould cary openly on hys ſhoulder, his bagge ſtuffed with hay and ſtrawe, ſo that the ſayd hay and ſtrawe ſhould appeare hanging out, the mouthes of the ſackes being open.

Penance enioyned for bringing ſtraw to Lords horſe.

Excommunication and abſolution abuſed.

✻ Notes of certaine Parliament matters paſſed in this kings dayes.

To proceede now further in the raigne of this king, & to intreat alſo ſome thing of his parliamentes, as we haue done of other before, firſt we wil beginne with the Parliament holden in the firſt yere of hys comming in.

Notes of this kings parliaments.

Moreouer, forſomuch as our Catholike papiſtes will not beleue yet the cõtrary, but that the iuriſdiction of their father the pope hath euer extended throughout all yͤ world, as well here in England as in other places: here therefore ſpeaking of the Parliaments holden in this kings dayes concerning thys matter, I refer them to the Parliament of the ſayd king Henry in his firſt yere holden, and to the 27. article of the ſame. Where they may reade in the 10. obiection laid againſt K. Richard in plaine words: how that, for aſmuch as the crowne of this realme of England, and the iuriſdiction belonging to yͤ ſame, as alſo the whole realme it ſelfe, at all times lately paſt, hath ben at ſuch libertie, and enioyed ſuch prerogatiue, that neyther the Pope, nor any other out of the ſame kingdome ought to intrude himſelfe, nor intermedle therein: it was therefore obiected vnto the forenamed king Richarde the 2. for procuring the letters Apoſtolical from the Pope, to the confirming and corroborating of certaine ſtatutes of hys, and that hys cenſures myght be proſecuted againſt the breakers thereof. Whyche ſeemed then to the Parliament, to tend againſt the crowne and regall dignitie, as alſo againſt the ſtatutes & liberties of the ſaid thys our realme of England. Act. Parl. An. 1. Reg. Henrici 4. Act 27.

The popes iuriſdiction excluded out of this realme.

Ex Anno. 1. Reg. Henrici. Act. 27.

Furthermore, in the ſecond yeare of the ſaide king, thys was in the Parliament required, that all ſuch perſones as ſhalbe areſted by force of the ſtatute made againſt the Lollardes, in the 2. yeare of Henry 4. may be bailed, and freely make their purgation: That they be areſted by none other then by the Sheriffes or ſuch like officers, neither that any hauocke be made of their goods. The king granted to take aduiſe therein.

Anno. Reg. Henr. 4. Act. 29.

In the 8. yeare moreouer of thys kings raigne, it was likewiſe propounded in the Parliament, that all ſuche perſons as ſhall procure or ſue in the court of Rome any proceſſe touching any benefice, collation, or preſentation of the ſame, ſhal incurre the paine of yͤ ſtatute of prouiſors, made in the 13. yeare of Richard 2. whereunto the king granted, that the ſtatutes herefore prouided ſhould be obſerued.

An. 8. Reg. Henri. 4. Act. 116.

An. 8. Reg. Hen. 4. act. 114.

Item, in the ſayde Parliament, there it was put vp by petition, that the king might enioy halfe the profits of euery parſons benefice, who is not reſident thereon. Therunto the king aunſwered, that the ordinaries ſhould do theyr duties therein, or els he would prouide further remedie, to ſtay their pluralities.

Item, in the ſayde Parliament, it was required: that none do ſue to the court of Rome for any benefice, but only in the kings courtes.

Ibidē act. 37

¶ In the next yere folowing, which was the 9. of this Kyng, an other petition of the Commons was put vp in Parliament againſt the court of Rome, whych I thought good here to expreſſe as foloweth.

The Commons do beſeeche, that foraſmuch as diuers prouiſors of the benefices of holy Church, dwelling in the Court of Rome, through their ſingular couetouſnes now newly imagined to deſtroy thoſe that haue bene long time incumbents in diuers their benefics of holy church peaceably, ſome of them by the title of the king, ſome by title ordinary, and by the title of other true patrõs therof, by colour of prouiſions, collations, and other grauntes made to the ſayd prouiſors by the Apoſtoil, of the ſayd benefices, do purſue proceſſes in the ſaid court by citation made beyond the ſea, without any citations made within the Realme in deede againſt the ſame incumbents, whereby many of the ſaid incumbents through ſuch priuy & crafty proceſſes and ſentences of priuation and inhabilitation, haue loſt theyr benefices, and others put in the places of the ſaide incumbents before the publication of the ſame ſentẽces, they not knowing any thing, and many are in great haſarde to loſe theyr benefices through ſuch proceſſes, to theyr perpetuall deſtruction and miſchiefe: and foraſmuch as thys miſchiefe cannot be holpen wythout an eſpeciall remedy be had by parliament: Pleaſeth it the king to conſider the great miſchiefe and daunger that may ſo come vnto diuers hys ſubiects without their knowledge through ſuch citations out of the realme, and therupon to ordaine by the aduiſe of the Lords of this preſent Parliament, that none preſented, be receiued by any ordinarie vnto any benefice of any ſuch incumbent for any cauſe of priuation or inhabilitation wherof the proceſſe is not founded vpon citation made wythin the realme, and alſo that ſuch incumbents may remaine in all theyr benefices, vntil it be proued by due enqueſt in the court of the King, that the citations whereupon ſuch priuations & inhabilitations are graunted, were made within the Realme: and that if ſuch Ordinaries, or ſuch preſented or others, doe purſue the contrary, that then they and theyr procurators, fautours and counſellours doe incurre the paines contained in the ſtatute made againſt prouiſors in the 13. yere of the raigne of the late Richard king of England the ſecond, by proceſſes to be made as is declared in the ſtatute made againſt ſuche prouiſors in the 27. yeare of the raigne of king Edward, predeceſſour to our Lorde the king that nowe is, any royall licences or grauntes in any maner to the contrary notwithſtanding, and that all other ſtatutes made againſt prouiſors, and not repealed before this preſent Parliament, be in their full force, and be firmly kept in all poyntes.

Ex Rotulo Parlamenti an. 9. Henrici. 4.

The wickednes of popes prouiſors in citing and depriuing beneficed men in England, their citation being not knowen in the realme.

That the kings counſell haue power by authoritye of Parliament, in caſe that any man finde himſelfe grieued in particular, that he may purſue: and that the ſaid counſel by the aduiſe of the iuſtices do right vnto the parties. This to endure vntil the next parliament, reſeruing alwayes vnto the king his prerogatiue and libertie.

Item, that no Popes collector thenceforth ſhould leuy any money within the realme, for firſt fruites of any eccleſiaſticall dignitie, vnder payne of incurring the ſtatute of prouiſions.

Ann. 9. Regis Henrici. 4. act. 43.

Beſides in the ſayd Parliament holden the 11. yeare of this king, is to be noted: how the commõs of the land, put vp a Bill vnto the kyng, to take the temporall landes out from ſpirituall mens handes or poſſeſſion. The effecte of which Bill was, that the temporalities, diſordinately waſted by men of the Churche, might ſuffice to finde to the K. xv. Earles, xv. C. Knightes, vj. M. CC. Eſquires, and a C. houſes of almoſe, to the reliefe of poore people, moe then at thoſe dayes were wythin England: And ouer all theſe foreſayd charges, the king might put yearely in his cofers xx. M. pounde.

Ex Chronic. D. Albani, Fabiano, & alijs.

Prouided, that euery Earle ſhould haue of yerely rent iij. M. marke, and euery Knight C. marke, and iiij. plough landes: Euery Eſquier xl. marke by yeare, with ij. plough landes, & euery houſe of almoſe C. marke, wyth ouerſight of two true ſeculars vnto euery houſe: And alſo with prouiſion

niſion, that euery towneſhip ſhould keepe all poore people of their owne dwellers, whych might not labour for theyr liuing: with condition, that if moe fell in a towne then the towne might maintaine, than the ſaid almes houſes to releeue ſuch towneſhips.

A computation of Churche goods, to how much they doe mount.

And for to beare theſe charges, they alledged by theyr ſayd bil, yͤ the temporalties, being in the poſſeſſion of ſpirituall men, amounted to iij.C. and xxij.M. marke by yeare. whereof they affirmed to be in the ſee of Cant. with the abbaies of Chriſtes church, of S. Auguſtines, Shrewſbury, Coggeſhale, and S. Oſius xx.M. marke by yere. In the ſee of Yorke and Abbeys there xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Wincheſter, and abbeys there xx.M. marke. In the ſee of London, wͭ abbeys and other houſes there, xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Lincolne, wyth the abbeys of Peterborowe, Ramſey and other, xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Norwych, with the abbeys of Bury and other, xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Ely, Spalding and other, xx.M. marke, In the ſee of Bathe, wyth the abbey of Okinborne and other, xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Worceſter, wyth the abbeys of Eueſham, Abingdon & other, xx.M. marke. In the ſee of Cheſter with the precinct of the ſame, with the ſees of ſ. Dauid, of Saliſbury, and Exceter, wyth their precinctes xx.M. marke. The abbeis of Rauens or Reuans of Fountains, of Gernons, and diuers other to the number of v. moe, xx.M. marke. The abbeys of Leiceſter, Walthan, Goſborne, Merton, Ticetir, Oſney and other, vnto the number of vj. mo, xx.M. marke. The abbeys of Douers, Batil, Lewys, Couentry, Dauentre, & Tourney, xx.M. marke. The abbais of Northhampton, Thortō, Briſtow, Killingworth, Winchcombe, Hailes, Parchiſſor, Frideſwide, Notly, and Grimmiſby, xx.M. marke.

The which foreſaid ſommes amount to the full of iij.C.M. marke. And for the odde of xxij.M. marke, they apointed Hardford, Rocheſter, Huntingdō, Swineſhed, Crowland, Malmeſbury, Burton, Teukeſbury, Dunſtable, Shirborne, Taunton and Biland.

And ouer this they alleaged by the ſayde bill, that ouer and aboue the ſaid ſumme of iij. C. and xxij. M. marke, diuers houſes of religion in England, poſſeſſed as many tēporalties as might ſuffice to find yerely xv.M. prieſts and clerks, euery prieſt to be allowed for his ſtipend vij. marke by the yeare.

To the which Bill no anſwer was made, but that the king of this matter wold take deliberation & aduiſement, and wyth that anſwer ended, ſo that no further labor was made.

Ann. 1413.

Theſe things thus hitherto diſcourſed, touching ſuche actes and matters as haue bene incident in the lyfe time of this king, followeth next the 13. yeare of his raigne. In the which yeare, the ſayd king Henry the 4. after that hee had ſent a little before a certaine company of captaines & ſouldiours to aide the duke of Burgundy in Fraunce (among whome was the Lord Cobham) keping his Chriſtenmas at Eltham, fell greeuouſly ſicke. From thence, he was conueied to London, where he began to call a parliament, but taryed not the end. In the meane time, the infirmitie of the king more and more increaſing, he was takē and brought into a bed in a fair chamber at Weſtminſter. And as he lay in his bed, he aſked how they called the ſame chamber: and they anſwered and ſayde, Ieruſalem. And then he ſayde it was his prophecie, that he ſhould make his ende in Ieruſalem. And ſo diſpoſing himſelfe towarde hys ende, in the foreſayd chamber he died: vpon what ſickneſſe, whether of leproſie, or ſome other ſharpe diſeaſe, I haue not to affirm. Ex vetuſt. Chron. Anglico, cuius initium, That all men called. The like prophecy we read, that pope Silueſter, 2. pa. 180. to whom being inquiſitiue for the time and place where he ſhould die, it was anſwered, that he ſhuld die in Ieruſalē. Who then ſaying Maſſe in a Chappel (called likewiſe Ieruſalem) perceiued his end there to be nere, and died. And thus K. Henry the 4. ſucceſſor to the lawful K. Richard 2. finiſhed hys life at Weſtminſter, and was buried at Cant. by the tombe of Thomas Becket. &c. An. 1413.

The kyng had a prophecie, that he ſhould die in Ieruſalem.

¶ King Henry the fift.

King Henry.5.

After thys Henry the 4. reigned Henry the 5. hys ſonne, which was borne at Munmorth in Wales, of whoſe other vertues and great victories gotten in Fraunce, I haue not greatly to intermeddle: Eſpecially, ſeeing the memory of hys worthy proweſſe, being ſufficiently deſcribed in other writers in this our time, may both content the reader and vnburden my labor herein. Eſpecially, ſeing theſe latter troubles and perturbations of the Churche offer me ſo much, that vnneth any vacant laiſure ſhalbe left, to intermeddle wyth matters prophane.

Great tempeſt at the coronatiō of the new king.

After the coronatiō then of this new king, which was the 9. day of April, called then paſſion Sonday, which was an exceding ſtormy day, and ſo tēpeſtuous, that many did wonder at the portent thereof: not long after the ſame, a parliament began to be called & to be holden after the feaſt of Eaſter, at Weſtminſter An. 1413. At whych time, Thomas Arundel the Archbiſhop of Canterburie, collected in Paules church at London, an vniuerſal Synode of all the biſhops and clergie of England. In that Synode among other weighty matters and ponderous, was determined: that the day of S. George, and alſo of S. Dunſtane ſhould be double feaſt, called Duplex Feſtum in holy kitching, in holy Church I would ſay.

A ſynode called at London.

S.George and S.Dunſtanes day made double feaſt.

And becauſe the order and maner of thoſe Pope holy feaſtes, either yet is not ſufficiently knowen to ſome rude and groſſe capacities, or may peraduenture growe out of vſe, and to be ſtraunge & vnknowen to our poſteritie hereafter: Therfore to geue a litle memorandum therof (by the way for eruditiō of times hereafter to come) touching this miſticall ſcience of the Popes deepe and ſecreate diuinitie: here is to be noted, that the feaſtes of the Popes holy mother Catholique churche, be deuided in ſondry members: Like as a plentifull roote in a fruitfull fielde riſeth vp and burgeneth into manifold armes, and the armes againe do multiply into diuers and ſondry brāches, out of the which moreouer although no frute do come, yet both leaues and flowers doe bud and bloſſome in moſt copious wiſe, right beautifull to beholde: Euen ſo thys Feſtum, conteinyng a large matter of great variety of dayes and feaſts, groweth to it ſelfe and multiplieth, being thus deuided: firſt into Feſtum duplex, and into Feſtum ſimplex, that is into feaſt double, and to feaſt ſimple. Againe, thys Feſtum duplex brauncheth foure folde wiſe, to wit, into Feſtum principale duplex: into Maius duplex: into Minus duplex, and inferius duplex, that is, in principal double, in greater double, in leſſer double, and inferior or lower double. Vnto theſe ſeueral ſorts of feaſts what daies were peculiarly aſſigned, it were to long to recite. For this preſent purpoſe it ſhall ſuffice to vnderſtand: that as vnto the principall double feaſt onely belonged 8. daies in the yere: ſo the Maius duplex feſtum, had geuen vnto him by thys conuocation, the day of S. George, and of S. Dunſtane, as is afore remembred: albeit by conſtitution it was ſo decreed, yet by cuſtome it was not ſo vſed. Item, to be noted, that theſe two feaſtes, to witte, Principale duplex, and Maius duplex, did differ and were knowen from all other by foure notes, by ſeruice in the kitching, and by ſeruice in the Church, which was both double: by ringing in the ſteple, which was with double peale: by copes in the quier, and by thurifyeng or cenſing the aultares. For in theſe two principall and greater double feaſts, the vij. viij. and ix. leſſon muſt be read wyth ſilken copes. Alſo at the ſaid feaſts in the time of the leſſons, the altars in the church muſt be thurified, that is, ſmoked with incēſe. &c. And likewiſe the Minus duplex, and Inferius duplex had alſo their peculiar ſeruice to them belonging.

The feaſt of the popes church, deſcribed and deuided.

Feſtum duplex.
Principale duplex.
Maius duplex.
Minus duplex.
Inferius duplex.

Conſtitution againſt councell. Ex tab. feſtorum

Secondly the Simplex feſtum, whych is the ſeconde arme ſpringing of this diuiſion, is thus diuided: Eyther hauing a triple inuitorie, or a double, or els a ſingle inuitorie. Of the which moreouer, ſome haue 3. leſſons, ſome haue 9. &c.

Simplex feſtum in the popes church.

And thus much by occaſion for Popiſh feaſts, not that I doe ſo much deride them, as I lament, that ſo much and manifeſt idolatry in them is committed to the great diſhonor of our Lord our God, whych is onely to be honoured.

¶ The trouble and perſecution of the Lord Cobham.

But to lette this by matter paſſe, againe to returne to the foreſayde vniuerſal Synode aſſembled by Thomas Arundel at S. Paules churche in London, as is before remembred: the chiefe and principall cauſe of the aſſembling thereof (as recordeth the Chronicle of S. Albones) was to repreſſe the growing and ſpreading of the Goſpell, and eſpecially to withſtand the noble & worthy Lorde Cobham: who was then noted to be a principall fauourer, receiuer, and maintainer of them, whome the Byſhop miſnamed to be Lollards, eſpecially in the dioceſſes of London, Rocheſter, and Herforde: ſetting them vp to preache whome the byſhops had not licenſed, and ſending thē about to preach, which was againſt the conſtitution prouinciall, before remembred, pag. 524. holding alſo and teaching opinions of the ſacraments, of images, of pilgrimage, of the keyes and church of Rome, contrary and repugnant, to the receiued determination of the Romiſh church. &c.

Theſe things thus done, & the Articles being brought in: further they proceded in their communication, concluding among themſelues, that it was not poſſible for them to make whole Chriſtes coat wͭout ſeame (meaning therby their patched Popiſh ſynagoge) vnleſſe certaine great men were brought out of the way which ſeemed to be the chiefe maintainers of the ſayde Diſciples of wickleffe. Among whõ thys noble knight ſir Iohn Oldcaſtle the Lord Cobham, was complained of by the generall proctors to be the chiefe principall. Him they accuſed firſt for a mighty maintainer of ſuſpected preachers in the dioces of London, Rocheſter, and Hereford, contrary to the mindes of their ordinaries. Not only they affirmed him to haue ſet thether the ſaide preachers, but alſo to haue aſſiſted them there by force of armes, notwithſtanding their Synodall conſtitution made afore to the contrary. Laſt of al, they accuſed him, that he was farre otherwiſe in beliefe of the ſacrament of the altar of penaunce, of pilgrimage, of image worſhipping, and of the Eccleſiaſtical power, then the holy Church of Rome had taught many yeares before.

Proceſſe againſt him.

In the ende it was concluded among them, that wͭout any further delay, proceſſe ſhoulde be awarded out againſt him, as againſt a moſt pernitious hereticke.

A ſpiritual practiſe.

The kyng ſpeaketh for him.

His gentle promiſe.

Some of that felowſhip which were of more crafty experience then the other: thought it not beſt to haue ẏ matter ſo raſhly handled, but by ſome preparation made therunto before. Conſidering the ſayde Lorde Cobham was a man of great birth, and in fauour at that time with the K. their counſaile was to know firſt the kings minde, to ſaue all things vpright. This counſaile was well accepted, and thereupon the Archbyſhop Thomas Arundell wyth hys other biſhops, and a great part of ẏ clergye, went ſtraight waies vnto the king, then remaining at Keningſton. And there laid forth moſt greuous complaints againſt the ſayd Lorde Cobham, to his great infamy and blemiſh, being a man right godly. The king gently heard thoſe bloud thirſty Prelates, and farre otherwiſe then became his princely dignitie: notwythſtanding requiring, and inſtantly deſiring them, that in reſpect of hys noble ſtocke and knighthode, they ſhould yet fauourably deale with him. And that they would if it were poſſible, without all rigor or extreme handling, reduce him againe to the Churches vnitie. Hee promiſed them alſo, that in caſe they were contented to take ſome deliberation, hys ſelfe would ſeriouſly common the matter wyth him.

Anone after, the king ſent for the ſaide Lorde Cobham. And as he was come, he called him ſecretely, admoniſhing him betwixt him and him, to ſubmit himſelf to his mother the holy church, and as an obedient child, to acknowledge himſelfe culpable. Unto whome the Chriſten knight made this aunſwer: You moſt worthy Prince, ſaith he, I am alwaies prompt & willing to obey, forſomuch as I knowe you a chriſten king, & the appoynted miniſter of God, bearing the ſworde to the puniſhment of euil doers, & for ſafegard of them that be vertuous. Unto you (next my eternal God) owe I my whole obedience, & ſubmit thereunto (as I haue done euer) all that I haue, eyther of fortune or nature, ready at all times to fulfil whatſoeuer ye ſhall in the Lord, commaund me. But as touching the Pope and hys ſpiritualty, I owe them neither ſute nor ſeruice, forſomuch as I knowe him by the Scriptures to be the great Antichriſt, the ſonne of perdition, the open aduerſary of God, & the abhomination ſtanding in the holy place. When ẏ king had heard thys, wͭ ſuch like ſentences more, he would talke no longer with hym, but left him ſo vtterly.

Lord Cobham ſommoned by the Archb.

And as the Archbyſhop reſorted againe vnto hym for an anſwere, he gaue him his full authority to cite him, examin him, & puniſh him according to their deuiliſh decrees, which they called the lawes of holy church. Then the ſayde Archb. by the counſaile of his other Byſhops and Clergy, appoynted to cal before him Sir Iohn Oldcaſtle the Lord Cobham, and to cauſe hym perſonally to appeare, to aunſwere to ſuch ſuſpect Articles as they ſhoulde lay agaynſt hym. So he ſent forth hys chiefe Sommoner, wyth a very ſharpe citation vnto the caſtle of Cowling, where as he at that time dwelt for his ſolace. And as the ſayd Sommoner was come thether, hee durſt in no caſe enter the gates of ſo noble a man wythout his licence, and therfore he returned home againe, hys meſſage not done.

The citatiõs takẽ downe.

Then called the Archbiſh. one Iohn Butler vnto him, which was then the doore keper of the kings priuy chamber: and wyth him he couenaunted through promyſes and rewards, to haue this matter craftly brought to paſſe, vnder the kings name. Whereuppon, the ſayde Iohn Butler tooke the Archbyſhops Somner with him, and went vnto the ſaide Lord Cobham: ſhewing him, ẏ it was the kings pleaſure that he ſhould obey that citation, and ſo cited him fraudulently. Then ſaide he to them in few words, that he in no caſe would conſent to thoſe moſt deuiliſh practiſes of the Prieſtes. As they had informed the Archbyſhop of that aunſwere, and that it was for no man priuately to cite him after that, without pearil of life: he decreed by & by to haue him cited by publique proceſſe or open cõmandement. And in all the haſt poſſible, vpon the wedneſday before the Natiuity of our Lady in September: he commaunded letters citatorie, to be ſet vppon the great gates of the Cathedrall church of Rocheſter (whych was but 3. Engliſh miles frõ thence) charging hym to appeare perſonally before him at Ledis the 11. day of the ſame moneth and yeare, all excuſes to the contrary ſet apart. Thoſe letters were taken down anone after, by ſuch as bare fauor vnto the Lord Cobham and ſo conueyed aſide. After that cauſed the Archbiſh. new letters to be ſet vp on the natiuity day of our Lady, whych alſo were rent downe and vtterly conſumed.

Falſe accuſations againſt the Lord Cobham.

L. Cobham excommunicated.

L. Cobham againe cited.

Then forſomuch as he dyd not appeare at the day appoynted at Ledys (where hee ſate in Conſiſtorie, as cruell as euer was Cayphas, with his court of hypocrites about him) he iudged him, denounced him, and condemned him, of moſt depe contumacy. After that, whẽ he had bene falſly informed by his hired ſpies, and other gloſing glauerers: that the ſayd Lord Cobh. had laughed him to ſcorn, diſdained al his doings, maintained his old opinions, contemned the churches power, the dignity of a Biſhop, & the order of prieſthood (for all theſe was he than accuſed of) in his mody madnes wͭout iuſt profe, did he openly excommunicate him. Yet was not withal this, his fierce tiranny ſatiſfied: but commanded him to be cited a freſh, to appeare afore him the Saterday before the feaſt of S. Mathewe the Apoſtle, wͭ theſe cruel threatnings added thereunto: that if he did not obey at the day, he wold more extremely handle him. And to make himſelfe more ſtrong towardes the performãce thereof, he compelled the lay power by moſt terrible manaſings of curſes and interdictions: to aſſiſt hym againſt that ſeditious apoſtata, ſchiſmaticke, and hereticke, the troubler of the publike peace, that enemy of the realme and great aduerſary of all holy Church, for al theſe hateful names did he geue him.

L. Cobham confeſſeth his God before men.

The Apoſtles faith.

Thys moſt conſtant ſeruant of the Lorde and worthy Knight ſir Iohn Oldcaſtle, the Lorde Cobham, beholding the vnpeaceable furie of Antichriſt, thus kindled agaynſt him: perceiuing himſelf alſo compaſſed on euery ſide wyth deadly daungers: He tooke paper and pen in hand, and ſo wrote a Chriſten cõfeſſion or rekening of his faith (whych followeth heereafter) both ſigning and ſealing it wyth his owne hand. Wherein he alſo anſwered to the 4. chiefeſt articles that the Archbyſhop laid againſt him. That done, he tooke the copie with him, and went therewith to the king, truſting to finde mercy & fauour at his hande. None other was ẏ confeſſion of his, then the common beleue or ſumme of the Churches faith, called the Apoſtles Creede, of all Chriſten men than vſed, with a brief declaration vpon the ſame, as here vnder enſueth.

¶The Chriſten beliefe of the Lorde Cobham.

The cõmõ creede of Chriſtians.

I Beleue in God the father almighty, maker of heauen and earth. And in Ieſu Chriſt hys onely ſonne our Lorde, which was cõceiued by the holy ghoſt, borne of the virgin Mary, ſuffred vnder Ponce Pilate, crucified dead and buried, went downe to hell, the thirde day roſe agayne from death, aſcended vp to heauen, ſitteth on the ryght hande of God the father almighty, and from thence ſhal come again to iudge the quicke & the dead. I beleeue in the holy ghoſt, the vniuerſal holy Church, the communion of Saints, the forgeueneſſe of ſinnes, the vpriſing of the fleſh, and euerlaſting life. Amen.

A declaratiõ of his beliefe.

And for a more large declaration (ſayth he) of thys my faith ſayth in the Catholicke Churche: I ſtedfaſtly beleue, that there is but one God almighty, in and of whoſe Godhead are theſe three perſons, the father, the ſonne, and the holye Ghoſt, and that thoſe three perſons are the ſelfe ſame God almighty. I beleue alſo, that the ſecond perſon of this moſt bleſſed Trinitie, in moſt conuenient tyme appoynted therunto afore, tooke fleſh and bloud of the moſt bleſſed virgin Mary, for the ſauegarde and redemption of the vniuerſall kind of man, which was afore loſt in Adams offence.

Chriſt is the onely head of his Church.

Moreouer I beleeue, that the ſame Ieſus Chriſt our Lord thus being both God and man, is the onely head of the whole Chriſtian Churche, and that all thoſe that hathe bene or ſhalbe ſaued, be members of this moſt holy church. And this holy Churche I thinke to be deuided into three ſortes or companyes.

The church deuided in three partes.

Wherof the firſt ſort be now in heauen, and they are the ſayntes from hence departed. Theſe as they were here cõuerſant, conformed alwayes their liues to the moſt holye lawes and pure examples of Chriſt, renouncing Sathan, the world, and the fleſh, with all their concupiſcences and euils.

Contrary wrote he, ad parliamētū. Ex Walde-n.

The ſecond ſort are in Purgatory (if any ſuche place be in the ſcriptures) abiding the mercy of God and a full deliueraunce of payne.

The third ſort are here vpon the earth, and be called the Church millitant. For day and night they contend againſt crafty aſſaultes of the deuill, the flattering proſperities of this world, and the rebellious filthines of the fleſh.

The church millitant deuided in three.

This latter congregation by the iuſt ordinance of God is alſo ſeuered into three diuers eſtates, that is to ſay, into prieſthood, knighthood, and the commons. Among whom the will of God is, that the one ſhould ayd the other, but not deſtroy the other. The prieſtes firſt of al ſecluded from all worldlines, ſhould conforme theyr liues vtterly to the examples of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. Euermore ſhoulde they be occupyed in preaching and teaching the ſcriptures purely, and in geuing wholeſome examples of good liuing to the other two degrees of men. More modeſt alſo, more louing, gentle, and lowly in ſpirite, ſhould they be, then ano other ſortes of people.

What the prieſtes ſhould be.

Knighthood what it ſhould doe.

In knighthood are all they, which beare ſword by law of office. Theſe ſhould defend Gods lawes, and ſee that the Goſpell were purely taught, conforming theyr liues to ye ſame, and ſecluding all falſe preachers: yea theſe ought rather to hazard their liues, thẽ to ſuffer ſuch wicked decrees as either blemiſheth the eternall Teſtament of God, or yet letteth the free paſſage therof, whereby hereſies & ſchiſmes might ſpring in the Churche. For of none other ariſe they as I ſuppoſe, then of erroneous conſtitutiõs, craftely firſt creeping in vnder hipocriticall lies, for aduauntage. They ought alſo to preſerue Gods people from oppreſſours, tyrauntes, and theeues, & to ſee the clergie ſupported ſo long as they teach purely, pray rightly, and miniſter the Sacramentes freely. And if they ſee them doe otherwiſe, they are bound by the law of office to compell them to chaung their doinges: & to ſee all thinges performed according to gods preſcript ordinaunce.

Marke here a moſt chriſten hart.

What the commõ people ought to doe.

The latter fellowſhip of this Church, are the common people: whoſe duety is, to beare their good mindes & true obedience, to the aforeſayd miniſters of God, theyr kinges ciuill gouernours and Prieſtes. The right office of theſe, is iuſtly to occupy euery man his facultie, be it marchaundiſe, handicraft: or the tilthe of the ground. And ſo one of them to be as an helper to an other, following alwayes in their ſortes the iuſt commaundementes of the Lord God.

Beliefe of the L. Cobham concerning the Sacramentes.

¶ Ouer and beſides all this, I moſt faythfully beleeue yt the Sacramentes of Chriſtes Churche are neceſſary to all Chriſten beleuers: this alwayes ſeen to: that they be truly miniſtred according to Chriſtes firſt inſtitution and ordinaunce. And foraſmuch as I am maliciouſly & moſt falſly accuſed of a miſbeliefe in the ſacrament of the aulter, to the hurtfull ſlaunder of many: I ſignifie here vnto all men, yt this is my fayth concerning that. I beleue in that Sacrament to be contayned very Chriſtes body and bloud vnder the ſimilitudes of bread and wyne, yea the ſame body yt was conceiued of the holy ghoſt, borne of ye virgine Mary done on the croſſe: dyed, that was buryed, aroſe the thyrd day from the death: and is now glorified in heauen. I alſo beleue, the vniuerſall law of God to be moſt true and perfect, and they which doe not ſo follow it in theyr fayth and works (at one time or an other) can neuer be ſaued: Whereas he that ſeketh it in fayth, accepteth it, learneth it, delighteth therin, and performeth it in loue, ſhall taſt for it the felicitie of euerlaſting Innocencie.

The Sacrament of the aulter.

Gods law to be preferred before mans lawe.

Finally, this is my fayth alſo, that God will aſke no more of a Chriſten beleuer in this life, but onely to obey ye preceptes of that moſt bleſſed law. If any Prelates of the Church require more, or els any other kinde of obedience, then this to be vſed: he contemneth Chriſt, exalting hymſelfe aboue God, and ſo becommeth an open Antichriſt. Al the premiſſes I beleue particularly, and generally all that God hath left in his holy ſcripture: that I ſhould beleeue. Inſtantly deſiring you my liege Lord and moſt worthye king, that this confeſſion of mine, may be iuſtly examined by the moſt godly wiſe and learned men of your Realme. And if it be found in all pointes agreeing to the veritie, thẽ let it be ſo allowed: and I therupon holden for none other then a true Chriſtian. If it be proued otherwiſe: then let it be vtterly cõdemned: prouided alwayes, that I be taught a better beliefe by the word of God: and I ſhall moſt reuerently at all times obey therunto.

A Chriſtẽ deſire of the L. Cobham. This requeſt was lawfull.

Obedience vnto his king.

This briefe confeſſion of this fayth, the Lorde Cobham wrote (as is mentioned afore) and ſo tooke it with him to the court, offering it withall meekenes vnto the kyng to read it ouer. The king would in no caſe receaue it, but cõmanded it to be deliuered vnto thẽ that ſhould be his iudges. Then deſired he in the kinges preſence, that an hundred knightes and Eſquiers might be ſuffered to come in vpon hys purgation, which he knew, woulde cleare hym of all hereſies. Moreouer he offered himſelfe after the lawe of armes, to fight for life or death wt any man liuing, Chriſten or heathen, in the quarrell of hys fayth, the king and the Lordes of hys Councell excepted. Finally with all gẽtlenes he proteſted before all yt were preſent, that he wold refuſe no maner of correction that ſhold after the lawes of God be miniſtred vnto him, but that he would at al times with all meekenes obey it. Notwithſtanding all this, the king ſuffered him to be ſommoned perſonally in his owne priuy chamber. Then ſayd the Lord Cobham to the king that he had appeled from the Archbiſhop to the Pope of Rome, & therefore he ought he ſayd, in no cauſe to be hys iudge. And hauing his appeale there at hand ready writtẽ, he ſhewed it with al reuerence to the king. Wherewith the king was then much more diſpleaſed then afore, and ſayde angerly vnto him, that he ſhould not purſue hys appeale: but rather he ſhould tary in hold, till ſuche time as it were of the Pope allowed. And thẽ, would he, or nild he, ye archbiſhop ſhould be his iudge. Thus was there nothing allowed that the good Lord Cobham had lawfully afore required. But for ſomuch as he woulde not be ſworne in all things to ſubmit himſelfe to the Church, and ſo take what penaunce the archbiſhop would enioyne him: He was areſted agayne at the kinges commaundement, and ſo ledde forth to the Tower of London, to keepe hys day (ſo was it then ſpoken) that the archbiſhop had appoynted him afore in the kinges chamber.

Then cauſed he the foreſayd confeſſion of his fayth to be copyed agayne and the aunſwere alſo (which he had made to the foure articles proponed agaynſt him) to be written in maner of an Indenture in two ſheetes of paper: That when he ſhould come to hys aunſwere, he might geue the one copy vnto the archbiſhop, and reſerue the other to him ſelfe. As the day of examination was come, which was the 23. day of September the Saterday before the feaſt of ſaint Mathewe: Thomas Arundell the Archbiſhop, ſitting in Cayphas rowme in the Chapter houſe of Paules, wyth Richard Clifford Byſhop of London, and Henry Bolingbroke Byſhop of Wincheſter: ſir Robert Morley knight and Liefetenant of the Tower, brought perſonally before hym the ſayd Lord Cobham, and there left him for the time vnto whom the archbiſhop ſayd theſe wordes.

✤ The firſt examination of the Lorde Cobham.

Antichriſt was here in full power.

SIr Iohn, in the laſt generall conuocation of the clergie of this our Prouince, ye were detected of certayne hereſies, and by ſufficient witneſſes found culpable. Whereupon ye were by forme of ſpirituall law cited, and woulde in no caſe appeare. In concluſion, vpon your rebellious cõtumacie, ye were both priuately and openly excommunicated. Notwithſtanding we neyther yet ſhewed our ſelues vnready to haue geuen your abſolution (nor yet doe not to this houre) would ye haue meekely aſked it. Unto this the Lord Cobham ſhewed, as though he had geuen no eare, hauing hys minde otherwiſe occupyed, and ſo deſired no abſolution. But ſayd, he would gladly before him and hys brethren make rehearſal of that fayth which he held and entended alwayes to ſtand to, if it woulde pleaſe them to licence him thereunto. And then he tooke out of his boſome a certayn writing endented, concerning the articles whereof he was accuſed, and ſo opẽly read it before them, geuing it vnto the Archbiſhop, as he had made thereof an ende, whereof this is the copy.

A ſigne of gods true ſeruaunt.

The Sacrament of the Lords body.

I John Oldcaſtle Knight Lord of Cobham, will that all Chriſten men weet and vnderſtãd: that I clepe almighty God into witneſſe, that it hath bene, nowe is, and euer with the helpe of God, ſhall be mine entent and my will, to beleue faythfully and fully all the ſacramentes that euer God ordayned to be do in holy Church: and moreouer to declare me in theſe foure poyntes, I beleue that the moſt worſhipfull Sacrament of the aulter is Chriſtes body in forme of bread, the ſame body that was borne of the bleſſed virgin our Lady ſaynt Mary, done on the croſſe, dead and buryed, the thyrd day roſe from death to life, the which body is now glorified in heauen.

Penaunce.

Alſo as for the ſacrament of penaunce I beleue, that it is needefull to euery man that ſhalbe ſaued to forſake ſinne and do due penaunce for ſinne before done, with true confeſſion, very contrition, and due ſatiſfaction as Gods lawe limitteth and teacheth, and els may he not be ſaued: which penaunce I deſire all men to doe.

Images.

And as of Images I vnderſtand, that they be not of beleue, but that they were ordayned ſith the beleue was geuen of Chriſt, by ſufferaunce of the Church to be Calenders to lewd men, to repreſent and bryng to minde the paſſion of our Lord Jeſu Chriſt, and martyrdome and good liuing of other ſayntes: And that who ſo it be, that doth the worſhip to dead Images that is due to God, or putteth ſuche hope or truſt, in helpe of them, as he ſhould doe to God, or hath affection in one more then in an other, he doth in that the greateſt ſinne of maumetry.

Pilgrimage.

Alſo I ſuppoſe this fully, that euery man in this earth is a pilgrime toward bliſſe, or toward payne: and that he that knoweth not, ne will not know ne keepe the holy commaundementes of God in his liuing here (albeit that he be go on Pilgrimages to all the world, and he dye ſo) he ſhalbe damned: and he that knoweth the holy commaundementes of God, and keepeth them to hys ende, he ſhalbe ſaued though he neuer in hys lyfe goe on pilgrimage, as men now vſe to Caunterbury or to Rome or to any other place.

The aunſwer examined.

Quarel picked where nõe was geuen.

This aunſwere to hys articles thus ended and read, he deliuered it to the Biſhops as is ſayd afore. Than councelled the Archbiſhop with the other two Biſhops, and with diuers of the Doctours, what was to be done in this matter: commaunding hym for the tyme to ſtand aſide. In concluſion by their aſſent & information, he ſaid thus vnto him: Come hether Syr John. In this your wryting are many good thinges contayned, and right Catholicke alſo, we deny it not: but ye muſt conſider ÿ thys day was appoynted you to aunſwere to other pointes concerning thoſe articles, whereof as yet no mention is made in this your Bil. And therefore ye muſt yet declare vs your minde more playnly.

The Chriſten aunſwere of the Lord Cobham vnto their quarellinges.

And thus: whether that ye holde, affirme, and beleeue, that in the ſacrament of the aulter, after the conſecration rightly done by a prieſt, remayneth materiall bread, or not? Moreouer, whether ye do hold, affirme and beleue, that as concerning the ſacrament of penaunce (where as a competent nomber of prieſtes are) euery Chriſten man is neceſſarely bound to be confeſſed of hys ſinnes to a prieſt ordained by the Church, or not.

The wolfe was hungry, he muſt needes be fed with bloud.

After certayn other communication, this was the anſwere of the good Lord Cobham. That none otherwiſe would he declare his minde, nor yet aunſwere vnto hys articles, then was expreſſely in his writing there contayned. Then ſayd the Archbiſhop agayne vnto hym: Syr John, beware what ye do. For if ye aunſwere not clearely to thoſe thinges that are here obiected agaynſt you (eſpecially at the time appointed you onely for that purpoſe) the law of holy Church is, that compelled once by a iudge, we may openly proclayme ye an hereticke. Vnto whome he gaue this aunſwere: Do as ye ſhall thinke beſt, for I am at a poynt. Whatſoeuer he or the other Byſhops did aſke him after that, he bad them reſorte to hys Bill: for thereby would he ſtand to the very death. Other aunſwere woulde he not geue that day, wherwith the Biſhops and Prelates were in a maner amaſed and wonderfully diſquieted.

A tyrannous whore is that mother.

His aũſwer not to their mindes.

At the laſt, the archbiſhop councelled agayne with hys other Biſhops and Doctours, and in the end therof declared vnto him, what the holy Church of Rome (following the ſaying of S. Auguſtine, S. Hierome, S. Ambroſe, and of other holy Doctours) had determined in theſe matters, no maner of mention once made of Chriſt. Whiche determination (ſayth he) ought all Chriſten men both to beleue and to follow.

Antichriſt ſetteth men aboue God.

The L. Cobhã reſorteth vnto Chriſt.

Then ſayd the Lord Cobham vnto him, that he would gladly both beleue and obſerue whatſoeuer holy church of Chriſtes inſtitution had determined, or yet whatſoeuer God had willed him either to beleue or to do. But that the pope of Rome with his Cardinals, Archbiſhops, biſhops and other prelates of that Churche had lawfull power to determine ſuch matter as ſtoode not with his worde throughly: that would he not (he ſayd) at the time affirme. With this ÿ archbiſh. bad him to take good aduiſement til the monday next following (which was the 25. day of September) and then iuſtly to aunſwere, ſpecially vnto thys poynt: whether there remayned materiall breade in the ſacrament of the aulter, after the wordes of conſecration, or not? He promiſed him alſo, to ſend vnto hym in writing thoſe matters clearely determined, that he might then be the more perfect in his anſwere making. And all this was nought els, but to blinde the multitude with ſomewhat. The next day following, according to his promiſe, ÿ Archbiſhop ſent vnto hym into the Tower, this fooliſhe and blaſphemous writing made by him and by hys vnlearned Clergy.

What could be more reaſonably ſaid if they had reaſõ to receaue it.

A doctrine of deuils to blinde the ſimple.

❧ The determination of the Archbyſhop and Clergy.

Ex magno proceſſu Thomæ Arundel.

The firſt Article.

The faith and determination of ÿ holy Church touching the bliſfull ſacrament of the aultar, is this: that after the Sacramentall wordes be once ſpoken by a Prieſt in hys Maſſe, the material bread, that was before bread, is turned into Chriſtes very body. And the materiall wine, that was before wine, is turned into Chriſtes very bloud. And ſo there remayneth in the ſacrament of the aulter, from thenceforth, no materiall bread, nor materiall wine, which were there before the Sacramentall wordes were ſpoken: How beleue ye this article?

The ſecond Article.

Holy church hath determined that euery Chriſten man liuing here bodely vpon the erth ought to be ſhriuen to a prieſt ordeined by the Church, if he may come to him. How feele ye this article?

The third Article.

Chriſt ordayned S. Peter the Apoſtle to be his vicare here in earth, whoſe ſea is the holy churche of Rome: And he graunted, that the ſame power which he gaue vnto Peter, ſhould ſucceed to all Peters ſucceſſours, which we call now Popes of Rome: By whoſe power in Churches particuler, be ordayned Prelates, as Archbiſhops, Byſhops, Parſons, Curates, and other degrees more. Vnto whom Chriſten men ought to obey after the laws of the church of Rome. This is the determination of holy Church. Howe feele ye this article?

The ſeede of the Serpent.

The fourth Article.

Holy churche hath determined, that it is meritorious to a chriſten man, to go on pilgrimage to holy places: And there ſpecially to worſhip holy reliques and Images of Saintes, Apoſtles, and Martyrs, Confeſſours, & all other Saintes beſides, approued by the church of Rome. Howe feele ye this article?

He ſeeth their ignoraunce and malice.

And as the Lorde Cobham had reade ouer this moſt wretched writing, he marueiled greatly of their mad ignorance. But that he conſidered agayne, that God had geuen them ouer for their vnbeliefes ſake, into moſt deepe errors & blindnes of ſoule. Agayne, he perceiued hereby, that their vttermoſt mallice was purpoſed agaynſt him, howſoeuer he ſhould anſwere. And therefore he put hys life into the handes of God, deſiring hys onely ſpirite to aſſiſte hym in his next anſwere. When the ſayd xxv. day of September was come (whiche was alſo the Monday before Michaelmas) in the ſayd yeare of our Lord, 1413. Thomas Arundell the Archbiſhop of Caunterbury commaunded his iudiciall ſeate to be remoued from ÿ chapter houſe of Paules to the Dominicke Friers within Ludgate at Londõ. And as he was there ſet with Richard Byſhop of London: Henry the Byſhop of Wincheſter: and Bennet the Byſhop of Bangor: He called in vnto him his counſell & his officers, with diuers other Doctours and Fryers, of whome theſe are the names here following, maiſter Henry Ware, ÿ Official of Caunterbury: Phillip Morgan, Doctour of both lawes: Howell Kiffin, Doctor of the Canon lawe. John Kempe, Doctor of the Canon lawe. Williã Carleton, Doctour of the Canon law. John Witnã, of the new College in Oxford. John Wighthead, Doctor in Oxford alſo, Rob. Wõbewel, Vicare of S. Laurence in the Jewry, Thomas Palmer, the Warden of Minors, Robert Chamberlayne, Prior of the Dominickes. Richard Dodington, Prior of the Auguſtines. Thomas Walden: Priour of the Carmelites, all Doctours of Diuinitie. John Stephens alſo, and James Cole, both Notaryes, appoynted there purpoſely to write all that ſhoulde be eyther ſayd or done. All theſe with a great ſorte more of Prieſtes, Monkes, Chanons, Friers, Pariſhe Clerkes, belryngers, Pardoners, diſdayned him, with innumerable mockes & ſcornes, reconing him to be an horrible hereticke, and a man accurſed afore God.

Anone the Archbiſhop called for a maſſe booke, & cauſed all thoſe Prelates and Doctors to ſweare there vpon, that euery man ſhould faythfully doe his office and duety that day. And that neyther for fauour nor feare, loue nor hate of the one party nor the other: any thing ſhould there be witneſſed, ſpoken or done, but according to the truth, as they wold anſwer before God & all the world at the day of dome. Then were the two foreſayd Notaryes ſworne alſo, to wryte and to witneſſe the proceſſe that there ſhoulde be vttered on both parties, and to ſay their mindes (if they otherwiſe knew) before they ſhould regiſter it. And al this diſſimulation was but to colour their miſchiefes, before the ignoraunt multitude.

For a falſe coulor ſweare they.

All done to deceiue the ignoraunt.

Conſider herein (gentle reader) what this wicked generation is, and how far wide from the iuſt feare of God for as they were then, ſo are they yet to this day.

Lord Cobham commeth againe before them.

After that, came forth before them Syr Robert Morley Knight and lieftenant of the Tower, and he brought with him yͤ good Lorde Cobhā, there leauing him among them as a Lambe among wolues, to his examination and aunſwere.

✠ An other examination of the Lorde Cobham.

Ex Vetuſto exemplari Londinēſiū.

Then ſaide the archbiſhop vnto him: Lord Cobham ye be aduiſed (I am ſure) of the wordes & proceſſe which we had vnto you vpon Saterday laſt paſt in the chapterhouſe of Paules: which proceſſe were nowe to long to be rehearſed agayne? I ſaid vnto you then, that ye were accurſed for your contumacie & diſobedience to holy Church thinking that ye ſhould with meekenes haue deſired your abſolution.

The curſe of Antichriſt.

Then ſpake the Lord Cobham with a chearful countenaunce, and ſayde, God ſayde by his holy Prophet, Maledicam benedictionibus veſtris, whiche is as much to ſay as I ſhall curſſe where you bleſſe.

Malachi.2.

The archbiſhop made then as though he had continued forth his tale and not hearde him, ſaying: Sir, at that tyme I gently profered to haue aſſoyled you if ye woulde haue aſked it. And yet I doe the ſame if ye will humbly deſire it in due forme and maner, as holy church hath ordayned.

A woluiſhe offer of gentleneſſe.

Then ſaid the Lord Cobham. Nay forſooth will I not for I neuer yet treſpaſſed agaynſt you, and therfore I will not do it. And with that he kneeled downe on the pauement, holding vp his handes towardes heauen, and ſayd, I ſhriue me here vnto thee my eternall liuing God, that in my frayle youth I offended thee (Lord) moſt greuouſly in pride, wrath, and gluttony: in couetouſnes, and in lechery. Many men haue I hurt in mine anger, and done many other horrible ſinnes, good Lorde I aſke thee mercye. And therewith weepingly he ſtoode vp agayne and ſayde with a mighty voyce. Loe, good people, loe. For the breaking of Gods law and his great commaundementes, they neuer yet curſed me. But for their owne lawes and traditions, moſt cruelly doe they handle both me and other mē. And therfore, both they and theyr lawes, by the promiſe of God, ſhall vtterly be deſtroyed.

L. Cobham confeſſeth himſelfe vnto God.

Mans lavv before Gods law preferred.

Hiere.51.

At this the archbiſhop and his companye were not a litle blemiſhed. Notwithſtanding, he tooke ſtomack vnto him agayne after certayne words, had in excuſe of their tyranny, and examined the Lord Cobham of his Chriſten beleue.

Whereunto the Lord Cobham made this godly aunſwere. I beleue (ſayth he) fully and faithfully the vniuerſall lawes of God. I beleue that all is true whiche is conteyned in the holy ſacred ſcriptures of the Bible. Finally I beleue, all that my Lord God would I ſhoulde beleue. Then demaunded the Archbiſhop an anſwere of that Bill whiche he and the Clergie had ſent him into the Tower the day afore, in maner of a determination of the Churche concerning the foure Articles whereof he was accuſed, ſpecially for the Sacrament of the aulter, howe he beleeued therein.

The Chriſten beliefe of the Lord Cobham.

Whereunto the Lord Cobham ſayd, that with that bill he had nothing to doe. But this was his beliefe (he ſayd) concerning the ſacrament. That his Lord and Sauiour Jeſus Chriſt, ſitting at his laſt ſupper with his moſt deare diſciples, the night before he ſhould ſuffer, tooke bread in his hand. And geuing thanks to his eternall father, bleſſed it, brake it, and ſo gaue it vnto them, ſaying: Take it vnto you, and eat therof all, this is my body whiche ſhall be betrayed for you: Doe this hereafter in my remembraunce. This doe I throughly beleue (ſayth he) for this fayth am I taught of the Goſpell in Mathewe, in Marke, and in Luke, and alſo in the firſt Epiſtle of S. Paule to the Corinthians. chap. 11.

1.Cor.11.

Then aſked the Archbiſhop, if he beleeued that it were bread after the conſecration or ſacramentall words ſpoken ouer it.

Antichriſt alloweth not this faith.

The Lord Cobham ſaid. I beleue that in the ſacramēt of the aulter is Chriſtes very body in forme of bread, the ſame that was borne of yͤ virgin Mary, done on the croſſe, dead, and buryed: and that the third day aroſe from death to life, which now is glorified in heauen.

Then ſayd one of the Doctors of the law. After the ſacramentall wordes be vttered: there remayneth no bread, but onely the body of Chriſt.

The ſacrament of the aultar.

The Lorde Cobham ſayd then to one Maiſter John Whitehead: You ſayd once vnto me in the caſtell of Couling, that the ſacred hoſt was not Chriſtes body. But I held then againſt you, and proued that therin was his body, though the ſeculars and Friers could not therein agree but held ech one againſt other in that opinion. Theſe wer my wordes then, if ye remember it.

Iohn Whitehead, gone from his opinion.

All this would not helpe.

Then ſhouted a ſorte of them together and cryed wyth great noyſe. We ſay all that it is Gods body.

A blaſphemous broode.

And diuers of them aſked him in great anger, whether it were materiall bread after the conſecration or not?

Quarell pickers.

Then looked the L. Cobham, earneſtly vpon the archbiſhop, and ſaid: I beleue ſurely that it is Chriſtes body in forme of bread. Syr beleue not you thus?

And the archbiſhop ſayd, yes mary do I?

Then aſked him the Doctors, whether it were onely Chriſtes bodye after the conſecration of a Prieſt, and no body or not?

The ſacramēt of Chriſtes body is both the body and bread.

Neither will ſcripture nor reaſon ſerue.

And he ſayd vnto them, it is both Chriſtes body and bread I ſhall proue it as thus. For like as Chriſt dwelling here vpon yͤ earth, had in him both Godhead & manhood, and had the inuiſible Godhead couered vnder that manhode, which was onely viſible and ſeene in him: So in the ſacrament of the aultar, is Chriſtes very bodye and bread alſo, as I beleue the bread is the thinge, that we ſee wyth our eies, the body of Chriſt (which is his fleſh & his bloud) is there vnder hyd and not ſeene, but in fayth.

This opiniō hath S. Auguſtine.

And moreouer, to proue that it is both Chriſtes bodie and alſo bread after the conſecration, it is by playne wordes expreſſed by one of your owne Doctours writing agayne Eutiches, whiche ſaith: Like as the ſelfe ſame Sacraments, do paſſe by the operation of the holy Ghoſt, into a Diuine nature: and yet notwithſtanding keepe the propertie ſtill of their former nature: ſo, that principall miſtery declareth to remayne, one true, and perfect Chriſt. &c.

Gelaſius contra Eutichen.

Then ſmiled they eache one vpon other, that the people ſhoulde iudge him taken in a great hereſie. And with a great brag diuers of them ſayd. It is a foule hereſie.

The popes diuinitie.

Then aſked the Archbiſhop what bread it was? And the Doctors alſo inquired of him whether it were materiall or not?

The Lorde Cobham ſaid vnto thē. The ſcriptures maketh no mention of this worde materiall, and therfore my faith hath nothing to doe therwith. But this I ſay and beleue, that it is Chriſtes body and bread. For Chriſt ſayd in the vi. of Johns Goſpell. Ego ſum panis viuus, qui de cœlo deſcendi. I which came downe from heauen, am the liuing and not the dead bread. Therfore I ſay now agayne as I ſayd afore, as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is very God and very man: ſo in the moſt bleſſed ſacrament of the aulter, is Chriſtes very body and bread.

Materiall.

Iohn.6.

Then ſayd they all with one voyce. It is an hereſie.

One of the Byſhops ſtoode vp by and by, and ſayd. What? it is an hereſie manifeſt, to ſay that it is bread after the Sacramentall wordes be once ſpoken, but Chriſtes body onely.

An hereſie after the papiſtes making.

The Lord Cobham ſayd: S. Paule the Apoſtle was (I am ſure) as wiſe as you be now, and more gladly learned. And he called it bread, writing to the Corinthians. The bread that we breake, ſayth he, is it not the partakyng of the body of Chriſt? Lo, he called it bread and not Chriſtes body, but a meane whereby we receaue Chriſts body.

1. Cor. 10

The ſacrament is called bread.

Then ſayd they agayne. Paule muſt be otherwiſe vnderſtand. For it is ſure on hereſie to ſay that it is bread after the conſecration, but onely Chriſtes body.

The Lord Cobham aſked, how they could make good that ſentence of theirs?

They aunſwered him thus. For it is agaynſt the determination of holy Church.

The determination of the church muſt ſtand, whatſoeuer Paule ſaith

Then ſayd the archbiſhop vnto him. Syr John, we ſet you a writing concerning the fayth of this bleſſed Sacrament, clearely determined by the church of Rome our mother, and by the holy Doctors.

A moſt chriſten aunſwere.

The iudgement of L. Cobham concerning the determinatiō of the Church.

Then he ſayd agayne vnto him. I know none holyer then is Chriſt and his Apoſtles. And as for that determination I wote, it is none of theyrs: for it ſtandeth not with the ſcriptures, but manifeſtly againſt them. If it be the Churches, as ye ſay it is, it hath bene hers onely ſince ſhe receaued the great poyſon of worldly poſſeſſions, and not afore.

Then aſked they him, to ſtop his mouth therwith. If he beleued not in the determination of the Church?

The Doctours confounded in their owne queſtion.

And he ſayd vnto them. No forſooth, for it is no God. In all our Crede, this word (in) is but thriſe mentioned concerning beleue. In God the father, in God the ſonne, in in God the holy Ghoſt three perſons and one God. The byrth, the death, the buriall, the reſurrection and aſcenſion of Chriſt, hath none (in) for beleue, but in him. Neyther yet hath the Church, the ſacramentes, the forgeuenes of ſinne, the latter reſurrection, nor yet the life euerlaſting nor anye other (in) then in the holy ghoſt.

Then ſayd one of the Lawyers. Tuſh, that was but a word of office. But what is your beliefe concerning holy Church?

The L. Cobhā beleueth not in the Pope.

The Lord Cobham aunſwered. My beliefe is: (as I ſayd afore) that all the ſcriptures of the ſacred Bible are true. All yͭ is grounded vppon them I beleue throughly. For I know, it is Gods pleaſure that I ſhuld ſo do. But in your Lordly lawes and idle determinations, haue I no beliefe. For ye be no part of Chriſtes holy churche, as your open dedes doth ſhew: But ye are very Antichriſtes, obſtinately ſet agaynſt his holy law and wil. The lawes that ye haue made, are nothing to his glory, but onely for your vayne glory and abhominable couetouſnes.

An hereſie after the papiſtes.

This they ſayd, was an exceeding hereſie (and that in a great fume) not to beleeue the determination of holye Church.

Then the Archbiſhop aſked hym, what he thought of holy Church.

Holy church defined.

He ſayd vnto him my beliefe is, that the holye Churche is the number of them, which ſhalbe ſaued, of whō Chriſt is the head. Of this churche, one part is in heauen wyth Chriſt, an other in purgatorye (you ſay) and the thyrd is here in earth. This latter part ſtandeth in three degrees in knighthoode, prieſthoode, and the communaltie, as I ſayd afore playnely in the confeſſion of my beliefe.

Conſider him to be then in ſhrewde handlinge.

Then ſayd the Archbiſhop vnto hym. Can you tell me who is of this church?

The Lord Cobham anſwered: Yea truely can I.

Walden contra Wicleuiſtas. li. ar. 2. Cap. 67

How we may iudge or not iudge by the ſcriptures. Math. 7.

Then ſayd Doctor Walden the Prior of the Carmelits It is no doubt vnto you who is thereof. For Chriſt ſayeth in Mathewe Nolite iudicare, preſume to iudge no man. If ye be here forbidden the iudgement of your neighboure or brother, much more the iudgement of your ſuperiour.

The Lorde Cobham made him this aunſwere: Chriſt ſayth alſo in the ſelfe ſame chapter of Mathew, that like as the euill tree is knowne by hys fruit, ſo is a falſe Prophet by his works, appeare they neuer ſo glorious: But that ye left behind ye. And in Iohn he hath this text: Operibus credite, beleeue you the outwarde doinges. And in an other place of Iohn: Iuſtum iudicium iudicate, when wee knowe the thing to be true, we may ſo iudge it, and not offend. For Dauid ſayd alſo: Rectè iudicate filij hominum. Iudge rightly alwayes ye children of men. And as for your ſuperiority were ye of Chriſt, ye ſhoulde be meeke miniſters, and no proud ſuperiours.

Then ſaid Doctor Walden vnto him, ye make here no difference of iudgementes. Ye put no diuerſitie betwene yͤ euill iudgementes, whiche Chriſt had forbidden, and the good iudgementes, which he hath cōmaunded vs to haue. Raſh iudgment, and right iudgement, al is one with you. So ſwift iudges alwayes are the learned ſchollers of Wickliffe.

Unto whom the Lord Cobham thus aunſwered: It is wel ſophiſtred of you, forſooth. Prepoſterous are your iudgementes euermore. For as the Prophet Eſay ſayth, ye iudge euill, good, and good, euill. And therefore the ſame prophet concludeth, that your wayes are not Gods waies nor Gods wayes your wayes. And as for that vertuous man Wickliffe, whoſe iudgementes ye ſo highly diſdayne: I ſhall ſay here of my part, both before God and man, that before I knew that deſpiſed doctrine of his, I neuer abſtayned from ſinne. But ſince I learned therin to feare my Lorde GOD, it hath otherwiſe I truſt, bene with me: ſo muche grace coulde I neuer finde in all your glorious inſtructions.

Walden in præfatione doctrina. 7.

A great aduerſary.

Then ſaid Doctor Walden agayne yet vnto him: It were not well with me (ſo many vertuous men liuing, & ſo many learned men teaching the ſcripture, being alſo ſo open, and the examples of fathers ſo plenteous) If I thē had no grace to amend my life, till I heard the deuil preach

Hieroni. in breuiari in minori.

S. Hierome ſayth, that he whiche ſeeketh ſuche ſuſpected Mayſters, ſhall not finde the midday light, but the midday deuill.

The Lord Cobham ſayd: Your fathers the old Phariſeis, aſcribed Chriſtes miracles to Belzebub, and his doctrine to the deuil. And you as their natural children, haue ſtill the ſelfe ſame iudgement, concerning his faythfull followers. They that rebuke your vicious liuing muſt needs be heretickes, and that muſt your doctors proue, whē you haue no ſcripture to do it. Then ſayde he to them all: To iudge you as you be, we neede no further go, then to your owne proper actes. Where do ye find in all Gods law, that ye ſhold thus ſit in iudgement of any Chriſten men, or yet geue ſentence vppon any other man vnto death as ye doe here dayly? No grounde haue ye in all the Scriptures ſo Lordly to take it vppon you, but in Annas and Cayphas, which ſat thus vpon Chriſt, and vppon his Apoſtles after hys aſcenſion. Of them onely haue ye taken it to iudge Chriſtes members as ye doe, and neither of Peter nor Iohn.

Then ſayd ſome of the Lawyers: Yes forſooth ſyr, for Chriſt iudged Iudas.

The Lord Cobham ſayd: No, Chriſt iudged him not, but he iudged himſelfe, and thereupon went forth, & ſo did hange himſelfe: But in deede Chriſt ſayde, woe vnto him, for that couetous act of hys, as he doth yet ſtill vnto many of you. For ſince the venume of him was ſhed into yͤ church ye neuer followed Chriſt: neither yet haue ye ſtande in the perfection of Gods law.

Then the Archbiſhop aſked him, what he ment by that venume?

26. Biſhops of Rome togeather martirs ſaue onely 4.
A cōpariſon betwene the martirs and the Popes tyme.
A cōpariſon betwene Chriſt and the Pope,
Rome is Antichriſtes neaſt,

The Lord Cobham ſayd: your poſſeſſions and Lordſhips. For then cried an aungell in the ayre (as your owne Chronicles mentioneth) wo, wo, woe, this day is venime ſhed into the church of God. Before that time, all the Byſhops of Rome were martyrs in a manner. And ſince that time, we read of very few. But in deede ſince yͤ ſame time, one hath put down an other, one hath poyſoned an other, one hath curſed an other, and one hath ſlayne an other, and done much more miſchiefe beſides, as all the Chronicles telleth. And let all men conſider well this, that Chriſt was meeke, and mercifull. The pope is proude, and a tyraunt. Chriſt was poore and forgaue. The pope is riche and a malicious manſlear, as hys dayly actes doe proue hym. Rome is the very neaſt of Antichriſt, and out of that neaſt commeth all the diſciples of him. Of whome Prelates, Prieſtes, and Monkes, are the body, and theſe pild Friers are the tayle which couereth his moſt filthy part.

Then ſaid the Prior of the Fryers Auguſtines: Alacke ſir, why do you ſay ſo? That is vncharitably ſpoken.

Eſay. 9.
Friers proued ſeditious and yet foūd no traytors.

And the Lord Cobham ſaid. Not onely is it my ſaying but alſo the Prophet Eſayes, long afore my time. The prophet ſaith he, which preacheth lyes, is the tayle behind. For as you Fryers and monkes be (like Phariſeis) deuided in your outward apparell and vſages, ſo make ye deuiſion among the people. And thus, you with ſuch other, are yͤ very naturall members of Antichriſt.

Then ſaid he vnto them all: Chriſt ſaith in his Goſpell. Woe vnto you Scribes and Phariſeis, Hipocrites. For ye cloſe vp the kingdome of heauen before men. Neyther enter ye in your ſelues, nor yet ſuffer any other yͭ wold enter into it. But ye ſtop vp the wayes therūto with your owne traditions, and therfore are ye the houſholde of Antechriſt: ye will not permit Gods veritie to haue paſſage, nor yet to be taught of his true miniſters, fearing to haue your wickednes reproued. But by ſuche flatterers as vphold you in your miſchiefes, ye ſuffer the common people moſt miſerably to be ſeduced.

Note I pray you how thoſe are counted traitors and ſedidious, that teach or cauſe Gods truth to be taught.

Then ſayd the archbiſhop. By our Lady ſyr, there ſhal none ſuch preach within my dioces (and God will) nor yet in my iuriſdiction (if I may know it) as either maketh diuiſion or yet diſſention among the poore commons.

Both Daniell and Chriſt prophecied that ſuch a troublous tyme ſhoulde come, as hath not bene yet ſince the worldes beginning. And this prophecy is partlye fulfilled in your dayes and doinges. For manye haue yee ſlayne already, and more wil ye ſlay hereafter, if God fulfil not his promiſe. Chriſt ſayth alſo, if thoſe dayes of yours were not ſhortened, ſcarſly ſhold any fleſh be ſaued. Therfore looke for it iuſtly, for God will ſhorten youre dayes. Moreouer, though Prieſtes and deacons for preaching of Gods word, and for miniſtring the ſacraments, with prouiſion for the poore: be grounded on Gods lawe: yet haue theſe other ſectes no maner of ground hereof, ſo farre as I haue read.

Tranſubſtantiation of bread into the body.

My Lord Cobham (ſayth this Doctor) we muſt briefly know your minde concerning theſe foure poyntes here following. The reſt of them is this. And then he read vpõ the bill: The fayth and determination of holy churche touching the bleſſed ſacrament of the aulter is this. That after the ſacramentall wordes be once ſpoken of a Prieſt in his maſſe: the materiall bread that was before bread, is turned to Chriſtes very body. And the materiall wine is turned into Chriſtes bloud. And ſo there remayneth in the ſacrament of the aulter from thenceforth no material bread nor materiall wine which were there before the ſacramentall wordes were ſpoken. Sir beleue ye not this?

The L. Cobhãs beliefe in the ſacrament.

The Lord Cobham ſaid: This is not my beliefe. But my fayth is (as I ſayd to you afore) that in the worſhipfull ſacrament of the aulter, is Chriſtes very body in forme of bread.

Then ſayd the archbiſhop: ſir Iohn ye muſt ſay otherwiſe.

The Lord Cobham ſaid: Nay, that I ſhall not, if God be vpon my ſide (as I truſt he is) but that there is Chriſts body in forme of bread, as the common beliefe is.

Then read the doctour againe.
